Divisions will vote separately at 1986 NCAA Convention

Delegates have been attending annual NCAA Conventions for eight decades, but those participating in the Association's 80th annual gathering January 13-15 in New Orleans will do something none of their predecessors could do.

For the first time, each division will be permitted to take final voting action on proposed legislation affecting only that division in the division's separate business session.

That means that there will be final voting on significant issues on the first day of the Convention—Monday, January 13—rather than all final voting taking place in the general business session beginning the second day—Tuesday, January 14.

It also means that the deadline for submitting any amendments to the proposals contained in the Official Notice of the Convention will be one day earlier than in the past. All such amendments, in accordance with the provisions of Constitution 7-3 and Bylaw 13-3, must be submitted by 1 p.m. "on the day preceding the business session." Inasmuch as the divisions now have their own business sessions on Monday, the amendment-to-amendment deadline will be 1 p.m. Sunday, January 12.

The right of the divisions to act separately on their own legislation came about when the Convention last January adopted what is now Constitution 5-7-(c)-(2): "Legislation pertaining to only a single division of the Association may be acted upon in a separate legislative session of that division. Such division action shall be reported to the joint session of all three divisions, and the rescission provisions of Constitution 6-3-(c), 6-4-(d), Bylaw 13-1-(h) and O.I. 1300 may be applied at that time...."

That change in the Association's procedures—recommended in 1984 by the Special NCAA Committee on Convention Operations—was described at the 1985 Convention by Francis W. Bonner of Furman University, then a council member, as "another step, and I think a very important one, in the increasing federation of the Association's activities."

"The practical effect will be to streamline the business session at the annual Convention," Bonner told the 1985 Convention.

That streamlining probably will be noted at the 1986 Convention because 27 of the 110 proposals submitted for the Convention will be acted upon in the separate division business sessions.

Division I-A will face five such proposals and Division I-AA three in their business sessions beginning at 9 a.m. Monday, January 13. Meanwhile, Division II will have two amendments of its own and Division III will have four in their division business sessions, which also begin at 9 a.m. that day.

The Division I business session—beginning at 2:45 p.m. that day, after the honors luncheon—has 15 proposals on which to take action, including the Bylaw 5-1-(j) amendments that rank among the most controversial at the upcoming Convention.

Those separate proposals add up to 29 because two of them are divided

Commission picks Heyman as officer

I. M. Heyman, chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, has been elected to serve as chair of the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission.

He will succeed Otis A. Singletary, president of the University of Kentucky, in that office at the close of the 1986 NCAA Convention in January.

Heyman was elected by the Division I members of the Commission in a mail ballot that was concluded November 15. Balloting to determine new chairs of the Divisions II and III Commission subcommittees is continuing because no candidate in those divisions received a majority on the first ballot.

The California chancellor will join John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, as new Commission officers. Slaughter was elected by the Commission in its October meeting to succeed John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, as the chair of the Commission.

Heyman, chancellor at Berkeley since 1980, is the Pacific-10 Conference representative on the Commission. He joined the Berkeley faculty as a law professor in 1959 after serving as chief law clerk for Chief Justice Earl Warren of the U.S. Supreme Court. He was vice-chancellor for six years before being named chancellor.

I. M. Heyman

He has been a visiting law professor at the Yale and Stanford Law Schools and is a member of the bar in California and New York. The New York City native earned a bachelor's degree in government at Dartmouth College and a juris doctor degree from Yale Law School, where he was editor of the Yale Law Journal.

If the third time's the charm, aid limit will move to bylaws

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles detailing the legislation to be considered at the 1986 NCAA Convention. This article reviews the financial aid proposals and those miscellaneous amendments included under the heading of "General.")

For the third consecutive year, the NCAA Council will attempt to persuade the delegates to the annual NCAA Convention to move from the constitution to the bylaws the Association's limitations on the amount of financial aid a student-athlete can receive.

That proposal leads off a grouping of eight amendments dealing with financial aid issues at the January 13-15, 1986, Convention in New Orleans.

When the Council first proposed removing the definition of "commonly accepted educational expenses" from the constitution to the bylaws, the 1984 annual Convention almost adopted it. The shift out of the constitution requires a two-thirds majority of all delegates present and voting, and it received 66.3 percent approval on a vote of 384 in favor and 195 opposed—just six votes short of adoption.

At the 1985 Convention, the proposal again received majority support with a 312 to 289 count, but that 52 percent approval was far short of the required two-thirds majority.

There are two major differences in this year's attempt:

- First, the Council's new proposal retains an overall limitation on aid in the constitution by specifying that the limitation on the aid a student-athlete in a given division could receive would be either what that division adopts in the bylaws or the cost of education for that institution as defined by the U.S. Department of Education, whichever is less. That is designed to treat the concern expressed by some that the major programs would have no practical limit on the aid they could award.

- Second, this year's proposal is cosponsored by the NCAA Presidents Commission, which could result in more institutions supporting the amendment because of the additional presidential attention focused on it and the fact that it will be voted upon by roll call.

Those favoring the concept over the past few years believe it is consistent with the increasingly "federated" approach to Association activities that each division be permitted to determine its own financial aid restrictions. That can happen only if the governing legislation is moved to the bylaws, where the divisions can vote separately on amending it, with a simple majority vote required.

The opposition generally has expressed preference for having the same aid restriction govern all institutions and requiring a two-thirds vote to alter that. Some also have expressed concerns that the major programs would increase markedly the amount of aid they would award, although all of Division I would have to vote together on any such amendment in the bylaws.

Other aid proposals

Among the other financial aid proposals are two that would increase the amount of a Pell Grant that a student-athlete could receive in addition to an athletics grant-in-aid—an issue that

No-pass, no-play rule backlash

Texas coaches to politic for governor's defeat

A coach singled out by Gov. Mark White as an example of the success of "no pass, no play" says the rule is unfair and should cost White his job.

"I oppose the governor," said Belton High School football coach Dick Stafford.

Stafford was mentioned by White November 19 during a news conference discussion about a possible organized effort by coaches to defeat White next year.

Under the no-pass, no-play rule, approved by lawmakers last year and backed by White, students who fail a course are ineligible for extracurricular activities (The NCAA News, October 28 issue).

Some coaches oppose the rule, and the Texas High School Coaches Association is talking about an organized push to beat White because of it.

"They should be taking credit for no-pass, no-play, not trying to defeat it," said White, adding that 85 percent of Texas' high school varsity football players complied with the rule.

The failure rate was much higher at junior varsity and junior high school levels.

"I think you'll have many coaches who will be supporting our efforts," White said.

The coaches association plans to talk politics at its December 14 meeting in Austin.

"I don't think there's ever been a need for us to get so involved in politics. But when we see things being done that are not good for kids, we have no choice," said association president Gregg Sherwood of Plainview.

Asked about opposition from coaches, White said, "We've seen a lot of comment being made by some persons who apparently are not able to provide the leadership we need in Texas. I think many of the coaches are giving that leadership. There are always a few that are reluctant to do so because it means a change in their pattern."

"We are asking for major changes in patterns. We are saying kids are going to learn first and then we'll play," White said.

Some no-pass, no-play foes say the idea is solid, but that the six-week suspension period for failing students is too long.

"It punishes people that don't do bad," said Stafford, citing good students whose football seasons were disrupted because of mass failures by opponent.

White is sticking by the rule and the six-week suspension.

"There's always somebody who likes to weaken rules and standards. I'm opposed to that," he said.

"You can go and point out, as we've done before, the coaches that have done a good job. They're clearly and easily discovered by virtue of the number of students they have that pass every course," White said.

Asked to name names, White said, "You've got the father of the quarterback at the University of Texas. That's one."

Belton coach Stafford's son, Bret, is the Longhorns' starting quarterback. Belton lost no varsity players to no-pass, no-play. However, district officials investigated the coach when it was reported that he tutored four players after he obtained a history exam.

No disciplinary action was taken after the investigation. Stafford, a history teacher, said another history teacher offered him the exam when he asked for help in tutoring the four students. The players never saw the test, Stafford said.

The investigation ended with an administration memo telling teachers not to exchange copies of exams, according to Belton School Board

Pacers say illegal offers widespread to college prospects

By David Benner
The Indianapolis Star

They all have come through good times, with big reputations and big hopes preceding them. The roots for a career in the National Basketball Association are laid early and this is recognized from the early years in high school, sometimes junior high.

The members of the Indiana Pacers are no different.

In the wake of nationwide stories concerning illegal offers given top college basketball talent, the Pacers were asked about their recruiting experiences coming out of high school and what took place in college.

The responses were interesting, to say the least. Remember, this is a sampling of 12 players, a small number when considering the number of colleges and universities vying for talent. It also reveals that the problem in college athletics is very big. Cars, cash, houses and jobs for players and families seem to be commonplace.

For example, one player who requested his name not be used said, "What they're seeing now is the tip of the iceberg. I saw guys getting money, cars and jobs where you didn't have to do anything to make big bucks.

"In general, I think, this pertains to most of college basketball. It doesn't necessarily come from the program, but from outside influences. You can see it everywhere. It's hard to control."

And now, the rundown, in no particular order. All players wouldn't reveal any school that made an illegal offer.

Wayman Tisdale, Oklahoma—(Note: A recent Sports Illustrated reported that Tisdale and his brother, William, allegedly received $7,000 in loans, $1,700 in cash, $1,300 in checks, two watches worth $200 each, lodging, meals and transportation home from a Texas-Oklahoma game in Dallas and that Wayman received a $3,150 gold and diamond pendant in the shape of a moose head—Tisdale's nickname was Moose—from Inter-south Sports Management Corporation, a defunct Tulsa sports agency firm. Wayman offers no comment on any of these allegations).

"I had around 200 offers but never got anything illegal," said Tisdale. "It was mainly based on my family background. Most people knew my father wasn't like that; and he even told them himself he wasn't interested in any gifts, just a solid education and a good program. That's what it was all based on. We also narrowed our choices down fast, so they didn't really have a chance to offer anything like that."

Stuart Gray, UCLA—"I had about 275 inquiries. There was one offer, I don't care to mention the school, that made an offer in the form of a job (selling insurance with good profits). I didn't consider that school at all.

"My parents were totally against it (illegal offers) and that influenced me."

Vern Fleming, Georgia—"There were a lot of schools after me, about 200. There were some that offered money, cars, houses and stuff like that, even for the family. I had no response. I just sat there and listened to what they talked about.

"Coming out of high school, you hear about that stuff, but you don't believe it until it's you in the situation getting the offers. I was surprised that they did it."

When asked if he got anything at Georgia, Fleming replied, "No."

Steve Stipanovich, Missouri—"I had more than 200 recruiting me. There weren't really any illegal offers. My high school coach made it clear that anything like that would be reported to the NCAA. He was really strict in that way."

Clark Kellogg, Ohio State—Kellogg, who with Ralph Sampson was high school player of the year, was recruited by every top school in the country.

"I visited four schools, Ohio State, Michigan, Notre Dame and Kentucky. Of those four, nothing illegal was offered to me.

"My parents were involved with me quite extensively. Anybody that sat down and talked to me, they sat down and talked to my parents. They never brought anything illegal to my attention."

Bill Martin, Georgetown—"I was recruited by about all of the major colleges. I wasn't offered anything that I can remember. I didn't expect anything. If you're the kind of person who expects or asks for anything, they're going to be leery of making an offer."

Martin added Georgetown promised him one thing: "A college degree."

Dwayne McClain, Villanova—"I was recruited by just about everyone, but my high school situation was different from most because I was guided by my coach and principal. They really only let me talk to legitimate schools. They screened everything out."

Bill Garnett, Wyoming—Not heavily recruited out of high school, Garnett went to Wyoming and didn't encounter anything until his junior year.

"We won the Western Athletic Conference championship," he said, "The school spent $500 making championship rings and the NCAA only allowed $250, so none of us had our rings."

"There was one particular booster who felt it would be nice if we had our championship rings while we were still in school. So he gave me the money to purchase a ring because most of the players couldn't afford $250 for the ring. I kept it for a couple of days, thought about it and just didn't feel right about it. It made me feel guilty, so I gave it back to him."

Herb Williams, Ohio State—"My high school coach, instead of letting it get carried away, sat down with me and we decided on 10 schools I might want to visit and go to. We picked those schools out. I wrote those schools a letter to tell them I was

"There are other consequences. Today's students don't have much time or energy to be contemplative, carry out independent research or even do serious homework. ## Letters to the Editor

Being an athlete involves sacrifice

To the Editor:

It frosts me when I hear all this talk about paying our athletes. They already are getting paid when they receive full scholarship aid.

If it is decided to pay them $50 a month now, someone will want to pay $100 next month. The priorities seem to be getting out of line.

Let's teach them to be student-athletes with all the sacrifices, hard work and enjoyment that it entails. College athletics is very special because of the special discipline it takes for a young man or woman to survive.

Walk, don't run, into the future

To the Editor:

Let's turn back the hands of time. I think a lot of us can remember "college" as it was a few generations ago. Sports were—and still are—an integral part of education. For all practical purposes, the games we play(ed) were invented around the turn of the century. As time passed, scholars, coaches and administrators (such as ourselves) refined the rules of the games—but probably more importantly, defined the ethics and the creeds of fair play that governed the sport. The rules that play must be fair, that all sports are good, that spectators and alumni were not parts of sports guided us through the "Golden Years."

Since that time, money, winning at all costs, the loss of the influence of physical educators and other educators, the influence of spectators and alumni have run roughshod over the "Golden Rules" that once governed our sports philosophy.

Today, we are confronted with the notion that indoor track (or any sport) should be eliminated. Fifty years ago this would have been an appalling and unthinkable suggestion. But in the 1980s, it is a plausible possibility. Let us stop the stampede into the future—and return to the utopia that we once had in sports. Let's use some of the old criteria to judge a sport. Is the sport worthwhile; does the youth of America benefit from the teachings that are coupled with the activity; is mankind being served; is the competition clean and wholesome; does the dollar have to determine the fate and the value of a sport?

I hope we spend time to reflect before we discontinue any sport.

I-A senior quarterbacks have a first-class season

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

College football's 1985 Division I-A senior quarterbacks are a classy group, on and off the field and in the record book.

Iowa's Chuck Long, for instance, a fifth-year man because of an injury redshirt season, passed up big professional bonus money for a year to return to Iowa City for his final year, saying he wanted to lead Hayden Fry's team to the Rose Bowl. He did just that with a 10-1 season; and in the process, he reached fourth on the all-time career list in passing efficiency (147.8 points), fifth in total offense (9,034 yards) and sixth in passing yards (9,210).

Bowling Green's Brian McClure, led his team to an 11-0 season and the California Bowl and reached second in career total offense (9,774 yards) and in passing yards (10,280). Boston College's Doug Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner, is the only other I-A 10,000-yard man, with 10,579 passing and 11,317 total offense.

Brigham Young's Robbie Bosco, who led BYU to the national crown a year ago, reached third in career efficiency at 149.3 (BYU's Jim McMahon leads at 156.9, using a minimum of 475 career completions, and his successor at BYU, Steve Young, is second at 149.8, so BYU quarterbacks now rank 1-2-3 all-time). Bosco also reached 10th in career passing yards at 8,090.

Two more Big Ten quarterbacks (Long makes three) are among the top five seniors of 1985. Illinois' Jack Trudeau reached ninth in passing yards (8,146) and 10th in total offense at 8,096. Purdue's Jim Everett, who had 7,158 in career passing, reached 11th in career efficiency, one notch above Trudeau at 131.4, with McClure 13th at 130.4.

Two records for Lee

UCLA's John Lee finished with 79 career field goals, breaking the I-A record of 78 by Luis Zendejas, who finished at Arizona State last year; and Lee's .859 career accuracy figure smashed the record .819 by Chuck Nelson of Washington in 1980 to 82, using a minimum of 60 attempted. Luis' brother Max, by the way, made three against Arizona State November 23 to knock Luis' former team out of the Rose Bowl, and Max finished one behind Luis with 77. In career scoring, Luis leads the all-time list at 368, with Max and UCLA's Lee tied for fourth at 353.

The nation's top career rushers still have games left, led by Auburn's Bo Jackson, who winds up against arch-rival Alabama November 30.

The I-AA career leaders and final season leaders will be covered in the December 2 notes in The NCAA News.

Roses between friends

It somehow was quite appropriate that the race for the Rose Bowl went down to the final Saturday and involved two long-time friends, UCLA coach Terry Donahue and Arizona State coach John Cooper, in Cooper's first season in the Pacific-10 Conference. Donahue helped Cooper get the Arizona State job, and as he told Bob Hurt of the Arizona Republic in Phoenix: "It was the least I could do. I wouldn't even be in coaching if it wasn't for John and Helen Cooper."

UCLA went into its final game November 23 with the inside track to the Rose Bowl, having handed Cooper's team its only conference defeat. Donahue's team also had just one loss, and a victory over Southern California would wrap it up. But Southern Cal upset UCLA, 17-13. Now Arizona State could reach the Rose Bowl for the first time in its history by beating arch-rival Arizona in a night game. But Cooper's team also was upset, 16-13, so UCLA won the race after all.

Cooper was an assistant at Kansas in 1967 when the head coach, Pepper

Barry Word, Virginia, ranks among the leaders in Division I-A rushing

Brigham Young's Kelly Smith is one of Division I-A's leading receivers

Bobby Lamb, Furman, leads Division I-AA in passing efficiency

Bethune-Cookman's Bernard Hawk is among Division I-AA total offense leaders

Rodgers, brought in Donahue as a new graduate assistant. It was impossible to believe that this under-sized, apple-cheeked youngster of 23, a one-time walk-on, had started 21 consecutive games as a 195-pound defensive tackle at UCLA. But Cooper could confirm it, because he had been an assistant at UCLA the previous two years ("He was tough as nails").

Moving to Kansas from his native Los Angeles was a culture shock for young Donahue; and when he lost the room he was renting, he had his Alabama. But Donahue and his girlfriend, Andrea (now his wife), recruited Jaynes for Kansas.

Quotes of the week

Mercyhurst coach Tony DeMeo, before his team's upset victory at Dayton, the fifth in the last six Mercyhurst had played in the rain: "I swear that cloud just follows us around everywhere. Last week (at home vs. Capital), it was so muddy, people planted rice at halftime." After his team's 19-6 upset victory, his 50th career victory, DeMeo said: "There's station wagon packed, ready to go home, when the Coopers invited him to dinner. "I was planning on leaving the next morning," Donahue recalls. "I didn't know anybody, had no place to live and no money."

Football notes

Donahue was walking out to the car that night when he was stopped by Helen Cooper, who invited him to stay with them until he could get squared away.

"If she hadn't said that, I probably wouldn't be in coaching today," Donahue says. "I would have gone home, gone a different route." During Donahue's two-week stay, Helen Cooper recalls, "Terry was so neat, so clean, he even shined the bathroom fixtures. He was such a fine young man." Cooper says he knew in Donahue's second year at Kansas that he would become an outstanding coach. Donahue was sent out on an impossible mission—to recruit David Jaynes of nearby Bonner Springs, Kansas, a lad who idolized Joe Namath and had already announced he was going to a lot of gray hair between (victory No.) 1 and 50. I'm 36, so I can catch the Bear if I coach until I'm 100." (Bob Shreve, Mercyhurst SID)

At age 57, several miles of running is only part of the physical regimen that Kentucky coach Jerry Claiborne puts himself through every day. The coach's oldest daughter, Katie Newell, told Mike Sullivan, Louisville Courier-Journal, about this recent conversation with her dad: "When I called dad recently to tell him I was expecting, he told me to get out and run and exercise. I explained that I was very tired. He said, 'That's why you're tired; you need to be out running and exercising!' I said, 'Dad, pregnancy is not really your area of expertise.'" (But football coaching is, and with 158 career victories, he is now tied for fourth with Houston's Bill Yeoman among active Division I-A coaches behind Michigan's Bo Schembechler at 195, Penn State's Joe Paterno at 187 and Georgia's Vince Dooley at 175.)

I-A seems headed for historic attendance drop

Never in 28 seasons of official NCAA team-by-team record-keeping has the top football division—Division I-A, before that Division I and before that University Division—dropped in both total attendance and per-game average.

But this 29th season likely will show I-A decreases of as much as 200,000 in total attendance and 200 in per-game average by the time official audited figures are received in late December. And if the recent downward trend by the "grass roots" teams (Divisions II and III and nonmembers) continues, the national decrease for all of college football would be the largest in at least 31 years.

First, a little history. NCAA Statistics Service first compiled team-by-team attendance in 1957. Before that, it was done by a Chicago firm using spot checks and projections, and detailed figures are not available.

With the advent of 11-game schedules in 1970, Division I attendance jumped more than 1.3 million, and no one cared that per-game average actually had dropped 1.31 percent, or 420 per game. The only other per-game drop in the 28 years occurred in 1973, a scant 105 per game, but total attendance was up almost 50,000 due to more games. There have been only three drops in top-division total attendance—all tiny (85,061 in 1969, 14,836 in 1974 and 106,522 in 1983), and each time, per-game average was up.

The 1985 decrease will be small—probably well under one percent—but it likely will be the biggest drop in total attendance in the 28 years and second largest in average. There were some huge crowds at traditional games November 23, such as 106,102 at Michigan for Ohio State, 90,064 at Los Angeles for UCLA-Southern California and 84,876 at Stanford for California. But the national season average still fell to 41,915 vs. the final 1984 audited figure of 42,548. Nineteen I-A games remain—14 for the November 28-30 weekend and five December 7, and many are big attendance games.

But the most optimistic projection is for a 56,870 per-game average. That would bring the final press-box figures to 25,642,809 for 42,385 per game—down 140,998 in total and 162 in average. Then the final audited figures, which in the past have reduced press-box figures by as much as 110,000, likely would bring the reductions to around 200,000 and 200-plus per game. With a final regular-season record of 7-4 vs. 1-10 a year ago, Colorado now is assured of at least a tie for first in the national I-A most-improved race. A bowl victory would give Colorado an improvement of 6½ games—a level reached by only 15 other I-A teams in history. Both 11-0 Penn State and 10-0-1 Fresno State are up five games and could reach 5½ with bowl victories, while a bowl defeat would drop Colorado to 5½. After his team's concluding 30-0 victory over Kansas State, Colorado coach Bill McCartney said: "This is a heckuva moment for us. I am especially happy for the seniors, who hung in there with us. The statement I can make now is that we have turned the corner. I'm not making any promises beyond that. Seven wins will give us the confidence to play in the bigger games and recruit better." (David Plati, Colorado SID)

A roller-coaster season

It has been a roller-coaster season for two Sacramento State quarterbacks. They are best friends and roommates, and their parents have become good friends. The season began with returning starter Greg Knapp at the controls, after a 2,000-yard-plus season in 1984. After a 2-2 start with tough Portland State coming up, coach Bob Mattos decided he wanted more mobility and decided to start Knapp's roommate, sophomore Angelo Oliva, who responded by leading the team to a shocking upset victory, 26-14.

Of course, Knapp and his family were placed in a somewhat awkward position of being happy for Angelo and the team while being disappointed that Greg was benched his senior year. Greg handled it with class: "It was tough at first, but I never hid the food his mother brought over or anything like that, although sometimes I wanted to."

Knapp continued to prepare each week but did not play much the following two games, both Sacramento State victories. Mattos rewarded his diligence by naming him game captain against Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, although Knapp was not expected to play. But as fate would have it, Oliva suffered a serious knee injury on the first play from scrimmage, and Knapp rallied the team to a thrilling 28-27 victory, with two touchdown passes.

Now it was the Oliva who had mixed emotions. Angelo's father, who made the 400-mile trip to the California Lutheran game even though his son was out for the season, tried to put it into words: "The only negative thing is all the pain that Angelo is in. But beyond that, I am so happy for Greg that he could have a game like that after all that has happened. It is really a tribute to Greg and his parents, because they raised a good one." (John Cannon, Sacramento State SID)

Carnegie-Mellon used a basic principle of physics to defeat Washington and Jefferson, 24-17, although outweighed by an average of 40 pounds per man in the offensive and defensive lines. Said coach Chuck Klausing: "Every player here takes physics. There is a theorem in physics that says a smaller force can move a larger force if the fulcrum is low and there is a greater acceleration. Our kids know that." And his team, which he terms "best I've ever had," outrushed the bigger W&J team, 123-73. (Bruce Gerson, Carnegie-Mellon SID) bring the reductions to around 200,000 and 200-plus per game.

At this point, only the Southeastern Conference and the Pacific-10 Conference seem certain to be up over 1984 in per-game average, while the Western Athletic Conference, Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Eastern independents likely will show small increases based on press-box figures, which could be wiped out by the audit. Both the Big Eight Conference and Mid-American Conference likely will be down more than 2,300 per game, with the MAC down more than 13 percent in percentage terms and the Big Eight down close to five percent. Even if the Oregon-Southern California game in Tokyo November 30 falls well short of the usual 80,000, the Pac-10 seems certain to move past the Big Eight and into third place in attendance.

Actually, the perennial leader, the Big Ten, and the long-time No. 2 SEC seem to be little affected by the 1985 decline. The Big Ten's final press-box average of 67,453 is down 544 from last year's all-time national high of 67,997, but this seems to be largely a quirk in the schedule, because its current 94.7 percent of capacity is above 1984's final 94.1. And the Big Ten, even after the final audit, seems certain to surpass four million for the first time, having played two more games than last year. The SEC, meanwhile, may be up in per-game average by as much as 500, and likely will top 64,000, but that would be well short of its record 64,842 in 1983.

Division I-AA is now a tiny bit above its final 1984 figure in per-game average with two games left, so the final audit will tell the story. But I-AA total attendance after the audit may still be up over 1984, because the division is playing six more home games than last year. The chart:

Championships Previews

Play-offs may be final chapter in amazing saga

Whether it's beginner's luck or just plain good coaching, first-year Pacific coach John Dunning has a winner.

His Pacific Tigers have compiled a 27-2 record en route to a No. 1 national ranking. And now, with the first-round matches in the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship beginning December 5, Dunning and crew will get to see just how good they really are. The semifinals and finals are December 20 and 22 at Western Michigan.

"We didn't expect to be No. 1 but we're handling it very well," Dunning said. "We really are amazed to be where we are."

That amazement stems from the fact that Pacific is playing with a new lineup, in addition to a new coach. The Tigers lost five seniors who contributed to fourth-place finishes in 1981 and 1983 and a third-place showing in 1984.

Pacific's two losses were in mid-October, first to Stanford and then the following week to Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo. The Tigers recently won their annual tournament, the Wendy's Classic, beating sixth-ranked San Jose State and third-ranked UCLA.

Outside hitters Julie Maginot, Therese Boyle and Teri McGrath; middle blockers Elaine Oden and Dorothy Hert, and setter Elizabeth Hert make up Pacific's attack.

The Tigers' most threatening opposition should come from two teams bristling with championship experience. No. 2-ranked Stanford, 22-2, placed fourth in 1982, third in 1983 and second in 1984. UCLA, winner of four Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women volleyball titles, also has an impressive NCAA history—second in 1981 and 1983 and first in 1984. The Bruins are 24-5.

Of the 28 teams invited to the single-elimination championship tournament, 13 receive automatic qualification through conference championships, four represent the four regions and 11 are chosen on an at-large basis. Selection will be announced December 1. At press-time, the tournament field can be sized up as:

Automatic qualification

Atlantic Coast Conference—Duke; Atlantic 10 Conference—Penn St.; Big East Conference—Providence; Big Eight Conference—Nebraska; Big Ten Conference—Decided by regular season double round-robin play, ending November 30. Illinois and Purdue appear to be front-runners; Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference—Illinois St.; High Country Athletic Conference—Colorado St.; Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference—Florida St.; Mid-American Athletic Conference—Western Michigan; Northern Pacific Athletic Conference—San Jose St.; Pacific Coast Athletic Association—Conference championship will be decided November 30 in tournament. Pacific, Cal Poly-SLO, UC Santa Barb., Hawaii and San Diego St. are all possible winners; Southeastern Conference—Georgia; Southwest Athletic Conference—Texas.

Regional and at-large selection

Teams being considered for regional and at-large bids include: Midwest—Illinois or Purdue (depending on which wins the Big Ten Conference); South—Louisiana St., Texas-Arlington, Texas A&M; West—Stanford, UCLA, Southern Cal, Arizona, Arizona St., Brigham Young, Pepperdine, Utah; and Northwest—Pacific, Cal Poly-SLO, UC Santa Barb., Long Beach St., Hawaii, San Diego St. or Nevada-Las Vegas (depending on who wins the Pacific Coast Athletic Association), California.

Matadors, Vikings may face third title fight

Cal State Northridge and Portland State, championship finalists the last two years, lead the Division II Women's Volleyball Championship field again in 1985.

Ranked Nos. 1 and 2 in the country, respectively, the two squads have claimed one championship each. In the 1983 final, Cal State Northridge slipped by the Vikings, 3-2 (15-6, 15-10, 6-15, 10-15, 15-6); and in 1984, Portland State got its revenge with a 3-0 (15-7, 15-8, 15-11) victory.

Cal State Northridge already has seized one of three automatic qualifications to this year's 16-team single-elimination tournament that begins with regional play December 6 and ends with the semifinals and finals at Portland State, December 13-14. The other two automatic qualifiers are Regis (Colorado) of the Continental Divide Conference and Nebraska-Omaha of the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

The 22-9 Matadors won the California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA), stacking up a 12-0 conference record along the way.

"Obviously, we have had a great year," said Cal State Northridge coach Walt Ker. "The month of October was phenomenal. We didn't lose to any Division II schools, beating seven teams ranked in the top 20. We moved from 13th to No. 1 in the country."

The Matadors haven't fallen to a Division II school since a September 7 loss to Cal Poly-Pomona. Seven of the other eight losses were to ranked Division I schools.

"The women who have stepped in as starters have all done a phenomenal job," Ker said. "So far the team has responded very well under pressure."

First-year starters Karen Lontka and Cami Crouch, both middle blockers, and hitters Anna Garcia and Franci Bowman join returning all-America setter Shelli Mosby and all-America hitter Heather Hafner in the Matadors' lineup.

Portland State, 29-5, is led by three-time all-America hitter/setter Lynda Johnson, middle blocker Lisa Couch and hitter Theresa Huitinga. The Vikings have lost to just one Division II school—Cal State Sacramento in their first game of the year. Recent defeats were to Division I schools Washington and Montana.

Besides the always competitive Portland State, Ker thinks his fiercest competition will come from Cal State Sacramento and fellow CCAA member Cal Poly-Pomona.

At least one team from each of the eight regions will be chosen for the tournament, and the other three teams will be selected on an at-large basis. Schools will be notified of their selection November 27. Teams being considered by region include:

Northeast—New Haven and Northeastern; Atlantic—James Madison; South—Tampa, Mississippi-Women, Florida International and Florida Southern; South Central—Sam Houston State, Central Missouri State, Angelo State and Metropolitan State; Great Lakes—Ferris State, Northern Michigan and Grand Valley State; North Central—St. Cloud State; Southwest—Cal Poly-Pomona and UC Riverside; Northwest—Portland State and Cal State Sacramento.

Tournament training has double meaning in Kalamazoo

Western Michigan University—the institution—is much like the Western Michigan women's volleyball team in its preparation for the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship December 20 and 22.

Both team and university have gone through conditioning, training, practice and game situations. But whether or not the 15th-ranked Broncos reach the final four, Western Michigan will be represented—as the host institution.

"We found out that we had the championship, I believe it was at the beginning of March this year, and we began preparing formally at that point," said tournament director Chris Hoyles, an associate athletics director at Western Michigan. "We had done a lot of groundwork before that, hoping we would be the host."

Hoyles and her staff began building toward the 1985 tournament in 1983 by hosting a first-round play-off that set a single-game NCAA women's volleyball attendance record of 8,643. That mark was shattered October 29, 1985, when 10,645 fans jammed the field house at Purdue for a match against, fittingly, Western Michigan.

In 1984, Western Michigan hosted both a first-round play-off and the Midwest regional in addition to a four-team regular-season tournament that coincided with a high school coaches convention in Kalamazoo.

"We've done that the last two years to give ourselves a little practice" in handling both the NCAA national championship and the Collegiate Volleyball Coaches Association convention, which is scheduled at the same time, Hoyles said.

"This is our first national-championship experience," Hoyles said. "We have hosted first-round and regional tournaments, but there's more that goes into the planning for a national championship because, obviously, it's on a larger scale. You have much more lead time to do it, but you're planning for many, many more people."

The decision to bid as a host site was based in part on the support the women's volleyball team receives from the community.

"We didn't know how much work was involved in hosting the tournament, but it pays back so much to our program," she said. "The visibility our athletics program and institution have received has been tremendous. But it also provides a source of revenue for the community. We have gone out and asked them to support Western Michigan volleyball by buying the tickets, and they have."

"By hosting the championship, we can say: 'Here are X number of people coming into our community to spend their money.' And that's positive economically for Kalamazoo," she said. "The relationship between the institution and the community is definitely enhanced by something like this."

Because of the interest in the program—the Broncos have qualified for the first three NCAA championships—the tournament virtually sold itself.

"We really haven't had to promote this tournament much because of the interest here. The people know and understand the game and are interested in seeing it at its highest level."

"We have a very supportive community in Kalamazoo and so we had a jump on selling the tickets. When they went on sale, we starting selling hundreds at a time, and that was two days after we found out we had the championships."

Even before being chosen as the tournament site, Hoyles and her staff were executing their plans.

"Because the tournament is at

Record crowd saw Purdue defeat Western Michigan

Christmas time, we had to reserve facilities—in the event we did get the championship—so we would have a place to put things," she said.

Despite the expected arrival of the four teams (each with a maximum travel party of 17), an anticipated 250 people for the coaches convention, the six-member NCAA Women's Volleyball Committee, parents, friends, fans and other officials, housing was not a major concern.

"Hotel availability around Christmas is not difficult at all," Hoyles said. "People are not typically traveling in great numbers the week before Christmas, and we were able to finalize that aspect in September."

"Since March, we have been trying to deal with the services necessary to accommodate the visiting guests with their hotel reservations, where they might choose to eat and their entertainment while in Kalamazoo."

In addition, there is the problem of arranging meeting rooms and facilities for the pretournament team banquet, which means planning a menu and organizing the program. And that's only the beginning.

"We had to deal with readying our facility for the event, making whatever physical changes we think are appropriate in terms of cleaning up, sprucing up and scheduling," Hoyles said. "Our commencement was scheduled to take place in the field house on one of the days of the tournament and we had to move the commencement."

"We had to consider how we were going to promote the championship, plan ticket-sales schemes, design and get tickets printed, seating assignments...."

Expecting the unexpected, the tournament committee attempts to devise solutions for problems before they develop, even those that are positive.

"We're struggling with some problems they've never faced in volleyball in terms of ticket sales and where to put people. But those are positive kinds of problems," Hoyles said.

In order to limit the number of roadblocks the host institution faces in its preparation, Hoyles said more advance time is needed.

"It would be good if the committees could give the host institutions at least a whole year to plan, so they can send representatives to the championship the prior year to get an idea as to just what's involved," she said. "Some other institutions, I'm sure, will be interested in hosting this tournament, because we have been talking it up. If they're planning on doing something like this, we can help them because it's been so beneficial to us."

Patriots end Tar Heels' domination for first title

Pam Baughman scored an unassisted goal in the first half and assisted on Lisa Gmitter's tally in the second half as George Mason claimed its first NCAA team championship by beating North Carolina, 2-0, in the National Collegiate Women's Soccer Championship November 24 at George Mason.

The Patriots' victory ended the Tar Heels' domination of women's soccer, which included three straight NCAA championships in addition to the 1981 Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women title. In three previous NCAA championship games, North Carolina had not allowed a goal, including a 4-0 shutout of George Mason in the 1983 title game.

Baughman, named the tournament's most valuable player, scored the game-winner at 29:04 of the first half and combined with Gmitter at the 85:56 mark. The Patriots finished the season 18-2-1.

The Tar Heels also wound up 18-2-1 after ending Colorado College's season in a semifinal game, 3-2. Colorado College closed the season at 16-5.

George Mason bounded into the championship game after eliminating top-seeded and undefeated Massachusetts, 3-0. The Minutemen, who concluded the season with a 16-1 record, had allowed only two goals all season.

"We have eight seniors on the squad that were here when we started the program four years ago," said George Mason coach Hank Leung. "The game was dedicated to them. It was their last shot."

Leung, who started the program four years ago when the Tar Heels were winning the first of their four straight titles, boosted his overall record to 63-14-7. The Patriots have come a long way since that first season when they had to borrow equipment and wear volleyball uniforms until their soccer gear arrived.

With the exception of the scoring, the championship game was statistically even. North Carolina took 10 shots on goal and George Mason had nine. The Tar Heels had two corner kicks and George Mason three. Patriots' goalie Kim Maslin and her North Carolina counterpart, Kathleen O'Dell, each recorded five saves.

The two-day paid crowd of 4,500 set an NCAA record for women's soccer and the game was filmed by ESPN for broadcast at noon (Eastern time) Thanksgiving day. It will be the first nationally televised women's soccer championship game.

Named to the all-tournament team were: Goalies—Kim Maslin, George Mason; Janine Szpara, Colorado College; Midfielders—Kristen Bowsher, North Carolina; Katherine Cassady, North Carolina; Forwards—Lisa Gmitter, George Mason; Jo Boobas, North Carolina; Karen Willoughby, Colorado College; Defenders—Kim Crabbe, George Mason; Debbie Belkin, North Carolina; Sharon Hoag, Colorado College.

North Carolina..... 0 0-0

Connecticut captures second field hockey title

Senior Marjorie Abbott scored all three Connecticut goals in leading the Huskies to a 3-2 victory against Old Dominion in the Division I Women's Field Hockey Championship game November 24 at Old Dominion.

In winning their second national title, the Huskies snapped Old Dominion's string of three straight championships, including victories against Connecticut in 1982 and 1983. In the 1982 championship game, the Monarchs defeated the Huskies by the same 3-2 score.

Despite Old Dominion's 26-4 advantage in shots on goal and a 17-7 edge in penalty corners, Connecticut jumped out to a 2-0 first-half lead.

Abbott converted a penalty corner into the game's first goal at 8:44, scoring from the top of the circle after Lisa Lynch took the corner. Tracey Fuchs also was credited with an assist. Abbott scored again on an assist from Andrea Giunta at the 13:27 mark for the only goal of the game not scored on a penalty corner.

Old Dominion tied the game in the second half with goals exactly six minutes apart by exactly the same combination of players. Dawn Hill, on assists from Jackie Grady and Cheryl Van-Kuren, tallied at 32:36. The three combined again at 38:36 to deadlock the game at 2-2.

Abbott, again with assists from Fuchs and Lynch, punched in the game-winner at the 44:44 mark and the Huskies held off the Monarchs, who failed to convert on several opportunities, including two corner shots in the final minute of play.

Connecticut, which won its first NCAA national crown in 1981, finished the season 19-2. The Huskies moved into the championship game after eliminating Boston U., 2-1. Old Dominion, 20-7 on the season, stopped Northwestern, 1-0, in the other semifinal game.

Each of the finalists placed four players on the all-tournament team and Northwestern had three.

Connecticut's Abbott, Ryan and Fuchs were joined by goalie Laura Eby. Grady, Van-Kuren, Hill and Joyce Cutler represented Old Dominion while Northwestern players included Wendy Kemp, Amy Kekeisen and Kate Oleykowski.

A crowd of 1,300 watched the championship game at Old Dominion's Foreman Field.

Connecticut..... 2 1-3
Old Dominion..... 0 2-2
First half: C—Marjorie Abbott (Tracey Fuchs, Lisa Lynch), 8:44; C—Abbott (Andrea Giunta), 13:27.

Jackrabbits, Mustangs top Division II

South Dakota State's Rod DeHaven was the team's only runner to finish in the top 10, but the Jackrabbits showed enough depth to claim the 1985 Division II Men's Cross Country Championship November 23 at East Stroudsburg State.

DeHaven clocked 32:11.5 over the 10,000-meter course to finish ninth. East Texas State's Samson Obowocha captured the individual title by hitting the chute in 30:49.4.

It was the Jackrabbits' third national cross country title and first since 1973, tying them with Eastern Illinois and San Diego State for most championships. Last season, South Dakota State finished fourth. The Jackrabbits have finished second seven times since the championships began in 1958.

The Jackrabbits compiled 60 points to win the title. Runner-up Edinboro finished with 108.

Following are the top 10 team and individual finishes. Complete results will be included in the December 2 issue of the News.

Team results

1. South Dakota St., 60; 2. Edinboro, 108; 3. Keene St., 134; 4. Southern Connecticut, 136; 5. Cal Poly-Pomona, 154; 6. Lowell, 201; 7. Cal Poly-SLO, 214; 8. Mankato St., 218; 9. SE Missouri St., 224; East Stroudsburg, 236.

Division II Women

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo captured its fourth consecutive Division II Women's Cross Country Championship November 22 at East Stroudsburg.

The Mustangs placed three runners in the top 10 in scoring 30 points to leave Cal State Northridge in second place with 86. Bente Moe, Seattle-Pacific, claimed the individual crown by covering the 5,000-meter course in 17:42.2.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo has dominated the championships since its inception in 1981, the only year the Mustangs didn't win the title. South Dakota State captured the inaugural crown with 26 points. The Mustangs finished second that year with 49.

Jennifer Dunn led the Mustangs to the finish line, clocking 18:05.0 for third place. Teammates Lori Lopez, 18:22.6, and Lesley White, 18:23.3, wound up seventh and eighth, respectively.

Following are top-10 team and individual finishes. Complete results will be included in the December 2 issue of the News.

Team results

Division III titles go to first-time winners

Luther ran to its first Division III Men's Cross Country Championships crown November 23 at Emory.

The closest the Norse had come since the tournament's debut in 1973 was second in 1978. Last year, Luther wound up fifth.

James White, Southeastern Massachusetts, finished first among individual runners with a time of 25:35 over the 8,000-meter course. Luther's first runner, Al Livingood, came in 11th at 26:25.

North Central was second in the team standings with 150 points, 52 more than Luther, and RIT was third with 151.

Following are the top 10 team and individual finishes. Complete results will be included in the December 2 issue of the News.

Team results

1. Luther, 98; 2. North Central, 150; 3. RIT, 151; 4. Wheaton (Illinois), 158; 5. St. Thomas (Minnesota), 169; 6. St. Lawrence, 198; 7. Wis.-Oshkosh, 219; 8. MIT, 246; 9. St. John's (Minnesota), 264; 10. Occidental, 272.

Individual results

Christopher Wilson, Wheaton (Illinois), 26:09; 6. Tony Lewis, Emory, 26:12; 7. Marty Dumoulin, St. Lawrence, 26:15; 8. Swight Scriber, Frostburg St., 26:19; 9. Gary Peterson, North Central, 26:21; 10. Todd Mosley, Wheaton (Illinois), 26:24.

Division III Women

Franklin and Marshall runners Lois

Lucente and Amanda Shaw finished fourth and seventh, respectively, to lead the Diplomats to their first Division III Women's Cross Country Championships title November 23 at Emory.

Middlebury's Dorcas Denhartog claimed the individual championship by covering the 5,000-meter course in 18:05, edging defending individual titlist Julia Kirtland of Macalester by 36 seconds.

Franklin and Marshall, offsetting last year's fourth-place finish, collected 73 points, leaving 1984 champion St. Thomas (Minnesota) as runner-up with 81 points. Ithaca was third.

Lucente clocked 18:59 and Shaw 19:06 for the Diplomats.

Following are the top 10 team and individual finishes. Complete results will be included in the December 2 issue of the News.

Team results

If third

some observers believe adversely affected the vote on moving the overall limit to the bylaws at last year's Convention.

A group of 22 institutions, including all members of the Big Ten Conference, has submitted an amendment to exempt the full Pell award from the aid limitation, rather than the $900 exemption that now exists.

Six institutions—including some of the same ones proposing the full Pell exemption—are proposing an increase in the current exemption from $900 to $1,400, in line with the findings announced a year ago by the Special NCAA Committee on Financial Assistance for Student-athletes.

Both proposals also were before the 1985 Convention. The full-exemption proposal was defeated soundly, while the $1,400 approach received 47 percent of the vote on a 279 to 315 count, but a two-thirds majority is required.

General grouping

Two of the major concerns in intercollegiate athletics—drug abuse and gambling—are the subjects of the first two proposals in the “general” grouping of amendments. That is the category used for proposals that do not fit in other topical groupings.

This year's version of drug-testing legislation (last year's was referred to the Council, Executive Committee and Special Committee on Drug Testing) has been revised to answer more precisely various questions and concerns raised in the 1985 Convention.

The proposal would:

- Establish a list of banned drugs;
- Authorize the Executive Committee to establish a drug-testing program for NCAA championships and certified postseason football contests;

- Authorize the Executive Committee and the Council to provide recommended guidelines for regular-season drug testing by member institutions;

- Authorize penalties for institutional staff members who know of use by student-athletes of banned drugs and who then fail to follow institutional procedures regarding drug abuse;

- Require student-athletes, in conjunction with the annual signing of the student-athlete statement, to consent to be tested for drug usage;

- Establish loss of postseason eligibility as a consequence of use of a banned drug by a student-athlete, and

- Specify that 50 percent of the costs of the drug-testing program would be deducted from the gross receipts of the championships involved and the postseason football bowl games.

It is estimated that the program would result in direct costs to the Association of $310,000 in 1986-87.

After action on that proposal, the Convention will vote on a Council-sponsored resolution that would put the NCAA membership on record as formally requesting the President's Commission on Organized Crime to include in its final report to President Reagan recommended statutory changes to curtail gambling activities, including a statutory prohibition on gambling on amateur sports events.

NCAA President John R. Davis testified before that commission earlier this year on those same issues.

Another four proposals in the “general” grouping deal with means of attempting to control the Association's legal costs, as reported in earlier editions of the News.

One of the more controversial proposals at the Convention may be the Council and Executive Committee's attempt to eliminate the Divisions I and III Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships, and that also is in the “general” section.

Summary

Following is a summary of the financial aid and “general” proposals in the Official Notice of the NCAA's 80th annual Convention:

Financial aid

No. 22: Move the financial aid limitation and related legislation from the constitution to the bylaws. Roll-call vote.

No. 23: Exempt the full Pell Grant award from the aid limitation.

No. 24: Exempt up to $1,400 of the Pell Grant award from the aid limitation.

No. 25: Permit an undergraduate student-athlete to receive financial aid beyond the period of eligibility set forth in Bylaw 4-1 (five-year rule).

No. 26: Permit an incoming student-athlete to receive financial aid during the summertime prior to the student's freshman year.

No. 27: Modify the restrictions on the established financial aid award specified in Constitution 3-4-(a)-(4) by limiting it to the value of commonly accepted educational expenses, instead of $1,000, and permitting it for an unlimited term, rather than one academic year.

No. 28: Permit a student-athlete to receive an honorary award for outstanding academic achievement in high school without the award being included in the maximum aid computation if the award is disbursed through a member institution.

No. 29: Permit athletes in the “equivalency sports” (those in which partial grants can be made, rather than “head-count” sports) to work for any department of the university other than athletics, physical education and recreation without the compensation for that employment counting toward the aid limits for those sports.

General

No. 30: Establish an NCAA drug-testing program at NCAA championships and certified postseason football games, with attendant penalties and financial procedures as outlined earlier in this article.

No. 31: Actions regarding gambling as outlined earlier in this article.

No. 32: Require a member institution to cooperate in the defense of lawsuits brought by others against the Association and its membership.

No. 33: Require a member to pursue internal appeal and review procedures of the Association before becoming involved, directly or indirectly, in legal actions designed to exempt the member institutions from legislation adopted by the Association's membership.

No. 34: Authorize the Council (or a subcommittee) to hold a member accountable for 50 percent of the legal costs incurred by the Association in defending (under specified conditions) a suit initiated by the member institution's staff member or student-athlete against the Association, if the suit is denied by the courts.

No. 35: Affirm that the restitution provisions of Section 10 of the enforcement procedure may be applied if the lawsuit in question is declared to be moot or if a restraining order or injunction otherwise ceases to be enforceable.

No. 36: Require sponsors of proposed legislation that, if adopted, would require significant expenditures for member institutions to provide written documentation of the estimated costs to member institutions for inclusion in the Official Notice of the Convention, as currently is the case for proposals that would increase costs to the Association itself.

No. 37: Eliminate the Divisions I and III Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships, with the 1986-87 academic year to be the first year those meets would not be held. Divisions I and III will vote separately in their own business sessions on this proposal.

No. 38: Permit the Divisions II and III Championships Committees (to be appointed in January 1986) to continue an existing championship in those divisions for 1986-87 only, as part of the 1986-87 block-grant funding program.

No. 39: Reduce from 150 seconds to 120 the minimum amount of time on certified postseason football contest broadcasts or telecasts allotted to promotional messages for the participating institutions and higher education, as recommended by the Postseason Football Committee.

(Next in this series: Proposals dealing with recruiting legislation.) into Parts A and B for separate division voting.

A list of all of the actions taken by the separate divisions and subdivisions during their Monday sessions will be reproduced for distribution to all delegates at the beginning of the general business session at 8 a.m. Tuesday, January 14.

McGuire to host basketball preview

Al McGuire, NBC Sports college basketball commentator, will usher in the 1985-86 season with a 30-minute look at collegiate basketball on the Al McGuire College Basketball Preseason Special Saturday, November 30, at 12:30 p.m. (Central time).

Highlighting the show will be comments on such subjects as the 1986 Final Four, the most influential position in college basketball, the 45-second shot clock and the nation's leading high school players. McGuire will make stops in Atlanta, Georgia; Bloomington, Indiana; Owensboro, Kentucky, and Springfield, Massachusetts, as he makes his way to Dallas—site of the 1986 Final Four.

In making his 1986 Final Four selections, McGuire will document lot of reassessing of the situation.

There's a lot of opposition,” he said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press.

Coaches can become a potent political force, Stafford said.

“There are approximately 10,000 football coaches in the state. They're married, that's two. Take their families and friends, that could be a sizable force,” he said.

Then, as the Convention reaches each of those single-division proposals in their numerical sequence, the chair of the business session will report the appropriate division's action taken the day before. It is at that time that any delegate wishing to move rescission of a division's action will be given an opportunity to do so.

A division's action will stand unless rescinded by the full Convention.

the building of what he terms “a minidynasty” at Georgia Tech, the school he picks to win the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship in Dallas March 31.

In another feature, McGuire and Indiana head coach Bob Knight will discuss college basketball's future.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than December 9, 1985.

Men's Golf: Replacement for David M. Yates, resigned from the University of Oklahoma. New appointee must be from Division I. Yates also must be replaced as chair.

“My parents aren't like that (accepting gifts). They're down to earth; and when it comes to me, they're real protective. They wouldn't want me to get in any trouble. When it (illegal offers) was brought up, they automatically said I wouldn't go to school there.”

Quinn Buckner, Indiana—“I could have probably gone anywhere I wanted to. I didn't talk to anyone while I was participating in high school; and at the end of the season, I took my coach aside, we talked about it and I chose five schools.

“I visited those schools, as opposed to everyone making their pitch. It moves a lot of that illegal stuff out of the way, because if I'm out of their picture, there's no use offering me anything.

“I was offered some stuff. But it didn't make sense for me to jeopardize my career when I knew I had five solid schools.

“I was offered a car. I looked at the guy and I was stunned. This was after I had made the decision to go to Indiana. This was to entice me to come visit the school. When he realized I was solid in my convictions to go to Indiana, he left me alone.”

ESPN to carry football play-offs

ESPN will televise live for the first time the Division I-AA and Division II Football Championships games in December.

The Division II championship game will be played December 14 at the Palm Bowl in McAllen, Texas. The following Saturday, December 21, ESPN will carry the Division I-AA title game from the Tacoma Dome in Tacoma, Washington.

CORRECTION

The November 4 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly identified Mary Lou Thimas, a member of the Women's Committee on Committees, as representing an institution other than Bridgewater State College (Massachusetts), where she is associate athletics director. In the same article, which dealt with the submission of nominations for NCAA sports committees, one reference was made to a form for nominations. Actually, there are no forms this year. It has been requested that a copy of each nomination letter be sent to Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 42

Transfer student waiver—dropped sport

The provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(8) permit a student-athlete in a particular sport to change institutions in order to continue participation in a sport when the student's original four-year collegiate institution drops the sport (in which the student had practiced or had competed at the institution in intercollegiate competition) from its intercollegiate program. This provision also applies where the institution never sponsored the sport on the intercollegiate level while the student was in attendance at the institution, provided the student had never attended any other collegiate institution that offered competition in that particular sport. As set forth in Case No. 314 (page 344, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), in order to qualify for a waiver of the residence requirement, such a student-athlete must transfer from the original institution at the end of the academic year in which the sport was dropped or before the start of the next season of the sport in which the student-athlete participated.

In addition, at the time the institution announces that the sport is being dropped from its intercollegiate athletics program, the members of the squad with eligibility remaining become prospective student-athletes whose recruitment is governed the same as that of a nonmatriculated high school prospective student-athlete, as set out in Article 1, Sections 1 through 10, of the bylaws. In this regard, please note that Bylaw 1-2-(g) states that no member of an institution's athletics staff or other representative of its athletics interests shall contact the student-athlete of another senior collegiate institution for purposes of recruiting that student-athlete without first obtaining the permission of the other institution's athletics director to do so, regardless of who makes the initial contact.

Football contact period

Under the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 1-2-(a)-(4), Division I and Division II member institutions are reminded that off-campus in-person contacts with prospective student-athletes shall be permissible in football only during the period between December 1 (or the date of the completion of the prospective student-athlete's final high school or junior college contest, if it occurs thereafter) and March 1, except for the period surrounding the registration day for the annual convention of the American Football Coaches Association as set forth in Bylaw 1-2-(a)-(6).

Please note that when a prospective student-athlete's team competes in postseason play, contact is not permissible with the prospective student-athlete until after that postseason competition is completed or December 1, whichever occurs later.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Championships Previews

Future championships

1. Dates and sites have been approved for the following future NCAA championships:

1987 Division I Women's Basketball Championship regionals—East, Cumberland County Memorial Arena, Fayetteville, North Carolina, with North Carolina State serving as the host institution; Midwest, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; West, University of California, Los Angeles; Midwest, to be acted upon at a later date.

1986 Division I Women's Softball Championship regionals—To be conducted May 16-17, rather than May 15-16 as approved earlier.

1986 Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship (May 24 and 26)—To be hosted by the University of Delaware, rather than Rutgers University, New Brunswick, with Rutgers to serve as host institution for the 1987 championship.

Championships bids

2. Schools interested in serving as host institution for the 1988 Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships should contact Patricia W. Wall in the national office before December 15.

Legislative Assistant NCAA Legislative Services

Applications are being accepted for an immediate opening on the NCAA legislative services staff.

Legislative assistants primarily are responsible for providing guidance concerning the application of NCAA legislation in specific situations, both in writing and by telephone; assisting in preparation and review of forms required by NCAA legislation, and completing appropriate research and analysis of materials necessary to implement the Association's rules and regulations.

The work requires a comprehensive knowledge of NCAA regulations and the ability to communicate effectively while assisting in the analysis and development of NCAA legislation.

Experience in intercollegiate athletics, either as a student-athlete or administrator, and a legal or other postgraduate education are preferred.

Interested candidates should send a resume to:

William B. Hunt
Assistant Executive Director
NCAA
P.O. Box 1906
Mission, Kansas 66201

Enforcement Representative NCAA Compliance and Enforcement Department

Applications are being accepted for immediate openings on the NCAA enforcement staff.

The positions will provide qualified individuals with the opportunity to be a part of the emphasis on NCAA rules compliance and enforcement that was supported overwhelmingly by the special NCAA Convention in June.

An enforcement representative is primarily responsible for the investigation of assigned infractions cases and making oral presentations of information and evidence at Committee on Infractions meetings. The investigation process includes locating principals, making appropriate appointments and travel plans for interviews, preparing memorandums of information collected, developing official case files, analyzing information on file to complete a case, and ensuring that established investigative procedures are followed.

The work requires a comprehensive knowledge of NCAA regulations and the ability to communicate effectively.

It is preferred that the applicant have a legal or other postgraduate education and experience in intercollegiate athletics, either as a student-athlete or an administrator.

Interested candidates should send a resume to:
Michael S. Glazier
Assistant Director of Enforcement
NCAA
P.O. Box 1906
Mission, Kansas
An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

COMPLIANCE REPRESENTATIVE NCAA Compliance and Enforcement Department

Applications are being accepted for an immediate opening in the newly restructured NCAA compliance and enforcement department. The department's compliance section was created after the June 1985 special Convention to provide support services to member institutions' chief executive officers in their renewed commitment to greater NCAA rules compliance.

A compliance representative's primary responsibility includes:

- Assistance to member institutions in identifying and attacking specific problems and developing procedures to prevent rules violations.
- Development of model procedures and guidelines for successful operation of athletics programs.
- Campus visitation on request of a member institution to assist it in analyzing the overall structure and administration of its athletics programs, and its compliance with NCAA legislation.
- Implementation of the forms and processes used by institutions in conducting the required periodic self-studies and annual financial audits.
- Cooperation with member conference officials in assisting their institutions in rules compliance.

This position requires a working knowledge of NCAA regulations and the ability to communicate effectively both orally and in writing. It is necessary that the applicant have recent administrative experience in intercollegiate athletics.

Interested candidates should send a letter of application and resume to:

John H. Leavens
Director of Compliance
NCAA
P.O. Box 1906
Mission, Kansas 66201

An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

Georgia athletics files not open to public, state judge rules

A judge has dismissed a Macon, Georgia, newspaper's suit seeking access to financial records of the University of Georgia Athletic Association, ruling that the association is a private corporation not subject to the state's open-records law.

Superior Court Judge Franklin Pierce of Richmond County issued the decision November 19 in a six-month-old suit filed by the Macon Telegraph and News. The newspaper's attorney said he would appeal the ruling to the Georgia Supreme Court. The newspaper had argued that the records should be available to the public because the association's officers, who possess the records, are public officials employed by the university.

"If the legislature intended for the documents of the athletic association to be subject to the open-records law, it had an excellent opportunity to so provide when it passed the law," Pierce wrote in a five-page decision.

"It did not, and I conclude that omission was intentional."

The suit was filed in Athens in May against the university and the athletics association, asking for access to all of the association's financial records.

Pierce, who took the case after judges in Clark County disqualified themselves, dismissed the athletics association as a defendant in June, citing a 1949 law that established the athletics associations of Georgia and Georgia Institute of Technology as private concerns.

Walter Bush, the attorney for the Telegraph and News, said he would appeal that ruling as well as the judge's decision to dismiss the suit.

Bush argued during the hearing that university President Fred C. Davison and Allan Barber, vice-president for business and finance, possess the records and deal with them in their official capacities.

The university's attorneys argued that Davison and Barber had contact with the documents only as officers of the private athletics association. Davison is the association's chairman and Barber is its treasurer.

The athletics associations of Georgia and Georgia Tech are required to submit to the board of regents annual audits, which are open to the public. According to the latest audits, covering the 12 months ending June 30, Georgia's athletics association had revenues of $13.7 million, while the Georgia Tech athletics association took in $7.7 million.

The Georgia Tech athletics association was not involved in the litigation.

Kreis awaits sentencing on steroid charge

Former Vanderbilt University strength coach E. J. "Doc" Kreis and former pharmacist Melvin "Woody" Wilson pleaded guilty November 18 to selling steroid drugs to a former Clemson University coach.

Attorneys for Kreis and Wilson reached a plea-bargain agreement with District Attorney General Tom Shriver, who allowed the men to plead guilty to a charge that in September had been dismissed on a technicality by special Judge Bobby Capers.

In exchange, Shriver dropped a count of conspiracy against Kreis and 95 counts of possession and distribution against Wilson.

Kreis and Wilson could receive maximum sentences of 11 months, 29 days in the Davidson County Jail at a sentencing hearing that will be held at an as yet unscheduled time.

In addition to the Clemson sale, Wilson also pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess and distribute steroid drugs without required prescriptions.

A third codefendant, former Wilson employee Thomas Patterson, had previously been placed on a year's probation through a pretrial diversion program.

Until November 18, Kreis' attorney Robert May had denied Kreis had any involvement in the use of steroids.

But Kreis told the court he sold a steroid drug in February 1984 to Sam Colson, then the strength coach at Clemson.

"You're pleading guilty because in fact you are guilty?" Capers asked Kreis.

"Yes, sir," Kreis answered.

Kreis and Wilson both pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of selling Colson the prescription drug Dianabol, which is used to promote muscle mass.

A parallel investigation in South Carolina led to a guilty plea on a similar charge from Colson, who was given a suspended 18-month sentence, placed on three years' probation and

Clemson's Ford draws probation

Clemson University football coach Danny Ford received a one-year probation from the Atlantic Coast Conference November 20 for his actions at the end of the November 16 football game against the University of Maryland, College Park, league officials announced.

Ford received a reprimand from the conference after he ran onto the field at the end of the game and argued with referees. In addition to the probation, Ford was prohibited from coaching on the sidelines in next season's Clemson-Maryland game at College Park.

"We do not condone the actions that took place at the conclusion of the Clemson-Maryland game last weekend," Clemson athletics director Bobby Robinson said. "This behavior does not belong in intercollegiate athletics, and it was an embarrassment to the university. We want the athletics department to have a positive influence on Clemson University."
