Six are selected for Silver Anniversary awards

Six men whose career achievements encompass medicine, higher education, banking, real estate and professional sports - among them a living legend in the world of golf - have been named recipients of the NCAA's Silver Anniversary awards. The awards honor former student-athletes who have led distinguished lives after outstanding college athletics careers 25 years ago.

Recipients of the awards are Robert Lilly, Texas Christian University, football; Frank McKinney Jr., Indiana University, Bloomington, swimming; Claude T. Moorman, Duke University, football and track; Jack W. Nicklaus, Ohio State University, golf; Kenneth A. Shaw, Illinois State University, basketball, and Francis A. Tarkenton, University of Georgia, football.

Presentation of the awards will be made January 14 during the NCAA honors luncheon in New Orleans. The Silver Anniversary awards are part of the recently expanded College Athletics Top Twelve (see accompanying story). Also to be presented at the luncheon is the Theodore Roosevelt Award, the NCAA's highest honor, and an award of special recognition to Grambling State University athletics director and football coach Edward G. Robinson.

Bob Lilly

A consensus all-America defensive tackle in 1960, Lilly left Texas Christian for a stellar career with the National Football League's Dallas Cowboys. After playing in the College All-Star Game, the Hula Bowl and the East-West Shrine Game, Lilly went on to become all-pro seven times in 14 seasons.

He played in 11 Pro Bowls and was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1980 and the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1981. Also a member of the Texas Sportswriters' Hall of Fame, Lilly was the first player inducted into the Ring of Honor at Texas Stadium, the Cowboys' home facility.

While still in school, he was active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Big Brothers Association and the lettermen's club. Since leaving college, Lilly has been involved with Easter Seals, the United Way, the

Awards expanded

During a December 19 telephone conference, the Association's Administrative Committee moved to expand the two awards that make up the NCAA College Athletics Top Ten. Beginning with the 1986 honors luncheon, which will be held January 13 at the annual Convention, 12 individuals will be honored as past and current standouts both on and off the field.

The first half of the first College Athletics Top Twelve, the Silver Anniversary honorees, appears in this issue of The NCAA News.

Heart Fund and the TCU alumni association. He received the school's 1983 homecoming honor for distinguishing himself in business. He currently is involved in real-estate investments and land development.

Frank McKinney

McKinney won three Olympic medals and set three world records during a standout career as a backstroke. After taking a bronze medal in the 100-meter backstroke at the 1956 Olympics, he earned a silver medal in the event in 1960 and swam on the United States' gold-medal-winning 4x100-meter medley relay team.

A three-year letterman and team captain at Indiana, McKinney won NCAA championships at 100 and 200 meters in 1959 and swam on the Hoosiers' national-championship 4x100-meter medley relay team in 1960. He won six individual and shared two team-relay championships in Big Ten Conference competition, and took five Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) backstroke titles.

While in school, McKinney served as president of the IU Student Foundation and the IU "I" Men's Association, and he was active in the blue Key and Sphinx Clubs. He was named one of the university's 10 outstanding male seniors in 1961.

In private life, McKinney has fashioned a highly successful banking career. He currently is president and chief executive officer of the American Fletcher National Bank in Indianapolis. He is vice-chairman of the board and a member of the executive committee of Allied Bank International in New York, positions he has held since

81 percent of membership to share additional per diem

More than $1.1 million has been approved by the NCAA Executive Committee for distribution to qualified member institutions as additional per diem payments for 1984-85 championships.

At its December 9, 1985, meeting, the Executive Committee reviewed the auditor's report of 1984-85 finances, which confirmed unallocated surplus beyond that originally anticipated. After further review of final figures with the Association's auditors, Francis A. Wright & Co. of Kansas City, Missouri, the Administrative Committee authorized payment of a $14 per diem for 1984-85 championships participants.

NCAA Controller Louis J. Spry said that 81 percent of the membership will share in the additional per diem. Of 793 active member institutions, 642 qualify for the supplemental payment. Spry said the checks were mailed to members December 24.

Exempted from the additional payments were Divisions II and III men's and women's indoor track and Division III women's lacrosse, for which under announced policy the Association did not pay transportation guar-

I-AAA seeking formal structure, voting rights within Division I

Division I member institutions that do not sponsor football, or not in that division, used to be called "other Division I members." For the past year or so, they have been labeled "Division I-AAA," but there is no mention of such an appellation in the NCAA regulations.

Sixth in a series

That will change if Proposal No. 80 is adopted at the 1986 NCAA Convention. Eleven institutions are proposing that Division I-AAA become the official name of that grouping and that it be accorded the same voting privileges on NCAA legislation that Division I-A now enjoys.

Specifically, the proposal would specify that Division I-AAA could vote separately on any issue in the divided bylaws except Bylaws 5-6, 5-7, 6-5(e), 7-1(b) and other Bylaw 7 legislation pertaining to basketball, as well as Bylaws 11-1(a) and through (e) and 11-4.

Interestingly, by providing that voting privilege to the I-AAA category, the legislation automatically would give the same privilege to Division I-AA. Currently, Division I-A can act separately in such bylaws, and the Divisions I-AA and I-AAA members also can act separately but must vote together. The proposal would let each subdivision act independently in the appropriate bylaws.

Proposal No. 80 also would permit the Division I-AAA subdivision to have an annual summer legislative meeting, which Divisions I-A and I-

AA already have the right to do.

The amendment is the first in a grouping of seven proposals dealing with governance issues.

Governance

Another proposal in the governance category is a repeat attempt to require that there be at least two candidates for every position in NCAA elections of NCAA officers, Council members, and members of men's and women's sports committees.

That proposal, sponsored by eight member institutions, also specifies that requests for nominees would be circulated to the membership and copies of the nominees would be sent to the membership not later than November 22 annually. Those procedures already exist for officer and Council nominations, and the request for nominees already is standard practice for sports-committee vacancies.

The same proposal almost was adopted at the 1985 annual Convention, despite strong opposition from the Nominating Committee and the Men's Committee on Committees. Divisions I and III voted for it (164-131 in Division I; no count in Division III), but Division II voted against it (68-85). Because the provisions are

Black college football programs facing hard times

By John Eisenberg
Baltimore Sun

Scene I: On the afternoon of September 28, 1985, in Jackson, Mississippi, Jackson State and Mississippi Valley State play a football game at Mississippi Memorial Stadium. The attendance is 56,000. Several days later, Walter Reed, Jackson State's athletics director, tells a reporter: "It is not enough. You cannot rely on gate receipts. Not even that many."

Scene II: That night, at the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, Louisiana, Grambling State's Eddie Robinson ties Bear Bryant's record for career college coaching victories with a 23-6 victory over Oregon State. Although televised football games almost seem to proliferate by themselves these days, this game, one of the biggest in black college football history, is not shown anywhere, even on tape-delay. There are 13,396 fans in the stands.

Scene III: Earl Banks sits in the athletics director's office at Morgan State. He was the football coach when the school had one of the best black college programs in the 1960s. Now, though, it is one of the worst, and Banks has been called back as interim athletics director to help it recover. But there is trouble, and he knows it.

"Football is a problem at a lot of black schools. All the programs are going to go down if some strong decisions are not made. I mean at a lot of places, and here, too. The money is such a drain. We could compete in all sports...the future wouldn't be as bleak if there was no football," Banks says.

He continues: "These are difficult days for many of the football programs at historically black universities. Almost all are losing money. Few have identities outside the black community, if there. Attendance either is stagnant or decreasing at all but several schools."

In the late 1970s, most of the largest, most prestigious black programs moved up from Division II to Division I-AA in the NCAA because television revenues and exposure were increasing sharply in Division I-AA. But that no longer is true.

Many black programs do not have the money or resources to be consistently competitive. The price of playing football is increasing every year, but sources of income are not available to black schools, many of which have decreasing enrollments, small budgets and alumni booster groups that provide little support.

Seven of the 16 black programs in Division I-AA receive money from their state governments, which eases the hardship. But even most of those programs are not close to being self-sufficient. It is not a comfortable existence. "The state is in trouble, and higher percentage of the best black players are attending predominantly white Division I-A schools that had been segregated. Now comes the arrival of Proposal 48, a piece of NCAA legislation that will stiffen freshman eligibility standards. Many black coaches say the rule may decrease the talent pool available to them as greatly and Robinson have a strong, growing national identity. Jackson State has led Division I-AA in attendance the last two years.

But for each success story, there is a handful of schools with problems. Six black schools in South Carolina used to play football. Now, there is one.

Many of the Division I-AA teams are struggling, not to survive, but to avoid dropping to Division II. To many coaches and administrators, that would represent a step backward in quality and prestige and stamp as a failure their move up in class.

"It does look dim at a lot of places," Davis said. "Unless some changes are made, it is going to be very difficult for most of the historically black schools to continue to compete at the I-AA level."

"Our attendance is not high enough to keep up with increased expenses, so what options are left?" said Hoyt Taylor, athletics director at Alabama State. "What can we do? How can we bump our gates? I think we have to start playing more white schools. Most of the black schools have little identity among whites. The black schools simply can't keep playing money is getting tighter," Reed said. "It won't take long for us to go down."

The fact is, in college football today, there is little potential for growth if you do not have a strong booster club or television revenue. Why? Because growth is tied into attendance, and with the glut of games now on television every Saturday afternoon, many small schools are suffering drops in attendance. Black schools, with smaller stadiums, have been particularly hurt.

"Our attendance has dropped drastically the last few years, and that is making it tough," said Kenneth A. Free, commissioner of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, one of two black conferences in Division I-AA.

There is more, too. Every year, a as any change since integration.

Put it all together and this is what you have: "Many black teams are finding it harder and harder to improve instead of decline. And with Proposition 48, things are about to get a whole lot tougher," said Bill Davis, coach at South Carolina State.

"There is plenty of reason for concern about the future of black football, and I think most people agree with me," said Archie Cooley, the coach at Mississippi Valley State, one of the few programs turning a profit these days.

The news is not all bad, of course, especially in the South. The football program at Southern University, Baton Rouge, generates $1 million in revenue annually. Grambling State College sports commissioner could unravel knotty problems

"In looking for a way out of its present scandals involving illegal payments, academic abuses and gambling, the NCAA should heed the lesson of a powerful analogy from the sport of baseball.

"In 1920, professional baseball faced a similar crisis of credibility. Those in control of baseball responded... by agreeing that the responsibility for the basic integrity of the sport should be concentrated in the hands of a single, powerful person. The baseball owners thus turned to the Federal judiciary to find their first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis. For the 24 years he served as commissioner of baseball, his control of the sport never was seriously in doubt.

"A strong commissioner's office in the NCAA similarly offers promise for meaningful college sports reform. A respected and determined commissioner could restore confidence to the NCAA's enforcement program and provide new direction to its legislative agenda.

"Who would be appropriate for this position of commissioner of the NCAA?

"A commissioner who comes to the job with high public standing and a proven reputation for integrity provides a great deal of reassurance that things are, or at least will be, under control.

"College football should receive approximately $41.3 million from the networks in 1985; from regional syndicators approximately $15 million, for an in-season total of $56.3 million. The postseason bowls yield approximately $35 million for a grand total of $91.3 million.

"One needs to compare this 1985 plan with the aborted 1984 NCAA contracted package involving ABC, CBS and ESPN. ESPN was awarded the former 1984 supplemental package in the amount of $5.1 million for 16 games. ABC and CBS paid collectively $65.9 million for in-season games for the former 1984 package. The subtotal for in-season television would be $70.1 million plus approximately $35 million for bowls, for a total of $105.1 million. A 10 percent increase could be anticipated for 1985 if the NCAA still was a negotiating entity, yielding an estimated $115.6 million.

"The rights fees and exposures indicated a $24.3 million annual loss for colleges when comparing the former NCAA TV plan versus the combined Big Ten Conference/Pacific-10 Conference group and the College Football Association, plus regional."

Junior college transfer—Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(8)

The Administrative Committee in their December 19, 1985, meeting reviewed the application of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(8)-(ii). This regulation, which sets forth the requirements for a transfer student from a junior college who was a 2,000 qualifier and wishes to enroll in a Division I institution, was amended August 1, 1984, to make reference to the "satisfactory completion" of credit while enrolled in the junior college. Subsequently, the regulation was amended effective August 1, 1985, to specify that the credits satisfactorily completed must be acceptable toward a baccalaureate degree program at the certifying institution. The Administrative Committee has ruled that the most recent amendment (making reference to credits being acceptable toward a baccalaureate degree program) would be applicable only to individuals who have enrolled in junior colleges subsequent to August 1, 1985.

Financial aid limitations—academic scholarships

Constitution 3-4(d) and 3-4(d)-(3) state that where a student-athlete's ability is taken into consideration in awarding unearned financial aid, the combination of all scholarships and grants-in-aid may not exceed "commonly accepted educational expenses" set forth in Constitution 3-1(g)-(1). Constitution 3-4(d)-(3) provides an exception for an honorary award for outstanding academic achievement to be received without it being included in the maximum allowable financial aid computation if it is a standing scholarship award published in the institution's catalog. The basis of the award is the candidate's academic record at the awarding institution, and the award is determined by competition among the students of a particular class or college of the institution.

Academic scholarship awards provided by organizations outside the institution (e.g., National Merit Scholarships) or institutional scholarships based upon the student's high school record do not qualify for the exception set forth in Constitution 3-4(d)-(3). In other words, these financial aid awards must be counted in determining the student's maximum financial aid under Constitution 3-1(g)-(1). These regulations apply to midyear transfers.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

"Make no mistake, American society as a whole is in need of a good scrubbing, and a good place to start is clearly athletics. The knights of the playing field and their games are too great an influence on the youth of this land not to be held to the highest standards.

"Unfortunately, the industry—and industry it is—is now too deep in the muck to be allowed to clean its own house. New rules, with strong penalties, are required to send the message that athletics will be subjugated to academic concerns and held to the highest standards."

"The thing we (in the Southwest Athletic Conference) have to be assured of is that we're all playing by the same rules. We're going to monitor that. We're going to watch it very closely, and we're going to make sure that everybody does everything just right; because if we find somebody breaking the rules, we're going to turn them in.

"If I were an NCAA investigator and I were to be sent to a school and I had carte blanche to investigate that program, I could find something wrong, because there is no way that you can run a program without some violations.

"You can't control your people unless they want to be controlled. I get tickled listening to people across the country say, 'We can control ours' and 'It's the image that you portray' and this type of stuff. And I understand them saying that because I was that naive myself and I felt that I could control anything and anybody. But you really can't. And the thing that scares you so badly is that you never know what they're doing."

"The NCAA minimal guidelines as they relate to academic integrity are at best a joke. The simple requirement that a student-athlete pass 24 hours with a 2.000 grade-point average each year to retain eligibility is an insult to our intelligence. The NCAA must come to grips with a standard of excellence rather than acceptance of mediocrity.

"While the NCAA waits for an academic spine transplant, the nation's institutions of higher learning are in a position to provide the leadership from academic accountability. The Presidents Commission must meet its responsibility and stand firm behind Proposal 48 and not provide a knee-jerk reaction to water down the standards enacted in 1983, which are to go into effect August 1, 1986."

"Some colleges are taking a ghetto approach, giving more money to the women but developing totally separate programs.

"Many of the major football and basketball schools see the dollars spent and the efforts made for women as a diversion, and they resent it. Some others see the women as a tremendous potential for school loyalty.

each other."

"We at the black schools believe our future is hooked into getting back into the mainstream of television," Reed said. "It is that important. Money is getting really tight. That TV revenue is a lot of money to lose out the window. And the exposure was great."

Florida A&M coach Rudy Hubbard said, "We balanced our books with the television money. When the possibility of television money and exposure disappeared, we hit hard times. We have not been able to generate enough revenue to build the program and keep up with the times."

At Bethune-Cookman, coach Larry Little said, "The only reason we went to Division I-AA was the hope of getting some of that television money and exposure. But the Supreme Court ruling (the ruling voiding the NCAA Football Television Plan as being in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act) ended that. We have not been on television since we went to I-AA. And we don't draw big crowds here. We are losing a lot of money."

"The lack of television is going to kill us," Cooley said. "I hate to put a time limit on it, but it will not be that long."

Of course, almost all other Division I-AA schools are facing similar problems because of the Supreme Court decision. They, too, have less money to work with. They, too, are faced with lagging attendance because of the sudden glut of games on television every Saturday.

Still, while the elimination of television has hurt all of Division I-AA, no one has been affected more than the black schools. Why? They needed the money more. Much more.

"It might be different if these schools had effective booster clubs that donated a lot of money to the football program. But they do not. Many of the predominantly white Division I-AA schools have them, and their support has helped make up for the loss in television revenue," said Doug Fullerton, athletics director at Montana State, the 1984 Division I-AA football champion.

So what does the future hold for black Division I-AA teams?

Certainly, a lot of black schools in Division II are thriving.

"We're no worse off than we were three years ago," said Henry Lattimore, coach at North Carolina Central. "In fact, we're not as bad off as three years ago. If you asked most of the other Division II schools if they were doing OK, for the most part, the answer would be yes. It does not mean we're not suffering. The thing is, we were never depending on television revenue. As a result, we can't miss what we didn't have."

Texas rule to be examined

A law professor has been appointed by a Texas court to study how many students have failed since the state's no-pass, no-play rule went into effect.

Gerald Treece, 40, a member of the faculty at the South Texas School of Law, has been appointed special master by District Judge Marsha Anthony in connection with a class-action lawsuit that claims the no-pass, no-play rule discriminates against minority and handicapped students, who generally have a higher rate of failure.

Treece expressed mixed feelings over his appointment, according to the Houston Chronicle.

"It might be like being named the fattest horse in the glue factory," he said. "It's going to be a lot of work."

The no-pass, no-play rule prohibits a student who fails a course from participating in extracurricular activities for the next six-week grading period. The rule was held unconstitutional in Anthony's court earlier this year, but the Texas Supreme Court reversed the decision.

Treece said he hopes to be able to make his report to the court as early as February. His job will be to work with attorneys on both sides of the lawsuit and accumulate evidence based on the state's data on the number of minority and physically handicapped students affected by the rule.

Michael Johnson, president Southwest Athletic Conference

The Associated Press

"Some schools (in the conference) said they were selling few season tickets when fans knew they were going to be on television a lot."

Mark White, governor State of Texas

The Houston Post

"I would like to think that in the area of sports that the state would not have to become involved in that. We have enough crime out there as it is... I would hope that the NCAA would be self-policing.

"However, if they (the NCAA) can't handle their business, maybe we might have to."

Clyde Hart, head track coach Baylor University

The Lariat (Baylor student newspaper)

"What's the big deal if athletes take illegal money?"

"The big deal is that it's unethical. And the student may lose a scholarship, and Baylor may be placed on probation.

"No one is forcing athletes to take an $8,000-a-year free education. But if they do take a scholarship to Baylor, we coaches, professors, administrators and boosters are obligated to insist that they abide by all rules—Baylor's and the NCAA's. And we must help the students develop into well-rounded individuals who value their educational opportunity more than expensive cars, TVs, etc."

Robert Gutkowski, president Madison Square Garden Network

The Associated Press

"I've been involved in national and regional cable networks, and I think there is a great business potential on regional because the rights costs are so prohibitive for national outlets, and the out-of-pocket costs for production also are prohibitive.

"Regional is attractive to the (cable) affiliates in an area. I think we'll see stronger regional networks expanding and getting better products."

Eagles cap comeback drive with Division I-AA championship

Tracy Ham threw four touchdown passes in the second half, the final one a 13-yard scoring strike to Frankie Johnson with 10 seconds left, to give Georgia Southern a come-from-behind 44-42 victory over Furman for the NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship.

Georgia Southern, trailing 21-6 at half time, fell behind 28-6 in the opening minutes of the third quarter after Furman quarterback Bobby Lamb, who led the division in passing efficiency this season—completing 119 of 206 passes for 2,054 yards and a school-record 23 touchdowns—hit flanker Larry Grady with a 33-yard touchdown pass.

Georgia Southern, which reestablished its football program in 1981 after a 47-year hiatus, started its second-half rally with an eight-play, 96-yard touchdown march capped by a 24-yard pass from Ham to wide receiver Monty Sharpe. Ham entered the game with 1,765 passing yards and 11 touchdown passes as well as 1,078 rushing yards and 11 more touchdowns.

On Georgia Southern's next possession, the Eagles pulled to within seven points on a 40-yard pass from Ham to Johnson, the game's leading receiver with seven catches for 148 yards, in a drive that covered 56 yards in four plays.

Georgia Southern fullback Gerald Harris, who led all rushers with 92 yards on 10 carries, tied the game at 28 with a 52-yard touchdown run with 2:28 left in the quarter.

After Georgia Southern pulled ahead 35-28 on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Ham to tight end Herman Barron, Furman again tied the game on a 99-yard, 11-play drive culminated by fullback John Bagwell's seven-yard scoring run.

Georgia Southern pulled ahead 38-35 with 3:37 left on Tim Foley's 39-yard field goal before Furman regained the lead with an 80-yard, seven play touchdown march that ended with a four-yard scoring run by Bagwell. Bagwell scored two first-half touchdowns and was the leading Furman rusher with 73 yards on 15 carries.

After a holding penalty pushed Georgia Southern back to its 18-yard line on its next possession, Ham passed to Johnson for a 53-yard gain and, seven plays later, hit Johnson in the end zone for the game-winning touchdown.

After a first-round bye, Furman,

12-2 knocked off Rhode Island, 59-15, and Nevada-Reno, 35-12, to advance through the 12-team field to the championship game.

Georgia Southern (13-2), situated less than 200 miles from Furman, had to play in all three play-off rounds, beating Jackson State, 27-0; Middle Tennessee, 28-21, and Northern Iowa, 40-33, to reach the title game, dubbed the Diamond Bowl and played in Tacoma, Washington's, Tacoma Dome before a crowd of 5,306.

Ehrhardt, Murchison pace I-AA all-Americans

Lamar running back Burton Murchison, who led Division I-AA in rushing, and Rhode Island quarterback Tom Ehrhardt, the division's 1985 total-offense leader, have been named to the Kodak all-America I-AA football team.

Willie Shepherd, a defensive lineman at Southeastern Louisiana, was named to the team for the second consecutive season. The Kodak team is selected by the American Football Coaches Association.

Murchison, a 6-0, 195-pound sophomore, carried the ball 265 times for 1,547 yards and eight touchdowns. He averaged 5.8 yards per carry and 140.6 yards per game, leaving all-America teammate Gil Fenerty of Holy Cross in second place. Fenerty, also a first-team selection, carried the ball 247 times for 1,368 yards and seven touchdowns, a 5.5 yards-per-carry average and a per-game average of 136.8 yards. Murchison's 259 net rushing yards September 28 against Rice was a Division I-AA single-season high.

Ehrhardt, a 6-3, 207-pound senior quarterback, averaged 346 total yards per game. He was responsible for 35 touchdowns and 6.5 yards per play based on 3,460 total yards and 529 plays during the season. His 494 passing attempts led Division I-AA. Ehrhardt and Mississippi Valley State's Willie Totten each threw eight touchdown passes in single games this season, tops in the division—Ehrhardt November 16 against Connecticut and Totten October 26 against Texas Southern.

Also named to the first team was Brian Forster, Ehrhardt's favorite receiver. Forster led Division I-AA in receiving as the 6-1, 227-pound junior hauled in 115 catches for 1,617 yards and 12 touchdowns. His 115 receptions were the most in Division I-AA, as were his 11.5 catches-per-game average. Forster's 327 receiving yards September 28 against Brown was a Division I-AA single-game high.

Following is a list of first-team selections on offense and defense:

Record crowd watches Pacific earn first title

Pacific won its first NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championship December 22, defeating Northern California neighbor Stanford, 15-17, 15-7, 15-12, 15-13, at Western Michigan.

A record-setting crowd of 7,876 saw the finals, along with the third-place match between two other California schools—Southern Cal and UCLA—with the Trojans winning 15-7, 15-12, 8-15, 11-15, 15-3. In semifinal action, 6,941 watched Stanford defeat Southern Cal, 15-9, 7-15, 15-10, 15-6, and Pacific slip past UCLA, 15-11, 15-7, 9-15, 17-15.

Going into the championship, Pacific was seeded second behind Stanford. Although a traditional power in women's volleyball the last six years (one second-place national finish, one third and three fourths), the Tigers went into the 1985 season with a new coach, John Dunning, and a new lineup. Stanford, with a more seasoned squad, had national finishes of fourth (1982), third (1983) and second (1984 to UCLA).

In the first game of the finals, Stanford rushed out to a 14-8 lead, only to see Pacific come back, 15-14. Stanford scored the next three points for the 17-15 success. In the second game, Pacific jumped out to a 7-0 lead and never relinquished it, taking a 15-7 decision.

Stanford seemed to be the sure winner in the third game, as the Cardinal held leads of 9-4, 10-7 and 12-9. However, the Tigers scored six straight six points to edge the Cardinal, 15-12. In game four, Stanford again leaped out to a tremendous advantage, 11-2, but let the Tigers come back to 12-11. Stanford led 13-12 before the Tigers' Julie Maginot clinched the win with the last two kills.

Kim Oden paced Stanford with 27 kills and a .404 hitting percentage, while her sister, Elaine, led the Tiger attack with 24 kills. Both were unanimously named to the all-tournament team. Other selections were Liz Masakayan of UCLA, Kim Ruddins of Southern California, Wendi Rush of Stanford and Teri McGrath of Pacific.

1973. Also serving on the boards of directors for the American United Life Insurance Company, Indiana Bell Telephone, and the Indiana Power and Light Company, McKinney also is a member of the executive committee of the Association of Bank Holding Companies.

His diverse civic activities are reflected in his appointments to the boards of directors of the Newman Foundation; the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce; the Indianapolis Convention and Visitors Association; the Indianapolis Museum of Art; the state Chamber of Commerce; the Corporate Community Council; the State Symphony Society, Inc., and the International Institute of Sports, Science and Medicine.

McKinney also serves on the board of trustees of the International Swimming Hall of Fame, the advisory council of the College of Business Administration at the University of Notre Dame; the international advisory board of Up With People and the board of governors of the United Way.

Claude Moorman

An all-America selection at offensive end for Duke in 1960, Moorman played in the Hula Bowl, All-America Bowl and the Cotton Bowl. At the time the school's record holder in pass receiving, he finished second nationally in catches in 1960. Moorman also lettered in track as a Blue Devil.

He served as class vice-president as a freshman, sophomore and junior and was elected senior-class president. Active in the Kappa Alpha, Omicron Delta Kappa and Beta Omega Sigma fraternities, Moorman also participated in the Trinity and Shoe and Slipper Clubs and was named to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

After his discharge as a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Army in 1982, Moorman went on to become the chief of anesthesiology at Port St. Lucie, Florida, Hospital. He is a founder and treasurer of the Coast Anesthesia Association.

A member of the American Association of Volunteer Physicians from 1971 to 1974, Moorman was a volunteer physician in Vietnam during 1970 and 1971. A member of local, state and national medical associations and medical director at the regional level for the American Red Cross, Moorman also serves as chairman of the graduation committee for the law school at the College of William and Mary.

Jack Nicklaus

"The Golden Bear" has become one of the most popular and successful golfers in the history of the game. He lettered in the sport twice at Ohio State and won U.S. amateur titles in 1959 and 1961. Also in 1961, he won the NCAA title and captured the Big Ten Conference championship by 14 strokes.

Since turning professional in November 1961, Nicklaus has won 17 major tournaments, including the British Open (three times), the U.S. Open (four times), the PGA championship (five times) and the Masters (five times). Nicklaus' talents as a designer and construction consultant are reflected in 37 golf courses now open and 22 more under contract around the world.

He is the president of Golden Bear, Inc., a diversified company active in several fields.

His professional and civic contributions appear countless. Nicklaus has received honorary doctoral degrees from Ohio State and from the University of St. Andrews in Scotland. He has helped raise more than $1 million for Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio, and he was instrumental in the construction of a three-court basketball gymnasium/arena in Florida.

He established both the L. Charles Nicklaus Golf Scholarship Fund and the Robert K. Barton Scholarship Fund (College of Law) at Ohio State. He annually hosts the Memorial Tournament in Columbus, from which all proceeds are donated to charity.

Among the charitable organizations for which Nicklaus helps raise money are the American Cancer Society, the March of Dimes, the Leukemia Society of America, the Multiple Sclerosis Society, the National Association for Disabled Athletes, No Greater Love (a program designed for children of servicemen either killed or missing in action and for hospitalized veterans and older Americans), the Florida Special Olympics, the Boy Scouts of America, the U.S. Olympic ski team and the National Easter Seals Sports Council.

He has made contributions of both time and money to support organizations like the American Heart Association, the Big Brothers and Big Sisters, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and the Childhood League of Columbus.

Also active in conservation and environmental affairs, Nicklaus serves on the board of advisors of the Environmental Task Force, the national committee of Americans for Clean Air and Water, the chairman's club of the Wildlife Conservation Fund of America, and he is a corporate sponsor of the Nature Conservancy.

Kenneth Shaw

Shaw became president of the University of Wisconsin System in September 1985. Prior to his appointment, he had served as chancellor of the Southern Illinois University System.

As an underclassman at Illinois State, he led the basketball team in scoring as a junior with a 15 points-per-game average and finished his career with 1,396 points and a 14.2 average, putting him eighth on the all-time list.

He also served as president of the University Club and was elected to the Phi Gamma Mu honorary. He participated in the lettermen's club, the freshman advisory board and the homecoming committee.

Shaw continued his education by earning a master's degree at Illinois and a doctorate at Purdue. He served as assistant to the president at Illinois State from 1966 to 1969 before becoming vice-president and dean at Towson State University. He then served as president of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville from 1977 to 1979 before taking over as chancellor of the SIU system.

An author of numerous publications, Shaw has served on committees for both the American Council on Education and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. Active in the Illinois Education Consortium and a participant in that state's Governor's Task Force on the Quality of Math and Science Education, he also serves on the boards of the Council on Interinstitutional Cooperation and the Higher Education Coordinating Council.

Fran Tarkenton

Known to many football fans simply as "The Scrambler," Tarkenton was an academic and football all-America selection at Georgia in 1960. Three times selected as all-Southeastern Conference, Tarkenton led the conference in passing and total offense in 1960. His completion percentage of 60.8 in 1959 set an SEC record. A team captain as a senior, Tarkenton won the Governor's Cup as the outstanding back in the 1960 Hula Bowl.

Following graduation, Tarkenton went on to a record-breaking career spanning 18 National Football League seasons with the Minnesota Vikings and the New York Giants. The holder of several NFL records and all but two of the Vikings' team records, he made three appearances in the Super Bowl.

Tarkenton entered the business world through work with Coca-Cola and BBD&O Advertising while still an NFL quarterback. In 1972, he founded a management consulting firm that has grown into a worldwide concern, and he also owns a multi-million-dollar computer software company.

Recently becoming a partner and chief executive officer of a marketing/advertising firm, his Tarkenton's Group seminars and workshops are utilized by many corporations. His book, "Playing to Win - Strategies for Business Success," has been made into a movie by NFL Films.

Also active in a successful broadcasting career, Tarkenton was a member of ABC's Monday Night Football broadcast team and was one of only three permanent hosts for that network's "That's Incredible" program.

Currently serving as chair of the University of Georgia Bicentennial Capital Funds Campaign, Tarkenton also is chair of the Eggleston Major Gifts Fund at the Henrietta Eggleston Children's Hospital in Atlanta. He also has chaired capital gifts campaigns for that hospital and for the Children's Fund of the University of Minnesota Hospital.

Maxwell Award goes to Iowa's Long

Iowa quarterback Chuck Long, who narrowly missed winning the Heisman Trophy after leading the fourth-ranked Hawkeyes to a Rose Bowl berth, was named December 19 as winner of the Maxwell Award as player of the year for 1985.

The 6-foot-4, 213-pound senior is the second straight quarterback to win the award from the Maxwell Football Club of Philadelphia, beating out Auburn tailback and Heisman winner Bo Jackson, Miami (Florida) quarterback Vinnie Testaverde, Navy running back Napoleon McCallum and Temple's Paul Palmer.

Last year, Doug Flutie of Boston College won the award.

Long is the Big Ten Conference all-time leader in career passing yards with 10,142, the only Big Ten player ever to throw for more than 10,000 yards. This year, he was the nation's third-ranked passer, completing 231 of 351 passes for 2,978 yards and 26 touchdowns—all school records—to guide the Hawkeyes, 10-1, to their first outright conference title in 27 years.

State gives Oregon approval on bonds for stadium dome

A proposal to put a dome on the University of Oregon's Autzen Stadium has been declared eligible for $20 million in state industrial revenue bonds by the state's economic development commission. The project now needs the approval of the state board of higher education and the university to become the first domed stadium in Oregon. The dome is planned as a method of stabilizing football attendance, providing new athletics department offices and eventually a new home for Oregon basketball. Concerts and trade shows also will be scheduled in the stadium. . . . Members of the St. Louis Blues professional ice hockey team will take courses at the University of Missouri, St. Louis, and encourage students to continue their educations. At least 10 members of the team will enroll in a two-credit freshman-level course in January, and they will visit area schools to advise students not to base their futures on chances of playing professional sports.

The Texas A&M University football team will not give pre-Cotton Bowl interviews to a Dallas newspaper and a Dallas television station because of investigations into alleged improprieties in athletics operations at the school. The Dallas Times Herald and WFAA-TV will be barred from individual interviews with players. . . . Officials at Southeastern Louisiana University have announced a total commitment of $141,000 to offset sports expenses in an attempt to retain the school's football program. A decision on dropping football has been delayed to January 15. President J. Larry Crain had announced November 6 that the program would be dropped because of money being lost on the sport. He said that he might change his mind if someone could come up with $2 million or an annual pledge of $400,000 for the next five years.

The University of Evansville will change its affiliation from Division II to Division III in football. The transition will begin immediately, with the school expected to compete in Division III by 1989, according to an Associated Press report. School officials said the decision to change divisions was made because of a new five-year institutional plan that calls for achieving higher levels of academic excellence throughout the school by 1991. . . . An Arizona county superior court judge has denied the University of Arizona's motion to dismiss a $1 million lawsuit filed by former basketball coach Ben Lindsey over his 1983 release. The ruling will allow Lindsey to proceed with his suit, which claims wrongful termination and fraud, the Associated Press reported. The Arizona Board of Regents rejected a claim by Lindsey for $1.3 million in June 1983, and he then filed a $3.5 million suit in April 1984. The current suit seeks $1 million plus unspecified damages.

Villanova University, NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship winner, has been presented with the "Team of the Year" award by ESPN. ESPN is establishing the award designed to honor a team rather than an individual. Runner-up to Villanova was the Kansas City Royals baseball team, 1985 World Series champion.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than January 16.

Research Committee: An amendment to increase the size of the Research Committee by two is included in the consent package for consideration at the 1986 NCAA Convention in January. If adopted, the increase will be effective immediately; accordingly, because a meeting of the committee has been scheduled for February, nominations for these two positions are solicited at this time instead of following adoption of the legislation.

Positions: Two individuals experienced in academic tests and measurements.

Colorado budget showing a deficit

Despite taking measures in June to offset a budget deficit, the University of Colorado athletics department has found itself in the hole by about $450,000 midway through the fiscal year, the Associated Press reported.

Athletics director Bill Marolt said the losses were attributable to poor season-ticket sales and other football income.

Officials are projecting a final year-end deficit of $285,000, which they hope to make up in the coming months, Marolt said.

Documents given to the board of regents indicated that the department expected to generate $3 million by October 31 but brought in less than $2.6 million.

No stats, notes

Basketball notes and statistics will not appear in the December 24 and 31 issues of The NCAA News because of holiday vacation periods at member institutions.

Notes and statistics for all NCAA basketball divisions will be resumed in the January 8 issue.

Court orders Dartmouth to reinstate Yukica to football post

A judge ruled December 20 that Joe Yukica should be reinstated as head football coach of Dartmouth College until his contract expires in June 1987.

Grafton County Superior Court Judge Walter Murphy ruled in Haverhill that Dartmouth athletics director Edward Leland was not justified when he fired Yukica as coach November 29, Yukica's lawyer said. Yukica had sued Leland to prevent Dartmouth from hiring another coach.

Murphy's decision bars Dartmouth from "interfering with Joe Yukica's duties" and says the Ivy League school cannot replace him during the term of the contract, lawyer David Nixon said.

"Judge Murphy very carefully and wisely concluded that while there appeared to be nationwide sentiment that its ultimate legal decision may have significant impact on college coaches elsewhere, it should be borne in mind the (decision) by this court is between Dartmouth College and Joe Yukica," Nixon said of the decision's significance as a precedent.

In Kansas City, Missouri, NCAA legal counsel George H. Gangwere said that although he had not read the judge's decision in the case, he did not see any far-reaching ramifications resulting from the decision as far as member institutions are concerned.

"A contract is a contract," Gangwere said. "You either honor it or you don't. It is a matter of what the contract says and whether a party is committed to keeping a contract for a certain period of time."

In the Ivy League, Yukica's record was 33-21-2, but he was 0-20-1 out of the conference. Previously, he coached at Boston College.

According to Dartmouth lawyer Thomas Rath, the debate still is not over.

Rath said Murphy's decision said if the Dartmouth College Athletics Council votes to fire Yukica, Dartmouth again could go to court to try to dismiss Yukica.

"He (Murphy) clearly did not say you can't do what you desire," said Rath. "The court has basically delineated a procedural step (that) we will follow in a very timely fashion."

"I don't think we need a unanimous decision (from the council). I think it would take just a simple majority," said Rath. He did not know when the council meets next.

But the council's vote—whichever way it went—would not matter, said Nixon, since Yukica's contract specifies he must be notified 12 months in advance of termination.

Yukica said he hopes that "two things come out this in terms of athletics coaches"—that "coaches are not second-class citizens" and that athletics directors under pressure to fire coaches can use the court decision to "stick with the coach." Whether the pressure is "from alumni or anywhere else," Yukica said, "I hope they now can say, 'We have a contract; we hired the guy; we have faith in him.'"

Jones' new contract with Cowboys contains clause on salary forfeiture

When Oklahoma State University football coach Pat Jones talked with University of Pittsburgh officials about taking a similar job there, Myron Roderick discussed how future contracts with football coaches would change.

Roderick, athletics director at Oklahoma State, said that the next football contract signed by a coach would somehow obligate that coach to the school. In other words, a coach who leaves to take another job while still under contract would face a penalty.

Jones did not leave, and Roderick kept his word.

Jones' new contract, which will go to the school's board of regents January 10, requires that he the university two years of salary if he leaves for another job before his contract expires, the Associated Press reported.

But the university is obligated as well. If Jones gets fired, he must be offered the option to be reassigned somewhere in the university for four years.

"It's not happening in too many places, but it's not a precedent either," Roderick said of the deal.

"If a coach or party wants to benefit from the university, then a school should benefit if he leaves early," he said. "In the case of a football coach, it's not a matter of just losing a coach. It really sets you back."

Roderick said that if Jones had left, it most likely would have meant several assistants would have left also. Recruiting brochures, highlight films and several other behind-the-scenes items would have needed to be changed.

"There are endless investments we have made," Roderick said, "and you key these to the head football coach and his staff."

The agreement between Jones and Roderick was worked out before Pitt became interested in the second-year head coach. Jones, 18-5 at Oklahoma State, said he no problems with the deal.

"I think it is a good idea, particularly where any type of long-term or rollover arrangement is made," Jones said. "What's fair for one is fair for another."

"Contracts are a two way street; they've got to be," he said. "I certainly can understand the administration's side of it."

Roderick, who said the length of Jones' contract has not been determined (it will be six or eight years), noted it was important to get the provisions installed early.

"Those things need to be spelled out when everybody has smiles on their faces," he said.

"common" bylaws, all three divisions must approve any change.

Personnel

All four proposals in the "Personnel" grouping will be acted upon in the various Division I business sessions Monday, January 13. Two deal with the Division I-AA football coaching limitations, and one proposes limitations of five graduate assistant coaches in football and two in basketball in Division I.

The other proposes a travel-squad limitation of 70 in Division I-A football. Such a limit would be the first time in 10 years that the Association has legislated maximum squad sizes.

Summary

Following is a summary of the governance and personnel proposals in the Official Notice of the 80th annual Convention:

Governance

No. 80: Establish Division I-AAA as an "official" subdivision of Division I; permit both Division I-AAA and Division I-AA to vote separately in the divided bylaws except for certain specified provisions, and establish an annual but optional Division I-AAA summer legislative meeting.

No. 81: Require the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees and the Nominating Committee to nominate at least two candidates for each vacant position on NCAA sports committees and the NCAA Council and for NCAA offices, with all such nominations to be circulated to the membership not later than November 22 each year.

No. 82: Permit institutions classified in Division I in the sport of ice hockey to vote on legislative issues affecting Division I ice hockey.

No. 83: Specify that the NCAA Council will not review legislative proposals in its April, August or October meeting that are not sponsored by at least six active member institutions.

No. 84: Base membership on the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees on the NCAA Council geographical representation regions, rather than the NCAA districts.

No. 85: Eliminate representatives of high school or junior college interests as members of NCAA sports committees (liaison arrangements with appropriate high school and junior college organizations are permitted).

No. 86: Increase the membership of the Division I-AA Football Committee from four to six.

Personnel

No. 87: Reduce from eight to seven the permissible number of full-time assistant coaches in Division I-AA football, eliminating part-time coaches except for an institution that precludes freshmen from competing on the varsity and sponsors a separate freshman team instead (permitting three part-time coaches for such an institution). Division I-AA only (Monday, January 13).

No. 88: Permit a Division I-AA institution also to utilize two additional part-time coaches in football if it sponsors a junior varsity intercollegiate team in that sport in addition to varsity and freshman teams. Division I-AA only (Monday, January 13).

No. 89: Limit the number of graduate assistant coaches to five in football and two in basketball in Division I. Division I only (Monday, January 13).

No. 90: Establish a limit of 70 on the number of Division I-A football players who can travel to an away-from-home game. Division I-A only. (Monday, January 13).

Matadors given reprimand for tryout violation

As a result of a violation of the NCAA's tryout regulation involving the university's head football coach, California State University, Northridge, has been publicly reprimanded by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Frank J. Remington, infractions committee chair, said that "the head football coach acknowledged sole responsibility for the violation, and the committee determined that a penalty that affects football recruiting efforts this year would be appropriate."

The penalty precludes the university's head football coach from engaging in any off-campus recruiting until January 1, 1986 (a delay of approximately one month in the normal off-campus recruiting period in football). The penalty does not affect the university's eligibility for television or postseason competition.

The Committee on Infractions determined that in December 1984, unbeknown to the university, the athletics administration and the assistant coaches, the head football coach conducted a tryout on the university's campus involving approximately nine prospective student-athletes. NCAA recruiting legislation does not permit such tryouts.

Connecticut's Fuchs and Ryan top field hockey all-America

Tracey Fuchs and Janet Ryan of 1985 Division I champion Connecticut head the list of all-America selections announced by the Collegiate Field Hockey Coaches Association.

Thirty-two players representing 16 institutions were named to the squad, which is sponsored by Penn/Monto. In addition to Fuchs and Ryan, Connecticut's Marjory Abbott and Andrea Giunta were named honorable mention. Abbott scored all three of the Huskies' goals in the 3-2 championship-game victory over Old Dominion.

Perennial play-off contender Iowa also placed four players on the list, including Debra Brickey and Marcia Pankratz on the first team and Mary Koboldt and Karen Napolitano on the honorable mention list.

Play-off structure supported

The NCAA Men's Water Polo Committee, meeting December 17-20 in Berkeley, California, gave overwhelming support to the 1985 championship structure by recommending a continuation of the Thanksgiving weekend three-day format.

First used in 1985, the format and the efforts of host institution California State University, Long Beach, are believed to have been the major factors leading to the economic success of this year's championship.

In addition, the committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the site of the last eight championships, Belmont Plaza Pool in Long Beach, California, once again serve in that capacity. Long Beach State will host the championship, tentatively scheduled for November 28-30, 1986, and November 27-29, 1987. The committee is considering scheduling the 1987 championship one week earlier in the season but will survey coaches to determine any scheduling conflicts.

The selection criteria for the tournament also were reviewed but the strength-of-schedule basis, which encompasses such things as head-to-head competition and results of season-ending tournaments, will remain unchanged for 1986.

Sponsorship, which has been a topic of concern for collegiate water polo advocates for several years, was discussed with more optimism since at least 15 institutions are considering changing their club programs to varsity status.

In major rules changes, the committee voted to establish a warning for stalling, to be given by the referee if a team is not attempting to score. In addition, deliberate removal of a hat to gain an advantage now will be assessed with a technical foul.

Also, it will be strongly recommended to officials to strictly enforce the player/coach conduct rule, especially as it applies to bench decorum.
