Modification of initial-eligibility rule approved

By Timothy J. Lilley

The NCAA News Managing Editor

Division I delegates to the 80th NCAA Convention adopted a modification of Bylaw 5-1-(j) to permit indexing of grade-point averages and standardized test scores for initial eligibility of student-athletes over the next two years.

Proposal No. 16, which permits flexibility in determining the "qualifier" as set forth in Bylaw 5-1-(j), passed by a roll-call vote of 207-94, with four abstentions. (Editor's note: The results of roll-call votes taken during the 1986 Convention will be printed in full in the January 22 issue of The NCAA News.)

Voting took place during the first Division I business session, which was authorized as part of the division-autonomy legislation adopted at the 1985 Convention.

Delegates representing all NCAA membership divisions authorized drug testing at Association championships and postseason football contests beginning in 1986-87 with passage of Proposal No. 30. This legislation sets forth substances in seven categories for which tests will be conducted, as well as outlining general procedures for testing and the administration of actions resulting from positive tests.

Immediately following the vote on Proposal No. 30, delegates unanimously passed a resolution (published as Proposal No. 31) to request the President's Commission on Organized Crime to include in its final report to President Reagan recommendations on the implementation of measures that would retard gambling on amateur sports in general and intercollegiate contests, in particular.

"I think in the final analysis you must salute the leadership of the NCAA Presidents Commission," said Association executive director Walter Byers. "The Commission has been responsible for focusing on what I would term the burning issues of intercollegiate athletics and providing not only the attention and the leadership, but indeed the inspiration that has moved people toward dealing with these things that have been gnawing away at the character of intercollegiate athletics."

Proposal Nos. 1 through 12 were passed in consent-package form. Included in these measures was a modification of the note appearing at the end of Bylaw 5-1-(j), indicating that successful completion of each of 11 core courses will be required for a student-athlete to be considered a qualifier for initial eligibility.

"What that means is you can't hit highs and lows and come out of the core curriculum with an average of 2.000," Byers explained. "You have to have (the minimum grade-point re-

Highlights of 80th annual NCAA Convention

In addition to the modifications adopted for Bylaw 5-1-(j) (see story above), among the major legislative actions taken by the annual NCAA Convention were these:

Drug testing

Approved drug testing at NCAA championships and postseason football games, beginning in 1986-87, and approved a proposal to permit institutions to pay drug-rehabilitation expenses for student-athletes.

Financial aid

Referred to the Council and NCAA Presidents Commission for further study a proposal to raise to $1,400 the amount of Pell Grant money a grant-in-aid student-athlete can receive. The student now can get $900 under the Federal assistance program for qualified students.

Gambling

Unanimously approved a resolution to request the President's Commission on Organized Crime to include in its final report to the President recommendations for measures to retard gambling on intercollegiate athletics contests.

Infractions

Approved a measure to acknowledge a student-athlete's responsibilities in infractions cases and to outline procedures for restoration of eligibility only when warranted.

Championships

Approved a proposal to continue NCAA sponsorship of the Divisions I and III indoor track championships for men and women.

Sponsorship

Approved a proposal to reduce from eight to seven the number of sports an institution must sponsor for both men and women to qualify for membership in Division I-A, starting next year.

Boosters

A proposal to ban on-campus recruiting by booster-club members was withdrawn. The measure was sponsored by the Southwest Athletic Conference.

Eligibility

A proposal to increase the eligibility of student-athletes to five years was referred to the Council and Presidents Commission for further study. The proposal was sponsored by the Big Sky Conference.

Nebraska's Massengale named to Commission

Martin A. Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, has been selected by the Big Eight Conference as its representative to the Presidents Commission, replacing Duane Acker, president of Kansas State University, who has resigned his position at the institution.

Massengale will be a Division I-A, Region 3 member on the 44-member Commission.

Massengale has been an administrator at Nebraska since 1976, when he was named vice-chancellor for agriculture and natural resources. In 1981, he became chancellor.

Previously, he was an administrator at the University of Arizona. He served as head of the department of agronomy from 1966 to 1971 and then was named head of the department of agronomy and plant genetics, a post he held from 1971 to 1974. He then was named associate dean of the college of agriculture and associate director of the Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station.

He joined the Arizona faculty as an assistant agronomist and assistant professor in 1958.

Massengale began a distinguished career in higher education in 1951 as a teaching assistant at Western Kentucky University, his alma mater. He is a native of Monticello, Kentucky.

He earned a master's degree and doctorate at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, where he served as a research assistant from 1952 to

Martin A. Massengale

Massengale served in the U.S. Army as a technical adviser to a classified project from 1956 to 1958 before joining the Arizona faculty.

His educational and professional honors are numerous, and he has served as an adviser on many international projects at the requests of foreign governments, including the Soviet Union. He is listed in "Who's Who in the World."

In 1985, he was named a member of the board of directors of the College Football Association.

Association seeks Federal help on gambling

Delegates to the NCAA Convention in New Orleans considering the resolution against gambling could have opened the newspaper and learned that North Carolina's basketball team was an 8½-point favorite over Maryland.

In the resolution passed January 14 without dissent, the NCAA "urged the President's Commission on Organized Crime to recommend to President Reagan the strengthening of Federal legislation dealing with gambling on intercollegiate athletics."

"I think we've taken a major step toward attacking gambling," Walter Byers, NCAA executive director, said as the two-day Convention adjourned—in a city whose hottest topics of conversation are the Super Bowl and the prospect of casino gambling.

"If people want to bet on horses or the professionals, that's fine," Bill Byrne, athletics director at the University of Oregon, said. "I'd like to see them stay away from the high schools and colleges."

"I think it's essential to try to take away the kind of atmosphere that would lead to betting that might have an outcome on our contests," Byrne told the Associated Press.

Virtually all gambling on college sports is limited to football and basketball. On the professional level, baseball also draws heavy action.

Asked whether it might be more appropriate to ask newspapers and television sportscasters to refrain from carrying odds and betting lines as a way of decreasing the interest on gambling, Byrne replied: "We've already gone to some newspapers, and they haven't been very cooperative."

Gordon F. McCullough, athletics director at the University of Hartford, said: "Any way you go after gambling is probably a good idea—but there's no way you're ever going to tell a newspaper what to do, so that's the last thing I would do."

He acknowledged that, human nature being what it is, gambling probably couldn't be eliminated.

Tom Lindley, the managing sports editor at the New Orleans Times-Picayune and States-Item, said in a statement that he saw nothing wrong with the publication of gambling information as a public service.

"We have long carried odds, a morning line, on college and professional sports as well as on thoroughbred horse racing," Lindley's statement said. "We look upon it as a legitimate service to our readers who want to know which team is favored in any game. For example, we believe that our readers want to know how much of a favorite the Chicago Bears will be over the New England Patriots in Super Bowl XX."

"We don't see such handicapping information as sinister. There are thousands of readers interested in the 'spread' without doing business with underworld gamblers," Lindley's statement said.

Faust foresees Zips zapping big-time opponents

By Chuck Melvin

Gerry Faust is looking for a few good, young men—20 of them in all—who can help carry the University of Akron's football program into the big time over the next four years.

"We hope we can find some people out there who are Division I football players who want to play early and want to play a lot," Faust said in an interview with the Associated Press as he prepared the start of a whirlwind recruiting session.

The 50-year-old Faust, who built his reputation as founder and coach of Cincinnati Moeller High School's highly successful program, took over at Akron last month after spending five seasons as head football coach at Notre Dame.

His record with the fighting Irish, 30-26-1, was far from good enough to satisfy Notre Dame fans, and Faust admits he felt a great deal of pressure in the job.

"We had some adversity, but I think they were years of growth," Faust said. "There were some tough times, but I think everybody, no matter what job they have, has tough times. The last five years have really been good years for us, because it really brought our family together."

Faust again found controversy waiting for him when he arrived at Akron, a Division I-AA school planning to move to the NCAA's big-school Division I-A for the 1987 season.

Criticism arose because he had replaced Jim Dennison, who had an 8-3 season and who somewhat reluctantly accepted a job as Akron's associate athletics director to make room for Faust.

"The important thing is that Jim and I have a real good understanding," Faust said. "There's a lot more to it than has been said publicly, and I'm just not going to say anything. I'm in the middle and it doesn't do any good to perpetuate things like that."

Faust has 20 grants-in-aid to give out this year, but he knows the late recruiting start has probably cost him some players who might have otherwise considered Akron.

"Some of the kids we're talking to already have five visits (with other schools)," he said.

The university hired Faust to enhance the chances of moving up in class and to help fill the 35,000-seat Rubber Bowl, which has often been half-empty despite Dennison's recent successes.

Faust thinks both goals are within reach, and he cautiously dreams of building Akron into a national power.

"I don't think we can look that far ahead. But we'd sure like to be in that situation," he said. "Eventually, down the line, I would like to play a good schedule, teams like Pitt, Penn State, a couple of those schools. But we're not ready for that yet. We're three or four years from that."

This season, the Zips will play in the Division I-AA Ohio Valley Conference and will have just two games against Division I-A schools: Kent State and Eastern Michigan.

Athletics director Dave Adams is working on adding four or five more Division I-A schools to the schedule for 1987 so Akron will meet the NCAA's requirements for a major football school.

Faust concedes that the move from Notre Dame to Akron was perceived by outsiders as a large step backward for his career, but he insists such observations don't bother him.

"I don't really care about that," he said. "I'm not in it to be judged on whether I'm in a great place or whatever they think. I'm in it because I like to work with young people.

"There are about 20 top jobs in the country that are about all equal, and Notre Dame is in those top 20. The other jobs, I guess, if you ranked them, are below that; but I think if a guy's in coaching, he's in it because he likes to work with young people. And I think the big thing for a coach is whether he has a chance to win or not."

The Akron job is Faust's first in a non-Catholic setting, and Faust is openly devoted to his religion. But he says he does not think his ideals will seem out of place at his new school.

"You don't preach. You try to set an example," he said. "I don't think you can force any philosophy or any principles on anybody, no matter if you're in a private or a public place, because it just doesn't work with people this age."

The "leading-by-example" approach probably was more effective at Moeller than it has been in college, Faust said.

"I think you can probably reach them a little better on the high school level, because your example can be impressive and can penetrate, whereas at the college level most of them have had their philosophies pretty well developed," he said. "But influence like that is good on any level, even the pro level. If you're positive and you try to maintain ethics, you can be an example in anything you do in life."

"You are interfering with their economic well-being by insisting they pass tests. What kind of an old-fashioned notion is it that a football hero be able to read and write? Why does he have to learn 26 letters when all he will need are X's and O's?"

"I got a better idea. If athletes can get in school without qualifications, why can't students get on the football team? ## Letter to the Editor

Current standards not a joke

To the Editor:

I strongly disagree with Walter Bowman's assertion (The NCAA News, December 25, 1985) that student-athlete requirements of 24 hours a year with a 2.000 grade-point average "are at best a joke."

As a former student-athlete, I can testify that these standards are realistic. I graduated in the top 10 percent of my high school class and scored 1,100 on my college boards, yet I barely made it to my B.A. with a 2.500 GPA.

True reform will occur only when people realize that the malaise is not so much in athletics but in the academic system. The simple fact that students are required to take over half their hours in classes totally outside their areas of interest should indicate that most colleges and universities have as their priority the almighty dollar.

"Cable TV people keep coming to see me about putting the Huskies on cable TV throughout Washington. Why would I do that and jeopardize the best network radio contract in college football? Or jeopardize the sale of 52,000 season tickets, for that matter?"

"The dollars everyone keeps talking about in cable TV just aren't that significant yet."

CEOs, ADs say yes

Cheating widespread?

Most of the college presidents, coaches and athletics directors responding to a newspaper's informal poll said cheating on NCAA rules is widespread and coaches caught in major violations should be fired.

The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, which published the results of its poll in its combined January 12 editions, said 61 percent of those responding to the poll believe at least half of the nation's major colleges and universities break NCAA rules while recruiting players.

And 84 percent said a head coach whose program is found guilty of a major violation of NCAA rules should be dismissed.

The newspapers sent 598 questionnaires to the presidents, athletics directors and head football coaches of Division I-A schools, and the head basketball coaches of Division I schools.

About 40 percent, or 240 of the recipients, responded and not all of the questionnaires were filled out completely. The study, which included interviews, was conducted over the past few months.

"Most every school probably violates some recruiting rules," said University of Georgia football coach and athletics director Vincent J. Dooley. "I would say 80 percent do so inadvertently."

Sonny Smith, basketball coach at Auburn University, said he believes all schools violate NCAA recruiting rules "because no one can follow the book. It is too complicated."

When asked to name the greatest problem facing college athletics today, 44 percent of those responding said academic rules for athletes, 41 percent said recruiting violations, four percent said drugs and 11 percent gave other responses.

In his answer to that question, Georgia basketball coach Hugh Durham said, "Academics. Many athletes are now entering academic institutions who are not close to being qualified."

Listing the top problems as he sees them, University of Washington President William P. Gerberding said: "No. 1, financing these expensive programs; No. 2, maintaining some balance so that athletes are really students; No. 3, recruiting violations; No. 4, drugs."

John J. Crouthamel, athletics director at Syracuse University said: "Recruiting violations and academics—all else pales by comparison."

Academic advisers want roles more clearly defined

The people on the cutting edge of the NCAA's push for academic integrity in athletics could use a little more job security and more sharply defined job descriptions, but the student still is the prime consideration, the president of the National Association of Academic Advisers for Athletes told the Associated Press.

More than 140 advisers about double the number that attended last year's advisers' meeting—held their annual convention in conjunction with the NCAA Convention in New Orleans.

Brian Mand of Florida State University is president of the 11-year-old association.

One of the big improvements to come out of the NCAA in recent years is the requirement that a student must choose a major field after two years, then take courses leading to graduation in that field, Mand said. "There's no such thing, anymore, as an eligibility major," he said.

There are stories about academic advisers being used primarily to steer athletes into easy courses or to talk teachers into giving passing grades to undeserving players. But Mand said

See Academic, page 8

When asked if colleges should limit scholarships to athletes with grade-point averages of 2.000 or better, 93 percent of those officials responding said yes, while seven percent said no. A 2.000 average is equivalent to a C average.

But that margin narrowed sharply when the school officials were asked if they favored a specific minimum SAT or ACT score as a condition for an athletics scholarship. Fifty-eight percent said yes; 42 percent said no.

Explaining his opposition to such standardized tests, Brigham Young University football coach LaVell Edwards said: "No; culturally biased."

West Virginia University basketball coach Gale Catlett agreed. "Certain individuals do not test well, and the tests are not balanced equally for different social and economic levels."

CEOs can face frustrating task in seeking control over athletics

The major cause of problems in college athletics is lack of internal control and the frustration of attempts by university presidents to take charge, according to a new study by two university administrators.

Based on a survey of 138 NCAA Division I university presidents as well as case studies, the study revealed that in most cases, the control of the athletics program lies in the hands of the athletics director. Research showed that a president who tried to gain control over the athletics program may not receive support from the governance board.

Those colleges without athletics problems attributed much of their success to strong presidential control, according to the study.

More than 90 percent of the presidents surveyed said there are major problems in athletics programs across the nation. Twenty-two percent acknowledged serious problems at their own universities.

Money, pressure to win and over-zealous supporters, especially alumni, were cited as significant causes behind most problems, according to the study.

The study compared four athletics programs under NCAA sanctions with four that were not. Strong presidential control and clear lines of responsibility were characteristic of problem-free universities, according to the study, while those institutions under sanction showed divided control.

The study was prepared by J. Wade Gilley, senior vice-president of George Mason University and Anthony A. Hickey, dean of research and graduate studies at West Carolina University.

They conclude that NCAA Division I athletics "is in a troubled situation."

quirement) plus satisfactory work in each of the core courses. That is a significant clarification of the rule."

Although an amendment (No. 17) intended to modify existing guidelines for measuring satisfactory progress for student-athletes was defeated by Division I, Byers said he believes that a more refined satisfactory-progress measure is likely to be on the agenda of the 1987 Convention.

Also approved by delegates was a measure in the Presidents Commission grouping (No. 19) that immediately amends the Association's constitution and bylaws to acknowledge student-athletes' responsibilities in infractions cases and outlines procedures for restoration of eligibility only when warranted.

A resolution also was adopted calling for the NCAA Committee on Infractions to experiment during 1986 with possible modifications in the enforcement procedures in an attempt to increase the efficiency of case processing under the Association's new penalty structure.

An attempt to move NCAA regulations governing financial aid from the constitution to the bylaws was referred to the NCAA Council and Presidents Commission for further study. "It is my prediction that the financial aid detail will be moved to the bylaws and subject to divisional determination," Byers said. "I would predict it will happen at the next Convention, although my record on speculation is not all that awesome."

Drug testing became a part of post-season football contests and NCAA championships after only 12 minutes on the Convention floor.

"I believe the NCAA has taken a leadership role in dealing with a problem that is greater than most of us recognize," Byers told a post-Convention press conference.

Council reviews legislative items

The pre-Convention meetings of the NCAA Council and division steering committees January 10-12 in New Orleans were devoted largely to consideration of the legislation facing the 1986 NCAA Convention.

A summary of all actions taken by the Council, except for those reflected in actions of the Convention, will appear in the January 22 issue of The NCAA News. Interpretations approved by the Council will be included in the Interpretations and Legislative Assistance columns in future issues.

universities are facing up to (the drug problem) in a direct manner that sends a clear message to the high school people in the country as well as the college students that drugs are incompatible with wholesome sports competition and are incompatible with maintaining a healthy body and mind."

Near the end of the business session, delegates also approved Proposal No. 107, which will permit an institution to pay drug-rehabilitation expenses for student-athletes.

Four pieces of legislation that were withdrawn from consideration dealt with member institutions' responsibilities relative to litigation involving the NCAA.

In addressing the delegates, Albert M. Witte, faculty athletics representative at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and member of the NCAA Council, indicated that the withdrawal was a result of many questions that had been raised during discussions in New Orleans.

Witte said that the Council was appreciative of feedback concerning the proposed legislation and that further review by the Council would take place in an attempt to develop legislation that would reflect needs and concerns voiced by the memberships.

Twelve measures relating to recruiting practices were approved by the Convention, including items that dealt with contact with prospective student-athletes and further definition of printed materials that may be distributed by member institutions.

Nine of the 12 measures related to eligibility were approved by the Convention, but the proposal that NCAA President John R. Davis called "a real sleeper" in pre-Convention remarks (No. 68) was referred to the Council and Presidents Commission for further study. Proposal No. 68 would have added a fifth year of eligibility for intercollegiate competition.

In governance matters, the Convention eliminated automatic Council review of amendments that do not receive the required sponsorship of six member institutions. Also eliminated were representatives of high school and junior college interests on NCAA governing sports committees.

Personnel legislation included a measure, passed by Division I, that limits the number of graduate-assistant coaches to five in football and two in basketball beginning in 1987-88.

Another measure would have limited football traveling squads to 70 players, but it was withdrawn.

Seven of the 14 measures dealing with playing-season limitations were approved by the Convention. In all, 65 of the 110 proposals published in the Official Notice and Convention Program were approved (some in part, others with modification) by the delegates.

A complete summary of all legislative actions at the Convention appears on this page.

Attendance may set record

Tentative figures indicate a record turnout for the 1986 NCAA Convention in New Orleans.

The preliminary total of 1,863 includes 1,737 active, conference, affiliated and visiting delegates and 126 members of the media. The previous record of 1,742 was set at the 1984 Convention in Dallas.

Final attendance figures will be obtained after an audit of Convention information and will be announced in a future issue of The NCAA News.

Increased involvement of chief executive officers and other athletics administrators in Convention-related matters has contributed to the continuing growth in Convention attendance.

With a faculty athletics representatives forum, NCAA Council and Presidents Commission meetings and the Association's Professional Development Seminar now held in conjunction with the annual meeting, more athletics administrators and chief executive officers are attending the business sessions.

Another record was established at the 1986 honors luncheon, when 1,757 delegates, media and friends attended.

Summary of actions on legislation at the 80th Convention

Following is a listing of the legislative actions taken by the delegates attending the 80th NCAA Convention January 13-14 in New Orleans.

This report is designed to provide an immediate review of the Convention's decisions. It presents the specific action taken on each numbered proposal and on each amendment to an amendment during the Convention. The numbers of the proposals (1 through 110) are the same as those in the Convention Official Notice and the Convention Program, and the compilation of amendments to amendments (e.g., No. 19-1) distributed to delegates at the Convention.

All approved proposals, unless amended, are effective on the dates indicated in the Official Notice and Convention Program and will be included in the 1986-87 NCAA Manual, scheduled for distribution to the membership in March.

Amendments to amendments are listed with the proposals they were to amend. Except for those not considered by the Convention, each includes a statement of the basic intent for those who do not have a set of the amendments distributed at the Convention. Proposals finally approved (all or in part) are in bold type and are indicated further by an asterisk before the proposal number.

Only 29 Division I coaches in select group

20-victory season still a notable achievement

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

In this era of longer schedules and expanded tournament play, preseason and postseason, perhaps a 20-victory season does not mean as much as it once did.

After all, 69 teams in men's Division I basketball won at least 20 games in the 1985 season—almost one-fourth of the division membership. Nineteen of those won at least 25 games and four of those 19 won at least 30 [Georgetown, Oklahoma, St. John's (New York) and Memphis State]. And many of those 20-game winners reached 20 only because of a few victories over non-Division I opponents.

Having said all that, it still is true that 20 victories is a notable achievement; and coaches who have averaged 20 victories per season in Division I are a rather select group. In fact, only 29 current Division I head coaches with at least two seasons in Division I have averaged 20 victories a season while in the top division. Here is that list (including their entire career, that is, any seasons below Division I):

Name, college, season #	Average
1. Denny Crum, Louisville (14)	24.14
2. Nolan Richardson, Arkansas (5)	23.80
3. J. Tarkenton, Nevada-L.V. (17)*	23.71
4. Pat Foster, Lamar (5)	23.20
5. Rick Huckabay, Marshall (2)	23.00
6. Dean Smith, North Carolina (24)	22.96
7. John Thompson, Georgetown (13)	22.85
8. Jim Boheim, Syracuse (9)	22.67
9. Boyd Grant, Fresno State (8)	22.38
10. John Chaney, Temple (13)	22.31
11. Pat Kennedy, Iona (5)	22.00
12. L. Carnesecca, St. John's (N.Y.) (17)	21.82
13. Eddie Sutton, Kentucky (16)	21.38
14. Larry Brown, Kansas (4)*	21.25
15. Bob Knight, Indiana (20)	20.85
16. Lee Rose, South Florida (18)	20.78
17. Gale Catlett, West Virginia (13)	20.77
18. Gene Smithson, Wichita State (10)	20.70
19. Wimp Sanderson, Alabama (5)	20.60
20. Larry Farmer, Weber State (3)	20.33
21. Andy Russo, Washington (6)	20.33
22. Bob Donewald, Illinois State (7)	20.29
23. Lefty Driesell, Maryland (25)	20.20
24. Digger Phelps, Notre Dame (15)	20.20
25. Terry Holland, Virginia (16)	20.19
26. Billy Tubbs, Oklahoma (11)	20.09
27. Neil McCarthy, N. M. State (10)	20.00
28. Charles Moir, Virginia Tech (18)	20.00
29. Gene Keady, Purdue (7)	20.00

* Entering 1986 season. * 24.06 with six victories at Long Beach State in NCAA tournament, 1971-72-73, voided by Executive Committee. + 22.50 with five voided victories in 1980 NCAA tournament.

Smith really No. 1?

Dean Smith amazingly has averaged 25.53 victories per season his past 19 years at North Carolina—five years longer than Denny Crum's entire career—so from that angle, one could argue he actually ranks No. 1.

Smith's record is 485-118 for those past 19 years, an .804 winning percentage. Consider that his 1986 team (undefeated in 16 games entering a January 14 game at Maryland) could have been winless this season, and Smith still would have more than 20 victories per season for 20 seasons.

Only a handful of the 29 did not win at least 20 last year—among them Crum, who missed 20 for the first time in his career (19-18), Knight (19-14) and Rose (18-12).

Of course, coaches are ranked by winning percentage and by total victories in the NCAA basketball record book and press kit, using a minimum of five seasons in the top division (Smith was 551-165 for .770 entering this season, Crum 338-107 for .760, Tarkenton 403-93 for .813 and Richardson 119-37 for .763).

Victories-per-season simply looks at it from a little different angle and allows the inclusion of several coaches with fewer than five seasons in Division I.

Excluded from the list are Middle Tennessee's Bruce Stewart (27 for three years), 17-14 his only season in Division I; Virginia Commonwealth's Mike Pollio (23.4, all at Kentucky Wesleyan); Chicago State's Bob Hallberg (22.7, but 16-11 his only season in Division I); Alabama State's James Oliver (22.3 but 19.3 for three years in

Those who just missed include Houston's Guy Lewis (19.9 for 29 years), Alcorn State's Davey Whitney (19.8 for 21), St. Peter's Bob Dukiet ball. The parallels to my kids playing is striking." Hopefully, none of Bruno's on-court charges will need midnight feedings. (Paul Mettewie, Loyola, Ill., SID)

Paying the price

Sarah Gause of Delaware, East Coast Conference player of the year in 1985, spent the entire fall semester in the hospital and did not miss a single basketball practice. A nursing major, the hospital work was needed to earn her degree in nursing this

Ferry, the starting postman for the 1957 Billikens. (Tim Stephens, St. Louis SID)

All in the family

Georgia Tech basketball has two pipelines flowing from the Northeast. All Hallows High School in the Bronx, New York City, was the prep school for head coach Bobby Cremins, associate head coach George Felton and 7-foot sophomore Antoine Ford. And St. Johnsbury Academy in Vermont produced 6-4 junior guard Bruce Dalrymple, women's freshman forward Ionia Rodd and men's manager Mark Brown. (Frank Zang, Georgia Tech assistant SID)

Can you top these?

For the eighth time in the past nine semesters, the 20 players in the DePauw basketball program combined for a grade-point average over 3.000. The squad completed the first semester with a combined 3.200. (Joe Owens, DePauw SID)

How many sophomores in men's Division I basketball are 18½ years old? Derrick Chievous is 14 days younger than Missouri's youngest freshman, Robyn Davis (June 19, 1967). Chievous, leading scorer for the United States in last summer's World University Games, will not turn 19 until July 3. (Bob Brendel, Missouri assistant SID)

How many graduate students are there in men's Division I basketball? Bobby Jenkins became the first graduate student to play basketball at Northeast Louisiana when he graduated in December with a 2.910 grade-point average in corrections. (Bob Anderson, Northeast Louisiana SID)

Quotes of the week

After losing two one-point games in a matter of days, Juniata men's coach Dan Helm asked a legitimate question: "What is the purpose of life?" (Joseph Scialibba, Juniata student assistant SID)

Humboldt State men's head coach Tom Wood on how he prepares for Friday-Saturday conference games: "On Friday night after the game, we get down on our knees and say a little prayer for Saturday night." (Bryan Dangerfield, Humboldt State SID)

Murray State men's assistant coach Mark Bernsen amends the old saw about statistics this way: "Statistics are for losers... and for future opponents." (Craig Bohnert, Murray State SID)

Joanna Hamilton, 5-1 sparkplug guard for Maine's women's team, who returned after missing the 1985 season with injuries, was asked by coach Peter Gavett as she started working with weights how much she could bench press. "I dunno," was the laconic reply. "Well," said Gavett, "how much can you lift?" Joanna, who works in her spare time at a combination garage and convenience store off campus, replied: "All I know is that I can lift six cases of beer and two tires." Said Gavett: "That's good enough." (Len Harlow, Maine SID)

UC Irvine women's coach Dean Andrea can tell you about adversity. Two players left the squad before the season, leaving him with nine. Then injuries struck three more players, including standout center Cheri Graham. Andrea is more concerned about how his team will handle practice than in games, where morale is high: "Everybody has the will to win. It's the will to prepare to win that determines who the winners will be." (Doug Ward, UC Irvine SID)

After reading a notice on his office door that Bryan Wright would not make the trip to Millikin because of a computer science test that evening, Illinois College coach Bill Morris said: "I'm one of the few coaches I know of where professors cause more problems for the basketball coach than the coach does for the professors. My kids are always cutting games." (Rick Nolan, Illinois College SID)

Alabama-Birmingham's Sandra King (120 pounds soaking wet) on how she handles herself under the boards: "I've got sharp elbows—I've gotten myself into trouble with some pretty big girls that way. I claimed innocence—temporary insanity." (Chuck Bennett, Alabama-Birmingham women's SID)

Springfield's Ivan Olivares scored 24 points against Union on his 24th birthday, prompting coach Ed Bilik to remark: "It's too bad he wasn't 40 today." (Bob Marx, Springfield SID)

San Jose State's Ricky Berry, a 6-8 sophomore, on his dad, head coach Bill Berry: "He's got a real temper. I get worried about him sometimes—that he might get high blood pressure, but he has settled down the last few years. After we step out of the gym, it's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. It's like someone shot him up with animal instinct before the game, then shot him down with a tranquilizer after the game." (Lawrence Fan, San Jose State SID)

Arizona State playmaker Arthur Thomas, a 5-10 sophomore: "Last year, I was 5-9 and you called me Webster. But I grew an inch over the summer, so now you can call me Arthur." (Mark Brand, Arizona State assistant SID)

New Mexico State women's basketball coach Patrick Knapp, a Pennsylvania native, was trying to schedule a game with North Texas State. He called Judith Nelson, the head coach; during the conversation, Nelson said, "You're a Yankee, aren't you?" "Yeah, and we won the war," quipped Knapp.

The game never was scheduled. (Gary Schoene, New Mexico State SID office)

Basketball notes

(19.8 for six) and St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) Jim Boyle (19.8 for four). Shorter lists in II-III

The 20 victory lists are much shorter in Divisions II and III (and, in fairness, they generally play fewer games), with 17 more, using the two-season minimum:

Division II	Name, college, seasons #	Average
1.	Ralph Underhill, Wright State (7)	23.00
2.	Tom Chapman, Gannon (7)	22.86
3.	Dave Robbins, Virginia Union (7)	22.71
4.	Dave Bike, Sacred Heart (7)	22.57
5.	John Kochan, Millersville (2)	22.00
6.	Tom Galeazzi, L. I.-C. W. Post (4)	22.00

12.	T. Hancock, Tenn.-Martin (3)	20.00
13.	G. Scholz, Fla. Southern (3)	20.00

Division III	Name, college, seasons #	Average
1.	Stan VanGundy, Castleton St. (2)	24.50
2.	Ed Green, Roanoke (8)	24.25
3.	Larry Hunter, Wittenberg (9)	23.33
4.	Roland Wierwille, Berea (2)	21.50

Entering 1986 season.

Excluded in Division II was Bentley's Frank Sullivan, 25-6 in his first season last year, and in III, North Park's Bosko Djurickovic, 27-4 (and the division championship his first year), and Staten Island's Thomas Keenan, 20-9 his first year in 1985.

Those who just missed included North Dakota's Dave Gunther (19.8 for 18 seasons) in II and Wisconsin-Whitewater's Dave VanderMeulen (19.6 for seven).

'Something inside you'

Loyola (Illinois) associate men's coach Doug Bruno and wife Patty already were proud parents of four bouncing boys (and anyone who has seen them enter a room knows how much bouncing they do) when they added a fifth boy this fall (despite pleas from many sides for feminine respite). Bruno uses his fifth boy as a coaching tool: "When you have five kids, you can see which kids fight for the ball in the living room. You can tell which ones are naturally aggressive. It's something inside you that you really can't bring out. In practice now, I notice who is fighting for the

May. It meant working 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the hospital, then on to the field house for a tough two-hour workout at 4 p.m.

"After work, all of my friends were talking about taking a nap and I'd say I was going to basketball practice," she said. "But nursing is something I always knew I wanted to do. It was a great learning experience and I'm excited about it. After graduation, I'd like to work in shock trauma or the emergency unit. I like the excitement and the challenge and you have to react quickly. I think that comes from playing basketball." (Scott Selheimer, Delaware assistant SID)

Unbeatens dwindle

Only 10 NCAA men's basketball teams in the country in all divisions were unbeaten through games of January 13. Six are in Division I, four in Division III, with no perfects in Division II. They were Michigan (16 victories), North Carolina (16), Memphis State (15), Oklahoma, Duke (15), Syracuse (13), Potsdam (13), Clark (Massachusetts) (11), Wisconsin-Whitewater (10) and Hartwick (9).

Another coaching change

Another coaching change has been reported in men's Division I basketball (January 8 notes)—Nat Frazier, a 1958 Tuskegee graduate, is the new coach at Morgan State, making 56 changes for 1986, or 19.8 percent, third highest ever. This is his second turn at Morgan State, where he was 123-50 for six seasons ending with 1976. His college career record is 131-94 for eight years.

1957—a good year

St. Louis University made only its second road trip to North Carolina in all its basketball history when it played at Duke January 8. The first trip was in December 1957 at the Dixie Classic at North Carolina State. Coincidentally, two players in the St. Louis-Duke game were sons of St. Louis players who made that 1957 trip—Ted Mimitz, sophomore forward for the Billikens, the son of Jack Mimitz, captain of that team, and Danny Ferry, Duke center, the son of Bob

Conference acts to curb player fights

Players could lose eligibility or forfeit a game if any future brawls break out between the Middle Tennessee State and Tennessee Tech basketball teams, Ohio Valley Conference Commissioner James E. Delany says.

Two starters from Middle Tennessee and a reserve from Tennessee Tech were reprimanded and suspended by Delany after a bench-clearing melee near the end of the first half in a game January 6 in Cookeville.

In a written statement, Delany said he decided on the punishment after watching a videotape of the 79-77 overtime victory by Middle Tennessee and interviewing players, game officials and head coaches from both teams.

"The fights which occurred during the most recent Middle Tennessee-Tennessee Tech basketball game were quite serious," Delany said. "I do not believe that the suspensions and censures levied as a result of this inquiry will remedy the unfortunate and tense state of relations that exist between the coaches and players of these two basketball teams.

"In the event unsportsmanlike and flagrant conduct surfaces in future games between these two teams, game forfeiture or suspension or both is possible, as well as future ineligibility for those players engaging in such conduct," Delany said. "My hope for the future is that these two teams can play intelligent, intense and aggressive basketball against each other and still maintain a level of respect for their opponent."

Kentucky rejects bid by Horford

The University of Kentucky has told basketball standout Alfredo "Tito" Horford that he should enroll at another school.

Horford, a 7-foot-1 native of the Dominican Republic, was considered the top high school player in the nation last year but has been wrapped up in controversy since last summer, becoming a player without a team.

In a statement released January 14 by Kentucky's sports information office, basketball coach Eddie Sutton said: "I spoke with Pat Ellis, Tito's legal counsel, last night. He indicated to me that Tito wants to enroll at the University of Kentucky.

"That was the first we heard in anything in that regard. We are flattered that he would consider UK. However, my staff and I made the decision to call Mr. Ellis back and recommend that Tito enroll at another institution to further his educational and basketball career. We certainly wish him the best wherever he goes."

Horford, who played high school basketball in Houston, signed a National Letter-of-Intent to play at the University of Houston.

But the NCAA ruled he could not attend Houston, after it was learned an assistant coach there, Donnie Schverak, visited Horford during one of the NCAA's noncontact periods. The NCAA claimed the visit gave Houston an unfair recruiting edge.

Horford appealed the NCAA ruling on attending Houston, but it was rejected.

Tryouts scheduled

The Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America has announced that trials for the U.S.A. National team and the U.S. Olympic Festival team will be held in April. Trials for the national team will be held in Colorado Springs, Colorado, April 17 to 20, and the festival-team trials are scheduled April 25 to April 27. For information, contact Lynn Norenberg, ABAUSA, 1750 E. Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909.

Rev. Joyce urges more active participation by faculty reps

Almost 20 percent of the faculty athletics representatives who attended the second NCAA Faculty Athletics Representatives Forum were newcomers, according to William D. Bradford, M.D., Duke University, who chaired the meeting.

"It's essential that we bring them in," Bradford said, following the conclusion of the January 12 session. "They learn to deal with the issues; they learn what the issues are. They cannot be effective unless they know what questions to ask."

Attendees heard from a panel of university chief executive officers that included I. M. Heyman, chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley; James W. Cleary, president of California State University, Northridge, and Kenneth J. Weller, president of Central College (Iowa).

The meeting's keynote address was delivered by the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, executive vice-president at the University of Notre Dame. Both the panel and Rev. Joyce emphasized the need for a more active participation in athletics governance by the faculty representatives, a philosophy Bradford concurred with.

"We want to work within our own organization here and tie closely to the activities of the (NCAA) Council that relate to academics and to the activities of the Presidents Commission," Bradford explained. "And if we do those two things, we'll be an effective organization."

Forum participants also heard about the Association's approach to gambling as it relates to college athletics from NCAA president John R. Davis. Association secretary-treasurer Wilford S. Bailey outlined the philosophy of an initial-eligibility index for prospective student-athletes and also reported on efforts to simplify NCAA rules.

John H. Leavens, NCAA director of compliance, addressed the group on the satisfactory-progress rule and on the Association's new compliance program.

During a business meeting following these presentations, the group elected officers for 1986. Francis W.

Bonner, Furman University, was elected chair, and John A. Hogan, Colorado School of Mines, will serve as vice-chair. Douglas S. Hobbs of the University of California, Los Angeles, was elected secretary.

Academic

he doesn't know of any those cases first-hand.

"It depends on the institution, I guess," he said. "More and more, you're finding academic advisers who don't report to the athletics department at all. Some are faculty members; some report to the dean of student affairs; some are in academic affairs, and some are in the athletics department."

The trend, he said, is for academic advisers to be better educated — more doctorates in the field, now — and for them to be divorced from the athletics department.

"We have an unwritten code of ethics that says we do what's best for the student-athlete. Our role, somewhat, is to serve as the academics conscience of the athletics department," he said.

Eventually, Mand said, the NAAAA probably will forge some kind of written code of ethics for the profession, helping to define the job. He said he'd like to see the association have some input into future legislation regarding the scholarship of athletes and potential athletes.

For first time in three Conventions, all legislation acted upon

For the first time in three years, delegates attending the NCAA Convention were able to complete the entire slate of legislative proposals facing the business session.

More than 110 proposals, including amendments to amendments submitted by the 1 p.m., January 12 deadline were acted upon by a record number of delegates.

Following are excerpts of comments made by featured speakers at the 21st NCAA honors luncheon Monday, January 13, in New Orleans.

John R. Davis, president of the NCAA: "During the past year, some of our member institutions, staff, students and fans, have been involved in violations of institutional, conference and NCAA rules as well as accepted rules of ethical conduct.

"Along with problems associated with drugs and gambling, there are times when it appears indeed that athletics is a mirror of all of the problems of young people in society today.

"The NCAA believes, however, that rather than being a reflection of society, intercollegiate athletics must represent strong leadership. Through the capabilities of the NCAA, through our member institutions, and through examples set by our student athletes, we certainly will develop the leadership to achieve adherence to sound ethical standards, honest competition and good sportsmanship."

Tom Brokaw, NBC News anchor and luncheon master of ceremonies: "Education and athletics are primary forces in the organization of our universe...the active mind and the active body. I know how much my life and the lives of my wife and my children have been enriched by our commitment to intellectual and athletic stimulation.

"I also know that vigilance is required on the part of all of us to be sure that the fundamental values of society are not corrupted or compromised simply because one of these primary forces generates a greater emotional response than the other. The roar of the crowd must not be permitted to cloud our judgment, and that's an obligation of all of us, individually and collectively, not just of your organization or of your great institutions."

Edward G. Robinson, director of athletics and head football coach at Grambling State University and recipient of a special recognition award: "I feel that, in the future, with the great minds we have in this hall, that you're going to handle the drug problems, you're going to handle recruiting and you're going to handle the academic problems.

"I consider this honor in a representative capacity to be shared with the players, the coaches, the faculty, the staff and administrators at Grambling, and fans who love football all over the world."

Timothy John Green, Syracuse University, on behalf of the Today's Top Six honorees: "Despite all the obvious differences there are between the adventures of athletics and scholarship, there are also marked similarities.

"Both require perseverance, persistence, aggressiveness, energy and most of all, the will to improve.

"To our teachers, our coaches, our universities, we owe a great debt. Instruction, encouragement, criticism, winning and losing have forged us into what we are today.

"It is soon to be our turn to repay that debt by providing a positive example for others to follow. I love football, and I love scholarship. And I thank God I've been given the gifts I have to excel at both.

"For all of us here today, please know that we consider being named NCAA Top Six scholars an unequalled honor."

Jack W. Nicklaus, Ohio State University, on behalf of the Silver Anniversary honorees: "I know (their years in college) were some of the hardest and also some of the best years of our lives, and certainly ones that we'll cherish forever.

"We all had great collegiate experiences, and now, 25 years later, you do us a great honor with this NCAA Silver Anniversary award."

Vice-President George H. W. Bush, recipient of the Theodore Roosevelt Award: "Please NCAA, keep up your must learn and adhere to if freedom and democracy are to stay strong here. We are to set an example for the rest of the world.

"Teddy Roosevelt preached 'the doctrine of strenuous life,' And by that he meant the life of competition. The life of vigorously being a part of your time and place. Well, I think the doctrine of strenuous life is the doctrine of all of us in this room."

Even the Voice of America, a U.S. shortwave broadcasting service that is heard worldwide, covered the happenings of the 80th NCAA Convention.

NCAA president John R. Davis looked ahead at the close of the 80th Convention, outlining issues that will be considered by the Council and Presidents Commission in the months ahead.

"Specifically," said Davis, "the federated structure of the Association, including separate voting privileges. Secondly, financial aid principles and limitations and cost containment, and third, continued concerns regarding integrity including academic issues. Those actions will be extremely vital to the continued success of this Association.

"Secretary-treasurer Wilford S. Bailey's committee on deregulation and simplification should complete most of its important work this year. We should be in a position at the next Convention or early in 1987 to present to the membership a major work on revising the Manual.

"Of almost equal importance is Homer Rice's committee on Measuring Athletics Programs Success (MAPS), a program leading to identifying all that is good about athletics.

"Lastly, the NCAA program of corporate sponsorships has substantially improved our ability to support programs for youth. In this next year, we'll see not only the continuation and strengthening of the National Youth Sports Program but also the introduction of youth sports clinics and expanded drug education.

"This has been a real year of accomplishment for the organization, and I invite your interest during the next year in all of these."

They are all champions. Mary Lou because she earned five medals at the 1984 Olympic Games (six months after winning her Olympia Award).

... Mary K. Lewis and Bobby Joe Esposito because they are the best at their level of amateur sports.

You don't have to be an Olympic medalist to be nominated for the Olympia Award. You can be a judo champion like Mary K. or a high school soccer star like Bobby Joe. You can be a marathon runner, a rower, a wrestler, a fencer, a pole vaulter or a diver. You can play softball, volleyball, baseball or tennis.

You can be almost anything in sports, as long as the Olympia Award judges determine that you have made a contribution to your sport... that you recognize the importance of academic achievement... and that you possess good citizenship qualities.

We've sent the Olympia Award message to 3 million amateur athletes over the past three years. But we're not stopping there. If you know of an outstanding athlete, please contact us. Olympia Award winners from across the country—from Yakima, Wash., to Boynton Beach, Fla.—have been nominated by people like you.

Top coaching honor goes to DeBerry

Fisher DeBerry, who led the U.S. Air Force Academy to a 12-1 record and a No. 8 national ranking, was named coach of the year by the American Football Coaches Association.

It was the second time in three years an Air Force head coach has won the honor in voting by the more than 2,700 AFCA members.

Ken Hatfield, DeBerry's predecessor, was named coach of the year in 1983. Hatfield left following a 10-2 season to become head coach at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; and DeBerry, who had been offensive coordinator for three years, took over.

The 47-year-old native of Cheraw, South Carolina, led the Falcons to an 8-4 record in 1984, his first season as a head coach at any level.

A graduate of Wofford College, where he played flanker and defensive back and also lettered three years in baseball, DeBerry came to the Air Force Academy March 1, 1980, as quarterback coach and became offensive coordinator in 1981.

DeBerry and three other division winners were honored January 9 at the annual Kodak coach of the year awards banquet in New Orleans.

Dick Sheridan, who led Furman University to the I-AA national championship play-off finals, won in University Division I-AA.

College Division I honors went to George Landis of Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania.

Forms pertaining to rights' fees must be filed

Administrators at member institutions are reminded to return the television logs and questionnaires for use in 1985 claims to the Copyright Royalty Tribunal as soon as possible. Also, a form covering 1986 should be updated on a continual basis to speed the application process by the Association's legal counsel.

These materials recently were mailed to member institutions in an effort to obtain the information on nonnetwork telecasts of intercollegiate contests that is necessary for claims to the tribunal.

The Copyright Revision Act of 1976 requires cable systems to pay statutory copyright royalty fees for nonnetwork over-the-air television programs that are transmitted beyond the normal viewing area of a station.

Twice each year, cable television systems file a statement of account and pay a royalty fee to a copyright royalty pool. In July of each year, each copyright owner must file with the Copyright Royalty Tribunal a claim to royalties for its programming that was carried by a cable system beyond the station's normal viewing area in the preceding calendar year. The Tribunal distributes the fees from the royalty pool.

The NCAA serves as agent in collecting data and filing claims for royalty fees to which member institutions are entitled. The fees then are distributed to those members filing claims, based on the number of events telecast.

For example, funds covering the Association's claim for nonnetwork telecasts in 1982 totalled $523,693. This money recently was distributed by the Association. Funds covering claims for 1983 telecasts are expected to be distributed sometime in February.

Requests for additional information on the claims procedure should be directed to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Fisher DeBerry

NCAA Division III Football Championship was a write-in winner as coach of the year in College Division II. Reade was named for the third year in a row.

Dartmouth to retain Yukica one more year

Dartmouth College has reached an agreement with Joe Yukica that will permit him to coach for the 1986 football season, after which Yukica will retire.

Athletics director Edward Leland said, "This dispute has disrupted the college's athletic program too long. It is now too late to conduct a search that will produce the kind of coach Dartmouth needs. Dragging this on will only hurt the students, and I can't let that happen."

Leland was sued by Yukica December 2, three days after Yukica was informed that he was being relieved of his duties as head football coach. A ruling by Judge Walter Murphy of the Grafton County, New Hampshire, Superior Court December 20 enjoined Leland from filling Yukica's position until a final resolution of the case.

Although Leland and the college complied with Murphy's December 20 order by obtaining a vote of the Dartmouth College Athletic Council approving Leland's actions, the judge refused January 3 to dissolve the injunction but instead ordered depositions of several Council members.

Under the settlement, Yukica will step down as head coach as soon as the 1986 season ends. Leland will begin to look for a new head football coach in the fall of this year.

In a prepared statement, the college maintained that it did not breach Yukica's contract and that a court cannot force an employer to accept services it no longer desires. The court never ruled on these issues.

Judge rejects Hill's claim

Mary Alice Hill won't be reinstated as athletics director at San Diego State University, a judge has ruled.

San Diego County Superior Court Judge Mack P. Lovett January 8 rejected Hill's claim that she was a civil service employee of the University when she was fired August 8. Hill claimed she was denied a series of due-process hearings before her removal by university President Thomas B. Day.

Lovett said Hill served at Day's pleasure and was not a civil service employee, the Associated Press reported.

The judge indicated, however, that he might order the university to give Hill a hearing into the reasons for her dismissal. He said state law appeared to require him to order the "liberty hearing," at which Hill could attempt to clear her name of the stigma she said resulted from being fired.

"There's a certain circus atmosphere to this unfortunate situation already, and I'm kind of reluctant to add to it, but I'm supposed to follow the law," Lovett said.

Water polo coach takes to road to keep the sport afloat

By Lacy Lee Baker
The NCAA News staff

For years, Olympic water polo coach Monte Nitzkowski has been packing his bags for international competition in places like the Soviet Union, Spain, Bulgaria and Australia.

But this year, Nitzkowski, who coaches at Long Beach City College and serves as the junior college representative on the NCAA Water Polo Committee, is taking off for destinations much closer to home.

On February 5, Nitzkowski and his wife Barbara will load up their 1978 Volkswagon van and head north on part 1 of a journey that will carry them throughout most of the continental United States. Their mission: to spread the excitement of water polo to all who will listen.

"One of our goals is to meet with as many representatives of collegiate athletics departments as possible and explain the benefits of supporting a water polo program at their school," said Nitzkowski, Olympic coach in 1972 and national and Olympic coach from 1977 to 1984.

"The critical thing is to get as many colleges playing the sport as possible, along with sanctioning states in intercollegiate water polo," he said. "We need to move the emphasis and strength of the sport out of California and push to make it a national sport. You've got to get the rest of the country on your side; it can't just be California."

Fifty-three institutions participated in NCAA water polo in 1985, including 24 from the West (California only), 24 from the East and five representing the Midwest.

"As educators, universities need to make a commitment to the education of students in two areas—their chosen academic fields and providing competition in the amateur Olympic sports. If we lose NCAA water polo, I don't think we will be able to compete internationally. That would be a shame, because our international success is important to the American public."

I-AA school drops football

Southeastern Louisiana University dropped its 55-year-old intercollegiate football program January 13 to save a half-million dollars a year, university President J. Larry Crain announced.

"This was a difficult decision to make," Crain said at the NCAA Convention. "But as president of one of the state's major universities, I will do all in my power to support and strengthen the real purpose of the university—education."

The school was in NCAA Division I-AA football.

However, he said football could be reinstated if economic conditions improve. He acknowledged that a factor in the decision was the team's record of losing seasons in the last two years, the Associated Press reported.

Crain had announced November 6 that football would be dropped unless supporters came up with at least $2 million over the next five years.

He had set January 13 as the deadline for the last $230,000 of a $400,000 boost he said was needed to keep the program going another year.

"Unfortunately, that commitment has not been met, despite monumental efforts by the Southeastern Booster Club, former Southeastern football players, the Hammond (Louisiana) business community, as well as a number of private groups," he said.

Crain said students will be allowed to remain in school on athletics scholarships.

The money saved by getting rid of football will be used for academic programs and activities, Crain said. Specific targets, he said, will be the university library, along with student recruitment, teaching supplies and equipment.

Another point Nitzkowski hopes to make is that a water polo program can complement a university swimming program. "Look at California's Matt Biondi, for example. His participation on the water polo team has, in effect, made him a better swimmer and brought prestige to two of the university's programs." Biondi recently was named the U.S. Swimming Male Athlete of the Year.

On the trip, Nitzkowski will represent U.S. Water Polo, Inc. (USWP), the national governing body of water polo in the United States. The USWP showed its support of collegiate water polo last September when it announced it would provide grants totaling $6,000 over three years to institutions that wished to start intercollegiate water polo programs. Although only one school enrolled in the program in time for the 1985 season, 15 others have expressed an interest for 1986.

Barbara Kalbus, USWP past president, said at the time, "It is well worth it to U.S. Water Polo because every player on our national team comes from NCAA college water polo. It helps the NCAA, and it definitely helps us."

As chairman of the USWP's strategic planning committee, Nitzkowski also will coach certification clinics, player/coach clinics and enroll adults in USWP, in addition to the campus visitations.

The journey will be divided into two parts—a one-month sweep through the Pacific Northwest, and a three-month trek through the South, East and Midwest, starting April 2.

"Right now, we are scheduled for about 60 stops, including appearances at banquets, recreation departments and even speaking before a church youth group," said the 56-year-old Nitzkowski, who played intercollegiate water polo at UCLA and made the 1952 Olympic swimming team.

"We will make stops in central and northern California, including a banquet at San Luis Obispo, and then move on to Oregon, Washington, Montana and Utah. We then hope to make a presentation to the Las Vegas Recreation Department."

"In April, we'll leave for Phoenix, Tucson and then go on to San Antonio, where we are scheduled to present a three-day clinic. Other stops include Florida State; Washington, D.C.; Villanova; Fordham; Michigan and Ohio State," Nitzkowski said.

To schedule a visit by Nitzkowski, write or call Monte Nitzkowski or Dennis Fosdick, Long Beach City College, Department of Physical Education, 4901 E. Carson Boulevard, Long Beach, California 90808, 213/420-4240.

Northeast Louisiana women's basketball team penalized

Northeast Louisiana University has been placed on probation for a one-year period for violations found in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate women's basketball program.

The announcement was made by Frank J. Remington, chair of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, after notification that the university would withdraw its appeal of the penalty.

The penalty will prohibit the women's basketball team from participating in NCAA championship competition or in any other postseason play during the 1985-86 academic year and also will prohibit the women's head basketball coach from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities during the probationary period.

The violations occurred in the recruitment of a high school basketball prospect who subsequently enrolled at the university and competed during the 1984-85 season. In accordance with NCAA eligibility rules, the young woman has been declared ineligible to represent the university, it being understood that her case may be appealed to the NCAA Eligibility Committee.

Six violations were found in the case, including a violation of the NCAA's ethical-conduct rule involving a women's assistant basketball coach who provided false and misleading information concerning her knowledge of and involvement in the case. The assistant coach is no longer employed by the university.

"This case primarily involved the improper actions of an assistant coach in the recruitment of one of the nation's best high school basketball prospects," Remington said. "The committee was concerned that the assistant coach disregarded NCAA rules by providing automobile transportation to and lodging in another community on the first day for in-person recruiting contacts under NCAA legislation. The case became even more serious, however, when the coach reported false and misleading information to the NCAA concerning this incident, thereby avoiding jeopardy to the student-athlete and herself during the 1984-85 season."

"It also should be noted," Remington said, "that even though the head coach was not involved in the violations, a recruiting restriction was imposed on her to emphasize the committee's concern that sufficient supervision of the basketball program should have been exercised to avoid or detect the violations involving the assistant coach."

The violations involved ethical conduct, automobile transportation, lodging, a recruiting inducement, an improper recruiting contact, failure of the assistant coach to certify compliance with NCAA rules and the NCAA's tryout rule.

The following is the text of the penalty and a summary of the violations found in the case:

Penalty to be imposed upon institution

1. Northeast Louisiana University shall be publicly reprimanded and censured and placed on probation for a period of one year, effective January 9, 1986, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

2. The university's intercollegiate women's basketball team shall end its 1985-86 basketball season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest, and the team shall not be eligible to participate in the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship or any other postseason competition.

3. The women's head basketball coach at the university shall be prohibited from participating in any off-campus recruiting activities (including scouting activities involving the evaluation of prospective student-athletes) during the probationary period.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. Violation of the principles of ethical conduct and cooperation [NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a)-(1)-(iv) and the opening statement of the NCAA enforcement procedure]—A then-women's assistant basketball coach failed to deport herself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that she knowingly provided false and misleading information to representatives of the NCAA concerning her knowledge of and involvement in the incident described in Part 2-(a) below during interviews conducted by an NCAA enforcement representative August 9 and November 8, 1984.

2. Violations of NCAA legislation in the recruitment of a prospective student-athlete during the spring of 1984 [NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b)-(1), 1-2-(b), 1-4-(a)-(3), 1-6-(a) and 1-8-(j)]—(a) On March 10, 1984, a then-women's assistant basketball coach transported a prospective student-athlete by automobile from the young woman's home town to a motel approximately 20 miles away, where the coach provided one night's lodging at no cost to the prospect; further, the following day, the coach transported the young woman back to her home town [improper transportation and entertainment]; (b) during an approximate one-week period in April 1984, a then-women's assistant basketball coach provided the prospect the use of a wristwatch [recruiting inducement]; (c) In April 1984, during the official paid visit to the university's campus by the prospect, a representative of the university's athletics interests contacted the young woman in person, off campus for a brief period during a basketball team party [recruiting contact by athletics representative], and (d) in April 1984, during her official paid visit to the university's campus, the prospect participated in one-on-one basketball activities with a then-women's assistant basketball coach for a short period of time [improper recreational activities under NCAA tryout rule].

3. Violation of the provisions governing certification of compliance with NCAA legislation [NCAA Bylaw 5-6-(d)-(5)]—The university failed to obtain the signature of a then-women's assistant basketball coach on the university's June 11, 1984, certification of compliance form that was submitted to the NCAA national office.

CBS rates an 'assist' for workshop

CBS Sports recently held an unprecedented commentators workshop for women's basketball analysts at the network's offices in New York.

"Let me emphasize that this was in no way an audition," said Len DeLuca, director of program planning and development.

"CBS has been fortunate to televise the Division I Women's Basketball Championship final for the past four years. As part of ongoing discussions concerning our commitment to women's basketball and the continuing growth in the sport's popularity, we fostered and promoted the idea of bringing three women to New York for a workshop in color commentary as it relates to the game."

Attending the two-day session were Ann Meyers, former collegiate great who has been involved with some network telecasts; Mimi Griffin, who has been a part of women's basketball broadcast teams for ESPN, and Faye Young Miller, who provided commentary for some regional-tournament telecasts last season.

"We believe the seminar was beneficial to many people in several ways," DeLuca continued. "As the network currently televising the Division I Women's Basketball Championship, we had an opportunity to develop a relationship with the participants that is impossible to create through watching tapes."

"They were able to hear from our top production people about the kinds of things we look for and the kinds of things that can improve their on-air performances. Finally, others involved with women's basketball television, like ESPN and NCAA Productions, will benefit because they now can use women as commentators who are more aware of the role of good analysis in a broadcast."

DeLuca said that, although preliminary plans and discussion of the workshop grew out of meetings with the Division I Women's Basketball Committee, the network took full responsibility for the event, inviting the participants and paying their expenses.

"In the past, we would reach a point in our plans for a telecast when we would begin talking about talent and simply look to see who was available," explained DeLuca.

Team up with Greyhound® and see what kind of sports we really are.

Charter Greyhound, and we'll return up to 10% of your school's billings.

Every time you ride with us — from athletic teams to the band and other college organizations — you're helping to build the total amount of NCAA charter billings on Greyhound. And that adds up to big returns for your school.

With our new game plan, as the total NCAA volume figure grows, the percentage of billings that are returned to you will grow as well.

Up to a maximum 10% rate of return that goes directly to the athletic department.

So when you go Greyhound, you're getting more than our reputation for safety, service and reliability. You're getting a new way to keep expenses down.

When you're ready to plan your charters for the season, call us at 1-800-USA-NCAA. We'll give you more information and immediate charter quotes. And your Greyhound NCAA sales representative will contact you soon afterwards.

This year, put a good sport on your team. Choose Greyhound charters all season long.

Coach, school resolve dispute

California State University, Northridge and its head track coach William Webb announced January 14 that they had resolved their differences and arrived at a satisfactory settlement of a dispute regarding the university's nonrenewal of Webb's coaching appointment.

Webb accordingly has dismissed the legal proceedings filed by his attorney, Lee Howard Greene, and the California Faculty Association has withdrawn the pending arbitration concerning the dispute.

The university stated that Webb is a highly qualified track coach and had an excellent record at Cal State Northridge, where his teams were consistently successful.

Both Webb and representatives of the school stated that they are pleased with the resolution and glad to put the dispute behind them.

Michigan Tech for 26 seasons and compiled a 555-295-39 record. Riley is in his 36th year at Army, and his record through January 5 was 527-338-21... Joseph D. # Athletics directors offer guidelines for hiring of coaches

Successful college coaches are people-oriented, self-motivated and willing to accept and participate in continual evaluation of themselves and their programs, according to speakers who addressed the fourth NCAA Professional Development Seminar.

Conducted January 10-11 in New Orleans, the meeting focused on the topic, "Administering an Efficient Athletics Department," and drew 287 participants. Many of them attended a session on options for evaluating coaching staffs, which featured Karol A. Kahrs, assistant athletics director at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and J. Frank Broyles, athletics director at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Both suggested that the screening of candidates for a coaching vacancy should be considered the beginning of a continuing evaluation process. "I like to give immediate feedback to my coaches, whether it's positive or negative," Kahrs told the group.

As did Broyles, Kahrs emphasized the importance of administrators and coaches reaching a clear understanding of a job description. "I sat down with one coach I hired and developed a four-year plan based on realistic achievements to be obtained," explained Kahrs, who administers Illinois' women's athletics program.

"It (the plan) kept him and me on target and enabled us to get positive results. In his first season, the team finished 5-25. The second year, it was 18-15; this season, it finished 39-3."

In addition to victories and losses, Broyles discussed other factors that he considers when evaluating staff members. "I like to look at a coach's relationship with students, faculty, the community and our constituency.

Any coach who does not display a commitment to working with all of these groups is either not too smart or looking for another job."

Both emphasized the need to hire coaches with histories of success. "I am not willing to risk my future on somebody who might get the job done," Broyles said. "I want somebody who is people-oriented and cooperative. I won't hire anybody who isn't willing to cooperate with everybody. They have to be self-motivated to be able to motivate other people. I also look for individuals who lead by example."

When she hires a coach, Kahrs meets with the new staff member. "I want to list the things that are important to the coach (like support from the administration) and to his or her program (for example: budgetary considerations, office space and promotional ideas).

Broyles discussed the need for administrators to have control over their programs. "I am the search committee for coaches at the University of Arkansas," he explained. "I take sole responsibility for finding the right people to recommend for coaching vacancies since I am the one who will be out of a job if things don't work out."

Neither speaker downplayed the difficulty of dealing with "problem" coaches, but both encouraged their listeners to make coaching changes when necessary without hesitation.

According to Broyles, "the most expensive item in your (athletics) budget is empty seats."

Included were major sessions on reducing travel costs and on computer applications. Budgetary discussions were broken down to focus on the special needs of state-supported and private institutions, as well as those (programs) in Divisions II and III.

"The maintenance and control of the athletics budget are mounting concerns across all divisions of the NCAA," said NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers in a letter to participants.

Coproduced by Host Communications, Inc., Lexington, Kentucky, some funding for the seminar was provided by NCAA corporate sponsors, including American Airlines, Fugazy International Travel, Greyhound Lines, National Car Rental, PepsiCo and Valvoline Oil Company.

The session on coaching-staff evaluation was one of the last in a seminar that featured 22 speakers who covered a wide range of subjects.

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 3

Principles of sound academic standards

In response to recent inquiries regarding the provisions of Constitution 3-3-(a)-(1), (2) and (3) the following information is provided:

Under the provisions of Case Nos. 114 and 115, in order for a student-athlete to represent a member institution in intercollegiate athletics competition, that student-athlete must have been admitted in accordance with the regularly published entrance requirements of that institution. If the institution's chief executive officer has discretionary authority to grant waivers of the university's normal entrance requirements, then, in order to comply with the provisions of Constitution 3-3-(a)-(1), such discretionary authority shall be identified in the official documents published by the university that describe the institution's admissions requirements, such as the university's official catalog. Further, for a student-athlete who becomes academically eligible or ineligible at the end of a regular term during the academic year, the provisions of Constitution 3-3-(a)-(2) and (3) apply. These provisions state that such student-athlete shall become eligible or ineligible on the date the student-athlete's eligibility officially is certified by the appropriate institutional authority, which, in the event the student-athlete becomes ineligible, shall not be later than the first day of classes of the following semester or quarter.

Off-season conditioning classes

As set forth in O.I. 304, 305 and 306, regular physical education classes, with or without credit, that are listed in the institution's catalog and open to all students shall not be construed to be a practice activity. In addition, it is permissible for a member of the athletics staff (including a football coach) to conduct a physical education class for students of the institution, provided attendance of any intercollegiate football players shall be on a voluntary basis, classes are open to any student of the institution, and the class hours and programs have been publicized in appropriate publications and/or on the proper bulletin boards of the institution. Sessions shall be limited to a total of eight hours per week.

In addition, no football equipment may be used, including football shoes; teaching of football fundamentals or techniques shall be prohibited; no instruction in football shall be permitted (this prohibition includes walking through offensive or defensive plays); showing of football movies for instruction shall be prohibited, and blocking dummies, machines, sleds and like equipment shall not be used; contact and combative activities or drills of any kind shall be prohibited; class or activity sessions shall be conducted only in areas in which normal physical education activities or student recreation courses are conducted, and organization of participants in the class or program, as well as any activities conducted therein, based upon player position(s) or offensive or defensive units shall be prohibited.

Kemp trial testimony continues

A teacher charged January 14 in Federal court that the University of Georgia altered the rules of a remedial program to mislead academically deficient athletes into believing they had a chance of earning a college degree.

"I firmly believe the athletes were damaged in ways people do not realize. They were used by a system that told them they were going to get a college degree. They were hoping from the bottom of their hearts that this was possible. It was a tragedy, a tragedy," said instructor Ruth Sabol in Federal court in Atlanta.

Ms. Sabol's testimony came during the second week of a U.S. District Court trial of a civil lawsuit filed against university officials by former English instructor Jan Kemp.

Mrs. Kemp claims she was fired from the remedial developmental studies program in 1983 because she spoke out against special treatment given to some athletes and wealthy students.

The university contends Mrs. Kemp, an untenured teacher, was dismissed because she was insubordinate and failed to publish sufficient scholarly work.

Ms. Sabol, who serves as English coordinator of the developmental studies program, told the six jurors and four alternates that students were required to complete the noncredit remedial program in four quarters or face dismissal from the university. But she said she and other instructors repeatedly were ordered to give some athletes some extra time and tutoring.

Ms. Sabol described how one football and track star, whose name was shown to the jury on a piece of paper, was "exited" from the remedial program by administrators after failing to pass in eight quarters.

"That student, a lovely human being, was one of our most disadvantaged. It was obvious to everyone that he would have trouble getting through English; so when he didn't complete the requirements of the program, he was given tutorials, put back in the program, given more tutorials, put back in the program," she said.

Ms. Sabol said the two Georgia administrators named as defendants in the suit—developmental studies director LeRoy Ervin and Virginia

Trotter, vice-president for academic affairs—openly admitted in faculty meetings that such disadvantaged athletes had no chance for degrees.

Joyner gets Broderick Cup

Jackie Joyner, the UCLA track star who set American records almost every time she competed last season, was named the nation's top female collegiate athlete January 14.

Joyner, 23, was awarded the Broderick Cup, given annually for the past nine years to the woman chosen the best by a panel of women's sports figures.

To win the cup, Joyner outpolled Southern California basketball star Cheryl Miller, Wisconsin runner Cathy Branta, Old Dominion field hockey star Christy Morgan, Florida

Two Tennessee athletes face loss of grants-in-aid

Former University of Tennessee, Knoxville, football players Tony Robinson and Kenneth "B. B." Cooper were given a week to appeal a university decision to revoke their scholarships, school officials said January 10.

Robinson, 21, and Cooper, 22, were arrested January 8 for allegedly selling an ounce of cocaine to undercover police at their off-campus apartment.

Women's game in spotlight January 22 in New York City

Six of the top-20 teams in Division I women's basketball will be represented at the fourth annual NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball January 22 at the Hilton Hotel at Rockefeller Center in New York City.

The event will begin at 9 a.m. with media interviews of players and coaches. More than 100 members of the media have been invited.

Participating in the 1986 Spotlight will be Vivian Stringer, head coach, University of Iowa; Rene Portland, coach, and Suzie McConnell, sophomore guard, Pennsylvania State University; Jody Conradt, head coach, and Annette Smith, senior center, University of Texas, Austin; Debbie Ryan, head coach, and Nancy Mayer, junior forward, University of Virginia; Paul Sanderford, head coach, and Clemette Haskins, junior guard, Western Kentucky University.

Conradt, Portland and Stringer recently were featured in a series of articles in The New York Times on the growth of women's athletics.

A reception and luncheon for the participants will begin at 11:30 a.m.

City overassessed Carrier Dome, judge decides

A New York State Supreme Court judge ruled January 10 that the city of Syracuse overassessed the Syracuse University-run Carrier Dome by more than $5 million for three years.

The city, which had assessed the 50,000-seat dome at $12.5 million for tax purposes from 1982 to 1984, should have set its value at about $7 million, Judge Thomas Murphy ruled.

In June 1985, Murphy ruled that Syracuse University must pay property taxes on the $26.8 million dome because of rock concerts and other profit-making events held at the facility, which serves as a home to university athletics teams.

The university had claimed the Carrier Dome was an educational building and thus not subject to city taxation.

Murphy decided that the university should pay taxes based on nine percent of the dome's assessed value for 1982, 31 percent for 1983 and 20 percent for 1984.

The fractions were estimates of the percentages of events held at the dome during each of those years that were profit-making and noneducational.

Our Support For The NCAA Includes A Strong Commitment To The Future.

Valvoline Oil Company is very proud to be a supporter for NCAA sports at the intercollegiate level.

But as the NCAA has recognized, the needs of our country's youth begin long before college. And our young people are our future.

That's why we are also involved with the National Youth Sports Program, which provides underprivileged young people with summertime sports training and exposure to the benefits of higher education.

And with the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Program, where current and former college athletes provide positive role models for young people.

We feel that these programs serve a vital purpose for America's youth. And we're proud to be part of the effort.

Supporting NCAA programs.
