Convention attendance sets record

For the sixth consecutive year, attendance at the annual NCAA Convention in January established an all-time record.

A final audit of the registrations at the 1986 NCAA Convention in New Orleans shows that 1,861 persons were in attendance, two fewer than the unofficial total reported in the January 15 issue of The NCAA News.

The '86 turnout was 119 more than the previous record, established a year earlier in Nashville.

Since 1,075 attended the 1980 Convention in New Orleans, which was not a record, the total has increased each year.

There were 1,314 in Miami Beach in 1981, Houston attracted 1,315 in 1982, a total of 1,521 registered at San Diego in 1983 and 1,737 were in Dallas in 1984, preceding the 1,742 in Nashville in 1985.

Included among the 1,861 registered in New Orleans this year were 1,563 delegates from active member institutions, 86 representing member conferences, 16 from affiliated member organizations, five corresponding members, 58 visitors and 133 news media representatives.

All of those figures except the visitors' total were higher than in 1985.

The '86 gathering set new records in every Association attendance category.

The other new highs: 855 organizations represented, 717 registered voters (82.7 percent of all possible), 661 active members, 321 Division I members (95.8 percent of all Division I members), 176 Division II members (83 percent) and 226 Division III members (65.7 percent).

Of the Association's 891 active and conference members, 723 (81.1 percent) were in attendance in New Orleans. The total and the percentage also are all-time high marks.

The only "low" number at this year's Convention was the total number of legislative proposals facing the delegates—123. That was the lowest since the 1980 Convention considered 122 and is well below the record 257 at the 1976 annual Convention.

Five teams in position to break 1948 record

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

One of the oldest records in the books—36 victories in a season, set in 1948 by Kentucky's national champions—is in danger of being broken in this 48th National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship. There are an unprecedented five 30-game winners in the field vs. just one (Georgetown) a year ago.

Yet, everyone seems to be talking about "parity" and a wide-open field. We beg to differ. If there is parity, it is parity among an amazing number of outstanding teams, because 15 more teams have won at least 25 games.

Duke, top-ranked in the polls and 32-2, can break Kentucky's record by getting to the championship game (and tie it by reaching the Final Four,

Manual to be delayed

The 1986-87 NCAA Manual will be completed approximately two weeks later than scheduled, and shipping to all NCAA members should begin about April 1.

Completion of the new edition of the Manual—which will incorporate all legislative changes made at the special Convention in June 1985 and at the annual Convention in January 1986—has been delayed in order to include a significantly expanded and revised index to the NCAA constitution and bylaws.

The more detailed index was developed by a professional indexer, using the 1985-86 Manual as the reference. The process of updating and revising that index caused the extension in the deadline for delivering the Manual.

Wilford S. Bailey, NCAA secretary-treasurer and chair of the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification, announced in the February 19 issue of The NCAA News that the expanded index would be included in the new Manual. That special committee asks that NCAA members submit reactions, comments and suggestions regarding the index after they have had an opportunity to use it.

The new index has about 1,200 entries, compared to about 700 in the 1985-86 Manual.

Deadline is April 4 for nominations

Nominations for vacancies on the NCAA Nominating Committee and Men's and Women's Committees on Committees must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than April 4.

The Council will appoint individuals to fill those vacancies during its April 14-16 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Members of the committees for 1986 were listed in the January Convention Program. Composition of the three committees appears in Bylaws 12-2-(g) and (h) of the NCAA Manual.

Following is a list of those whose terms expire, including those eligible and not eligible for reelection. Committee members' divisions, districts or regions are in parentheses:

Men's Committee on Committees (Three-year term with no reelection)—Four expirations. Eligible for reappointment: Lawrence P. Boyd, Framingham State College (III-1). Not eligible for reappointment: Howard Elwell, Gannon University (II-2); C. Arnold Ferrin Jr., University of Utah (I-7); Norman B. Jones, Utah State University (I-8). Chair to be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms: Kenneth A. Free, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (I-3); Michael Johnson, University of Houston (I-6); John L. Spring, Oswego State University College (III-AL-2); Dennis J. Keihn, California State University, Los Angeles (II-AL-8).

Women's Committee on Committees (Three-year term with no reelection)—Four expirations. Not eligible for reappointment: Marjorie T. Berkley, Hollins College (III-3); Jeannine McHaney, Texas Tech University (I-6); Betty Kelly Austin, Alabama A&M University (II-AL-3); Mary Roby, University of Arizona (I-AL-8). Chair to be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms: P. LaVerne Sweet, Hampton University (II-2); Karen Womack, Miami University (Ohio) (I-4); Eve Atkinson, Temple University (I-AL-2); Sheila Brewer, Macalester requiring four victories). Three teams—31-2 Bradley, 31-3 Kansas and 31-4 Nevada-Las Vegas—can break the record by winning the title and equal it by reaching the championship game, while 30-4 St. John's (New York) can tie it by winning the championship.

Kentucky at 29-3 is just a game away from 30 victories. Five teams have won 27 games and could reach 30 by making the regional finals. They are 27-4 Michigan, 27-5 Memphis State, 27-5 UTEP, 27-4 Navy and 27-3 Cleveland State. Three more teams could reach 30 victories by reaching the Final Four—26-7 Louisville, 26-5 North Carolina and 26-4 Northeastern. And six more teams have won 25 games—Georgia Tech, Syracuse, St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), Oklahoma, Pepperdine and Xavier (Ohio).

A year ago, Georgetown had 30 victories entering the tournament and was a big favorite to win the title and equal Kentucky's record, but Villanova came through with a fantastic final game, shooting .786 from the field. St. John's, Memphis State and Oklahoma each reached 31 victories through tournament play (each was below 30 coming in).

Why so many great records this season? Is it possible those coaches who predicted fewer upsets because of the 45-second clock had a point?

Veteran coaches head west

By a quirk in the seeding and regional assignments, there is a remarkable concentration of veteran, big-winning coaches in the West regional.

The chart shows coaches of the top six seeds in the West have won 2,753 games in 126 total years of coaching. They are Lou Carnesecca (401-135) of St. John's, Denny Crum (364-114) of Louisville, Dean Smith (577-170) of North Carolina, Jerry Tarkanian (434-97) of Nevada-Las Vegas, Charles "Lefty" Driesell (523-223) of Maryland and Gene Bartow (454-231) of Alabama-Birmingham.

And that is only part of the story. The West regional also includes UTEP's Don Haskins (468-207) and Missouri's Norm Stewart (454-237), each in his 25th season of head coaching. Putting it another way, of 10 coaches in the tournament with at least 400 victories, seven are in the West. Including Crum, the above eight coaches in the West have an average of 459 career victories—more than any of the other 56 coaches in the tournament (Illinois' Lou Henson at 457, Old Dominion's Tom Young at 456 and Indiana's Bob Knight at 438 are the other 400-game winners in the tournament).

It is not just a matter of longevity and total victories but great success as well. The West's "gang of eight" has reached the Final Four 17 times in all; the other 56 coaches in the tournament have totaled 19 trips to the Final Four. Winning percentage? Tarkanian at .817, Smith at .772, Crum at .762 and Carnesecca at .748 rank 1-2-3-5 among active coaches with at least 10 seasons in Division I (Syracuse's Jim Boeheim is fourth at .751).

But don't get the idea the West has

Big basketball arenas taking away home-court advantage

Duke basketball fans are nothing if not creative. And obedient. Last season, after a newspaper criticized the Blue Devils' faithful for some particularly crude behavior, they cleaned up their act.

The next game, they held up signs that read, "Please miss." And after questionable calls by officials, they chanted, "We beg to differ."

At Missouri, an eight-year-old group of fans called the Antlers has been known to send pizzas to visiting dressing rooms and wear hot dogs on their pointy helmets (hence their nickname) to tease particularly flamboyant opponents.

Perhaps the Antlers' greatest triumph came several years ago against Oklahoma and its star, Cary Carrabine. A group of Antlers recruited a young boy (some say for a pretty hefty sum), and dangled him over the balcony by his ankles while chanting, "Carrabine, we have your brother."

All in the name of home-court advantage.

Raucous fans, thin air, good teams, bad beds—there's always a viable excuse for losing on the road. But today, in the age of multipurpose, 20,000-seat arenas, the days of the deafening "pits"—maybe the home-court advantage—seem to be dying.

The North Carolina Tar Heels, for 21 years terrors in 10,000-seat Carmichael Auditorium, now play their games in the 21,426-seat Student Activities Center. De Paul, cozy for 24 years in Alumni Hall, moved 14 miles off campus to the 17,500-seat Rosemont Horizon in 1980.

Al McGuire, coach of a national championship team at Marquette and now a commentator for NBC-TV, said the bigger arenas are stripping something from the game.

"It takes away from the people who are there. It takes away from the tradition," he said. "But television has created college basketball, and larger arenas are inevitable. The only thing I object to is holding games in buildings

"You've got to be some sort of a nut to watch a basketball game from the top balcony in one of these big arenas," Lemons said. "You may as well be watching from an airplane. I'd rather watch a game in a high school gym." Once a very large part of the action, very pleasing place for opponents to visit.

"I'm tickled to death there are no more games in Alligator Alley," said Norm Sloan, who coached teams there during his first stint as the Gators' coach from 1960 to 1966. "Sure, the crowds were more intimate, but the new place is just a nicer place to play, and we're able to get more fans in."

Syracuse plays in the Carrier Dome, an arena designed to accommodate football and basketball. Playing in college basketball's largest regular facility (33,000 capacity), the Orangemen set a national attendance record last season with an average of 25,870.

Arenas and fanatic crowds aside, some of the toughest places to play are simply the homes of some of the toughest teams. Kentucky was 308-38 in 25 years at Memorial Stadium. In the nine years since moving to 23,500-seat Rupp Arena, the Wildcats have lost 13 at home. And Wildcats fans never have done anything much wilder than sell out the arena every season and yell "Hello, Cawood" to longtime Wildcats television announcer Cawood Ledford.

not built for basketball. The NCAA should have a rule against that."

Former De Paul coach Ray Meyer: "We lost that special intimacy when we moved out of Alumni Hall. In that gym, when the crowd got going, the walls would rock. The visiting teams and officials were intimidated right from the beginning."

Abe Lemons, the former Texas coach now at Oklahoma City University, has seen the trend toward larger arenas coming but doesn't like it.

fans are being whisked away to cushioned theater seats, armrests and unobstructed views—often 30 to 50 feet from the court.

Some teams actually have suffered in the move to larger quarters.

New Orleans, 149-37 over 14 years in a 3,500-seat gym dubbed "The Chamber of Horrors" (students dressed as Frankenstein and Dracula), now play in the 10,000-seat Lakefront Arena. Since the move in 1983, there has been just one sellout, and the Privateers have lost 11 home games.

"There's not much of a home-court advantage in our new place," sports information director Mike Bujol said. "It's not half as noisy, and most nights there are 7,000 empty seats."

Florida played in the famed "Alligator Alley" (capacity 12,000). The Gators weren't particularly invincible in the old gym, either. It just wasn't a

Courting big trouble: basketball fights

By Stuart Bailin

What's happening to basketball? It has become commonplace to find fights highlighted on the 11 o'clock news. Fighting is beginning to surface in the women's game.

In a recent brawl involving two metropolitan New York area women's basketball teams, the game had to be completed in a gymnasium in which spectators were asked to leave. The visiting team had its vehicle vandalized—windows were broken and tires slashed. The home team had to provide transportation to get the visitors back home. This madness must stop now. There is no excuse for it to happen—ever.

Some say the officials don't control the game enough; they allow too much body contact. Others say it is the fans who contribute to the hysteria. Still others say it's the players who do not exhibit sportsmanlike behavior. Of course, the win-at-all-cost mentality cannot be overlooked as being partly responsible for the proliferation of fights. Certainly, all of these factors have something to do with the increase in fighting.

Although many may not agree, the individual most responsible for the atmosphere created in the gymnasium is the coach. It is the coach who sets the tone of the game. If the coach is out of control, then how can one expect the players and fans to be in control? Coaches demand that players work hard for everything, and this is how it should be. Diving for loose balls, contesting rebounds and overall hard play are what generally is taught. Playing hard within the rules and testing your skills against others is what competition is about. However, players must be taught that brawling or exchanging blows is totally unacceptable in every case. If players knew that they would be either suspended or dropped from the team if they are involved in a fight, they just wouldn't take that chance.

College athletes need to be reminded that opponents are just opponents. They are not enemies or adversaries.

Most recently, our men's basketball team shared a bus with another New York metropolitan area college team for a trip to the Buffalo region for a tournament. Our first-round opponent was to be our bus-mates. The players and coaches from both teams got along extraordinarily well. They were able to separate a hard-fought contest from the camaraderie developed before and after the game.

Every coach and player wants success. In our society, winning is a measure of success.

Another measure of success is when sportsmanship and humanity override the outcome of the game.

The point of view presented here is that coaches should carefully examine their role. They must be willing to look at themselves as the cause of this fighting. Until coaches accept this responsibility, the fighting and brawling will continue.

The fighting will cease when the coaches decide that this sort of behavior no longer will be tolerated. The ball clearly is in the coaches' corner. What he or she does with it will determine the atmosphere created in the arenas across the nation.

are also guys like Roy Chipman at Pittsburgh, who has to pass a lie detector test to face the family, and Jim Dutcher at Minnesota, who takes the complete blame for the morals rap on his ball club.

"And then there's Eldon Miller. He was flat-out fired, probably by a committee or a person who was hired specifically to get the job done. Here's a coach who had a 10-year run at Ohio State and 20 in the college game and, to my knowledge, had lived within the rules as well as any other coach. Here's a coach with 17 winning seasons, and the athletics director says to him, 'We'll judge you on your next eight or 10 games,' when he's dealing with kids 18 or 19 years old who are still wet behind the ears and trying to clear up their acne.

"Think about it. Right now, there are eight other coaches inside the Big Ten who should ask for an investigation by the NCAA or by the college presidents who supposedly have taken such an interest in the direction of college sports, especially the ones that produce the money.

"Right now, I think college football needs more stability in coaching. A lot of times schools jump too fast; they see a foundation being raised in the football program, and they want to accelerate the building process.

Don't single out players for solecisms

To the Editor:

In the "Opinions Out Loud" column of the February 19 issue of The NCAA News, Stan Torgerson comments on college athletes' use of singular subjects with plural verbs, etc. I have heard many interviews of the type he mentions, and the words grate upon the ear.

However, I have heard announcers on radio and television, both locally and on the networks, do the very same thing; and they have, for the most part, completed their college educations and have a number of years' experience in their field.

This is not to condone the sloppy use of the English language by college students but to remind the interviewers that they often have to watch their own use of the same language. Y'know?

'No pass, no play' should be copied

To the Editor:

The Texas legislature enacted a "no-pass, no-play" law, and the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld it. Texas high school athletics is on its ear. Varsity squads are depleted by 15 percent. Junior varsity and freshman squads are short 30 percent of their players.

Maybe now, the U.S. coaching fraternity will "get with it" and realize it takes more to be a jock than the ability to run, jump and take a shower, whether needed or not.

Fun and games are a real integral part of Americana... but not everything in America, to paraphrase Vince Lombardi. We do need individuals capable of thinking their way out of a paper bag.

The "constitutional question" submitted to the Supreme Court questioned Texas' authority to deny a student's civil right to play organized sports or participate in a band, with grade scores below passing. This thinking is the very essence of the ineptitude we are trying to reduce. Why should failure be rewarded equally with success? Participation is not a right, it is a privilege won by accomplishment.

College athletics had its "comeuppance" with the recent Jan Kemp ruling in Georgia. College athletics truly will be enhanced when the whole of the USA embraces the new Texas high school law.

Big basketball

January 8, 1955, still is the national record. The mystique of Kentucky basketball isn't disturbed by change in locale.

North Carolina was 168-20 in Carmichael Auditorium. The biggest factor? "Michael Jordan, James Worthy, Sam Perkins—those are a few reasons," sports information director Rick Brewer said. "Students don't stand and cheer in unison, and there are no profane cheers. We just cheer our own team. We do not wave our arms at Carmichael Auditorium."

Since 1968, Notre Dame is 224-45 in the 11,345-seat Athletic and Convocation Center, and only twice have the Fighting Irish lost more than three home games in a season. The 6,500 undergraduate students snatch up 4,000 season tickets for the privilege to stand for the entire game. During the 1976-77 season, Notre Dame's crowd attained special status. It was named the most valuable player by NBC-TV after the Irish upset No. 1-ranked San Francisco, snapping the Dons' 29-game winning streak.

Indiana is 173-26 in 15 years at 17,200-seat Assembly Hall. The Hoosiers have had sellouts the last 10 years, and students are required to share 9,000 season tickets.

Hoosier crowds are loud but temperate. Perhaps from fear. Coach Bobby Knight has been known to grab the courtside microphone during games to admonish fans for profane chants or for not yelling loud enough.

Meyer said the days of the true home-court advantage are gone. "We used to come into locker rooms freezing cold because they'd turned off the heat," he said. "Or they'd pound on the outside windows so the boys couldn't hear us. Another good one was putting the entire football team behind our bench. You see a lot more sportsmanship now, just common courtesies."

Lemons said the crowd factor is overrated. "Players today, when they hear a crowd, it may as well be cheering for them," he said. "Everyone plays better at home regardless."

Said McGuire, "The noise works on the subconscious of officials. Everyone's a ham, and no one likes to be booed for a couple of hours."

"When I was at Marquette, I used to work the home-court advantage any way I could. I would make sure to invite the southern teams to Milwaukee in the coldest part of the winter because none of them had overcoats, and I knew there was no way we could lose."

Duke fans come to basketball games well-prepared. Maryland coach and Duke alumnus Lefty Driesell is generally greeted by people wearing skin heads, some with gas meters drawn on and pointing to empty. Last season, Lefty came prepared. He walked in with a wig.

"That's the trick," said Duke sports information director John Roth. "You have to be able to take a joke. One time, a guy really complained about us in the paper, and he got absolutely tortured the next time he played against us. The crowd just screamed every time he touched the ball."

Sloan said he'd rather have loud, even obnoxious fans than no fans at all. "I still contend that the hardest place to play is Ole Miss, because there's no noise at all, and it has a very depressing effect," he said. "I'd much rather have 22,000 rooting against you."

The late Adolph Rupp never had 22,000 opposing fans to contend with, but he still had trouble when he took his Kentucky teams to Mississippi State. For years, the Wildcats had a particularly tough time winning there. In 1959 and again in 1962, the Wildcats sustained one of their three defeats of the season in Starkville.

"One year at Mississippi State, they put a dead skunk on Coach Rupp's seat," said Russell Rice, former sports information director at Kentucky and author of three books on Wildcats basketball. "There, the fans were so close to the floor that they'd actually reach out and pull the hairs on the players' legs while they were inbound the ball."

That home-court advantage.

ries. He put a wall between them and the other students, and there's always an invisible wall there anyway.

"It's understood that these players are there to practice up for the Green Bay Packers; and in return for the exposure and the training the player receives, the university gets to keep the game receipts."

"Let's do away with the fiction that these guys are students, that this is 1890 and that's Frank Merriwell running over from the chem lab to work out with the team, if he has time."

"The concern should translate not into reforms but into the opposite of reforms."

"What you do is you set up a quid pro quo. You tell these athletes, 'We recognize your economic value to the institution, and here is what you get for playing for the university.' That way, it's all above board."

"You either do that, or you go back to recruiting from the student body and have no athletics scholarships. You'd have to dismantle the entire athletics program, and I don't think anyone's about to do that."

"We don't put numbers on our kids or identify them for the colleges, and colleges complain like hell about that. I've been blasted in the press for not putting names and numbers on the kids, but we don't do it because I don't believe in it."

"Camps, I don't feel, should be a part of the recruiting process. Unfortunately, ours is in a way, because we attract the best players in the country. Even with the free Nike camp the last two years, four of the best guards—two each year—didn't go there. They went to Five Star. So we are attracting the best players, and the colleges are coming. It's open to the colleges to come and evaluate talent at our camp. It's unfortunate, but there's nothing I can do about it. I can't bar 300 schools from coming."

"But again, we don't run our camp for them, we run it for the kids."

"You can't judge a guy on one year. I can't do a whole lot of things. I can't run a computer, and I can't do bookkeeping. I don't even know how much money I have. But I can coach."

"A lot of coaches go their whole life and never get in the top 10. People write that I get great talent and make them mediocre teams. That irks me. It irks me when they say that. Sure, I've lost 10 games this season. A lot of teams have been playing bunnies. I could do that, too, but I had the nerve to play my schedule. It's amazing I've done as well as I have with all the negative publicity. I've been here 17 years, and I've averaged 20 wins a season. So how is someone going to come in here and tell me I can't coach?"

"I find difficulty with the words 'being paid.' I find an awful lot of coaches say an individual ought to be paid; but when you read into it, they're talking about a stipend in order to live. When you think about 'being paid,' you think about getting thousands of dollars."

"I am basically against paying athletes, but what I would like to see is the athletes receive a larger share of the Pell Grant. The Pell Grant is based on need. In other words, if an individual comes out of a poor home, he is qualified for 'X' amount of dollars. I would like to see athletes receive that maximum amount."

"When I was in college, I never had any money in my pocket, except maybe I always had a dollar. My mother took on a second job to enable me to have the opportunity. But I always had an uncle or an aunt I could turn to in a time of need."

"Today, there are many athletes who happen to be in college who have nobody in the immediate family they can turn to in the time of crisis. What they allow you to do is allow you to give him a scholarship to pay for his academics, but that individual cannot work."

"At the University of Minnesota (where Holtz coached before taking the position at Notre Dame), we did not start school until September 22, but we had to report for football practice August 18. They got out of class on June 12. They had six weeks to work, the entire year. Out of that money, they had to pay for transportation, all clothes, toothpaste and things along that line."

"You say, well, let them work during the school year (and during their particular off-season). But then, there were abuses along that line also. So I don't know what the answer is."

"We have to put a better citizen in the college classroom. We're all embarrassed with what's happening. At least if the kid can compete in the classroom he'll have a sense of what's right and wrong. At Notre Dame, we're concerned for the welfare of the student-athletes we bring in. That's why all my guys graduate in four years. That's something we believe in; it works."

"We've been fortunate to be able to combine the athletics and academics and be successful in both areas. That's the real bottom line in what we're doing, not the won-lost record."

Larry Donald, publisher
Basketball Times

Tiger Rag (Louisiana State University booster publication)

"It is an indictment of the various college basketball polls that Bradley entered its last week of regular-season play ranked outside the top 10. Have the voters been comatized by the incredible publicity mills in the ACC, Big East and Big Ten? Pollsters should ask themselves just one question in regard to Bradley: Granting that this is not a vintage year for the Missouri Valley Conference, how many of those top-10 teams could have just one loss if they played the Braves' schedule. Interesting thought, isn't it?"

Jerry Welsh, head men's basketball coach
Potsdam State University College

The Associated Press

"Winning isn't the most important thing; giving your best effort is. We don't dwell on anything else. That's what success is all about."

J. Frank Broyles, director of athletics
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville

The Associated Press

"Of course we are all saddened when anyone, particularly young people, becomes involved with (illegal) substances. It is a policy of the athletics department at the University of Arkansas to do all we can to discourage and prevent any such involvement by our student-athletes."

"Secondly, it is our commitment to assist any of the young people to overcome their problems and rehabilitate themselves. It takes a lot of moral courage to face up to their problems and try as best they can to conquer them. We support them (two players who were suspended from the varsity basketball team and who apologized to the team and school for their involvement with drugs) in this effort."

"So far as we know, these are the first young college athletes who have volunteered to take this step and acknowledge it publicly. They are doing this not only to help themselves but to try to discourage others from making the same mistake."

a monopoly. Every region is loaded with highly successful coaches. There are eight 300-game winners in the other three regions—five in the Midwest alone, with Notre Dame's Richard "Digger" Phelps, Georgetown's John Thompson, Iowa State's Johnny Orr, Temple's John Chaney and Texas Tech's Gerald Myers. The other 300-game winners are Virginia's Terry Holland, Kentucky's Eddie Sutton and Virginia Tech's Charles Moir (Crum makes nine in the tourney). Fifteen more have won at least 200. And on the all-time list including those with at least 10 seasons in Division I, 14 of the top 19 active coaches in winning percentages are in the field.

Looking at tournament victories, 15 coaches in the field have won at least 10 NCAA tournament games, and seven are in the West's "gang of eight," with Smith 31-16, Crum 21-12, Tarkanian 17-11 (11-8 officially, including voids), Driesell 14-11, Bartow 13-8, Carnesecca 11-14 and Haskins 10-7. The others are led by Knight's 21-7; then come Thompson 17-8, Villanova's Rollie Massimino 15-6, Phelps 14-12, Sutton 12-10, Henson 12-11, Holland 11-6 and North Carolina State's Jim Valvano 10-4 (9-3 officially).

Several coaches with less than 10 years in Division I have outstanding winning marks, like Larry Brown of Kansas at .758, Jim Boyle of St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) at .703, Jim Harrick of Pepperdine .680, Wimp Sanderson of Alabama .676, Gene Keady of Purdue .675 and Bill Frieder of Michigan .654.

14 first-timers

Fourteen coaches are in the NCAA tournament for the first time in their careers, bringing to 406 the total number of coaches in tournament history. Two of these are in their first head-coaching season at the four-year level—Xavier's (Ohio) Pete Gillen, whose 25-4 team won the Midwestern Collegiate Conference title, and Fairfield's Mitch Buonaguro, whose 24-6 team won the Metro Atlantic Conference crown.

11 also played

Eleven coaches in the field are among the 60 in history who also have played in the NCAA tournament. They are Boeheim, Knight, Boyle, Thompson, Sutton, Smith, UTEP's Haskins, Western Kentucky's Clem Haskins, West Virginia's Gale Catlett, Miami's (Ohio) Jerry Peirson and Buonaguro, only newcomer to the list, who played for Boston College and scored two points in a game against North Carolina in the 1975 NCAA tournament.

Smith and Knight remain the only two coaches who have both played for an NCAA championship team and coached an NCAA championship (Smith played at Kansas, Knight at Ohio State).

First-time teams

Eight teams are in the NCAA tournament for the first time—Akron, Arkansas-Little Rock, Cleveland State, Drexel, Fairfield, Marist, Mississippi Valley State and Nebraska. Among the others, Brown has broken the longest drought—this is its first tournament since 1939, when it was 17-4 under George Allen and lost its first tournament game. There are 40 repeaters in the bracket from 1985.

Most-improved teams

This is a remarkable year for the nation's most-improved teams making the NCAA tournament. Of 18 Division I teams up more than seven games over 1985, 12 are in the 1986 field, including six of the top eight, all up at least nine games.

Bradley heads the list at 12½ games (31-2 vs. 17-13; 14 more victories and 11 fewer losses is 25, then divide by two). Fairfield is next at 12 games, then Kentucky at 10½, with Davidson, another tourney team, tied at 10 with Southern Mississippi, an entrant in the National Invitation Tournament. New Mexico State, 18-12, was up 9½ games but made neither tournament. Two teams up nine games were Louisville and Xavier, and both are in the tournament field.

Akron, 22-7, an NCAA entrant, and Northwestern State (Louisiana), 11-16, each was up 8½ games, with three at eight games—19-11 Drexel, (an NCAA team), 20-8 Pan American and 10-18 Georgia State.

Five more teams were up 7½ games—32-2 Duke, 16-10 Brown, 21-9 Ball State, 22-7 Western Kentucky and 20-8 Eastern Washington—and the first four are in the NCAA.

Bradley's "unique group," pointed out coach Dick Versace, is driven by genuine affection for one another. It all developed last summer on an 18-day trip to Italy. It took a different land for the 13 players—nine from the Chicago area—to discover their interests in common. They went on 14-hour bus rides together, sang "We Are The World" on an Italian beach with children who don't understand English, and took turns saying grace each evening before dinner.

Fairfield tied for last in its conference a year ago but turned around when an off-season conditioning program of sprints and agility drills, initiated by first-year coach Buonaguro, took hold early. Kentucky responded to Eddie Sutton, always a big winner at Arkansas, in his first year on the job; while Southern Mississippi and Davidson, under veteran coaches M. K. Turk and Bobby Hussey, respectively, found that patience paid off.

Gillen, an assistant under Massimino and Phelps, says he learned from them that a team should be a family. He is so friendly, so outgoing, so principled, that you wonder if it is for real. Before long, you know it is. His sincerity is the first thing that strikes you—after his thick Brooklyn accent and David Letterman looks. Says Byron Larkin, the team's leading scorer, "He treats everyone the same whether you're the leading scorer or a walk-on."

Larkin adds that Gillen's good nature is not limited to the team. "We go into gyms on the road and he walks around with us looking over the place," he said. "Sometimes there are kids in there, and other coaches probably would yell at them to get out. But he goes up and introduces himself to them. Sometimes, he sees kids outside the gyms and he even tries to get them tickets to the game."

Now 38, Gillen fondly remembers an undistinguished playing career at Fairfield, where he also started in coaching as an assistant. He recalls with relish an encounter with Elvin Hayes, whose Houston team was coming off a momentous victory over UCLA in the Astrodome (where a then-record 52,693 watched the end of a 47-game UCLA winning streak). "I drove in once and I thought he had killed me," Gillen says with a smile. "I took a shot and the ball wound up at half-court."

This was a lonely season for the new Xavier coach because his wife, Ginnie, and son, Brendan, were back in South Bend, Indiana, waiting for their house to sell. "When you have children," Gillen says, "God lends them to you for 18 years. Then they go their own way. Every day that went by, I missed part of that. When it's gone, it's gone. That hurts."

Records by Kentucky, UCLA

This is Kentucky's 31st appearance in the NCAA, extending its own record. UCLA has won the most games (55—not counting five voided in 1980) and most championships (10—all in one incredible 12-year span under John Wooden).

Kentucky has won 50 games and is second in championships with five, the first four under Adolph Rupp. See Kentucky's, page 10

Utah holds off Vermont to win '86 skiing title

A strong showing in the slalom and men's cross country relay gave Utah enough distance to hold off Vermont and win the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships March 5-8 in Stowe, Vermont.

Not since 1973 has the margin been closer than the 10 points separating Utah and Vermont. The Utes beat the Catamounts, 612-602, to capture their fourth team title in the past six years. It was Vermont's fifth runner-up finish over the same period.

"It was a tough one and a close one," said Utah coach Pat Miller. "The meet went right down to the last 100 meters of the last race. It was one of the most exciting championships we have had in a long time."

Vermont held a slim 16-point lead after the first two days of competition but had two skiers fall in both the men's and women's slaloms and trailed by 27 points going into the final day of racing.

"We still had a shot at them," said Vermont coach Chip LaCasse. "Going into the men's relay, we needed to pick up four places on Utah."

Utah won the event, however, which meant that Vermont would have to pick up five places in the women's relay.

"The odds were pretty long, but Hanne (Krogstad, skiing the anchor leg for Vermont) almost did it," LaCasse said. "We were listening to the radio constantly as she was on the course, and she kept making up the time. She came within about 14 seconds of winning, too."

Krogstad and Vermont finished third in the event, and Utah finished sixth. If Vermont had won the event, the Catamounts would have won the meet.

"She simply ran out of real estate," Miller said. "If there had been another kilometer to go, she might have done it. The difference was that we skied well all week, and Vermont had one bad day."

Wyoming, the defending national champion, finished third with 554 points. Colorado finished fourth with 543 points.

Stronger Florida, Stanford teams after swimming title

Defending champion Texas on the horns of a dilemma

Two-time defending champion Texas probably will have to be at its best to hold off strong squads from Florida and Stanford for the team title at the Division I Women's Swimming Championships March 20-22 at Arkansas.

Texas dominated the field at last year's championships, rolling up a record 643 points. Second-place Florida had 400 points, while Stanford turned in a 340-point performance. This year, the Lady Gators and the Cardinal added numerous outstanding freshmen to their ranks and should be able to give two-time defending champion Texas its toughest competition ever. Florida won the first NCAA women's championship (1982), while Stanford took top honors in 1983.

The Longhorns return 637 points from last year's team and also will be helped by transfers Betsy Mitchell and Annabelle Cripps. Mitchell was an Olympic silver medalist and has turned in 1986 qualifying performances of 23.77 in the 50-yard freestyle, 51.56 in the 100-yard freestyle, 49.77 in the 200-yard freestyle, 56.30 in the 100-yard backstroke and 2:00.29 in the 200-yard backstroke. Cripps is one of four Longhorns who have qualified in the 200-yard freestyle (1:48.73), and she also has made the mark in the 500-yard freestyle (4:49.32).

Five 1985 individual champions return for Texas—Debbie Risen in the 100-yard backstroke, Tori Trees in the 200-yard backstroke, Tiffany Cohen in the 500-yard and 1,650-yard freestyles, Tracey McFarlane in the 100-yard breaststroke, and Kim Rhodenbaugh in the 200-yard breaststroke and 200-yard individual medley.

Risen and Trees and have qualified in both backstroke events with times of 56.33 and 57.93 in the 100 and 2:00.58 and 2:03.24 in the 200, respectively. Distance freestyler Tiffany Cohen has made the mark in the 500

Tracey McFarland and Texas coach Richard Quick

(4:46.79) and 1,650 (16:18.27) but will be challenged by teammate Patty Sabo (4:46.50 in 500 and 16:27.25 in 1,650). Another Longhorn, Chris Emerson, also has qualified in the two events (4:50.48 in the 500 and 16:29.35 in 1,650). In addition, all three distance freestylers have qualified in the 400-yard individual medley, with Sabo swimming the fastest qualifying mark (4:21.27).

In the butterfly events, Jodi Eyles, Terriane McGuirk and Kara McGrath are Longhorn contenders, while Vanessa Richey leads the pack in the individual medleys (2:04.51 in 200 and 4:19.18 in 400). Texas has qualified six swimmers in the 400-yard individual medley.

The relays also are strong, with times of 1:34.60 in the 200-yard freestyle, 3:25.09 in the 400-yard freestyle, 7:28.44 in the 800-yard freestyle, 1:44.56 in the 200-yard medley relay and 3:47.24 in the 400-yard medley relay.

Florida, characterized by depth and versatility, appears strongest in the freestyle events. Individual 100-yard freestyle champion Mary Wayte returns and has qualified with a 50.77 in the 100, 1:47.77 in the 200 and 4:46.32 in the 500. Her time of 4:18.91 in the 400-yard individual medley is one of the fastest in the country. Freshmen Dara Torres in the 100-yard freestyle (51.02) and Paige Zemina and Tami Bruce in the 200-yard freestyle (1:49.91 and 1:50.12, respectively) are scoring threats.

Bruce swam the nation's fastest time in the 1,650-yard freestyle (16:15.90) and she also will compete in the 400-yard individual medley (4:21.23).

The backstroke will be another strong event for the Lady Gators. Senior Holly Green has a season best of 56.36 in the 100, while sophomore Karin Werth has swum a 58.19 and Jennie Sawyer a 58.65. Green also is one of the nation's leading backstrokers at the 200-yard range with a 2:01.77 season best. Werth led the nation at one point in the 200-yard individual medley (2:03.73).

Freshman Cindy Onpuu leads Florida in the breaststroke, with a (nation's best) 2:17.61 in the 200. In diving, six-time NCAA champion Megan Neyer has returned after redshirting in 1984-85.

The Lady Gators should score heavily in the relays. Season bests include 1:34.26 in the 200-yard freestyle, 3:24.76 in the 400-yard freestyle, 7:23.51 in the 800-yard freestyle, 1:45.21 in the 200-yard medley and 3:46.79 in the 400-yard medley.

Stanford features 12 freshmen who placed in the U.S. National Short Course Championships last season. Olympic gold medalist Jenna Johnson leads the list and has qualified in the 50-yard freestyle (23.09), 100-yard freestyle (49.83), 200-yard freestyle (1:46.99) and 100-yard butterfly (54.37). She also plays a key role on Cardinal relay squads, which have season bests of 1:34.50 in the 200-yard freestyle, 3:22.65 in the 400-yard freestyle, 17:27.63 in the 800-yard freestyle, 1:44.68 in the 200-yard medley and 3:44.33 in the 400-yard medley.

Olympic silver medalist Susan Rapp, who was redshirted last season, leads the Cardinal effort in the 200-yard butterfly (2:00.00) and also has qualified in the 200-yard breaststroke (2:18.47), 200-yard individual medley (2:05.06) and 400-yard individual medley (4:20.85). Kathy Smith is the top Cardinal in the breaststrokes, with a 1:02.88 in the 100 and a 2:16.79 in the 200. She also leads Stanford in the 200-yard individual medley (2:03.68).

Freshman Michelle Donahue tops a strong backstroke contingent with a 57.22 in the 100 and 2:01.50 in the 200. Freshman Jennifer Shannon (57.33) and sophomore Jennifer Pokluda (57.77) are probable scorers in the 100-yard backstroke.

Stacy Shupe, second last year in the 1,650-yard freestyle, has a 4:49.8 in the 500-yard freestyle and a 16:18.94 in the 1,650 this season.

California, featuring NCAA record-holder Mary T. Meagher (butterflies) and national 50-yard freestyle champion Conny van Bentum, looks strong, as do Southern California and Southern Methodist.

Western Michigan plans to keep its foes guessing

Western Michigan capped its best season ever in Central Collegiate Hockey Association play with its first berth to the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Ranked seventh nationally, the Broncos, picked in some polls to finish seventh in the nine-school conference, have been the surprise of the college hockey season. Coach Bill Wilkinson's team surged to a third-place finish in conference play, beaten only by a tiebreaker after tying Bowling Green in points (46) and record (23-9-0). The Broncos then automatically qualified for the eight-team tournament by winning the CCHA post-season tournament. Michigan State won the regular-season conference crown.

The 39th annual championship starts with four first-round series of matches March 21-23 at on-campus sites. First-round competition utilizes a two-game, total-goals format. The four first-round winners will advance to the March 27-29 championship at the Providence (Rhode Island) Civic Center.

In addition to Western Michigan, automatic-qualification privileges will be awarded to champions of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Western Collegiate Hockey Association and Hockey East Association. The rest of the berths will be awarded on an at-large basis to a member of each of the four automatic-qualifying conferences. If an independent is under consideration, one of the at-large berths allocated to the conferences will be used.

Western Michigan has developed into one of the nation's best all-around teams behind the play of senior line-man Dan Dorion, who led the nation in scoring with 37 goals and 91 points and is a top contender for the Hobey Baker Award. Linemate Troy Thurn, who had 64 points, 28 from goals, also is a scoring threat.

The Broncos' defense, anchored by senior Wayne Gagne, has gotten a lift from the good play of freshman goaltender Bill Hogan.

Fifth-ranked Michigan State was awarded the CCHA at-large berth after compiling a 23-7-2 record to make the tournament field for the fifth consecutive year. The Spartans have one of the nation's top scorers in Mike Donnelly.

The remainder of the championship field was to be determined in a telephone conference call March 16.

Fourth-ranked Harvard was in line for a berth from the Eastern College Athletic Conference. After being upset by Vermont in early January, the Crimson reeled off nine consecutive league victories, topped by an 11-0 blitz of defending champion Rensselaer. Despite the loss of defenseman Chris Biotti to a knee injury, Harvard has few weaknesses in its lineup.

Kenyon seeking seventh in a row

Jim Born again will lead a strong Kenyon team in the race for the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships title. Competition is scheduled March 20-22 at C. T. Branin Natatorium in Canton, Ohio.

The Lords have won the Division III championships the past six years, and much of the recent credit belongs to all-America Born, probably the most talented swimmer in the 11-year history of the Division III competition.

Born, now a senior, is the record-holder in the 50-yard freestyle (19.97), 100-yard freestyle (43.65) and 100-yard butterfly (49.57), and he is a member of three Kenyon record-setting relay teams. His season bests this year are 20.18 in the 50-yard freestyle, 43.48 in the 100-yard freestyle, 1:40.19 in the 200-yard freestyle and 50.41 in the 100-yard butterfly.

Other top qualifiers for Kenyon are defending 500-yard freestyle champion Dennis Mulvihill (4:44.19); David Greenlee in the 50-yard freestyle (21.05), 100-yard freestyle (45.82) and 100-yard backstroke (1:01.15); Alan Schmidt in the 100-yard freestyle (46.44), 200-yard freestyle (1:42.52), 100-yard backstroke (53.60) and 200-yard backstroke (1:55.42); David Wal-tuch in the 100-yard butterfly (50.13) and 200-yard butterfly (1:53.78), and Craig Hummer in the 200-yard individual medley (1:54.39) and 400-yard individual medley (4:01.90).

Jim Born

Kenyon relays should be strong. Best times include a 3:01.71 in the 400-yard freestyle, 6:52.01 in the 800-yard freestyle and 3:34.07 in the 400-yard medley.

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, the second-place finisher the past three years, and UC San Diego, third in the 1985, could challenge Kenyon for top honors.

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps features a veteran lineup, along with a solid freshman class. NCAA champions Tom Harrison (200- and 400-yard individual medley) and Nick Bagate-los (200-yard breaststroke) head a lineup that includes seven all-Americans. Harrison has qualified in the 200-yard freestyle (1:43.67), 500-yard freestyle (4:42.82), 200-yard butterfly (1:55.17), 200-yard individual medley (1:56.56) and 400-yard individual medley (4:06.80). Bagatelos has season's bests of 1:00.72 in the 100-yard breaststroke and 2:13.04 in the 200-yard breaststroke.

UC San Diego boasts its strongest team ever. The Tritons return national champions Bill Kazmierowicz in the 100-yard backstroke, Roger Brisbane in the 200-yard butterfly, and Jeff Stabile in one- and three-meter diving. In addition, Kazmierowicz was the 1984 champion in the 200- and 500-yard freestyles.

Kazmierowicz has qualifying marks of 21.22 in the 50-yard freestyle, 46.16 in the 100-yard freestyle, 1:41.57 in the 200-yard freestyle, 4:41.36 in the 500-yard freestyle, 16:12.62 in the 1,650-yard freestyle, 53.32 in the 100-yard backstroke, 1:59.90 in the 200-yard backstroke and 1:54.67 in the 200-yard individual medley.

St. Olaf's Bob Hauck returns to defend his 200-yard backstroke title and has earned season's bests of 52.91 in the 100-yard backstroke and a 1:54.06 in the 200-yard backstroke.

Wheaton (Illinois), led by Steve King in the butterflies (50.94 in 100 and 1:53.13 in 200), should finish in the top five.

1985 fencing runners-up ready to move into top spots

Notre Dame men have good balance

After second-place finishes in two of the past three NCAA Men's Fencing Championships, including a one-point loss last year to Wayne State (Michigan), Notre Dame appears to have a team that will not be foiled again. The championships will be held at Princeton March 18-19.

The Fighting Irish, team champions in 1977 and 1978, will rely on their foil strength to dethrone four-time defending champion Wayne State, winner of seven of the past 11 team titles.

Barakett and Allen Bourbeau also have contributed to Harvard's offensive effort to take some of the pressure off Fusco.

Other ECAC contenders for a berth include eighth-ranked Yale (19-7-0) and ninth-ranked Cornell (16-6-3).

Top-ranked Minnesota (32-10-0) and third-ranked Denver (31-10-1) were the front-runners for berths in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. Minnesota features one of the nation's best goaltenders in John Blue, who posted the WCHA's lowest goals-against average (3.08) for the second straight year. Denver has a powerful offense led by Dallas Guame, the league's leading scorer with 73 points. Tenth-ranked Wisconsin (27-15-0), after bouncing back from early-season injuries, also will be under consideration for a berth.

Second-ranked Boston College (25-10-3) and sixth-ranked Boston U. (23-12-4) were top contenders for berths in the Hockey East Association.

in all three events—foil, sabre and epee—has exceptional strength in the foil, led by Yehuda Kovacs and Mike Van der Velden, who teamed up to win the men's team foil title at the United States Fencing Association Collegiate Open in January. Van der Velden placed eighth at last year's championships.

The Fighting Irish also are strong in sabre behind seniors John Edwards and Don Johnson, who finished fifth and ninth in last year's championships. Christian Scherpe is the team's top epee competitor.

Wayne State, third on the all-time team championships list with seven, will counter with defending national foil champion Stephan Chauvel and Giovanni Girotto, fourth in sabre two years ago and 12th last season.

Columbia has not won the title since 1971, but the Lions have the talent to compete with Wayne State and Notre Dame. Columbia has plenty of experience and has gotten a lift from freshman Ivan Fernandez Madrid, who was fifth in foil in the national junior championship.

Pennsylvania, the last team besides Wayne State to win the national title, also will be a strong contender, led by Doug Powell, who finished sixth in sabre.

Other top teams include 1984 runner-up Penn State, North Carolina, Stanford, Illinois, Yale and Long Beach State.

Individually, New York University's Michael Lofton, a member of the last Olympic team and two-time defending sabre champion, will be the fencer to watch. Lofton, a junior, is on course to become the first four-time winner in the history of the championships.

Penn women showing improvement

Pennsylvania fencing coach Dave Micahnik knows something that his women's team does not.

Micahnik, who guided Pennsylvania's men's team to the 1981 NCAA fencing team title, knows how it feels to be a part of a national championship squad. This year's women's team members may find out for themselves at the March 20-22 NCAA National Collegiate Women's Fencing Championships, hosted by Providence.

Micahnik has built Pennsylvania, runner-up to Yale at last year's championships, into a formidable team. Mary Jane O'Neil, 1984 champion and runner-up last year, is one of the nation's top women fencers. The Quakers also have one of the sport's up-and-coming stars in sophomore Gail Rossman, who finished 14th at last year's championships.

Temple got its first taste of championships competition last season and will be back for seconds under coach Nikki Franke, who guided the Owls to third place. Rachel Hayes and Mindy Wichick, who finished 15th and 19th at last year's championships, should have Temple in contention for the team title.

Despite the departure of all-Americans Andrea Metkus and Beth Hull from two-time defending champion Yale, coach Henry Harutunian has put together another strong team. Yale will need a stellar performance from team captain Susan Kembell-Cook if a third consecutive title is in store.

Penn State, the 1983 NCAA champion and fifth last year, has rebuilt under coach Emmanuil Kaidanov and could be the dark horse of the championships. Other contenders include Wayne State (Michigan) and Stanford.

Columbia-Barnard may lack the depth to contend for the team title, but the Lions feature one of the top individuals in Caitlin Bilodeaux, the 1985 NCAA champion and a member of the World University Games team.

Four conferences recommended as automatic qualifiers

Four conferences have been recommended for automatic qualification to the 1986 championship by the Division II Women's Volleyball Committee.

The recommendation, which will require approval by the Executive Committee, gives the winners of the California Collegiate Athletic Association, Continental Divide Conference, North Central Intercollegiate Conference and Sunshine State Conference automatic qualification to the tournament, proposed for December 12-13 at California State University, Sacramento.

In other action, the committee voted that the regional pairings in the championship be Northwest vs. North Central, Southwest vs. South Central, Great Lakes vs. North Central and Atlantic vs. South.

The committee also will recommend that beginning in 1988, all regular-season matches must be best-three-of-five games in order to count for championship selection and national-poll purposes.

The committee discussed the fact that several Division II volleyball institutions would return to Division I in 1986 but decided not to realign any regions at this time.

CoSIDA selects men's academic all-star teams

Villanova guard Harold Jensen, who was instrumental in the Wildcats' upset victory over Georgetown for the 1985 Division I men's basketball title, heads the list of selections to the 1986 College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) men's academic all-America team.

Also on the university-division team is Montana's Larry Krystkowiak, one of the top scorers and rebounders in Division I this season. Selected annually, the CoSIDA team honors outstanding college athletes who also excel in the classroom. This group and the women's academic all-America team, which was announced in the March 5 issue of The NCAA News, are two of several academic squads selected in voting by CoSIDA members each year.

Following is a complete list of the 1986 men's academic all-America basketball teams:

UNIVERSITY DIVISION

First team

Guards—Steve Hale, North Carolina, 3.240 grade-point average in biology; Harold Jensen, Villanova, 3.380 in finance. Forwards—Steve Frick, George Washington, 3.400 in premedicine; Larry Krystkowiak, Montana, 3.510 in business; Jim Turner, Brown, 3.670 in economics.

Second team

Guards—Robert Borchardt, Toledo, 3.710 in marketing-business administration; Joccy David, Pittsburgh, 3.410 in neuroscience-premedicine. Forwards—Keith Balderston, Oregon, 3.760 in biology; Dave Butler, California, 3.480 in business administration; Shon Morris, Northwestern, 3.420 in communications.

Honorable mention

Guards—Billy Myers, Radford, 3.300 in math; Novian Whitsitt, Stanford, 3.270 in international relations; Scott Zanon, Montana, 3.230 in business management. Forwards—John Davis, Richmond, 3.700 in math-computer science; Tobin Doda, Texas Tech, 3.660 in premedicine; Ted Mimmiltz, St. Louis, 3.890 in premedicine; Mark Plansky, Villanova, 3.210 in electrical engineering; Rod Ripley, Wisconsin, 3.490 in accounting; Richard Rogers, Western Carolina, 3.660 in predentistry; Christopher Rutledge, Prairie View A&M, 3.700 in electrical engineering; Tim Legler, La Salle, 3.340 in business administration.

Effort to approve professionals for Olympics stalled

The Soviet-led Communist bloc has succeeded in delaying the entry of professional athletes into the Olympic Games, although the International Olympic Committee supports the change.

However, pros probably will be welcomed later this year, in time for the 1988 Olympics.

Primo Nebiolo, president of the Association of Summer Olympic International Federations, said March 6 at the conclusion of a two-day meeting involving 23 Olympic federations that the Communist opposition had been expected.

"The ASOIF and the International Olympic Committee are working on a common formula for the eligibility of competitors in the games," he said. "We had prepared two drafts, which differed by just one paragraph; and in our talks here, we have virtually come up with a common stand."

"The opposition of the countries from a certain political area has led to a postponement of any announcement in this direction, but we will come up with a final, common draft at a meeting in Seoul in September." The 1988 summer games are scheduled for the South Korean capital.

COLLEGE DIVISION

First team

Guards—Donald Harnum, Susquehanna, 3.860 in history; Paul Westling, Hamline, 3.980 in biology-chemistry-premedicine. Forwards—Kenneth Collins, Harding, 3.470 in premedicine; Richard Condo, Point Park, 3.930 in accounting-computer science; Kevin Cook, Nebraska Wesleyan, 3.840 in business administration.

Second team

Guards—Thomas Allardyce, Wilkes, 3.850 in electrical engineering; Tom Clark, Mount Vernon Nazarene, 4.000 in math-computer science. Forwards—David Moellenhoff, Missouri-Rolla, 3.910 in electrical engineering; Tony Torchia, Washington and Jefferson, 3.500 in accounting-liberal studies; Kevin Warren, Grand Canyon, 3.380 in business administration.

Honorable mention

Guards—Kenneth Stephenson, Lubbock Christian, 4.000 in biology-premedicine; Craig Stromgren, Emporia State, 3.320 in biology-premedicine; Matt Weber, St. Joseph's (Indiana), 3.630 in marketing. Forwards—

Andy Arians, St. Norbert, 3.750 in business administration; Derek Dominici, Hobart, 3.450 in economics; James Hursey, Western Maryland, 3.410 in business-economics; Bob Koticki, Wisconsin-River Falls, 3.750 in business administration; Larry Lessen, Illinois Wesleyan, 3.440 in accounting-liberal studies; Jay Vanevenhoven, St. Thomas (Minnesota), 3.700 in marketing; Mark Vest, Wright State, 3.210 in accounting-business administration; Tyler Zachem, Rochester, 3.510 in political science-economics.

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 11

Basketball recruiting calendar—championships

Division I member institutions sponsoring men's and women's basketball and Division II members sponsoring men's basketball are reminded that Bylaws 1-2-(a)-(i) and (ii) prohibit any on- or off-campus, in-person contacts in connection with the recruitment of prospective student-athletes by an institutional staff member or representative of an institution's athletics interests during the periods of the respective Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships. This legislation also precludes the provision of expense-paid visits or any other visits by prospective student-athletes to the institution's campus during that time. Based on the dates of the 1986 Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships games, this legislation would apply from midnight March 26 until noon April 1 for the men's programs and from midnight March 25 until noon March 31 for women's programs.

Amateur status determination

Member institutions are reminded that an individual must meet NCAA standards of amateurism set forth in Constitution 3-1 to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics competition at an NCAA member institution. It should not be assumed that an individual considered an amateur by a sport's national governing body, or, in the case of a foreign athlete, by the amateur rules for the athlete's country, is automatically eligible under NCAA legislation. Therefore, member institutions should continue to emphasize to their student-athletes and coaches that there are differences in various organizations' amateur regulations and that care must be exercised to insure that the individual is and will remain eligible under NCAA amateur regulations.

Participation for improper expenses

As set forth in Case No. 10 (page 260, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), an individual who participates in competition (e.g., tennis, golf, track and field) for which the amount of expenses received is based upon the place finish achieved would jeopardize eligibility for intercollegiate athletics competition. Receipt of such expenses would be considered taking pay for participation in that sport and would be contrary to the Association's permissible expense legislation as set forth in Constitution 3-1-(a)-(1) and 3-1-(h)-(1). For example, this case is applicable to satellite tennis tournaments both in the U.S. and abroad, which base reimbursement of expenses on place finish achieved in the tournament.

Nominating Committee

One-year terms; limit of three in a five-year period. Sixteen members, at least one from each district. Four members must be Council members whose terms do not expire in January 1987 (two from Division I and one each from Divisions II and III). Members are listed below by division and region:

Division I—Eight members, including at least two women; must be two members from each Division I Council representation region. Eligible for reappointment only if selected as one of the Council representatives: Jack V. Doland, McNeese State University (I-4). Eligible for reappointment if all bylaw requirements are met: Edward Leland, Dartmouth College (I-1); Nelson E. Townsend, Delaware State College (I-1); Francis W. Bonner, Furman University (I-2); Edward J. Manetta, DePaul University (I-3); Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference (I-4). Not eligible for reappointment: Joan C. Cronan, University of Tennessee, Knoxville (I-2), and June B. Davis, no longer at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln (I-3).

Division II—Four members including at least one woman; one from each Division II Council representation region. Eligible for reappointment if selected as one of the Council representatives: Sandra T. Shuler, North Carolina Central University (II-2). Eligible for reappointment if all bylaw requirements are met: Edward P. Markey, St. Michael's College (II-1). Not eligible for reappointment: Robert J. Hiebert, California State University, Northridge (II-4), and James R. Spalding, Bellarmine College (II-3).

Division III—Four members including at least one woman; one from each Division III Council representation region. Eligible for reappointment if selected as Council representative: Russell J. Poel, North Central College (III-4). Eligible for reappointment if all bylaw requirements are met: Patricia A. Rogers, State University of New York, Albany (III-2), and Milton E. Reece, Greensboro College (III-3). Not eligible for reappointment: Charles Luce, Connecticut College (III-1).

Kentucky's

Among teams with at least 10 tournament victories, UCLA has the highest winning percentage at .775 (again, not counting 5-1 in 1980, the Bruins are 55-16). Indiana is next at .756 on 31-10—21-7 of that under Knight. Indiana also ranks third in championships with four, and its 31 victories ranks fourth behind North Carolina's 38. Next in tournament wins are Louisville 27, Houston 26, Villanova 26, Marquette 25, Kansas 24, Ohio State 24, Kansas State 23 and Notre Dame 22.

Women's 'Who's Who'

With the field expanded to 40 teams for the fifth annual Division I Women's Basketball Championship, it looks more than ever like a Who's Who of women's basketball coaching.

Nearly all the final four coaches from the first four tournaments are on hand. Eight coaches are in the tournament for a fifth straight season—Penn State's Rene Portland, North Carolina State's Kay Yow, Mississippi's Van Chancellor, Missouri's Joann Rutherford, Georgia's Andy Landers, Tennessee's Pat Head Summitt, Southern California's Linda Sharp and Long Beach State's Joan Bonvicini (in no particular order—just going down the brackets; two five-timers are in each regional).

Six more are in the NCAA for the fourth time in five years, headed by Texas's 422-game winner Jody Conradt and including Auburn's Joe Ciampi, Maryland's Chris Weller, Middle Tennessee State's Larry Inman, Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore and North Carolina's Jennifer Alley. Louisiana Tech has made the tournament all five years, with Barmore either co-head coach or head coach the last four (after assisting Sonja Hogg).

And we have not even mentioned Iowa's Vivian Stringer, a 310-game winner who coached a second-place team at Cheyney in 1982, and Louisiana State's Sue Gunter, a 354-game winner. In all, no fewer than 25 of the tournament coaches have won at least 70 percent over their career, including four above 80 percent (Barmore .898, Bonvicini .825, Stringer .805 and first-year coach Bob Foley of Providence .828). All but two of the rest have won at least 60 percent.

Dallas trying to dispel 'J. R.' image

By Roger Campbell

Dallas Mayor Starke Taylor says he wants people to know his city is more than J. R. Ewings in cowboy boots and hats.

That's why Taylor is happy that Dallas is "successfully" preparing and bracing itself for the NCAA Final Four basketball tournament March 29-31 at Reunion Arena.

"I travel a lot, and when people think about Dallas, they think about the television show," Taylor said. "The show has created an image that isn't true. When they think of Texas, they think of Western. I think Dallas is more sophisticated than that."

A lot of the projected image in part depends on the Dallas Final Four committee that has a little more than two weeks left to prepare a three-day event for an estimated 20,000 visitors.

"People know about our (NFL) Cowboys and hopefully our (NBA) Mavericks," said Taylor. "People who come to the Final Four from across the country, maybe around the world, should consider that Dallas is a great basketball town, a great sports town."

The city played host to the NCAA regional tournament last year and the NBA All-Star game February 8-9.

The all-star game generated $2.7 million for the local economy, and the Southwest Athletic Conference tournament added $3.5 million March 7-9, said Forrest Smith, president of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

The estimated $7.5 million out-of-town guests are expected to spend for the Final Four is not as important as what they see during their stay in the third busiest convention city, city officials said.

Final Four committee members say the preparations haven't been easy.

Badgers may get to practice inside

The University of Wisconsin Board of Regents gave the go-ahead March 7 for construction of an indoor athletics practice facility to be located near Camp Randall Stadium in Madison.

The $9.5 million facility, which still requires state approval, would be financed entirely with donations.

Athletics director Elroy Hirsch has long sought an indoor practice field for the football team, saying the lack of such a facility makes Wisconsin less attractive to recruits than other Big Ten Conference schools.

Hirsch announced last month that the athletics department had scrapped plans for an inflatable bubble that would have been erected over the stadium field in the winter and during inclement weather, the Associated Press reported.

"Here's warning to all thinking of bidding for the tournament. You'd better be a big boy, a slugger when you belly up to this bar," said Jack Beckman, Reunion Arena manager and committee leader.

"Just don't go in thinking you're bidding for a rock 'n' roll show. It's totally absorbing. The fun-to-work ratio isn't there," he said.

The committee will have spent more than $650,000 preparing private events geared mostly toward NCAA officials, National Association of Basketball Coaches conventioners, VIPs and members of the media.

In Dallas, private parties for an estimated 120 VIPs will begin as early as March 26. A hospitality group supervised by the Final Four committee will give penlights, visors and other gifts donated by local corporations.

The committee expects to receive most of its revenue from 100 packets of tickets to the regional and final games. The packets cost $5,000 and contain six prime-seating tickets. Forty packets still are being offered for $4,000 apiece, executive committee director Rick Baker said.

The $46 tickets—divided between the Final Four schools, NABC and NCAA—are sold out for the 19,000-seat Reunion Arena that has been reduced to 16,500 to facilitate the news media.

"We should be well into the black, because the NCAA allows it," said Beckman. "You can't compromise on this event. You can't be embarrassed."

Georgia opens financial records

The private corporation that runs the University of Georgia's sports programs decided March 10 to open the financial records it has kept secret since it was chartered by the state legislature 37 years ago.

The board of directors of the University of Georgia Athletic Association Inc. agreed to open for inspection "all of the records of the association," with two major areas of exception, said an announcement from Georgia President Fred C. Davison, chair of the athletics board.

Remaining secret will be details of Georgia's current recruiting efforts—so as not to give other schools an unfair advantage over the Bulldogs—and personnel matters such as some employment contracts and employee evaluations.

The decision came three days after a reporter for the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution was given access to some of the records, the Associated Press reported. The Macon Telegraph and News has sued in the state courts to gain access to the records, contending that the association, because of its close connections with the university itself, should not have the right to shield its financial workings.

A lower court ruled against the newspaper, but the paper has appealed to the Georgia Supreme Court.

Campbell joins publishing staff

Richard M. Campbell has joined the NCAA national office staff as a publications editor.

A 1970 graduate of Texas A&M University, Campbell received a master's degree from East Texas State University in 1977.

He joins the publishing department after serving more than six years as sports information director at Sam Houston State University. Prior to that, he held a similar position at East Texas State University. He also was a sports writer for the Beaumont (Texas) Enterprise-Journal for three years.

Most improved

Of 16 Division I women's teams up more than seven games over 1985, only three are in the NCAA tournament, but two of them are tied for the national lead, each up 14½ games over 1985. They are 20-9 North Texas State (vs. 4-22 in 1985, the second season under Judy Nelson-Buckles), and 26-2 Ohio (vs. 11-16 in 1985, the first season under Amy Prichard; 15 more victories and 14 fewer losses is 29, then divide by two).

Colorado, up 14 games (21-9 vs. 6-22 a year ago), still is in the title picture. Next are 19-9 Arizona, up 12; 19-7 Harvard, up 11; 16-12 Tulane, up 10; 24-5 Providence, the third NCAA tourney team, up 9½ along with 12-15 Hofstra, and three teams up nine games—10-8 Davidson, 23-7 U.S. International and 17-11 Oral Roberts.

Ohio's comeback under Prichard was led by Caroline Mast, one of a handful of 1986 seniors who have exceeded 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds over their careers. North Texas State added two important new players this season—Clara Campbell and Joy Roberts, who were high school teammates in Dallas, then went to separate junior colleges in Texas.

Others up more than seven games are 17-11 Delaware State, up 8½; 16-14 Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck and 15-13 Manhattan, both up eight, and 20-7 American and 17-8 Nevada-Reno, both up 7½.

Ohio is hosting a first-round NCAA game, and sports information director Frank Morgan reports that the crowd could reach 5,000. "Tickets are going like crazy," he said. "And remember, we also are hosting a first-round men's NIT game two days later. That's not bad for a small town." It will be interesting to see whether the expanded field results in another increase in tournament attendance. The 1985 tournament drew 96,354 spectators for 26 sessions, an average of 3,706, or almost eight percent above 1984.

Six men selected for induction into Basketball Hall of Fame

Former Ohio State basketball coach Fred Taylor and Stan Watts, who coached at Brigham Young for 23 seasons, are among six men who have been selected for induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Also named to the hall were Billy Cunningham, an all-America at North Carolina who played and coached in the National Basketball Association; Tom Heinsohn, an all-America at Holy Cross, coach and player in the NBA, and now an NBA commentator for CBS Sports; Red Holzman, an all-America at CCNY who played and coached in the NBA and served as general manager of the New York Knicks, and Sigmund "Red" Mihalik, a long-time basketball official on the high school and college levels.

The group will be enshrined May 6, when the ceremonies will be combined with the annual enshrinement dinner for the first time. The event will be held at the Springfield (Massachusetts) Civic Center, which is near the hall of fame.

Following is a brief sketch of each honoree:

Taylor—A former president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, Taylor is a 1950 graduate of Ohio State, where he served as head coach for 18 seasons. His teams won seven Big Ten Conference titles and made four trips to the Division I

Oklahoma limits TV appearances by football team

No more than six University of Oklahoma football games will be televised during each of the 1986 and 1987 seasons, according to a decision by the school's board of regents.

The regents voted to limit the number of the Sooners' live television appearances to five each year, with the stipulation that a sixth game might be telecast each year if it was a road game of special state interest and subject to the approval of the regents, the Associated Press reported.

Concerned with overexposure on television and the resulting impact on the radio broadcasts of Oklahoma games, the regents unanimously approved the television cap, which is similar to one approved by Nebraska last fall.

Noting that 15 regular-season Oklahoma games had been televised in the past two seasons, school officials said concern had arisen over impact on season-ticket sales and donors programs, which provide 70 percent of the total revenue of the athletics department.

Officials of the Sooner radio network, which pays the school about $500,000 a year for radio rights, told the regents last month that their advertising revenue last year had dropped 38 percent, much of which they attributed to Oklahoma's frequent appearances on television.

Correction noted in softball rules

A report on women's softball rules changes that appeared in the February 26 edition of The NCAA News incorrectly reprinted an alteration to Appendix K of the 1986 softball championships handbook.

Based on the previously reported changes, defensive situation No. 5 on page 53 of the handbook has been changed to read as follows:

"A starting player who has played defense but not batted and has been removed from defense may reenter the game on defense once. Substitutes may not reenter, whether on offense or defense."

Questions concerning this or any of the rules changes should be directed to NCAA Women's Softball Committee member June Walker at Trenton State College.

Final Four. The 1960 squad won the national championship. Twice named coach of the year by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association and United Press International, the native of Zanesville, Ohio, played professional baseball with the Washington Senators prior to taking the Buckeye job in 1959. Taylor coached hall-of-famers Jerry Lucas and John Havlicek.

Watts—A native of Murray, Utah, and currently residing in Provo, Watts retired as supervisor of officials for the Western Athletic Conference in 1978. A graduate of both Weber Junior College and Brigham Young, he coached the Cougars from 1950 to 1972. During that time, Brigham Young won eight conference titles and captured the 1951 and 1966 championships of the National Invitation Tournament.

Cunningham—After twice earning all-America honors under Dean Smith at North Carolina, Cunningham played professional basketball for 11 seasons—nine of them with the Philadelphia 76ers. The Brooklyn, New York, native was named to the NBA's all-rookie team and became a four-time all-star selection. Later, in eight seasons as the 76ers' head coach, Cunningham won 69 percent of his regular-season games and led the team to the 1983 world championship.

Heinsohn—As a two-time all-America player at Holy Cross, Heinsohn led the Crusaders to three straight postseason appearances—they won the 1954 NIT, returned to that tournament in 1956 and played in the NCAA tournament in 1956. Like Cunningham, Heinsohn, a Union City, New Jersey, native, was a four-time NBA all-star during a career with the Boston Celtics that included eight NBA championships (seven straight). In nine seasons as the Celtics' head coach, Heinsohn produced an overall record of 474-96 and two world championships. He was named coach of the year in 1973.

Holzman—After earning all-America twice at CCNY, Holzman played pro ball and later coached in the NBA for 18 seasons—14 with the New York Knicks. His 1970 and 1973 teams, which featured Willis Reed and Walt Frazier, won NBA titles. The Brooklyn native earned NBA coach of the year honors in 1970 and has been elected to the Madison Square Garden Hall of Fame.

Mihalik—Named in 1951 by Dell Publications as "best referee in the United States," this resident of Ford City, Pennsylvania, began officiating high school games in his home state. He later moved to the collegiate level in the Eastern College Athletic Conference, as well as the Atlantic Coast and Big Ten Conferences. He officiated in six NCAA Division I championship games and two Olympics (1964 Tokyo and 1968 Mexico City). Mihalik also officiated in the NIT and in Amateur Athletic Union and National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics competition.

National Football Foundation Hall of Fame names honorees

Eleven former all-America football players will be inducted into the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame at the 29th annual awards dinner December 9 in New York.

Three deceased players, including two men who died in the service during World War II, will be honored.

Former collegiate standouts selected are Vince Banonis, Detroit center, 1939-41; Ron Beagle, Navy end, 1953-55; John Brodie, Stanford quarterback, 1954-56; Al DeRogatis, Duke tackle, 1945-48; Mike Ditka, Pittsburgh end, 1957-60; Archie Griffin, Ohio State halfback, 1972-75; Emil Holub, Texas Tech center, 1957-60; Richie Lucas, Penn State quarterback, 1957-59; Jack Pardee, Texas A&M linebacker, 1954-56; Mel Renfro, Oregon halfback, 1961-63, and Steve Spurrier, Florida quarterback, 1964-66.

The deceased honorees are Al Blozis, Georgetown tackle, 1939-41; Paul Governali, Columbia quarterback, 1940-42, and Walter Young, Oklahoma end, 1936-38.

Banonis, a 6-1, 206-pounder, was a standout for three years for Coach Gus Dorais' Titans. He also played with the Chicago Cardinals and Detroit Lions.

Beagle, a Maxwell Trophy winner,

McClendon, Edwards to be honored

Charley McClendon, former Louisiana State University head football coach, and Bill Edwards, former Wittenberg, Case Western and Vanderbilt head coach, have been named to the National Football Foundation's College Hall of Fame.

McClendon's college coach, the legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant, was named as a 1986 inductee in the deceased-coach category. Bryant died in 1983 after posting a 326-106-9 record in 38 years as a collegiate head coach.

McClendon

McClendon's Bengal Tigers won 139 games, lost 59 and tied seven, for a winning percentage of .692. He led LSU to more victories and more bowl games (13) and produced more all-Americans (17) and more all-Southeastern Conference selections than any coach in Tiger history.

Twice elected national coach of the year, McClendon played for Bryant at Kentucky. He also was an assistant coach at Vanderbilt, came to LSU in 1953 and coached through the 1979 season.

Edwards, a 1931 graduate of Wittenberg, became a coaching legend at his alma mater, posting a 98-20-4 record, including three unbeaten teams. Edwards was an all-Ohio center for four years at Wittenberg under Ernie Godfrey and Bill Stobbs.

He was named to Walter Eckersall's all-America team in 1929. His career spanned 51 seasons as a player, coach and administrator. His overall coaching record at Wittenberg, Vanderbilt, Case Western and with the Detroit Lions was 167-45-8.

Jack L. Sprenger, supervisor of officials for the Pacific-10 Conference for 14 years and a football official for more than 40 years, is the third official selected to the Hall of Fame. He joins John Waldorf of the Big Eight Conference and Ellwood Geiges of the Eastern College Athletic Conference as members.

was Navy's 6-0, 186-pound end, who helped Coach Eddie Erdelatz's Midshipmen batter favored Mississippi in the 1955 Sugar Bowl.

Brodie, Stanford's 6-1, 190-pound quarterback, was a consensus all-America selection in 1956. He set all-time passing, total-offense and career-completion records for Coach Chuck Taylor. He played professional football for 17 years.

DeRogatis, Duke's 6-3, 220-pound tackle, played for Hall of Famer Wallace Wade for three seasons. He played professional football for the New York Giants, twice winning all-pro honors.

Ditka, who just coached the Chicago Bears to the 1986 Super Bowl victory over the New England Patriots, was a 6-3, 220-pound end for John Michelosen's Pittsburgh Panthers and won unanimous all-America acclaim. He was a first-round draft choice of the Chicago Bears and helped lead the Bears to the NFL title in 1963.

Griffin, Ohio State's 5-8, 185-pound back, was coached by Hall of Famer Woody Hayes. He rushed for more than 100 yards in 31 straight games. Griffin returned to his alma mater as an assistant director of development after eight seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals. A three-time all-America, he is the only two-time winner of the Heisman Trophy.

The 6-4, 220-pound E. J. Holub was regarded as one of college football's all-time great linebackers while playing for Dewitt Weaver's Red Raiders. Holub was a two-time all-America selection and his jersey is the only one that has been retired at Texas Tech. He later was a standout for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Lucas, Penn State's daring quarterback, was a three-year starter for Coach Rip Engle, directing the team to a 28-8-1 record. He led Penn State to a 7-0 victory over Alabama in the first Liberty Bowl game. He is an assistant athletics director at Penn State.

Pardee, coached by Bryant at Texas A&M, was a 6-3, 225-pound fullback who helped restore the Aggies to championship caliber. Pardee is the head coach of the USFL's Houston Gamblers and is a former all-pro linebacker.

Renfro, Len Casanova's 6-0, 195-pound all-America back at Oregon, also was an NCAA track all-America in the hurdles and long jump. He played professionally for the Dallas Cowboys for 14 years and last year served as an assistant coach with the USFL's Los Angeles Express.

Spurrier, 6-2, 204 pounds, was a three-year starter for Ray Graves' Florida Gators and won the Heisman Trophy as a senior in 1966. He also played with the San Francisco 49ers for 10 seasons and coached at Florida, Georgia Tech and Duke. He is the head coach for the Tampa Bay Bandits of the USFL.

Blozis, a 6-6, 245-pound tackle, played on Georgetown's unbeaten 1939 team and in the 1941 Orange Bowl for Coach Jack Hagerty's Hoyas. He was commissioned a second lieutenant at Fort Benning, Georgia, and was sent to France, where two weeks later he was killed. He was awarded the Bronze Star.

Governali, Lou Little's all-America quarterback in 1942, won the Maxwell Trophy and was runner-up in the Heisman Trophy voting to Frank Sinkwich of Georgia. He also was one of Columbia's all-time great baseball players. Before his death in 1978, he was a professor of physical education at San Diego State University.

Young, an all-America end at Oklahoma in 1939, was coached by Col. Lawrence "Biff" Jones during his sophomore year and then by Tom Stidham as a member of the Sooners' Orange Bowl champions. He played for Coach Jock Sutherland's Brooklyn Dodgers for two years and then joined the U.S. Air Force. After completing bombing missions over Europe, he was killed in a raid over Tokyo.

DEATHS

Trinity (Texas) associate athletics director and head men's basketball coach PETE MURPHY died February 27 at age 60. He had a 145-154 record in 13 seasons. A native of New Albany, Indiana, Murphy was an outstanding guard at Trinity and Northern Arizona. He went on to a successful high school coaching career in Indiana before moving to Trinity. DONALD PHELPS, faculty athletics representative at Campbell, died February 22. Former Harvard hockey, football and basketball all-America GEORGE OWEN JR. died at age 84. After an outstanding college career, he spent six years in amateur hockey before joining the National Hockey League Boston Bruins in 1928 and leading the team to the 1928-29 Stanley Cup as a defenseman. He was elected team captain in 1931 and retired from the sport two years later. He was named to the hockey hall of fame in 1973 and to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1983. PAUL CASTNER, who was offered a Notre Dame football scholarship sight unseen by the legendary Knute Rockne and later founded the Irish ice hockey program, died March 3 at age 89. Known as a fine all-round athlete and a spectacular drop-kicker, he kicked, played running back and returned kickoffs at Notre Dame from 1920 to 1922. In 1921, he founded and became the first coach of the Notre Dame hockey team, and he also organized the first hockey conference in the Midwest. Also a three-year letterman in baseball, Castner pitched for the Chicago White Sox after graduation. Former Notre Dame all-America guard BERT METZGER, who played on the last Irish squad coached by Knute Rockne, died March 7 at age 77. He gained national attention as the 152-pound "watch-charm" guard and earned all-America honors for his play in 1930.

Analysts for ESPN college baseball hired

Joe Morgan and Jay Johnstone, a pair of former major-league players, have been hired by ESPN as analysts for the cable television network's college baseball coverage in 1986.

Morgan, who captured National League most-valuable-player awards in 1975 and 1976 while playing for the Cincinnati Reds, will serve as commentator for ESPN's Monday night games during the regular season, as well as for the College World Series. Morgan, who worked on NBC's pre-game programs during the 1985 season, will begin his new association March 24 with the telecast of the Florida at Oklahoma State game. He also will work the game between Seton Hall and Arizona March 31.

Johnstone, a colorful personality during his 20-year major-league career, will work with John Sanders in a March 17 telecast of the game between Maine and Miami (Florida) and another regular-season game to be determined at a later date.

WTBS plans to pick up Peach Bowl, declines Citrus, Gator

Atlanta-based WTBS reportedly has dropped efforts to land television contracts for the Gator and Florida Citrus college football bowl games.

Robert Wussler, WTBS executive vice-president, was quoted in the March 4 editions of USA Today as saying he wasn't interested in either of the Florida bowl games.

However, he said the network would try to get the contract for the Peach Bowl, which was dropped by CBS-TV.

George Olsen, executive director of the Gator Bowl Association, said he still is confident that the Jacksonville-based bowl can secure a contract with a major network despite the WTBS decision and a tough television marketplace for bowl games.

"We will try a major network first. I don't know what we'll be able to get.

Whatever we end up with, it will be the best we can get," said Olsen.

Earlier this year, ABC-TV said it was dropping the Gator Bowl from its

'Once the colleges got greedy with their new television plan, everything has gone downhill'—

Dick Bestwick, Peach Bowl executive director

spot in prime time. That decision gave the association the right to negotiate with other networks.

Officials at NBC-TV, however, said they already have the rights to three bowl games and are not interested in a fourth, and a CBS-TV spokesman said the network would be more interested in the Orlando-based Florida Citrus Bowl than the Gator Bowl.

Olsen said a return to ABC would be considered. He said RLR Associates in New York is negotiating the television rights for the Gator Bowl.

ABC reportedly paid $850,000 for the 1985 game, which might price it out of WTBS' league, Olsen said.

"Even at reasonable rights fees, (the Gator and Citrus bowls) would be too hard to sell. Let's face it, the sports department would kill for the Gator Bowl, but we know what's going on out there. We realize if we can't make money on it, we can't do it. Unless you can sell it, it just makes no sense" to carry a game, said John Vandegrift, WTBS sports programming coordinator.

"Anything that has less than a positive impact threatens the existence of our game," which was first played in 1967, said Dick Bestwick, executive director of the Peach Bowl. "It's a possibility we have to address."

Bestwick said he was not surprised by the notice from CBS because of recent decisions by the two other major networks, ABC and NBC. ABC has dropped the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Florida, and NBC did not exercise its option to carry Orlando's Citrus Bowl.

"Once the colleges got greedy with their new television plan, everything has gone downhill," Bestwick said. "The value of college football has diminished. When the Peach Bowl began in 1967, there were 10 bowl games; next year, there will be 19 or 20. The networks are beginning to take a hard look at the dollar value they receive from these games. Frankly, supply has exceeded demand."

"The competition for network money is tremendous," said Bestwick, "and they now are in the position of picking and choosing. Television is a business; and if they're not recovering their costs, they look elsewhere."

Championships Corner

Future championships

1. Dates and sites have been approved for the following future NCAA championships:

1987 Women's Golf Championships—May 27-30, Albuquerque, New Mexico, hosted by the University of New Mexico.

1988 Women's Golf Championships—May 25-28, Las Cruces, New Mexico, hosted by New Mexico State University.

1986 Division III Women's Volleyball Championship—To be conducted over two weeks, rather than three, November 14-16 (regionals) and November 21-22 (finals). The 1986 and future championships will use the following format: regionals—six teams competing at each of four regional sites; finals—four teams competing on the campus of one of the final-four institutions.

Modifications in field hockey rules sought

The NCAA Field Hockey Committee will recommend to the Executive Committee the adoption of four modifications to international rules for the 1986 season as a result of action taken during the committee's February 25-28 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Three of the recommended modifications are international (nonmandatory) experimental rules. The first would create an off-sides violation inside an offensive team's 25-yard line. The second would require all players to be at least five yards away from any player executing a free hit within the offensive team's 25-yard line. The third would call defensive players to remain at least five yards away from a ball being put into play from out of bounds.

A fourth modification that will be recommended concerns tie-breaking procedures. If approved by the Executive Committee, the rule would stipulate that teams involved in a non-tournament game that is tied at the end of regulation time would play up to two full 10-minute field-play periods. If the score still was tied at the end of these extra periods, the game would be reported a tie.

In any tournament in which a winner must be decided (e.g., conference championship, etc.), teams involved in a tie game would follow the procedure outlined above. If the game remained tied after two extra periods, play would continue by whatever tie-breaking methods the respective tournament committee(s) would deem appropriate for the situation.

The committee also discussed, but did not take action on, rules changes involving obstruction and the concept of stopping the game clock during the last 60 seconds of each half for a penalty corner.

In other action, the group will recommend a Division III regional realignment that would move the state of West Virginia from the South to the Great Lakes region, and the committee voted to recommend the following automatic qualifiers for 1986 NCAA championships: Division I—the Big Ten Conference champion; Division III—champions of the Middle Atlantic States and Pennsylvania State Athletic Conferences.

Another recommendation, if approved by the Executive Committee, stipulates that if all potential on-campus tournament sites are judged to be equal in terms of meeting existing criteria, the team that is seeded higher in the tournament bracket would be named host institution for a contest.

The committee also discussed the feasibility of an indoor playing season that would follow the conclusion of the traditional fall season. Institutions will be encouraged to propose appropriate enabling legislation to the 1987 NCAA Convention.

Linda E. Hopple, Franklin and Marshall College, was named chair of the Division III subcommittee at the meeting and will continue to serve as the full committee's rules-modification interpreter.
