Commission will begin third year with April 2-3 meeting

The NCAA Presidents Commission will begin its third year of operation with its annual spring meeting April 2-3 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare, Chicago.

Major topics on the agenda for the meeting will be those identified earlier by the Commission's executive committee as the group's primary areas of interest for 1986: financial issues, including financial aid for student-athletes; enforcement and compliance matters, including implementation of the proposals adopted at the special NCAA Convention in 1985, and academic integrity, including possible strengthening of the satisfactory-progress legislation.

Mankato State president named to Commission

Margaret R. Preska, president of Mankato State University, has been appointed to the NCAA Presidents Commission replacing Patsy Sampson, president of Stephens College, which has discontinued its NCAA membership.

Preska will represent Region 3 of Division II on the 44-member Commission.

She was appointed president of Mankato State in February 1979 after serving four years as vice-president for academic affairs and equal-opportunity officer at that institution.

Prior to that, she was on the staff at La Verne College in California from 1968 to 1975, serving as an instructor, assistant professor and associate professor of history and government and, from 1972 to 1975, as academic dean. Earlier in her career, she taught kindergarten and in high school.

A New York native, Preska received a bachelor's degree in speech, English and early-childhood education at Brockport State University College. She earned a master's degree at Pennsylvania State University and a Ph.D. at Claremont Graduate School and has done postdoctoral study at Manchester College of Oxford University.

She is a member of the board of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities; a member of the Interassociation Committee on Collegiate Athletics, and national president of Camp Fire Inc., among other national and state positions.

Margaret R. Preska

Those topics were determined by the Commission's executive committee—the four elected Commission officers—in a February 3 telephone conference and reported in the February 5 issue of The NCAA News.

The meeting will be the Commission's eighth since it was established by the annual NCAA Convention in January 1984.

The Chicago session will begin with a meeting of the executive committee at 12:30 p.m. April 2. The Divisions I, II and III subcommittees of the Commission will convene at 4 p.m. and meet until 7 p.m., including a separate caucus of the Division I-A subcommittee at approximately 6 p.m.

At 8 a.m. April 3, the full Commission will meet, adjourning at approximately 3 p.m. that day.

That meeting schedule is expanded slightly from the format used in the past two years. It provides additional meeting time both for the division subcommittees and for the full Commission.

In addition to the three major topics, all of the division subcommittees will consider the five-year eligibility proposal (Proposal No. 68) that was referred by the 1986 NCAA Convention and a review of issues related to "federation" within the NCAA, a report requested by the Commission's Division II subcommittee.

Other topics on the separate agendas for the division subcommittees:

Division I: Reporting and/or control of coaches' outside income, concerns regarding lower sports sponsorship requirements in Division I, structure of Division I-AAA.

Division I-A: Coaches' income issue, sports sponsorship topic, financial issues, means by which Commission should address concerns regarding length of playing seasons.

Division II: Possible academic requirements for initial eligibility in Division II.

Division III: Possible academic requirements for initial eligibility in Division III, possible limitations on playing and practice seasons in Division III, clarification of Division III financial aid criteria.

The Commission's new officers will be chairing their first meetings of the group: Chancellor John B. Slaughter, University of Maryland, College Park, executive committee and full Commission; Chancellor I. M. Heyman, University of California, Berkeley, Divisions I and I-A subcommittees; President James W. Cleary, California State University, Northridge, Division II subcommittee, and President James J. Whalen, Ithaca College, Division III subcommittee.

NCAA plans three Current Issues Forums

Senior administrators at NCAA member institutions will convene at three regional sites in May to discuss critical issues facing intercollegiate athletics, utilizing a format expanded from regional meetings conducted last year.

NCAA Current Issues Forums are scheduled May 12-13 in Atlanta, May 27-28 in Chicago and May 29-30 in Los Angeles. Each session is open to institutions' chief executive officers, directors of athletics, primary women athletics administrators, faculty athletics representatives and associate or assistant directors of athletics as designated by the institution.

Under the expanded format, NCAA administrators representing four departments at the national office are scheduled to present most of the information at each site concerning the Association's new compliance programs, championships concerns, block-grant funding, drug-testing procedures and antigambling efforts. Unlike last year's regional rules seminars, the legislative services staff not only will summarize current and new legislation but also will present for consideration several proposed revisions to current NCAA recruiting rules.

The expanded issues forums are an outgrowth of regional rules seminars conducted in April and May of 1985 to provide individuals responsible for the day-to-day application of NCAA rules at member institutions an opportunity to review NCAA interpretations and regulations, including new legislation. Only one rules seminar, scheduled April 29-30 in conjunction with the Eastern College Athletic Conference's spring meetings at Cape Cod, Massachusetts, will be conducted this year.

"These meetings will bring the major issues of the day before institutions' chief administrators in a setting less formal than that afforded at the January Convention," said John R. Davis, NCAA president. "The overwhelming success of legislation proposed by the NCAA Presidents Commission at the 1985 special Convention to promote integrity in intercollegiate athletics emphasized the necessity for primary athletics administrators to continue to be fully informed in order to confront and contend with the critical issues facing intercollegiate athletics. The issues forums are consistent with that approach."

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers has forwarded a memorandum to all NCAA member institutions and conferences urging attendance by primary athletics administrators. The Association's executive director will present opening remarks in Chicago. Davis will address those in attendance

LSU already has a first—of sorts

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

After all the upsets, the Final Four in the 48th annual National Collegiate Division I Basketball Championship boasts three teams with 101 victories between them, led by two No. 1 seeds, 36-2 Duke and 35-3 Kansas, plus 30-7 Louisville, No. 2 seed to St. John's (New York) in the West Regional.

The Cinderella team? None other than 26-11 Louisiana State, capping a wildly improbable season as the first No. 11 seed ever to reach the Final Four (which really goes back through 1980, since before then the field was not large enough for an 11th seed). LSU would be the first champion with 11 losses if it wins, but 11 losses by a Final Four team is not a record—both Bradley and Southern California had 12 losses entering the 1954 Final Four, and Baylor in 1950 and Virginia in 1984 each had 11 losses. Only Bradley, second to La Salle, reached the championship game.

The 127 total victories by the four teams is a record, breaking the 119 of last year. Duke has won 20 straight, Kansas 16 in a row and Louisville 19 of its last 20. Duke's 36 wins ties the all-time Division I record by Kentucky, back in 1948.

Crum's sixth Final Four

Louisville's Denny Crum is in his sixth Final Four. That ties him with Adolph Rupp of Kentucky for third on the all-time list, trailing only John Wooden's 12 at UCLA and Dean Smith's seven at North Carolina.

Kansas' Larry Brown, making his second trip, becomes the seventh coach in history to take two different colleges to the Final Four, having taken UCLA to second place in 1980.

Louisiana State's Dale Brown is making his second Final Four trip and Duke's Mike Krzyzewski his first.

First, let us get his name pronounced correctly. It is Sha-chef-ski. Next, let us get past that question about how he withstands all the pressure of a No. 1 national ranking.

"After being a plebe at West Point and playing point guard for Bobby Knight," he says with a smile, "how could this be pressure?" He was successful as a head coach at Army over

Olson gives players a vote in Arizona basketball recruiting

By Bob Hurt
The Arizona Republic

Arizona is picky about picking basketball recruits.

Current players are given a virtual veto power on incoming players and thus, to a large degree, select their own teammates.

First, however, some background:

It belabors the obvious to say Arizona coach Lute Olson did a heck of a job this past season. His basketball team was predicted to finish eighth by Pac-10 coaches. Understandable. Only one University of Arizona starter returned.

Yet, the Wildcats finished on top.

No mirrors. No magic potion. Nothing up the sleeves—except maybe that togetherness most good teams have.

Here, they talk of the "family" concept. Hokey? Possibly. Corny? Probably. But the players believe in it. That's important.

We come not to analyze the team chemistry but to study how it is achieved. Olson says it comes through selective recruiting.

"A kid has to fit into our program," he said. "We have no interest in a bad kid who happens to be a good basketball player."

Olson said he expected this team to finish in the middle of the Pac. Certain inconsistencies had to be expected, he said. The forwards had exceptional talent but they were rookies. The center was 6-foot-6 and played only 138 minutes the previous season. The point guard had not been a point guard until a summer tour of Europe.

Yet, Olson found the team guilty of consistency. It had the fewest turnovers in the league. It consistently survived on the boards, although undersized. It consistently took good shots. It consistently played defense.

"And that is because we had consistent kids," Olson said.

In screening players, Olson does the usual things—scouts players early and often, checks with their coaches and other coaches, scrutinizes transcripts, seeks out principals, vice-principals and advisers.

He and his longtime assistants look critically at court conduct. Ken Burmeister, recruiting coordinator, recently saw a 48-team tournament in Texas. He saw six good prospects but concluded only two would fit into the University of Arizona program. Is that propaganda? Perhaps a tad.

Asked how long it had been since he lost a player strictly on grades or misconduct, Olson scratched his white noggin and thought for the longest time. "We lost a kid on grades after my first year at Iowa," he said. "That was 12 years ago. That's the only one I can think of. Knock on wood, but we've never had a kid get in trouble off campus."

The key in the Olson selection process is his own players. A visiting recruit spends more time with the players than with the coaches. The prospect is encouraged to question the 11th and 12th men and do the same at other schools.

"And if our kids say a prospect doesn't fit in, that ends it right there," Olson said. "Whoa, coach! Could your players veto a Patrick Ewing if they didn't like his attitude?"

"If there is a kid, regardless of how good the kid is, and our players don't care for him, we don't pursue him," the coach insisted. "We had a 7-foot center visit Iowa. He became an all-America and is in the NBA today. We were the leader in recruiting him. But when we took him to the airport on Sunday, we told him we wouldn't be recruiting him."

Gulp.

Players, Lute, can be rehabilitated, even undergo attitude transplants if they are seven-feet tall.

"It's not a case where we have to harness this kid or that kid and make him play the way we want him to play," he said. "We want kids who will adjust to what we demand, who have been taught to fit in."

Lute can afford to be picky. He has security. Others have to take chances.

Olson said players turned thumbs down on one prospect because the prospect was abusive to a waitress.

Scott Thompson has seen the system work from two viewpoints, as a player at Iowa and now as an assistant at Arizona.

"I can remember as a player taking a prospect around and then telling the staff that, hey, this kid would have a problem," Thompson said. "We knew what the program demanded."

"If a guy comes in and he's a jerk or has a prejudiced streak in him, or he's on some big ego trip, or he wants to get high, or he wants to know where the sugar daddies are, he doesn't make it. Our kids pick up a lot more stuff than we do."

The system, perhaps not as stringent as described, carries no money-back guarantees. One player who survived the system, a talented prospect named Richard Hollis, did not want to meet the demands generally—and particularly the required two-mile fall run. He transferred.

Three other Arizona players have defected since Olson arrived, but each time because they felt they had more chance to play elsewhere.

In this permissive era, when the pedestals on which we place our athletes so often turn out to be disposable, it becomes dangerous to put the Good Housekeeping seal of approval on an entire team. Yet, Lute's "family" seems to be well-spoken, well-dressed and well-behaved.

There is a comfortable air of camaraderie in the locker room. "We like each other," explained point guard Steve Kerr.

One example: Bruce Wheatley, a 240-pound freshman, struggled to run the two miles in the required maximum of 13 minutes last fall. "I lost count," he said. "I must have run it five, six times. The first time I ran 15."

On Wheatley's last try, all his teammates gathered in the rain on corners of the track. They shouted, yelled and needed as he lumbered past.

"Everybody was behind me, pushing," Wheatley recalls. Pushing literally. As he trudged down the straightaway, Wheatley felt the hand of Ken Lofton on his back.

"I was almost airborne," Wheatley said. "I came in at 13:01 and they let me have it because I stumbled at the start."

As a role model, a fifth-grade teacher could top an athlete

Donald Kaul, columnist

"...you're going to say that athletes shouldn't use drugs because kids look up to them as role models. And it's true, they shouldn't use drugs. But neither should we encourage our children to look up to them as role models."

"There are great athletes who are genuinely admirable human beings—Tom Seaver, Dr. J, Eddie Murray, Chris Evert—but for the most part, the modern athlete is spoiled, arrogant and self-involved. He gloats when he's winning and whines when he's losing."

"Would you rather your kid grow up to be like John McEnroe or simply grow up?"

"Better we should vaccinate our children against worshipping heroes whose main virtue is terrific hand-eye coordination. Most fifth-grade history teachers are more worthy."

Michael Lofton, varsity fencer

"I like fencing because you don't have to depend on anybody. When you win, you've done it. It's up to you to financially. Paying athletes would be a horrible mistake. They have to do more to make sure athletes are prepared for life."

Jeff Baxter, student-athlete
University of Maryland, College Park
The Washington Post

"I'm really proud that I stayed (at Maryland, where he saw limited action on the men's basketball team for almost three full seasons). A lot of people in the same situation would have transferred. I went through the 'Am I not good enough? What's happening in my life?' phase. But I decided my time would come."

"I think when I wasn't playing, my academic productivity and my social life suffered a little bit, too. But I felt if I transferred to another school, my chances of getting my degree in four years would drop. And to transfer because you're sitting on the bench would have meant my thinking had become too basketball-oriented."

Marianne Stanley, head women's basketball coach
Old Dominion University
The Chronicle of Higher Education

"Scholarship athletes are currently not allowed to receive payment for work-study positions in college; and all too often, an athlete or family cannot cover the incidental costs that crop up during an athlete's stay."

"These things include prescriptions for medicine, laundry money and other incidentals. I would like to see the NCAA allow scholarship athletes the opportunity to earn that money toward covering expenses and not have them seek it from other sources."

Ralph Dalton, student-athlete
Georgetown University
The Washington Post

"When I sit down and really look at what's happened here, I'm sure I'll recall some things that will make me very happy and some other things that will make me cry. But it's been a really good experience, really good."

"There are a lot of games, won or lost, you'll remember, undoubtedly. But the thing you'll remember most, I think, will be the relationships developed, the guys you've shared these experiences and the special times with over the years."

"In the end, I wouldn't trade the whole package for anything in the world."

Jonathan Yardley, columnist
The Washington Post

"The numbers are impressive, but numbers scarcely tell the story of Bill Friday's three decades (as president of the University of North Carolina System). What really counts is that this nonacademic president over and again stood up for the integrity of the scholarly community as few presidents of any other universities have done."

"So the young man who came to the presidency by way of textile engineering and law school ended up being the best friend the scholarly community could have asked for."

"That is reason enough to celebrate Friday as he prepares to step down (Friday soon will retire after 30 years in his current position), but there is even more."

"His has been a career of genuine, selfless public service. The interests he has served are those of his state and his university, not his own. Unlike so many people now running colleges and universities, he has never sought to use his position to advance a private 'agenda'—to move himself into a more lucrative and prominent appointment, to make a media celebrity of himself. Instead, he has worked quietly, patiently, devotedly—and, when the occasion called for it, forcefully—to give the people of North Carolina the best public university their resources can support; if anything, he leaves them with an even better university than they can reasonably have hoped for."

Tenure for coaches is supported

To the Editor:

Al McGuire (Opinions Out Loud, March 12) hit the nail squarely on the head when he said coaches should have tenure.

However, it's the stiff-necked faculty promotion and tenure committees that need to be educated at least as much as the administrators. Coaches generally are not advanced-degree-holding members of the faculty club, and I don't know of many of my colleagues who would grant coaches tenure without some persuasion. But this is precisely what we must be willing to do if we want to help coaches withstand the pressures of the "win-or-else" philosophy so rampant in college athletics today.

What I would like to say to coaches is not "win or else" but "here is tenure; now operate within the rules or else."

win or lose. You don't need four or five guys to block for you so you can score a touchdown. I like being on my own.

"Fencing has kept me out of trouble. It's pointed me in the right direction. It's given me an opportunity to travel around the world. It's put me in the right circles with role models. It's helped make me a very disciplined person. It's made me strong-willed."

"Without fencing, I don't know where I'd be or what I'd be doing. It's been in my life so long, it's a part of me."

Florida to seek ban on freshman participation

University of Florida President Marshall M. Criser said he will propose to the NCAA that college freshmen be barred from participating in varsity sports.

The purpose of the proposal will be to "put the word 'student' back in student-athlete," Criser said March 21.

If freshmen are barred from participating, it will help remove students from the "pressure cooker of intercollegiate athletics" and beef up their retention and graduation rates, Criser said.

The University of Florida and Criser also will suggest to the NCAA that students be allowed to receive financial aid past their fifth year if they are making progress toward graduation and that academically unprepared students be allowed to receive scholarship money in the summer before their freshman year.

Criser also said scholarship athletes should be given spending money to decrease the efforts by boosters and others to give them money illegally.

Criser's comments were the first he had made about athletics since 1984, when the NCAA found the University of Florida football program guilty of rules violations. The Gators were prohibited from playing in bowl games and being on television for two years.

He purposely has avoided commenting on the athletics program, the Associated Press reported.

"I felt that we wanted to be sure our program was in compliance before I started giving opinions about what somebody else might do," he said.

A self-study committee recently spent months reviewing the athletics program and determining it was in compliance with NCAA rules. The committee report, however, underscored the problem athletes have in the academic setting. About 35 percent of the athletes are admitted to the university through special programs and are apt to be suffering academically.

In the past five years, 62 percent of the football team members were admitted through special programs.

Criser will submit the proposals to the NCAA this summer, but he said Florida will not adopt them if the NCAA rejects them.

"It's got to be an NCAA change or even a conference change. You just can't put yourself at that competitive disadvantage," he said.

Marshall M. Criser

The proposed rule to prevent freshmen from playing is not a new concept, Criser noted. Until September 1972, NCAA rules prohibited freshmen from playing varsity sports.

Indiana professor to head NAIA Executive Committee

Roger Jenkinson, a Taylor University professor, has been named president of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' Executive Committee, the university announced March 21.

Jenkinson's appointment becomes effective August 1. He has served on the NAIA governing body since 1980 and currently is vice-president of the 10-member committee.

Jenkinson, 47, is a professor of geography and history. As president, he will oversee the NAIA's 23 national sports championship tournaments and the certification of more than 118,000 athletes and 12,000 coaches participating in NAIA competition.

At a meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee also approved the formation of a presidents' council, designed to provide more academic strength in policy-making, officials said. The council will include presidents of the more than 500 colleges and universities of the NAIA's 32 districts.

"It (the president's council) should make my job a lot easier," Jenkinson said. "The presidents' council will be responsible for establishing the parameters of the budget and coordinating the national staff."

"As president, I am concerned with literally running the organization, seeing that everything is taken care of," Jenkinson said. "Fortunately, there are a lot of staff people who take care of those things. I have to oversee their work."

Tennessee to use stricter eligibility rules

Tennessee officials have approved a stricter eligibility rule for high school athletes, requiring them to maintain passing grades in a minimum of five courses to remain active in interscholastic play.

By a 6-3 vote, the Tennessee Secondary Schools Athletic Association's legislative council approved the action, which will take effect this fall.

Previously, student-athletes had been required to pass only four courses to retain their eligibility.

The policy is unlike the "no-pass, no-play" rule in effect in Texas, where students are required to pass all subjects during six-week terms to remain eligible, the Associated Press reported.

Under the new TSSAA rule, student-athletes will be evaluated each semester rather than for each report card period, which means no student-athlete in Tennessee will face disqualification under the rule until the spring of 1987.

TSSAA Executive Director-elect Ronnie Carter said the tightening of eligibility requirements follows a natural progression begun when requirements to graduate had recently been raised from 18 to 20 credits (five a year) for Tennessee students.

"When the credits needed to graduate were raised from 16 to 18, we raised the subjects necessary to pass from three to four," Carter said. "Now that the credits have been raised, it is only natural to raise the subjects again."

Carter pointed out that for students taking only five courses per semester, the new rule would be the same as the "no-pass, no-play" rule in Texas. For that reason, Carter said, it would "encourage athletes to take six subjects."

Jenkinson played basketball, baseball and golf while attending Taylor University from 1956 to 1960. He is a member of the Taylor University athletics hall of fame. He joined the Taylor faculty in 1965.

"This is something special for Taylor University and the state of Indiana," said Daryl R. Yost, provost and executive vice-president of the university. "It is quite outstanding that Roger be chosen as president of the NAIA, having not been a coach or an athletics director."

Texas women capture another swimming crown

Although the competition certainly was tougher than last year's, Texas proved strong as ever in capturing the team title in the 1986 Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 20-22 at Arkansas.

In claiming a third consecutive team championship, the Longhorns rolled up 633 points—47 more than second-place Florida. The total was just short of the record of 643 points set by the Longhorns during the 1985 meet, when they outdistanced the runner-up Lady Gators by 243 points.

The Longhorns surged ahead of early leader Stanford during the competition's second day and never looked back. Texas junior Patty Sabo helped lead the way with a victory in the 400-yard individual medley over Olympian Mary Wayte of Florida, the top-seeded swimmer in the event.

Texas also claimed victories in the 100-yard backstroke, where teammates Betsy Mitchell and Debbie Risen finished first and second, respectively; the 200-yard backstroke, on the strength of Mitchell's NCAA-meet-record time of 1:57.26, and in the 400-yard medley relay.

Florida made a run at Texas on the meet's final day with victories by Megan Neyer in the three-meter diving event and Tami Bruce in the 1,650-yard individual freestyle, and in the 400-yard freestyle relay. But Texas' lead proved to be insurmountable.

Stanford jumped out to the early team lead in the meet with American- and NCAA-record performances in the 200-yard medley relay (1:40.22) and by freshman Jenna Johnson in the 100-yard butterfly (52.69). Johnson also won the 50- and 100-yard individual freestyle events and helped Stanford to a meet record in the 200-yard freestyle relay (1:54.52), but the Cardinal finished third as a team with 538 points.

Records also were set by California's Mary T. Meagher, who broke her own collegiate and meet marks in the 200-yard butterfly with a time of 1:54.52, and by Florida's Cindy Ounpuu, who swam the 200-yard breaststroke in a collegiate- and meet-record time of 2:12.73 during the preliminaries before winning the event with a time of 2:13.25.

Kenyon men take seventh straight NCAA swimming crown

Kenyon swept the freestyle relays and all but one of the individual freestyle events and claimed its seventh consecutive team title during the 1986 Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 20-22 in Canton, Ohio.

With the victory, the Lords became the NCAA's longest-running national swimming and diving champions, surpassing the mark of six consecutive Division I team titles won by Indiana from 1968 to 1973.

Senior freestyler James Born of Kenyon, named Division III swimmer of the year, again led the way for the Lords. He won the 50- and 100-yard individual freestyles and helped his teammates to meet-record times in the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays. Dennis Mulvihill added a victory in the 200-yard individual freestyle event.

St. Olaf's Kevin Casson foiled a complete Kenyon sweep of the individual freestyle events by winning in the 500-yard length. Mulvihill finished third.

As a team, Kenyon scored 496 points to finish well ahead of runner-up Claremont-Mudd-Scripps (372½) and UC San Diego (338). Denison, under the tutelage of Division III coach of the year Rich Burrows, was fourth with 290 points.

Besides the Lords' record times of 2:59.78 in the 400-yard freestyle relay and 6:43.19 in the 800-yard freestyle relay, two meet marks were set by UC San Diego's Roger Brisbane. The Tritons' senior turned in record times of 49.28 in the 100-yard butterfly and 1:49.81 in the 200-yard butterfly.

Brisbane's teammate, Bill Kazmierowicz, won the 200-yard individual medley and 1,650-yard individual freestyle events. Brisbane and Kazmierowicz also helped lead UC San Diego's 400-yard medley relay team to victory.

UC San Diego's Jeffrey Stabile, named Division III diver of the year, won both the one- and three-meter diving events. His coach, Keith Miller, was named Division III diving coach of the year.

Cal Poly-Pomona takes third title in Division II women's basketball

Debra Larsen and Debbie Flett each scored 19 points as Cal Poly-Pomona downed North Dakota State, 70-63, and won its second straight Division II Women's Basketball Championship March 22 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

The Broncos also won the first Division II women's title in 1982, finished second in 1983 and won again last year.

Cal Poly-Pomona held a slim 41-37 halftime lead; but Larsen, Flett and Vicki Mitchell, who finished with 14 points, all keyed an 8-2 surge to open the second half and give the Broncos a 49-39 bulge with 16:28 left.

The Bisons cut the margin to six points at 51-45 but never got any closer as Flett and Larsen got tough down the stretch. Pat Smykowski hit five buckets in the final five minutes to bring North Dakota State back, but Larsen's turnaround jumper upped the margin to 70-57 with 3:11 remaining and put it out of reach.

Four Bronco starters finished with double-figure scoring. Guard Michelle McCoy collected 16 points and seven assists, and Larsen had 11 rebounds. Cal Poly-Pomona controlled the boards, 43-34, including 14 offensive rebounds.

North Dakota State got 20 points from Smykowski and 18 from forward Janice Woods. The Bisons ended their season 24-9, while Cal Poly-Pomona finished 30-3.

In the semifinals, Cal Poly-Pomona eliminated Delta State, 71-68. Larsen had 22 points and 12 rebounds, and Vickie Mitchell added 15 points and 10 boards. Delta State's Betsy Hubbs finished with 19 points, and Delinda Samuel had 17 for the Lady Statesmen.

North Dakota State defeated Philadelphia Textile, 77-61, in the semifinal round behind Janice Woods' 26 points. Vincene Morris topped Philadelphia Textile with 21 points and 12 rebounds.

Sacred Heart outlasts Indians for men's title

Sacred Heart became the first New England team to win a national basketball championship since 1947 with a 93-87 victory over Southeast Missouri State in the Division II men's title game March 22 at Springfield, Massachusetts.

Led by super-quick guard Travis Smith and the inside work of Kevin Stevens and Roger Younger, Sacred Heart finished the season 30-4, while the taller Indians finished 27-7. The Pioneers had no starter over 6-5 but outrebounded Southeast Missouri State, 43-32.

"I didn't think they would hurt us on the boards like that," said Indian coach Ron Shumate.

The last New England team to win in any division was Holy Cross, 1947 Division I men's champion.

The Pioneers tied the score, 34-34, with 4:42 left in the first half on a jumper by Joe Jackson and then went on a 16-7 streak to take a 50-41 halftime lead.

Sacred Heart ripped off six straight points in the second half to increase the margin to 56-41 with 17:47 remaining. But Southeast Missouri State's 6-8 center Riley Ellis went to work inside and brought the Indians back to 75-77 with 4:33 left.

But Younger helped shut the door with six points to key a 12-2 run that put the game out of reach.

The two teams set a championship-game record for scoring, eclipsing the mark set in 1971 when Evansville defeated Old Dominion, 97-82.

The Pioneer attack was led by Stevens with 19 points, and he was followed closely by Younger with 18 and Smith with 16. Younger also had six steals, while Smith posted eight assists.

Riley topped all scorers with 33 points and also had eight rebounds, while Ronny Rankin added 21 points for the Indians.

Southeast Missouri State connected on 37 shots of 68 from the floor for 54 percent, while the Pioneers hit on 38 of 71 for 53.3 percent. The real difference was on the boards. The shorter Pioneers managed 16 offensive rebounds.

To reach the finals, Southeast Missouri State got 35 points and 10 rebounds from Rankin and 22 points and 14 boards from Ellis to take a 90-81 victory over Cheyney. Sacred Heart got by Florida Southern, 86-80, as Smith turned in 17 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists.

Notre Dame men, Pennsylvania women win fencing titles

Notre Dame returned to the winner's circle in the 1986 NCAA Men's Fencing Championships March 18-19 at Princeton, while New York University's Michael Lofton became only the fourth man in history to win three consecutive individual NCAA fencing titles.

The Fighting Irish, who came within one point last year of winning its first team fencing title since 1978, won this year's championship on the strength of high finishes by its entrants in two of the three weapons.

Mike Gostigan finished third and Christian Scherpe finished fourth in epee, and Youhuda Kovacs finished second and Charles Coulthard-Higgs finished third in foil to score 112 of Notre Dame's 151 total points. The Fighting Irish's Don Johnson finished sixth in sabre.

Runner-up Columbia scored 141 points, followed by Penn State, with 124 points; Pennsylvania, with 108 points, and New York University, with 107 points.

Lofton, a senior at New York University, won his third sabre championship by compiling a 18-0 record in the tournament. He defeated Markus Muller of Wayne State (Michigan) in the title match to remain the only unbeaten entrant in the meet.

Pennsylvania defeated Notre Dame, 8-6, in the championship match to win its first title in the five-year-old meet. in eighth place with a 6-8 record and 1984 individual champion Mary Jane O'Neill in ninth place with a 11-2 record.

Two third-period goals seal title in ice hockey for Bemidji State

Two third-period goals by Ian Resch helped Bemidji State beat Plattsburgh State, 8-5, and win the 1986 Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship March 22 at Bemidji, Minnesota.

Mike Alexander and Todd Lescarbeau also contributed two goals each in the victory, which came a day after the Beavers' 4-3 overtime victory over defending Division III champion Rochester Institute of Technology in the semifinals.

Resch gave Bemidji State a 6-4 lead with 2:37 gone in the final period of the championship game and then added an unassisted goal with 6:25 gone after Plattsburgh State's Andre Giroux scored to pull the Cardinals to within one. The Beavers' Todd Donaldson provided the caper with only 2:51 left in the game.

Bemidji State got a shot at the title only after avenging last year's 5-1 championship-game loss to RIT. Beaver goalie Jim Martin managed to deflect 41 of RIT's 44 shots on goal.

RIT blanked Mankato State, 6-0, to win third place in the tournament and ended its season with a 30-6 record.

Top-ranked Nebraska heads list of contenders in men's gymnastics

One would think by looking at the statistics and relying on the history of it all that Nebraska would have the upper hand when the Cornhuskers host the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships in Lincoln April 4-5.

Coach Francis Allen's squad is ranked No. 1 in the latest national poll and has won five of the past seven national championships. Add to that the fact that Nebraska will perform on its own floor and, well, you get the picture.

"I think we have done a good job of climbing up in the rankings all season," Allen said. "We would definitely have to be one of the favorites considering our history, but we never take anything for granted."

Allen's talented group recently won the Big Eight Conference team title but had to fight off a determined Oklahoma squad to do it. He also sees other teams on the horizon that will make the men's championships very competitive.

"I believe this will be a great championship this year because of the caliber of teams out there," he continued. "I believe UCLA, Arizona State, Ohio State and Nebraska have a realistic chance of taking the title, but there are some darkhorses out there like Oklahoma and Iowa, which will make it interesting."

Ohio State, the defending Division I champion, has had a very good year, even though coach Mike Willson lost 14 athletes from last year's squad. All-America Seth Riskin, who won the individual title on the parallel bars in 1985, returns for the Buckeyes.

Unfortunately, Willson's team finished fourth in the Big Ten Conference championships, and Ohio State lost its best all-around performer, Chad Lape, who went down with a knee injury.

"We will be competitive because of the work our freshmen have been doing and our consistency," Willson said. "There is so much parity today in college gymnastics that several teams have a legitimate shot at the title."

Arizona State is another strong candidate after finishing fourth last year and posting an early season victory over Nebraska. Coach Don Robinson depends on sophomores Dan Hayden, second last year in the all-around category, and Dennis Hayden, as well as seniors Jerry Burrell and Mike Zerillo.

UCLA, fifth a year ago, has battled back this season after losing all-America Tony Pineda to academic difficulties. The Bruins also faced Nebraska in that early season meet and managed a split with the Huskers.

Nebraska returns senior Wes Suter, the all-around individual champion in 1985, and Allen admitted the team's success is directly tied to his talented all-arounder.

"We are banking on Wes for his leadership because he is the only person we have back off the 1983 national-championship team. How Wes performs is usually how we perform as a team."

Another school with championship aspirations is Penn State, but then the Nittany Lions have those same goals every year. Coach Karl Schier's squad finished third last year and second the year before. Penn State also has captured the most Division I team titles (nine) since competition began in 1938.

Other teams expected to challenge for top-10 finishes include Cal State Fullerton, which finished ninth in 1985 and returns juniors Ric Draghi, Russell Lacy and Harry Loupakis; Stanford, which returns everyone off last season's No. 7 finisher, including John Louis and Randy Besosa, and Iowa, sixth a year ago with top performers Ron Nasti, Dan Bachman and Stu Breitenstine.

In the East, Cornell, with senior Dave Feeney and juniors Bruce Sonnenfeld and Bob Nichols, is ready to make a run, as is Indiana State in the Midwest, with sophomore Fernando Moriera and junior David Stevenson. Wisconsin, currently ranked 16th in the men's poll, could be a surprise in the nationals, and Southern Illinois, 10th-place finisher in 1985, returns all-America Brendan Price and U.S. team member David Luttermann, as well as juniors David Bailey, Preston Kanuf and Mark Ulmer.

In 1985, Nebraska came within nine-tenths of a point of capturing a sixth title in seven years, but that apparently did not long discourage Allen's returnees Suter, Kevin Davis, Mike Epperson, Neil Palmer and Tom Schlesinger. In fact, in the Big Eight Conference championships, the Huskers scored a meet record 283.75 points but needed it all as Oklahoma scored 280.10 for second place.

Stanford appears to be ready to claim its second consecutive team title during the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships April 3-5 at Indianapolis, but the Cardinal will get challenges from veteran-laden Florida and a beefed-up California squad.

The Pacific-10 Conference champion Cardinal qualified 14 swimmers and two divers for the competition at the Indiana University/Purdue University Natatorium, including 1985 NCAA individual champions Pablo Morales, John Moffet, Jeff Kostoff and Sean Murphy.

Coach Skip Kenney is confident about Stanford's chances in the meet, but he expects at least a three-way battle for the title.

"It's going to be a real dogfight," he said, agreeing that the Gators and Golden Bears will be very much in the running. "But I wouldn't trade my chances with any team; I'm sure Florida feels the same way."

Stanford's four returning titlists will defend individual championships in seven events. Cardinal junior Morales holds three of the titles—in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly and the 200-yard individual medley—and has qualified again in those events with times of 47.4, 1:46.0 and 1:49.0.

Senior Moffet will defend his titles in the 100-yard breaststroke (54.6) and 200-yard breaststroke (1:59.9) and compete alongside Morales in the 200-yard individual medley. Junior Kostoff qualified for three events and will defend his championship in the 400-yard individual medley (3:53.2). Defending 200-yard backstroke titlist Murphy, a sophomore, is back with a qualifying time of 1:46.4 and will also compete in the 100-yard backstroke.

Also leading the way for Stanford will be Anthony Mosse, a 1985 NCAA finalist in the 100-yard and 200-yard butterfly who qualified for those events again with times of 48.2 and 1:45.4.

Florida returns to the competition with several veteran contenders, including a few who contributed to the Gators' 1983 and 1984 team-championship efforts. With a seventh Southeastern Conference championship (in eight years) in tow, coach Randy Reese believes his squad is "further along" at this point in the season than ever before.

The Gators look especially strong in the individual medleys, the individual freestyles and the freestyle relays.

Sophomore Paul Wallace, last year's 200-yard individual medley runner-up, qualified again, along with teammate Duffy Dillon (1:47.0 and 1:49.8, respectively), to challenge Stanford's Morales in the event. Qualifying for the 400-yard individual medley were sophomore Jerry Frentsos (3:51.0), a 1985 finalist and this year's SEC champion in the event, and teammate Jayme Taylor (3:53.0).

Senior Mike Heath, the current SEC champion in the 200-yard freestyle, will try to reclaim the NCAA title in that event. He won it in 1984 but surrendered it last year to California's Matt Biondi. Also figuring to be in the running for individual honors is Matt Cetlinski in the 500-yard and 1,650-yard freestyles.

The Gators also qualified for three team relay events—the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays, in which they were runners-up last year, and the 400-yard medley relay.

California finished third in the Pacific-10 championships behind Stanford and UCLA, but the Golden Bears bring a formidable mix of experience and new talent to the national meet.

Leading the charge will be Biondi, the defending champion in the 100- and 200-yard individual freestyle events and last year's runner-up in the 50-yard individual freestyle. Biondi qualified again in those events with times of 43.4, 1:37.2 and 20.1, but he may be pushed in the 200-yard event by teammate Michael Soderlund, who qualified with a time of 1:36.4 and won this year's Pacific-10 championship at that distance.

The Bears also look for high finishes from veterans Dave Roach in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes and Rick Gill in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events. However, it may be California's corps of fabulous freshmen who hold the key to winning the team's first national championship since 1980.

Newcomer Jeff Prior is eligible for four events in Indianapolis and has qualifying times of 3:50.8 in the 400-yard individual medley and 4:19.3 in the 500-yard individual freestyle event. Also, Tom Werner from Sweden qualified for the 100- and 200-yard individual freestyles, and Paul Kingsman from New Zealand will join Roach in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes.

In addition, the Bears are looking to repeat as national champions in the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relay events.

While Stanford, Florida and California may be the class of these 63rd men's championships, UCLA, Texas and Southern California also appear to be within striking distance.

Otahkians prepare third try for honors

The third time may prove to be the charm for top-ranked Southeast Missouri State as it prepares for the Division II Women's Gymnastics Championships April 4-5 at the U.S. Air Force Academy.

Coach Bill Hopkins' talented team will be seeking a national team title after two straight years of finishing second to Jacksonville State. Last year, Southeast Missouri State came within three points of taking the team title even though only two team members were in the finals. The Otahkians were young but had talent. This could be their year.

Sandra Foster, third on the uneven bars, sixth in floor exercise and seventh in the vault, is back to seek all-around individual honors.

Also competing for the Otahkians are sophomores Dianna Morris (third on the balance beam in '85) and Jean Klees and junior Gina Bufo.

As a team, Jacksonville State has finished first or second in the past three championships. Winning the team title this year could be a tall order with a coach who never has been in national championships competition.

But coach Bernie Bohince did pull the Gamecocks together after 1985 all-around individual champion Jennifer McFarland graduated. Angie Noles (fourth in the vault last year) tops the list of veterans. Talented freshmen Karen Bianchino and Theresa Schneider are expected to help out.

Winona State also will be a challenger. See Otahkians, page 8

Basketball coaches select their silver anniversary team

Five outstanding college basketball players from the 1961 season have been selected to the 12th annual silver anniversary all-America team by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

The team members, all of whom earned their undergraduates degrees 25 years ago, are Franklin D. Burgess, Gonzaga University; John F. Egan, Providence College; Roger Kaiser, Georgia Tech; Kenneth A. Shaw, Illinois State University, and Dr. Earl H. Shultz, University of California, Berkeley.

In addition, Paul D. "Tony" Hinkle, who coached the Butler University basketball team to 560 victories, is the recipient of the NABC Golden Anniversary Award, commemorating more than 50 years of service to basketball, including a national championship in 1929.

The silver anniversary team members who also have distinguished themselves in their chosen careers following their basketball playing days, and Hinkle will be honored at the NABC awards dinner March 30 in Dallas, Texas.

Following are sketches of the 1986 NABC award winners:

Franklin D. Burgess—An all-America selection and the nation's leading scorer with a 32.4 per-game average in 1961 at Gonzaga, he was a two-time captain and most valuable player as well as class officer. He earned his doctor of jurisprudence degree in 1966 and is a member of the Gonzaga Board of Regents. After involvement in private law practice from 1969-80, he was regional counsel for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and was sworn in as a United States Magistrate in 1981.

Johnny Egan—Egan was captain of his Providence team in 1961 when the Friars won the National Invitation Tournament in Madison Square Garden. An all-America and all-NIT selection, he played for 12 seasons in the National Basketball Association, including championships series with the Los Angeles Lakers in 1968 and 1969. Egan coached the NBA's Houston Rockets from 1972 to 1976 and is presently the owner of the John F. Egan & Company, insurance planners.

Roger Kaiser—Kaiser was a consensus all-America player in 1961 and a two-year captain at Georgia Tech. He had an outstanding season in 1959-60, earning all-America honors as well as being named most valuable player in the Southeastern Conference, which he also led in scoring. He went on to play with Washington and Philadelphia in the American Basketball Association from 1961-63. Since 1970, he has coached West Georgia College to a 306-122 record and has been inducted into the State of Georgia Athletic Hall of Fame.

Kenneth Shaw—As an undergraduate at Illinois State, Shaw played basketball for four years, serving as captain in 1960-61. He ranks eighth on Illinois State's all-time scoring list with 1,396 points and is an inductee in the Illinois Basketball Hall of Fame. He currently is president of the University of Wisconsin system, which has a total enrollment of 165,000 students. Shaw received an NCAA silver anniversary award at the 1986 honors luncheon.

Earl Shultz—A member of the University of California's NCAA championship team in 1959, Shultz also was a starting guard on the Golden Bears' 1960 NCAA finalists. He was named to the all-Big Five team and all-conference in 1960 and earned honorable mention all-America honors. He was drafted by the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association in 1961. He earned his doctor of medicine degree from the University of California Medical School in 1965 and is currently in private radiology practice in Escondido, California. He also is active in thoroughbred horse racing and breeding.

Paul D. Hinkle—He coached football, basketball and baseball for almost 50 years at Butler University and posted more than 1,000 victories. A former president of the NABC, Hinkle retired as director of athletics and one of the nation's few three-sport head coaches in 1970. He is a member of the James Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame, the Helms Foundation Hall of Fame and the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame. He remains active as special assistant to the president at Butler.

Sports has low priority with girls

Although participation in women's college sports is increasing, only 18 percent of high school girls surveyed say they want to be remembered as athletes, a study shows.

Illinois State University's Joel Thirer surveyed 600 high school students at 10 high schools in eight geographic locations across the country to study the relationship between female sports and high school popularity.

Thirer said his study, conducted in 1984 and recently released, is the first to examine the relationship between female adolescent popularity and female athletics.

The survey found that female teens' participation in sports is low on the popularity-making list—in both boys' and girls' minds.

Thirer, who heads the school's department of health, physical education, recreation and dance, said he undertook the study because of the growth in women's sports at the college level. He is a former women's college basketball coach.

"Mostly, there have been stereotypes about women in sports," Thirer told United Press International. "We wanted to estimate if the perception of the stereotype is real."

lenger for the team title. The Warriors were third last year and have Katie Dempsey (third in floor exercise) and Kathy Horyza (sixth in the vault) back this year.

Sue Litschke and Kathy Phipps will compete in the all-around and, with freshman Gina Vitale, will make Winona State a threat in floor exercise and vault and on the balance beam.

Southern Connecticut State also could make a title bid, with seniors Lisa O'Connell (seventh on the uneven bars) and Cindy Smith (sixth in all-around) back from last year's sixth-place team.

Cal State Northridge has been trying to regain its national championship form of 1982. The Lady Matadors finished second in 1983 and seventh in 1985.

Coach Susan Rouse has eight veterans, including Janine Elliot and Stacy Baker. Elliot was third in the all-around, third in vaulting and fifth in the uneven parallel bars. She should be a factor again in the individual all-around competition.

Southwest Texas State's Michelle Zink turned some heads in 1985 with an eighth-place in the all-around as a freshman, and senior Kris Wallace was sixth in the uneven parallel bars as the Lady Bobcats finished fifth.

Indiana (Pennsylvania) was eighth in 1985 but will have a fight in the Southeast with Slippery Rock. Indiana coach Dan Kendig has depth with senior Robin Miller, juniors Brenda Peterman and Amy Simms and sophomores Gina Gover, Tonya Kustaborder and Sue Wahl. Slippery Rock has all-America junior Kathy O'Keefe.

Former Tulane players making new starts at other schools

By Austin Wilson

Marcus Hamilton struggled through lots of sleepless nights after his basketball world crashed at Tulane University.

"I had a rough summer this year, kicking it back and forth," he said. "Most of the time, I was talking to myself, trying to block it all out."

It was March 26, 1985, and Hamilton was heading back to the dorm after a late-night study session at the library. His roommate, Theron Cojoe, greeted him with the news: Star center John "Hot Rod" Williams had been arrested on point-shaving charges.

"I was shocked," Hamilton recalled. "We sat up and watched the rerun of the news at 2 o'clock. I didn't know what to think."

Ronnie Grandison, another Green Wave team member, also was studying when someone ran into his room and told him of Williams' arrest.

"I guess you could say I was in awe. I was afraid we were going to go on probation, and I didn't come to Tulane to spend two years on probation," said Grandison, who sat out 1984-85 after transferring from the University of California, Irvine.

There were two more arrests that night—sophomore point guard David Dominique and his senior backup, Bobby Thompson. And it quickly became known that two other teammates, Jon Johnson and Clyde Eads, were helping the prosecution under grants of immunity.

It's over now. The scandal is history. So is basketball at Tulane.

University President Eamon Kelly abolished the program April 4. A week later, Hindman Wall resigned as athletics director, saying he was fed up with the turmoil.

Coach Ned Fowler, though never implicated in the scandal, quit after admitting he had violated NCAA rules by slipping Williams money to carry him through some rough spots.

Williams and Dominique have pleaded not guilty to charges they fixed two games and conspired to fix a third.

Thompson plea-bargained and testified for the prosecution, along with Eads and Johnson, at Williams' trial, which ended in a mistrial. No date has been set for a retrial, nor has a trial date been set for Dominique, now enrolled at Southern University, New Orleans.

Thompson and three non-playing students—Gary Kranz, Mark Olensky and David Rothenberg—were fined and ordered to perform public service under supervision.

Roland Ruiz, a convicted book-maker, and Craig Bourgeois, allegedly the bribe courier, have not been tried.

Before the school year ended, four dozen athletics department staff members quit, were fired or were reassigned.

Kelly told the nine underclassmen on the team their athletics scholarships would be honored, but none accepted the offer.

Hamilton and Steven Beene transferred to Southwestern Louisiana. Cojoe, Grandison, Mike Smith and Eldon Irving moved across town to the University of New Orleans, where former Tulane assistant Kirk Saulny is on Benny Dees' staff.

Kevin Saulny, the coach's brother, transferred to Fairleigh-Dickinson, joining former Tulane assistant Mike Green. Whitney Dabney moved to Southern University, New Orleans, and sat out the season.

Hamilton said he was never very friendly with Williams, Dominique or the three players who testified against them. They formed their own little circle, he said, but added, "I have nothing against them."

Grandison thinks Williams and Dominique are innocent.

"Until they are proven guilty, I won't believe it," he said.

"John's another one suffering a whole lot," Grandison said. "I thought he played hard every night. John and I were pretty good friends. I had a lot of respect for him. He was a pretty good basketball player."

Williams earned $15,000 playing for the Rhode Island Gulls of the United States Basketball League this year. The Cleveland Cavaliers picked Williams in the second round of the NBA draft, but canceled their contract offer because the case is unsettled.

"I think it's shameful to hold up someone's career like that," Grandison said.

He said his status as a redshirt last season eased the shock of having the program fold. It was rougher on Hamilton, who was a junior.

"I had to think it out for myself," he said, "and most nights, I didn't sleep."

At Southwestern, Hamilton said he and Beene got a few suspicious stares at first.

"It looked like they were wondering, 'are they going to do that here?'" he said. But it didn't last long.

Hamilton broke into the starting lineup in the fourth game of the season and averaged 11 points and five rebounds a game, despite playing with a broken thumb held in place by a metal pin.

Beene, a sophomore, relieved both senior guards through the season, averaging 13 minutes a game. He had a single-game scoring high of 16 points in a loss to Hartford and handed out nine assists in a 66-64 overtime defeat of Auburn.

"At first, Beene and I would sit down and talk about it, and we couldn't find anything to laugh about," Hamilton said. "Now, we can laugh about it."

A few times, Hamilton said, opponents reminded him of the scandal.

"Against Louisiana Tech last season, they were ahead, 64-63, and they fouled me with about six seconds left, and I got two free throws," he said. "I missed the first one real bad and everyone started hollering, 'He's shaving. He's shaving.' I said, 'O, Lord.'"

"I hit the next one, and sent it into overtime, and we won the game," he said.

Hamilton said he felt lucky a school would give him a chance for his last remaining year of eligibility. That it could not be played at Tulane, though, is one of his biggest regrets.

"It just all went by so fast. We could have had a pretty good team."

Boston University to begin tests for drugs in fall

The Boston University athletics department will institute a drug-testing program for all Terrier athletes beginning in September, according to Rick Taylor, athletics director.

"This marks the culmination of work by the athletics department since February 1985," Taylor said. "At that time, we initiated research into the advisability and feasibility of establishing a drug screening and education program."

"In September, a committee representing virtually all facets of university life was formed," Taylor said. The end result is a program to deter student-athletes from misusing or abusing alcohol, controlled substances and performance-enhancing drugs. Student-athletes will be made aware of the physical, mental and legal consequences of alcohol and drug misuse or abuse. Student-athletes will be checked on a random basis.

"Athletes who test positive will participate in a program designed to encourage them to make positive choices about their future conduct," said Taylor. "For those who continue to use or abuse controlled substances and performance-enhancing drugs, disciplinary action will be taken."

Before the end of the current academic year, the athletics department will meet with all university athletes who will be returning for the 1986-87 year. They will be told of the program in detail and any questions will be answered. For those students who will be entering the university in September, they will be notified by mail of the program.

"A lot of time and effort have gone into developing our program," said Taylor.

five seasons, but Duke athletics director Tom Butters was considering big-name coaches until he talked to Knight: "Bob told me he was one of the brightest young coaches in America, and the more I talked to Mike, the more I was convinced Knight was right."

The proof, of course, is this 1986 team, with the nation's top backcourt tandem (player-of-the-year Johnny Dawkins and Tommy Amaker) and two career 2,000-pointers on the same team (Dawkins and Mark Alarie; it has happened only once before this year in Division I.)

For motivation, the current team needs only to look back to its freshman season, Krzyzewski's third at Duke. They were highly-touted but took their lumps in an 11-17 learning year. These players have not forgotten the taunts of the crowd and still remember opposing players laughing at them in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, after a 109-66 loss to Virginia. "That has been our motivation for three years," says Jay Bilas.

"At Duke, the administration was aware the program was going down, but they wanted to get it back without compromising principles," says Krzyzewski. "I hope they don't lose touch with who they are and I don't lose touch with who I am. I could be here a long time. This is college athletics at the highest level, run the way it should be run."

Dawkins impressed Knight

Johnny Dawkins is a 6-2 leaper—the team runs lobs to him for dunks—and a real Greyhound who can shoot well from the outside. But this two-time consensus all-America also plays excellent defense. Olympic coach Bobby Knight, the toughest judge of them all, picked him as an alternate on the team. It started early for Dawkins. "When I was 11 or 12, I was playing against men 20 to 30 years old," he said. "I grew up going against players taller and better than I was. And they didn't give their respect easily."

Now he has everyone's respect. He is the first player in ACC history to surpass 2,000 points, 500 rebounds and 500 assists. Speaking of history, Dawkins enjoys studying the lives of legendary leaders. In his political science work at Duke, he says he has been inspired by a course titled "Ambition and Politics." He adds, "Striving to be No. 1 is something I can say I learned from those people. I push myself all the time."

Larry Brown says he came to Kansas because his former coach, Dean Smith (Kansas '53), recommended it to him and because he was caught up in its rich basketball tradition. "I'm caught up with the fact that Dean Smith went here (and played on the 1952 NCAA championship team), and Adolph Rupp and Phog Allen (who coached both), and that the guy who invented the game (James Naismith) was the first coach here (Allen was a pupil)," Brown said. "This is a special place." But he found that this did not mean much in recruiting: "Tradition to a kid is what has happened the last four years."

He says he loved the pros (record: 446-265) but found it heartbreaking to have to cut players or trade them. He said he has kicked himself for leaving UCLA and insists that is a mistake he will not make again. He wants to stay at Kansas, revel in the history and create some more. "These kids never doubt anything I say," he said. "They know down deep I care about them."

Still, rumors persist that Brown will return to pro head coaching in New York (he is a New York native). His wife Barbara plans to graduate from Kansas in May with a journalism degree, then go to work for a New York advertising agency. "June 1," she says, beaming. That feeds the rumors, of course. Of the impending long-distance relationship, she says: "It will be interesting. We're going to commute. It's worked the last two summers I have worked in New York. He does a lot of recruiting in the East, so on weekends I fly wherever he is. Or, he'll fly to New York."

Manning the go-to man

Multitalented sophomore Danny Manning has laid to rest all that talk about how he should take charge and become more aggressive. Time after time, he is the man Kansas goes to when a game is on the line, and he seldom fails to deliver—with line-drive jump shots, crucial free throws, steals and dazzling passes. When Kansas trailed 52-57 late in the North Carolina State (Midwest regional final) game, a time out was called. "In the huddle, Danny told us, 'Fellas, we're not going to lose this game,'" assistant coach Alvin Gentry said. "He told us to give him the ball." Manning then led a game-winning 12-1 spurt for a 64-58 lead, and Kansas was on the way to Dallas. "I'm an emotional player, but I don't use emotion just for show," he says. Manning wastes little motion or emotion—most everything he does has a purpose and precision to it. If you want to get him ticked off, just suggest that his dad was not hired by Larry Brown for his coaching talent ("He taught me everything I know and people say I'm a good player").

Like 1980—seniors and kids

It looks like 1980 all over again for Denny Crum. Louisville's 1980 NCAA championship team was led by senior Darrell Griffith, an all-America and great shooter who put away Larry Brown's UCLA team in the title game. The rest of the Cardinal team, says Crum, "was a bunch of kids, with a freshman at center (New Yorker Rodney McCray)." Sounds familiar. This 1986 team has not one senior leader but three—Milt Wagner, Billy Thompson and Jeff Hall. Then come a freshman at center—6-9, 205-pound Pervis Ellison—a sophomore at forward in Herbert Crook, and three freshmen and a junior among the top four off the bench.

One more coincidence. The 1980 team won the Midwest regional at Houston to reach the Final Four, and the 1986 team did the same on the same court. The 1980 team finished 33-3. This team was not as consistent in the first part of the season, playing the nation's toughest nonconference schedule, but now stands 30-7.

The super-tough Louisville schedule is by design. If you are a top-20 team, Crum will come to your place, and that makes him a favorite of the networks. "A lot of teams would not play us (home-and-home) at first," he said, "but now they play us or they won't be on TV." Crum says if a team is going to be a national title contender, it must play a tough schedule, and Cardinal fans just have to put up with the losses that come with that kind of scheduling. "Since I have a 10-year contract," he said, "I can say that."

The senior trio
Billy "World" Thompson, most publicized and most criticized player in Louisville history in terms of his entire four-year career, admits he got off to a horrible start this year and got sick of hearing about it. Then he decided to do something about it. The enigmatic senior has been deadly from the field and at the line down the stretch and in the tournament. Senior Milt Wagner, who is from the same high school (in Camden, New Jersey) as Thompson and freshman Kevin Walls, is called "Ice," and with good reason. After a slow start due to a year's layoff from a bad injury, he has made the big free throws with seconds left over and over this season. Jeff Hall, the other senior, is the lad from Westwood (population 5,000), Kentucky, with a radar-like jump shot.

When he was growing up, he says, there were no Louisville fans in Boyd County, "but now you see some license plates on cars, things like that. It makes you feel good..."

A wildly improbable season
Louisiana State coach Dale Brown is coming to the end of what is perhaps the most wildly improbable season any team and coach ever lived through. If you put it on a graph, it would zig-zag on and off the page two or three times.

It is ending with LSU the Cinderella team of 1986. After losing eight of its last 13 regular-season games, Brown's team has spurred to 26-11 with a squad that amazingly includes nine guards or former guards in the 11 players. A program that had not won a postseason game in five years suddenly turned into, well, a Tiger.

It is ending with Brown relaxed and enjoying himself after threatening to quit coaching earlier in the season. He is all smiles now. Recently, he took out a quarter-page newspaper ad—he paid for it himself ($680.40)—congratulating Kentucky for winning its 36th Southeastern Conference championship.

It started with Tito Horford leaving the squad. Then another seven-footer, Zoran Jovanovich, tore up his knee in a pickup game. Later, starting center Nikita Wilson and two others were declared academically ineligible. Then came a bout with chicken pox, involving much of the squad.

All that was on the court. Off the court, it started with Brown cursing NCAA investigators, defending his recruiting of big John Williams, and demanding that the NCAA attach him to a polygraph machine in front of a roomful of witnesses.

But somehow, he convinced his players to forget all the controversy, overcome all the adversity and just play. Everyone has an opinion about Dale Brown, but no one denies he is an excellent coach who never is at loss about how to motivate his players. And the players know when he is with you, he is with you (he once raced across court and pinned with his knee a Georgia football player who was about to strike one of his players in a postgame argument).

"These guys are a bunch of Wolverines," he says. "I don't think you can knock them out. This is mentally the toughest team I've ever coached."

A hero a game

Louisiana State has found a new hero—or two—every game in its amazing march to the Final Four. In the Kentucky victory it was Ricky Blanton, 5-for-5 from the field with eight rebounds and some outstanding defense against Kenny Walker in the second half. In the stunner over Georgia Tech, Don Redden scored 27 points and Derrick Taylor 23, taking up the slack as the team's star, John Williams, scored only five. In the 83-81 shocker over Memphis State, it was Anthony Watson releasing the buzzer-beater.

Only Conradt new

The final four for the fifth National Collegiate Division I Women's Basketball Championship includes unbeaten, top-seeded Texas (32-0), third-seeded 30-4 Southern California and two teams not seeded in the first eight—32-3 Western Kentucky and 24-9 Tennessee, the Cinderella team that upset second-seeded Georgia.

Texas coach Jody Conradt is the only first-time coach in the 1986 final four. Southern California's Linda Sharp is making it for the third time and so is Tennessee's Pat Head Summitt. That ties them with former Louisiana Tech coach Sonja Hogg for most final-four trips in the tournament's five-year history. Sharp is the only two-time champion (1983 and 1984), Hogg has one championship (1982) and Old Dominion's Marianne Stanley one (1985).

Western Kentucky's Paul Sanderford is the only repeater from last year's final four, and his two trips tie him with Stanley, Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore and Georgia's Andy Landers.

Sanderford proved his point

A year ago, Sanderford's team was the Cinderella team in the final four after surprising Texas.

This year, Sanderford felt his team belonged, even though it was not seeded in the top eight (the committee is allowed to seed only eight teams). "We are the Rodney Dangerfields of women's basketball," he declared. "We definitely should have been seeded. We'll just have to go out and prove ourselves."

Senior forward Lillie "Magic" Mason, 6-2 and from Russellville, Kentucky, is the first 2,000-point career scorer in women's history at Western. Kami Thomas, the No. 2 scorer, is from Bowling Green. Clemette Haskins, the top playmaker with 226 assists, knows something about pressure—her father is Clem Haskins, former Western Kentucky great, pro player and now men's head coach.

Milt Wagner, Louisville

Conradt has one goal

Jody Conradt needs only one thing to make life complete—the NCAA championship. It eluded her a year ago when Western Kentucky's Mason hit a shot at the buzzer to upset the Longhorns, 92-90, in the regional title game. It nearly did this year when her team, perhaps haunted by that memory, struggled before beating Mississippi, 66-63. "We almost fell apart," she said. "But before we did, we regrouped and said 'let's reach down and find something extra.'"

Revenge is not something she intends to get into in the final-four matchup with Western Friday. "We cannot play that game or any other for the wrong reasons," she said.

Except for an NCAA crown, Conradt and her teams have won about every honor available in women's basketball. She is the winningest Division I coach using a minimum of five years in Division I (425-111).

Her players respect her drive for perfection. "That is what makes us good," says Kamie Ethridge, one of six seniors who have lost only nine games in four years. "She builds character in everyone she touches."

Summitt is tops

Lady Vols head coach Pat Summitt is appropriately named. In 12 years at Tennessee, she has 291 wins and 95 losses for a .754 percentage. She was a member of the silver-medalist 1976 U.S. women's Olympic basketball team and coach of the 1984 gold-medalist team, and she has coached a number of other U.S. national teams to successful records in international competition.

The Tennessee roster has no nationally recognized names, but the owners of those names have been scrappy enough and skilled enough to hold their own in the tough Southeastern Conference and have outlasted six sister conference schools in the NCAA tournament. Durability is probably the Lady Vols' most valuable asset. For example, point guard Pam Marr, Tennessee's only senior, has never missed a game in her four years. Sophomore guard-forward Sherry Bostic has had a good season after playing her first year wearing a five-pound brace. She had artificial ligaments implanted in her knee, which required the additional support of the brace. Junior guard Shelley Sexton is one of only two players to start all of Tennessee's games this year (the other is sophomore center Karla Horton).

Sharp goes for three

Neither Linda Sharp nor anyone else envisioned what would happen when she was given the keys to Southern California's north campus gym in 1976 and told to start women's basketball. Now she goes for a third national championship with senior Cheryl Miller in her final year. Many words have been written about Miller, a superstar who has made an impact on the game. She has 2,985 career points and likely will go over 3,000

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 13

Outside competition—basketball

Under the provisions of Constitution 3-9(b), a student-athlete shall be ineligible if he or she participates in organized basketball competition except while representing his or her institution in intercollegiate competition and except as permitted under the provisions specified in Constitution 3-9(b). Member institutions are reminded that Constitution 3-9(b) applies to both men's and women's intercollegiate basketball programs in all divisions. A member of an institution's intercollegiate basketball team may participate in an approved summer league only with the specific written permission of the director of athletics, or in another competition permitted under the exception provisions of Constitution 3-9(b)-(2), (3) or (4). In light of the continuing number of violations of this legislation, the NCAA Eligibility Committee has requested that member institutions review these regulations with members of their basketball teams and place particular emphasis on spring tournaments, charity games and unapproved summer leagues.

Practice eligibility

Under NCAA regulations, only those student-athletes who are enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies as determined by the regulations of the certifying institution are eligible to practice in organized practice sessions in a sport [with the exception set forth in Case No. 120 (pages 289-290, 1985-86 NCAA Manual) for participation prior to enrollment at a member institution]. Further, it would not be permissible for a women's team to allow men (other than coaches) to practice with the women's team, inasmuch as men could not be eligible to play on the team in intercollegiate competition, if the institution wishes the team to continue to be considered a women's team.

Precollege expenses

The provisions of NCAA Bylaw 1-9(a) prohibit a member institution or a representative of its athletics interests from offering, providing or arranging financial assistance, directly or indirectly, for a prospective student-athlete to pay in whole or in part the cost of the prospect's educational or other expenses for any period prior to the prospect's enrollment at that member institution. The prohibition on the payment of precollege expenses applies to all prospective student-athletes, even those who have signed a National Letter of Intent or an institutional offer of admission or written tender of financial assistance.

Postseason award banquet

As plans are being made for postseason award banquets, member institutions are reminded to review Case No. 86 in the 1985-86 NCAA Manual. This case states that "postseason team award or recognition meeting" is defined as a banquet or other meeting held at the conclusion of the sports season to commemorate the accomplishments of the team and individual student-athletes, conducted by and subject to the control of the member institution and held within 100 miles of the institution's main campus within the same state. Further, only one such event is permitted per season per team in addition to the institution's regular, annual all-sports banquet or meeting, and only the institution or representatives of its athletics interests (through the institution) are permitted to provide expenses for such an event, pursuant to Constitution 3-1(h)-(1). Further, permissible awards that a student-athlete may receive without jeopardizing eligibility for intercollegiate athletics are set out in Constitution 3-1(i).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Oklahoma, UCLA will open ABC's football schedule

Defending national champion Oklahoma will open its 1986 season September 6 against UCLA as part of a day-night college football double-header, ABC-TV announced.

The network also said it will televise Lou Holtz's debut as Notre Dame coach September 13 when the Fighting Irish entertain Michigan.

The UCLA-Oklahoma contest in Norman, Oklahoma, originally was scheduled for September 13. Instead, it will be played a week earlier with ABC-TV's national telecast beginning at 3 p.m. Eastern time, and the kickoff at 3:30.

On the night of September 6, ABC will televise Florida State at Nebraska at 8 p.m. Eastern time.

In order to switch the Florida State-Nebraska game from September 13 to September 6, the University of Toledo agreed to move its game with Florida State from September 6 to August 30.

ABC, currently in the second of a two-year contract with the College Football Association, said it will televise a game every Saturday from September 6 through December 6.

Friday. She is averaging 23.7 points and 12 rebounds over four seasons. Her 154 rebounds in NCAA tournament play is the career record, and her 300 points means she needs only 13 to surpass Janice Lawrence of Louisiana Tech. She already is a three-time all-America selection, three-time Naismith trophy winner, twice the winner of the Broderick award and winner of the Wade trophy in 1985.

Miller has paid a price for her success. Black eyes, bruises everywhere, a cornea injury that required stitches and at least one concussion haven't kept her from the game she has brought to the consciousness of many people. Her outgoing personality and flamboyance, as well as her outstanding athletic skills, have drawn attention. They also have provoked her opponents. Many people will be watching with interest to see how Miller copes with Tennessee center Karla Horton, who guarded her so closely earlier this season that Miller threw a punch at her and was ejected from the game.

The Women of Troy have proven themselves to be more than a one-woman team, however. Miller has not played in four games because of various injuries (she played in the four games that Southern Cal lost). A third championship would be a graduation gift for Miller and fellow seniors Melissa Ward, JaMaia Bond and Cynthia Cooper.

Loss of good teachers becoming a catastrophe, national survey claims

An exodus of young, talented but dissatisfied teachers from the nation's classrooms is becoming a catastrophe for education in the United States, a survey of former teachers said.

The study for Metropolitan Life Insurance Company indicated skimpy pay, bad working conditions, and lack of respect and prestige are causing teachers to switch to more satisfying and profitable careers. The majority switching were males leaving high school jobs.

The former teachers, more than half of whom trained for their new jobs, got an average 19 percent pay increase by leaving the classroom, and many moved into management and executive positions, the study said.

Fifty-four percent raised their earnings to $30,000 or more—a level attained by only 12 percent of those who remain in teaching, said Louis Harris, chairman of Louis Harris and Associates Inc., the survey research company that conducted the study.

"The study documents nothing less than a major catastrophe for education in the U.S.A.," Harris said in the report presented to 600 education, business and government officials.

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, agreed that the exodus was "a major catastrophe," saying that as more teachers switch careers and others retire, the search for qualified teachers will become frantic unless teachers' pay, working conditions and prestige are improved and the educators are given a say in running the classrooms.

Education Secretary William J. Bennett said the loss of teachers is more a big problem than a catastrophe, and he hoped revived interest in teaching as a career among college students would help solve it, United Press International reported.

The National Institute of Education, in a recent report titled, "The Condition of Education, 1984," estimated that by 1992 the United States will have 34 percent fewer new teacher graduates than needed to fill demand for additional teachers.

There are 2.4 million elementary and secondary school teachers in the United States, and a loss of 1.1 million is expected in the next seven years due to the exodus and retirements.

The report, said to be the first on attitudes and fortunes of teachers who switched careers, was a sequel to "The American Teacher, 1985," also sponsored by Metropolitan Life.

Fifty-one percent of current teachers said they have at least once considered quitting, and more than a quarter said they would quit within the next five years.

U.S. students fail world math test

American students scored lower in mathematics than those from a dozen other industrialized nations, an 18-nation education study has revealed. In most areas of the study, the Americans out-performed only students from Third World countries, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Among the eighth graders, students from Japan, the Netherlands and Hungary scored the highest on tests that covered arithmetic, algebra, geometry, statistics and measurement.

U.S. students scored below the average of all the nations participating in the study and ranked above only Swaziland, Nigeria, Thailand and Sweden.

When the top five percent of 18-year-olds were tested in algebra and calculus, the U.S. students were last among the 10 nations participating.

"These results are more serious and more alarming than those that were reported in 'A Nation at Risk,' said University of Illinois, Champaign, professor Herbert Walberg.

He referred to the 1983 Federal education report that decried the state of U.S. education but relied largely on international education studies from the early 1960s.

The latest results are from testing that took place in 1982 but whose full results—because of what were described as funding problems and international politics—have not been released.

U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said he was disturbed by the poor performance of the American students and blamed it on the failure of many students to take a rigorous course of study in the middle and upper grades.

The study found that U.S. students are receiving more hours of instruction in the subject than students from other nations. But the math curriculum in Japan and the top scoring European nations was more intensive and faster-paced.

Despite a longer school year, Japanese students had an average of 101 hours of mathematics instruction at age 13, while U.S. students had 145 hours in the eighth grade. The Japanese classes were larger, with an average of 41 students, compared to 26 in the typical American classroom.

However, "By grade 7, the Japanese and European students have computation behind them and are moving into algebra, geometry and mathematical problem-solving," said Joseph Crosswhite, professor emeritus at Ohio State University and a consultant on the study.

CFA panel favors limits on recruiting

Members of the College Football Association's coaches committee have expressed a desire to see head coaches spend more time on campus during the annual recruiting season, according to Sidelines, the CFA's newsletter.

During a February 21 meeting in Atlanta, the six coaches in attendance agreed that beginning September 1, coaches should be required to remain on their campuses until the completion of Thursday practices and that visits to high schools and junior colleges to recruit prospective student-athletes should be limited to Fridays during the official evaluation period. This subject is one of several that will be discussed by the CFA membership during the group's annual meeting May 30-June 1.

Financial aid matters also will be covered at the Dallas meeting. The coaches committee has expressed support for maximum Pell Grant awards to qualified student-athletes, financial aid availability beyond an individual's fifth year at an institution and the development of a monthly expense allowance for student-athletes.

In reviewing grant-in-aid limitations, the committee recommended that CFA coaches explore the possibility of reducing the annual limit on initial grants from 30 to 25, at the same time eliminating the overall scholarship limit of 95. In a related matter, that group suggested that any move to make freshmen ineligible should be coupled with an increase of the overall grant limit to 105.

The committee expressed concern that current NCAA enforcement practices do not provide sufficient consideration (when penalties are being developed) to cooperation provided by the institution involved in an infractions case.

The Sports & Entertainment Law Clinic
Franklin Pierce Law Center
Concord, NH
presents:

The Student Athlete: THE DOUBLE STANDARD

The amateur athletic world is at a critical crossroads in its history. Society is constantly reminded, by the media, that there are problems with drugs, gambling, point shaving, illegal recruiting techniques etc. What we do not read about or view on television are the reasons for and the possible remedies to these problems. The conference will address these issues, featuring an outstanding faculty (listed below) who have, in various ways, been trying to improve the plight of amateur sports.

Tom "Satch" Sanders — "The Athletic Side of the Sports Dichotomy"

"Satch" has spent much of his time researching and lecturing on the exploitation of student-athletes. "Satch's" understanding of the system is largely based upon his extensive participation in the sports world as both an outstanding basketball player at New York University and with the Boston Celtics, and a highly respected coach for Harvard University and the Boston Celtics.

Dr. Fred Shults — "The Obligation of the Institution to Educate"

Dr. Shults, Professor of Physical Education at Oberlin College, is a leading authority in the area of the academic institutions obligations and responsibilities for providing an education to the student-athlete.

Attorney Pat Nelson — Kemp vs. Ervin and Trotter

Attorney Pat Nelson recently represented Professor Kemp, of the University of Georgia, in a nationally publicized case in which Professor Kemp was fired because of her refusal to treat student-athletes preferentially in her classes. Recently, the U.S. District court jury in Atlanta, Georgia returned an award of more than $2.5 million based upon this dismissal from her teaching position.

The Honorable Gordon A. Martin, Jr.

The Honorable Gordon A. Martin, Jr., is a judge of the Massachusetts Trial Court and a teacher in the area of sports law who has written law review articles on the Constitutional Rights of student-athletes.

Afternoon Workshop Topics: "The athlete as a role model", "The issue of drug testing for student athletes", "NCAA Proposition 48: Minimum academic standards required for student athletes", "The exploitation of the student athlete", "The obligation of the institution to ensure an education", and "Legal remedies for the athlete and the teacher."
