Membership informed of compliance services

A broad-based program of rules compliance services is now available to assist NCAA member institutions in maintaining institutional control and furthering the integrity of their intercollegiate athletics programs.

Details of the program were announced this morning (May 21) in a Washington, D.C., press conference by John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, and chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission, and John R. Davis, president of the NCAA. A mailing regarding the program also was to be mailed today to the chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions.

The compliance services program is a response to the overwhelming of reform measures introduced by the Presidents Commission at the June 1985 NCAA special Convention.

At that Convention, the membership expressed a broad consensus that (1) institutions committed to increased rules compliance should be provided the means for heightened awareness of potential compliance problems, and (2) major transgressions of NCAA rules by willful violators no longer should be tolerated.

The new compliance program announced today includes:

 An expansion of the previous NCAA enforcement department, which now is renamed the "compliance and enforcement department." The compliance services staff has been created specifically to assist approval by the NCAA membership chief executive officers in any matters of compliance with which they may wish assistance.

The compliance section will offer the following services at the request of any NCAA member:

(1) Assistance to CEOs who encounter questions and problems in completing the self-study, externalaudit and academic-reporting requirements adopted at the special Convention:

(2)Provision of compliance models (sample forms and procedures) in such areas as financial aid, eligibility and recruiting to assist members in confronting problems that may arise in their programs;

(3) Organization of campus visitations (by compliance staff members or by experienced persons currently or previously employed by member institutions) to aid in analyzing the structure and administration of the athletics program;

(4) Assistance to member institutions that have been penalized under the Association's enforcement procedures, with the goal of correcting the problems that resulted in the rules violations, and

(5) Cooperation with member conferences (those with full-time administrators) in the development of conference compliance programs.

"The number of enforcement representatives has been increased to enable the NCAA Committee on Infractions to function with greater efficiency," Davis said. "In turn, the compliance services staff has been created to review, at the institution's request, all or any specific portion of the institution's athletics program to assist it in rules compliance.

Bob and Gerry Roe qualify as good sports in any league

By Lacy Lee Baker The NCAA News Staff

For Gerry and Bob Roe, parenthood has become something of a sport.

For years, they transported their six children to practices, cheered at games and attended team banquets for everything from football to swimming to tennis. And now, even though their youngest is in college, they are still at it... but this time it's for national championships.

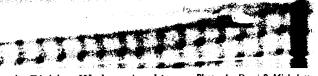

In March, the Roes went to the Division III Women's Swimming Championships in Canton, Ohio, to see daughter Ellen compete for Pomona-Pitzer Colleges. On May 13, they visited Kalamazoo, Michigan, to watch daughter Kiki play for Occidental College in the Division III Women's Tennis Championships.

"We never pushed our children into athletics, but we were glad to see them get involved," said Gerry. "We just told all of them that if there was ever anything special in their lives, we would be there."

The "being there" at athletics events started with their second-oldest boy, Chip, when the family was living in Green Bay, Wisconsin. "He really got interested in football, I think partly because we were living in the same neighborhood as Vince Lombardi," said Bob, a former track athlete at Colgate and Princeton Universities. We later moved to California, and there seemed to be more athletics opportunities," he said.

Chip eventually played football at Columbia, while their other son Bob See Bob and Gerry, page 8

NCAA hopes to keep its investigations private

The NCAA plans to appeal a Federal judge's ruling in Austin, Texas, that the Southwest Athletic Conference and the NCAA are subject to the state's Open Records Act of 1973.

Bob, Kiki and Gerry Roe

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin ordered the conference and the Association to produce information sought by various Texas media operations concerning infractions cases and investigations involving conference member schools.

The case was brought by Belo Broadcasting Corporation; the Times Herald Printing Company, Dallas, and A. H. Belo Corporation, which publishes the Dallas Morning News.

NCAA counsel George H. Gangwere of Kansas City, Missouri, said the Association would seek an appeal of the judge's ruling in the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans

The NCAA and its member schools always have considered information concerning investigations into possible rules infractions as confidential.

The Texas Open Records Act provides, with certain exemptions, for public access to information retained by governmental bodies and applies to an organization supported in whole or in part by public funds.

Judge Nowlin said that state-supported universities and the moneys generated by their athletics departments, "characterized as auxiliary enterprise funds, also are public funds of the state of Texas" and noted that NCAA dues are paid from those moneys.

He also ruled that television rights fees that state-supported universities pay for the support of the Southwest Athletic Conference and the NCAA are the property of the state and "become public funds."

Additionally, public funds can include the time and services provided by state employees and the use of buildings or facilities that belong to the state, Nowlin said.

Nowlin said he would inspect Association and conference records to determine whether the exemptions provided by the Open Records Act preclude public disclosure of any of #### the records.

The Open Records Act specifically prohibits the release of information about student records, continuing investigations, police investigations, pending litigation and anything from personnel files that would constitute "a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Southwest Conference, told the Associated Press, "I think on the surface it (the judge's ruling) will remove all confidentiality, and that could be harmful. The NCAA system is based on voluntary cooperation. And that's the very problem. These matters (infractions investigations) are very confidential."

'Laundry money' to help clean up athletics? It won't wash

By Art Goldsmith

Why are a host of athletics directors and Division I revenue-sport coaches suggesting that scholarship athletes receive a monthly stipend? Is their logic sound, their analysis complete? Let's consider this recent development from the point of view of an economist.

A basic premise of economic analysis is that a rational individual will choose to engage in any activity for which the benefits exceed the costs. As a result, students who choose to accept an athletics scholarship are presumed to consider the benefit-cost relation to be favorable.

However, many Division I athletics directors and revenue-sport coaches recently have argued that the equation is out of balance. They contend that the value of an athletics scholarship has decreased over the past decade because of changes in NCAA regulations regarding the provision of benefits to students. Indeed, no longer are athletes provided trips home, complimentary tickets to sell, "laundry money" and four-year deals.

These administrators and coaches assert that a substantial portion of the illegal behavior engaged in by athletics boosters, as well as a host of other persistent rules violations perpetrated by athletics department representatives, can be traced to efforts to improve the benefit-cost relation for student-athletes on scholarships.

Many coaches and athletics directors believe NCAA regulations regarding benefits to scholarship athletes are in need of revision. Based upon this evaluation, the provision of a monthly stipend, called "laundry money," to improve the existing benefit-cost relation is recommended.

The hope is that an improvement in the benefit-cost relation will simultaneously reduce cheating by boosters and athletics department representatives, who take it upon themselves to make the relation more favorable.

In addition, the recommendation, if enacted, may diminish the likelihood of a student-athlete agreeing to participate in an NCAA rules violation. Thus, the image and integrity of intercollegiate athletics will be enhanced.

Various coaches and athletics directors may be correct in asserting that an imbalance may be developing between the benefits and costs associated with an athletics scholarship. However, their discussion of the determinants of such an imbalance, if one exists, is incomplete. The entire focus has been upon the benefits associated with an athletics scholarship; what about the costs? Neglecting the role of costs is problematic, since a thorough evaluation of all the relevant factors must be conducted before considering a course of action.

The importance of a college education actually has increased, given the rate of technological change we are experiencing and the likely future demands of our economic and social systems. Thus, the benefits associated with an athletics scholarship may not have declined despite the changes documented earlier.

Even if benefits have fallen, as some assert, the primary source of the imbalance could be the increased costs of participation that characterize the past decade. In particular, seasons have increased in length, and seasonal boundaries for skill development have vanished. Today's collegiate athlete is engaged in skill-development activities that are structured or semistructured on a year-round basis. Consequently, time committed to sports has increased at the expense of other activities, such as formal and informal scholastic development. Athletics administrators and coaches certainly are aware of this trend. However, the possibility that increased costs may have generated an imbalance of benefits and costs, or reduced the favorability of the relation from the studentathlete's perspective, has been neglected.

Why?

At least two potential explanations are apparent. Athletics administrators and coaches are unwilling to alter unilaterally the framework for skill development and season length because they fear "going it alone" will erode their ability to compete successfully. They also may be concerned that the quality of play will decline, which will be reflected adversely at the box office.

Therefore, it is not surprising that many administrators and coaches prefer "laundry money" as a means of enhancing the benefit-cost relation.

Their proposal increases studentathlete benefits and is unlikely to effect either the competitiveness of a Division I institution or the quality of the entertainment service for sale.

However, before acting upon this option, it is prudent to consider an alternative across-the board measure. Specifically, a uniform reduction in season length and formalized skilldevelopment periods. This option also benefits the student-athlete by improving the benefit-cost position. But, it differs from the proposal under consideration by maintaining the true amateur status of intercollegiate athletes. Moreover, it provides studentathletes with greater opportunities to experience the broad spectrum of opportunities available on a college campus.

"When it comes to universities, we pretend they exist solely for the purpose of education. This is not true, not here, not now, at least not at public colleges and universities, which is where most Americans do their post-high school learning.

"The state university is an educational-training conglomerate in which only a small minority of students is engaged in education as classically defined. Most of the students are there to learn a trade.

"The result is a wonderful mix. The huge state university is one of America's greatest accomplishments, a magnificent blend of culture, scholarship, commerce, wisdom, foolishness and various kinds of energy.

"If state institutions can be great universities while also serving as training schools for farms, drug companies and local school districts, why can they not remain great universities while serving as training schools for the NFL and the NBA? The answer is not only that they can be, but they are.

"Our large state universities, then, are not just educational and training institutions but sources of entertainment, and for the very best of reasons: People want the entertainment provided.

the real athletics scandal, which is not the perversion of education but the exploitation of student-athletes, so many of them used for their skills and then left hanging.

"It hardly compromises the educational quality of a college of 30,000 students to admit a few hundred good athletes who otherwise would not qualify and who otherwise would be stuck in a life of poverty. It compromises basic decency if the colleges do not make sure that those athletes leave school with a diploma and sufficient skills to coach in high school or some such if they cannot play professionally.

Basketball didn't need any changes

To the Editor:

The decision by the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee (to adopt a three-point field goal) would appear to be in direct contrast to the information provided by the 2,063 respondents who returned the 1986 basketball rules questionnaire.

Letter to the Editor

Of those coaches polled, 65 percent were not in favor of the three-point field goal. It is little wonder that this rule received such mixed reviews.

The rules committee, it seems, is attempting to eliminate the zone defense from the college game. The zone defense is one of the few remaining aspects of college basketball that separates it from the professional level.

The introduction of the three-point play will greatly affect the ability of teams to play the many variations of zone defenses that enhance the college game.

The committee's contention that the three-point play will "open up the game" may be true; in reality, they are trying to fix a game that is working just fine.

Conference wants Bylaw 5-1-(j) applied to Division II members

Athletics directors of the seven Sunshine State Conference members are recommending to conference school presidents that they submit legislation to the 1987 NCAA Convention making Bylaw 5-1-(j) standards applicable to NCAA Division II schools Schools represented in the conference are Eckerd College, Florida Institute of Technology, Florida Southern College, Rollins College, St. Leo College, St. Thomas University (Florida) and the University of Tampa.

The conference athletics directors said they wanted to go on record as being among the first Division II conferences to adopt the Bylaw 5-1-(j) criteria for freshman athletics eligibility.

The NCAA adopted a rule this year to prevent a university from gaining an unfair recruiting advantage through an athletics event — as if anyone seriously thought that Penn used the relays for that purpose.

"So who gets hurt? As usual, it's the kids.... The mere fact that the NCAA rules book contains hundreds of pages and articles and sections and subsections tells you how ridiculous this governing body of intercollegiate athletics has become. The more rules they write to keep the crooks in check, the more they make innocent kids suffer."

Bylaw 3-3-(j)—correction

The provisions of Bylaw 3-3-(j) (page 86, 1986-87 NCAA Manual) regarding limitations on a member institution's total number of contests (games or scrimmages) in any one calendar year permit a member institution to exempt from this limitation not more than one contest or tournament (not to exceed four contests) in not more than one of the situations set forth in Bylaws 3-3-(h) and (i). [The reference in Bylaw 3-3-(j) to Bylaws 3-3-(g) and (h) is a misprint and should read Bylaw 3-3-(h) and (i).] However, a contest against a foreign team in the United States is excluded from Bylaw 3-3-(j) calculations. Further, any member institution's basketball team utilizing the exemptions permissible under Bylaws 3-3-(h) and (i) shall not participate in a foreign tour during the same academic year or the summer immediately thereafter.

For example, during the 1986-87 academic year, if a Division I member institution's basketball team plays in the Preseason National Invitation Tournament [see Bylaw 3-3-(i)], plays four contests in a Christmas tournament in Alaska [see Bylaw 3-3-(h)] and plays a game against a foreign team at the member institution's home court, when calculating total number of contests, the institution can exempt either the contest(s) played in the NIT or the contests played in Alaska but not both. The game against the foreign team can be exempt from counting toward the institution's contest limitations. Further, the use of the exemption would preclude the school from taking a foreign tour at any time during the 1986-87 academic year as well as the summer of 1987.

Division III financial aid—employment earnings

Division III member institutions are reminded that under the provisions of Bylaw 11-3-(a)-(3) and Case No. 417 (page 409, 1986-87 NCAA Manual), all financial assistance received by a student-athlete from sources outside the institution, including employment earnings during the regular academic year (which is an all-inclusive period from the opening to the closing of classes of the regular semester, quarter or term, except for the vacation periods properly listed on the institution's official calendar) must be reported to the Division III institution's director of financial aid. When outside aid is received after the financial aid program of the institution has been offered to the student, the director of financial aid shall be notified, and an adjustment of that aid already offered shall take place in order that the total aid now available from all sources does not exceed financial need.

Learning-disabled and handicapped students

The Administrative Committee has approved the following criteria and procedures in regard to the test-score requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j) as they relate to learning-disabled and handicapped students.

a. The student must register for the nonstandard testing in the manner outlined by the testing services, which would require that the handicap or learning disability be professionally diagnosed and properly documented and confirmed.

b. The testing procedures followed must be those outlined by the testing service, and the individual administering the test may not be a member of a high school's athletics department or a member institution's athletics department.

c. A copy of all documentation forwarded to the testing service for purposes of registering for the test must be forwarded to the NCAA national office, and a statement describing the student's complete record of SAT or ACT scores must be included in this documentation.

d. Upon receipt of the appropriate documentation, the Academic Requirements Committee would approve the student's completion of the test-score requirement on a case-by-case basis.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

NCAA, schools 'soft' on enforcement of player-agent rule, lawyers charge

By Al Lesar South Bend (Indiana) Tribune

Unscrupulous agents and the NCAA recently took a pretty good verbal beating at a Sports Law Forum at the University of Notre Dame.

"The athlete is the most victimized factor in the sports equation," insisted Notre Dame associate athletics director Roger Valdiserri, a panelist in the debate. "Many agents lose sight of that. I'm no less qualified than a lot of the more than 2,000 people who represent athletes. They are to sports law what quacks are to medicine. They're in it for the quick bucks. Sports still is a metaphor for them."

Valdiserri was voicing his views in a discussion with attorneys Jack Childers of Chicago, Cincinnati's Reuven Katz and Charles Sweeney of South Bend. The lively exchange was witnessed by more than 50 people at the Notre Dame Law School.

"I have approached the NCAA and several schools with a proposal to have the colleges get involved," Childers said. "We know there are problems. We know there are agents acting unethically—securing athletes as clients before their college eligibility is up developed to a greater degree in extracurricular activities than anyplace else.

"What I've discovered is the NCAA doesn't want to get involved, and the colleges don't want to get involved. It's just a cop-out.

"It almost seems that extracurricular coaches/sponsors are being punished for excellence in teaching and working with young people. Extracurricular coaches/sponsors are more successful at guiding, motivating and disciplining young people than any group that I am aware of, and they do it for peanuts."

"Higher standards, academic excellence and stricter college requirements may be the phrases educators across the country are using lately; but, for many students, there are other more rudimentary concerns to resolve before we can even talk higher standards.

"The Illinois legislature recognized 'other' educational priorities last June when it appropriated millions of dollars for dropout prevention programs within the education reform package.

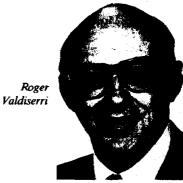

"Given the severity of the dropout rate in Chicago, there is something to be said for the near-zero dropout rate among athletes - even among athletes not performing so well academically. If finding ways to motivate young people to stay in school is a primary goal, it is time to reevaluate school sports.

"It is time to turn to encouraging student involvement in the school-sponsored activities like sports that firmly link the student to the school. And with sports, we reach not just the athletes but all the students who watch them,

responses."

Childers browsed through some of the mailings he received and singled out one.

"Here's one you might be interested in," Childers told the audience. "It's from Notre Dame. It says, 'We would appreciate it if you have no contact with our players."

Valdiserri quickly asked who had written the response. Childers said it came from Joe Yonto, assistant football coach. He then handed it to Valdiserri.

"But Jack, you didn't finish reading this. In the next line it says, 'until the completion of our season.' That's what the rules are, Jack. Did you expect us to reply any differently?

"If we wait until the end of the season." Childers answered, "all the players will be signed already."

Sweeney, who has represented several Notre Dame players free since the 1970s, made a bold proposal concerning the NCAA's handling of the situation.

"If the NCAA won't police the rule (of an athlete getting an agent before his eligibility is up), let's abolish it," he said. "I don't see the harm. When you sign with an agent, it would be like signing a letter of intent. That would take some of the pressure off the athlete."

"Given the corruption in your business," Valdiserri said to the representatives, "it's up to the college to protect the kids. When you say player agents, the red flag goes up."

Childers did not disagree with Valdiserri's assessment of the situation. However, he did stress his firm was one that worked totally aboveboard.

"My son (who is with Childers' firm) was recently at a college to talk with four athletes. After talking with one, he told the player who else he intended to see. That first player said there was no need to even talk with them because the others already were signed.

"Where do you think they got those new cars from,' he told my son."

"I'm sorry to say, I see no solution to all this," Katz commented. "There's a bill in Congress to help regulate everything, but I hope it never comes to that. We have to do something within ourselves, but that just comes down to the good ones abiding by the regulations and the bad ones still out there doing what they're doing. We really have no penalties."

"Why are college costs continuing to increase faster than other consumer prices? College officials have added a few twists to their standard repertoire of justifications.

"Instead of citing high fuel and other energy costs, as they have for a decade, college officials now talk about steep increases in their bills for liability insurance. Instead of pleading the effects of a lagging market on stock portfolios, as they did in the early 1980s, they now cite the need to make up for declines in interest from other investments.

"But the basic refrain remains the same: Colleges are labor-intensive institutions. They need to keep their pay scales competitive. And they still are trying to make up for shortfalls in faculty incomes in the 1970s, when salaries did not keep up with rising prices. Despite real gains in the last five years, this argument still is good for a few more years of rising tuition.

Appeals has affirmed the earlier decision of the Eligibility Committee that Kansas State University basketball player Norris Coleman is ineligible to represent the university in intercollegiate basketball competition until February 27, 1987, and that the 1986-87 academic year shall count as one of his four seasons of competition under Bylaw 5-1-(d).

The subcommittee took that action in a telephone conference May 20.

The ineligibility is based on the fact that the university permitted Coleman to practice, compete and receive an athletics grant-in-aid during his first academic year in residence until February 27, 1986, although Coleman was not a 2.000 qualifier.

Coleman's eligibility originally was certified by the university on the basis of an eight-semester grade-point average obtained from his high school by an assistant basketball coach at the university. At the time of his graduation from high school, however, all of the high school's transcripts routinely were calculated on the basis of six semesters unless another calculation was requested by the student.

ne ineligibility is applicable only at Kansas State University under the provisions of Case No. 356 and Bylaw 5-3-(e).

Actions of the NCAA Eligibility Committee during the week of May 12:

University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa

The eligibility of three student-athletes (one female and two males) in track was restored immediately. The student-athletes had been declared ineligible by the institution for receiving payments based upon place finish in open track competition. They returned the payments to the race sponsor.

University of Nebraska, Lincoln

The eligibility of two women softball players was restored immediately. They had been declared ineligible by the institution, one due to receipt of extra benefits and the other due to involvement in recruiting violations. Both were required to repay the cost of the improper benefits received, and it was determined that both were innocently or inadvertently involved in the violations.

University of Oregon

A student-athlete was charged with one season of eligibility and one season of competition. The student-athlete received $7,000 and airline transportation from his home country to the university's campus from an amateur athletics club. ## Hobart wins again, Urick ties coaching record

Hobart coach Dave Urick tied an NCAA championships record when his Statesmen won the Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship by downing Washington (Maryland), 13-10, May 17 before a crowd of 3,600 in Geneva, New York.

Urick has equaled legendary UCLA basketball coach John Wooden with seven straight national team titles. Hobart has won every Division III men's lacrosse title in NCAA championships history.

Hobart finished 15-1 for the season. The team's only loss was a seasonopening setback to the top-ranked Division I team, Johns Hopkins. The Statesmen later beat Division I power Syracuse, which, at the time, was ranked No. 1. Washington (Maryland) has finished second to the Statesmen for three straight years and ended with a 13-4 overall mark in 1986. "We didn't win because we played real well," Urick admitted. "We won because we were persistent."

Washington coach Terry Corcoran was an all-America player at Hobart in the 1970s when Urick was an assistant coach. His goalie, Larry Boehm, kept the Sho'men in the game with some fancy maneuvering around the net.

"We threw a lot of shots at him, and he turned almost half of them back," Urick said. "That could break a team's back."

Boehm tied a championship record with 30 saves, equalling Washington's Greg Baker, who stopped 30 shots in 1982 against Hobart in the finals.

Washington took a quick 5-1 lead in the first quarter, but the Statesmen kept the pressure on and finally scored four unanswered goals in the fourth stanza, which erased a 9-8 Sho'men margin.

The championship game was the closest since Hobart's 9-8 overtime victory over Washington in 1982.

It is the first national title for the Terrapins, ranked behind No. 1 Penn State all season and losers in the 1984 and 1985 championship finals.

"Playing at home (in Byrd Stadium) was an incentive, and it was exciting to finally win the national championship," said Terrapin coach Sue Tyler.

Penn State took a quick 5-4 lead in the first half and seemed to be on target, but Maryland reeled off four straight goals and owned an 8-5 lead at the half.

The Terrapins then fought off a determined bid by coach Sue Scheetz's Nittany Lions, as Maggie Dunphy scored two straight goals to cut the margin to one again, 8-7. Maryland's Carin Peterson then tallied back-toback goals, and Anysia Fedec's score provided the game's final margin. was named the outstanding defensive player. Dunphy was selected the outstanding midfielder.

Ursinus turns tables on 1985 Division III champions Ursinus turned the tables on de- "We felt very confident at the end

Ursinus turned the tables on defending champion Trenton State by taking the Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship with a 12-10 victory over the Lions May 17 at College Park, Maryland.

In 1985 Trenton State defeated

Ursinus, 7-4, to take the first-ever NCAA Division III women's lacrosse title. The roles were reversed this year, as Beth Bingaman and Devin Murphy each posted four goals for the Bears.

"We were so hyped-up about the game in the first half that we were still playing off our anxiousness and anticipation," said Ursinus coach Betsy Meng Ramsey. "We weren't thinking about lacrosse; but at halftime, we got together and decided to play."

Trenton State appeared to be in good shape at the half with a 7-4 lead, as six different players scored. But Ursinus' JoAnne Schoenherr, Dona Wurzbach and Murphy scored three second-half goals in a span of just over two minutes to tie the game.

Wurzbach and Bingaman later scored two goals each and put the game out of reach, and Murphy added a late insurance goal. when they scored those three quick goals to start the second half."

of the first half," said Trenton State coach Sharon Goldbrenner. "(Ursinus") Paula Fronckowiak was exceptional in goal, but I think the momentum changed in favor of Ursinus

Ursinus got off 33 shots on goal, while Trenton State managed only 21. Trenton State goalie Sandy Stockl kept Ursinus at bay in the first half with 10 saves but managed only three in the second stanza.

Chris Heddy of Trenton State was named outstanding attacker for the second straight year, and teammate Charlotte Clark was selected the outstanding midfielder. Jill Johnson of Ursinus was picked most outstanding on defense.

ers, but it was a real team victory," said Tyler. "The team's hard work and determination paid off."

"Maryland was very sharp and composed. They came up with the big play every time they needed it," Scheetz said. "They played a super game, and we had too many turnovers in the first half."

Actually, it could have been much worse for the Nittany Lions had goalie Cheri McMonagle not posted a career-high 19 saves in the contest. Maggie Dunphy led Penn State with four goals, and Tami Worley added two. Fedec, who set a new Maryland season record for goals with 54, topped the Terrapins with four.

Maryland finished 13-4 for the year, while Penn State was 16-2.

Kalamazoo wins its third Division III men's tennis crown

Kalamazoo swept through the field at the 1986 Division III Men's Tennis Championships to win its third team title, while the Hornets' Tim Corwin captured the singles championship, and the school's duo of Jim Burda and Alex Pallidino won the doubles title.

The Hornets' toughest challenge in team-championship play came in the final, where Kalamazoo beat Washington and Lee, 6-3. Kalamazoo advanced to the championship match by beating Washington (Maryland) and Swarthmore, the team that edged out the favored Hornets in last year's title match

No. 4 through No. 6 singles matches and the No. 1 and No. 2 doubles matches to down Chapman. The team title is the Mustangs' first.

The Mustangs' Landry and Zoller lost only one set in their march to the doubles crown. The pair clinched the title with a victory over Abilene Christian's Neal Berryman and Roger White.

Smith's path to the singles championship took him past UC Davis' Cort Schultz, who earlier had beaten top-seeded Troy Turnbull of Chapman. Smith then defeated Landry in the quarterfinals and Rollins' Pat Emmet in the semifinals to set up the showdown with his teammate.

Washington State veterans top men's track field

A veteran Washington State team and three Southwest Athletic Conference powers—Texas, Arkansas and Southern Methodist—are the favorites for the prestigious NCAA Division I men's track team title when action in the 65th outdoor championships begins June 4 at the Indiana Track and Field Stadium in Indianapolis.

The Cougars, equipped with new collegiate record-holder Tore Gustafsson in the hammer (253-5), have personnel capable of winning big. And, to claim their first NCAA outdoor team title, they will have to score a lot of points. The Southwest Conference forces have depth and could inch up in the final standings. Also, Southeastern Conference champion Tennessee and top SEC finishers Louisiana State and Alabama could make an impact, along with Pacific-10 standout UCLA.

Gustafsson, who set the new collegiate standard for the hammer in mid-April, has passed the 250-mark consistently. The 5-11, 250-pound senior won the NCAA championship in 1985, and he claimed the 1986 indoor 35-pound weight-throw crown in March.

Olympic medalist Gabriel Tiacoh is another collegiate record-holder on the Cougar squad. The senior from Ivory Coast sprinted to an impressive 44.32 in the Pepsi Relays 400 meters recently and also will be counted on to anchor an important 1,600-meter relay team.

Julius Korir, the 1984 NCAA champion in the 5,000 meters and Olympic gold medalist in the steeplechase, returned this season from a redshirt year. His time of 8:27.8 places him second on Track & Field News' 1986 U.S. list, while junior Nathan Morris is sixth on the list with a 8:33.2 steeplechase mark.

Another possible NCAA champion is shot putter Dimitrios Koutsoukis. The Greek national record-holder placed fifth in last year's NCAA competition and was second indoors in 1986 with a 66-6. Javelin specialists Jan Johansson (257-1) and Mark Babich (247-0) also are potential scorers.

Texas will be a challenger in the middle distances and field events, paced by conference champions Pablo Squella in the 800 meters (1:46.75) and Patrick Sang in the steeplechase (8:31.1). Sang, NCAA runner-up in 1985, will be challenged by teammate Joseph Chelelgo, sixth nationally in the steeplechase in 1985. Harry Green, a freshman walk-on at Texas, was fourth in the 10,000 meters (28:57.1) at the Penn Relays this season.

In the high jump, James Lott has a season best of 7-5½ and was the NCAA indoor champion with a 7-5 performance. Conference javelin champ Dag Wennlund, who finished third in the 1985 NCAA championships, is the top collegian on Track & Field News' 1986 list with a 257-11 mark. Long jumper Eric Metcalf (26-0) placed third in the 1986 NCAA indoor meet.

Defending champion Arkansas finished just five points behind Texas in last weekend's Southwest Conference meet (115-110). Roddie Haley, who won the 1985 NCAA 400 meters, leads the team and has a 44.48 performance to his credit this season. He also won the 1986 NCAA indoor 500 meters (59.82) to assist the Razorbacks in acquiring their third consecutive NCAA indoor title.

Doug Consiglio, Espen Borge and Gary Taylor have qualified in the 1,500 meters (3:38.73, 3:41.47 and 3:42.34, respectively), and Ian Cherry will run the 10,000 meters (28:43.9).

In the field events, Marty Kobza will try to improve on his fourth-place 1985 finish in the shot put and his fifth-place finish indoors this season, where he threw his season best of  $61-7\frac{1}{2}$ . Southwest Conference long jump champion Mike Davis (27-3<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>) and

Gabriel Tiacoh, Washington State

Joey Wells (26-11/2) will compete, along with freshman walk-on Femi Abejide in the triple jump (53-0). Others are high jumper Bill Jasinski (7-5), third last season, and vaulter Jeff Pascoe (17-103/4).

Southern Methodist, which Track & Field News predicts will win the championship, features freshman Roy Martin in the 100 meters, 200 meters and 400-meter relay. A former world junior record holder in the 200 meters, Martin has a 9.97 in the 100 and 19.86 in the 200 this season and recently captured both titles in the Southwest Conference meet. He is listed at No. 1 in the 200 on Track & Field News' 1986 list and in a tie for second with Mississippi State's Lorenzo Daniel in the 100 meters.

The Mustangs won the team championship in 1983 and Sven Nylander, who took first in the 400-meter hurdles that season, is back (13.73 110 hurdles, 49.36 400 hurdles). Kevin Robinzine should score in the 400 meters (45.46), while conference triplejump champ Vernon Samuels (54-10), Lars Nilsen in the shot put (67- $9\frac{1}{2}$ ) and Jon Ridgeon in the 110meter hurdles also can contend. Sten Ekberg, 1985 third-place finisher in the decathlon, has a season best of 7.887 points.

In addition, the Mustang 1,600meter relay team also will score if it can duplicate its winning indoor championships performance of 3:06.24.

Tennessee recently took top honors in the Southeastern Conference meet, outdistancing Louisiana State, 158-131. Alabama was third with 120 points. Volunteer Sam Graddy, who won the 1984 NCAA 100-meter title, has season bests of 10.08 (wind-aided) in the 100 meters and 20.57 in the 200 meters, followed closely in that event by Terry McDaniel (20.67).

Hurdlers Jeff Powell in the 110meter hurdles (13.86) and Belfred Clark in the 400-meter hurdles (49.29) are contenders, along with SEC triple jump champion John Tillman (54-0<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>).

Louisiana State features three conference champions in Robin van Helden (1:47.24 in 800 meters), Greg Duplantis (18-51/4 in pole vault) and Sheldon Blockberger (7,773 in decathlon). Alabama has qualifiers in 14 events, including SEC champions Keith Talley in the 110-meter hurdles (13.33) and long jump (26-5), Peter McColgan in the steeplechase (8:32.71) and 5,000 meters (13:53.5), Vesteinn Hafsteinsson in the discus (209-11), and Siggy Einarsson in the javelin (260-0). Talley also could compete in the 100 meters (10.24) and as a member of the Crimson Tide's 400meter relay team (39.85).

UCLA could be named the country's best dual-meet team by Track & Field News, with such wins as a 104-59 shellacking of Southern California. Freshman Henry Thomas could represent the Bruins nationally in four events - 200 meters (20.49), 400 meters (45.42), 400-meter relay (39.55) and 1,600-meter relay (3:03.04). Another freshman, Danny Everett, has times of 20.65 in the 200 meters and 45.49 in the 400. Mike Powell in the long jump (26-11¾), senior John Frazier in the shot put  $(63-11\frac{1}{2})$  and hammer (205-0), and junior Jim Banich in the shot (63-9½) and discus (199-10) are other Bruin standouts.

Texas and indoor champ Alabama among women's favorites

Riding high after winning a second consecutive Southwest Athletic Conference title, Texas appears to be the front-runner going into the Division I Women's Outdoor Track Championships, June 4-7 at Indiana Track and Field Stadium in Indianapolis. Women's 1986 indoor champion Alabama, along with West Coast contenders Southern California and UCLA, could challenge Texas for the team title.

The Longhorns never have finished higher than sixth nationally outdoors, but they were runners-up indoors in both 1985 and 1986. Juliet Cuthbert, defending 200-meter champion, is urnee, and she has season bests of 10.97 in the 100 meters and 22.35 (wind-aided) in the 200 meters. Transfer Mary Bolden, who was fifth in both the 100 and 200 meters as a freshman in 1984 at Tennessee, has been clocked at 11.17 in the 100 and 23.29 in the 200 this season. The distances will be covered by Liz Natale, the top scorer at the conference meet, and Anne Schweitzer. Natale was second in the conference 1,500, 3,000 and 5,000 events and has season bests of 4:15.68 in the 1,500 and 9:01.34 in the 3,000. Schweitzer won the conference 5,000 meters in 15:58.90 and has a 9:16.7 best in the 3,000 meters. Other Longhorn conference champions include Karol Davidson in the 800 and 1,500 meters (2:03.99 and 4:15.78, respectively), Karen Nelson in the 100-meter hurdles (13.58), and Terri Turner in the triple jump (43-3¼). Turner is second on Track & Field News' 1986 list with an indoor jump of 43-9¼, and Davidson won the 1986 NCAA indoor 1,000 meters.

In addition, high jumper Shelly Fehrman should score nationally, since she consistently has gone over six feet this year, and the 1,600-meter relay team can contend if it can duplicate a 3:31.09 season best.

Alabama, which claimed its first NCAA indoor track title in March. has carried its success into the outdoor season. The Crimson Tide recently won the Southeastern Conference championship, outdistancing second place Louisiana State, 155-1251/2 Although Alabama suffered one setback-the eligibility loss of distance runner Liz Lynch-the Tide still may be able to mount a challenge. Lillie Leatherwood, the 1984 400meter indoor champion, finished second in the 1986 indoor 500 meters and recently captured the SEC 400meter championship, setting a conference record (51.15). In addition. she anchored the winning 400-meter relay team that set an SEC record and she placed third in the 200 meters (23.36). She is ranked No. 1 in Track & Field News' 400-meter list. Freshman Pauline Davis claimed two first-place honors in the SEC, winning the 100 (11.11 wind-aided) and 200 meters (22.89 wind-aided). Flora Hyacinth scored in three events, taking a second place in the triple jump (41-81/2), a second in the 400-

500 meters, and Lavonna Martin, conference 100-meter hurdles champion (13.05). Martin has gone 12.95 this season and is listed first on the 1986 Track & Field News list.

Southern California went 5-0 in dual meets this year and won the conference title. Gervaise McCraw runs the 200 and 400 meters for the Trojans (23.16 and 52.40, respectively), and freshman Leslie Maxie is the top Southern California hurdler (56.72 in the 400-meter hurdles). Wendy Brown, who still holds the world's best in the triple jump (44-6<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>), went 43-111<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub> recently at the conference meet and has a seasonbest long jump of 20-10<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>. Some other top individuals include: 100 meters — Michelle Finn, Florida State; Jackie Washington, Houston; Wendy Vereen, Morgan State.

200 meters—Jackie Washington, Houston; Mary Onyali, Texas Southern; Wendy Vereen, Morgan State.

Other Alabama SEC champions were Evelyn Adiru in the 1,500 meters (4:18.37), Iris Gronfeldt in the javelin (177-10) and Laura Agront in the high jump (5-11). Gronfeldt is the defending NCAA champion.

Two other SEC schools, Louisiana State and Tennessee, also should do well. The Tigers feature hurdlers Alicia Bass (13.26) and Schowonda Williams (13.32) in the 100-meter hurdles and sprinter Angie Phipps in the 100 meters (11.39) and 200 meters (23.26). Tennessee standouts include Ilrey Oliver, 1986 indoor champion in the Diana Clements may score in the shot put (55-8¼ indoors), while both relays are strong (44.09 in 400 and 3:32.58 in 1,600).

UCLA is led by Gail Devers, who has qualified in five events: 100 meters (11.14), 200 meters (23.38), 100-meter hurdles (13.24), long jump (21-6 $\frac{1}{4}$ ) and triple jump (43-8). Devers is listed at No. 2 in the 100 meters and 100-meter hurdles on Track and Field News' list.

Choo Choo Knighten owns a season-best 52.26 in the 400 meters, while junior Toni Lutjens has thrown the discus 184-4. She was third in the event in 1985. Polly Plumer will compete in the 1,500 (4:18.80) and 3,000 (9:14.1), and junior Gayle Kellon has a 56.55 mark in the 400-meter hurdles. Stephen F. Austin State went to the NCAA Division II Women's Softball Championship to have fun, and the Ladyjacks had so much fun they beat three-time defending champion California State Northridge twice and won the tournament.

The May 15-18 series at the University of Akron was the first time the Ladyjacks have finished higher than third in the event.

"I tell you," coach Diane Baker said, "we were so young this year that I knew the only way we had a chance was to stay loose. And that is what we did. We had fun all week."

Of course, it is a lot easier to have run if you are winning as well; and S.F. Austin did not lose a game in the series. Senior hurler Pam Clay was the pitching ace for the Ladyjacks. She pitched every inning, allowing only one run in four games-a firstinning homer by Bloomsburg's Suzanne Luna.

"Pam really kept her cool," said Baker, "and I think that was the difference. When Bloomsburg hit that homer, Pam just smiled. She really gave a lot of confidence to a team that had a freshman and sophomore infield.'

After handing Northridge its first loss in the tournament, 2-0, the two teams met again in the championship game and battled through seven scoreless innings. In the top of the eighth, Ladyjack catcher Penni Lewis walked and was advanced to third on a bunt single by Phyllis Aswell and a walk by Ruth Doxtad. Center fielder Stella Castro then hit a sacrifice fly that scored Lewis.

Northridge threatened in the bottom of the eighth with runners at first and third and only one out. First baseman Kelly Winn lined out to the shortstop, the runner on third could not advance and the next batter grounded out to short.

Warriors hang on to grab crown Central rightfielder Crystal Argenta.

Eastern Connecticut State had to do it the hard way, but the Warriors and pitching ace Kim Durocher came out of the losers' bracket to defend their crown and win the 1986 NCAA Division III Women's Softball Championship.

After losing their second game of the series to Trenton State, 6-5, the Warriors won their next four games, including back-to-back victories over Central (Iowa), 2-0 and 1-0, in the May 15-18 championship at Buena Durocher, who went 4-1 in the 1985 tournament, had a perfect 5-0 mark in the 1986 series; teammate Julie Bacher suffered the lone loss for Eastern Connecticut. Durocher struck out 32 batters in 35 innings and allowed only two earned runs (0.40 earned-run average). The Warriors outscored their opponents 16-3 in the tournament.

Central, behind the pitching of Laurie Sutten and Shelly Weiss, won its first three games before running into the Warriors. The Flying Dutch beat Allegheny, 6-2; Kean, 4-1, and Trenton State, 2-1.

Durocher pitched both games of the double-header (14 innings) that the Warriors needed to beat Central the last two games, shutting out the Dutch in both games.

In the championship game, second baseman Cathy McGillicuddy scored the only run of the contest in the bottom of the sixth on an error by

Updated diagram reflects changes in men's basketball rules

To eliminate confusion about the dimensions of the new three-point field-goal line approved in April by the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, a copy of the new basketball court diagram is shown here.

This updated diagram also contains new court markings that reflect other changes made by the rules committee. Besides the three-point line, the hash marks in the forecourt in the 28-foot area as well as the broken lines inside the free-throw line have been eliminated.

The three-point field-goal line is a two-inch (5.08cm)-wide line drawn as a semicircle at both ends of the court. The semicircle has a radius of 19 feet, nine inches (6.02m) from the exact center of the basket to the outer edge of the three-point field-goal line.

The semicircle line shall be extended with a two-inch-wide line perpendicular to the end line and whose length shall be 63 inches (1.6m) from the inside edge of the end line. The three-point field goal shall be the same color as the free-throw-lane boundary lines.

The three-point field-goal line should intersect exactly the line at the top of the key beyond the free-throw line. The outer edge of the three-point field-goal line also should be 63 inches from the inside of the boundary line on both sides of the court.

played football on a University of California, Santa Cruz, club team. Both sons are now attorneys. Ellen, who began competitive swimming at a very young age, competed for Pomona-Pitzer in four national championships, serving as captain her junior and senior years. In the 1986 nationals, she was a member of four relays that finished third and fourth, and she placed individually in the 500-yard freestyle (11th), 100-yard freestyle (8th) and 1,650-yard freestyle (10th). The Sage Hens finished third nationally.

Gerry and Bob attended all four nationals and this past March were part of a large, loud and distinctive Pomona-Pitzer contingent in the stands at C. T. Branin Natatorium. All the parents and their friends were wearing shirts in the school colors of orange and blue and carried signs and pompons

The girls made the shirts themselves and presented them to their parents," said Bob.

Tennis at Kalamazoo had quite a different atmosphere, but the older Rocs were unfazed, transforming from cheerleading style to proper tennis etiquette. They had flown into Kalamazoo from Europe, where they had conducted business concerning their car-care products manufacturing and marketing company.

"We have been involved with tennis Previous penalties adopted for a long time, since we live in Ojai (California) and have hosted many of the athletes who play in the Ojai tennis tournament," said Bob. "I think that might have had something to do with Kiki's decision to turn to tennis even though she had been swimming competitively for many years."

Kiki, a sophomore majoring in theater arts at Occidental, plays No. 3 singles and No. 2 doubles for the Tigers.

After the tournament, Gerry and Bob rushed back to California to see Ellen graduate from Pomona-Pitzer with a degree in psychobiology. She plans to work in physical therapy and sports medicine. The Roes have two other daughters -- Missy, who swam for Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd-Scripps Colleges and now is pursuing another degree at the Art Center in Pasadena, California, and Connie, who graduated from Princeton and is a writer.

"Academics is first with our family," said Gerry, "and fortunately, our children have been able to combine a good education with athletics. The opportunity to do both has played a big part in developing and maturing them and teaching them discipline and stick-to-itiveness.

The experience also has been great for us. We like to see their sense of accomplishment, and they seem to want us to be there," said Gerry.

And there, could mean anywhere ... even Kalamazoo.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed East Tennessee State University on probation for a oneyear period as a result of violations occurring in 1983 and 1984 in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program.

The penalty will prohibit the men's basketball team from participating in the 1987 National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship or in any other postseason competition during the 1986-87 academic year.

In addition, only three new recruits in the sport of men's basketball will be permitted to receive initial, athletically related financial aid for the 1986-87 academic year, and the university will be limited to a total of 13 basketball grants-in-aid (rather than the normal 15) during that year.

The violations in the case included the provision of cash to several prospective and enrolled student-athletes for various purposes by, or through the arrangements of, former members of the basketball coaching staff. No current coaching staff member at the university was involved in these violations.

Frank J. Remington, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions, said, "The committee initially voted to impose a two-year probationary period in this case but reduced the penalty in part because the university self-disclosed three of the serious violations that were found.

"It also should be emphasized," said Remington, "that during the course of the investigation, the university took appropriate action to declare certain basketball team members ineligible when it was satisfied that violations had occurred. The university also has assured the committee that additional controls will be achieved in its basketball program through the auditing of summer basketball camp funds and monitoring of payments for student-athletes to complete academic work at other institutions." The violations found involved ethical conduct, improper benefits to enrolled student-athletes and improper recruiting inducements to prospective student-athletes.

publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of one year, effective May I, 1986, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

2. The university's intercollegiate men's bas ketball team shall end its 1986-87 basketball season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship or any other postseason competition during that year

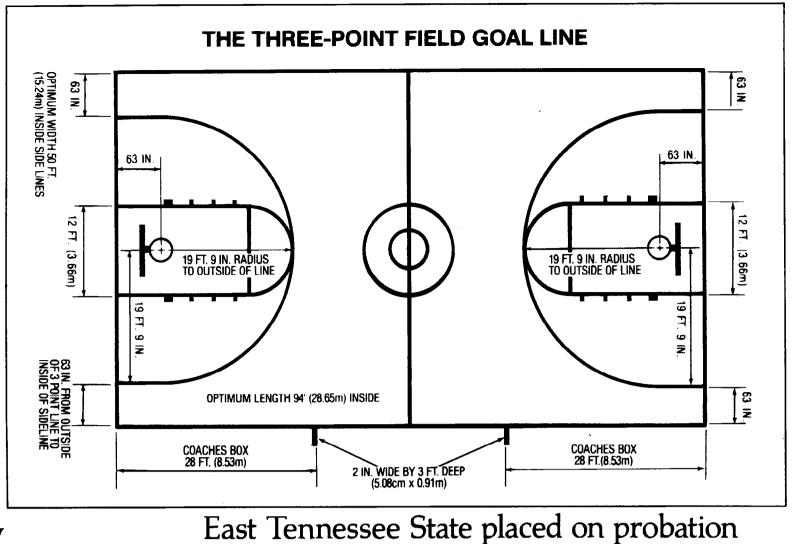

3. During the 1986-87 academic year, no more than three new student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball shall be awarded initial, athletically related financial aid (as set forth in O.I. 600) that has been arranged or awarded by East Tennessee State University; further, during the 1986-87 academic year, a total of no more than 13 student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball shall be recipients of athletically related financial aid.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. Violation of the principles governing ethical conduct [NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a) and 3-6-(a)-(1)-(iii)] - The former men's head basketball coach, a former assistant basketball coach and a former part-time assistant basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as they did not, on all occasions, deport themselves in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct of intercollegiate athletics in that their involvement in the violations in this report demonstrates a knowing and willful effort to conduct the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program contrary to NCAA legislation. However, both the assistant and part-time coaches were very cooperative in the NCAA's investigation, and this fact should be taken into account in assessing the seriousness of this violation on their part

2. Significant violations related to the recruitment of prospective student-athletes [NCAA Bylaws I-1-(b)-(1) and 1-9-(a)]-(a) In May 1983, the former men's head basketball coach and a former men's assistant basketbal coach arranged for a prospective studentathlete to receive between $200 and $500 in order for the young man to pay his summerschool expenses at another institution prior to establishing eligibility at the university, and (b) in June 1984, the former men's head basketball coach and a former men's part-time assistant basketball coach arranged for a prospective student-athlete to receive between $200 and $360 from a summer basketball camp fund in order to pay the young man's summer-school expenses at another institution. 3. Significant violations involving enrolled student-athletes [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and NCAA 6-5-(e)]-(a) In July 1984, the former men's head basketball coach instructed a former men's assistant basketball coach to arrange for a student-athlete to receive at least $250 from a summer basketball camp fund in order for the young man to make a down payment on an automobile; (b) through the arrangements of athletics department staff members, a recruited student-athlete received the benefits of tuition, room and board at no cost to him during the first semester of the 1982-83 academic year, even though the young man was ineligible to receive an athletics grantin-aid, and these arrangements resulted in the institution exceeding the NCAA's maximum award limitations in basketball; (c) in November 1983, the former athletics academic counselor cosigned a promissory note on behalf of a student-athlete at a local lending institution in order to obtain funds for the partial payment of an unsecured note in the amount of $1 264 62 which had been obtained to pay an ineligible student-athlete's educational costs during the second semester of the 1982-83 academic year; (d) on at least two occasions during the period September 1983 to March 1985, a former men's part-time assistant basketball coach gave a student-athlete small amounts of cash (i.e., $10 to $20); further, on each occasion, the part-time assistant coach was provided this cash from the former men's head basketball coach with instructions to give it to the student-athlete, and (e) on several occasions during the period September 1983 to March 1985, former members of the men's basketball coaching staff provided cash in various small amounts to a student-athlete for purposes other than those permitted by NCAA legislation

4. Additional violations of NCAA legislation [NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b)-(1) and 5-6-(d)-(4)]-(a) With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the former men's head basketball coach, a former men's assistant basketball coach and a former men's part-time assistant basketball coach improperly attested on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university that they had reported their knowledge of or involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving the university; (b) at a time when certain practices of the men's basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, a former assistant coach attested in 1983 and 1984 on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university that he had reported his knowledge of any violations of NCAA legislation involving the university, when, in fact, he had not reported such knowledge, and (c) on numerous occasions during the period April 1982 to March 1985, former members of the university's men's basketball coaching staff provided various articles of clothing and basketball shoes to prospective student-athletes at

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has adopted penalties imposed against Elizabeth City State University during the fall of 1985 by the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association (CIAA) for a violation occurring in the university's men's basketball program.

The conference penalties included a $500 institutional fine and a requirement delaying the start of the university's 1985 official practice sessions in basketball for a two-week period. In addition, all men's basketball coaching staff members were suspended from coaching duties for that two-week period; the men's head basketball coach was prohibited from engaging in any practice activities for an additional two-week period, and the men's basketball program was placed on probation during the 198586 academic year.

In commenting on the case, Frank J. Remington, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions, explained that "in February 1985, the transportation costs for a student-athlete's mother and girlfriend were paid with university funds in order for them to attend the CIAA's season-end basketball tournament. Although the violation was isolated in nature, the committee was concerned that university funds were authorized to pay such an expense, an act that clearly was contrary to NCAA regulations.

The penalties imposed by the conference in this matter," noted Remington, "were representative of and consistent with NCAA policies, and the committee believed it appropriate to exercise its discretion to support the conference's action in the case."

The following is a complete text of the penalty imposed upon East Tennessee State University and a summary of the violations found in the case.

TV pact signed

The Big Ten Conference and ESPN have entered into a three-year exclusive national cable agreement for college basketball, Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke and Steven M. Bornstein, ESPN senior vice-president, programming and production, announced May 5.

ESPN will telecast exclusively without syndication on local broadcast stations a minimum of nine live Big Ten games next season and 10 each in the 1987-88 and 1988-89 seasons. The telecasts will air primarily on Monday nights next season as part of a Big Ten/Big East double-header.

Crackdown on roughness in men's ice hockey pushed

Members of the NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Committee say that group is willing to take stern measures to ensure that member institutions play the game more in adherence to the Association's rules—especially those intended to impede the growth of violence in the game.

During the committee's annual rules meeting May 5-8 in Kansas City, members expressed "extreme dissatisfaction" with the way the game currently is being played. They showed special concern for illegal use of the hockey stick and declared that administrators, coaches, players and officials will be expected to work together to eliminate "the violence that has come into our game."

Among actions already being planned by the committee is a meeting in September with conference commissioners, supervisors of officials and others who play an influential role in the enforcement of playing rules at all levels of NCAA ice hockey. The purpose of the meeting will be to review the rules with the conference representatives and to inform those officials of the committee's concerns about rules enforcement.

The committee is requesting approval from the NCAA Executive Committee to use championships funds for the meeting.

Committee members also approved a number of rules changes, including some aimed at rough play, but agreed that existing rules are sufficient for controlling the game if they are enforced.

Among rule changes approved by the committee is one under Rule 4-2 requiring a player who receives a minor penalty to serve the entire two minutes of the penalty, even if a goal is scored. In the event a goal is scored, the penalized player's team will be allowed to bring itself back to full strength with a substitute player, but the penalized player will be required to remain in the penalty box for the duration of the two minutes before reentering the game at the first subsequent stoppage of play.

Also approved was a change in Rule 6-46 to give officials discretion to assess a minor or major penalty for unnecessary roughness. The penalty will be assessed whenever a player makes contact with an opponent after the whistle stops play and there was ample time, in the official's judgment, for the player to avoid contact.

Other rule changes approved for 1986-87:

• Increased the maximum length of a hockey stick under Rule 3-1-b from 58 to 60 inches.

• Approved the immediate assessment of a misconduct penalty to a player who is discovered not wearing the required mouthpiece. Under rule 3-4-c, there will be no warning for failure to wear the mouthpiece. On the second offense, the player will be assessed a game misconduct penalty.

 Made it compulsory under Rule 3-4-d for goalkeepers to wear face masks meeting the 1981 HECC-ASTM Eye and Face Protective Equipment for Hockey Players Standard, thus eliminating the 1977 standard • Under Rule 5, assigned responsibility for crowd control to the director of athletics or a designated representative of the home team's institution. The designated person will be expected to be available at the game site to take whatever actions are required to control fans • Amended Rule 6-21 so that a team will not be called for icing if the puck passes through the goal crease. The puck will be considered playable by the goalkeeper. Changed Rule 6-29-d to allow a defensive player who gains possession of the puck when the attacking team is offsides to remove the puck from the zone without play being stopped, so long as the puck is removed imme-

> • Decided under Rule 6-43-Note that the ice will be resurfaced prior to an overtime period, unless it was agreed prior to the game that limited availability of the arena or other extenuating circumstances make resurfacing too time-consuming or impractical.

> In another action, the committee agreed to note in the rule book's points-of-emphasis section that a minor penalty should be assessed when the puck is purposely frozen on the boards or a goalkeeper falls on the puck outside the goal crease.

Besides these changes, the committee also approved experimentation with two rules that, if eventually enacted, could serve to speed up See Crackdown, page 13

• Academic-reporting forms. Division I members approved legislation last June requiring the reporting of data concerning admissions standards, academic progress toward a degree and the graduation rate of student-athletes. The information reported under this requirement will be distributed (listed individually but anonymously) to all Division I members.

"We hope that a review of this information will enable an institution to develop a basis for any necessary corrective action," Davis said. "It also will assist the membership in evolving any needed changes in NCAA academic requirements."

The mailing to the CEOs notes that the degree of involvement of each institution in the new compliance services is the choice of the institution itself, based on the CEO's determination of his or her institution's needs.

"The announcement of these new compliance programs represents another clear call for ohief executive officers to take the lead in bringing greater integrity to college athletics," Slaughter said.

Decision on new members delayed

The Southland Conference has postponed a decision on whether to accept three new schools to the conference.

Commissioner Dick Oliver said the presidents of the six schools involved in men's sports in the conference will vote by a secret mail-in ballot to be announced May 21.

Seeking membership in the Southland Conference are Southwest Texas State University, Stephen F. Austin State University and Sam Houston State University. All three are Gulf Star Conference members. Oliver said this will be the third time since 1963 that the conference has considered expansion. In 1971, the conference added three schools and in 1982 added two others. During that time, two other schools left the conference.

The conference has seven schools involved in men's sports, but one of those, the University of Texas, Arlington, will drop out of the men's conference when football is discontinued there. Eight schools participate in women's competition, Oliver said.

Coaches said to have an obligation to be honest with their recruits

Coaches have an obligation to advise athletes about illegal recruiting tactics and the pitfalls of drug and alcohol abuse, a spokesman for the Texas High School Coaches Association told the Texas Associated Press sports editors convention May 19 in Austin.

"If an athlete is being offered something more than his scholarship, he needs to be told that he or she should take a close look at (not) going there," said Eddie Joseph, executive vicepresident of the 9,700-member THSCA.

"He needs to be told that that school could be disciplined and he could be in trouble too," Joseph said. Joseph said it's time for coaches to change tactics.

"In the past, it's been an unwritten rule that you (coach) didn't try to influence a kid as to where he went to school," Joseph said. "But I think that's going to have to change."

Impressionable young athletes need counseling, Joseph said.

"Coaches have a moral obligation to try to protect an athlete," he said. "Some recruiters expect coaches to give them preferential treatment, and some communities might favor a certain school for a kid. So the coach decides to say 'I'm out of this.'"

Joseph said coaches should begin to learn the signs of drug and alcohol abuse early and try to help athletes in trouble.

"The number of alcoholic youngsters in junior high right now is staggering and hard to believe," Joseph said. "Any coach who thinks drug abuse in schools is not a problem has his head in the sand.

"If they don't know what to look for, there are places they can find out," he said.

Coaches face difficulties in some school districts because officials don't want to admit there is a problem, Joseph said.

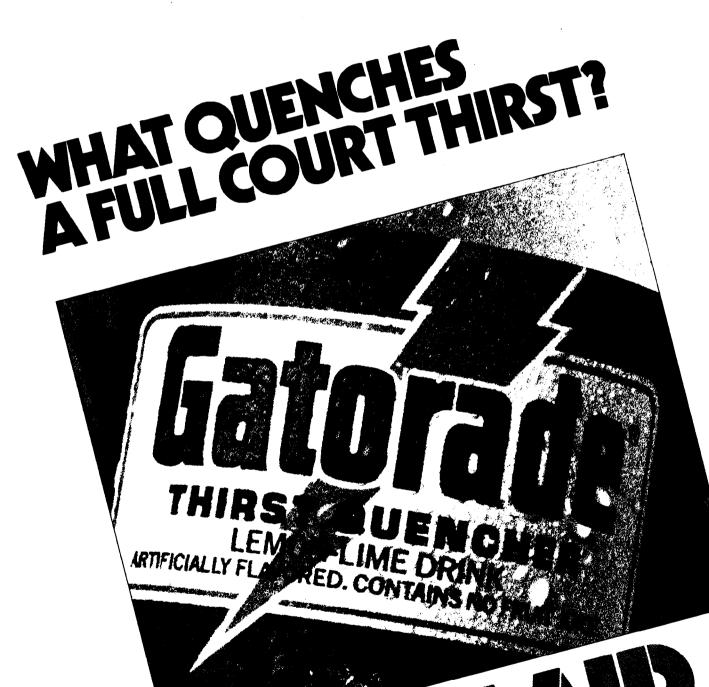

"The coach has a problem where the school boards think their children are not capable of being involved with drugs," Joseph said. "The coach can conform or find another job."

Some school districts, however, are setting up testing programs to deal with the problem, Joseph said.

"Such a program can give a youngster an out," Joseph said. "Where peer pressure is involved, he can always just say 'I can't; they may test.'"

NACDA to meet More than 600 directors of athletics have been registered for the 21st annual meeting of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA), which will convene June 8 in Marco Island, Florida.

The keynote address will be given by Sargent Shriver, president of Special Olympics, Inc. Other speakers scheduled to appear include Bill Curry, head football coach at Georgia Institute of Technology; NBC sportscaster Bob Costas, and Junior Bridgeman, president of the National Basketball Association Players Association.

NCAA Assistant Executive Directors William B. Hunt and Stephen R. Morgan will take part in a June 10 panel discussion concerning the Association's legislative, compliance and enforcement procedures.

Jerry A. Miles, NCAA liaison to the committee, said that the Division II Men's Basketball Championship has been highly successful in the past. "Division II men's basketball has been the most successful of all of the Division II championships, in terms of both numbers of spectators and financial solvency," he said.

For the past seven years, the championship has been in Springfield, Massachusetts, and it has been a common-site event with the Division II women's championship for five consecutive years.

Miles said that the 1988 Division II championship would be a men's championship only and would follow the final-four concept. In the two-day format, the four regional winners would meet in the semifinals, with the winners then playing for the national title.

"We think the final-four concept is very exciting for everyone involved. and it gives the host city's fans a chance to see four of the best basketball teams in Division II," Miles said.

He also said that Springfield and Owensboro, Kentucky, already have expressed interest in hosting the 1988 championship. The announcement of the 1988 selection recommendation will not be made until after the 1987 championship.

Institutions interested in submitting proposed budgets for the 1988 championship should contact Miles at the NCAA national office.

the University of Georgia made the real decisions for several years about admitting student-athletes, many of whom were ill-prepared for college work, a report by Georgia Attorney General Michael Bowers claims.

The report, made public May 14 at the end of a private meeting with the board of regents, concludes the state's investigation of charges raised in the trial of a lawsuit by Jan Kemp, who claimed she was fired from the school's remedial studies program for protesting favoritism toward athletes.

Mrs. Kemp was awarded $2.58 million by a Federal court jury in February. The judge later reduced the award, and the state has since settled the case by paying her $1.08 million and agreeing to reinstate her.

Summarizing his findings for the Associated Press, Bowers said, "We found, in general terms, a near abrogation by academic officials of their responsibilities with respect to manathletes."

Further, he said, "In several important areas of academics-namely course changes, grade changes, scheduling, academic advisement and others-we found no consistency, no discipline, and everything was done on an ad hoc basis."

Baseball coach saw snake-filled ravine as diamond in the rough

By Bill Getz

Two years ago, the eucalyptus ravine extending along the northern back 40 of United States International University in San Diego was a haven for rattlesnakes.

However, Alan Everest, alias 'Dirty Al,' USIU baseball coach, envisioned a baseball field in the ravine—a field that could rival any park in the country for sheer beauty. In the summer of 1984, Everest walked down to the ravine every day to massage his vision. Today, the vision has become a reality — "Players Field." "You call an athlete a player when he or she gets the job done. These kids got the job done. This field is visible

out. Well, the cliches are put to the test when something you believe in is on the line."

After the initial heavy-machine grading, it was obvious that field drainage, or the lack of drainage, was a major concern. Everest didn't need a surveyor to tell him that all the run-off for a country mile would end up on his baseball field.

"During Christmas vacation last year, it rained. We had just worked our tails off, leveling and clearing. The field became a man-made lake. We were sick. At that point, we started to discuss the feasibility of buying stock in rainbow trout and starting a hatchery." Everest rented a two-inch gasoline bilge pump. To defer as much of the rental fee as possible, water was pumped out of left field day and night for three days.

evidence of the power of unity, the value of team." Everest says with pride and the inner satisfaction of knowing that hard work made a big dream come true on a small budget.

After two years as baseball coach, general superintendent, fund-raiser, classroom instructor and day laborer, Everest displays the classic symptoms of a workaholic. He rambles on about drainage pipe and cinder block, fill dirt, and fertilizer to anyone who will listen. And covered with it from head to foot, his nickname begins to make sense.

Actually, Everest was tagged with the nickname when he played strong safety at Southern Methodist University.

"How often in life do you get the opportunity to do something you believe in?" Everest asks. All of those cliches that coaches love to throw

"There I was, sloshing around this swamp, tripping over myself in the middle of the night with a gas can and a flashlight on Christmas eve. Coyotes were howling. It was scary; I knew it was time for a sanity check."

Devising a drainage system became an immediate priority. An underground and surface drainage system was developed.

Now Everest dares the rain. He knows the rain will nourish and darken the hybrid rye infield and help root and fortify the Bermuda outfield. And he knows the San Diego sun is bound to follow, turning Players Field into a sea of green.

Players and coaches planting sod for field

"People kept telling us that the field would never happen," says assistant coach John Wolgast. "Once the project got started, Al made it a point to jump into the middle of the dirty jobs. He figured if everyone saw him working hard, it would rub off. And by doing the hardest work himself, he was sure it was getting done."

There was an outpouring of community support for Players Field.

"There were so many people who volunteered their time, sweat and expertise. Businesses donated materials. Parents of graduates, exathletes, employces of USIU, everyone pitched in. It was a humbling experience," says Everest.

The Gulls now are playing baseball on their home field. Visiting teams can hardly believe their eyes.

"This is a great place to watch a ball game," says Al Calvert, a New York Yankees scout. The word is out. UCLA, San Diego State and Fullerton State are penciled in for the 1987 season.

"We never took the easy route," Everest says. "We went first class all the way. If I had any idea how much work it takes to build a facility like this...," he says, his eyes rolling back into his head, but adds quickly, "Have you seen the infield? It's big-league all the way!" Everest is off, explaining about the Diamond Club, a twostory brick clubhouse and press box another off-season project.

Everest's father, Andy, an excoach on the New Orleans Saints staff, says of his son, "Of course I am proud. But it's hard to believe this is the same guy who hated yard work."

The Soaring Gulls, by the way, were 13-12 on their home field this season.

Getz is a member of the communications staff of USIU. Continued from page 9 games. One would limit situations in which line changes can occur, and the other would change the format of the game to two 25-minute halves.

Crackdown

The committee is asking conferences to experiment with prohibiting line changes during stoppages of play resulting from such situations as offsides calls, goalkeepers falling on the puck or players freezing the puck against the boards. These prohibitions would be in effect only when both teams are at equal and full strength.

Also, the committee is asking conferences and member institutions to experiment with 25-minute halves in intrasquad games, exhibitions, junior varsity games or other nonofficial game situations.

Committee members plan to consult with conferences to determine how these experiments will be done.

In discussions of championship administration, the Division I subcommittee considered expanding the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship from eight to 16 teams. Noting that such an expansion would reduce the division's current 1:6 participation ratio to 1:3, subcommittee members expressed concern that it would have a negative effect on the championship's financial picture. Some member institutions, however, believe that a number of championship-caliber teams are being passed over annually in the selection process.

The panel decided not to recommend an expansion of the bracket, but it will study the proposal further with interested parties.

Automatic-qualification status was granted to champions of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association and Hockey East. The nation's two other major collegiate conferences, the Central Collegiate Hockey Association and Eastern College Athletic Conference, have not applied for automaticqualification status but will be considered when applications are submitted.

In other actions involving the Division I championship, it was decided to continue playing semifinal games on Thursday and Friday nights and the championship game on Saturday night, despite concerns that the team that wins on Thursday night gains an advantage by being more rested for the title game than the team that wins on Friday night. Committee members decided there is no clear evidence that such an advantage exists. According to a study of the past 11 championships, six of the Thursday-night semifinal winners have won the national title and five teams that won the Friday-night semifinal contest have won the championship game.

The committee also proposed replacing the current third-place game on Saturday afternoon with an allstar game featuring seniors from Division I schools. Details of the game must be worked out with the American Hockey Coaches Association, and the game must be approved by the Executive Committee.

Also, a requirement that automatic qualifiers for the tournament be given consideration for home ice was changed so that consideration now will be given to the highest-ranked conference representatives and independents.

In Division III, automatic-qualification status was recommended for champions of the State University of New York Athletic Conference and the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. Also recommended was a policy, to be implemented in 1987, requiring host institutions for the first round and championship of the Division III tournament to guarantee 75 percent of net receipts as indicated on proposed budgets.

The Men's Ice Hockey Committee agreed to conduct polls again for Division I and Division III.

Temple board accepts plan to reorganize athletics program

The Temple University Board of Trustees voted May 13 to accept a proposal to remove eight sports from varsity status in the department of intercollegiate athletics by July 1, 1986. The board delayed a decision on men's and women's track until March 1987. board charged Temple's athletics department with developing an expanded program of activities for all students, including recreational sports, intramural sports and club sports. The sports dropped as intercollegiate sports will be reviewed by the athletics department for continuation within these categories. By losing their status as intercollegiate sports (NCAA), the affected sports at Temple will not provide grants-in-aid to student-athletes, and participating students will not be engaging in intercollegiate varsity competition.

The proposal by Charles Theokas, athletics director, called for the elimination of men's fencing, swimming, cross country, track and wrestling, and women's bowling, badminton, cross country, track and swimming. Women's crew was added as a sport. President Peter J. Liacouras modified Theokas' proposal on track.

"My recommendation to delay the decision on both of the track programs will give the athletics director and the vice-president for university administration, H. Patrick Swygert, sufficient time to determine if proper facilities can be developed in our proposed new indoor, all-purpose sports and recreation facility to include an indoor track," Liacouras said. Theokas said, "Upon assuming the position of director of athletics at Temple University, I was charged with specific responsibilities. Due to the increasing demand for scarce recreational facilities, I was charged with reevaluating each of our 26 intercollegiate sports, especially those having a facility-space impact. After four months of serious deliberation and diligent research, I made this grave but imperative recommendation, which was endorsed by our athletics council.

"The thrust of this decision is to increase the availability of our athletic facilities for the regular students and to insure sufficient resources for programs of excellence in our 19 athletics programs," Theokas said.

"All commitments to existing student-athletes and those who have recently signed letters of intent will be honored. Student-athletes who wish to transfer will receive the full support of the university. In addition, any rights or privileges that have accrued to affected coaches will be honored to the fullest extent possible, but review will be on a case-by-case basis," Theokas said.

President Liacouras said, "These decisions must be regarded in the context of an overview of all university programs. We have just approved the academics plan, which took a hard look at our academic programs. It would have been inappropriate and misguided to consider our existing sports program sacrosanct."

requirement.

Women who undergo intense physical training may experience symptoms of sports anemia, a condition resulting from low levels of hemoglobin in the blood, say researchers at Iowa State University, Iowa Agriculture and Home Economics Experiment Station.

Hemoglobin, a pigment of the red blood cells, contains iron that is essential to the body. Strenuous physical training may cause wear and tear on red blood cells, leading to sports anemia. Increased blood circulation and elevated body temperatures during exercise destroy blood cells; compressing muscles literally can squeeze them to death.

"Jogging two miles every other day or going to aerobic classes three days a week is not strenuous aerobic training," said William Runyan, ISU professor of food and nutritution. "People who develop sports anemia usually are in vigorous competitive training and may run from 35 to 50 miles a week."

Once sports anemia has developed, iron-deficiency anemia may follow if hemoglobin levels continue to drop. Symptoms of iron-deficiency anemia include dizziness, weakness, lethargy, rapid heartbeat and fever. This condition can be fatal if the body is not replenished with iron supplies, Runyan noted.

Runyan and Jacqueline Puhl, a former ISU professor of physical education, began studying sports anemia in 1975, when Iowa State was host to the NCAA cross country championships. Competitors were asked to volunteer for a study of the relationship between levels of hemoglobin in the blood and sports anemia.

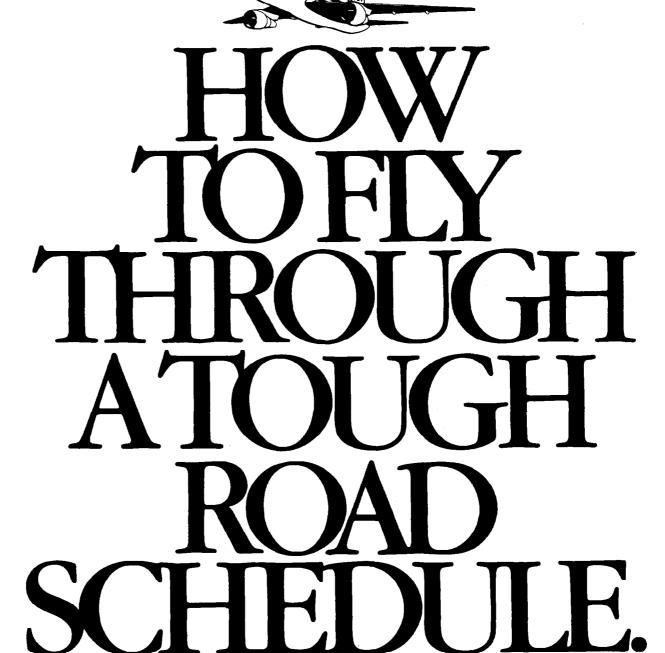

The athletes in this study did not have sports anemia and performance levels were normal.

"The competitive athletes already were in excellent condition from highintensity workouts," Runyan said. "Women who are not in such good shape and who train strenuously are more likely to develop sports anemia."

Nineteen women between 19 and 21 years of age were subjects in a second study. The exercise program resulted in decreases in levels of hemoglobin, red blood-cell count and blood-cell size. Sports anemia occurred during the first few weeks of training but disappeared by the end of the nineweek training session.

In a third study, Runyan and Puhl measured the effects of strenuous training on high school women. Hemoglobin levels were lower in the runners after the first week of training but returned to normal concentrations by the eighth week of training.

Although the temporary effects of sports anemia were similar in both studies, the researchers found that the high school women were more likely to develop iron-deficiency anemia than the college women.

"Young women are especially susceptible to iron imbalances from combinations of growth, menstruation and strenuous training," Runyan said.

Women need extra sources of iron to make up for monthly blood losses from menstruation. The Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) of iron for women is almost twice the amount recommended for men.

"It may be difficult for a nontraining woman with a recommended intake of 2,000 calories to meet the RDA for iron in the diet," Runyan said. "Iron supplementation can help meet the RDA without having to overeat. But a woman in vigorous training can consume from 3,000 to 4,000 calories and
