Rives named to serve on Commission

Stanley G. Rives, president of Eastern Illinois University, has been elected to serve as the Division I-AA Central region representative on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

He replaces Herb F. Reinhard, former president of Morehead State University who now is president at Frostburg State College, a Division III institution. Rives was elected in balloting by the chief executive officers of the 17 Division I-AA Central member institutions.

In his third year as president at Eastern Illinois, Rives previously served as provost and vice-president for academic affairs at the Charleston, Illinois, institution.

He held faculty and administrative positions for 22 years at Illinois State University, where he was associate provost and dean of instruction prior to joining the Eastern Illinois administration. He also has been on the faculties at West Virginia University, Northwestern University and Elmhurst College. He was a visiting professor at the University of Hawaii.

Rives earned bachelor's and master's degrees at Illinois State University and a Ph.D. at Northwestern. He is the author or coauthor of four books and has published numerous articles in a variety of scholarly journals.

He served as president of the Association of Mid-Continent Universities Athletic Association in 1984-85.

Rives was a member of the National Advisory Council, Commission on Higher Education Issues of the American Council on Education in 1982-83, and he currently serves on the Committee on Academic Affairs Resource Centers of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities and the Council of Presidents, Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities.

NCAA offers legal guidelines for athlete counseling panels

There has been a serious concern among NCAA member institutions that some player agents have exploited student-athletes by contacting them early and often in their collegiate careers to offer financial inducements that may jeopardize their remaining eligibility under NCAA legislation and mislead them in terms of career choices.

As a result, in January 1984, the membership revised NCAA Constitution 3-1(h)-(4) to permit a member institution to provide assistance to student-athletes about professional athletics careers through institutional counseling panels. Panel members are appointed by the institution's chief executive officer from among university employees, one of whom may be an athletics department staff member.

The counseling panel's primary role is to assist the student-athlete in making a knowledgeable decision regarding a professional athletics career. The panel is not intended to provide direct material benefits to the student-athlete (for instance, the development of specific contracts or tax plans for the student-athlete). Also, no panel member may receive, directly or indirectly, any form of compensation, gratuity or expenses from the student, a player agent or a professional sports organization.

Because of the involvement of player agents in exchanging information with these counseling panels, the NCAA's legal counsel reports that there may be a greater potential for institutional liability in those situations than would be the case with most other college programs designed for the benefit of students.

For example, litigation against the institution or the NCAA could be initiated by a dissatisfied agent or student-athlete. The Association's legal counsel has addressed this issue and developed guidelines that could help reduce the potential for litigation arising out of the implementation of the professional athletics counseling panels.

These guidelines are as follows:

1. Only truthful information or honest advice should be conveyed to student-athletes. Speculation or hearsay should be avoided.

2. Care should be exercised to convey information regarding specific agents only to student-athletes who request it.

3. Care should be exercised to give specific advice only to student-athletes who request it.

4. An institution's policy regarding agents' contacts with student-athletes should not attempt to bar unregistered agents from any and all contacts with student-athletes, but merely deny them the use of institutional facilities and services for such contacts.

5. The institution and its counseling panel should not participate in an athlete's negotiations for contracts with agents or with professional teams. The role of the counseling panel should be that of providing general information and of giving advice only when, and only to the extent, requested by the athlete.

With the observance of these principles, potential liability can be minimized in connection with the professional athletics counseling panel program, Association legal counsel says.

Any member institution with concerns regarding the implementation of its counseling panel program should contact the legislative services department at the national office.

Committee appointed to handle TV rights for basketball championship

A six-member special committee has been appointed by the NCAA Administrative Committee to handle negotiations for the rights to televise future Division I Men's Basketball Championships and possibly other NCAA championships.

The Association's current contract with CBS-TV ends in 1987. The first Division I Men's Basketball Championship to be covered by the new agreement will be the 1988 event.

Five members of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee were appointed to the negotiations committee, along with NCAA Secretary-Treasurer Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University.

The five are Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame; James E. Delany, Ohio Valley Conference; Cedric W. Dempsey, University of Arizona; C. Arnold Ferrin, University of Utah, and Richard D. Schultz, University of Virginia. Schultz, who chairs the men's basketball committee, also will chair the negotiations committee.

Frank Windeger, Texas Christian University and another member of the men's basketball committee, was named as an alternate if anyone of the appointed five is unable to serve.

"I think this will be a very strong committee and will be able to represent not only the basketball committee, but also the other constituents in a strong manner in a negotiation climate that will be very crucial to the NCAA and its member institutions in the years ahead," Schultz said.

He emphasized that the negotiations committee will conduct in-person hearings with interested NCAA conferences, committees or organizations prior to negotiating with television networks. It also will welcome written suggestions from such entities.

Negotiations will begin this fall, and the final decisions will be subject to the approval of the NCAA Executive Committee.

Speakers for seminar announced

Successful and innovative sports-marketing professionals are scheduled to speak at the NCAA Professional Development Seminar August 15-16 in Indianapolis.

The seminar, "Marketing Collegiate Athletics," will be moderated by John J. Crouthamel, athletics director at Syracuse University. Crouthamel has served as a member of the NCAA Football Television Committee and was instrumental in the formation of the Big East Conference in 1979. He played a key role in the construction of the Carrier Dome in Syracuse and has been active on numerous Eastern

Association officer, Council nominations open

The 1987 NCAA Nominating Committee is accepting nominations for president, secretary-treasurer, Divisions I and II vice-presidents, and 11 Council positions that expire in January 1987.

Four of the five elected NCAA officers will be replaced in January. President John R. Davis, Oregon State University, and Secretary-Treasurer Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University, will conclude their two-year terms in those offices at the 1987 Convention, and Division I Vice-President Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, and Division II Vice-President Asa N. Green, Livingston University, will be leaving the Council and therefore must be replaced in those offices.

Three of the 11 Council members whose terms expire are eligible for reelection, all in Division I. Two Division I members are not eligible for reelection. In Division II, none of the three members can be reelected. Also, the three Division III members must be replaced.

The deadline for submitting nominations is September 5. Nominations may be sent to Cecil W. "Hootie" Ingram, director of athletics, Florida State University (P.O. Box 2195, Tallahassee, Florida 32316), chair of the Nominating Committee, or to any member of the committee. Nominations also should be sent directly to Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, at the NCAA national office (P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201).

In Division I, those eligible for reelection are Joan C. Cronan, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Della Durant, Pennsylvania State University, and Charlotte West, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale. Those not eligible for reelection are Cryer and Sondra Norrell-Thomas, Howard University.

Two of the Division I representatives elected or reelected must be from Division I-A conferences (the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Southeastern Conference). One of those elected or reelected must be from Division I, Region 1 (Districts 1 and 2). Four of those elected or reelected must be women (reelection of Cronan, Durant and West plus replacement of Norrell-Thomas would fulfill this requirement).

Division II representatives not eligible for reelection are Rudy Carvajal, California State University, Bakersfield; Green, and James R. Spalding, Bellarmine College. One of the Division II representatives must be from Region 2 and one from Region 4. Once must be a chief executive officer.

Division III representatives not eligible for reelection are Anthony J. Diekema, Calvin College; Mary Jean Mulvaney, University of Chicago, and Patricia A. Thompson, Elmira College. One of the Division III representatives must be from Region 2, one must be a chief executive officer and one must be a woman.

Members of the 1987 NCAA Nominating Committee from Division I are Edward Leland, director of athletics, Dartmouth College (Region I-District 1); Kathleen M. Wear, assistant director of athletics, La Salle University (1-2); Nelson E. Townsend, director of athletics, Florida A&M University (2-3); Richard M. Bay, director of athletics, Ohio State University (3-4); John P. Mahlstede, associate dean, Iowa State University (3-5); Fred Jacoby, commissioner, Southwest Athletic Conference (4-6); Barbara B. Hollmann, associate director of athletics, University of Montana (4-7), and Ingram, chair, Florida State University (2-3).

Division II members are Edward P. Markey, director of athletics, St. Michael's College (Region I-District 1); Sandra T. Shuler, associate director of athletics, North Carolina Central University (2-3); Robert Cockrum,

Virginia assesses the cost of its big-time athletics success

By Bob Lipper
Richmond Times-Dispatch

During the 1980s, the University of Virginia has earned headlines for unprecedented success in football and men's basketball, the athletics department's most visible and profitable sports.

The basketball squad made Final Four appearances in 1981 and 1984 and claimed the National Invitation Tournament championship in 1980. Meanwhile, the football Cavaliers notched their first-ever bowl bid (Peach, 1984) and—by finishing 6-5 in 1985—strung together three straight winning records for the first time in 33 years.

Those achievements have generated significant income, contributed to rising application figures, and resulted in an avalanche of favorable publicity focusing on the school's academic excellence and its ability to compete without compromising its standards.

But there's an unsettling side to the story. Over the past four years, Virginia athletes also have earned headlines for acts that have challenged the codes of conduct established by their coaches, their school and their community.

In so doing, those athletes have brought unfavorable publicity to a program and a university that by all other existing barometers does things the right way.

There have been no hints of payoffs or transcript tinkering, no accusations that the school exploits its athletes. Indeed, Virginia routinely graduates more than 90 percent of its student-athletes, a strikingly high rate when compared to figures nationwide.

Nonetheless, the list of individual transgressions in recent years—they include honor-code violations, assault cases, charges of theft, suspensions for breaking team rules and the selling of drugs—runs longer than one that could be compiled over the same period for the schools against which Virginia normally competes. The series of events raises an issue that is at once sobering, distressing and perplexing.

It also prompts a question asked in recent weeks of Virginia coaches, administrators, faculty members, students and alumni: Is the school paying a price for success in big-time college athletics?

The responses range from quiet concern to alarm. And while there were various guesses as to why the series of incidents has taken place at Virginia during this precise span of time, no conclusions could be formed. Among the possible explanations advanced were:

George Welsh

- That Virginia—as a now larger, more diversified and more impersonal institution—may be experiencing growing pains in a variety of areas, including athletics;
- That black athletes, particularly from disadvantaged backgrounds, may have difficulty blending with the school's predominantly white, predominantly moneyed enrollment;
- That winning may breed a swagger among athletes not noticeable when the teams weren't as successful;
- And that Virginia's all-male origins always have included a boys-will-be-boys tolerance for rowdy behavior.

The one constant expressed was a general sense that Virginia has handled each case properly and that the people directly in charge—athletics director Richard D. Schultz, football coach George Welsh and basketball coach Terry Holland—are men of integrity who should not be judged by the misdeeds of some of their athletes.

"Of course, I see a problem," says Alex Sedgewick, dean of the college of arts and sciences, "but it's a problem that can be overcome. I don't think there's any question there's concern about it. There is a feeling in some circles that things are a bit out of control. I don't think it's out of control. Those of us who are fairly close to it believe it is a manageable situation."

"I'm always concerned when one athlete is involved in an incident," says Schultz. "You end up taking one step forward and two backward. You have 600 athletes here and one has a problem, and it's perceived that they all have problems. That's the fallacy of it. I think we have a good program, one that's reached a level of respectability. Ninety-nine percent of it is very positive. That's what makes this hurt so bad. You try to do things right and have quality. One incident can destroy all the good work and all the positives. That's something you have to live with."

"All these incidents have been brought to public attention," says Virginia President Robert M. O'Neil. "What one most ought to be concerned with is if you have reason to believe problems are cropping up and are being ignored or hidden. If people are concerned, I want them to be concerned in the total context."

"There is surely no inevitable conflict or tension between athletics success and academic stature. The incidents here or at other schools in the Atlantic Coast Conference do not seem at variance with other programs in the country. Everyone wishes there weren't transgressions, but to draw an inference of a debasement of standards I think is not warranted. When I see or hear about a few athletes who don't live up to everyone's expectations, I am struck by how few rather than how many."

Faculty assessments ranged from endorsement of the product (English

"I've indicated to (the NCAA Presidents Commission, which he chairs) that my belief is that the principal role of the Presidents Commission is to exert influence to get institutions back in control of the athletics programs. That doesn't mean specifying detail types of things such as schedules as much as it means making certain that the programs are run as complementary but subordinate to all academic activities of a university, free from the excesses that seem to be around us today....

"We have given away the institutional control to the NCAA, because we've abdicated those responsibilities. I want to return some of that control to the institutions. That means that the chief executives of those campuses have to be willing to let the buck stop at their offices. They haven't done that."

"The older (Federal) loan programs, which date to the 1950s, have been a blessing to many students who otherwise wouldn't have been able to afford a college education."

"Now, however, there are some emerging concerns about their impact on student choices of what to major in and what kind of jobs to seek."

"Sizable outstanding loans affect the career choices of students," the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching said in a report last year. "Getting a good-paying job right after graduation becomes a necessity. Graduate school looks less attractive. Sizable loan balances inhibit the willingness of graduates to take further risks."

"It means you might opt for a career in private industry that assures a hefty paycheck. What you might reject are career choices that are either lower-paying or fraught with financial uncertainties."

"Those jobs, say the Carnegie Foundation report and others in higher education, are ones in university teaching and/or research or the risky entrepreneurial path that in recent years has produced many technological breakthroughs."

"Differences in the two bills (Senate and House higher education measures) in all likelihood will be resolved this summer. But the larger debate over the direction of American education, and the role of the student-aid programs in it, will continue through many more commencement addresses."

"There are three responses to not doing well (in athletics). There's the initial sadness, but that doesn't usually last long. The second response occurs when the sadness becomes an obsession."

"In the extreme case, the third stage, you become completely obsessed by it because it's the most important thing in your life."

Athletes can make the grade

To the Editor:

I was intrigued by your "Academics makes the grade in recruiting process" article. NCAA legislation has forced Division I coaches to recruit under tougher academic standards. Obviously, recruiting has been somewhat changed by this new rule. But what kind of success would these football coaches have—and coaches in all other sports—if student-athletes must possess a 3.000 grade-point average to receive an athletics scholarship? To me, this seems far more significant.

At California Lutheran University, an NCAA Division II school, this is exactly the program. For incoming freshmen to receive a university-funded athletics scholarship, the athlete must have a 3.000 GPA or a 2.750 GPA with a score of 1000 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

The program was put in effect three years ago when CLU decided to upgrade its athletics program by joining the NCAA at the Division II level. Although it seems the coaches' hands are tied, Cal Lutheran has enjoyed tremendous recruiting success with this program.

The success, I believe, results from a large number of student-athletes who are more concerned with academics than athletics. The myth in collegiate athletics today is that few, if any, athletes are interested in obtaining an education.

Our 25-year history includes a national championship football team and dozens of players who have enjoyed careers in professional football and baseball. But our primary concern, which should be the primary concern of all colleges and universities, is a quality education. And we need no NCAA rule to obtain our goal.

professor Irby Cauthon: "A good university needs a good athletics team; everything seems to be running very smoothly here") to disapproval on philosophical grounds (history professor Paul Gaston: "I think we paid too high a price five years ago, 10 years ago, 15 years ago; I don't think any university has any business giving athletics scholarships").

Such comments were bridged by middle-ground peeks at the natural tensions that exist between the athletics and academic realms at any college.

"The faculty always assumes (athletics) is a necessary evil and that if it doesn't get out of hand we can tolerate it," says government professor Henry Abraham, who also is chair of the faculty senate. "I would say there is never a senate meeting where a faculty member doesn't raise the issue."

By and large, professors label Virginia as above the norm in its treatment of athletics.

The fact is that Mr. Jefferson's university is attempting a difficult balancing act—competing with, say, Pennsylvania or Cornell academically, while booking athletics contests against the likes of Penn State and Houston.

"I've been here 25 years," says Sedgewick. "For those associated with the institution, it's always been a special place. But the point is, it's changed incredibly. When I came here, it was a respectable Southern institution with an athletics program that was a disaster. A lot of people who were here were perfectly happy with that."

Sedgewick continued, "Now, it has become a national institution with high ambitions. We have a nationally known faculty. We have an undergraduate academic program that seeks to compete with the Ivy League—and at the same time to have an athletics program that seeks to compete with anyone in the country. Can the institution do both things? It can, but it has to recognize what is involved. It creates pressure on the athletes to cope with both."

Such pressures are cited by some observers as a possible prod to misbehavior—that psychological problems, if not academic difficulties, may result from the burdens placed on athletes. That doesn't explain why Duke and North Carolina—other ACC members with lofty academic aims—have not experienced similar behavioral problems among their athletes of late. Still, it seems safe to say Virginia athletes deal with factors that can prove stressful.

"Unless you're really bright and have good verbal skills—and I think that's crucial here—you have to give up more than you used to have to give up," says Welsh. "The pressures are greater. Football coaches are asking much more of players than they used to ask. When I was an assistant at Penn State 14 years ago, I had meetings with the quarterbacks once or twice a week, and there was no weight program. Now, between the running and the weights and the extra meeting time, it's harder to be a normal student. There aren't many Jim Dombrowskis (Virginia's all-America tackle as well as an honor student) these days."

"Athletes have special problems," says Ed Floyd, the university's provost. "Whatever their preparation and background and that varies more widely than the normal student—they have other special pressures on them. We have a debt to help them adjust."

Floyd and others concede Virginia bends its admissions standards for athletes. "We are aware we take more of a risk in some areas, and one would be grant-in-aid athletes," says Floyd.

Adds history professor Alan Williams, the school's faculty chair of athletics: "It's obvious we do take academic risks. The question is, are your academic risks also your social risks?"

The key is to fit in. And in that respect, John Utton, student body president, concurs with Welsh's worlds-apart thoughts. "There is a separate community—the athletics community—which is not integrated enough into the rest of the community," he says. "The rest of us are steeped in the honor system and the judicial system. The isolation from that system may come into play with these incidents."

"Racism that still permeates our society highlights all of this," says Gaston, who—while opposed to big-time college athletics—feels Virginia's program has "helped to break down so many of the things that made this place hard to admire: its exclusivity, its racism. On balance, that's better than worrying about SAT scores and Virginia's reputation being sullied."

"This may be a transitional type of period," says government professor Ken Thompson. "You're going after promising kids from disadvantaged neighborhoods. I've wondered if during this transition, the faculty could do more. It's a tricky thing."

Schultz says, "The thing you're finding today is that these kids are not very interested in your being involved in their private lives. Sometimes, I think they think we're being too paternalistic in trying to get them going in the right direction. We have to wonder: Are we trying to direct their lives too much?"

Such questions nag at Virginia's extended family as it sifts through a series of incidents for meaning. The hope around Charlottesville, as vice-president for student affairs Ernie Ern says, is that "unless history proves me wrong...the conclusion so far is that this is a series of isolated incidents involving some prominent people. I would contend that because of the prominence an athlete gets—or a school politico—that those persons themselves are paying a price, that they cannot step out of line and that when they do, confidentiality is not necessarily maintained."

"Does the public perceive there is a problem?" says Williams. "I'd probably have to say yes. People ask me about it a lot. One has to be concerned how the public views the university through its athletes."

"The more incidents you have, the more strength you give people who think the tail is wagging the dog," says Holland. "I think if our attitude was just to keep these guys eligible and not work with them to help them, there would be that tension. Nobody is trying to wiggle around something. I don't think anyone is more concerned than us."

Holland pauses. "Are we paying a price?" he says. "That's a legitimate question. It's one we're asking ourselves. I think the answer is no. But it's not a simple no."

Top women leaving athletics worries Longhorns' Lopiano

Everything else being equal, women's athletics director Donna Lopiano of the University of Texas, Austin, would hire a female coach over a man every time.

"You always come up with about three names; and if a woman is in that pool, I will offer whatever it takes to get the woman," said Lopiano. "That's my personal preference. If I can't get the woman, I will hire a male among the top three."

"All full-time assistant coaches (in women's sports at Texas) are women, and that's my policy—only because if we don't practice affirmative action, in terms of teaching young coaches who can be the next generation of head coaches, we're never going to be able to hire a female head coach."

But Lopiano's policy notwithstanding, as the number of women participating in intercollegiate sports has grown, employment opportunities have rapidly declined.

"Most people are horrified when I tell them about the numbers administratively or in coaching," said Lopiano, who oversees an athletics program that won three women's NCAA championships this year.

In the early 1970s, just after the formation of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, more than 90 percent of the coaches and administrators in women's sports were women.

Statistics compiled by Professors R. Vivian Acosta and Linda Carpenter of Brooklyn College of New York show that percentage has now declined to 50.6.

Also, since the previously male-oriented NCAA began offering programs in women's athletics in 1981, the number of major-college men's and women's athletics programs that operate under the supervision of a male athletics director has continued to increase to the point where the situation now exists in 90.6 percent of those programs.

"It is even more striking to note that 38 percent of women's intercollegiate athletics programs have no female at all involved in their administration," Acosta and Carpenter said in a 1985 report.

Their survey of athletics administrators showed that females ranked "success of the old boys' club" as the most important cause of the diminishing role of women in athletics.

"Women aren't in power in terms of hiring," Lopiano said in a recent interview with the Associated Press. "The good ol' boys' club which is controlling Division I women's programs is doing the hiring, and they're using their male networks to do that."

Donna A. Lopiano

Lopiano said another reason more men are coaching women's teams is that salaries have risen considerably. She said for 10 years, when golf was a club sport at the University of Texas, coach Pat Weis made zero salary from coaching, but now she makes $36,000.

"That position now is very appealing to a lot of people, including men," Lopiano said. "And men, because they've been in the (coaching) business longer, have the credentials—have the experience—so you're looking at a situation where economically, it's worthwhile for them to compete very strongly for those positions."

Asked if women do a better job than men of coaching women, Lopiano said, "Yes. My gut reaction is I score them higher, and this is after 10 years of working with the best in the business. I score women head coaches higher on sensitivity to kids and organizational skills...without a doubt, organizationally, they're superb in terms of public relations, the little things that make me able to market their programs better."

Does she expect the trend toward more men coaches in women's athletics to continue?

"Yes, I probably do. I see women leaving administration," she said. "I see women who have been in the business for 10, 20 years, even the bright women—especially the bright women—saying, 'You knock your head against the wall in education when I could be making twice the amount of money that I'm making here running my own business.' And they're right, too."

we're carefully limiting our TV appearances. If it ever comes down to every man for himself as far as football telecasts are concerned, we would make out all right. But that's not the point. We want to do what's best for everybody, because what's good for college football is good for Penn State.

"It's possible the TV situation could bring pressure to have a play-off for the national championship in that the networks would pay a high price for the regular-season games if the deal was tied in to the rights for a championship play-off."

pamphlet just published by the University of Virginia. Its 22 pages contain more useful advice, guidance and perspective than all the high school baccalaureate addresses I've heard in 35 years—including those I've made.

"The booklet, 'Life after Liberal Arts,' is based on a survey of 2,000 alumni of the university's college of arts and sciences. Ninety-one percent of the survey respondents, representing an array of professions, not only believe that liberal arts prepared them for fulfilling careers but would recommend liberal arts majors to student considering those same careers.

"At a time when too many parents and counselors are looking at colleges as a sort of trade school, pressing students into such 'hot' majors as engineering and computer science, these undergraduate generalists offer a different view of what college should do.

"...more important than the revelation that undergraduate majors have essentially no bearing on ultimate careers is the advice...that they (future college students) and their parents should stop thinking of college as an assembly line that automatically deposits them, after four years, into lucrative professions. College, they (survey respondents) believe, should provide a solid general education. Far more important to career success, they say, is experiential learning—extracurricular activities, internships and summer jobs—writing and thinking skills and the students' own initiative."

"I made a complete break from football. I threw my helmet and shoes in the ashcan after I tried out with the Denver Broncos in 1971. Sure, I had played since the fifth grade; it had been a major influence on my life. But football was a bonus. I didn't put the focus of my life on playing pro football.

"I always assumed I'd have to get into a real job. In the real world, you can only live off football so long.

"I might get in the door to see someone and the name rings a bell, but not too many businessmen want to talk football."

Sonny Cox, head men's basketball coach
Martin Luther King High School, Chicago

"Martin Luther King was designated as an Options for Knowledge School, specializing in radio, television and business. Since I was the basketball coach as well as a counselor, I just made sure some of the kids who were interested in communications were 6-8 and 6-9.

"People talk about me and criticize me, but I'm a ghetto fighter from Cincinnati. I believe that you use whatever you can use to get an education, to make money and get ahead."

Possible CWS replacement

To the Editor:

Previous to the developing possibility that our cherished Division I baseball tournament may leave Omaha, I have never in 36 years of college coaching considered a letter to the editor; so this is a first.

Cornell never has played, and realistically may never play, in Rosenblatt Stadium. Nevertheless, with a very strong and long-time involvement in college baseball and considering that our Big Red (Cornell University) team has played most of the teams that have made it to the final eight, the Omaha tournament is very special to me.

I have two questions that I am sure are shared with the majority of college baseball coaches and everyone who has been and is involved with the College World Series: If it is decided that the seating capacity at Rosenblatt dictates that the CWS is moved to a new city and a larger stadium, what happens if TV ratings do not support the continuation of a four-team, two-day format at the new site? Will Omaha be waiting to take us back and try us one more time?

I also have a suggestion for the city of Omaha and the many, many fine people who have supported the Division I tournament since it was moved to Nebraska in 1950. If TV has or does determine that the CWS leave Omaha, take a good look at Division II as a replacement. This would mean less media coverage and possibly fewer first-round draft choices, but it would make a fine tournament, with excellent players, great coaches and outstanding teams.

There will be problems and adjustments during the "honeymoon year," but there is solid potential that this arrangement could develop into a solid marriage that TV ratings won't break up.

The committee also recommended that final-four participants receive rings as standardized awards instead of watches. At the regional level, it was recommended that watches be awarded instead of plaques.

Speakers

College Athletic Conference and Big East committees.

Topics and speakers for the individual sessions are as follows:

"The Art and Science of Sports Marketing," with speaker John Carroll, president of Carroll and Company and founder of Capital Sports, Inc., one of the world's top sports-marketing organizations. Capital Sports has represented the 1980 Winter Olympics, the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, the New York City Marathon and the Colgate Dinah Shore Golf Classic.

"How To Develop a Marketing Plan," with Frank Cuzzi, former vice-president, Ohlmeyer Advertising, and currently general manager, Host Communications, Inc. An instructor of sports-marketing and management courses at New York University and Cornell University, Cuzzi is the former marketing director for the Major Indoor Soccer League. He has been an account supervisor for Turner Broadcasting Sales, Inc.

"Fund-raising for Divisions II and III," with Louis M. Marciani, athletics director, Salisbury State College. An established administrator, fund-raiser and marketing expert, Marciani developed and implemented a microcomputer system used in financial management, public relations and fund-raising. He has written for several publications and has spoken at the Athletic Business Conference and the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

"Super Session," with Phillip Wexler, president, Phillip Wexler and Associates, La Jolla, California, will open the August 16 sessions. The "super session" is intended as a motivational experience for participants.

Wexler is the author of "Non-Manipulative Selling," which was selected by the business films division of Walt Disney Productions for its first series of sales-training films.

"Event Management I," with Jack Lengyel, athletics director, University of Missouri, Columbia. Lengyel spearheaded numerous marketing and fund-raising efforts as athletics director at California State University, Fresno, before assuming his position at Missouri. Prior to that, he was instrumental in rebuilding the Marshall University football program.

"Packaging Your Product for Sponsorship," with David Wilkinson, president, The Sport Marketing Institute, Ontario, Canada. He raised more than $2 million for the Ontario Volleyball Association as its executive director and has spoken to sports-marketing audiences in more than 15 countries.

The NCAA Professional Development Seminar will be held at Indianapolis' Radisson Plaza Hotel. Registration fee is $145 for NCAA members, $125 each for three or more representatives from one institution. Late payment (after July 25) is $160. The fee includes the seminar sessions, reception, continental breakfast, luncheon, seminar notebook and all materials.

Special discount rates are available through American Airlines by contacting Fugazy International Travel (800/243-1800). Hotel reservation cards will be mailed upon confirmation of seminar registration. Room rates are $60 for single or double occupancy. For more information, contact Beverly Reynolds, Host Communications, 606/253-3230, or James A. Marchiony at the NCAA national office.

Council subcommittee sets schedule for study of length of playing seasons

After reviewing its charge and mapping a preliminary course of action, the Special NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Playing Seasons discussed the current structure of basketball playing seasons during a July 11 meeting in Washington, D.C.

"Inasmuch as negotiations for a new television contract for NCAA tournament games will begin in a few months, members of the committee deemed it appropriate to look at current basketball playing seasons," said John H. Leavens, NCAA director of compliance and staff liaison to the special Council subcommittee.

Leavens said the group determined that no recommendation for amendments to current NCAA playing-season legislation would be made to the Council for introduction at the 1987 Convention.

Most of this first meeting was taken up with a review of the group's charge. Since this recently appointed Council subcommittee has been given a relatively flexible timetable, Leavens said members of the group are interested in conducting fairly extensive research in several areas.

"The basic charge is for the special subcommittee to study the length of playing seasons and other elements that affect the academic performance of student-athletes in all divisions," he explained. "The subcommittee also will look at factors that influence the equity of competition among institutions in each division and look at the financial ramifications (to member institutions) of current playing seasons.

"The concept at this point is to conduct an in-depth study of factors related to playing-season length in each sport in which the NCAA sponsors championships competition. The Presidents Commission had recommended a model study using baseball, but subcommittee members believe that there are concerns that are specific to each sport, which makes separate studies more appropriate."

Leavens indicated that the research staff of the national office likely will be involved in the collection of data for the group. The subcommittee will meet again September 11-12 in Kansas City.

Compliance forms mailed to members

Forms and instructions for gathering data on compliance with NCAA legislation have been mailed to all member institutions, according to John H. Leavens, NCAA director of compliance.

Instructions and forms relating to recently enacted NCAA legislation, along with existing forms (i.e., the student-athlete statement, institutional and athletics staff members' compliance forms) should have been received by member institutions.

Included in the mailings, which were concluded in late June, were:

- Division I academic-reporting form [see NCAA Bylaw 5-6(e)]—This form, which applies only to Division I members of the Association, must be completed and returned to the national office by October 1.

Leavens indicated that the Administrative Committee, in its July 20 meeting, will discuss a question that has arisen concerning the form. Specifically, the matter relates to the need for Division III institutions to report on those sports that are classified as Division I and to the need for Division I institutions to include information on those sports that are classified in Division III. An Administrative Committee action on this issue will be reported in the July 30 issue of The NCAA News.

- Institutional self-study guide [see Constitution 4-2(b)]—The ISSG users guides were mailed to chief executive officers in late May. The booklet provides guidelines for the conduct of a self-study once in every five-year period, beginning August 1, 1986.

The completed self-study is to be maintained on file with the chief executive officer and be made available for review by NCAA staff members. However, Leavens noted that the ISSG guidelines contained a notice-of-completion form that must be returned to the national office upon completion of the self-study.

- Financial audit guidelines—This annual review is applicable to all NCAA member institutions. The booklet that was prepared and distributed by the compliance staff includes suggestions for conducting the audit and is intended to provide flexibility for member institutions with diverse financial-management plans.

Like the self-study, the financial audit should be kept on file by the member institution and be available for review by NCAA staff members.

- Certification of compliance—One form is used to certify institutional compliance with NCAA legislation and must be signed by the chief executive officer. Leavens noted that forms returned by the September 15 deadline that have not been signed by the CEO will not be accepted.

The other form is to be signed by all athletics department staff members and is used to certify their individual compliance with NCAA legislation. Like the institutional form, the staff members' certification must be completed and returned to the NCAA national office by September 15.

- Student-athlete statement—This form, which is to be filed with the institution's athletics director, must be completed prior to the start of a student-athlete's competition as a member of a varsity team. In addition to providing information on applicable NCAA legislation, the 1986-87 form also will include information on the Association's postseason championships drug-testing program, including a drug-testing consent statement to be completed and signed by the student-athlete.

Questions about any of these forms should be directed to Leavens at the NCAA national office.

Test monitoring future teachers challenged

A Federal appeals court has ordered a trial for a challenge of a Texas law that requires college students to pass a standardized test before they can take education courses necessary for certification as teachers.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans threw out a temporary injunction against the Texas requirement and ordered trial of a challenge to the law that requires college students to pass the Pre-Professional Skills Test before they can take education courses necessary for certification as teachers.

The suit challenging the law claims the test is biased against Blacks and other minorities and that requiring the test would result in depriving public school students of teachers of minority races, the Associated Press reported.

The 5th Circuit ruling dissolved a preliminary injunction issued by U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice.

Association

professor of educational psychology, Kentucky Wesleyan College (3-3), and Edwin W. Lawrence, director of athletics, University of Alaska, Fairbanks (4-8).

Division III members are Rocco J. Carzo, director of athletics, Tufts University (Region I-District I); Patricia A. Rogers, associate director of athletics, State University of New York, Albany (2-2); Milton E. Reece, director of athletics, Greensboro College (3-3), and Russell J. Poel, professor of chemistry, North Central College (4-4).

Those wishing to nominate persons for any of the vacant officer or Council positions should refer to Constitution 5-5(c), which lists the Association's geographical regions for purposes of Council representation.

A brief paragraph describing the qualifications of the candidates should accompany the nomination form that appears on this page.

"The district court issued a preliminary injunction requiring the Texas Education Agency to permit students to enroll in education courses who would have been qualified to do so but for their having failed the PSST," 5th Circuit Judge Alvin Rubin said.

"The district court did not determine, however, whether the test is a valid measure of the basic skills essential to perform satisfactorily in teacher education courses.

"A state is not obligated to educate or certify teachers who cannot pass a fair and valid test of basic skills necessary for professional training, and the record contains considerable evidence tending to show that the PSST is a valid measurement of such skills," Rubin said.

Texas educators say they are confident the state can prove its tests are not a biased requirement for public school teachers.

Texas also requires an "exit-level" test upon graduation and before receiving a teaching certificate.

"We're pleased the court ruled in our favor," said Education Commissioner William Kirby. "We do not believe our tests before and after education training are biased. We feel we will be able to sustain our case in the courts."

Southland, Gulf Star undergo changes in membership

Louisiana Tech University, a member of the Southland Conference for 16 years, will leave the conference June 30, 1987. Louisiana Tech is the third conference school to drop its affiliation in recent years. The University of Southwestern Louisiana left the league in 1981 to pursue Division I-A football status. The University of Texas, Arlington, left the Southland this year after dropping its football program. Stephen F. Austin State University, Sam Houston State University and Southwest Texas State University have joined the Southland to bring conference membership back up to eight schools. All board agreed that the trend toward increased subsidization in Division I lacrosse is not a direction Washington and Lee is prepared to follow."

Oakland University will reinstate its varsity baseball program in 1987 after a six-year absence. The Pioneers were 200-163-2 for nine seasons... Drew University's athletics department is looking for a well-constructed bell to add to the school's athletics traditions. The school wants to mount a large bell to be rung after every victory, which should be often, in view of the school's record. Ranger teams have produced overall winning seasons the past four years and have had 13 student-athletes achieve all-America status since 1980. Athletics director Richard E. Szlasa would like to have information on available bells... Raycom will televise the next three Bluebonnet Bowls. Raycom has carried a number of athletics events in the Southwest Athletic Conference, the Big Eight Conference and the Pacific-10 Conference... Idaho State University will drop its men's golf program but will retain men's tennis, reversing an earlier announcement.

Eastern Illinois University will play football under the lights next season in three home games. The "Brighten O'Brien" project has reached 60 percent of its goal toward lighting the field. The track inside the stadium has been resurfaced as part of the improvement project, but the press-box expansion will be delayed until next year. The lighting project was part of a 10th decade campaign to raise $5 million in five years... Villanova University will add wrestling to its varsity athletics programs next year. Chuck Yarnall and John duPont will coach the team. The Wildcats will field 14 men's varsity teams next year and 10 women's teams... Northwestern State University (Louisiana) has discontinued its men's golf and tennis teams in a move to save about $50,000 because of state education cutbacks... Northeast Missouri State University has dropped its wrestling program, which has been in competition since the 1965-66 season.

Briefly in the News

three schools were members of the Gulf Star Conference... Bridgewater College (Virginia) has begun a renovation project for Jopson Field, which was damaged by flooding last fall. Improvements include permanent bleachers for football, track, baseball, softball, field hockey and lacrosse. Four electronic scoreboards will be installed, along with a baseball warning track. The project, which will cost about $450,000, is scheduled for completion prior to the fall academic term.

Hamilton College has dedicated its new outdoor track in memory of Walter H. Pritchard, class of 1932 and a member of the 1932 U.S. Olympic track team. Pritchard later became a professor of medicine at Case Western Reserve University and chief-of-staff at University Hospitals in Cleveland... Indiana University of Pennsylvania will discontinue its wrestling program for the next three seasons to allow time to determine if resources can be developed to provide support for the program, which was a nonscholarship sport... Washington and Lee University has petitioned the NCAA to reclassify its lacrosse program from Division I to Division III. President John D. Wilson said, "The

NCAA penalizes UTEP track, cross country programs

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has announced that penalties have been imposed upon the University of Texas, El Paso, for violations that occurred in men's and women's cross country and men's and women's indoor and outdoor track in 1983 and 1984.

The NCAA penalties, which were reduced substantially after consideration of mitigating factors, include a three-year probationary period and will prohibit the men's cross country and men's indoor and outdoor track teams from participating in NCAA championships competition in the 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years.

In addition, during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years, the men's and women's cross country and track teams will be prohibited from participating in any track meet or related event unless it is sponsored, promoted, managed and controlled by a collegiate entity. The university's individual team members in men's and women's cross country and track also will be prohibited from competing in noncollegiate events, except during vacation periods, and the university will be required to submit written reports of expenses received by its student-athletes to participate in noncollegiate events during those periods.

In addition, a local track club that was utilized by the former head cross country and track coach to accumulate funds that were used to provide improper payments to several student-athletes will be disassociated from involvement of any kind in the university's athletics program and will be denied the use of university facilities, except as available to the general public.

The university's team records in any NCAA event in which enrolled student-athletes participated while ineligible in 1983 and 1984 shall be deleted by the NCAA, and the university shall return its team awards from such events. As a result of this action, the university will forfeit its 1983 Division I Men's Cross Country Championships team title.

"This case involved a pattern of willful violations that indicated a clear disregard for the governing legislation by the university's former head cross country and track coach," said Frank J. Remington, chair, Committee on Infractions. "The violations included substantial cash payments to student-athletes for their participation and performances in various track-related events, as well as the improper use of funds to exceed the grant-in-aid limitations of the NCAA in cross country and track.

"The committee believes, therefore, that the penalties that were imposed in this case are meaningful and appropriate in that they take into consideration the improper competitive advantage gained by the university, ensure that the university implements sufficient controls to avoid similar problems in the future and recognize the exemplary conduct of the university during the processing of this case.

"It should be emphasized," Remington said, "that the committee initially determined that a three-year ban on intercollegiate competition in cross country and indoor and outdoor track would be appropriate in this case. The final penalties, however, were significantly reduced because of the following actions by the university: (1) self-disclosure of numerous violations in the case; (2) swift handling of eligibility issues; (3) efforts to seek cooperation of enrolled student-athletes in providing candid responses during the investigation, and (4) efforts to secure all available information concerning the violations and to turn that information over to the NCAA's enforcement staff. In this regard," Remington said, "the committee wishes to express its appreciation publicly to Judge T. Udell Moore, who conducted extensive research on behalf of the university that aided in determining the existence and extent of NCAA violations."

A statement of the initial penalties considered in the case, a statement of the significant mitigating factors, the final reduced penalties imposed by the committee on infractions and a summary of the violations of NCAA legislation found in the case follow:

Penalties considered appropriate prior to consideration of mitigating factors UTEP shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of three years, effective June 13, 1986, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA. Further, the university shall not be permitted to participate in any outside competition in the sports of cross country and indoor and outdoor track during the term of this probationary period.

Review of significant mitigating factors considered in reducing the penalties

Although the NCAA Committee on Infractions considers the scope and nature of the findings in this case to be quite serious, UTEP has demonstrated its clear commitment to compliance with NCAA legislation through: (1) the university's self-disclosure of numerous serious violations to the NCAA and swift handling of eligibility issues; (2) the university's efforts to seek the cooperation of its enrolled student-athletes in providing candid responses during the investigation of this case, and (3) the university's investigative efforts and the extensive research of Judge T. Udell Moore to secure all available information concerning the violations in question and to turn that information over to the NCAA enforcement staff.

Final penalties imposed by the committee on infractions

1. UTEP shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of three years, effective June 13, 1986, it being understood that should any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the NCAA.

2. The university's intercollegiate men's cross country and men's indoor and outdoor track teams shall not be eligible to participate in NCAA Division I men's championships competition during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years.

3. During the 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years, the men's and women's cross country and track teams shall not participate in any track meet or related event (e.g., road race) other than events that are sponsored, promoted, managed and controlled by a collegiate entity; further, the university's individual men's and women's cross country and track team members also shall be prohibited from competing in events other than those described above, except during vacation periods.

4. A track club that was involved in the violations, its officers and members shall be disassociated from any participation in the university's athletics program. Specifically, the officers and members of the track club shall not be permitted to engage in any activities related to the recruitment of prospective student-athletes in cross country and track on behalf of the institution, including but not limited to: in-person (on- or off-campus) contacts with prospects, their relatives or friends; contacts with prospects, their relatives or friends by telephone or by letter, or any other activity that could be construed as recruiting prospective student-athletes. Further, the track club shall not be permitted to provide the UTEP athletics department with any financial contributions or other support services for any purpose, and the club shall not be provided use of the university's facilities or services, except as such facilities and services are available to the general public.

5. The university's team records in any NCAA event in which one of its enrolled student-athletes placed while ineligible as a result of involvement in this case shall be deleted, and the university shall return its team awards from such events.

6. The university shall monitor its cross country and track student-athletes who compete during summer months or vacation periods during the probationary period to ensure that they receive only permissible expenses; further, the university shall report annually to the NCAA enforcement staff all funds received by its student-athletes while competing in such outside competition during the probationary period.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. Violation of the principles governing ethical conduct [NCAA Constitution 3-6(a)]—The former head cross country and track coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that his involvement in and knowledge of certain of the violations set forth in this report demonstrate a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate cross country and track programs contrary to NCAA legislation.

2. Violations of the provisions governing extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes [NCAA Constitution 3-1(a)-(1), 3-1(a)-(3) and 3-1(g)-(5)]—(a) On numerous occasions during a period beginning in January 1983 and continuing through May 1984, the then head cross country and track coach negotiated with event directors for appearance fees for individual student-athletes; further, a substantial portion of these fees were later paid to individual student-athletes through an arrangement by the coach with a track club, and finally, the total amount received through these negotiations was approximately $62,150; (b) in March 1984, an enrolled student-athlete received a check in the amount of $5,000 for his performance in a road race; further, the then head cross country and track coach delivered this check to the young man on behalf of the race sponsor; (c) in February 1984, the then head cross country and track coach gave $4,500 to an enrolled student-athlete as payment for his performance in a marathon; (d) on two occasions during the spring of 1983, a representative of the university's athletics interests arranged for an enrolled student-athlete to receive cashier's checks totaling $8,000 drawn on track club funds for his personal use; (e) on at least two occasions during a period beginning in the 1982-83 academic year and continuing through the 1983-84 academic year, the then head cross country and track coach gave money totaling $3,150 to an enrolled student-athlete for his participation in running competitions; (f) in May 1983, a representative of the university's athletics interests and the then head cross country and track coach arranged for an enrolled student-athlete to receive $2,000 cash for his personal use, and (g) in April 1984, the then head cross country and track coach gave $1,265 to an enrolled student-athlete in recognition of her performances in two track meets.

3. Violation of the principles governing institutional control and financial aid [NCAA Constitution 3-2 and 3-4(a)]—Due to the lack of institutional control exercised over the university's track program, the former head cross country and track coach led numerous prospective student-athletes to believe they would receive full athletics grants-in-aid when, in fact, they subsequently received only partial grants-in-aid from the university; further, this coach then gave cash from track club funds to these student-athletes after their enrollment and directed them to pay certain educational costs with this money, a practice that had the effect of rendering these enrolled student-athletes ineligible.

4. Other violations of NCAA legislation involving coaching staff members [NCAA Constitution 3-1(g)-(5), 3-1(h)-(1) and 3-2, and Bylaws 1-6(a) and 5-6(b)-(1)]—(a) During March 1984, the then head cross country and track coach arranged for three enrolled student-athletes to receive commercial airline transportation for personal travel in conjunction with team travel at no initial cost to the young men; (b) on two occasions during a period beginning in August 1982 and continuing through May 1984, the then head cross country and track coach provided two personal loans totaling $269 to an enrolled student-athlete; (c) in February 1984, the then head cross country and track coach provided a $400 loan to an enrolled student-athlete in order to assist the young man in the purchase of a truck; (d) in July 1983, a then assistant track coach gave $65 cash to an enrolled student-athlete to pay her summer school tuition; (e) in February 1984, the then head cross country and track coach arranged for a $2,000 track club check to be provided to a then assistant track coach as a salary supplement; (f) during the 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years, the university exceeded the value of 14 grants-in-aid in men's cross country and track, and (g) on several occasions during the spring and summer of 1983, then members of the university's cross country and track coaching staff observed several prospective student-athletes working out on the university's track and field training area.

5. Violation of the provisions governing certification of compliance with NCAA legislation. [NCAA Bylaws 5-6(d) and 5-6(d)-(5)]—With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate cross country and track program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the then head cross country and track coach attested on June 28, 1983, on a statement filed with the chief executive officer of the university that he had reported his knowledge of and involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving the institution.

SWC schools enhance programs to deal with drug abuse

Five of the nine Southwest Athletic Conference schools will either revamp or augment their drug-testing programs this fall because of a problem one conference official says is as threatening as the prospect of nuclear war.

Three other schools say they still are working out details for new drug-testing programs, and information was not available for the ninth school—the University of Texas, Austin—the Dallas Morning News reported.

SWC officials said the new programs weren't prompted by the recent cocaine-related deaths of Len Bias, first-round draft choice of the Boston Celtics, and Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers. But most of them said those deaths might heighten the awareness of drug abuse in athletics.

Some physicians associated with athletics programs have said that 20 to 25 percent of college athletes use marijuana and/or cocaine an average of once a week.

"I'd love to tell you that figure sounds high, but I'd be naive if I did," Texas Tech athletics trainer Ken Murray said.

Other SWC officials quibbled with the statistics, but none said there wasn't a problem. And Texas Christian athletics director Frank Windegger said it's more than just a problem.

"Maybe what we need is a fear concept," Windegger said. "A lot of people are fearful of a nuclear war. But I don't have any greater fear than that of drugs and what they are doing. To act like you're not fearful of it is like sticking your head in the sand."

Arkansas is entering its fifth year of drug testing, longer than any other SWC school except Texas A&M.

Dean Weber, the Razorbacks' athletics trainer, said he typically finds 10 percent of Arkansas' athletes test positive for drug use, "but there's probably another 10 to 20 percent you don't find."

The key to a successful drug-testing program is not the incoming test administered to all athletes, but the random tests during the school year, Weber said.

"Not too many kids are dumb enough to get high on something right before they come in to take that test at the beginning of the year," he said. "In our August tests in the last two years, only two athletes have tested positive out of the 320."

Officials say that confidentiality is important in conducting tests.

"What we're trying to tell the athletes is that, if we catch you, we're going to put you in a program, not kick you out," Southern Methodist trainer Cash Birdwell said. "Because of that, we've had some athletes voluntarily come forward to accept counseling."

Two Arkansas players tested positive last year and were admitted to a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center.

Five Texas A&M football players were dismissed from the team in 1980 after a search of their rooms for illegal drugs.

The drug-testing programs at Southwest Conference schools, according to $600,000 cut

Oklahoma State University has announced that it is dropping women's gymnastics in a move designed to help further balance the athletics department budget in 1986-87.

Athletics director Myron Roderick said it was a move originally discussed in March with coach Larry Bihartz. But he said the decision was delayed by mutual agreement until June when a clearer evaluation of private gifts to the department could be made. "We've done everything possible to try to save the gymnastics program at Oklahoma State," Roderick said.

"My job is to balance the budget, and we're going to have to make a $600,000 cut in expenditures from last year to this year."

to SWC administrators and athletics trainers, shape up as follows:

• Arkansas: Two major tests, one in August and one in the spring, with random testing throughout the year. When an athlete tests positive, he will be tested until it turns up negative. If, after three weeks, the athlete still tests positive the athlete will be advised to seek counseling.

• Baylor: One major preseason test, followed by random testing throughout the year. The testing primarily has been for football players the last four years but is being expanded to include all sports this fall. Other details are being worked out.

• Houston: One major preseason test, followed by random testing throughout the year. Testing will be more extensive, organized and have better controls this fall, officials say.

• Rice: No organized drug-testing program. Former football coach Watson Brown conducted some random testing but that will be expanded this year to include testing of all athletes, as well as a drug-education program, an official said.

• Southern Methodist: Two major tests, one in preseason and one unannounced in the spring. Also, random testing during the year. Any athlete who tests positive on the first test is called back for another seven to 10 days later. A second positive test will result in attendance at a school-sponsored drug-rehabilitation program. A third positive test likely would result in suspension, officials say.

• Texas: No major preseason test. Random testing of all athletes is conducted by an outside company. If an athlete tests positive the first time, he or she is placed in a school-sponsored counseling program. If a test is positive a third or fourth time, the athlete is subject to dismissal upon the review of the athletics director, coach and doctor.

• Texas A&M: One major preseason test, then weekly random testing the rest of the year. If an athlete tests positive, school-sponsored drug counseling and weekly testing is required. A second positive test will result in suspension, a requirement to seek more counseling and testing on a weekly basis. A third positive test is grounds for dismissal.

• Texas Christian: One major preseason test, then random testing the rest of the year at coaches' discretion. If an athlete tests positive, the results are sent to a laboratory in Dallas for confirmation, and the athlete is required to seek counseling. A second positive test will result in more counseling and possible suspension.

• Texas Tech: One major preseason test, followed by random testing the rest of the year. If a test is positive, the athlete is required to seek school-sponsored counseling. A second positive test will result in suspension and more extensive counseling.

CoSIDA announces at-large academic all-America teams

Five student-athletes with perfect (4.000) grade-point averages headline the men's at-large academic all-America teams (university and college divisions) announced by GTE. The teams are chosen annually by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Northeast Louisiana University swimmer Scott Claycomb, who carried one of the perfect GPAs as a premedicine major and managed to set school records in three events, was the top vote-getter in university-division balloting.

Six of the 10 student-athletes selected to the college-division first team ran cross country. The combined GPA for the group is 3.940 (excluding one student-athlete whose 4.300 GPA was based on a 5.000 scale), while the cumulative GPA of the university-division first team is 3.780.

Claycomb and University of Montana wrestler Vince Hughes were repeat selections on the university-division first team. In all, 16 of the 60 student-athletes selected to the three teams in the two divisions were repeat all-Americans.

Following is a complete list of the

South Florida placed on probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has announced that the University of South Florida has been placed on probation for a period of one year for violations in men's soccer.

The university will be required to forfeit the value of one grant-in-aid in men's soccer during the 1987-88 academic year, and the university will be required to submit a written report to the NCAA prior to December 1, 1986, that outlines a rules-education program for all athletics department staff members.

No sanctions were imposed regarding postseason competition.

"This case related to arrangements to provide airline transportation for a foreign student-athlete to travel to the university to enroll in 1983," said Frank J. Remington, chair, Committee on Infractions. "It was clear that when the arrangements were made, the athletics department failed to exercise proper administrative control to ensure that the approximate $1,100 cost was paid at the time by the student-athlete."

"The committee believed, therefore, that a one-year probationary period would be appropriate to monitor the athletics program, and that the men's soccer program should be required to forfeit one grant-in-aid for the 1987-88 academic year." Remington said that "the committee has asked me to commend the university's president, John Lott Brown, for his personal cooperation and candor during the committee's consideration of this infractions case."

The case involved violations of NCAA regulations related to institutional control and responsibility, and transportation to enroll.

The following is the complete text of the penalties imposed upon the university and a summary of the violations found in the case.

Penalties to be imposed upon institution

1. The University of South Florida shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of one year, effective July 9, 1986, it being understood that should any penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

2. During the 1987-88 academic year, the university's grants-in-aid in the sport of men's soccer shall be reduced by the value of one full grant from the total value of such awards in effect as of July 1, 1986, plus any additional countable aid that is renewed for current student-athletes prior to the 1986-87 academic

Teacher pay rises

Average pay for teachers rose 23 percent in the past three years, outpacing inflation that has hovered around 10 percent during the same period, an American Federation of Teachers report says.

The report shows the average salary for teachers in the United States increased to $25,240, United Press International reported.

The biggest percentage jumps came in the South and Northeast. Average teacher pay went up 45 percent in Georgia, 33 percent in Vermont and Arkansas, 32 percent in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and 30 percent in South Carolina and New Jersey, the study said.

Alaska has the highest salary at $41,647, and South Dakota has the lowest at $18,095.

The report also concluded average starting salaries for teachers rose 11 percent in the past year, from $15,385 to $17,073. Of the 29 states reporting, California had the top 1985-86 beginning salary at $20,222 and Vermont had the lowest at $12,911.

AFT President Albert Shanker said the findings indicate "progress is being made in the wages we pay American teachers," but more needs to be done.

5-1-(j) nonqualifiers and qualifiers to be studied

The NCAA Research Committee plans to ask member institutions to provide data on student-athletes who do not qualify academically for athletics competition during their freshman year but still enroll in school.

To measure further the impact of the recently amended Bylaw 5-1-(j) on the academic preparation and performance of student-athletes, the committee will seek information on both qualifiers and nonqualifiers who enroll in universities this August.

During its July 10-11 meeting in Kansas City, the committee decided there is a need to monitor the performance of nonqualifiers once they enroll in school. Otherwise, nonqualifiers who do not eventually qualify for participation in athletics after enrollment never would be included in an Association study of the effects of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(2) that begins this year.

Information already is being received from Division I institutions on the academic performance of student-athletes who enrolled as freshmen in 1984. The study ultimately will monitor the progress of five classes through the college years, enabling the Association to collect data on members of those classes and changes in the composition of each class.

The committee now is preparing to send questionnaires checking on the sophomore-year progress of members of the first class and the performance of a second class of freshmen.

In other committee actions involv-

Faculty rep is coauthor of new sports-law text

George W. Schubert, faculty athletics representative at the University of North Dakota, is one of three authors of a new textbook on sports law published by the West Publishing Company.

Joining Schubert, who is dean of North Dakota's University College, in writing the book were Rodney K. Smith, a former North Dakota law professor who is currently a visiting associate professor at the Delaware Law School at Widener University, and Jesse C. Trentadue, associate professor of law at North Dakota.

The book, entitled "Sports Law," is the first on that subject to be published by West Publishing Company, the major publisher of law-school texts in the nation.

ing the study, a policy statement providing guidelines for making data available to interested parties was forwarded to the Administrative Committee for its approval. The statement was drawn up to clear the way for the release of data in a form that protects the anonymity of institutions and individuals involved in the study.

The committee also reviewed seven research proposals. The investigators making the proposals, which deal with topics ranging from "the freshman rule" to academic assistance to athletes, are seeking funding from the Association for their projects.

The committee's review of the proposals touched off a general discussion among members on the types of topics that should be addressed in future Association-sponsored research.

Students pay most of own college bills

A college student's own earnings and savings, in addition to family support, pay for most of the costs of a college education, according to a national survey by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

"Family resources and the students' own earnings together cover 72 percent of college costs, leaving the rest to be made up by grants, loans and scholarships," according to Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation.

"The figures suggest that in the absence of these additional sources, an education at a four-year institution would extend beyond the reach of many college students today," Boyer said.

According to the foundation, a four-year college education for one student at a public institution can range from $21,000 to $39,000; costs can reach $65,000 or more at independent schools.

The report said that borrowing through student loans had increased to 30 percent of all undergraduates in 1980 compared to only 11 percent in 1975.

Boyer, quoted in Higher Education & National Affairs, said, "This growth may be explained, at least in part, by the expanded loan programs at the Federal level. What matters here is that student debt, whatever the source, has dramatically increased...."

College baseball overrated as step to pros, Mets' official says

You're 18 years old, a high school senior and a hot-shot pitching prospect.

A knock on the door, and in comes a major-league scout who puts $10,000 and a contract on the table and says sign here, and it's yours.

Another knock, and enter a college baseball coach carrying a scholarship, the promise of a college education and the suggestion that a good college career could make the $10,000 a pittance. After all, didn't Tom Seaver sign for $50,000 out of college?

The predicament of what to do has been present for 18-year-old baseball prospects for years. Most of them have taken the money and taken the first bus to the minor leagues to start working their way toward the majors.

But some have chosen education first, and still have gone on to outstanding baseball careers almost directly from college.

Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox is not sorry he turned down several major-league offers from the Twins and the Mets and went to college. He later pitched the University of Texas, Austin, to the College World Series championship.

"My father had just died, and the Mets' offer wasn't comparable to the Social Security benefits my family would have lost if I'd gone to work playing baseball. I made a lot of decisions based on my family," he said.

"I did all the things I wanted to do." He signed after his third year in school and made it to the majors after only one year in the minors.

"I showed that college kids could make it fast to the majors," he said, and gave Texas' Pete Incaviglia and California's Mike Witt as other examples. Others are San Francisco's Will Clark, the Yankees' Dave Winfield and Atlanta's Bob Horner.

There have been many others who went to college, spent brief time in the minors and barged into the majors—Seaver, Reggie Jackson, Fred Lynn, Mike Schmidt and all-star Hubie Brooks.

But baseball people present another side for that undecided 18-year-old.

"Those three years of maturity probably helped him," Fred Nelson, a former college baseball coach who now is the farm director for the Houston Astros, said of Clemens. But he also pointed out that had Clemens signed out of high school, he might have 60 major league victories by now, instead of seven last season and 15 this season.

"How do you know?" Nelson said. "Some guys mature physically and emotionally in college and find themselves."

He also cited the possibility of being injured during a college career, or maybe being a No. 2 pro draft pick out of high school whose value decreases in college.

Joe McIlvaine, director of the operations for the Mets, was stronger in his belief that college for most baseball prospects is the wrong way to go.

"College baseball is overrated," he said. "1985 was a good college year, and four made it to the majors. That's rare. There were none this year."

Playing baseball in college means perhaps 60 games a year, he noted. One year in professional baseball with spring training, a minor-league season and maybe a training league can mean 200 games, he said. "The only way to improve is to practice," he said.

A good example, he said, is Bo Jackson, who chose baseball over pro football but who had played only one full season of baseball at Auburn University.

"If anyone thinks he'll be in the majors this year, I'll challenge that," McIlvaine said. "I think it will take this year, next year and maybe part of the next year. But he has the talent, and if he sticks with it, he can make it."

Jackson, and others, get their best training in pro baseball, not college, McIlvaine said. "We specialize in baseball. We're the experts," he said, noting that there are special instructors for outfielders, infielders, catchers and pitchers. In college, you've got one coach, he said.

He also said NCAA rules allow grants-in-aid for only one year, and they must be renewed. So there is no guarantee of a four-year scholarship. The Mets, he said, have a scholarship plan with guaranteed money for those players who sign and still want to continue college.

All that said, "If a kid has a reasonable chance to be a pro, he should go out," McIlvaine said.

It's one man's opinion. Clemens, Incaviglia and the others who sharpened their skills in college obviously had another view.

This article was written by Mike Recht for the Associated Press.

Two Texas institutions reclassified to I-AA

Two Texas institutions, Sam Houston State University and Stephen F. Austin State University, were reclassified to Division I-AA by the NCAA Classification Committee at its July 10 meeting in Bar Harbor, Maine.

The reclassification for both schools, which have been in Division II with their women's basketball programs already in Division I, is effective September 1, 1986.

Six other institutions were reclassified to Division I-AAA, including Armstrong State College; Coastal Carolina College of the University of South Carolina; University of Maryland, Baltimore County; University of North Carolina, Asheville; Winthrop College, and Wright State University. The effective date is September 1, 1986, for all except Wright State, which is September 1, 1987. None of the six institutions sponsors football.

The committee placed the following institutions in unclassified status effective September 1, 1986:

Bethune-Cookman College (Division I-AA all sports); California Institute of Technology (Division III men's basketball only); Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck (Division I-AAA all sports); Robert Morris College (Division I-AAA all sports); Villanova University (Division I-AA football only), and Gallaudet College (Division III football and men's basketball only).

Unclassified status was removed, effective September 1, 1986, for Baptist College (Division I-AAA), Kentucky State University (Division II), Lane College (Division III), Pembroke State University (Division II) and Pfeiffer College (Division II).

In accordance with the Classification Committee policy that a member may hold unclassified status for a period of no longer than three years, Franklin College was reclassified to corresponding membership as a result of its noncompliance with the men's basketball scheduling requirement of Bylaw 11-2(f) for that period of time.

The committee also adopted a policy for increased monitoring of the minimum numbers of contests and participants required in Bylaw 11-4, noting that only games against varsity teams from four-year, degree-granting institutions may be counted.

In addition, the committee noted that noncompliance with the sports sponsorship requirements for women's sports will affect an institution's entire varsity athletics program.

The following petitions for reclassification in one sport were approved effective September 1, 1986 (except as noted):

University of California, Santa Barbara (new Division III football program); Cortland State University College (Division III women's soccer from Division I); Edinboro University of Pennsylvania (Division I men's wrestling from Division II); Quincy College (new Division III football program), effective September 1, 1987, and Washington and Lee University (Division III men's lacrosse from Division I).

Applications for membership were approved for NCAA Council action from Dominican College (Division III); Loras College (Division III); Menlo College (Division III); Thomas College (Division III); Wells College (Division III); Wesley College (Division III), not eligible for NCAA championships until September 1, 1988, and University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire (Division III).

Baseball Committee seeking revision of new CWS format

The NCAA Baseball Committee has voted to ask for reconsideration of the single-elimination, final-four College World Series format recently adopted by the Executive Committee to begin in 1988.

The Baseball Committee decided during its July 13-16 meeting in Aspen, Colorado, to submit its recommendation to the Division I Championships Committee August 9 in Seattle. During that meeting, the committee hopes to present what it believes may be alternatives to the single-elimination format.

Members of the Baseball Committee chose not to discuss any of the committee's recommendations publicly at this time, preferring to present their proposal directly to the championships committee.

Matthews moves up at ESPN

Loren Matthews has been promoted to vice-president, programming, at ESPN, according to Steven M. Bornstein, senior vice-president, programming and production.

"Over the past four years, Loren has played an integral role in the development of ESPN's programming and programming strategies," Bornstein said.

Matthews had been director of programming since September 1983. He joined the programming department in January 1982 as director of program planning. He came to ESPN in January 1980 as director of broadcast promotions and was responsible for the creation and production of all ESPN on-air promotions.

NCAA places Bradley on probation for basketball violations

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has announced that Bradley University has been placed on probation for a two-year period for violations occurring in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program.

The penalty includes a postseason sanction that will prohibit the men's basketball team from participating in the 1987 Division I Men's Basketball Championship or in any other postseason competition following the 1986-87 season.

In addition, no member of the men's basketball coaching staff will be permitted to engage in any off-campus recruiting activities (including the evaluation of prospects) for a one-year period.

No television sanction was imposed in the case, and the men's basketball team remains eligible for such appearances.

Frank J. Remington, chair, committee on infractions, stated that "the violations found in this case primarily involved one student-athlete and his family. The committee concluded, however, that the university obtained a competitive advantage as a result of the violations, and the committee was concerned that once the violations were discovered, the men's head basketball coach attempted to conceal his involvement in the case.

"Based upon these factors," Remington said, "the committee considered it appropriate for the penalty to affect the recruiting efforts of the men's basketball staff and for the men's basketball team to be prohibited from participating in postseason play for one year."

The violations in the case involved unethical conduct by the men's head basketball coach, improper recruiting inducements, entertainment and extra benefits to a student-athlete and his family. The student-athlete who was

The following is a complete text of the penalties imposed upon Bradley University and a summary of the violations in this case.

Penalties to be imposed upon institution

1. Bradley University shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years, effective July 8, 1986, it being understood that should any penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

2. The university's intercollegiate men's basketball team shall end its 1986-87 basketball season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest, and the team shall not be eligible to participate in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship or in any other postseason competition during that academic year.

3. No member of the men's basketball coaching staff shall be permitted to participate in any off-campus recruiting activities (including scouting activities involving the evaluation of prospective student-athletes) for a one-year period.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. Violation of the principles of ethical conduct [NCAA Constitution 3-6(a) and the Opening Statement of the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program]—The men's head basketball coach failed to deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that during interviews conducted by the NCAA enforcement staff, the head coach denied involvement in violations when questioned specifically about these matters. In addition, the head coach changed his story in his appearance before the Committee on Infractions when he admitted at least one violation when the available evidence clearly established that the violation occurred, changed his answers from "no" to "I do not recall" as to certain violations and persisted in his denials regarding additional violations that were found by the committee to have been committed.

2. Violations of NCAA legislation in the recruitment of a prospective student-athlete [NCAA Bylaws 1-1(b), 1-1(b)(1), 1-9(i), 1-9(j) and 1-9(l)]—(a) In September 1980, a member of the university's men's basketball coaching staff arranged for the prospective student-athlete's father and stepmother to receive round-trip transportation by charter aircraft at no cost to them between the young man's home and Peoria in order to accompany the prospect on his official paid visit to the university's campus; (b) in November 1980, a member of the men's basketball coaching staff paid the cost to install a telephone in the prospective student-athlete's home; (c) in December 1980, a representative of the university's athletics interests provided the prospective student-athlete's father and stepmother round-trip automobile transportation between St. Louis, Missouri, and Peoria (a total distance of approximately 370 miles) in order to attend a university basketball game; further, the father and stepmother received lodging at no cost to them at a local motel in Peoria; (d) in March 1981, the men's head basketball coach and a representative of the university's athletics interests improperly entertained the prospective student-athlete's father and stepmother for a meal at no cost to them at a restaurant; and (e) during the 1980-81 academic year, the prospective student-athlete and his family were contacted in person, off campus for recruiting purposes on more than three occasions by members of the athletics department, men's basketball staff and certain representatives of the university's athletics interests.

COMPLIANCE REPRESENTATIVE NCAA Compliance and Enforcement Department

Applications are being accepted for an immediate opening in the newly restructured NCAA compliance and enforcement department. The department's compliance section was created after the June 1985 special Convention to provide support services to member institutions' chief executive officers in their renewed commitment to greater NCAA rules compliance.

A compliance representative's primary responsibility includes:

- Assistance to member institutions in identifying and attacking specific problems and developing procedures to prevent rules violations.
- Development of model procedures and guidelines for successful operation of athletics programs.
- Campus visitation on request of a member institution to assist it in analyzing the overall structure and administration of its athletics programs, and its compliance with NCAA legislation.
- Implementation of the forms and processes used by institutions in conducting the required periodic self-studies and annual financial audits.
- Cooperation with member conference officials in assisting their institutions in rules compliance.

This position requires a working knowledge of NCAA regulations and the ability to communicate effectively, both orally and in writing. It is necessary that the applicant have recent administrative experience in intercollegiate athletics.

Interested candidates should send a letter of application and resume to:

John H. Leavens
Director of Compliance
NCAA
P.O. Box 1906
Mission, Kansas 66201

An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

Fairfield University Director of Athletics & Recreation

Fairfield University is seeking applications for the position of Director of Athletics and Recreation.

A Jesuit University with 2,800 full-time undergraduate students, Fairfield University competes in intercollegiate athletics at the Division I level. The University, affiliated with the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference, sponsors 15 varsity sports (eight men's and seven women's) as well as eight club sports.

In addition to intercollegiate athletics, the University conducts a widely varied intramural program providing competitive opportunities in 17 sports (nine male and eight female).

The Director of Athletics and Recreation supervises two assistants and a business manager, as well as a clerical staff, trainers and coaches. The athletic facilities at Fairfield include six fields dedicated to intercollegiate athletics, three fields for intramural athletics, 10 all-weather tennis courts, a gymnasium and a multi-faceted recreational complex.

The University is seeking candidates who possess strong administrative and leadership qualities along with a demonstrated commitment to the Jesuit ideal of a sound mind in a sound body. Applicants must possess a Master's Degree plus five years of administrative experience within an educational setting.

Compensation is commensurate with qualifications and experience.

The Director of Athletics and Recreation reports to the Vice President for Student Services.

Interested applicants should submit a letter of application, a current resume relating experience to this position and the names, addresses and phone numbers of three references to:

William P. Schimpf
Vice President-Student Services
Fairfield University
Fairfield, Connecticut 06430

Application Deadline: August 4, 1986.

An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 26

Summer orientation programs

The Administrative Committee has reviewed several questions regarding the application of Constitution 3-4-(b)-(1) in reference to providing financial assistance for entering student-athletes attending a member institution's summer orientation program. The committee ruled as follows:

1. An entering student-athlete may qualify for financial aid in conjunction with participation in a member institution's summer orientation program only if the standard for selecting the participants is applied on an objective basis to both athletes and nonathletes.
2. Assuming the appropriate standard for selection of participants is met, financial assistance to attend an institution's summer orientation program may be provided to a Bylaw 5-1-(j) nonqualifier involved in such a program.
3. If such financial assistance (to attend the summer orientation program) is provided to a partial qualifier per Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(2), the receipt of such aid alone would not count as a year of eligibility for the individual.
4. It is not permissible to provide a student-athlete a cash stipend to compensate for summer employment earnings lost as a result of participation in a mandatory orientation program.

If there are questions regarding these issues or other aspects of the application of NCAA legislation to summer orientation programs, member institutions are encouraged to contact the legislative services department.

Printed recruiting aids

In response to questions posed by several member institutions, the Administrative Committee has reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(3) and Case No. 188 (page 339, 1986-87 NCAA Manual) in reference to printed recruiting aids. The committee concluded that this legislation would preclude a member institution from providing postcards or decals to prospective student-athletes or high school or junior college coaches.

Medical expenses

The Administrative Committee has determined that the principle expressed in Case No. 74 (page 307, 1986-87 NCAA Manual) would preclude the payment of transportation expenses for a student-athlete to travel to another location to obtain a second medical opinion regarding an athletically related injury. It was agreed that the provisions of Case No. 74 would be reviewed further during the Council's August 13-15, 1986, meeting.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

They look to be in good health, but some athletes die of heart problems

Less publicized but even more puzzling than the recent cocaine-related deaths of outstanding athletes are the deaths of at least 10 to 15 athletes a year caused by heart disease, congenital heart defects or a combination of the two.

In September of last year, a 19-year-old Texas Tech University guard collapsed and died of cardiac arrest during a pickup basketball game. Cleveland State University forward Paul Stewart, another 19-year-old, died April 30 after suffering cardiac arrest during a pickup game.

In January, Flo Hyman, 31, a volleyball star, died in Japan after an artery in her heart burst during a game.

In each case, the athlete was in superb condition. In each case, the athlete tested clean of drugs.

Hyman died of Marfan syndrome, a genetic condition that weakens the connective tissue in the heart and affects a disproportionate number of tall people. Doctors might be alerted to the condition by its symptoms: arms with a span that exceeds a person's height; nearsightedness, and long or malformed fingers, toes and breastbone.

There were no warning signs for the diseases that killed Stewart or Texas Tech's Edward Robinson.

"Here's a kid who was jogging and sprinting and jumping," Cuyahoga County Deputy Coroner Lester Adelson said of Stewart. "He died of a heart disease more common in people over 45. He was in excellent shape otherwise."

Cleveland State basketball team physician John A. Lombardo said he examined Stewart before last season. There was no record of heart disease in Stewart's family.

Dr. Steven Van Camp, a cardiologist who specializes in athletics medicine, monitors unusual cardiac-related deaths of athletes from his clinic in San Diego, California. Stewart died of calcific atherosclerosis.

"You would not expect hardening of the arteries in a 19-year-old," Van Camp said. "There was no evidence of steroid use, which can sometimes cause arteries to harden," he told the Associated Press.

The cause of death for Robinson was a puzzling phenomenon known as hypertrophic idiopathic cardiomyopathy—longhand for a heart attack caused by heart inflammation of undetermined origin.

"This seemingly healthy athlete suffered sudden, unexplained cardiac arrest," said L. J. Blalack, justice of the peace in Lubbock, Texas. "He was clear of drugs. There was no alcohol present."

"He just collapsed while playing basketball in a university gymnasium."

Drug use among athletes is a growing concern for medical researchers, said Dr. John Schneider, director of the cardiac catheterization lab at the University of Cincinnati hospital.

"There's been very little research done on the effects of cocaine to the heart," Schneider said. "With its growing popularity, you can bet there will be a lot more."

Cocaine poses a special threat to athletes with heart disease, Van Camp said.

"Cocaine is enough to cause a problem by itself," he said. "Heart disease is enough to cause a problem. The two combined... may be lethal."

Van Camp said cases like the deaths of Stewart, Robinson and Hyman occur 10 to 15 times a year, depending on how many cases are considered in a research project.

"What do we know? The bottom line is there is no evidence that exercise hurts the heart," Van Camp said. "For people with structural heart problems, exercise or shock or trauma may trigger cardiac arrest. Why this happens at any one moment, no one knows. Some die at rest."

"Some forms of structural heart disease are very difficult to detect. Most die without any warning."

NYSP seeking help in communities to recover from cutback in funding

Administrators of the National Youth Sports Program (NYSP) are busily trying to make up a $260,000 loss in Federal funds for 1986 by going to industry, private businesses and local governments for help.

Most of the 138 NYSP programs lost $2,000 to $3,000 each because of the recently enacted Gramm-Rudman Federal Reduction Act, which requires automatic cuts and a balanced budget by 1991.

The NYSP program at New Mexico Highlands University asked its local city council for money to pay its staff and received some aid. The University of District of Columbia received computers, televisions and bicycles from private businesses.

But the Supreme Court has ruled that such automatic cutbacks are unconstitutional and that budget cuts are an executive function that should not be performed by an officer of Congress.

What the ruling will mean to the program is not entirely clear, but NYSP national director Ruth M. Berkey, NCAA assistant executive director, is taking a positive approach.

"I think it's a little early to speculate what this means for our program. One possibility is that each program will be examined individually by Congress, and I believe the NYSP has a good chance of survival because of the uniqueness of the sports-skill instruction and the enrichment aspects of the program."

Or it could mean no change at all for the program, which provides a new environment for disadvantaged youths through competitive sports. Congress is expected to vote on a new deficit-reduction measure.

"I think the funding crisis will pass," Berkey said. "But I think that monitoring and further educating Congressional representatives on the values of NYSP is important."

The NYSP is a partnership enterprise between the Federal government and the nation's colleges and universities, acting through the NCAA. Approximately 55,000 youngsters ages 10 to 16 take part in the program, which utilizes sports to direct the competitive urge toward new goals on college campuses throughout the nation for eight weeks each summer.

"This is more than a recreational program," said Lucille Hester, NYSP director at the University of District of Columbia. "Sports is the drawing card. But once we get them here, we educate the total child."

The NCAA provides $350,000 for the program, and the participating institutions donate the services of a project administrator and hire a qualified staff. NYSP received $5.8 million in Federal funds for 1986, a reduction of 4.3 percent (down from $6.1 million in 1985).

"The real satisfaction I get from this program comes from talking to previous participants who tell me that the program gave them new choices and motivated them to do something constructive with their lives," said Christ Petrouleas, NYSP committee chair who has been with the program since 1970.

Instruction is made available in swimming, football, basketball, softball, gymnastics, volleyball, dance, tennis, and track and field. Among the services of the program are a free medical examination to identify previously undetected physical problems. Each participant also receives one free meal and snack daily.

Signing dates announced

Dates for the National Letter of Intent program, administered by the Collegiate Commissioners Association, have been announced, and the CCA has added a provision to allow a junior college graduate to sign a letter of intent even though the prospect signed a binding letter in an earlier signing period. If the signee fails to graduate from the junior college, the first letter of intent will remain binding.

Signing dates for 1986-87 are as follows:

Football—February 11 to April 1, 1987; midyear junior college transfer—December 10, 1986 to January 15, 1987. Men's basketball—November 12 to November 19, 1986, and April 8 to May 15, 1987. All other sports—April 8 to August 1, 1987.

Women's basketball—November 12 to November 19, 1986, and April 8 to May 15, 1987. Volleyball and field hockey—February 11 to August 1, 1987. Midyear junior college transfer—December 10, 1986 to January 15, 1987. All other sports—April 8 to August 1, 1987.

The CCA voted to expand its membership during its recent meeting in Park City, Utah, by establishing an associate membership. Associate members will have a vote on all CCA matters except those concerning membership expansion.

"The CCA believes that it needed to expand its base of operations and include among its members commissioners of conferences that have major national basketball programs and common interests with the CCA," said Kenneth G. Germann, outgoing CCA president and Southern Conference commissioner.

The CCA award of merit was presented to Lloyd Jordan, former Southern Conference commissioner; the CCA football officials' award of merit went to John Adams, Western Athletic Conference supervisor of football officials, and the basketball officials' award of merit was presented to Cliff Harper, former Southeastern Conference supervisor of basketball officials.

A special award of merit was presented to Edward S. Steitz, athletics director at Springfield College and secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee.

Lewis A. Cryer, commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, was elected CCA president; Carl C. James, Big Eight Conference commissioner, was named vice-president, and John Dewey, associate commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

extra benefits to an enrolled student-athlete [Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]—(a) On two occasions during the 1981-82 academic year and on one occasion during the summer of 1982, the men's head basketball coach was involved in arrangements for the father of the student-athlete to be employed; (b) in November 1983, the men's head basketball coach arranged for the student-athlete and the young man's fiancée to be provided round-trip transportation in a private aircraft between Peoria, Illinois, and the young man's home at no cost to them in order to attend a funeral, and (c) during the period spring of 1982 to the fall of 1983, representatives of the university's athletics interests permitted the student-athlete to use several automobiles from two automobile dealerships for personal purposes; further, the head basketball coach made the initial arrangements with one of the representatives on the student-athlete's behalf.

4. Violation of the provisions governing certification of compliance with NCAA legislation [NCAA Bylaw 5-6-(d)-(5)]—With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the head basketball coach attested on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university in 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984 that he had reported to the chief executive officer his knowledge of and involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving the institution.
