Concern for student-athlete's welfare to be included in NCAA constitution

Delegates to the NCAA Convention in 1988 probably will be asked to adopt a revised NCAA Manual that will include constitutional emphasis on the welfare of student-athletes, according to the chair of the special committee charged with simplifying the Association's rules and regulations.

Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University faculty athletics representative and NCAA secretary-treasurer, chairs the Special NCAA Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification, which met July 30-August 1 in Centerville, Massachusetts. "During the August Council meeting, I will report to that group this committee's anticipation of completing its assignment by next summer. We believe the 1988 Convention will be able to consider a revised NCAA Manual for adoption at that time."

Bailey also said the NCAA Council will be asked to approve in concept a new section in Article 3 of the Association's constitution, which outlines the principles for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics.

"With all the concerns that have been voiced over the imposition of demands on student-athletes at member institutions—demands that sometimes intrude on the time these young people have to spend on their education—the members of the special committee feel strongly that the NCAA constitution should contain specific reference to the welfare of student-athletes," Bailey explained.

"We noted in our discussion the many areas of existing legislation where that concern is implied. But nowhere is it specifically stated, so we

Executive Committee approves record budget for Association

Approval of a $57.3 million budget for 1986-87 topped the list of actions taken by the NCAA Executive Committee during the group's August 11-12 meeting in Seattle.

In approving the Association's 1986-87 budget, the Executive Committee committed $2.75 million over the next two years to the NCAA's postseason drug-testing program. Development of the Association's own drug-testing laboratory received a two-year, $2 million allocation, while $750,000 was set aside for expenses during the program's first year of operation.

The Executive Committee also authorized the return of excess receipts from 1985-86 totalling $1.7 million to the membership. Division I members will receive $910,580, which will be returned in the form of increased per diem payments to NCAA championships participants.

Divisions II and III each will receive $394,710. The respective division championships committees have been authorized to determine specific allocations of those moneys, subject to approval by the Association's Administrative Committee.

The 1986-87 budget also includes a $10 increase (from $30 to $40) in the minimum per diem amount to be paid to competitors in Division I championships.

In other action related to postseason drug testing, the Executive Committee voted to suspend the provisions of Executive Regulation 1-14(f)—for the fall sports season—as it applies to student-athletes who test positive for banned substances.

Had this suspension not been approved, entire teams would have been disqualified from team-sport competitions if a student-athlete who materially contributed to that squad's performance had tested positive for a banned substance.

Members of the Executive Committee still believe it appropriate to penalize a team in this kind of situation, however the group recognized the current lack of sufficient ability to identify those student-athletes with drug-abuse problems.

The Executive Committee took this action based on the group's assumption that within six months, drug-testing facilities around the country will be "up to speed" and able to provide regular-season testing for member institutions that is similar to the program being developed for NCAA championships and postseason football contests.

The Special NCAA Postseason Drug-Testing Committee also was directed to develop legislation—for review by the Council during that group's October meeting—that would extend drug testing to include coaches

Membership informed of drug-testing plans

Member institutions are receiving brochures describing the NCAA Drug-Testing Program, and details of the plan are being tended to by the Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee as the new program goes into effect.

The program, which is designed "to provide clean, equitable competition for student-athletes competing in NCAA championships and NCAA-certified postseason football bowl games," became effective August 1.

Brochures that list drugs covered by the program and testing procedures to be followed at championships and bowl games are being mailed to member institutions and conferences. The brochures also feature the text of the Student-Athlete Consent Form, which includes a drug-testing consent statement, and suggest guidelines for member institutions interested in starting their own drug-screening programs.

Brochures are being mailed to member institutions. Copies also can be ordered directly from NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. Members can obtain one copy free and additional brochures at a cost of $2 per copy, $10 for 10 copies or $30 for 50 copies.

While the brochures were being prepared, the Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee met August 1 in Kansas City. The committee took several actions related to implementation of the plan, including making recommendations to the Executive Committee on numbers of student-athletes to be tested at each championship event and bowl game.

Committee members also reviewed proposals from 13 laboratories bidding to participate in the testing program but made no decisions about which will be selected. Also, the committee decided to begin developing a process by which laboratories would be certified to conduct drug-testing for member institutions.

The committee also announced a September 21 training session for people who want to serve as drug-testing crew chiefs at championships sites. Nominations of qualified candidates for training should be directed to Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and sports sciences, at the national office as soon as possible.

Interpretations of some aspects of the drug-testing plan also were approved during the meeting. In one interpretation, the committee recommended that a student-athlete be declared immediately ineligible for postseason competition if he or she has signed the drug-testing consent form yet refuses to provide a urine sample at

Men's basketball attendance shows decrease

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

National men's college basketball attendance fell in 1986 for the first time in 10 seasons of official compilations by NCAA Statistics Service. The decline was across the board; every division was down.

The national drop was not large in percentage terms, at 1.28 percent, or 411,887 spectators for a national total of 31,644,786. This includes all 1,265 senior colleges with men's varsity teams in 1986—760 of them NCAA members.

Except for strong increases in postseason play and neutral-site regular-season games—mostly due to more tournaments and more games—the national decline would have been larger. Home-game attendance nationally fell 602,744, with nearly half (280,955) coming in NCAA Division I.

However, both the Division I tournament (507,172) and other Division I neutral-site games over the season (961,960) set all-time records, so the decline for Division I was held to 104,844, or one-half of one percent, for a total of 21,244,519.

NCAA Division II fell 141,566—or 4.59 percent—to 2,946,020; NCAA Division III fell 47,759—or 2.27 percent—and the 505 non-NCAA teams dropped 132,464—or 2.80 percent—to 4,599,313. The rest of the picture was a mixed bag, with gains by the NCAA's Division III tournament, the National Christian College Athletic Association tournaments, and neutral-site attendance for 982 teams below Division I more than offsetting declines by the NCAA's Division II tournament, the NAIA's district and national tournaments and the National Little College Athletic Association tournaments.

Why the decline?

The easy answer is to blame the decline on the proliferation of college basketball on television. No doubt this, to some extent, is a factor. But this is not a new problem. Do not overlook the uneven national economy. We keep reading that the economy generally is doing well on the East and West coasts but badly in between, with the farm states, oil states and Midwestern industrial states in trouble.

The same picture emerges in basketball attendance, using all men's college teams in all divisions. In 14 Eastern states and the District of Columbia, 418 college teams were up 62,122 as a group, led by North Carolina, where 43 teams were up 190,519 as a group, and New York, where 95 teams were up 81,185 collectively. In five West Coast states, the 110 college teams were up 24,833 collectively, with gains in California, Washington, Arizona and Nevada overcoming losses in Oregon.

It all adds up to 528 college teams on the East and West coasts showing a modest collective increase of 86,955, while the nation's other 737 teams were down a whopping 689,699 spectators (these figures are for home-game attendance only, without tournaments and other neutral-site games). Thirteen states were up, six down on the East and West coasts combined. Elsewhere, nine states were up, 23 down (counting the District of

Infractions in so-called minor sports largely are ignored

Collegiate golf and tennis aren't minor sports when it comes to breaking major NCAA rules.

Just ask a former all-America golfer.

"I know there are collegiate golfers who not only accept illegal prizes from tournaments, but also accept money from sponsors," said Chris Kite, a recent graduate of NCAA champion Wake Forest. "They usually don't get caught, because it's very low-key. It's not something you would go out and advertise."

Or talk to Clemson tennis coach Chuck Kriese.

"It would be a doggone Pandora's box, or should I say can of worms, if the NCAA decided to investigate college tennis," Kriese said.

Kite and Kriese are among several coaches and players who say that, while the NCAA spends much of its time investigating football and basketball programs, it continues to ignore a decades-old problem of rules violations by student-athletes in non-revenue sports.

With a slim chance that they will get caught, many collegiate golfers and tennis players take the money and run.

"The problem is, everyone is ignoring the rules and doing what they want," said University of Miami (Florida) golfer Tom Hearn. "It stinks, but that's the way it's going to be until the NCAA gets tough."

Miami women's tennis coach Ian Duvenhage said he thinks the NCAA knows there's widespread abuse of rules, but it hasn't addressed the issue because it's afraid of what it'll find.

"It's an accepted fact that many college athletes are taking money and prizes," Duvenhage said. "It's not something that happens once in a while. It's very, very common."

Added Duvenhage: "Coaches keep their mouths shut because they have ghosts in their closets that they don't want to come out. I know if one of my players was taking a few extra dollars here and there, I probably wouldn't report it, because that would cost her an education and me a good player. It's not fair to punish one girl when this problem is so widespread. If she took $18,000, that would be a different story."

Coach Kriese said the fraternity among tennis players and coaches keeps them from reporting each other when rules are violated.

"I'd never turn in another school unless they did something flagrant," he said. "Besides, if you spend too

Ex-athlete should get education funds

To the Editor:

When I began speaking to college athletes three years ago to recruit them as potential clients, I was very surprised not only by the number of athletes who would not graduate on time, but also by the number of credit hours many of them needed to complete their degrees. I also was surprised to find out the number of institutions that only provided a free education while the athlete had playing eligibility.

When I learned that NCAA requirements for a college athlete were 24 credit hours completed per year, I realized that an athlete who was 20 credit hours short of graduation after four years of college should be the norm, not the exception. And who can blame an athlete who only wants to carry 24 credit hours per school year? After all, the rigors of daily practices and travel for games added to going to classes are a heavy burden on an individual. And it is clear that colleges and universities expect their student-athletes to balance this load.

But, if 24 credit hours a year is reasonable progress toward a degree, then it also is reasonable to expect that most athletes will not earn a degree in four years. Yet, many colleges and universities accept no responsibility to insure that those athletes who want to graduate will be able to do so. Where is the justice in this?

The colleges say, compete for me, help me achieve athletics victory and earn me dollars, but all I owe you is a free education while you compete. Colleges are not in the business of providing a chance to earn credit hours. They provide degrees, which then can be taken out into the marketplace and used to get a job. The offer of a college education must include a degree for those who can earn it, or that education is meaningless. Those colleges that only pay for an athlete's education while he or she is eligible to compete are exploiting those who attend their institution. The promise by the school cannot be for the chance to earn 96 credits towards a degree and come back if you can afford it and we'll let you finish at your own expense. It is only fair that the institution continues to pay the complete costs for an athlete's education as long as he or she keeps making satisfactory progress toward a degree.

It is true that many athletes do not take advantage of their educational opportunities while in school. But it also is true that many athletes have difficulty going back to school to finish an extra semester or year when some or all of the expenses must come out of their own pockets. This is especially true of the athletes whose skills do not allow them to pursue a professional athletics career. The year after they finish their eligibility, they have no job, and the best hope they have for a job is to return to school to finish their degrees. But, they are without funds to pay for school. The school has gotten all it wanted out of the athlete. Why isn't the college obligated to pay for what the athlete needs and is willing to work for: a diploma?

Let the agreement between athlete and educational institution be for four seasons of athletics skills in exchange for a college degree, nothing less.

Keeping quiet can speak volumes when it concerns an investigation

Dave Wohlforth, columnist

Lincoln Sunday Journal-Star

"College athletics' governing body (NCAA) has a policy that any information concerning an investigation of a school must be released by that school. It's a policy that hasn't worked too well.

"The NCAA maintains that the release of information makes its task of obtaining the facts more difficult. It also says that in some cases, releasing the records could result in an invasion of privacy.

"The problem with the NCAA's 'let-the-school-announce-it' policy is that different schools handle it in different ways. Many don't announce anything until they're actually penalized. A university, naturally, doesn't want to bring adverse publicity to its sports program.

"What happens... is that a lot of rumors—some far more serious than the actual offense—start spreading by word of mouth. Some innuendoes end up in print.

"A public institution, such as a university, is obligated to report its violations, just as it expects to receive publicity when one of its teams does well. You've got to take, or give, the bad with the good.

"The NCAA has some pretty silly rules, and its policy of not releasing information concerning investigations falls in that same line. It often does more harm than good."

plan and not bitch about it.

"If they can't practice (those freshmen who don't qualify academically for athletics participation), that gives them three more hours a day to study. What's wrong with that? I'll follow the intent of the rule; that is, you only play three years.

New academic standards affect women's programs less

By Angelique Seremetis
The Detroit News

It appears that women's intercollegiate athletics on the Division I level will not be affected by the NCAA's recent adoption of Bylaw 5-1-(j).

Although many university officials have criticized the new rule because it could hinder men's intercollegiate athletics—specifically football and basketball—and because critics say it discriminates against athletes from lower socioeconomic incomes, there hasn't been much reaction from coaches and athletics directors in women's sports.

"I don't think this rule was ever designed for women, to be honest," said Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State's faculty athletics representative. "It came about because some of the university presidents were concerned with the graduation rates of their male athletes. It came about because of the men, not the women. But the women are very supportive of the rule, and none of the women athletics directors I know has criticized it."

"Historically, in this country, women always have done better in terms of education," Norrell said. "My hunch is that women who were athletes in high school were not treated as the men were, so there wasn't that much pressure on them to be stars. They were able to complete their core curriculums.

"The women respond differently to their education than the men. We don't have many problems with the women because they realize they can't make a living out of their sports, so they attend to their studies," she said.

University of Detroit women's basketball Coach Dwayne Jones has a different opinion.

"It does affect us—we're affected by it as the men are," Jones said. "I think that any coach at the Division I level who says it doesn't affect us should look again. This year, it didn't affect us in that the three players we got were really good students. But then, there were a few players we were interested in that we couldn't get in under Proposition 48."

Michigan State women's basketball Coach Karen Langeland said the effect of the new academic rule on women's athletics will not be drastic.

"We definitely have to pay more attention to high school transcripts and grade-point averages and core curriculums," Langeland said. "We had a number of kids who we stopped recruiting this year because they didn't meet the requirements, and to be honest, I think the high school system has a lot to do with that."

"My hope is that the high schools will do a better job educating these students, and I think now they're more aware of what the rules are. That alone is very helpful."

Bud VanDeWege, women's basketball coach at the University of Michigan, also mentioned that the role of high schools now is much more important. This rule, he said, will force high schools to emphasize the need for potential college athletes to study harder and take the standardized entrance tests earlier so they have time to retake them if necessary.

"I think it's going to penalize a lot of people who could have made it into college, but there had to be a standard," VanDeWege said.

What the new standards will do, the NCAA believes, is help weed out those student-athletes who can only be one of those things at any time, usually just an athlete.

"We hear of students getting some unbelievably low scores, and I think this will make a statement," said Brad Kinsman, athletics director at the University of Detroit. "This will be a motivational thing. I just think the pure pressure of some students not being able to make it will be a black mark on their educational system."

Of the arenas that seat 12,000 people or more on the West Coast, it is by far the worst basketball-watching pavilion of them all. Most of the seats are far from the playing floor. The concessions are few and far between, the restrooms deplorable, the parking practically nonexistent, the bus turnarounds totally confusing, and the traffic jammed.

What are the parameters used in making this type of decision? I think it's time that we ticket-paying, stand-in-line, season-supporting, scholarship-donating, plain old basketball fans have a voice in suggesting where the regionals should be held. If they must be held on campus of an NCAA basketball-playing institution, then let's be fair and give the fans who attend these games a break.

In the last five years, how many times has a Los Angeles area team been to the regionals? Then why have it in L.A.? You must purchase your tickets through the schools that are going to the tournament, in any case.

The best place in the West by far is the Thomas and Mack Center on the UNLV campus in Las Vegas, Nevada, which has 18,500 excellent seats, with great parking, reasonable hotel prices, as well as affordable food and airline accommodations from everywhere in the U.S.

UCLA: I've been there four times in the last seven years and I have yet to talk to anyone who had a hotel room within 10 miles that cost less than $80 per night or who didn't park a mile away.

When you have eight schools attending from around the West and some from other parts of the country, why bury the NCAA in the smog and traffic of Los Angeles?

The NCAA deserves better. Why not poll the schools that have attended in the last five years and ask them where they would rather play?

Michael Mack

Limited drug tests have limited effect

To the Editor:

The NCAA, in its own interest and that of its member institutions, needs to state very clearly the expectations of the current drug-testing plan for championships and bowl games. The NCAA drug-testing program is capable of assuring that banned substances will not be used by athletes only during championship competition, and nothing more than that.

It should be made clear to the member institutions and in particular to the public that the NCAA drug-testing program, as well as most other commonly employed drug-testing plans, probably would not have prevented the tragic deaths of Len Bias and Don Rogers. I make this statement based on the fact that announced drug testing at championships or during the season would most likely not detect most cocaine users because of the rapid elimination of cocaine from the body. It is likely that cocaine used several days before the scheduled drug test would go undetected because most of the drug would have been eliminated from the body.

My point is exactly this: Drug testing is not a panacea to the use of drugs by athletes, and in particular, testing for drugs at championships only. The NCAA member institutions need to be encouraged to develop drug-testing programs that allow for scheduled and unscheduled random drug testing throughout the school year. However, serious consideration must be given to the issue of privacy.

Athletes have been deified by past and present societies and serve as role models for youth; but so do doctors, lawyers and the President of the U.S. Must we drug test the surgeon before entering the operating room, the lawyer before entering the court room and the President before entering the Oval Office? I hope not.

Drug testing will not solve the problems associated with illegal drug use by society; only education and a return to more basic moral values and ethics can provide lasting solutions to the problem.

Looking Back

Five years ago

The NCAA Executive Committee, meeting August 10-11, 1981, at Gleneden Beach, Oregon, approved the Association's 1981-82 budget in the amount of $27,889,000, a 24.3 percent increase over the previous year. Of that total, 72.5 percent would be raised by Division I championships. (September 15, 1981, NCAA News)

Ten years ago

The NCAA Executive Committee, meeting August 9-10, 1976, at Itasca, Illinois, approved a guarantee of 80 percent of transportation expenses for teams and individual medal winners in the NCAA's 39 championships, effective in 1976-77. It was the first time the NCAA had guaranteed transportation payments in all championships. (September 15, 1976, NCAA News)

"Being a manager of an athletics program while being an educator is a conflicting issue. (By Maryland law) we have to be self-sustaining. To do that, we have to win, and then we barely break even. It's a vicious cycle."

"It's an issue that hasn't been faced, and it's the biggest issue. It puts people in conflicting roles that are difficult to fulfill."

"As long as they require athletics directors and coaches to be financial managers, that's where you're going to run into problems of compromising yourself to take marginally prepared athletes and (problems) with graduation rates. I've said it before this happened. The entire structure of intercollegiate athletics needs to be examined."

"I don't want to downplay what we've done with academics. You look at the total program and you see great improvement the last three years. We've made efforts; and in some areas, it appears there are people who can't be reached. Maybe we don't have a comprehensive enough program. Proposition 48 will help get a better-prepared student. But I don't like Proposition 48. It's discriminatory. That's why we voted against it. We need to get back to the days when freshman noneligibility was imposed."

A letter to The New York Times

"You correctly point out (editorial, May 27) that participation in NCAA Division I-A intercollegiate athletics involves, especially for the country's highly selective universities, unfortunate trade-offs between academic standards and the imperatives of successful competition. But you would have done a greater service had you made your readers more fully aware of what Tulane University seeks to accomplish by adopting the recommendations of its select committee on intercollegiate athletics."

"This level of competition is part of Tulane's culture and history, and we believe we can administer a program that is educationally honest, athletically competitive and nondiscriminatory. Were Tulane's new standards adopted by the NCAA for Division I-A schools, intercollegiate athletics would be revolutionized."

"While the average Scholastic Aptitude Test score for a nonathlete enrolling at Tulane is approximately 300 points above the university's self-imposed standard of 850 for scholarship athletes, the 850 figure is nonetheless 150 points above the NCAA-mandated minimum of 700—a significant step forward for a Division I-A institution."

"Based on a historical analysis of the data at Tulane, we concluded that a highly motivated student-athlete who scores at least 850 on the SAT has a better than 50 percent probability of graduating from the university, given proper tutorial assistance and support."

"Solutions to the problems Tulane and its counterparts face will not be found in facile pronouncements about the need to harmonize academic values and athletics. Who would argue a contrary goal? The issue, rather, is how to do it."

"It is understandable, indeed inevitable, that the proposed changes are not to everyone's liking, for universities are complex and their constituencies diverse. The recommendations were nonetheless adopted as a direct approach to an entrenched problem."

"Tulane's solution may not be elegant: It is too bold for some, too timid for others. But it is straightforward, publicly stated and academically honest. Not a bad beginning, it seems to me."

Report of the Select Committee

in Higher Education, October 1983

"With the extraordinary time demands that are placed upon student-athletes, graduation within the standard time frame is often difficult to achieve. At the expiration of the period of eligibility, many students are within a few units of meeting graduation requirements but need additional course work to do so."

"The committee believes that all institutions should be encouraged to provide financial aid to student-athletes who have completed their eligibility so that they will have every opportunity to graduate. This currently seems to be practiced by the great majority of Division I institutions, and we believe that the practice should be universal."

Martha McLean, head women's basketball coach
St. Joseph's College (Maine)

NCAA Women's Basketball Press Kit

"Sacrificing traditional academic excellence for temporary athletics success should be discouraged at every level."

"I believe it is beneficial to be competitive and to develop high-caliber women's basketball programs similar to the successful men's programs. What I do not believe in is sacrificing gains in academics for athletic gains. If this emphasis switches from academics to athletics with regard to the woman student-athlete, the results could be extremely detrimental."

"Several prominent men's programs place an unjust emphasis on athletics at the cost of disregarding high standards in academic competition. Consequently, some of these universities' reputations have suffered greatly."

"Women's basketball programs must remain aware of the problems that arise when academic achievements are compromised in order to achieve desired athletics accomplishments. My desire is that we do not fail at keeping university goals correctly prioritized; number one: academics; number two: athletics."

Barry Switzer threw down the gauntlet before his Oklahoma Sooners received their national-championship rings last spring, challenging them to win a "triple-double."

Switzer's challenge in plain talk means winning back-to-back titles, as the Sooners did in 1955-1956 and 1975-1976, for a third time, a feat no major college team has accomplished.

With 18 starters returning from last year's 11-1 team, Switzer's hopes for another mythical national championship could become reality.

Oklahoma could have its best wish-bone offense ever. With quarterback Jamelle Hollieway and a number of talented backs—led by Spencer Tillman and Lydell Carr—operating behind an offensive line that includes three all-Big Eight selections, the Sooners should have one of the nation's top running attacks.

Eight starters, including all-America linebacker Brian Bosworth, return on defense, which last year led the nation in total defense and pass defense and ranked second in rushing defense.

The Sooners' schedule includes UCLA and Miami (Florida), their annual October encounter with Texas, and conference road games against an improved Colorado team and always-tough Nebraska, making Switzer's challenge all the more difficult.

Following is a capsule look at other top Division I-A teams in the country by conference:

Atlantic Coast: It seems everybody but Bobby Ross has picked his Maryland team to win a fourth conference title. Ross' pessimism is based on the loss of seven offensive starters and the lack of an experienced quarterback. Maryland's defense is solid with the return of seven starters. Clemson could be a front-runner behind the play of all-ACC tailback Kenny Flowers. Steadily improving Georgia Tech and Virginia also expect to have promising seasons.

Big Eight: Oklahoma easily is the favorite for the Big Eight title and the Orange Bowl berth that goes with it. Nebraska has another powerful team that features I-back Doug Dubose, the league's second-leading rusher with 1,161 yards. Colorado, a much-improved team under coach Bill McCartney, and Oklahoma State, which returns one of the nation's top backs in Thurman Thomas, are the league's other top teams.

Big Ten: Michigan has a well-balanced team that should contend for the national title. Michigan's offense returns all skill-position players, including quarterback Jim Harbaugh, the nation's passing-efficiency leader in 1985. Despite the loss of five defensive starters, the Wolverines have capable replacements and return stalwarts Mark Messner at tackle and Andy Moeller at linebacker. Despite a schedule that includes seven games against 1985 bowl teams, Ohio State is on target for another run at the conference title and its 15th consecutive postseason bid. The Buckeyes' passing game looks healthy with senior quarterback Jim Karsatos and wide receiver Chris Carter back. Michigan State will pin its hopes on tailback Lorenzo White, the nation's top rusher last year. Defending champion Iowa lost several of its top players, making a repeat trip to the Rose Bowl unlikely.

Mid-American: Miami (Ohio), Central Michigan, Bowling Green and Toledo are the top contenders for league supremacy in a race that may go down to the final week of the season. Optimism is high at Miami, where running back George Swann, one of the nation's top backs, returns with eight other offensive starters.

Mike Shula, Alabama

Central Michigan never has finished lower than fourth in the eight years Herb Deromedi has served as coach, and this year's team should equal or better last year's 7-3 record. Defending champion Bowling Green lost record-setting quarterback Brian McClure but should contend for the league title, along with Toledo.

Pacific Coast: If Fresno State, the only undefeated Division I-A team last year, does not rest on the laurels that came with its 11-0-1 record and a 51-7 rout of previously undefeated Bowling Green in the California Bowl, the Bulldogs again should be the conference's top dog. Quarterback Kevin Sweeney triggers an explosive offense that led the nation in scoring with an average of 39 points a game. The defense was bolstered with three of the West Coast's top junior college players.

Pacific-10: UCLA returns 17 players who have been starters, many of whom are touted for all-conference honors, to defend its title and make a run at the national title. Quarterback Matt Stevens, the fifth consecutive senior to step forward and direct the Bruins' high-powered offense, has an abundance of talent to work with. The Bruins' defense returns eight starters. Coach Terry Donahue's only worry is the kicking game. Washington coach Don James will have an improved offense but must replace seven starters on defense, which has all-conference defensive tackle Reggie Rogers as its cornerstone. Southern California and Arizona also expect promising seasons and should earn postseason trips.

Southeastern: Alabama appears to be the team to beat in this league. The Crimson Tide returns nine defensive and eight offensive starters, including all-conference quarterback Mike Shula. Fourth-year coach Ray Perkins will need all the returning veterans he can get, with Ohio State, Penn State and Notre Dame on the non-conference schedule. Defending champion Tennessee should challenge Alabama despite losing most of its passing attack to graduation. Florida, eligible for the league title and a bowl berth for the first time since walk-on junior quarterback Kerwin Bell arrived, also has the potential for a top-10 finish. Bell, who ranked second in passing efficiency last year, completing 62.5 percent of his 288 passes for 2,687 yards and 21 touchdowns, has led the Gators to an 18-2-2 record the past two seasons. Auburn returns 13 starters and could equal last year's 8-3 record.

Southwest: Texas A&M returns most of the firepower from a 10-2 team that led the league in both offense and defense. Quarterback Kevin Murray returns to lead the Aggies' balanced offense, which averaged 212 yards rushing and 208 passing yards a game last year. An off-season adjustment to open up Texas' offense could be the key to the Longhorns' bid for the conference title. Of the 49 times Texas drove inside opponents' 20-yard line last season, the Longhorns came away with just 26 touchdowns. Defending champion Baylor also should have a successful season, with 16 starters back from last year's 9-3 team that won the Liberty Bowl.

Vinnie Testaverde, Miami (Florida)

Western Athletic: If major rebuilding jobs under way at Brigham Young and Air Force are not completed on schedule, the conference title could end up at Utah or Colorado State. Utah could be the surprise of the season if its defensive unit comes around. The Utes' offense features a passing attack that ranked among the nation's leaders last year. Colorado State appears to be poised for a promising season with 19 starters returning, led by all-America running back candidate Steve Bartalo.

Independents: Penn State had a little luck on its side en route to an 11-0 regular-season record and a shot at the national championship, winning seven games by a touchdown or less. The Nittany Lions, buoyed by an outstanding defense and the return of 16 starters, should prove last season was no fluke. Miami (Florida) returns all but two starters from last year's 10-2 team, notably quarterback Vinny Testaverde, one of the top passers in the country. If Miami survives a schedule that includes Florida, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Florida State, the Hurricanes may end up No. 1. Florida State features a high-powered offense that should carry the Seminoles to another outstanding season. The Seminoles have an improved defense and one of the best kicking games in the nation in punter Louis Berry and kicker Derek Schmidt. Notre Dame, under new head coach Lou Holtz, expects to show steady improvement over its past few seasons. If West Virginia coach Don Nehlen can rebuild an offensive line hit hard by graduation, the Mountaineers could have another good year. WVU has good talent and depth at most offensive positions, but a regular tight end must be found in a hurry. By the sixth week of the season, the team already will have faced Miami (Florida), Maryland and Pittsburgh. The Pitt Panthers, under new head coach Mike Gottfried, need to shore up both offensive and defensive fronts in preparation for a schedule that includes Maryland, Notre Dame, Miami (Florida) and Penn State. Other independents, including Boston College, Temple and Syracuse, had sub-.500 seasons in 1985.

Kickoff Classic opens 118th season

This 118th season of college football begins with Ohio State facing Alabama in the fourth annual Kickoff Classic August 27 at East Rutherford, New Jersey's Giants Stadium... Several I-AA teams will play under new league banners Familiar faces in several new places characterize Division I-AA football this year.

Changes in the division's makeup include:

- Former independents Delaware and Richmond now are competing for the Yankee Conference championship, making it an eight-team league.

- Former Division II member Morgan State will compete for the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title, bringing it to a six-team league.

- The Missouri Valley Conference, which had a majority of Division I-AA teams, no longer is a football conference. Indiana State became a member of the Gateway Conference, giving the league seven members, while former Missouri Valley member West Texas State transferred to Division II. Drake disbanded its program with plans to compete eventually in Division III.

- Bucknell, Colgate, Holy Cross, Lafayette and Lehigh, all of which are former independents, have organized the Colonial League.

- Former independent Tennessee State now is a member of the Ohio Valley Conference but will not compete for the league title until 1988.

- The Southland Conference becomes a six-team league with the loss of Texas-Arlington, which dropped varsity football.

- The Gulf Star Conference will be a five-team league with the loss of Southeastern Louisiana, which also disbanded its program.

With all the shifts and new affiliations settled, the division's teams now will concentrate on winning and advancing to the championship in Washington's Tacoma Dome, where Georgia Southern rallied past Furman in the final 10 seconds to become national champion last season.

Following is a look at the division's top teams by conference:

Big Sky: Nevada-Reno returns veteran players at the skill positions and has a top-notch kicking game with Marty Zendejas returning. If the Wolf Pack's offensive line jells, the conference title and a return trip to the playoffs are likely.

Colonial: Colgate is favored to win the first league title. Known for producing bruising running backs, Colgate has another of the nation's best in tailback Kenny Gamble, whose career total of 1,993 yards rushing is the most ever compiled by a Red Raider after only two seasons.

Gateway Collegiate: The addition of Indiana State makes the Gateway one of the toughest conferences from top to bottom in the division. Three conference teams cracked the top 20 last year and league champion Northern Iowa advanced to the championship semifinals before losing to Georgia Southern in the final 34 seconds. Southern Illinois won the 1983 championship, and Eastern Illinois and Indiana State have made play-off appearances. The league may receive automatic-qualification privileges, pending NCAA Executive Committee approval.

Gulf Star: Stephen F. Austin State has the makings for another conference championship, with eight offensive starters and a good nucleus on defense returning. The Lumberjacks' combination of quarterback Todd Whitten and tight end John Evans is one of the best in the country.

Ivy League: Penn will attempt to become the second league school to win five championships. First-year coach Ed Zubrow has the talent to win it, but his Quakers should be challenged by Yale, Cornell and Harvard.

Mid-Eastern: Defending champion Delaware State, Bethune-Cookman and North Carolina A&T appear to be the league's front-runners. Delaware State running backs Terrance Hoover and Reggie Barnes both are capable of 1,000-yard seasons.

Ohio Valley: In what arguably is the toughest league in Division I-AA, defending champion Middle Tennessee State rates a slight edge over Eastern Kentucky and Akron. Middle Tennessee coach James "Boots" Donnelly has transformed the former league whipping boy into a team that earned the No. 1 seed in last year's play-offs. The Blue Raiders return everyone in their offensive backfield, which helped score more than 33 points a game last year.

Southern: Defending conference champion Furman lost 16 starters from last year's championship runner-up team and its coach to North Carolina State, making another 10-1-0 season unlikely. Tennessee-Chattanooga poses the stiffest challenge to Furman.

Southland: After five years of building, Northeast Louisiana coach Pat Collins appears to have a team with a legitimate shot at the league championship. Nineteen starters return for Collins, and he has a deep bench. Louisiana Tech and defending champion Arkansas State also are title contenders.

Southwestern: After sharing the title with Grambling State last year, Jackson State should take sole possession thanks to a ground attack led by running back Lewis Tillman. Grambling, Alcorn State and Mississippi Valley State also should finish in the league's upper division.

Yankee: Division I-AA heavyweights Delaware and Richmond will join the conference this season and may end up marching away with the league title. Delaware owns a 36-3 record against Yankee Conference competition, and Richmond, coming off two straight eight-victory seasons, has a senior-laden team. Defending champion Rhode Island and New Hampshire will be out to protect the old guard.

Independents: Defending national champion Georgia Southern has the ingredients for another outstanding season, with the return of 18 starters. The Eagles have one of the best option backfields in the nation, with quarterback Tracy Ham operating with versatile running backs Gerald Harris and Frank Johnson. Eastern Washington has strong lines to build upon but will need to replace record-setting quarterback Rick Worman for another play-off trip.

Division I-A notes

There are 86 teams in Division I-AA, one fewer than last season... Georgia Southern, the defending Division I-AA champion with seven straight victories, owns the division's longest current winning streak... The NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship game will be played December 19 at the Tacoma Dome (Washington)... Expansion to a 16-team play-off has been given tentative approval.

Arkansas State fullback Rickey Jemison, the Indians' No. 3 all-time rusher, also doubles as the team barber... Boise State is out to record its 40th consecutive season on "Boise Blue Grass." The Broncos replaced their traditional green artificial turf with royal blue artificial turf... That's Delaware coach Harold "Tubby" Raymond's son inside the Phillie Phanatic mascot costume... Marshall may have the shortest set of running backs in the division with 5-8, 173-pound Darryl DeBoes and 5-8, 210-pound Mike McCoy... Montana State kicker Anders Larsson is from Varberg, Sweden, homeland of alumnus and fellow kicker Jan Stenerud, who recently retired after a brilliant career in the National Football League... Noting their father's Russian roots, New Hampshire defensive linemen Ilia, Basil and Alex Jarostchik have come to be known as "The Russian Front" or "The Iron Curtain."

Northeast Louisiana's Roger Kelley made the transition from punter to linebacker in fine fashion with a team-leading 140 tackles last season.

Members of 'Kiddie Corps' have become men with mission

The "Kiddie Corps" needs a new nickname.

North Dakota State quarterback Jeff Bentrin and running backs Chad Stark and James Molstre are the veterans of too many hard-fought football games to be considered youngsters.

As freshmen, the three, dubbed the "Kiddie Corps," led North Dakota State to the 1983 NCAA Division II Football Championship. Troy State's last-second field goal for an 18-17 victory in the 1984 championship game spoiled their sophomore years. They capped their junior years with a 35-7 victory over North Alabama to win last year's national championship, and it is likely they will have the Bison running for an unprecedented third Division II title next December.

With Stark and Molstre already in the backfield, Bentrin took over as quarterback five games into the 1983 season; and North Dakota State has never looked back. Since Bentrin took over, the Bisons' powerful veer-offense ground attack has piled up a 33-4-1 record and averaged nearly 285 yards a game.

Bentrin, who already owns North Dakota State's and the North Central Conference's career scoring records, has a shot at winning his third straight Division II scoring championship—something no player has ever accomplished. He needs 15 yards to become the school's career rushing leader; Stark probably will finish in the No. 2 spot.

The return of the Bisons' backfield along with the return of 15 other starters make North Dakota State a clear-cut favorite as the division's No. 1 team.

Although North Dakota State's offense grabs the headlines, the Bisons' defense consistently has turned in solid performances. This year's unit could be the best yet with all-America inside linebacker Jim Dick leading nine other returning starters.

Other teams, by region, with promising outlooks include:

West region: UC Davis knows all too well about North Dakota State's domination of Division II. The Aggies have been knocked out of the past three play-offs by the Bison. UC Davis, winner of 15 consecutive Northern California Conference titles, has another team with play-off potential, thanks to the return of quarterback Chris Petersen, the division's passing efficiency leader.

South Dakota also has waged a few wars with North Dakota State. The Coyotes handed North Dakota State its worst North Central Conference loss since 1962 with a 38-14 regular-season victory last year only to later lose a rematch by nine points in the play-off semifinals. South Dakota has the makings of another fine team that could end North Dakota State's reign.

Other top teams in the region include Santa Clara, Cal State Sacramento, Nebraska-Omaha and Minnesota-Duluth.

Midwest region: A fourth consecutive play-off trip for Central State (Ohio) will depend on how fast Coach Billy Joe can find replacements at running back and in the defensive line. The Marauders may rely more on the pass with a set of speedy receivers and quarterback Vince Leavell returning.

Butler returns 17 starters from last year's 8-2 team that wound up 12th in the final Division II poll, making the Bulldogs contenders for a play-off bid. Butler quarterback Rob Cutter, who was called upon in the first half of last year's season opener when the starter was hurt, emerged as a top-flight quarterback with a school-record 2,023 yards passing.

Lone Star Conference champion Texas A&I should equal or better last year's 8-3 record. Coach Ron Harms had an outstanding recruiting year and has 16 returning starters.

Northeast Missouri State lost a little sizzle on offense but has a formidable defense to compensate. The defending Missouri Intercollegiate champions return 14 starters.

Other teams in the region to watch include Northern Michigan and Ashland.

South region: The participants in last year's play-offs—North Alabama, Fort Valley State and Hampton—lead a crowded field for the region's bragging rights. Gulf South defending champion North Alabama once again will rely on a rugged, opportunistic defense that was instrumental in its play-off march to the championship game last year.

Fort Valley State has a veteran team that will make a strong bid for another play-off berth. The Wildcats have one of the division's top receivers in all-Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference flanker Dale Casey.

Rex
Lamberti

Christian

Hampton coach Fred Freeman's decision to run the veer offense propelled the Pirates to the Central Intercollegiate league title and the school's first play-off appearance. Running back Carl Painter was the beneficiary of the decision, as he nearly doubled his 1984 yards-per-game average to 106.4.

Other strong teams in the region include Elizabeth City State, Mississippi College, Norfolk State and Winston Salem State.

East region: If defending Pennsylvania Conference champion Bloomsburg adjusts to first-year coach Pete Adrian, the Huskies should have another banner year. Eight offensive starters—led by quarterback Jay DeDea—will need to carry the team until newcomers can be found to plug some gaps on defense. Other teams in the conference that will challenge Bloomsburg and contend for a play-off berth include Indiana (Pennsylvania), West Chester, Millersville and Edinboro.

Towson State, ranked in the top 20 the last three years, has another strong team, spearheaded by six returnees on defense that led the division in scoring defense, allowing just 5.8 points a game.

American International could crack the top 20 again this year if the 16 team or individual records set last year are any indication of the team's potential. The Yellow Jackets must find a quarterback to get the ball to split end Brian Carey, the team's leading receiver the last three years.

The NCAA Division II Football Championship game has been moved

Television viewers face college football blitz

If the college football fanatic is not satiated by the flood of games that will be televised every Saturday in the fall, he probably never will be, according to the Associated Press.

"My God, it's wall-to-wall football," said Donn Bernstein, ABC's director of college sports. "We've beaten it to death. We think it's overexposed now. In some markets, you can watch eight to 10 games every Saturday."

Ever since deregulation of college football, ordered by U.S. District Court Judge Juan C. Burciaga in September 1984 when he struck down ABC's exclusive contract with the NCAA, networks, cable, pay television and syndicators have the sport available from noon to midnight Saturday.

"There's nowhere to go," Bernstein said. "There's only one day for it, and every hour is taken, every conference is taken, every team is taken."

Prior to the 1982 season, ABC was the only outlet that had the rights to televise college football during the regular season. But the antitrust suit filed by the Universities of Oklahoma and Georgia changed that.

CBS joined the NCAA's television family in 1982 under the old TV plan, but deregulation opened up the sport in 1984. Whereas ABC's 15 games every fall were the limit for college football, this autumn, ESPN will televise 17 games and Turner Broadcasting another 37 in addition to ABC's 15 and CBS' 20 to 22. Those figures are about the same as last year and do not include any of the pay TV services or local syndicators.

Despite the dramatically increased availability of football in the last two seasons, broadcasters say interest has not declined.

"There's no question on its vitality, that the public has an appetite for it," said Peter Tortorici, vice-president of program planning for CBS. "Things have changed so radically and in so many directions, the question now is what is its relative market value."

Ratings for ABC and CBS have dropped dramatically since deregulation, from ABC's 9.9 and CBS' 9.6 in 1983 to CBS' 7.2 and ABC's 6.9 last season. But total aggregate ratings for college football have not declined.

"I've been here 11 years, and the best we ever did by ourselves was a 14," Bernstein said. "If you total ours and CBS', we're getting that for a season—and that doesn't include any of the others."

TBS pulled a 2.7 and ESPN a 4.0 for its college games last season.

Ratings reflect a percentage of homes watching a particular program at any one time.

Part of deregulation included the elimination of the NCAA's requirement for ABC and CBS to televise a certain number of Divisions I-AA, II and III games and the loosening of limitations on schools' national television appearances outside of bowl games.

The College Football Association emerged as the bargaining unit for most Division I-A powers, thus putting more major schools on television than ever before.

"All we got from ABC for 20 years was Notre Dame-USC, Michigan-Ohio State, Pitt-Penn State," said Michael Lardner, TBS sports coordinating producer for college football. "Now, we've got the Clemsons and Brigham Youngs. Those games were always good, we just never saw them. And the fan is the obvious winner. He has such a wide selection."

The CFA has contracts with ABC and ESPN. The Pacific-10, Big Ten and the Atlantic Coast Conferences have deals with TBS and CBS; and the Southeastern Conference also has a package with TBS. Most independents are linked with one of the four, like Miami (Florida) with CBS, or one of many pay TV or syndication services.

When the television contracts come up for renegotiations in the next year, it is possible some of the local syndicators will be shoved out of the picture.

"Nobody can watch that many games," Tortorici said. "And if there are that many choices, a fan is not going to sit in the cold when he can watch it on TV."

"I'm not sure where the supply is going to get limited, but it will probably be with who pays the least amount of money for the rights—and that's the local syndicators," Tortorici continued. "The schools are going to have to protect their ticket base."

@ S.F. Austin St. and Sam Houston St. have petitioned for Division I-AA classification for 1986 season.

Vikings continue attack on all-time, all-division victory mark

After his team was dismantled by Augustana (Illinois) in last year's NCAA Division III Football Championship game, Ithaca coach Jim Butterfield pretty much summed up his opponent's offensive philosophy.

"They just run right at you," explained Butterfield, "and say, 'What are you going to do about it?'"

None of Augustana's last 37 opponents have been able to do anything about the Vikings' vaunted wing-T attack since West Georgia solved it in the 1982 play-off final for a 14-0 victory.

Coach Bob Reade subsequently has led the Vikings to an unprecedented three consecutive national championships and the fourth longest winning streak in all divisions of NCAA football history. Ten more consecutive victories will tie Augustana with Oklahoma, which had 47 straight victories from 1953 to 1957, the all-time record.

• Nine offensive and seven defensive starters are among 47 returning lettermen.

• Reade, the division's winningest active coach with a 69-8 record (.896) in seven years, has two quarterbacks with championship experience — Kirk Bednar and Greg Wallace. Bednar led the Vikings to the 1984 title, and Wallace filled in last year when Bednar was injured.

• Running back Brad Price, with two 1,000-yard seasons already in the books, and fullback Shane McCormick return to lead an offense that averaged 310 rushing yards per game a year ago.

• Augustana, No. 1 last season in total, rushing and scoring defense, has another solid unit anchored by all-America defensive tackle Lynn Thomsen, the only Viking to have started all 37 games of the current winning streak. Augustana gave up less than 150 yards in total offense and 35 yards in rushing defense while holding opponents to less than five points a game last season.

• No player currently on Augustana's roster has ever lost a collegiate football game in a Viking uniform. Teams that may be capable of doing something about that streak (by region) include:

North region: Albion all-America tailback Lance Brown and his "line of renown" will be out to break Augustana's domination of the region and defend the Michigan Intercollegiate title. Brown, who averaged 110 yards a game last year behind what could be the biggest line in the division, and nine other offensive starters return from last year's team that lost to Augustana in first-round play-off action. All 11 starters return on defense.

If Denison and Mount Union can survive regular-season play in the North Coast and Ohio Athletic Conferences, respectively, second consecutive play-off berths should be theirs. Denison has a terrific ground attack from its single-wing offense, led by running back Chris Spriggs. Mount Union must replace record-setting quarterback Scott Woolf but has 15 returnees back from last year's team, which advanced to the play-off quarterfinals.

Kevin Weaver, Wash. and Lee

Bill Kaiser, Wabash

Other strong teams in the region include Adrian, Baldwin-Wallace, Case Reserve, Dayton, Elmhurst, Heidelberg, Hiram, Illinois Benedictine, Millikin, Muskingum, Wabash and Wheaton (Illinois).

West region: Central (Iowa), play-off semifinalists each of the past two years, lost the heart of its defensive line and may be too thin at the key offensive positions for another play-off trip. Wartburg has a senior-dominated lineup that could wrest the Iowa Conference title from Central and earn a play-off berth.

Co-Midwest Conference champion and play-off participant Coe lost seven starters from an offense that averaged more than 34 points a game, leaving a wide-open race for the league championship. Lawrence may step into the picture if the Vikings get better offensive line play.

Occidental has a fine nucleus of experienced players to replace 11 starters and should continue its winning ways in the Southern California Conference and challenge for a bid for a third straight play-off berth.

St. John's (Minnesota) coach John Gagliardi, the division's leader in victories with 239, has another team that should add a few more games to the victory column. The Johnnies have 16 starters back from last year's 8-2 play-off team.

Other teams with promising outlooks include Buena Vista, Concordia-Moorhead, Macalester, Nebraska Wesleyan, St. Thomas (Minnesota), Wartburg and Wisconsin-River Falls.

South region: Play-off semifinalist Gettysburg lost the better part of its offensive and defensive lines as well as leading rusher Paul Martin, leaving their Centennial Conference title in jeopardy. If Gettysburg does not fill some big holes in its lineup, Franklin and Marshall and Muhlenberg should contend for the title.

Despite the loss of record-setting quarterback Robb Disbennett, Salisbury State, a play-off quarterfinalist last year, has the makings of an outstanding team with 18 starters returning (nine offense and nine defense).

Defending Middle Atlantic Conference champion Lycoming, known for its stingy defense through the years, now has an offense that is equally as impressive. The Warriors return seven starters, including quarterback Larry Barretta, the conference player of the year, to an offensive unit that averaged 34 points a game.

First-year Carnegie-Mellon coach Rich Lackner did not find the cupboard bare upon the departure of long-time Tartans' coach Chuck Klausning.

Lackner has one of the division's best quarterbacks to run Carnegie-Mellon's high-scoring wing-T offense in Mike Hensel and a formidable defense led by linebacker Ron Orie.

Rhodes and Washington and Jefferson, both of which cracked the division's top 20 poll last year, also have play-off potential. The region's other top teams include Centre, Delaware Valley, Moravian, Randolph-Macon and Widener.

East region: Ithaca has participated in five play-off finals, winning the 1979 championship and placing second in its other four appearances. The Bombers will have an experienced team; however, they may not have enough talent to reach the championship again because of the graduation of several key starters, including three defensive backs. The Bombers will rely on Mike Middaugh, who has emerged as one of the division's top quarterbacks, to help defend their Independent Collegiate title.

Union (New York) knows all about Middaugh. He threw two fourth quarter touchdown passes last fall to eliminate the Dutchmen from the play-offs. Union, coming off a 9-1 season, is in good shape for a fourth consecutive play-off bid under coach Al Bagnoli, who has built the Dutchmen into one of the top teams in the region.

Western Connecticut could have one of its best teams ever with the return of nine starters and both kicking specialists.

Montclair State is favored to defend its New Jersey Conference title with quarterback Walter Briggs at the helm and the return of eight defensive starters.

After a three-year play-off hiatus, Wagner is poised to earn its third postseason bid. Running back sensation Terry Underwood, who averaged 120 yards a game last year, leads an offensive unit that rang up more than 400 yards a game in total offense.

Other promising teams in the region include Amherst, Glassboro State, and Merchant Marine.

Division III notes

The NCAA Division III Football Championship game will be December 13 in Phenix City, Alabama... The championship is in the second year of a 16-team format... There are 201 teams in Division III... Wittenberg owns the longest current consecutive-winning-seasons streak among all NCAA divisions with 31... Rebuilding has taken on a new meaning at Bridgewater (Virginia), where flooding last November destroyed the school's football facilities... Carnegie-Mellon senior quarterback Mike Hensel proved on his first play from scrimmage that he follows instructions. Sent in his freshman year with instructions to run the clock out in a lopsided victory, Hensel ran for a 93-yard touchdown to end the game.

With 25 consecutive winning seasons in the books, Central (Iowa) coach Ron Schipper trails only Grambling's Eddie Robinson in consecutive winning seasons... Fordham is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its famed "Seven Blocks of Granite" line, which included Vince Lombardi and all-Americans Alex Wojciechowski and Ed Franco... Gallaudet had its first nonlosing season in 55 years last season... It takes time for John Carroll's offense to warm up. The Blue Streaks, as in 1983, did not score any first-quarter points last season... The undefeated 1951 Susquehanna team, coached by Amos Alonzo Stagg and his son, will celebrate its 35th anniversary with a reunion September 20 when the Crusaders host Lycoming... When Trenton State selected Eric Hamilton as coach 10 years ago, he was the NCAA's youngest head coach. Now, the 33-year-old Hamilton is the dean of New Jersey Athletic Conference coaches.

Being born with one hand has not prevented Wabash defensive back Brent Scheib from becoming a key member of the Little Giants' secondary that intercepted 14 passes last year. The two-year starter intercepted three passes, recovered three fumbles and led Wabash defensive backs in tackles with 36... Washington and Lee running back Kevin Weaver, a premed major, was pretty close to perfect without a lot of practice last year. Despite missing three practices a week to attend late laboratory classes, Weaver, the Old Dominion Athletic Conference player of the year, led Division III in scoring (13.8 points per game) and finished fourth in rushing (145.1 yards per game)... Wheaton's (Illinois) Ernie Frey should be able to read blitzes with the best of quarterbacks this season. The 6-4, 215-pound senior led the team in tackles from his linebacker position last season but is expected to be the starting quarterback for the Crusaders, who have led Division III in passing each of the past four years.

The special committee, after studying concentrations of various drugs needed to determine that a test for drug use is positive, also recommended that the detection of any level of a banned drug in the sample will constitute a positive test. That determination will be made by the laboratory, based on its ability to replicate the findings.

In other actions, the committee agreed to develop a recommendation for the Council on when a student-athlete's period of ineligibility will begin once he or she has tested positive for drug use.

Also, the committee decided to develop a list of banned drugs featuring specific brand names, for use by member institutions.

Continuing its discussion of whether the drug-testing program should be expanded to include coaches and referees, the committee decided that current NCAA legislation does not grant authority for such testing. It informed the Council that new legislation must be developed if such testing is desired.

The committee also discussed research projects that may be possible as a result of the drug-testing program. Members especially are interested in conducting research on drug usage by athletes in specific sports, reasoning that results could be useful not only to the NCAA but to amateur sports organizations in general.

The committee's next meeting is set for September 22. At that time, members will review forms to be used at drug-testing sites, give more consideration to the selection of laboratories, assign crew chiefs to championships and make final decisions about which championships will be subjected to testing.

Court test predicted for antidrug plan

The NCAA's plan to drug-test participants in national championships will be tested in court, Big Sky Conference Commissioner Ronald D. Stephenson believes.

"I don't think there's any question that the policy will be tested in court," Stephenson told the Associated Press, which reported that Idaho State University is holding up plans for mandatory drug testing of its athletes until legal questions are cleared up.

Tom Jewell, athletics director at Idaho State, said that the school's legal counsel "doesn't feel that we should implement a drug-testing program at this time."

Stephenson said, "There are lawyers for the NCAA who think the program is legal and some from the American Civil Liberties Union who are sure it isn't. When that issue is cleared up, I think a lot of schools will move (to implement drug-testing programs)."

Weber State College athletics director Gary T. Crompton said there has been no legal problem at his school because athletes are required to sign a waiver giving up the right to take the school to court. "That's not to say we won't be in court someday," Crompton said, "but we're confident and our lawyers are confident that the waiver protects us."

Stephenson said University of Idaho officials are looking at programs to test all of their students. "They're concerned about the moral and legal issues of testing only student-athletes," Stephenson said.

The University of Montana and Montana State University are not testing because of a lack of funds.

In addition to Weber State, conference schools that currently test athletes are Boise State University; the University of Nevada, Reno, and Northern Arizona University.

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 28

Summer competition and awards legislation

Awards received by student-athletes participating in an event while not enrolled as a regular student during the academic year or received during the summer while not representing the student-athlete's institution shall conform to the regulations of the recognized amateur organization(s) applicable to that event, except the receipt of cash or its equivalent for such participation shall not be permitted in any case. All awards must be properly personalized and may not be merchandise items [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(i)-(1)-(v)].

The value of any and all awards received by a student-athlete for sporting-event tournaments during the summer months while not representing the student-athlete's institution or while not enrolled as a regular student during the academic year may not exceed $300 in accordance with the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(i)-(1)-(ii). Further, the awards must be properly personalized (i.e., the event for which the recipient is receiving the award and/or the identity of the recipient are permanently inscribed on the award). Merchandise items that cannot be properly personalized (e.g., gift certificates, appliances, golf clubs, tennis rackets and sporting goods) are prohibited. It is not permissible to have an award made available as a "special deal" by a representative of the institution's athletics interests or other individual who sells the item at a loss solely to keep it within the maximum dollar limitation.

Additionally, no equipment supplied by the institution may be used by the student-athlete during the summer months. This includes slacks, shirts, umbrellas, shoes, sporting equipment, etc. This is consistent with the legislation found in Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) [extra benefits].

As provided in Case No. 100 (page 314, 1986-87 NCAA Manual), the receipt of an award that does not conform to NCAA awards legislation would jeopardize a student-athlete's eligibility for all intercollegiate competition and not solely for the sport involved.

Participation for improper expenses

Member institutions are reminded that the provisions of Case No. 10 (page 290, 1986-87 NCAA Manual) prohibit an individual who participates in competition (e.g., golf, track and field) from receiving expenses based upon the place finish achieved by that individual, regardless of whether such expenses exceed actual and necessary expenses for competition in that event. For example, an athlete who participates in a tennis tournament and places third in the competition could not receive expenses from the sponsor of the tournament based upon the third-place finish.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Advice sought on ways to shorten women's tennis play-offs

Coaches soon will be asked for their views on methods that could be used to shorten the Division I Women's Tennis Championships.

The NCAA Women's Tennis Committee, meeting July 28-30 in Kansas City, decided to ask coaches about several proposals for shortening the championships, including one that would eliminate the individual championship and expand the team-championship bracket from 16 to 20 teams.

Coaches also will be asked about proposals for shortening team matches, including one to play the three doubles matches prior to singles. Scoring will be another subject on the questionnaire, which will ask coaches whether they prefer the traditional scoring system or the "no-ad" system currently in use for championships.

A questionnaire also is planned for Division III coaches, who will consider a realignment proposal calling for the four existing regions to be broken up into eight regions. Also planned are questions involving an increase in the size of the draw for the Division III championships.

In other actions, the committee voted to recommend the University of California, Los Angeles, as host for both the 1987 and 1988 Division I championships. Also, California State University, Northridge, was recommended to be host for the 1987 Division II championships and Kalamazoo College for the 1987 Division III championships. Each site must be approved by the Executive Committee.

Dates for the 1987 Division I championship will be May 14-17 for team play and May 18-21 for individual play, with no day off between the two schedules as in the past. Committee members agreed that some championships matches can be scheduled at night. In addition, the committee recommended that the Division II tournament be played May 3-9 and that team play be conducted over three days rather than two, and that the Division III tournament be held May 12-16.

The committee also voted to eliminate the third-place team match in the Division I championships. It is asking the Executive Committee to approve awarding semifinalist trophies to the teams that lose in the semifinals.

Other recommendations involve fees for head referees. In Division I, the committee proposes that the fee be increased from $350 to $400 and that the maximum allocation for acquiring all other officials be raised from $3,000 to $4,000. The fee for the head referee in Division II would be increased from $300 to $350.

In Division III, the committee voted to prohibit play between the top two teams from one region in the first round of the team championship. Also, none of the top four singles players or top two doubles teams from the same region will face each other in the first round of those respective championships.

In another action, the committee asked member institutions to assign at least one qualified U.S. Tennis Association official to each of their regular-season dual matches.

NABC names Raveling, Brandenburg

George Raveling, head men's basketball coach at the University of Southern California, and University of Wyoming coach Jim Brandenburg have been elected to the board of directors of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Raveling was named head coach at Southern California in March after three seasons at the University of Iowa. The 48-year old Raveling had a 54-38 won-lost record at Iowa and guided the Hawkeyes to the NCAA play-offs the past two seasons.

Raveling returns to the Pacific-10

Conference, having served as head coach at Washington State University from 1973 to 1983.

Brandenburg, 49, has never had a losing season in his 10 years as a head coach. Over the past eight seasons at Wyoming, his teams have a 152-87 won-lost record and, including two seasons as head coach at Montana, his overall record is 191-103.

Brandenburg has guided the Cowboys to three Western Athletic Conference titles and has been named WAC coach of the year three times.

Col. Harvey W. Schiller

Schiller is new SEC commissioner

Col. Harvey W. Schiller of the U.S. Air Force Academy is the choice of Southeastern Conference presidents as the next SEC commissioner, succeeding H. Boyd McWhorter, who is retiring at the end of August after 14 years as commissioner.

Schiller, 47, is head of the chemistry department and chair of the athletics advisory committee at Air Force.

Schiller has undergraduate degrees from the Citadel and the University of Michigan and a doctorate in chemistry from Michigan.

At Air Force, he is faculty athletics representative. He is a member of the NCAA Executive Committee.

Rules tightened for high school student-athletes

No-pass, no-play policies have been adopted by the state of California and the Chattanooga, Tennessee, board of education in recent weeks, requiring public school students to meet new academic requirements to be able to participate in extracurricular activities.

Texas and Tennessee have similar academic rules regarding extracurricular activities.

In California, students must maintain a C average to participate in sports and other activities. The measure will take effect in January.

Districts that fail to comply with the rule could lose the annual inflation allowance in their state funding.

In Chattanooga, the rule was approved after months of debate. Students will be warned if they are failing a subject during the first nine weeks of a semester. If their marks do not improve in the second half of the semester, extracurricular activities will be suspended.

The academic rule adopted by the Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Association requires student-athletes to pass five courses each semester to participate in sports.

DEATHS

CHUCK MCKINLEY, the 1963 Wimbledon singles titlist who played collegiate tennis at Trinity (Texas), died August 11 after a lengthy illness, during which he suffered from a malignant brain tumor. He was 45. McKinley also won the U.S. Open doubles championship in 1961, 1963 and 1964 with partner Dennis Ralston, who coaches men's tennis at Southern Methodist... ALLAN BAILEY, a member of Duquesne's two best-ever basketball teams, died August 5 of cancer at age 54. After helping lead the 1952 and 1953 Duquesne's teams to records of 23-4 and 21-8, respectively, he returned to the school in 1967 to serve as an assistant coach... JOHN ALEXANDER, a former Rutgers player who is credited with being the first outside linebacker in professional football history, died August 5 at age 90. An assistant coach at Rutgers who eventually became a singing great, Paul Robeson first encouraged Alexander to redefine the tackle's position on defense, leading Alexander to play a step back and outside the defensive end while playing for the professional Milwaukee Badgers... LESTER LAUTENSCHLAGER, who quarterbacked Tulane's unbeaten 1925 football team, died August 5 after a long illness. He was 82... STERLING DUPREE, former Georgia football recruiting coordinator, died August 4 at age 76. An outstanding fullback and track athlete at Auburn, Dupree also coached at South Carolina, Florida and his alma mater... Former Portland golfer and Oregon high school football star VINCE ALTENHOFEN died August 3 of cancer at age 49... WILLIAM W. LOIKA, retired Central Connecticut State football coach whose teams compiled a 94-72-1 record from 1964 to 1981, died July 31 of cancer. He was 64. Loika also coached at Connecticut and at Hartford Public High School... Former Iowa basketball player BRUCE "SKY" KING found dead July 27 in his parents' home in Dayton, Ohio, after he had gone jogging with his brother. He was 30. King played for the Hawkeyes from 1974 to 1977 and was the team's most valuable player his final year... GARY J. FAMIGLIETTI, a two-time all-pro quarterback with the Chicago Bears who played collegiately at Boston U., died July 12 in Chicago at age 72... CARL "SPIDER" LOCKHART, an 11-year defensive back with the New York Giants who was a defensive halfback and flanker at North Texas State, died July 8 in Hackensack, New Jersey, of complications from lymph gland cancer. He was 43... EARL JAY "FUZZ" MERRITT, head football coach at Pomona-Pitzer from 1935 to 1958, died July 7 at age 89, just one day before his 90th birthday. He joined the Pomona coaching staff immediately after his graduation from the school, where he was the first undergraduate ever to win varsity letters in football, basketball, track and baseball every year he attended.

SLINGSHOT "87"

"If you think SAFETY is expensive, try an INJURY"

The single standard football goal post with safety foremost in mind. Why risk possibility of collision between your players and the goal posts, especially if your current ones have two posts in the ground and are unpadded. It happens every week end. Why should you take a chance.

Two way adjustable sleeve. Improved tightening points and pressure release system for the crossbar at the connecting point to the gooseneck, makes Slingshot "87" a must for all playing fields—PRO, COLLEGE or HIGH SCHOOL.

Infractions

much time worrying about other people's houses, you can't keep your own."

Another reason coaches are hesitant to report infractions is that the NCAA has a tendency to overreact and "shoot flies with shotguns," Kriese said.

Miami's Hearn said he watches golfers accept gift certificates and prizes "all the time," but they never get reported.

Former Miami tennis player Chris Louw sees the same disregard for NCAA rules on the satellite tennis circuit, where amateurs are allowed to receive money for "actual and necessary" expenses. He said most players overestimate their expenses and ask for the maximum amount tournaments offer.

The rules are even more difficult to enforce when players compete in summer tournaments overseas.

"Here in the United States, the money isn't that great. But guys who go overseas for the summer can walk away with money for travel," said Louw, the former Miami tennis player.

The United States Golf Association doesn't pay for amateurs' expenses like the tennis associations do. It does allow amateurs to accept gift certificates up to $350, which is in conflict with the NCAA rule.

Miami golf coach Norm Parsons said he also thinks the problem lies in the "vague, inconsistent and ridiculous" rules the NCAA has in its books. Many golfers, coaches and tournament directors aren't sure how to interpret the rules, he added.

"I never knew the rule before last summer, so I always used to take gift certificates," said Nolan Henke, a senior golfer at Florida State University. "Now I know, so I don't accept anything."

"I used to accept gift certificates before coach Parsons warned me not to," said former Miami golfer Ronnie McCann. "It's really a stupid rule. What's the difference between using a gift certificate at a pro shop and receiving nine personalized golf shirts like I had to do at the Florida state amateur tournament last year?"

Kite, the former Wake Forest golfer, felt the same way when he won the Cardinal amateur last year. He wasn't allowed to accept his $350 gift certificate, so the tournament director gave

No standard set

Baseball and women's softball coaches and athletics administrators at NCAA member institutions should note that the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment has not established a standard for helmets worn by catchers in those two sports.

"It has been brought to my attention that some of these (baseball and softball) helmets may bear a NOCSAE seal," wrote Glen Meredith, executive director of the organization, in a letter to the NCAA. "Be advised that NOCSAE has not established a standard for catcher's helmets of any type."

Questions concerning this matter may be directed to Meredith at NOCSAE headquarters, P.O. Box 20626, Kansas City, Missouri 64195; telephone 816/464-5470.

Tutoring program changed

The academic support system for athletes at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has been transferred from the control of the athletics department to the college of arts and sciences, according to John D. Swofford, athletics director.

"At the suggestion of the board of governors' subcommittee on athletics, we began thinking about the switch last fall," Swofford said. "After months of discussion, we simply felt a more appropriate approach to the academic tutoring of our athletes would be through an academic area rather than through athletics."

Wake Forest's athletics director $350 worth of golf balls to make up for it. Kite got nothing for his victory.

One golfer, who didn't want his name used, said the "ridiculous" rules have forced two of his friends to accept money from sponsors.

One of the friends has an older brother who is a professional golfer with a sponsor. That sponsor pays for all the amateur brother's expenses when he travels to summer tournaments. The other collegiate golfer has been sponsored by a family friend since he was 10 years old. The sponsor still travels with the golfer and pays for many of his expenses on the road.

"It's very frustrating for me because here I am working hard to make enough money to go, and these other guys are getting a free ride," the golfer said. "Amateur athletes are supposed to play sports for fun. I wish it would really be that way."

Miami players McCann and Hearn estimate that about 20 percent of amateur golfers have sponsors. Kite of Wake Forest said he wasn't sure if it was that many, but said he had been approached "many, many" times by sponsors. He said sponsorship is not unusual among the more successful players.

When asked if he knew of any collegiate golfers with sponsors, Henke replied, "I don't want to get anyone in trouble."

Joan Zekala of the U.S. Tennis Association said she had heard rumors of some amateur tennis players with sponsors, but, "You never know what to believe."

"We just hope the athletes are intelligent enough to know the consequences of breaking the rules, so we generally trust their expense reports," Zekala said. "I've never had an amateur try to pull a fast one on me, but it may happen elsewhere."

Kriese said he's sure it does.

"I've been coaching 11 years, and yes, yes, yes there is a problem," he said. "I know there is, and the NCAA knows there is. They just don't care enough about the minor sports to do anything about it."

NACDA to sponsor VFY

Plans for the coming year and the logistics of switching to a new affiliation were major topics when the Volunteers for Youth Committee met for the final time under NCAA sponsorship July 27-29 in Palo Alto, California.

Beginning September 1, the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will assume sponsorship of VFY, and the program will be known as NACDA Volunteers for Youth. The NCAA will discontinue its sponsorship, which began in 1977.

Gator Bowl pact signed

The Gator Bowl and CBS television sports have signed a one-year agreement for CBS-TV to carry the 1986 Gator Bowl Football Classic.

Gator Bowl President John T. Bell and CBS officials said the game would be played December 27 at either 12:30 p.m. or 2:30 p.m. EST.

Gator Bowl officials declined to discuss what CBS is paying to televise the contest. ABC-TV paid in excess of $700,000 for the 1985 game.

Under NACDA, the program's reduced staff will consist of Audrey West, senior national coordinator, and a part-time secretary. No traveling staff members were hired for the coming year in order to reduce expenses, but the committee hopes to hire a full staff for 1987-88. VFY will be funded by private contributions and grants.

During the coming year, the committee and staff will examine VFY's national structure to identify ways of better serving local chapters.

In one of its final actions under NCAA sponsorship, the committee awarded letters of commendation in recognition of excellent operation to 13 VFY chapters. The chapters are at Boise State University; University of California, Davis; Carleton College; University of Connecticut; Duke University; University of Iowa; University of Illinois, Champaign; Northwestern University; University of Notre Dame; Ohio State University; Stanford University; Vanderbilt University, and University of Virginia.

Columbia as a state).

Football no parallel

It would appear that this economic formula is at least part of the answer to the basketball attendance decline. But the same economic formula seems to have no validity when applied to the football attendance decline reported a few months earlier (340,157 — largest in 29 years of official record-keeping). In fact, it comes out just the reverse: The states on the East and West coasts used in the basketball survey were down 448,849 in football; the rest of the nation up 108,962. Either football is a different picture, or the economic formula simply has no validity for either sport. But we think it is at least worth considering as a partial reason for the basketball decline.

Grass roots trend downward

The teams below Division I fell for the third time in four years, and the decline of 307,043, was by far the largest ever (compared to 185,398 in 1985, 213,654 in 1983 and 51,212 in 1982, with only a tiny increase of 11,007 in 1984).

Undoubtedly the proliferation of unlimited basketball on television and the advent of cable has contributed to this grass-roots decline.

Even in Division I, the trend has been a bit downward in average home attendance, with only more games keeping the totals going up every year—until 1986, that is. The 1986 per-game average for home games was 5,010, lowest since 1977 (4,937). In contrast, all tournament and other neutral-site attendance (both regular season and postseason) has nearly doubled since 1977, when it was 799,144 for 106 sessions. In 1986 it was 1,469,132 for 158 sessions. Home attendance has increased only because of more teams in Division I playing more games—38 more teams played 773 more home games (1986 vs. 1977).

Big East, ACC records

Interestingly, two of the conferences on television the most—the Big East Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference—each set all-time records for both per-game attendance and total spectators. The Big East totaled 1,446,241 (up 127,706 over its old record set in 1985) and averaged 10,185 (vs. 9,840 in 1985). The ACC totaled 1,281,757 (more than 100,000 above the record it set in 1984) and averaged 10,093, breaking the 10,042 it set in 1978.

Big Ten, SEC again 1-2

Once again, the Big Ten Conference led the national at 11,929 per game and 1,908,629 total spectators, despite tiny declines in both figures. Only in 1976, when the ACC led, has the Big Ten failed to be No. 1. For the eighth consecutive year, the Southeastern Conference finished second, averaging 10,399, an increase of 358. The SEC has topped 10,000 per game nine years in a row. In the same span, other than the Big Ten, only the Western Athletic Conference (twice), ACC (twice) and Big East (once) have reached five figures in per-game average.

Records by others

Only one other Division I conference set records in total attendance and per-game average. That was the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, with 837,647 and 6,070 per game. The Sun Belt Conference (5,703) and Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference (8,860) both set per-game records (the Metro doing it because Tulane dropped basketball; the remaining seven members actually averaged more in 1985 than in 1986; the eight-team figure of 1985 was the former record). Interestingly, nine of the bottom 10 conferences were up.

North Central leads again

Among conferences below Division I, the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference led in 1986 for the sixth straight year at 2,601 per game and 379,701 total, both small declines. The Central States Intercollegiate Conference gained 110 per game to 2,319 and moved from third to second. The biggest gain (per game) in percentage terms was 12.5 percent by the Carolinas Conference.

Syracuse smashes records

Syracuse set four more national attendance records in its giant Carrier Dome during 1986. Its average of 26,255 per game broke the 25,870 record average it had set in 1985, and its total home attendance of 498,850 for 19 games was more than 100,000 above the 388,049 it had set in 1985.

For all games last season, Syracuse played before an all-time-high 641,146 spectators, breaking the 633,618 set by Kentucky in 1984. Syracuse's 32-game, all-games average was 20,036, smashing the 18,753 it set in 1985.

Only the home-court single-game record did not fall. That is 32,520 for the Villanova game at Syracuse, February 1, 1985, which ranks seventh on the all-time list for all sites (the first six being mostly NCAA tournament games at bigger domed arenas).

The Georgetown (32,475) and Notre Dame (32,397) games of 1986 now rank 9-10 on the all-time list (and 3-4 on the list of biggest campus crowds).

The first four teams in attendance—Syracuse, Kentucky, Louisville and New Mexico—also finished 1-2-3-4 in 1985. Brigham Young moved up from seventh to fifth. Nevada-Las Vegas from ninth to sixth and North Carolina, moving into its new arena after the season started, jumped from 35th to seventh. Only two new teams appeared in the top 20—North Carolina and Tennessee (from 22nd to 19th).

North Carolina's biggest

North Carolina led the country in per-game increase at 5,884 per game, to 15,838. This included 21,444—the capacity—at seven games in the Tar Heels' new arena and 10,934 at eight other home games (including one in Greensboro and two in Charlotte).

In all, 10 teams were up at least 1,700 per game in Division I in 1986, vs. 19 in 1985, a reflection of the national decline. This does not include San Francisco (3,061 per game) and Miami (Florida) (3,015). Both resumed basketball in 1986 and thus were up from zero in 1985.

Others on the list (using a minimum of nine home games) were Georgia Tech, up 3,774 per game (to 9,575); North Carolina-Charlotte 3,395 (to 5,302); Hartford, 3,054 (to 6,174); North Carolina, Charlotte, 3,395 (to 5,302); Hartford, 3,054 (to 6,174); New Mexico State, 2,156 (to 9,800); Maryland-Eastern Shore, 2,140 (to 2,940); California, 2,017 (to 5,565); Drake, 1,988 (to 6,441); Wyoming, Ranking 2-3-4 behind Syracuse's record in attendance for all games last season were Kentucky at 621,415, Louisville 587,076 and Kansas 494,320.

St. Cloud State tops II

St. Cloud State, which enjoyed a big season on the court, led Division II in home attendance at 4,539 per game—more than three times its 1985 figure of 1,433. Kentucky Wesleyan was next; then North Dakota State third, and Norfolk State, the 1985 leader, fourth. In Division III, Calvin—eighth a year ago—jumped to first at 2,570 per game, as 1985 champion Wisconsin-Stevens Point fell to fourth, with Wisconsin-Whitewater second and St. John's (Minnesota) third. The 505 non-NCAA colleges were led by Huron at 4,043 per game, replacing Fort Hays State.

and officials.

The Executive Committee also voted to eliminate Executive Regulation 1-3(d)—which will end advancement by Divisions II and III student-athletes to Division I championships competition—effective August 1, 1987.

At the same time, the group directed that the action be placed on the agenda of the 1987 NCAA Convention to allow review and possible action on the decision by delegates to the annual meeting.

The committee deferred action on a request from the Men's Baseball Committee to reconsider the adoption of a single-elimination format for the College World Series. It was determined that the Division I Championships Committee would conduct a survey to obtain "a great deal more information" on the ramifications of the format change from coaches, fans and representatives of the national television networks.

The Men's and Women's Basketball Rules Committees were directed to develop a set of common playing rules for implementation during the 1987-88 season. However, the Executive Committee took no action to form a combined men's and women's rules committee for the sport.

Other actions included:

- Expansion of the Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship bracket from 10 to 12 teams.

- Denial of a request to expand the Division I Women's Softball Championship bracket and to nationally seed the top four teams.

- Expansion of the field sizes at both regional- and national-championships levels in women's gymnastics.

are asking the Council to approve in principle an addition to Article 3 that we believe is as important as the principle of institutional control and responsibility. Both are preeminent concerns of the NCAA."

Bailey said he also will present to the Council the special committee's current draft of an outline for the revised constitution and bylaws. "This will be a very detailed document that explains the number and decimal

• No action on a waiver of Executive Regulation 1-14(c) that would have permitted national seeding of the top four teams selected for the Division I Women's Volleyball Championships.

The committee also approved a suggestion by NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers that a plan be developed for selection of an executive director-elect.

Byers' current contract extends until September 1, 1992, at which time he will have reached the NCAA's mandatory retirement age of 70. Byers, who was named the Association's first executive director on October 1, 1951, has indicated to the Executive Committee his intention of taking early retirement. It is anticipated the executive director-elect will work with Byers until his retirement.

The Executive Committee adopted a search procedure and appointed Wilford S. Bailey, faculty athletics representative, Auburn University, and NCAA secretary-treasurer, chair of the search committee. The committee expects to complete its search and announce the appointment of the executive director-elect in the spring of 1987.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA office no later than August 29, 1986.

Men's and Women's Track and Field: Replacement for Timothy G. Hale, formerly at the University of Rochester, who has accepted appointment to a position at Syracuse University, a Division I institution. Appointee must be from Division III and must represent men's track.

Water Polo: Replacement for Kenneth E. Droscher, University of California, Santa Barbara, who has resigned from the committee. Also, a new chair must be appointed since Droscher was to assume that office September 1, 1986.

Limits on nonwood bats could test college hitters' mettle

The NCAA Baseball Committee is taking steps to place limits on the hitting capabilities of "nonwood" bats.

Although no move was made to cut back on currently approved standards for bats during the committee's July meeting in Aspen, Colorado, the group decided to ensure that the hitting performance of bats does not improve beyond current levels.

College costs up six percent

Average college expenses will increase by six percent for 1986-87, a College Board survey shows, the sixth consecutive year that costs at public and private institutions will rise faster than the overall national inflation rate.

The estimate includes tuition and fees, room and board, books, supplies, transportation, and personal expenses.

At four-year public colleges, costs will increase an average of five percent this year, the same increase expected at two-year public colleges. Four-year and two-year private institutions will show cost increases of six percent in each category. For the first time, the average cost of a year at a private college will top $10,000. At four-year public colleges, the average cost will be $5,604 for on-campus students and $4,467 for those living at home.

According to George H. Hanford, president of the College Board, "The good news this year is that there will be more than $20 million available in financial aid from public and private sources to help eligible students fill the gap between what it costs them to attend college and what they can afford."

Academic rule to be outlined

The next edition of the NCAA Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletic Eligibility (foreign-student handbook) will reflect adoption of modifications to Bylaw 5-1-(j), including specific requirements for precollege academic course work.

The revision is being undertaken by the Special NCAA Committee on Foreign Student Records, which met August 1-2 in Kansas City. "Members of the committee believe the book should reflect the increased emphasis on the core curriculum that is a major aspect of Bylaw 5-1-(j)," said Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and sports sciences and liaison to the special committee.

"The next edition of the handbook will reflect the need for student-athletes who wish to attend college in this country and participate in varsity athletics competition to concentrate on the course work outlined in the core-curriculum requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j)."

The next printing of the book also will include eligibility requirements for six more countries, which will bring the total covered in the publication to 77. Austria, Chile, the Peoples Republic of China, Haiti, Korea and Pakistan will be added to the revised publication. Its availability will be announced in a future issue of The NCAA News.

Pac-10, Big Ten sign with ABC

ABC Sports will televise at least 14 Pacific-10 Conference and Big Ten Conference football games a year under a four-year contract with the conferences, the network said August 4.

The contract, for the 1987 through 1990 seasons, replaces ABC's current two-year pact with the College Football Association, which expires after this season.

that manufacture bats each recommended to the committee during a half-day session in Aspen that it establish specifications for the weight and balance points of bats to hold the line on hitting performance. In response, a subcommittee was established to collect information and recommend limits on both weight and balance points at the committee's November 17-20 meeting in Kansas City.

The committee also changed the wording of the section of the NCAA Baseball Rules pertaining to bats. References in Rule 1-11 to the use of "metal" bats were rewritten to permit the use of "approved nonwood materials," which eventually could clear the way for use of bats employing such materials as graphite.

In making the change, however, the committee emphasized that only wood and aluminum bats are approved for use and that other bats cannot legally be used until they are approved by the committee.

The committee also took the following actions involving rules:

- Changed Rule 1-14 to make protective helmets for catchers mandatory beginning with the 1988 season.

- Voted to note under the definition for interference in Rule 2 that when a baserunner unintentionally makes contact with a fielder who already has "muffed" a chance to field a batted or thrown ball and is attempting to recover the ball, interference shall not be called.

- Added under Rule 5-2-d a note allowing the umpire to call offensive interference when a player "hinders, impedes or confuses" a defensive player trying to make a play. If, in the umpire's judgment, there was interference, the runner on whom the play was attempted would be called out.

- Amended Rule 5-7-e to give a tournament committee responsibility for arranging for the "play-off" of any tournament game that has progressed sufficiently to be a regulation game but has been stopped due to weather, darkness, light failure or curfew.

- Changed Rule 6-4-g, which prohibited verbal or other acts from the bench to stop a defensive play or to entice the pitcher to commit a balk. The reference to stopping a defensive play was deleted and the remaining wording was moved to Rule 9-3, which deals with balks.

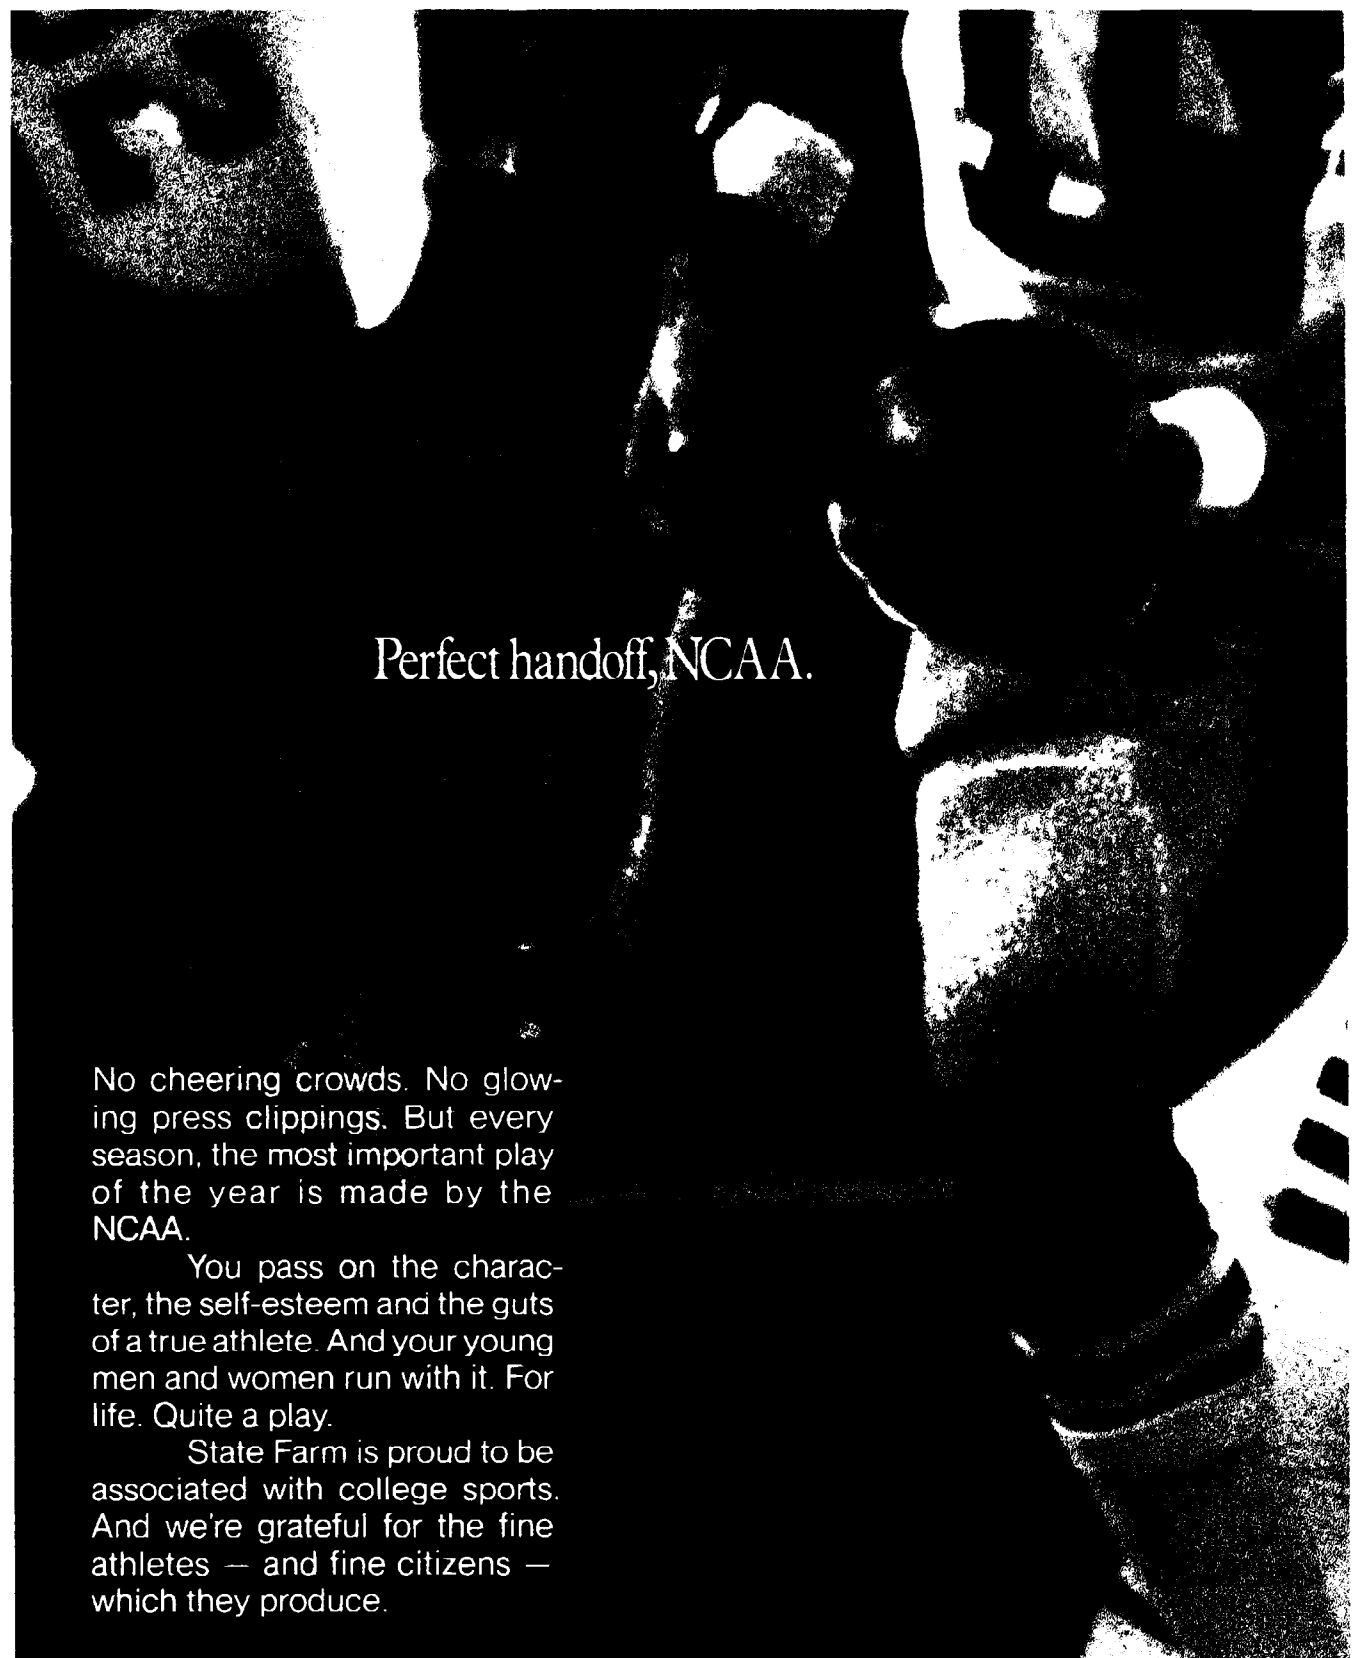

- Added under Rule 9-3-c a note prohibiting righthanded pitchers from deceiving a baserunner by flexing either leg before stepping directly and throwing to first base.

On another matter, the committee decided it could not support a proposal to delay the start of the spring baseball season by three to four weeks, although it agreed "the concept is good."

At the request of the Special Council Subcommittee to Review Playing Seasons, the committee reviewed the proposal by coach Mark Newman of Old Dominion University, who believes delaying the start of the season could have a positive impact on finances and the quality of the game while cutting down on missed class time.

The committee, however, does not support the proposal because it believes the delayed season would cause a majority of institutions to incur greater expenses and to experience considerable problems with academic calendars, cause conflicts with the summer baseball leagues and the major-league draft, create problems for student-athletes who want to work during the summer, and raise conflicts for coaches involved in summer camps and clinics.

Perfect handoff, NCAA.

No cheering crowds. No glowing press clippings. But every season, the most important play of the year is made by the NCAA.

You pass on the character, the self-esteem and the guts of a true athlete. And your young men and women run with it. For life. Quite a play.
