Fewer I-A, I-AA programs are reporting profits

Although more than half of the intercollegiate athletics departments in Divisions I-A or I-AA still are reporting a profit, the percentage is decreasing despite a significant increase in the average profit.

This fact represents one of the trends in revenues and expenses of athletics programs for the 1984-85 school year as reported in the latest edition of "Revenues and Expenses of Intercollegiate Athletics," published by the NCAA in September.

The report is compiled by Mitchell H. Raiborn, a professor of accounting at Bradley University. It is the fourth in a series that was first compiled in 1970. Other editions were published in 1970, 1978 and 1982. The Association now publishes the report every four years.

For the study, Raiborn surveyed the entire NCAA membership. Responses to the questionnaire were received from 406 of the 795 member institutions, or 51 percent, the first time that more than half of the membership responded.

The response was roughly in proportion to the number of institutions in each of the classifications noted below.

The categories, identical to those used in the previous editions, were:

—Class A. Institutions classified Division I in football in accordance with the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 10 and 11. For purposes of this study, both Division I-A and Division I-AA institutions are included in this group.

—Class B. Division II in football (including some Division I members with their football programs classified in Division II).

—Class C. Division III in football (including some Division I or Division II members with Division III football programs).

—Class D. Division I institutions with no football program.

—Class E. Division II institutions with no football program.

—Class F. Division III institutions with no football program.

In average revenues, according to Raiborn, only the Class A institutions were able to keep pace with the increase in average expenses. Both cate-

Freshman eligibility form to be changed

New forms to be used in certifying initial eligibility for incoming student-athletes under NCAA Bylaw 5-1(j) currently are being developed by the national office staff. When use of the new forms begins in 1987-88, the burden of certification [of eligibility under 5-1(j)] will shift from student-athletes' high schools to the member institutions at which they may wish to participate in intercollegiate athletics.

"The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee requested that the Council approve the change after expressing concern over the current system," said Nancy L. Mitchell, legislative assistant in the national office. "The workload for compiling information to satisfy guidelines instituted by Bylaw 5-1(j) had fallen on the secondary schools. The new forms and the change in procedure they require will mean greater involvement

Sports committee nominations open

Nominations for vacancies on NCAA sports committees to be filled by the 1987 Convention in San Diego must be forwarded to each member's Men's and Women's Committees on Committees district representative no later than December 5. The vacancies occur September 1, 1987.

In addition, a copy of the nominations for men's committees should be sent to Dennis J. Keihn, director of athletics, California State University, 5151 State University Drive, Los Angeles, California 90032, chair of the Men's Committee on Committees. Copies of nominations for women's committees should be sent to Eve Atkinson, associate director of athletics, Temple University, 1900 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19122. She is chair of the Women's Committee on Committees.

In order that a complete summary of nominations can be prepared, a copy of each nomination letter should be sent to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

When submitting nominations, the nominee's name, title, institution, division, district and conference should be provided, along with a brief paragraph describing the candidate's qualifications. Nomination letters should be provided for each nominee and should indicate whether the nominee would serve if elected. Unless an unexpired term on a committee is involved, the positions to be filled by the Convention are three-year terms.

Particular attention should be given to eligibility requirements set forth in Bylaws 12-1, 12-4 and 12-5 in the NCAA Manual.

The Men's and Women's Committees on Committees are responsible for soliciting nominations from the membership of individuals who are interested in serving. They then make their recommendations to the annual Convention.

Other members of the Men's Committee on Committees, their divisions and districts are Lawrence P. Boyd, Framingham State College (III-1); Gene A. Carpenter, Millersville University of Pennsylvania (II-2); Kenneth A. Free, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (I-3); James W. Lessig, Mid-American Conference (I-4); Noel W. Olson, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (II-5); Mi-

Convention delegate forms to be mailed

The official form to be used in appointing delegates to the annual NCAA Convention will be mailed November 21 to the chief executive officer of each NCAA member institution.

The delegate-appointment form will be inserted in the CEO's copy of the Official Notice of the Convention, which will be mailed to all members on that date. No one else at the member institution receives the form because only the chief executive officer is authorized to appoint the delegates. The CEO must sign the form.

Other procedures governing the delegate-appointment process:

- Each active member institution and each member conference with voting privileges may appoint up to four accredited delegates. Conferences without voting privileges, affiliated members and corresponding members

Division III renews efforts to protect its championships

By Tom Witosky
Des Moines Register

Small colleges have reignited the effort to make their big-time athletics brethren understand there is no such thing as being a little bit small-time in intercollegiate athletics.

"Many schools in our division believe philosophically that you either take a small-time or a big-time approach to college athletics. You can't do both," explained George Drake, president of Grinnell College and a Division III representative on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

If successful, the effort may threaten the future of athletics programs at 32 schools, including Drake University's fledgling Division III football program and others at Georgetown, St. John's (New York) and Dayton. In addition, certain small colleges such as Colorado College, which has a Division I ice hockey team, or Johns Hopkins University, a Division I power in lacrosse, probably would face similar problems.

George Drake

Kenneth J. Weller

At issue is a proposal designed to force schools to remain within one athletics division of the NCAA instead of allowing schools to pick divisions for certain sports. Division I schools provide scholarships to the maximum number of students allowed by NCAA rules, while Division II schools offer fewer athletics grants. Division III schools are prohibited from offering scholarships solely for athletics purposes.

Under the proposal, no Division I school would be allowed to compete for a national championship in a lower classification. In addition, lower-division schools no longer would be permitted to have just one Division I program, according to its supporters.

At minimum, experts say, if the proposal is adopted, schools with athletics programs in various NCAA classes will be forced to decide whether those programs should be continued, dropped or upgraded.

"If they would force our football team out of Division III, we would be faced with a decision of either upgrading ourselves back into a higher division or ending the program altogether. We don't think that would be fair to our students or our alumni," said Gene Schill, associate athletics director at the University of Dayton, a perennial Division I basketball power with a nine-year-old Division III football program.

George Drake and other supporters have tried before to prohibit so-called multiclass athletics programs and have not been successful, but they are hoping for better success when delegates to the NCAA meet next January at their annual Convention.

The new effort surfaced during recent meetings of the NCAA Presidents Commission when the commission's Division III subcommittee voted to endorse the change. The full commission declined to take a position on it.

"It's not quite a perennial issue, but almost," said Drake, adding that members of the Division III subcommittee divided on the question but endorsed the proposal. "Schools in our division don't have big stadiums that seat 11,000 or so. It is a situation that more and more schools don't seem to like very much."

Dennis Collins, executive director of the North Coast Athletic Conference, acknowledged that his conference members are giving serious consideration to proposing the change. Based in Cleveland, the conference consists of Allegheny, Oberlin, Ohio Wesleyan, Wooster, Kenyon, Denison and Case Reserve.

Collins said it is possible the conference will propose the change because it is not fair to allow schools that operate big-time programs in certain sports to operate programs competing against smaller schools.

"Division III schools have a philosophy that athletics is an integral part of the well-rounded student and should be a part of just about every student's life. That is not true on other levels, and we believe that makes it unfair to our schools when they want to compete for championships," Collins said.

Collins said a number of schools are concerned that big-time athletics powers see Division III as a way to cut costs for their athletics programs while maintaining support of alumni and students for the sports program. Combined with an emphasis to win championships even on the lower level, traditional Division III schools are placed at a disadvantage.

"That doesn't mean that while you're in college you're not going to mess up and make mistakes along the way. I think it's the coach's job to be like a parent and to encourage him, discipline him when he needs it. He's a citizen just like anybody else. They have to pay their dues."

"Rice's emphasis on education should never be construed as snobbery. That is a major disservice to the thousands of Rice graduates who participated in athletics."

"Rice has simply chosen the most obvious course for its student-athletes: Recruit only those high school students who have a realistic chance of surviving both Rice's academic rigors and the rigors of competition on the highest levels in the Southwest Athletic Conference."

"Then, Rice gives them every opportunity to enjoy a Rice education. There is no doubt in my mind that the public is demanding this type of 'snobbery' from all educational institutions, including high schools and state-funded universities."

Thomas A. Luken, U.S. representative

The New York Times

"The unhappy fact is that the NCAA is not primarily concerned about the kids who pass through its sports factories. Athletics departments are expected to be financially self-sustaining, so the profit motive supersedes any concern for the intellectual development of the athletes."

"This breeds a corrupting and destructive drive to win, regardless of the emotional, spiritual or educational cost to the student. The hope of meaningful reform from within the NCAA is a chimera."

Jack V. Doland, president
McNeese State University
Athletic Administration

"The present benefits and 'perks' that a small percentage of the coaches are receiving undermine the entire concept of the amateur spirit of college athletics. Some coaches have actually put money in their pockets for scheduling certain contests at specific locations, and this is unconscionable."

"Some guidelines must be set up within the NCAA to control coaching salaries or we will not be able to control the actions of student-athletes."

through the cant and the self-righteousness and the pious moralizing, and because he isn't afraid to describe what he sees. It isn't necessary to be a Reaganite in order to recognize that Bennett is raising important issues; if higher education would only acknowledge this, we could get rid of the ideological baggage and begin the serious debate about the universities that Bennett is trying to initiate."

"The same flexibility that a university has to attract outstanding faculty members should be available to attract good coaches."

"It should be remembered that relatively few coaches enjoy the security of tenure that is bestowed upon faculty. In fact, surprisingly few coaches remain at one institution long enough even to enjoy retirement benefits."

"I support the idea that the chief executive officer and others in positions of responsibility should know the amount and the source of a coach's outside income."

"I do not believe, however, that some organization outside of the institution should be given the authority to limit or set the conditions for the amount of income that this might be."

The NCAA conducted its first women's championships in November 1981. The first women's champions were Virginia, Division I cross country; South Dakota State, Division II cross country; Central (Iowa), Division III cross country; Connecticut, Division I field hockey; Pfeiffer, Division II field hockey, and Trenton State, Division III field hockey. From September through November 1966, the NCAA and the National Federation of State High School Associations intensified their efforts to defeat Senate Bill 3817, which would have permitted professional football teams to telecast their games (apart from the league package) on Friday nights and Saturday afternoons, in direct conflict with high school and college games. The NCAA Council, meeting November 12-13, 1956, in Detroit, received a report from the Special NCAA Basketball Television Committee, which had studied the effects of live television on college basketball attendance in the 1955-56 season and concluded that there was not sufficient evidence to justify national television controls in basketball. The committee did recommend that a similar study be made every two years. (1956-57 NCAA Yearbook)

Delay on reform plans probably a good idea

The Richmond Times-Dispatch
An editorial

Exploring further reform of big-time college athletics, a committee of 10 college presidents recently proposed that the NCAA require of institutions such actions as elimination of spring football practice and fall baseball season, cutbacks in scholarships for basketball and football players, reductions of coaching staffs in major sports, a month's delay in the start of basketball season, and a ban on high school all-star games for graduating seniors and on summer basketball camps and leagues for rising high school seniors.

A spokesman for the presidents summarized the purpose of these proposals as "reducing the pressure, in both time and intensity, on student-athletes in their athletic participation, which competes with their academic obligations. We want to make it more likely an athlete will get an education." That's a noble objective, and some of the recommended actions might help.

Nevertheless, we're glad the NCAA Presidents Commission decided to (delay) this batch of reform measures, at least until next summer, instead of pressing for passage at the NCAA Convention in January. The NCAA already is busy implementing significant change: Proposition 48, which went into effect this semester, requires freshman athletes at Division I institutions to have compiled a C average in a high school core curriculum and to have scored at least 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. It is having profound effects on college athletics programs.

On another front, the NCAA will begin next month random testing of athletes for performance-enhancing chemicals, such as anabolic steroids, as well as for such illegal drugs as cocaine. The NCAA should concentrate on doing these things well before searching for more dragons to slay. Some of the most recent ideas need further study, and some perhaps ought to be laid to rest.

Commendably, many college presidents want to purge college sport of scandalous activities, such as illegal recruiting, that have shaken universities' academic integrity. But there's no reason a president with fortitude could not take charge of his own program and clean it up.

The problem with some of the proposals being advanced collectively by the presidents is that they appear to be veering off a proacademics course to an antisport one.

Why, for example, should it be any business of college presidents if a rising high school senior wants to spend some of his summer at a basketball camp? And while the total hours spent in spring football practice or fall baseball might be an appropriate subject for review, it's hard to see why participation in those activities ought to be banned totally.

Maybe now that outrage has led to some worthwhile reforms, it's time to remind ourselves that athletics activity does have value for participants as well as spectators. To paraphrase an old saying, all study and no sport would make old Siwash a dull place.

Division III

schools interloping into our division," Collins said. "If they want to be Division I, they certainly can be."

Kenneth J. Weller, president of Central College and the only other Iowa member of the Presidents Commission, described the proposal as "volatile and controversial." He also said the change would rupture a four-year truce between the smaller Division III schools and those in Division I.

But athletics directors for colleges with programs in more than one division said they would oppose the proposal and would work to defeat it. They contend that their programs are following all NCAA rules and that the smaller schools have no real reason to complain.

"We are following all the rules for a Division III football program even to the point that we had to play an exhibition schedule this year," Drake University athletics director Curtis W. Blake said. "We know that our new program is important to our student body and our alumni and that it helps to round out college life here."

Last year, Drake officials ordered the school's Division I-AA football program downgraded to Division III because of financial problems. The Bulldog football team is scheduled to play a full Division III schedule next year.

One of Drake's opponents next year is likely to be Dayton, which downgraded its football program for economic reasons in 1977. Almost immediately after switching from big-time to small-time football, Dayton became a Division III power, winning the national championship in 1980 and placing second in 1981.

Dayton plays at Welcome Stadium, which has synthetic turf and seats 11,000. Schill concedes that Dayton's program is successful and its facilities somewhat above those afforded by other Division III schools.

"But we follow all the rules for our football team. We are proud of our success and our facilities, but we don't see why those things should penalize us," Schill said.

But Weller suggested that Dayton's early success in Division III football has been a sliver under the fingernails of many other small-college athletics directors.

"There is no doubt that much of this was started by Dayton and that some schools fear it is getting to be a trend, with other Division I colleges doing the same thing," Weller said.

Weller said the answer still is the decision to keep Division I schools from competing for Division III championships if they dropped their program into the lower division after September 1983. Drake and five other

Some athletes not averse to being paid

By the Associated Press

Many college basketball players see nothing wrong with taking money "under the table" and believe they should have a share of the television revenue their games generate, according to a recent sociological study of universities.

Sixty percent of Division I male players who filled out questionnaires said they had no moral problem with breaking payment regulations set by the NCAA, according to the study conducted by University of New Haven professor Allen L. Sack.

In contrast, the majority of Division I women basketball players support the traditional values of amateurism, the study found. Still, 32 percent of the female respondents said they thought it was all right to accept payments for their hours of training and competition.

"There's a very big difference," Sack noted in a recent interview. "Maybe that means that women have historically paid more attention to amateurism, but maybe it means they were forced to. Women have always been encouraged to be less competitive."

Sack played defensive end for Notre Dame's 1966 national-champion football team.

Questionnaires for the study were returned by 644 student-athletes at 47 colleges, representing 35 athletics conferences. There was a higher concentration of Division I schools than Divisions II and III used in the survey. The professor said his study was not a perfect random sample but was nonetheless an accurate depiction of opinions.

Sack studied the differences not only among Divisions I, II and III athletes, but also differences based on economics and race.

Sack found that a majority of lower-class athletes in all divisions, particularly lower-class black athletes, see nothing wrong with accepting money to play college sports.

Among men, 67 percent of lower-class black athletes said they thought it was morally acceptable to take money for playing, while 42 percent of upper-class white athletes said they thought it was OK.

California's move to bolster academics is worth emulating

The Kansas City Star

An editorial

California has given a strong nod to the notion that schools operate primarily to educate students. Among the cafeteria-style detours, athletics and other extracurricular activities often are offending offerings.

Offending, not because they are unpleasant for children or even because they are negative forces during their courses of learning. Just that they are secondary, especially when other institutions in society supply them.

A bill has just been signed by California's Gov. George Deukmejian that ties a C average to participation in sports and other activities. Students in grades seven through 12 must be competent enough in the classroom to be pronounced average in order to fill their days with additional responsibilities—team sports, student government, other activities.

It isn't much to demand, that busy students first achieve average learning in the classroom.

Although the law will catch all not doing good book work who are spending energy elsewhere, it's clear the biggest sweep will be made among athletes. That's appropriate. It's where a large proportion of the problem is.

There have been problems with a no-pass, no-play program in Texas, a major element of the state's 1984 school reform law. Principals say there are more dropouts and more disciplinary problems. Maybe these problems are only now in the open instead of covered up for favored athletes. Some adjustments will help. California may also need some refinements.

But the basic concept remains laudable. And whether this rather dramatic return to an emphasis on academics is involved or it's some other departure from an educational rut, support of parents is crucial.

A little personal inconvenience or even pain might be sought from families to shift the system back on course. It's not too much to ask for the sake of schools, in California or Kansas City.

Question: Is it permissible for the individuals designated by the student-athlete to receive the admissions to receive any payment, directly or indirectly, from any source for the admissions or to exchange them for any item of value?

Answer: No. The receipt of payment for the admissions or the exchange of them for any item of value by the individuals designated by the student is prohibited and would be considered an extra benefit not available to the student body in general. [C 3-1-(g)-(3) and (5)]

Legal counsel and expenses (Revises Case No. 75)

Situation: A student-athlete is involved in proceedings conducted by the institution, its athletics conference or the NCAA that relate to the student-athlete's eligibility to participate in intercollegiate athletics or legal proceedings that result from the student-athlete's involvement in athletics practice or competitive events. (531)

Question: May the student-athlete receive actual and necessary expenses from the institution to attend such proceedings, and may the student-athlete be provided legal representation in such proceedings by the institution (or a representative of its athletics interests) without charge to the student-athlete?

Answer: Yes. Provision of expenses and legal counsel in such proceedings would be considered a benefit incidental to the student-athlete's participation in intercollegiate athletics [C 3-1-(g)-(5) and C 3-1-(h)-(4)]

Contest limitations—celebrity sports activities (New case)

Situation: The provisions of Bylaw 3-3-(k)-(3) exempt from the computation of individual and team contest limitations the participation of individual athletes in local celebrity sports activities conducted under certain specified circumstances. (646)

Answer: No. The student-athlete's involvement would be permitted only in those activities that take place within a 30-mile radius of the institution's main campus; further, the involvement of student-athletes in such activities is permissible only with approval of the institution's director of athletics. [B 3-3-(k)-(3)]

Basketball and ice hockey—practice (Revises Case No. 251)

Situation: In basketball, on-court practice by a member institution's intercollegiate basketball team held at the direction of, or supervised by, any member or members of the institution's coaching staff shall not take place prior to October 15. A similar provision (with variations in the starting date) exists for the sport of ice hockey. (633)

Question: What activities supervised by the institution's coaching staff are permissible for the team prior to October 15?

Answer: Team conditioning or physical-fitness activities supervised by coaching staff members may be conducted prior to October 15 (or the applicable date for ice hockey); however, members of the institution's coaching staff may not be involved prior to October 15 with one or more team members at any location in setting up offensive or defensive alignments, chalk talks, discussions of game strategy, reviewing game films or videotapes, or activities utilizing game equipment. Any permissible "off-court" or "off-ice" activities in the sports of basketball and ice hockey shall not begin prior to the first day of classes of the academic year or September 1, whichever date occurs earlier. by staff members at NCAA member institutions."

Currently, high school personnel are required to complete the NCAA Student-Athlete Information Form for every individual who may need to qualify for initial athletics eligibility under Bylaw 5-1-(j). This two-page report must be completed to show every course a prospective student-athlete took at the secondary level and must include the grade earned and other information necessary to compile a grade-point average and determine satisfaction of core-curriculum requirements.

Next year, secondary schools will be supplied with a one-page form (No. 48-H) that will require them only to list the courses they offer that will satisfy the core-curriculum requirements. Consequently, when a student-athlete accepts a grant-in-aid from a member institution, it must be certified relative to Bylaw 5-1-(j). The secondary school will provide a copy of No. 48-H, along with the individual's transcripts and information regarding any unusual grading policy that may be used.

Member institutions then will certify adherence to Bylaw 5-1-(j) by completing another new form, No. 48-C. When filled out, No. 48-C will contain much of the information currently supplied by high schools on the student-athlete information form.

"Instead of providing extensive information on every potential student-athlete enrolled, high schools will need only to fill out one form (No. 48-H) once a year," Mitchell said. "They then will attach a copy of the form to the transcripts and other information they provide our member institutions."

Complete instructions and information answering most questions about the new procedure will be included with the high school form, which will be mailed to secondary schools within the next month.

Federal collections on student loan defaults increases

Federal collections on student loans in default are expected to total $229 million in the recently ended fiscal year, or more than twice the previous year's collections, the Education Department says.

"This is bad news for defaulters," Education Secretary William J. Bennett said. "When loans are paid back, the integrity of the Federal loan programs is preserved. By that means, needy students will be assured access to college."

In the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1985, Federal collections totaled $94 million, the department said.

Bennett attributed the increase in the fiscal year that ended September 30 to a pilot program that began last year.

Iowa wrestlers determined to 'set the mark in College Park'

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

Iowa's wrestling team has adopted "Setting the mark in College Park" as its battle cry this season.

The mark the Hawkeyes aim at setting is unprecedented in NCAA history.

Iowa will attempt to become the first team to win 10 consecutive NCAA titles at the March 19-21 NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships in the University of Maryland at College Park's Cole Field House.

And when coach Dan Gable sets his team's sights on a goal, the Hawkeyes invariably come through.

In 10 years at Iowa, Gable has:

- Become the Hawkeyes' most successful coach, compiling a 172-7-2 (95.6 percent) dual-match record.

- Coached 76 all-Americas, 66 Big Ten and 22 NCAA champions.

- Never lost to a Big Ten opponent, winning 66 consecutive dual matches and 10 straight league championships.

- Coached undefeated and untied teams in 1979 and 1985.

- Never lost more than one dual match in a season.

With Iowa's chances for last year's team title supposedly in jeopardy, the Hawkeyes almost doubled the score of runner-up Oklahoma and set championships records for team points (158), margin of victory (73¼) and number of NCAA individual titlists (five). Iowa's eight qualifiers won 39 of 44 championships matches, with two of the losses coming by one point.

Iowa has three all-Americas and two national champions returning, and ABC's live telecast of the championships finals could become a showcase for the Hawkeyes.

Leading Iowa are national champions Brad Penrith (126) and Jim Heffernan (150). Penrith turned a late-season varsity berth into a 14-1 record and won the Big Ten title. Heffernan lost in the final at the 1985 championships but captured last year's title.

All-Americas Greg Randall (142), Royce Alger (167) and Rico Chiapparelli (177) also are championships contenders. Randall, who has two second-place showings at the championships and is a three-time all-America, wrestled at 134 pounds last year but is expected to make a smooth transition into his new class. Alger, who placed fifth at last year's championships at 158 pounds, also is expected to make a successful weight shift. Chiapparelli, with two straight all-America finishes, improved to fourth at last year's championships, and the two-time Big Ten defending champion hopes to wrap up this year's title in his home state.

Gable has up-and-coming wrestlers at the other five weight classes who also should contend for all-America honors.

Other contenders

Ending Iowa's dynasty is improbable but not impossible.

Iowa State proved last year that the Hawkeyes can be beaten. The Cyclones edged Iowa in a dual match last season and lost only two wrestlers to graduation from their 19-1 squad. Second-year coach Jim Gibbons did an outstanding job of bringing an inexperienced squad along last year, with first-place finishes at the Las Vegas Invitational and Midwest Championship and a fourth-place NCAA championships showing. Iowa State returns six front-line wrestlers who will be joined by transfer Kevin Jackson, a three-time all-America from Louisiana State with a 105-14 career record.

Oklahoma State, following a third-place championships finish, has four returning all-Americas and will get a lift from Tennessee transfer Glenn Lanham, an all-America at 158 pounds. The Cowboys are a little thin from the 167-pound to heavyweight classes but have enough quality in the lower weights to contend for the NCAA team title.

Oklahoma, defending Big Eight champion and 1985 and 1986 championships runner-up, may find the past two seasons' accomplishments hard to match. The Sooners lost three all-Americas to graduation; all-America John Laviolette to grades, and Joe Melchiorre, who transferred to Kirkwood Junior College in Iowa after compiling a 34-9-1 record last year. The young Sooners have an impressive group of freshmen to build upon, and seniors Nick Neville (134), Darrin Higgins (150) and heavyweight Mark Tatum to look to for leadership.

Kevin Jackson

The "Big Four" have finished in the top four at the last two championships; however, several teams are capable of crashing their party.

Teams (see top-individual list) with the potential for outstanding seasons include Penn State, North Carolina, Bloomsburg, Clarion, Arizona State, Lehigh, North Carolina State, Army, Wisconsin, Syracuse and Northern Iowa.

Division I sponsorship drops off

The 57th annual Division I Wrestling Championships will be March 19-21 at Maryland... There are 123 Division I member institutions sponsoring wrestling this season — 10 fewer than last year... Clarion's Bob Bubb, voted coach of the year by the National Wrestling Coaches Association last year, recently was selected to serve as chair of the NCAA Wrestling Committee, replacing Bob Kopnisky, who left Missouri to pursue a career in business... Utah State's Bob Carlson was selected to replace Kopnisky on the committee.

Major rules changes for the upcoming season include: Rule 2-11 — Offensive wrestlers must hold their opponents in a controlled pinning situation for two seconds to gain a near fall; Rule 3-1 — A weight limit (275 pounds) goes into effect for the heavyweight class; Rule 6-4 — Unsportsmanlike conduct will be divided into time segments (i.e., during the match or before or after the match); Rule 6 — The edge violation was deleted; Rule 7-1-a — Injury time will be reduced to 1½ minutes, and Rule 7-1-d — Referees may call an official's timeout for a medical consultant.

Coach Dave Amato has rejuvenated Brown's wrestling program. Last season, the third-year coach led

Four for four is the goal of SIU-Edwardsville wrestlers

Four is the foremost number on the minds of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville wrestling coach Larry Kristoff and his prize 126-pounder, Tim Wright.

Kristoff is preparing his squad for a fourth consecutive NCAA Division II Wrestling Championships team title, and Wright will be aiming for his fourth consecutive individual title—a feat no wrestler in any division has accomplished.

As it did last year, SIU-Edwardsville will enjoy the home-mat advantage at the March 6-7 championships. Unlike last year, Kristoff will not have runner-up Edinboro, which will compete in Division I, to worry about. Wright, a three-time champion at 118 pounds, also will not have to worry about the graduated defending champion and runner-up in the 126-pound class.

But Kristoff, who led the Cougars to an 11-8 dual-match record against some top-notch competition and first-place finishes in the Southern Open and NCAA Midwest regional last year, and Wright cannot be too care-free in pursuit of their goals. Kristoff will have to rely on five returning all-Americans to carry his team, while untested wrestlers man the remaining weight classes. And it remains to be seen how Wright will perform as a 126-pounder.

In addition to Wright, SIU-Edwardsville's lineup features championships veterans Brian McTague, runner-up at 150 pounds last season; Kristoff's sons, Kip (142) and Mark (167), seventh-place and runner-up finishers, respectively, and Bob Dahm (158), who was injured in the semifinals and defaulted to fifth place. The Cougars also have a potential championships qualifier in Dwight Downs (177), a former junior college all-America.

Other contenders

Cal State Bakersfield once again will have one of the division's better teams and is a front-runner in the race to dethrone SIU-Edwardsville. Coach T. J. Kerr has seven returning starters and 11 lettermen, led by defending 167-pound champion Darryl Pope, who placed first in five regular-season tournaments and finished sixth at the Division I championships en route to a 35-5-1 record.

The Roadrunners had a 12-3 dual-meet season and third-place championships finish and had an exceptional recruiting year. They also have heavyweight redshirt Mike Monroe, who placed seventh at the 1985 championships, back on the mat.

The North Central Conference again can lay claim to being the division's toughest wrestling conference. Six teams—North Dakota State, Augustana (South Dakota), Nebraska-Omaha, St. Cloud State, South Dakota State and North Dakota—placed among the top 13 finishers at last year's championships.

Five-time defending conference champion North Dakota State probably is the team to beat for conference supremacy and is a top contender for a shot at the championships title. Coach Bucky Maughan, who has a 230-67-7 record and 12 top-five championships finishes in 22 years, has six returning all-Americans, paced by Gene Green (158), a two-time conference champion who placed third at last year's championships. Maughan's talented recruiting class includes son Bret (118), a four-time North Dakota state champion who compiled a 126-0 prep record, and Marty Morgan (167), whose brother, John, was a four-time all-America for Maughan.

Despite the loss of Koln Knight, winner of the championships' last two most-outstanding-wrestler awards, and a lineup that is laden with freshmen and sophomores, Augustana (South Dakota) has the talent to improve upon last year's sixth-place championships finish. Coach Paul Kendle's roster lists three wrestlers—notably son Todd (158), a fourth place championships finisher—with at least 20 dual-match victories.

Nebraska-Omaha and North Dakota have well-balanced teams with plenty of depth. Nebraska-Omaha,

In his first-ever collegiate match, Bojniewicz pinned the No. 1 seed in 6:54 and went on to win the 190-pound title to turn the tournament in Augustana's favor. Bojniewicz, a football recruit, subsequently qualified for the championships and is a contender for all-America honors this season.

Carroll's Greg Peeters had his legs amputated below the knees as a result of a farm accident when he was 11 years old. The Wheaton (Illinois) Invitational celebrates its 50th anniversary this year.

Montclair makes Division III race a three-team skirmish

The first Seven Years' War ended 223 years ago. The second ended last year, and Montclair State coach Mike Strellner and his Indians can take credit for halting that battle.

For seven years, Trenton State and Brockport State waged war at the NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships. Trenton State won the team title in 1979, 1981, 1984 and 1985. Brockport State claimed the title in 1980, 1982 and 1983.

The two teams were expected to renew their battle at last year's championships, but Montclair State, paced by five place-winners, blitzed its way to the top.

Strellner has four all-Americans returning and a good group of freshmen and transfers who should keep the Indians among the division's top teams.

Montclair State's main strength is in the middle weights. Two-time champion John Monaco (167-pound class in 1985; 177 in 1986) is Strellner's top returnee. Nineteen of Monaco's 29 victories came by falls last year. He is expected to wrestle in the 167-pound weight class this season. All-Americans Dave Van Tine (158) and Monaco's brother, Karl (142), round out the Indians' crop of powerful middle weights. Pete Gonzalez, NCAA championships runner-up at 118 pounds last year, will jump to the 126-pound weight class, where he will try to defend departed teammate Nick Milonas' title.

Other contenders

Montclair State's march to last year's title may turn out to be only a brief reprieve in Brockport State's and Trenton State's fight for division supremacy. Both teams are loaded with veterans. Brockport State returns nine starting wrestlers, while Trenton State has eight.

Defending State University of New York Athletic Conference champion Brockport State, which finished 9 1/4 points behind Montclair State, is led by defending SUNYAC and Division III 158-pound champion Todd Slade, loser of only one match last year. Defending SUNYAC champions Scott Detore (134) and John Leone (150), both of whom were championships runners-up last year, are top contenders in their classes. Leone will be out to capture all-America honors for the fourth time. Heavyweight Rusty Middlebrook caps coach Don Murray's formidable lineup.

Trenton State is a good bet to improve upon last year's fifth-place championships finish. The defending New Jersey Athletic Conference champion's lineup has potential championships qualifiers at every weight class. First up for the Lions will be Tim Jacoutot, who finished third at 118 pounds after winning the national title in 1985 as a freshman. Championships veterans follow at the 126-, 134- and 142-pound weight classes. Jacoutot's brother, Kevin, was sidelined by illness before last year's championships and returns as a top contender for the 150-pound title. Championships qualifiers man the 158-pound, 167-pound, 177-pound and heavyweight classes. Junior college transfer Vic Pozsonyi, who finished third at last year's junior college national championships, should fill the void at 190 pounds.

Defending Iowa Conference champion Buena Vista graduated some of its top wrestlers from last year's third-place championships team. However, coach Al Baxter has 20 returning lettermen, most of whom are juniors or seniors, to call upon. League runner-up Central (Iowa), which slipped to an eighth-place championships finish last year after finishing second in 1985, has a senior-dominated team that should make the league race interesting.

First-year coach Greg Lonning has championships veterans in conference runners-up Matt Dichl (118), Tim Hackel (126) and Rick Stahl (142), as well as defending conference champion Jay McGovern (167), to welcome him into the coaching ranks.

John Carroll, a top-five championships finisher in five of the past six years, has the ingredients to be the division's top team. The Blue Steaks, winners of the 1975 championships title, are aptly named. John Carroll has a 20-year streak of winning the Presidents' Athletic Conference title under coach Tony DeCarlo. With five returning all-Americans and what DeCarlo calls one of his best-ever freshman classes, John Carroll is a legitimate contender for the championships title.

Other teams (see top individual list) with promising outlooks include Ithaca, St. Lawrence, Glassboro State, Buffalo, Cornell College, St. Olaf, Mount Union, Ohio Northern, Olivet, Augsburg, Wisconsin-Whitewater and Thiel.

seventh at last year's championships, has top contenders with juniors R. J. Nebe (190) and Brad Hildebrandt (158), who placed third and eighth, respectively, at the championships. North Dakota returns nine starters, led by third-place championships finisher John Christen (118). St. Cloud State's strong suit is depth, while South Dakota State fields a young team that should be a factor in post-season competition.

First-year Liberty coach Don Schuler inherits a program that has evolved into one of the division's best. Liberty, defending NCAA South regional champion and fifth-place championships finisher, has compiled a 108-31-1 dual-match record over the past 11 years and has steadily improved at the championships. Schuler has the ingredients for another successful year despite the loss of two all-Americans from last year's 10-4 dual-match team, which captured four regular-season tournament titles. The Flames' Mike Hatch, runner-up at last year's championships, is one of the division's top heavyweight contenders.

Other top teams (see individual contender list) in the division include San Francisco State, Northern Michigan, Portland State, Central Missouri State, Ashland, Pittsburgh-Johnstown, Wright State and Lake Superior State.

Unbeaten and untied teams in Division I-A reduced to three

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The unbeaten-untied list in Division I-A football is down to three—Miami (Florida), Michigan and Penn State—with a fourth team, Arizona State, unbeaten but once tied. Now, it is time to compare their schedules.

Michigan's schedule ranks 29th in the NCAA computer at .546, Penn State's 34th at .544, Arizona State's 36th at .538 and Miami's 60th at .487. And except for Michigan, their opponents so far this season rank higher than their remaining opponents. In Michigan's case, its opponents so far are .536; its remaining foes .563.

Taking only opponents played so far, Florida has played the nation's toughest schedule at .777, meaning its foes have won 36, lost 10 and tied one against I-A opponents when not playing Florida.

Taking remaining opponents only, Pittsburgh's schedule is by far the toughest. Its three remaining foes—Miami (Florida), Rutgers and Penn State—have a combined 21-2-1 record for .896 against I-A opposition.

By the way, Miami and Penn State are independents and thus free to pick their own bowl berths, while Michigan of the Big Ten Conference and Arizona State of the Pacific-10 conference now are the favorites to meet in the Rose Bowl under its contract.

The top 10

Notre Dame's schedule was toughest in the preseason, which was based entirely on last year's results. The rankings now are based solely on this season; and at this stage, Florida has a slim .008 edge for No. 1, with a .707 mark to Notre Dame's .699, based on the entire 1986 schedule. Others in the top 10 are Louisiana State .667, UCLA .654, Oregon .620, California .617, Oregon State .613, Cincinnati .596, Washington State .595 and Washington .593.

It is worth noting that only 6-2 Washington, 5-2 LSU and 5-4 Cincinnati have winning records in this group so far, with Florida at 4-4 after its upset of Auburn November 1.

In the second 10 are South Carolina .588, Minnesota .587, Alabama and Southern California both .5823, .5822 for Southern Methodist, then Pittsburgh .580, Temple .574, Georgia Tech .571, East Carolina .5692 to .5688 for Stanford.

I-AA leaders

There are also three perfect-record teams in Division I-AA—Holy Cross, Nevada-Reno and Pennsylvania—with a fourth, Tennessee State, unbeaten but once tied. Like I-A, none of their schedules ranks in the top 10. Holy Cross' schedule ranks 26th, Nevada-Reno's 45th, Tennessee State's 48th and Pennsylvania's 73rd. All but Tennessee State have the toughest part of their schedules yet to be played.

Bucknell's schedule ranks No. 1 in I-AA at .627, then James Madison .609, Richmond .586, Harvard .585, Morgan State .578, Florida A&M .571, Montana State .565, Louisiana Tech .5643 to .5638 for Bethune-Cookman and Weber State .556. Louisiana Tech at 5-3-1 is the only winning team in the group, although James Madison and Richmond are 4-4.

Field-goal trends

Field goals per game are down again this season in Division I-A, but the reverse is true in I-AA, where they are being kicked at a record pace. So far this season, the I-AA average is 1.74 per game (both teams combined) and 61.5 percent have been successful. Both figures are well above the records of 1.61 per game in 1985 and 60.3 percent accuracy in 1983. A I-AA record 70.7 percent were good on November 1.

Northern Arizona's Goran Lingmerth, a senior soccer-styler from Eksjo, Sweden, was eight-for-eight October 25—an all-time, all-divisions NCAA collegiate record as he scored all of his team's points in a 24-0 victory over Idaho. His longest was 46 yards (the others were under 40). The former record of seven was set by Western Michigan's Mike Prindle in 1984 and tied by Nebraska's Dale Klein in 1985.

Field goals are averaging 2.15 per game so far this season in I-A compared to 2.18 last season and the record 2.30 in 1984. The decline has come despite a slight increase in accuracy—65.3 percent successful this year vs. 64.6 last year and the record 68.2 in 1984. Soccer-stylers have taken over in the last decade, and they have been consistently more accurate; hence, records for accuracy and totals. For instance, in 1975 there were 70 soccer-stylers in I-A vs. 116 conventional, or straight-ahead, kickers. So far this season, only eight straight-ahead kickers have attempted one or more field goals in I-A vs. 126 soccer-stylers. The eight straight-heads are Tim Henneghan and Don Vesling of Eastern Michigan, Lee Gliarmis of North Carolina, Chris Kinzer of Virginia Tech, Robert Woods of West Virginia, Bill Bell of New Mexico, Steve Crumley of Georgia, and Scott Lieber of Utah. (Collectively, they

Keyes, a consensus all-America halfback for Purdue in 1967 and 1968, who was third in the Heisman Trophy voting in 1967 and second in 1968.

Keyes played a lot of defense over his three seasons, particularly in key situations. He had five career interceptions, one going for a 95-yard touchdown against Notre Dame in 1966 (Purdue lost that game but beat the Irish in both 1967 and 1968, and Notre Dame lost only twice each year). Each of Keyes' Purdue teams was 8-2 in the regular season, and the 1966 team beat Southern California in the Rose Bowl, January 2, 1967.

Keyes played defense well enough in 1968 that he was voted a first-team defensive back on one all-America team even though he was a 1,000-yard rusher. Keyes was a highly versatile player. As an example, he completed 12 halfback passes in his career and—get this—eight went for touchdowns.

Here is a paragraph from the look-back section of the 1978 NCAA College Football Program Kit on a game played September 28, 1968, written by Steve Boda: "Behind Leroy Keyes' virtuoso and versatile performance, Purdue

Family affairs

Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney does not hide the pride he has for son Kevin, youngest of his eight children. At the same time, he insists he does not let their relationship affect his game plans—the team's glory comes first, Kevin second.

The scoreboard shows this is true. Fresno State was 11-0-1 last season and stands 7-1 so far this season. That does not happen if you are playing favorites.

Sweeney was concerned about the pressure on his son to break Doug Flutie's Division I-A all-time-record passing total of 10,579 at Boston College from 1981 to 1984 and sought to remove it. "At the beginning of the season, I told Kevin to forget about the record, to consider it an accomplished fact and go on from there," the coach said. So far, he looks like a prophet. Sweeney has become the third 10,000-yard passer in I-A history at 10,116, thus needs a 154.7 average his last three games—more than 100 yards below his current season average of 255.1.

The son is a strong-armed 190-pounder who stands six feet and can bench-press 310 pounds. The father has heard enough about his height, or lack of it. "The idea of height has nothing to do with throwing a football from a five-step drop," the coach told Jay Novdey, The New York Times. "If it did, you'd never be able to kick a field goal." He pointed out that Kevin is taller than Pat Haden (ex-Southern California and Los Angeles Rams) and both are taller than Flutie. The son is a fierce competitor, and that is what counts most with his father.

"You measure a quarterback here," said the coach, pounding his chest. "In the heart. You've got to be the kind of guy that can spit blood on the other man's shoes. Jim Plunkett is that kind of player. I see that toughness in Kevin."

William and Mary receiver Harry Mehre has deep family roots in college football. His grandfather, also Harry Mehre, was a teammate of the legendary George Gipp at Notre Dame and a head coach at Georgia (1928-37) and Mississippi (1938-45). His father, also named Harry Mehre, played football at Vanderbilt.

Mehre was a strong factor in William and Mary's 6-0 start this season—best in school history. Over the last two seasons, he has averaged better than 16 yards per catch and is a dangerous runner on end-around plays. He caught three touchdown passes in a come-from-behind, 44-34 victory over Lehigh.

"I was always aware of the family background in football," said Mehre, a junior marketing major. "But nobody ever put pressure on me to play—I do it because I like the game." Growing up in Atlanta, he was a high school quarterback, the team's most valuable in basketball, won the state long jump title in track and played golf as well.

David Gabianelli of Dartmouth ranks high in passing efficiency in Division I-AA

In response to Northeast Louisiana SID Bob Anderson, who wondered whether there are any other regulars in Division I-A who did not play high school football—there are. Wichita State senior tailback Valasco Smith, the team's top rusher, was a sprinter in track and a weight-lifting champion in high school in Tallahassee, Florida. He went out for football as a sophomore but had an argument with the coach and quit before ever playing a game. (Casey Scott, Wichita State SID)

In response to Kent State SID Terry Barnard, who wondered whether there are any starting quarterbacks younger than Patrick Young, 18 on October 22—there are. Bucknell's Scott Auchenbach, who started one game when Jim Given was injured, will not be 18 until November 17. (Brad Tufts, Bucknell SID)

Chasing Payton

North Dakota State senior quarterback Jeff Bentrin needs five rushing touchdowns in his last three games to equal the Division II national record of 63 career rushing touchdowns set by Walter Payton of Jackson State from 1971 to 1974.

In any event, Bentrin can do something no player in Division II history has ever done, Payton included, and that is win three consecutive national scoring championships.

Bentrin won the crowns in 1984 and 1985 and currently ranks No. 1 with 102 points in seven games for 14.6 per game. His team, by the way, is playing 10 regular-season games this season instead of the usual 11. Otherwise, his chances for overhauling Payton would be much better. However, Bentrin has no chance at Payton's division-record 464 career points (Payton also kicked PATS and field goals). (George Ellis, North Dakota State SID)

Quotes of the week

Kansas coach Bob Valesente after his team was overwhelmed by Oklahoma: "It was David against Goliath, and Goliath brought some friends."

Southern Connecticut State was to play New Haven, one of the more prolific passing teams in Division II, and defensive tackle Glen Magyar asked Southern head coach Rich Cavanaugh how to recognize a passing situation. Replied Cavanaugh: "If it's between 1:30 and 5 on Saturday afternoon, it's a passing situation." (Rick Leddy, Southern Connecticut State SID)

46 years later

Millersville's last undefeated-untied team—7-0 in 1940—was honored on the eve of a 38-3 homecoming victory over Bloomsburg October 25. The 1940 team was coached by the late Ivan "Poss" Stehman. Several members of the team were on hand. On November 1, Millersville defeated Kutztown for a school-record 10th straight victory. One more victory and it will be the most victories in a season in 91 years of football. (Greg Wright, Millersville SID)

Attendance down

The advent of November and colder weather usually brings a drop in attendance, but the games of November 1 overdid it, as I-A games averaged only 38,006 with 76.3 percent capacity and I-AA games just 9,459 with 49.2 percent capacity.

That dropped I-A attendance for the season to date to 42,152 per-game with 79.5 percent capacity, compared to 42,242 and 79.9 percent at this point last year. In I-AA, the per-game figure lags—at 11,320 vs. 11,461 a year ago—but percent of capacity is ahead at 56.4 percent to 55.9 a year ago at this stage.

Four national records

Four national Division III records were set October 11 in the Knox-Cornell College game: Bob Monroe's 532 passing yards for Knox, his team's 576 passing yards, the two-team total of 1,036 passing yards and the two-team total of 11 touchdown passes. (Chuck Mathys, Knox assistant SID)

Lockbaum vs. Keyes

Gordie Lockbaum of undefeated Holy Cross is receiving a lot of national publicity, and deservedly so, for his remarkable two-way (tailback-cornerback) performances.

As a result, we are receiving many inquiries about the last player to play so often and so well on both offense and defense. Well, there doubtless have been many two-way performers that we have not heard about in Divisions II and III since two-platoon football returned in 1965 (after a rather brief time in the sun, 1947-52). But the name that pops up is Leroy firmly reinforced its No. 1 ranking by thrashing No. 2 Notre Dame, 37-22, in a nationally televised "Poll Bowl." On offense, the 21-year-old halfback from Newport News, Virginia, ran for two touchdowns, threw a 17-yard TD pass and caught three passes himself. On defense, "Mr. Everything," inserted in critical third-down situations, covered and blanked Notre Dame's all-America end, Jim Seymour, who otherwise caught seven."

In his last two seasons, Keyes rushed for nearly 2,000 yards, caught passes for almost 1,200 more, scored more than 200 points (he was national scoring champion in 1967) and made many key defensive plays.

Lockbaum, a junior from Glassboro, New Jersey, is just as versatile. He leads Holy Cross in rushing and receiving and is second in solo tackles, playing more time on defense than Keyes did. In fact, he is averaging about 90 plays per game (the average is about 140 plays). His top game defensively was against Division I-A Army, a game won by I-AA Holy Cross, 17-14. He had 22 tackles in that game, 19 unassisted, plus one tipped pass.

Lockbaum, a 3.100 student in economics, is leading a remarkable comeback from a tragic winter, when coach Rick Carter killed himself after a losing year and his father's death. "I can't really explain it," he told Erik Brady of USA Today, "but it hurt us so much it brought us together as a team. We dedicated this season to coach Carter. What we're doing is a reflection of all the positive things he taught us."

Championships Previews

Mustangs' soccer play has made a believer of the coach

Southern Methodist soccer coach Schellas Hyndman might appear to the untrained eye to have a superiority complex. In fact, the Mustang mentor is picking his own team as the one to stop in the Division I Men's Soccer Championship.

That is not to say that Southern Methodist will not have its share of problems making it to the Tacoma (Washington) Dome for the finals. But it is Hyndman's contention that his team will be difficult to beat on artificial turf, the surface that will be in use for the championship.

"I would be hesitant to pick us so high if we were struggling," Hyndman admitted. "But we have played consistently well against some super competition, and I believe the turf will make a difference, especially to teams that are not used to playing on it."

The Division I Men's Soccer Championship is a 23-team, single-elimination tournament with two teams chosen from each of eight regions and seven at-large selections. Team selections will be made Sunday, November 9, and first-round games must be played no later than the following Sunday. All rounds of the championship except the final will be at on-campus sites.

There are five automatic qualifiers—the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big East Conference, Colonial Athletic Association, Eastern College Athletic Conference Metro and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Evansville, the top-ranked team in the current Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America (ISAA) poll, tied Southern Methodist, 1-1, earlier in the year and recently lost to Akron. The Mustangs have defeated South Carolina, ranked second at the time; Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, and St. Louis.

Hyndman is in his third year at Southern Methodist and is seeking a first-place ranking, which looks possible with the Evansville loss to Akron.

The 11-0-2 Mustangs have been impressive defensively behind the play of junior goalkeeper Hank Henry, who has a school-record 22 career shutouts.

In the New England region, Boston University (13-1-2) heads the list of contenders, but Connecticut (10-6-2) still is in the thick of the Big East Conference race. Others still under consideration are Yale (8-1), Harvard (4-1-3), Dartmouth (7-3-1) and Brown (6-4).

Long Island-Brooklyn (11-0-3) is the top team in the New York region but is challenged by 1985 semifinalist Hartwick (10-5-1) and Syracuse (14-3-2), which also is a Big East contender. Other teams with a legitimate shot at the play-offs include Cornell (6-4-3), Columbia (6-5) and Brooklyn (8-3-4).

The Middle Atlantic region has several teams under consideration for inclusion in the tournament, led by 10th-ranked Seton Hall (14-1-1), another Big East team, and Rutgers (9-6-1). Penn State (9-4-5), Temple (10-2-1), Philadelphia Textile (9-4-2) and Lafayette (12-3-1) also are still in the running.

The South Atlantic region features Virginia, the probable Atlantic Coast Conference winner, as well as Loyola (Maryland) (13-0-3), which is battling Long Island-Brooklyn for supremacy in the Eastern College Athletic Conference Metro. George Mason (8-2-5) and William and Mary (13-5) are still in the hunt for the Colonial Athletic Association crown, while Maryland (13-2-1) and Old Dominion (11-5-2) are highly regarded.

Duke (11-4-1) has surged ahead in the South region, but South Carolina (14-3), North Carolina State (10-3-1) and Clemson (10-5-2) are prime contenders for a play-off berth. North Carolina (12-6) and Furman (11-2-2), which still has to play South Carolina and North Carolina State, are other teams under consideration.

Evansville, despite its loss to Akron, is a solid choice in the Great Lakes region. Both Akron (11-2-3) and Indiana (9-4-3) are contenders, with Bowling Green (11-3-2), Cleveland State (10-4-1) and Marquette (11-4-2) still in the running.

Southern Methodist is the class of the Midwest region, but other teams still under consideration are Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (10-3-2), Western Illinois (11-3-1), St. Louis (10-5-2), North Texas State (8-4-1), Air Force (9-5-2), Quincy (9-5-1) and New Mexico (10-4).

Defending champion UCLA (11-0-4) seems to be in the driver's seat in the Far West region. California (12-3-1), San Francisco (14-1-3) and San Diego State (10-2-4) are other talented teams. Fresno State (11-4-2) could be challenged in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association by Cal State Fullerton (5-9-2).

Going by the numbers could add up to a title for Tar Heels

If strength of schedule were the only criterion the NCAA Field Hockey Committee utilized in selecting teams for the 1986 Division I Field Hockey Championship November 22-23, then North Carolina would have a lock on one of the 12 available berths.

The Tar Heels (14-1 overall record), the top-ranked team in the latest poll, have played 11 teams in the Division I top 20 and have defeated 10 of them.

"I believe playing a tough schedule helps to develop the type of team you need to win the national championship," said Tar Heel coach Karen Shelton. "We feel real good about having already played some of the top teams in the country and doing well against them."

So far this fall, Shelton's squad has beaten defending champion Connecticut, 1985 runner-up Old Dominion, Boston College, Iowa, Temple, Virginia, Penn State, James Madison, Maryland and Northwestern. All are ranked in the top 20. The lone Tar Heel defeat was a 3-2 loss to third-ranked New Hampshire.

"I am pleased with the way we have progressed this year," said the sixth-year North Carolina coach. "We have gotten outstanding play from midfielder Lori Bruney and sweeper Tracy Yurgin, and both have made adjustments to new positions."

Karen Shelton

The Tar Heels could be the team to beat when first-round tournament matches are played at on-campus sites November 15-16. Semifinal and championship games are set for November 22-23 at Old Dominion. At least one team from each of six regions will be awarded berths in the 12-team bracket, with the remaining six teams selected at large. The Big Ten Conference is the only conference in which the winner receives an automatic-qualifying berth in the tournament.

There is so much parity in Division I that several teams other than North Carolina have legitimate title chances in 1986. Old Dominion (13-1-1), a three-time champion, and Connecticut (10-3-2), a two-time titlist, are the only teams to have won an NCAA Division I Field Hockey Championship, and both are strong again. New Hampshire (12-2), fifth-ranked Massachusetts (14-2) and Penn State (13-3-2) are other top choices.

"I think we have a chance to win the championship because we have great athletic ability," Shelton continued. "But there are five or six teams that are genuine contenders, and I think that is good for the sport."

In the Northeast region, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Boston College (9-6-1) stand out from the rest of the field. Other teams still under consideration are Maine (12-8), Brown (8-2-1) and Northeastern (8-7).

Connecticut and sixth-ranked Penn State are the top teams in the Midwest region, with West Chester (14-3) and Lock Haven (10-6-1) still in the picture.

In the Mid-Atlantic region, seventh-ranked Rutgers (11-2-2) has the edge over Temple (7-7-1), Maryland (8-8-2), Delaware (10-4-1) and Pennsylvania (9-3).

North Carolina leads a powerful group of teams in the South region. Old Dominion, James Madison (16-4) and Virginia (10-6-1) are all top candidates for a play-off bid. Of course, the Tar Heels still are concerned with winning a fourth consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference championship and improving last year's second-round trip in the NCAA play-offs.

In the Midwest, eighth-rated Northwestern (11-2-2) and ninth-ranked Iowa are fighting for the Big Ten Conference title and the single automatic-qualifying berth in the championship. Ball State (13-3-1), ranked 19th in the poll, also is under consideration.

The West region features a three-team race among 20th-ranked Pacific (6-5), Stanford (7-4-1) and California (5-3-3).

The NCAA Field Hockey Committee will select all teams for the championship Sunday, November 9.

Tampa vows not to be left out of Division II soccer picture

The Tampa Spartans at one time were a permanent fixture in the NCAA Division II Men's Soccer Championship. After five straight appearances in the championship, including a national title and one second-place finish, Tampa waited for a 1985 invitation that never came.

To insure a berth in 1986, the Spartans of coach Jay Miller have forged a 10-4-1 record and a No. 1 national ranking in the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America (ISSA) coaches' poll. Tampa seems to be the top prospect for the 12-team, single-elimination Division II Men's Soccer Championship. First-round games must be played no later than November 16, and the finals are scheduled December 6 or 7 at an on-campus site.

Miller attributes the Spartans' success this year to an abrupt about-face in attitude.

"We missed the NCAA play-offs for the first time in five or six years, and it just did not please the players," he admitted. "They came back this year determined not to miss the championship tournament, and they dedicated themselves to working hard."

"I will admit I was a little skeptical about their commitment when we lost our first two games of the season. But then we went 11 straight games without a loss and got into the driver's seat in the Sunshine State Conference, and I became more convinced."

Miller decided to bring in some new faces this fall, and three of those newcomers are in the starting lineup. Mike Muhonen tops the Spartan scoring with 10 goals and eight assists, Chris Sullivan has 10 goals and two assists, and John Clarke has seven goals and three assists.

Tampa, however, will have a tough time with teams in its region, especially 1985 semifinalist Davis and Elkins (10-2-1 overall record), which lost to eventual champion Seattle Pacific, 2-1, in the tournament last year.

The Men's Soccer Committee realigned the regions and reduced their number from six to four. It also granted automatic qualification for the first time to five conferences: California Collegiate Athletic Association, New England Collegiate Conference, Northern California Athletic Conference, Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference and Sunshine State Conference.

Three teams each will be chosen from the Northeast, Central and West regions, and two teams will be chosen from the South region. One team will be selected at large.

In the Northeast, second-ranked Southern Connecticut State (10-4-2) is the top pick but must wrestle the New England Collegiate Conference title away from New Hampshire College (12-3-1), Bridgeport (11-2-2) and New Haven (8-5-1). Other teams from the region under consideration for a postseason berth are 12th-rated New York Tech (12-4-1), Long Island-C.W. Post (5-1) and St. Michael's (12-3-1). New Hampshire College is sixth in the current coaches' poll, while Bridgeport is 10th.

The Central region will witness a dogfight for the three play-off bids available, and the top battleground is the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference, where East Stroudsburg (11-3-2) and Lock Haven (11-2-3) are fighting for the automatic berth. Other top prospects are third-ranked Gannon (11-1-1), a second-round loser in 1985; Lewis (12-3-1); Missouri-St. Louis (12-2); Northeast Missouri State (10-5-2), and Oakland (9-5-2).

In the South, Tampa probably will realize it's not that way.

"You can't charge the hill because it's too long, but going downhill, it's long enough that you can take advantage of it if you are efficient."

That is the setting that awaits the three teams generally considered to be the front-runners—defending champion South Dakota State Jackrabbits and 1985 runners-up Edinboro and Kean State.

"The champion should be whichever of these three teams can best handle a type of course they are not familiar with," predicted Rinne, who added that West region teams Cal Poly-Pomona and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo could be in contention because they are accustomed to the terrain.

The non-West teams also likely will have to adapt to temperatures hitting anywhere from 65 degrees to the low 80s.

The footing, however, is not the only problem posed by the course. "You have to deal with the two different features of this course—the dirt and the long grades, both uphill and downhill," Rinne said.

The men begin their first long climb after completing the first of two tours of the generally flat one-mile loop.

"The course is 'sneaky' tough because of the grades," Rinne said. "When you look at it, it looks fairly easy; but when you walk or run it, you

Manciu seeks a second title in Division III cross country

Nicholas Manciu

Men's championships

The Tri-County Golf Club in Fredonia, New York, is set for its second engagement as the site of the Division III Men's and Women's Cross Country Championships November 22.

In 1982 at Fredonia, freshman Nick Manciu of St. Thomas (Minnesota) won the individual competition with a time of 26:06. That time still stands as the slowest winning mark in 13 Division III championships and the only winning time slower than 26 minutes.

"It's not considered a fast course because of the differences in elevation," said this year's meet director, Everett Phillips, who serves as men's cross country coach at Fredonia State. "I think it's difficult because it rises in elevation for long periods of time. You're working either uphill or downhill."

Those ups and downs are not always steady; they are punctuated in places by steep grades.

The first 1,000 meters of the course is tame enough, with the grade not exceeding five percent uphill. Then, after a turn, the trail begins a significant drop at about the 1,500-meter mark to a bridge crossing a creek. From there, the course weaves through greens and runs down wide fairways, then rises sharply over a "hump."

After clearing that obstacle, the men will begin working back over the same terrain. The most crucial point of the course may be at the point they start back, where contestants will tackle a sharp hill rising at least 75 feet in elevation. Then, the course continues back across the creek, rises to and circles a green, continues rising gradually, drops briefly, and rises again to a site near the starting point.

The contestants then will repeat the entire course.

While the elevation is ever-changing, the footing is constant; the course is covered entirely with grass. "We tend to have a heavy turf because of our climate," Phillips said.

"It's a challenging course," he added. "People think it's a fine cross country course."

The course certainly has been a good one for St. Thomas, yielding not only Manciu's individual title in 1982 but also a team title for the women that same year. This year, the Tommies return to Fredonia in what has become an accustomed position—as the favorite to win both the men's and women's team crowns.

Manciu also returns, this time as a senior, after missing last season with an injury. The two-time Division III 10,000-meters track champion is joined by senior Jeff Hyman, who won the 5,000-meter race in track last season. Together, they recently led St. Thomas to the team title in the National Catholic Championships at the University of Notre Dame.

The Tommies' toughest opposition probably will come from within New York state. St. Lawrence, led by returning all-Americans Jukka Tammi-suo and Marty Dumoulin and outstanding freshman Jari Kiiski, has nipped at the Tommies' heels all season in the Division III coaches' poll. Rochester Institute of Technology also appears to be within striking distance.

North Central once again may be rising to the occasion and also could be in the hunt for its seventh team title under coach Al Carius.

Women's championships

Women at the Division III meet will make only one trip around Fredonia's course, where St. Thomas (Minnesota) hopes to repeat its victory of 1982 and win its third team championship in five years.

The Tommies have gotten a big boost this season from senior Lisa Koelfgen, who is in her first year in cross country after winning the 1,500-meter track title the past two seasons. She has alternated in the lead spot with Jennifer Hintz, who was national runner-up in Division III cross country in 1983 but was hampered by injuries the next two seasons. The fully recovered Hintz, along with returning all-Americans Shari Sullivan and Michelle Stone and 30-year-old Paulette Goodrich, gives St. Thomas five solid runners.

St. Thomas' women, however, also face a tough opponent from within New York. Ithaca, which has finished third in Division III the past two seasons, recently nailed down the state championship after shaking off a few early-season injuries.

The Bombers are paced by freshman Jannette Bonrouhi, who finished second at the state meet, and returning all-America Colleen Skelly. Also contributing are Michelle Sierzant, Cathy Livingston and Beth Saxton, who was a junior college all-America two years ago before transferring to Ithaca.

Among other contenders for the team title are Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Wisconsin-LaCrosse, both ranked among the top five teams in the nation by coaches, and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps.

Regional qualifying meets for both men and women in Division III are scheduled November 15. The hosts for these common-site meets are: New England, Southeastern Massachusetts University; New York, Fredonia State University College; Mideast, Allentown College of St. Francis de Sales; South/Southeast, Washington and Lee University; Great Lakes, Hope College; Midwest, Augustana College (Illinois); Central, Wartburg College, and West, University of California, San Diego.

New member Menlo makes early move toward Division III crown

A virtual unknown in 1985, Menlo has risen to the top of the NCAA Division III women's volleyball world in 1986 and currently is ranked No. 1 in the NCAA poll.

This is the first year of NCAA membership for the college, which sits in the shadow of Division I women's volleyball powerhouse Stanford in Menlo Park, California.

"Two years ago, we thought we would be eligible for NCAA membership in 1985 so we geared up for that and started playing four-year schools," said coach Malcolm Taylor, who guided his 1985 team to a 23-5 showing. However, Menlo did not meet all of the NCAA requirements for eligibility until 1986.

"We had a good season last year and felt we would have qualified (for the Division III championship) if there hadn't been a mixup in terms of our status," said Taylor. "The disappointment of not being eligible last year has been a motivating factor for us this year."

That motivation has led the Oaks to a 36-6 record three weeks before the regionals of the Division III championship (selections will be announced November 10).

Some of their most noted victories have been over Division III standouts UC San Diego (ranked third) and La Verne (12th), both past winners of the national title. In addition, the Oaks have defeated several Division II schools.

Menlo is characterized by a strong defense, led by Colleen Kawelu and Monique Laveau, and a well-balanced offensive attack that is engineered by setter Betsy Braun.

The NCAA Division III championship, culminating November 21-22 with the final four on the campus of one of the participating institutions, will feature 24 teams. At least one team will be selected from each of the six regions, and nine conferences have been granted automatic qualification. Here is a breakdown of the top teams in each region and conference.

South

Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference—Greensboro College (27-10) clinched the regular-season title with an 11-0 record but the Hornets will have to win the league tournament November 7-8 at Christopher Newport to earn the NCAA berth. St. Andrews and Methodist, tied for second in the league (8-3), should be top contenders.

At large—Although Western Maryland could win the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference title (most of the conference teams are in the East), the Green Terrors are the top-ranking team in the South region with a 16th-ranked national showing. Eastern Mennonite, ranked 20th, is another standout.

West

Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference—La Verne, 6-0, and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, 5-2, appear to be battling it out for the SCIAC title. The Athenas have lost to La Verne, which is ranked 12th nationally with a 16-13 record.

At large—Menlo (first nationally, 36-6), UC San Diego (third, 31-6) and Colorado College (eighth, 22-7) are top choices for at-large berths from this region. Cal State San Bernardino, a member of the SCIAC, is 17th nationally (20-8).

Midwest

Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association—Calvin clinched its second consecutive MIAA title with an 11-0 record. The Knights are ranked second nationally, compiling a 28-1 record. Julie Dykstra, a first-team all-America in 1985, leads the team.

Ohio Athletic Conference—Baldwin-Wallace and Heidelberg are tied for conference regular-season honors at 11-1, while Ohio Northern is second at 10-2. All three will be invited to the conference tournament November 7-8, along with Muskingum or Marietta, to decide the conference champion. Ohio Northern, 13th on the national level, is 25-6 overall.

College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin—The conference champion for this league also will be known after the conference tournament, scheduled November 7-8 at Millikin. All nine conference schools will participate, but regular-season standout and defending NCAA champion Elmhurst is favored. The Blue Jays are 24-8 overall and ranked fourth.

At large—Illinois Benedictine, ranked sixth in the nation (26-6), is the top independent in the region.

Central

Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic

Conference—Gustavus Adolphus, ranked 10th (29-10), and St. Benedict's (18th nationally, 19-4) are tied in the regular season, but conference honors will be decided November 7-8 in the conference tourney.

At large—Wisconsin-LaCrosse, fourth in the nation last season, appears to be headed for another post-season appearance. The Indians are ranked seventh and have compiled a 32-7 record.

East

Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference—Although the conference championship will not be decided until the league tournament November 7-8 at Western Maryland, front-runners in the four sections of the conference are Moravian, Southeast, Western Maryland, Southwest; Scranton, Northeast, and Juniata, Northwest.

Presidents Athletic Conference—Grove City currently leads the PAC with a 8-0 conference record. The Wolverines are 28-5 overall and ranked 11th. Thiel is second in the conference at 7-1.

At large—MIT (14th, 21-4) and Eastern Connecticut State (19th, 37-7) are top contenders.

Northeast

State University of New York Athletic Conference—Albany (New York), Buffalo and Cortland State are the top seeds for the SUNYAC tournament at Albany November 7-8. Albany is ranked fifth in the nation with a 33-1 overall record.

At large—Ithaca, ranked 15th (25-9), is the top regional contender.

two-mile loop, where the women climb the one long grade and travel down the other, then finish in the flat one-mile loop.

The women face the same footing problems, including the horse trail in the two-mile loop, which stretches for about half a mile. Rinne noted that recent heavy traffic on the trail has softened up that stretch to a point where it is not likely to harden again before the competition.

Unlike in the men's competition, the leading women's teams most likely will feel right at home on the course. In fact, California teams possibly could sweep the top four or five spots in the team competition.

The heavy favorite to lead that pack is Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, which is seeking its fifth consecutive team title with a squad that boasts take the Sunshine State Conference title and the automatic bid. Other play-off hopefuls are Florida Institute of Technology (7-4), Rollins (7-4), Longwood (8-3-1) and Liberty (6-4-1).

Fifth-rated Davis and Elkins is the top pick for the other regional bid but two-time champion Florida International cannot be counted out.

The West region has plenty of talented teams, but only three will make the play-offs. The California Collegiate Athletic Conference automatic bid is still up for grabs between Cal State Northridge (10-2-2) and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo (9-6). The seven all-Americans. Other state teams figuring to be among the front-runners are UC Davis, Cal State Northridge, Cal State Los Angeles and Cal Poly-Pomona.

"These teams don't need the edge of running basically at home, but they have that edge," Rinne said. "That makes it even a more uphill battle for other contenders like North Dakota State or Indiana (Pennsylvania)."

For any of these teams to reach Riverside, however, they must qualify at regional meets November 8. Both men and women will run at these sites: East, Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science; Great Lakes, Central Missouri State University; South, Mississippi College; Central, North Dakota State University, and West, University of California, Riverside.

Northern California Athletic Conference is a three-way battle between UC Davis (11-4), Cal State Chico (10-6-1) and Cal State Hayward (11-4-1). Cal State Northridge is ranked fourth in the current poll, UC Davis is seventh, Cal State Hayward is 15th and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo is 17th.

Defending titlist Seattle Pacific, national champion in 1978, 1983 and 1985 and runner-up in 1974, 1975, 1977 and 1984, is 11-4-1 and ranked ninth in the ISAA poll. The Falcons have rebounded from the loss of senior Peter Hattrup, arguably the best player in collegiate soccer, who was declared ineligible before the season began.

last eight years.

Although the majority in all the other groups reported a deficit, the number decreased—some below the 1977 figures—for all categories except Class B.

Aggregate revenue in 1984-85, the fiscal year measured for the entire study, totaled an estimated $1,064,749,000, an increase of 48 percent over four years. Class A institutions had $287,675,000 of the increase but fell more than $300 million dollars short of the increase reported between 1977 and 1981.

At the same time, the increase in aggregate revenues for all respondents fell short of matching the increase in aggregate expenses, which was estimated to be $1.2 billion.

Raiborn's study reports that sources of revenue that provide the major portion of financial support differ from category to category. Class A institutions obtain significant revenue from ticket sales and game contract settlements. Other groups rely more on student activity fees and assessments as primary revenue sources.

The study also shows that the percentage of revenue from ticket sales, activity fees, guarantees and options, and distributions from conferences and other associations has increased for most of the reporting groups. The exception is Class A; and except for Class A, what Raiborn terms unearned revenue sources (student assessments, contributions and government support) increased in relative significance to total revenues.

As a percentage of total revenues, the relative amount provided by football revenues also has declined in all applicable classes since 1973. Raiborn notes that the general trend toward the larger percentage of all other revenues is attributed to increases in revenues not traceable to particular sports, such as contributions and government support.

Nonetheless, revenue from football increased significantly for Class A institutions ($600,000 average in four years).

As an expense item, football continued to be the largest percentage of the total in both Class A and Class B institutions but did not increase significantly as a percentage in any of the applicable groups. Not surprisingly, basketball accrues the greatest costs among Class D schools, and expense for all other sports is the dominant item in Classes C, E and F.

Salaries and wages continued to be the leading expense category in intercollegiate athletics among all reporting groups, according to Raiborn. Except for Class C and Class F institutions, grants-in-aid costs were the second-leading category and showed an increase as a percentage of the total in all groups except C and F.

To maintain comparability with prior-year financial trends, institutions were directed to report information concerning women's sports separately from revenues, expenses and other data from men's athletics programs.

For most respondent groups, there was no significant change in average total women's revenues between 1981 and 1985. However, Raiborn reports that average total expenses increased for all classes (35 percent for Class A, 48 percent for B, 55 percent for C, 14 percent for D, 57 percent for E and 35 percent for F).

There was no significant growth in average women's basketball revenues between 1981 and 1985; however, basketball expenses as a percentage of total women's expenses increased for all respondents except Class C.

Only in Class A is the percentage of total expenses paid by the men's program significant, and in none of the groups is earned revenue the greatest contributor to the whole. Revenue from other sources is the primary contributor to the total.

Contrasted to the men's programs, increased salaries of personnel were third in the list of factors contributing to the increase in expenses. Higher cost of annual grants-in-aid was No. 1, and the expansion of the women's program was No. 2.

Copies of "Revenues and Expenses of Intercollegiate Athletics" were mailed to chief executive officers, directors of athletics, faculty athletics representatives and primary women athletics administrators. Additional copies may be purchased from the NCAA publishing department. The cost is $3 for persons associated with member institutions and $6 for all others.

Athletes graduating above U.S. rate

Student-athletes at Southeast Missouri State University continue to graduate at a rate higher than the national average. Varsity letter-winners graduate at a rate of 68 per 100, down from the previous year but still better than the national average of 62 percent.

This was according to the fourth annual academic report released by athletics department academic adviser Bill Gautier and Provost Les Cochran.

"The percentage of athletes graduating in five years dropped slightly from 71.9 percent to 68.8 percent, but I am not aware of any other Division II school that would achieve this high level," Cochran said in the report.

The women's athletics teams held a total grade-point average of 2.710 for the 1985-86 school year, which was up from 2.600 in the previous academic year.

On the men's side, the total grade-point average dropped slightly from 2.270 to 2.210, but there were two significant improvements in the past year. The baseball team's grade-point average rose to 2.510 in the last year, while the tennis program (which since has been dropped from the athletics program) rose two-tenths of a point.

Gautier noted in his analysis of the study that because of the team sizes (generally small) and distribution of the scores, the results of one or two athletes can greatly affect the outcome.

The report also cited a trend that shows the athletes' grade-point averages are in line with the average of the student body as a whole.

Women athletes have become so strong in the classroom that 88 percent are now in the top 50 percent of their class, compared to barely over half in the 1984-85 school year.
