Football rivals team up to run interference for school kids

By Wayne Hogan

It's hard to imagine anything short of a natural disaster overshadowing the annual football showdown between Florida State University and the University of Florida. But, it happened.

And it was the culmination of a three-month organizational nightmare that just may have been the very best thing ever perpetrated by the state's two largest state universities. It was on that day that athletes from Florida State and Florida reached out and touched the lives of more than 70,000 school children in north Florida.

Their message: "Say No to Drugs."

For that one day, FSU and Florida football players took time out from the intense mental preparation and the pressures of the annual battle to give something back to their communities. At Florida State, 75 athletes joined with 75 members of the Golden Key national honor society to hit the streets and spread the word.

The result was nothing short of fabulous in Seminole country. The day went without a hitch. The teams dispersed to visit 60 schools in four counties—an endeavor that reached more than 40,000 elementary, middle and high school students.

The project was the brainchild of Florida Board of Regents Chancellor Charlie Reed, who received permission from the NCAA to ask state universities to cooperate in the effort.

"I applaud Chancellor Reed in gaining NCAA approval in sending our athletes into the schools to tell our young people to say no to drugs," said FSU athletics director Cecil W. "Hootie" Ingram. "Our athletes and members of the Golden Key honor society are excited about playing a part in this nationwide attack on drugs."

Virtually from the very day the idea came from the chancellor's desk, the planning went into full gear at FSU. Golden Key volunteers came together with FSU athletes and a select group of athletics administrators. Weekly meetings were held from early September through November 17.

"This was a great opportunity for our players to use their influence to help young students who look up to them," said head football coach Bobby Bowden. "I think it's great that the universities got together on this. Two is better than one. Kids are searching for heroes, and it was a great chance for Florida State and Florida players to set a good example."

From the Golden Key organization, the project provided an opportunity to get involved in the community. "We were excited about it (the idea), because it was a new idea on a subject

19 proposals attack recruiting from all angles

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles detailing the legislation to be considered at the 1987 NCAA Convention. This article reviews the proposals dealing with recruiting and those relating to financial aid.)

While the three major recruiting proposals facing the Association's 81st annual Convention are included in the special Presidents Commission grouping (see the November 17 issue of The NCAA News), there are 19 others in the recruiting grouping—making it the largest topical collection, other than the consent packages, in the Convention agenda.

And those 19 proposals whittle away at all sorts of recruiting issues—contacts; National Letter of Intent relationships; special "quiet periods" in women's basketball, football and softball; evaluation periods; official campus visits; tryouts, and the type of printed material that can be provided to prospects.

Similarly, the two major financial aid proposals are in the Presidents Commission grouping, but that leaves five others—headed by a controversial "modified need" amendment in Division I—for action in the financial aid grouping.

Here is a look at a few of the key proposals in those two segments, followed by a summary of all 24 of the recruiting and financial aid proposals.

Recruiting

The first item in the recruiting group is an NCAA Council proposal to apply the current Divisions I-A and I-AA football limitation on visits to a prospect's high school to Division I basketball, as well.

For football recruiting, Division I institutions currently can visit the prospect's educational institution only once each week during the contact period. The Council's Proposal No. 74 would apply that same limitation to Division I basketball recruiting.

The approach was recommended by the Special Council Subcommittee to Review the Recruiting Process, the same committee that developed the proposals earlier in the agenda (Nos. 47, 48 and 49) to eliminate boosters from recruiting entirely and to cut in half the permissible recruiting periods in football and basketball.

The Pacific-10 Conference, meanwhile, is proposing in No. 75 that the current once-a-week high school visit limitation in football be further constrained by specifying that only three such visits could occur after January 1 during any year.

In an attempt to treat the charge that some prospects are signed to National Letters of Intent before it is

Subcommittee begins work on cost issues

The NCAA Presidents Commission's subcommittee on cost management has begun its review of cost-management and related issues in intercollegiate athletics but will not make public its discussions, conclusions and recommendations until they are reported to the full Commission January 7 in San Diego.

Chaired by Ira Michael Heyman, chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, and Division I chair of the Commission, the subcommittee held its first meeting November 23-24 in Denver and will meet again December 8 in Chicago.

It then will present its report to the Commission in the latter's January 7 meeting in San Diego in conjunction with the NCAA's 81st annual Convention. That report will include a recommendation as to whether the Commission should call a special Convention of the NCAA for the summer of 1987.

The Commission's decision regarding such a special Convention will be announced in San Diego that same day.

Other members of the Commission's subcommittee are Lattie F. Coor, president, University of Vermont; Edward B. Fort, chancellor, North Carolina A&T State University; Eugene M. Hughes, president, Northern Arizona University; Martin A. Massengale, chancellor, University of Financial and sports reports to go to Executive Committee

Reports on the Association's financial transactions during fiscal year 1985-86 and on 1985-86 championships are among items to be considered by the Executive Committee during its December 8 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Among recommendations from sports committees is a request by the NCAA Baseball Committee to expand its tournament bracket a year earlier than had been previously approved (see related story on page 16).

Financial reports to be reviewed include:

- A report by the treasurer for the fiscal year that ended August 31, 1986.

- An analysis of 1985-86 championships.

- Review of allocation of excess receipts.

- Disposition of receipts returned by Texas Christian University per action of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

- Consideration of future Association staffing plans and office requirements.

Reports from all three division championships committees also will be received by the Executive Committee, which will take action on recommendations made by the following sports committees:

Coaches, players feel the heat as Billikens try to rebound

By Dave Dorr
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The heat is on, and Rich Grawer is keenly aware of it. He is being introduced at luncheons around town as "the coach of the next Midwestern Collegiate Conference champions, who will be in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship this year."

Grawer says his face flushes when he hears that. Four national basketball publications have picked his St. Louis University team to win the conference regular-season championship.

St. Louis U. faithful, who have endured six coaches and two decades of waiting since the good times ground to a halt in the mid-1960s, believe this is the season their ship will come in.

Grawer's self-imposed four-year plan to dig the Bills out of a deep hole produced seasons of five, 12, 13 and 18 victories.

"We've taken baby steps," Grawer said. "I would have preferred the quick jump from five to 20 wins, but we didn't have the money or the name to recruit nationally. If we'd have gone to Chicago or Denver to recruit, they'd have said, 'St. Louis who?' Luck is involved. We didn't have the miraculous year."

Maybe Grawer will pull a miracle out of his pocket in March. For the moment, he says he's done what he set out to do. Now, as he begins his fifth season, he says it's time to end speculation of where Billiken basketball is headed. It's time to win. Big. But can he? He wishes he knew.

He said: "The people, they genuinely want St. Louis U. and Rich Grawer to succeed; and if we don't, my disappointment would be that we disappointed them."

"Forget rebuilding. We've rebuilt it. Is the program built on a sound foundation? If it isn't, so be it. But I still can say I took it from nothing to at least something. The next step is going to the NCAA tournament, or people think you've failed. Maybe Rich Grawer isn't the guy to get it to the next step. That will be determined this year."

"It's the unknown that keeps you on edge and that's where I am. We've never experienced this kind of thing at St. Louis U. in my years here—the attention, the talk of winning 20 games and going to the NCAA. Nobody knows what it's like to have it or not have it. We're going to find out. People think we've got it."

Do the Bills, indeed, have it? We don't know if we do or not, Grawer said. He says if he's thinking about it, he knows his players are.

He says he thinks about the unknown of the next four months "a lot."

"They don't talk about it. I suspect many are nervous because of the pressure on them," said Grawer.

The Bills last made an NCAA tour-namment appearance in 1957. Grawer was in the eighth grade at St. Francis DeSales elementary school on the South Side.

Grawer has lifted Billiken basketball a notch by judicious scheduling, without cheating and by concentrating his recruiting on St. Louis-area players. Given the quality of local players the past few years, Grawer said the building of a program by staying at home to recruit "takes more time."

His home-based recruiting efforts, and the help of many in the black community, paid off in 6-foot-4 sophomore Monroe Douglass from McKinley High, who has become Grawer's trump card and drawing card.

When it was announced that Douglass would sit out the game against the Turkish national team because of a chipped bone in his right foot, Billikens assistant Ed Stewart picked up his ringing telephone and heard the peeved voice of an anonymous fan say: "If Douglass ain't playing, I ain't coming."

A freshman, 6-7 Anthony Bonner of Vashon, did play in the Bills' 65-53 triumph. He figures prominently this

Uncertainty becomes a way of life for coaches

You think you keep up with college basketball? OK, then try listing all the new coaches this season.

That's right. Sixty-seven. By the time summer ended, nearly a quarter of the 290 schools in the NCAA's Division I had new head coaches. The turnover was both unprecedented and a bit unsettling.

At Nebraska, Moe Iba won 19 games and went to the NCAA tournament. At Ohio State, Eldon Miller won the National Invitation Tournament. Neither is back this season.

"I don't like it," said Tom Miller, who took over at Colorado when Tom Apke was dismissed earlier this year. "I'm 38. How many years can I coach? I don't know."

"It's an almost masochistic profession. You're going to get hurt by it."

Iba was fired at Nebraska, Bill

Foster at South Carolina, Stan Morrison at Southern Cal. A weary Jack Hartman retired from Kansas State; so did Guy Lewis at Houston and Boyd Grant at Fresno State.

Each move begot another. Iba was replaced by Danny Nee, creating a vacancy at Ohio University. Pat Foster moved to Houston, leaving an opening at Lamar. Assistant Stew Morrill was promoted at Montana, where Mike Montgomery had left for Stanford, where Tom Davis had left for Iowa, where George Raveling had left to replace Morrison at Southern Cal.

There now are five new coaches in the eight-team Metro Atlantic Conference, four each in the Big Eight, Big Ten and ECAC North Atlantic.

And, already, there is a 1987 casualty: McNeese State's Glenn Duhon will resign next June 30 in the wake of an investigation into alleged recruiting violations.

"Young people going into coaching, if they take a look at the profession, know it's a high-risk profession," said Alabama-Birmingham's Gene Bartow.

"You've got to be willing to move. You've got to be flexible."

The real hope for cleaner athletics

To the Editor:

Although persistent problems in intercollegiate athletics receive much more media attention than do the daily, "accepted" wrongdoings of private enterprise, observant persons are aware that athletics and athletes are inclined to run the patterns devised by society in general.

Realistically, does anyone expect athletes to be oblivious of the attitudes and conduct of prominent business and civic leaders—especially when the entrepreneurs of private enterprise take command of athletic events?

As an item of reference, I call to your attention to an article in the Wednesday, November 12, issue of the Arizona Republic.

A reading will supply the information that the chair of the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl selection committee harbors little or no respect for the NCAA ruling that bowl bids are not to be extended prior to November 22. He blatantly refers to November 16 as "cheat day" and proceeds to outline his "game plan" strategy.

Is it any wonder that today's athlete sees nothing wrong with cheating or under-the-table deals? After all, are athletes not privileged to the same practices as the "movers and shakers" of the world?

Of course, most of us realize that even lawyers (not all, but too many) thrive on their concept that "laws (rules) are made to be bent, cleverly twisted or broken."

In logical order: First, we must rectify the morality of society. Then, we can have true-to-life hope for any desired "cleaning up" of intercollegiate athletics.

More education needed on governance

To the Editor:

Three cheers and a thousand amens to John Bolvin—"It's the NCAA membership, not staff, that makes the rules" (The NCAA News, November 10)—for his well-articulated delineation and clarification regarding the oft-muddled issue of NCAA governance.

To be sure, if print and electronic journalists dedicated themselves to greater objective scrutinizing of collegiate sports programs in their neighborhoods and devoted less copy to unabashed boosterism and incessant trivial pursuit, college and university leaders would be more obliged to protect the public trust

Basketball coaches leaning toward freshman ineligibility

University of Kansas basketball coach Larry Brown is in a compromising position.

He doesn't think freshmen should be eligible to play. He may start two of them this season.

Senior 6-9 center Redditt Hudson is up from a rail-thin 205 pounds of last season to 220. "He's stronger and in better shape than he's ever been," said Grawer.

Senior Jim Roder and junior Ted Mimitz also figure prominently. Roder is Grawer's quarterback. Mimitz is his three-point shooter.

"They didn't have the years our fans expected last season, but they had a year I expected," said Grawer. "I look for big things from them. They know how to play."

riskier each year," said California's Lou Campanelli. "Everyone wants to win now. No one wants to be patient."

As long ago as 1951, when Kentucky was dominating college basketball under Adolph Rupp, the turnover among coaches was as high as 17.9 percent (28 of 156). The record prior to this year was set in 1979, when 53 of the division's 257 schools (20.6 percent) made changes.

Schools have averaged more than 40 changes a year in the 1980s. Are those simply facts coaches must endure? Or is it a problem they must address? Opinions vary.

"Athletics directors are under tremendous pressure," said Arizona's Lute Olson, "because they're trying to support 18, 19 or 20 sports with basically two programs (basketball and football). So (Arizona AD) Cedric Dempsey has to have Lute Olson and (football coach) Larry Smith win."

UAB's Bartow said, "There's always going to be somebody on the board of trustees whose son didn't get to play or you didn't recruit. You're always going to make three or four enemies a

Brown, whose Jayhawks made last to the MCC tournament winner only, and Grawer knows it's not likely the NCAA will select two teams from the MCC. It's the MCC tournament title he's playing for.

He'll do it with tough defense, which he hopes will make up for rebounding and offensive deficiencies. Roles are clearly defined.

Said Grawer: "Our shooters shoot, our rebounders rebound, our passers pass, our dribblers dribble, our guards guard. There are different ways to skin a cat."

Says Grawer: "There's a limited level we can reach offensively. Our players understand how we have to play."

year."

But Iowa's Tom Davis believes "some institutions are in a position to take the step of providing tenure—schools that have been strong administratively (and) have a strong leadership."

"It would be a very innovative way," he said, "for an institution to make a statement about its coach."

He's not the only one with a proposed solution:

• "You hope you get a good enough contract that people can't just get rid of you," said Arkansas' Nolan Richardson, whose roll-over agreement provides a constant, five-year financial commitment.

• "The NCAA tournament is so big now, the money is so big," said Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas. "The NCAA has got to step in and divide it. That would help the pressure tremendously."

• "Al McGuire proposed it years ago," said Florida State's Pat Kennedy, "that coaches need to form a union to protect themselves."

"At the same time, I just don't think that's what coaching is all about."

season's Final Four, isn't in deep trouble; he returns multitalented Danny Manning.

But until the freshman-eligible rule is changed by the NCAA, Brown will continue to start his best players... no matter what class they're in.

Brown and the Big Eight's other coaches gathered in Kansas City recently to discuss their teams and other issues. Freshman eligibility was a hot topic. Most favor making freshmen ineligible. In the minority was the University of Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs.

"Why shouldn't Danny Manning or Wayman Tisdale be able to play if they can handle it?" Tubbs asked. "I think we should get some rules and stick with them."

Freshmen were made eligible by the NCAA in 1972. In recent years, the number of transfers has skyrocketed. Many blame freshman eligibility, citing the difficult adjustment from star status in high school to college ball.

The argument for making freshmen ineligible is that young players need a year to get adjusted socially, academically and athletically.

"It's a tough situation for kids coming right out of high school," said University of Colorado coach Tom Miller. "They step into that pressure cooker and they're supposed to carry their team to the Final Four. At the same time, they're still growing and very vulnerable."

Miller does see some imposing hurdles, including cost, in the way of change. Miller claims that adding a freshman team would dramatically increase expenses for coaches, travel, uniforms and meals.

Tom Miller

Brown thinks having a freshman team would cut expenses.

"Every program has part-time coaches and graduate assistants, so I don't think that would be a factor," Brown said. "And I would hope with a freshman schedule you wouldn't have to travel. We could play a local schedule. The purpose of having a freshman team is to give them an opportunity to study and adjust."

"We would save money because the varsity wouldn't be as large, and we would save on travel expenses. Instead of taking 15 guys, you would probably take 10 or 11."

Freshmen were not eligible when Lon Kruger, Kansas State University's new coach, joined the Wildcat program for the 1970-71 season.

"I benefited from being on campus all the time, not traveling or worrying about varsity competition," Kruger recalled. "We did play a 12-game schedule, so we got game experience to a certain degree without the great pressures."

"I think not having freshmen play would be outstanding. Putting freshmen in a situation where so much is involved is a little bit unrealistic and unfair. We hear talk of putting a greater priority on academics; well, here's a chance to do it."

Danny Nee of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, is wrestling with the real reasons for making freshmen ineligible.

"I do think we have to put in some kind of guidelines that show we are making a commitment to athletes," he said. "I think making freshmen ineligible might be one of the ways to do it. But it has to be done for the right reasons."

Nee doesn't like the underlying theory that if you're for freshman eligibility, you're against academics, and vice versa.

"I know one thing," Nee said. "If freshmen are ineligible and not playing basketball, they won't be in the library studying. If the presidents think they are going to be studying, they're out of their minds. I'm for freshmen being ineligible, but I don't think it will happen."

Iowa State University coach Johnny Orr has come full circle on the subject. He said when he started building the Cyclone program in 1980, he never would have succeeded had freshmen been ineligible. New Oklahoma State University coach Leonard Hamilton is in that same position now.

"Now that the program is established, I think it would be better to let a kid sit out and become adjusted," Orr said. "We're closer to changing the rule than we ever have been."

"If I had a well-established program, maybe I would think that way," Hamilton said.

"This football program has never paid its dues in terms of the things it takes to build a football program. When we deserve to win, we'll win."

"As far as football goes, right now, the biggest drawback is that we're still losing. People undoubtedly will use that against us (in recruiting)."

"When you talk to the kids, there are sparks in their eyes. They're here to turn the football program around. But there's never been a role model here for them to look up to, people who are committed to the game. There really hasn't been that commitment here by football players for a long, long time."

"When I say commitment, I mean things like obeying training rules, maintaining healthy habits during the season and during the off-season, getting ready to play the game intensely. With one or two exceptions, I don't think at Columbia it's ever really meant anything to put that uniform on."

"I guess it boils down to the definition of discipline. I think a lot of people interpret discipline as yelling and screaming and having their heels locked at attention."

"It's not that way at all. Discipline is when you show up

Delegates to the NCAA's fourth special Convention, December 3-4, 1981, in St. Louis, adopted a plan to restructure the Division I football classification, reducing the Division I-A membership from 137 to an anticipated 95 and increasing the Division I-AA classification from 50 to about 90. It also took steps to attempt to control the membership growth in Division I as a whole. (NCAA News, December 15, 1981) and install, nurture and sustain academic integrity in their intercollegiate athletics operations.

Recently proposed reform initiatives at the Universities of Georgia and Maryland, College Park, have proceeded primarily as a consequence of widespread publicity stemming from press investigations and subsequent public disclosure. Given this reality, persistent NCAA violators might be less likely to undermine their academic missions should they understand that their athletics programs are subject to constant, vigorous public scrutiny or oversight.

As important a subject as this is, I offer the suggestion that the media (editors, commentators and sportswriters alike), boards of trustees, university alumni and public officials fully educate themselves to the fundamental principles and characteristics of NCAA governance.

And as for member institutions—take care to examine how your institutional aims may be perverted and integrity and reputations ruined. The NCAA constitution declares forcefully that it is the responsibility of member institutions to establish control of all intercollegiate sports and to apply and enforce principles of ethical conduct. The current overdose of greed as well as unmitigated duplicity is a condition that should trouble us all. Further, the brazen common practice of shifting the blame for violating conditions and obligations of membership upon a seemingly cumbersome NCAA Manual of bylaws or Association rules-enforcement procedures—albeit imperfect—certainly serves to exacerbate irresponsibility and self-denial.

In the final analysis, only when universities become convinced that the factors undermining the academic mission they have established do indeed exist will they act decisively to implement a course of action that contributes to the preservation of academic values and healthy institutional dynamics.

Legislative Assistance

1986 Column No. 40

Eligibility between terms

The NCAA Administrative Committee has reviewed the application of Bylaw 5-1-(c) to situations involving eligibility for participation between terms. The committee affirmed the existing interpretation that this legislation would permit only an "entering" or "returning" (as distinguished from "continuing") student-athlete to be eligible to compete between terms of an academic year if he or she is registered for full-time enrollment in the succeeding regular term. A "continuing" student-athlete, who was enrolled in the previous term as a regular student but dropped below the minimum 12-hour requirement, would not be eligible under this regulation for competition between terms.

Bowl game and championship tickets

The Administrative Committee has determined that a member institution participating in a postseason football game or an NCAA championship, either on its campus or within 30 miles of the institution's main campus, may not provide prospective student-athletes on their official expense-paid visits with tickets to the bowl game or championship, inasmuch as this would constitute excessive entertainment under the provisions of Bylaw 1-9-(j)-(3) and could provide a member institution with a significant recruiting advantage over other institutions. Further, institutional funds for entertaining prospective student-athletes under Bylaw 1-9-(j)-(2)-(i) may not be utilized to purchase these tickets.

In addition, the provisions of Bylaw 1-9-(j)-(3) would prohibit the institution from providing such tickets to a prospect making a self-financed visit to the institution's campus. Further, the provisions of Bylaw 1-1-(b) would prohibit the institution from making special arrangements to have tickets for these events available for purchase by any prospective student-athlete.

Please note that complimentary admissions provided for individuals designated by members of a participating team should be handled through a pass-list system consistent with the manner in which regular-season complimentary admissions are handled under the requirements of Constitution 3-1-(g)-(3).

Unofficial visits by prospective student-athletes

As set forth in Bylaw 1-9-(f), a prospective student-athlete may visit a member institution's campus at the prospect's own expense as often as the prospect wishes. During each such visit, the institution may not pay any expense or provide any entertainment except a maximum of three complimentary admissions to a campus athletics event in which the institution's intercollegiate team competes, for the exclusive use of the prospective student-athlete and those persons accompanying the prospect on the visit, and transportation, when accompanied by an institutional staff member, only to view off-campus practice and competition sites involving the prospect's sport within a 30-mile radius of the institution's campus. The restriction against providing a prospect tickets to bowl games or NCAA championships contests would apply under these circumstances.

In addition, a Division II or III member institution may provide a meal in the institution's on-campus student dining facilities during such a visit. Payment of any expenses or providing any entertainment, except as noted, on such a trip shall constitute an expense-paid visit for the prospect.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

19 proposals

known if they will be eligible under the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j), six Division I institutions have proposed that such a prospect not be eligible to sign in the early letter-of-intent program unless he or she has completed eight or more of the 11 required core subjects with a minimum 2.000 grade-point average, shows evidence that the rest of that requirement will be met and has attained the minimum required SAT or ACT score. That is Proposal No. 76.

In the scouting (evaluations) category, the biggest change is proposed by 16 Division I institutions, including most of the Pac-10 members. That is No. 80, which would specify that a Division I or II member institution would be permitted to observe only four high school or junior college contests per year in which a given prospect competes. Observing a contest would count as one of the four permissible observations of each prospect on both teams.

In the cost-cutting category, the Pac-10 also proposes reducing the number of paid visits that can be provided by a Division I institution from 95 to 80 in football and from 18 to 15 in basketball. That's in No. 84.

In No. 85, the same conference would reduce the number of paid visits a prospective student-athlete can accept from five to three in all sports except basketball, football and women's volleyball, which would remain at five visits.

The Pac-10 also wants to restrict the size and scope of institutional press guides and recruiting brochures that can be provided to prospective student-athletes. No. 88 would restrict them to not more than 5½ to 9 inches in size, with only one color of printing except for the covers.

Another marked departure from current practice would occur in Division II if its voters approve either No. 91 or 92. Each would permit tryouts for prospective student-athletes at Division II institutions under certain circumstances.

Finally, the recruiting grouping attempts to solve two controversial problems that arose during the past year. There is an NCAA Council proposal (No. 83) to permit a coach whose son or daughter is a prospective student-athlete to watch the son or daughter participate outside the permissible evaluation periods. Another Council proposal (No. 90) would permit awards to be presented to prospective student-athletes participating in such events as the Penn Relays.

Financial aid

Three of the five proposals in this grouping are from the Pac-10 Conference, and clearly the most interest is likely to be stirred by No. 93, which would establish a type of aid-based-on-need program in all Division I sports except football, men's and women's basketball, ice hockey, and women's volleyball. Those five sports could continue to give full athletics grants-in-aid as they do now, but all other sports would be limited to tuition and fees as athletically related financial aid. Room, board and books would have to be based on the demonstrated need of the recipient.

The proposal calls for the NCAA to prepare a uniform national financial need formula for use in the "need" plan. It also specifies that need-based aid would not be countable in the equivalency calculations.

In Proposal Nos. 94 and 95, the Pac-10 wants to reduce from 30 to 25 the permissible initial grants in I-AA football and to reduce from 15 to 13 the permissible number of grants that can be awarded in Division I men's and women's basketball.

Summary

Following is a summary of the 19 recruiting proposals and five financial aid proposals appearing in those groupings for the 1987 Convention:

Recruiting

No. 74: Permit each Division I institution to visit a basketball prospect's educational institution only once each week for recruiting contact purposes.

No. 75: Permit only three contact visits during a year to a high school after January 1 (not more than once in a week) in Divisions I-A and I-AA football.

No. 76: Require evidence that a prospective student-athlete has made substantial progress toward meeting the Bylaw 5-1-(j) requirements before the prospect can be signed by a Division I institution in the early letter-of-intent program.

No. 77: Prevent all recruiting contacts, on or off campus, in women's basketball in Divisions I and II during a period from 48 hours before to 48 hours after the spring National Letter of Intent initial signing time and require any letter of intent received by a prospect during that period to be mailed by the institution.

No. 78: Prevent all recruiting contacts, on or off campus, in Divisions II and III football during the annual convention of the American Football Coaches Association.

No. 79: Prevent all recruiting contacts, on or off campus, in Division I women's softball for a one-week period surrounding the Division I Women's Softball Championship final round.

No. 80: Limit to four the maximum number of high school or junior college basketball games (in which a prospective student-athlete competes) that a Division I or Division II member institution may observe during any academic year.

No. 81: Limit recruiting evaluation visits to a high school or junior college by Division I-A, I-AA or II football institutions to Thursday and Friday of each week during the football season.

No. 82: Reduce by 10 days the permissible spring football evaluation period (May 10-31 instead of the month of May).

No. 83: Provide an exemption from the evaluation periods for coaches who are parents of prospective student-athletes participating in football or basketball competition, so long as the coach does not contact any other participant in such competition.

No. 84: Reduce the number of paid recruiting visits that can be provided by a Division I institution in football (95 to 80) and basketball (18 to 15).

No. 85: Reduce from five to three the number of paid visits a prospect is permitted to accept in sports other than football, basketball and women's volleyball (all of which would remain at five).

No. 86: Require that complimentary admissions for prospective student-athletes on self-financed campus visits be administered through a pass list.

No. 87: Permit Division III member institutions to provide housing to a prospect during a self-financed campus visit if it provides such housing to all visiting prospective students.

No. 88: Require that all athletics press guides and recruiting brochures be not larger than 5½ by 9 inches, with only one color of printing inside the covers.

No. 89: Permit member institutions to provide one recruiting poster or poster-type brochure per sport to prospective student-athletes, in addition to the currently permissible printed recruiting aids.

No. 90: Delete the prohibition against awards at high school athletics competition conducted by a member institution under the conditions prescribed in Bylaw 1-6-(c)-(3).

No. 91: Permit tryouts for prospective student-athletes at Division II institutions under certain circumstances. The proposal would prohibit actual competition in the sports of football, ice hockey, lacrosse and wrestling.

No. 92: Permit tryouts for prospective student-athletes at Division II institutions under certain circumstances. This proposal would prohibit competition in soccer, in addition to the four so prohibited in Proposal No. 91; it also would specify that the prospect could not wear helmets or pads in a football tryout.

Financial aid

No. 93: Limit athletically related financial aid in Division I to tuition and fees in all sports except football, men's and women's basketball, ice hockey, and women's volleyball, with subsistence to be based on a showing of financial need; exclude such need-based aid from the financial aid limitations calculations.

No. 94: Reduce from 30 to 25 the number of initial financial aid awards in Division I-A football.

No. 95: Reduce from 15 to 13 the number of financial aid awards in Division I men's and women's basketball.

No. 96: Reduce the maximum awards limitation in Division I-AA football from 70 to 65 in 1988 and to 60 in 1989 (based on equivalencies).

No. 97: Permit a student-athlete to receive an established institutional research grant that would be exempt from the financial aid limitations set forth in the constitution.

Cougars' Buck wins Outland

Jason Buck, a 274-pound defensive tackle at Brigham Young University, has been named the 1986 winner of the Outland Trophy as the best interior lineman in college football.

"I was always a quarterback in high school, so it wasn't until I was switched to the defensive line in college that I began dreaming of the Outland," said Buck, a 6-foot-6 senior.

"It was the impossible dream, but I knew it was out there."

Buck was one of eight nominees for the award, which is presented by the Football Writers Association of America.

The others who had been in the running were center Ben Tamburello of Auburn; offensive linemen Chris Conlin of Penn State, Dave Croston of Iowa, Paul Kiser of Wake Forest and Danny Villa of Arizona State, and defensive linemen Jerome Brown of Miami (Florida) and Danny Noonan of Nebraska.

Buck, who is from St. Anthony, Idaho, runs a 4.65 40-yard dash and can bench press more than 450 pounds. He is the first player from the Rocky Mountain area to win the Outland since Merlin Olsen of Utah State was selected in 1961.

"I've played the best I could, and I believe I've played well in the defensive scheme of things," said Buck.

Hawaii coach Dick Tomey has called Buck "the most dominating player I've seen in nine years here." BYU beat Hawaii, 10-3, earlier this season on an outstanding effort by Buck.

He was a key player in a goal-line stand that stopped Hawaii in the closing seconds.

Mike Ruth of Boston College was the winner last season, and before him, Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech won.

The Outland Trophy has been awarded since 1946. It is named for the late Dr. John H. Outland, a Kansas City, Missouri, physician who believed interior linemen deserved more recognition.

Division I-AA had some notable performers this season

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The biggest names in Division I-AA this season may be Eastern Illinois' Sean Payton, the 10,000-yard career passer who has cut up opposing defenses like a surgeon for four years, and Holy Cross' Gordon Lockbaum, the national scoring champion whose outstanding defense evoked comparisons with the last great two-way player, Purdue's Leroy Keyes, almost 20 years ago.

As outstanding as these two seniors are, they have plenty of legitimate challengers as the division's top player. Colgate junior Kenny Gamble won the rushing and all-purpose running titles and was a close second to Lockbaum in scoring. Next year, he has a good shot at the I-AA career rushing record. Another junior, Northern Iowa's Mike Smith, won the passing efficiency championship. Montana senior Brent Pease edged Payton for the season total offense championship.

Senior quarterbacks Eric Beavers of Nevada-Reno, Bob Bleier of Richmond, Kelly Bradley of Montana State and Scott Linehan of Idaho all rang up impressive career numbers, as did senior running backs John Settle of Appalachian State, Mike Clark of Akron and Warren Marshall of James Madison.

In a class by himself is Georgia Southern's Tracy Ham, even though his official career figures are limited to three years because his team was not classified as a varsity team his freshman year. He set the I-AA career record for rushing yards by a quarterback at 2,506 and passed for almost twice that many yards as well.

Texas Southern's pair of senior receivers—season champion Donald

Brent Pease, Montana quarterback

NCAA college history to run for more than 2,500 yards and pass for more than 4,500—and remember, he did it in three seasons. Even though his team, reviving football after an absence of many years, played 11 four-year colleges in 1983 (and Ham ran for 706 yards and passed for 886 more), it still was officially a club team (and only varsity teams are included in official NCAA statistics); thus, those figures are not included.

In leading his team to the I-AA national championship a year ago, Ham rushed for another 380 net yards, and those figures are not included either—making 1,086 in all. As mentioned, his 2,506 career total is a record for I-AA quarterbacks (the I-A and collegiate or all-divisions mark is 3,299 by Tampa's Fred Solomon over four seasons through 1974). Ham also set a season record in 1986 at 1,048.

Rushing, scoring and all-purpose

Gamble's winning average in rushing is 165.1 yards per game—third highest in I-AA history—and his total of 1,816 ranks second in history. In all-purpose running, he set I-AA records of 2,425 and 220.5 per game, as he had 178 in receiving, 40 in punt returns and 391 in kickoff returns.

In the scoring race, Lockbaum scored 22 touchdowns to 21 for Gamble for a 132-126 edge, or 12 points per game to 11.5. Gamble, 6-0 and 193 from Holyoke, Massachusetts, tied the I-AA season record with four 200-plus rushing games, and the career mark is only five. He has 3,809 career rushing yards so he needs 1,524 next year to break the I-AA record of 5,333 by Frank Hawkins, Nevada-Reno, 1977-1980.

Lockbaum also played cornerback on defense with distinction, playing an average of two-thirds of every game. In big games, he played almost 60 minutes. In the 17-14 upset of Army, he had 22 tackles—19 unassisted—and one tipped pass. He led Holy Cross to a 10-1 season—one of the most improved records in the country after a 4-6-1 finish a year ago. He is 5-11 and 195, from Glassboro, New Jersey, and a 3.100 student in economics (4.000 is perfect).

On the career chart, Settle ended with 4,409 rushing, Clark 4,257 and Marshall 4,168, putting them third, fourth and fifth, respectively. In career all-purpose, Gamble's 5,526 is third all time even though he is a junior (he needs only 400 more next year to break the record), while Merrill Hoge of Idaho State reached fourth at are coached by former all-pro receiver Lionel Taylor, who had 567 catches for 7,195 yards and 45 TDs over 10 seasons. Narcisse is from Port Arthur, Texas, and Colbert is from nearby Beaumont. Each is 5-11 and around 175.

The Eastern Illinois pair combined for a record 5,806 yards over the same four years on 347 catches, as Banks had 3,177 and Pierce 2,629, plus 51 TD catches (Payton quarterbacked the team all four years, so this pair had more than half of his passing yardage). Banks, 6-1 and 180, is from Detroit, Michigan, and Pierce, 6-1 and 220, is from Robbins, Illinois. Actually, Banks caught only three passes as a freshman and Pierce none, so nearly all their yards came in three years.

Nicholls State senior Mark Carrier was the national season leader in both touchdown catches at 17 and total yards receiving at 1,206. Mark Stock of Virginia Military set a record for yards per catch at 25, using a minimum of 40 catches. His 45 catches were for 1,123 yards. William and Mary senior Michael Ciermons, second in both receiving and all-purpose, broke his own I-AA record for catches by a running back with 72. Hoge set a career record for catches by a running back at 182, and Clemons also broke the old record with his 172.

Weber State senior Chris Darrington wins the punt-return championship with his 18.1 average. The kickoff-return championship goes to Eastern Kentucky junior Danny Copeland with a 31.2-yard average, edging Howard junior Curtis Chappell at 31.1.

The interceptions race finished in a three-way tie as Jackson State sophomore Kevin Dent and New Hampshire senior Eric Thompson and Grambling senior Anthony Anderson each had 10 steals in 11 games for 0.91. On the career chart, two players tied for eighth at 19 each—Joe Burton of Delaware State and Joe Peterson of Nevada-Reno. North Carolina A&T's versatile senior receiver, Herbert Harbison, who had 5,069, career all-purpose yards, had 2,156 in kickoff returns—second in I-AA history—and a record 103 returns.

Punting and field goals

Citadel senior Greg Davis wins the punting championship with a 44.6-yard average—sixth highest in I-AA history. Sam Houston State freshman Bart Bradley was a close second at 44.5, putting him eighth on the list of season highs.

On the career chart, Texas Southern's Curtis Moody ended up second at 43.6 (the record is 43.7 by Case de Brujn of Idaho State in 1978-1981), East Tennessee State's George Cimadevilla was fourth at 43 and Montana's Mike Rice fifth at 42.6.

In field goals, Western Carolina junior Kirk Roach wins at 2.18 per game (24-for-28) with Northern Arizona senior Goran Lingmerth a close second at 2.00 (23-for-29, including an all-time NCAA all-divisions single-game record of 8-for-8 vs. Idaho).

The biggest name, however, continues to be Nevada-Reno junior Marty Zendejas, who already holds the career kick-scoring record with 303 kick-points and a year to go. And with 55 career field goals, Marty Zendejas can break the I-AA career record of 70 held by Nevada-Reno's Tony Zendejas, his brother, whose career spanned just three seasons, 1981-1983.

They, of course, are members of the famous Zendejas kicking family. The family record is 78 by their cousin, Luis Zendejas, Arizona State, with Luis' brother Max of Arizona just one behind (Luis graduated in 1984, Max in 1985). Tony, however, still owns the NCAA and collegiate per game record of 2.12. Georgia Southern's Tim Foley set a record for consecutive successful field goals at 19. The longest field goal of the season was 62 yards by Murray State's Paul Hickert vs. Eastern Kentucky. Roach, by the way, has 52 career FGs and a shot at the record in 1987.

Single-game records

Among the single-game records set in I-AA in 1986 were most yards gained rushing by a freshman—304 by Tony Citizen of McNeese State and most consecutive passes completed—18 by Jerome Vigne of Alcorn State. Holy Cross' Lockbaum tied the records for most touchdowns (six) and most points (36) against Dartmouth. And, as mentioned, Lingmerth's eight field goals.

Team champions

Two teams win two statistical championships each—Nevada-Reno in total offense (492 per game) and scoring (39.4) and Tennessee State in total defense (178.5) and scoring defense (8.3). Eastern Illinois wins in passing at 326.1, Northeastern in rushing at 336, Bethune-Cookman in pass defense (99.8), Eastern Kentucky in rushing defense (62.8), Appalachian State in turnover margin (2.09) and Sam Houston State in net punting (41.4).

Bowl history a standoff

A study of all-time major-college bowl history shows once again that little or nothing can be proved about the relative strength of Division I-A conferences and independents by using the bowls. Every conference is within a few games of the break-even or .500 mark over the entire history of bowls, using current lineups.

For instance, the Southeastern Conference, with the most total wins, has an all-time bowl record of 92-84-9 for the 10 current members. That means if just four games out of 185 had gone the other way, its record would be exactly .500. The Southwest Athletic Conference (61-70-9) is the most games under .500, at nine, but if just five games out of 140 had gone the other way, it would be over .500.

The Big Eight Conference is precisely at .500, with 50-50-1. The Pacific-10 Conference is seven games over at 56-49-6, the Atlantic Coast Conference three over at 43-40-2 (including Georgia Tech's 15-8, most of it compiled while an independent or SEC member), the Big Ten Conference 35-39-0, Western Athletic Conference four over at 21-17-2, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association two over at 11-9-3 and the Mid-American Conference even at 9-9-0. Eastern independents are 40-36-1, Midwestern independents 13-14-0 and

See Division I-AA, page 10

Football notes

Narcisse and Darrell Colbert, higher on the career charts—made statistical history over their four seasons, as did another senior pair—Roy Banks and Cal Pierce of Eastern Illinois.

Passing and total offense

Smith's winning figure in passing efficiency is 168.2 rating points—second highest in I-AA history. In total offense, his 8.37 yards per rushing-passing play set a record. Smith, 5-10 and 175, was a two-time all-state quarterback at Wakulla County High School in Florida.

Pease's winning figure in total offense is 309.4 rushing-passing yards per game, just six-tenths of a yard above Payton. He is 6-2 and 200, from Mountain Home, Idaho, and played junior college football at Walla Walla, Washington.

Payton, 6-0 and 185, from Naperville, Illinois, led Eastern Illinois to a 10-1 regular season. His 10,298 yards in career total offense ranks fourth on the all-time I-AA list, and his 10,655 yards passing ranks third. In total offense, Beavers at 9,025, Bleier at 7,991, Bradley at 7,740, Linehan at 7,550 and Ham at 7,387 rank 5-9-11-12-14, respectively, on the I-AA career list. Next are Doug Hudson of Nicholls State 6,933 and Rich Gannon of Delaware 6,832. In the career total offense per-game rankings, Payton's 264.1 is fifth and Ham's 223.8 (for three seasons) is 12th.

Beavers reached fourth all-time in I-AA career passing efficiency at 141.8. Smith can break the record next season, because his current figure is 149.6 points and the I-AA career record is 146.8. Another upcoming standout is Northern Arizona's Greg Wyatt, whose 2,695 yards and 245 per game in total offense are records for a I-AA freshman.

Ham, 5-10 and 185 from High Springs, Florida, is the first player in 5,453 and Settle eighth at 5,254. In career scoring, it is Georgia Southern's Gerald Harris 272, Hoge 268 and Grambling State's Wayne Hill 258, ranking 5-6-7 on the career list.

Clark set a record for a minimum of 200 carries in a season with his 7.29-yard average for 245 rushing plays. Howard junior Harvey Reed set a record for a minimum of 150 carries with his 7.74-yard average on 179 carries. Clark and Marshall also tied a record as each surpassed 1,000 yards rushing for a third season in 1986.

Receiving and runbacks

As mentioned, two pairs of receivers made I-AA career history. Narcisse, whose season championship figure is eight catches per game, finished with 203 career catches for 2,429 yards and 26 touchdowns. Teammate Colbert ended with 217 career catches for 3,177 yards. Their 420 catches for the same team over the same four years sets a record, and their 5,606 total yards ranks second. They had 59 total TD catches. They

Arkansas men, Texas women win cross country crowns

Arkansas dominated the field and won the team title at the Division I Men's Cross Country Championships, while Texas edged Wisconsin by only two points to snare team honors in the Division I Women's Cross Country Championships November 24 at Tucson, Arizona.

Behind junior Joe Falcon, who was runner-up to Arizona's Aaron Ramirez in the men's individual competition, Arkansas scored 69 points to outdistance second-place Dartmouth by 72 points.

Ramirez won the race on the 10,000-meter course with a time of 30:27.53, and teammate Matt Giusto was third at 30:52.64. But Arizona, a prerace favorite, along with the Razorbacks, placed sixth in the team competition after two Wildcats—Chris Morgan and Jeff Cannada—failed to finish.

The title is the second in three years for coach John McDonnell's Razorbacks. Last year, Arkansas finished second behind Wisconsin.

"Our guys ran the meet just the way we wanted them to," McDonnell said. "Wisconsin beat us in their back yard (Milwaukee) last year, and they were the better team. This year, we were better. You line up and go after it for 10,000 meters and the best team wins."

Dartmouth's finish was the highest ever for an Ivy League team in the men's competition. The Big Green's Bob Kampainen finished fourth in the individual standings.

Filling out the top five in the team competition were Boston U. in third place, Oregon in fourth and Colorado in fifth.

In the women's competition, Texas scored 62 points to defending champion Wisconsin's 64 in capturing its first team title.

"It was, obviously, two talented teams duking it out," said Longhorn coach Terry Crawford. "Texas and Wisconsin both have tough teams, and there were a lot of talented runners. With so many talented runners, you have to go to the well and pull out your best race... I'm pleased with the race."

Wisconsin freshman Suzy Favor boosted Wisconsin's hopes by finishing second individually behind Northern Arizona's Angela Chalmers, who won the 5,000-meter race with the only sub-17-minute time of the day (16:55.49).

Texas, however, placed four runners among the top 20 finishers, compared to Wisconsin's three. Sandy Blakeslee placed fifth for the Longhorns, followed by Liz Natale (10th), Trina Leopold (15th) and Annie Schweitzer (19th).

"It's hard to make an observation or find a reason for finishing second," said Wisconsin coach Peter Tegen. "I think the reason we came in second is because Texas beat us... today. I'm ready for the next race."

Sisters help respective teams win

In the Laughlin family of Downers Grove, Illinois, everyone is a champion.

The Laughlins' cross country running sisters, Marta and Tracey, separately helped their schools nail down NCAA team titles last week—Marta at Division III's St. Thomas (Minnesota) and Tracey at Division I's Texas.

Junior Marta placed 46th for St. Thomas at the Division III Women's Cross Country Championships November 22 at Fredonia State. Just two days later, junior Tracey placed 87th for the Longhorns at the Division I Women's Cross Country Championships in Tucson, Arizona.

Both were their respective teams' No. 6 runners in the meets.

The sisters are graduates of Downers Grove North High School, where they were coached by Bruce Ritter.

Stanford captures its sixth men's water polo championship

Stanford, equipped with what might be the most talented collegiate water polo team in history, cruised to its sixth national championship November 28-30 at the Belmont Plaza Pool in Long Beach, California.

After dominating opponents in the early rounds, the Cardinal edged long-time rival California in the finals, 9-6. The Golden Bears, who also have won a record six national championships, led Stanford 5-4 late in the second period. However, the Cardinal's Craig Klass scored a goal with 48 seconds remaining in the half to knot the score at five-all.

The third period was all Stanford. The Cardinal scored three unanswered goals. Klass, who led all scorers for the game with four goals, scored two of the three in the third.

Stanford and California scored one goal each in the fourth period.

En route to the finals, Stanford defeated Air Force, 23-5, and Pepperdine, 15-8. California edged Brown, 11-4, and UCLA, 11-8. In the third-place game, UCLA slipped past Pepperdine, 12-11.

Three MVPs were named for the tournament—David Imbernino and Klass of Stanford and UCLA's Fernando Carsalade. Rounding out the all-tournament team were Jeff Brush, Kirk Everist and Bill Schoening of California; Erich Fischer of Stanford, and Robert Lynn of Southern California.

Walter Camp trophy goes to Hurricanes' Testaverde

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who has led top-ranked University of Miami (Florida) to a showdown for the mythical national championship, has been named winner of the 1986 Walter Camp trophy as the nation's outstanding college football player.

Testaverde was the overwhelming choice of coaches and sports information directors who took part in nationwide balloting for the award. He was named quarterback of the Walter Camp all-America team November 26.

"It feels great," Testaverde said. "It's an honor I wish I could share with all of my teammates. We accomplish goals as a team and every person on the ball club should get part of the award."

Camp, a Yale player and coach at the turn of the century, is widely considered the father of modern football, having guided the transition from a rugby-like sport to a game that has a line of scrimmage and includes downs. Camp also collaborated with a New York sportswriter in 1889 to select the nation's first all-America team.

Testaverde completed 175 of 276 passes for 2,557 yards and 26 touchdowns as Miami finished the regular season undefeated.

He missed the Hurricanes' final game, a 36-10 victory over East Carolina Thanksgiving night, due to minor injuries suffered in a motor scooter accident but is expected to be fully recovered for a showdown for the national championship against No. 2 Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

Correction

The places of finish for two Occidental runners inadvertently were switched in the Division III Women's Cross Country Championships results that were published last week in the News.

It should have been reported that Michele Trimble finished seventh with a time of 20:20 and Cressey Stewart finished 13th with a time of 20:28.

It is important now to define a major bowl. The list includes all bowl games played by a current Division I-A team, provided it played an opponent classified as major at the time of the bowl, or it was a major team at the time. (In case you are checking, the above figures do not balance because we are leaving out bowl games played by former majors and service teams.)

Big Four the same

It is also a standoff if it is limited to the "Big Four," that is, the traditional four New Year's bowls—Rose, Orange, Sugar and Cotton. Again, every conference is within a few games of the break-even mark. The Pac-10, 6-0 the last five years in the Big Four, is now six over .500 at 38-32-3. The Big Eight is three over at 27-24, the ACC two over at 16-14, the SEC one over at 48-47-2 and the SWC one over at 33-32-4. WAC members are 0-2-1 and the PCAA and MAC members have not played in the Big Four. Eastern independents are 14-20-2, Midwestern independents 7-5-0 and Southern independents 3-7-0 (again, it does not balance because former majors and service teams are excluded).

Almost every conference has a big winner. For instance, Oklahoma is 14-5 in the Big Four, Georgia Tech 9-3, Alabama 17-11-1, Southern California 18-6 and Notre Dame 6-3, to mention a few. Interestingly, history's biggest winners tend to have the higher bowl winning percentages, while teams with few-to-several bowls tend to have losing bowl records. Including all bowls, Penn State becomes a big winner at 14-7-2, Southern California is 21-8, Alabama 21-14-3, Georgia Tech 15-8, Oklahoma 17-8-1, Nebraska 13-11, Notre Dame 8-4 and Texas A&M 9-5, to mention some higher marks.

Nine perfect matchups

As mentioned in the November 17 Notes, Penn State vs. Miami (Florida) will be only the 10th matchup of two major-college teams with undefeated-untied records in all of major bowl history dating back to 1902. Each goes in 11-0.

The first nine such matchups involved several of the greatest coaches in college football history, 300-plus winners and .800-plus careers, mentioned in the October 20 Notes. Here is the list, with the season, teams, coaches, victories going in, bowl, score and date:

1920 season—California (8), Andy Smith vs. Ohio State (7), John Wilce. California won, 28-0, Rose Bowl, January 1, 1921.

1926 season—Stanford (10), Glenn "Pop" Warner vs. Alabama (9), Wallace Wade. It was a 7-7 tie, Rose Bowl, January 1, 1927.

1930 season—Alabama (9), Wallace Wade vs. Washington State (9), Babe Hollingbery. Alabama won, 24-0, Rose Bowl, January 1, 1930.

1938 season—Tennessee (10), Bob Neyland vs. Oklahoma (10), Tom Stidham. Tennessee won, 17-0, Orange Bowl, January 2, 1939.

1940 season—Boston College (10), Frank Leahy vs. Tennessee (10), Bob Neyland. Boston College won, 19-13, Sugar Bowl, January 1, 1941.

1951 season—Maryland (9), Jim Tatum vs. Tennessee (10), Bob Neyland. Maryland won, 28-13, Sugar Bowl, January 1, 1952.

1955 season—Oklahoma (10), Bud Wilkinson vs. Maryland (10), Jim Tatum. Oklahoma won, 20-6, Orange Bowl, January 2, 1956.

1971 season—Nebraska (12), Bob Devaney vs. Alabama (11), Paul "Bear" Bryant. Nebraska won, 38-6, Orange Bowl, January 1, 1972.

1973 season—Notre Dame (10), Ara Parseghian vs. Alabama (11), Paul "Bear" Bryant. Notre Dame won, 24-23, Sugar Bowl, December 31, 1973.

Leahy went to Notre Dame the following year (1941), and his 13-year career winning percentage of .864 ranks second in history to the .881 by Knute Rockne of Notre Dame. Neyland, 1-2 in such games, was a 173-game winner with a career percentage of .829 for 21 years.

Warner is No. 3 in all-time victories in Division I-A at 313; and Bryant, 0-2 in perfect matchups, heads the I-A list at 323 and ranks second to Eddie Robinson (336) of Grambling State on the all-time, all-divisions list. Devaney is another lifetime .800 coach, with .806 for 16 seasons, the last 11 at Nebraska. So is Wilkinson, .826 for 17 years, all at Oklahoma. Smith's career percentage was .761, including a 50-game unbeaten streak (four ties) during his last six seasons at California.

Wade's career percentage was .765 with 171 victories in 24 years at Duke and Alabama. Parseghian was .739 with 170 victories at Miami (Ohio), Northwestern and Notre Dame.

Stringer, Yow see big improvements ahead in women's game

By Wayne Grett
The Des Moines Register

Women's college basketball has changed drastically in the last two or three years, and more changes are expected, say coaches of two of Iowa's four NCAA Division I teams.

"The athletes are bigger, stronger and quicker today than they were two or three years ago," the University of Iowa's Vivian Stringer said.

Drake University's Susan Yow agrees with that and believes today's female athlete is getting more exposure than ever before. "Women are getting more exposure at the high school level because of the increased emphasis of college basketball," Yow commented. "And, women are getting more exposure in international competition."

Stringer also sees the change beginning at high school level. "There is more pressure in recruiting today," she said, "and players have to make big decisions. High school coaches are changing their philosophies because their players want to adjust quicker to the college systems."

"The coaches want to prepare the players for the college game. In college, the whole atmosphere of competitiveness is changing and that includes in the classroom as well as in the arena. Look at Proposition 48 (NCAA academics legislation making college athletics eligibility more difficult for athletes)."

Yow pointed out that there are more recruiting camps for women now, just like there are for men.

"In college, you just can't coach X's and O's," said Stringer. "There is more public relations involved; more knowledge of the game is needed."

"I'm glad to see all the changes taking place. I believe it will be for the best. College athletics is big time, big business and everyone is beginning to reckon with that."

Yow said the fans have different expectations now. "People want to see a high-tech game," said Yow. "They want to see execution. I want to coach that."

Stringer sees even more changes coming from the NCAA.

"Some changes have to be made in the schedule," she said. "Players return to the campus in September, and although they can't be coached until October 15, they begin to prepare for the season. Games start in November and extend into March. You have a season that lasts seven months."

"That's too long. I think there should be a limit of months in the season. I think the recruiting season should be limited. It becomes a rat race for a coach, and it costs a lot of money."

"I think and hope everybody would be happy with changes. It would free up people a little more."

Concerning fans, Stringer said one million more people watched women's basketball last season than the year before.

"That still doesn't satisfy me. We have a long way to go," she said. "I see more and more people coming out to watch the female athlete play. And, athletes will improve by leaps and bounds."

Court ruling opens records in Georgia

The state of Georgia has decided not to fight two newspapers seeking access to financial records of the Georgia Institute of Technology Athletics Association, Attorney General Michael Bowers said November 26.

Bowers said he informed Georgia Tech officials this week that a state supreme court ruling last week ordering University of Georgia Athletics Association records made public also would apply to Georgia Tech.

The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution filed suit seeking access to the Tech athletics association records.

A request by the Atlanta newspaper last May to examine the financial records of the Georgia Tech Athletics Association was rejected by President Joseph M. Pettit, who has since died.

The Associated Press also earlier this year requested access to the records and was refused.

The Georgia Supreme Court ruled earlier this month in favor of the Macon Telegraph and News in its suit seeking access to the records of the University of Georgia Athletics Association, the private corporation that runs Georgia Bulldogs sports programs. The Macon newspaper had contended that the Georgia athletics association's ties to the public university should place its records under public scrutiny.

The Journal and Constitution then made the request of Georgia Tech for the second time November 19 and were refused.

The AP renewed its request November 20 in a letter to athletics director Homer C. Rice. The news cooperative has received no response to that request.

However, Georgia Tech did release last month an audit of its athletics programs, which showed revenue of $9.1 million last year and expenses of $8.9 million.

Bowers said in a telephone interview that he "had the athletic association advised, and I personally advised the (university system) chancellor that the records of the athletics association, under the Macon Telegraph case, had to be made public."

However, Bowers said he also instructed university system and college officials that they must screen the requested papers first "to make sure whatever the paper's asking for wouldn't invade somebody's privacy."

Perfect handoff, NCAA.

No cheering crowds. No glowing press clippings. But every season, the most important play of the year is made by the NCAA.

You pass on the character, the self-esteem and the guts of a true athlete. And your young men and women run with it. For life. Quite a play.

State Farm is proud to be associated with college sports. And we're grateful for the fine athletes — and fine citizens — which they produce.

Like a good neighbor, State Farm is there.

Bibliography of videotapes on substance abuse developed

In response to a recommendation by the NCAA Drug Education Committee, a bibliography of videotapes dealing with the subject of substance abuse has been developed by the NCAA national office staff.

The Drug-Education Videotape Bibliography lists 19 programs available from various sources and lists addresses and telephone numbers where more information can be obtained about each tape.

Most of the tapes are available for preview at no charge. Since the tapes are not of equal quality, a preview is strongly encouraged. The presence of a title in the bibliography does not serve as a NCAA endorsement.

The tapes are:

NCAA modifies decision in Coleman eligibility case

The NCAA Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals has modified its previous ruling in the case of Norris Coleman, a basketball student-athlete at Kansas State University.

The subcommittee previously had ruled Coleman ineligible for intercollegiate competition until February 27, 1987, because Kansas State had permitted him to practice, play and receive financial aid last season while ineligible under the NCAA's former 2,000 eligibility rule. Coleman did not qualify for practice, play or financial aid under NCAA rules because he graduated from high school with less than a 2.000 grade-point average.

The subcommittee's new ruling stipulates that Coleman's ineligibility will be reduced from 27 to 14 games on the basis of several factors discussed in the rehearing of the case.

First, Kansas State must forfeit every victory in which Coleman participated last season in order to negate any competitive advantage the institution may have realized as a result of his participation. In addition, Coleman must repay the university the full amount of the financial aid he received while ineligible last year.

As under the old ruling, Coleman will be charged with the loss of one full year of eligibility. His participation during the 1986-87 season, therefore, will leave him with only one year of eligibility remaining.

"The subcommittee took into consideration the mitigating factors in this case," said David L. Maggard, subcommittee chair and athletics director at the University of California, Berkeley. "We believe that the additional actions to be taken by the university in its efforts to rectify this situation are meaningful and that when those actions are considered in the context of the young man's individual circumstances, there is an appropriate basis to permit his participation in the second half of the 1986-87 season."

"It is the subcommittee's position that each eligibility appeal should be considered on a case-by-case basis and that the corrective actions taken by a member institution and the circumstances that relate to a particular case should determine the action that would be equitable in that case. The additional actions taken by the university and the young man in this case are the bases for the subcommittee's modification of its initial decision."

Coleman was withheld by the university for two contests at the end of last season. Thus, under the subcommittee's ruling, Coleman will miss the first 12 games of Kansas State's 1986-87 season.

that needed to be covered — the drug issue," said Josephine Mendoza, president of the student organization. "It was an opportunity for the academic and athletics aspects of the university to interact with the community."

The goal for the group was quite simple, but the task of putting it all together was not. First, every school, public and private, in the four-county area has contacted and given the date that the students were to address the assemblies. Sheets were compiled, with location of the schools, assembly times and a contact person at that school.

With 60 sheets in hand, then came the task of placing two students (one athlete and one Golden Key member) at each school. The athletes were chosen on their willingness to participate and, of course, their ability to fit the time constraints. Many athletes came forward in the early going, having gotten wind of the project.

"It's amazing," said FSU associate athletics director Bob Goin. "A lot of these kids came to us and asked to be able to participate. Some kids who were not in the initial group were upset that they hadn't been picked. In the end, we tried to include everybody who wanted to be a part."

Athletes and Golden Key students were paired and introduced at a final organizational meeting. They worked out the transportation, agreed on a time to meet at the athletics center and discussed the presentation of their messages.

It was in this setting that something unexpected happened. There were many friendships begun. Athletes and Golden Key students milled around for some time. Many agreed to get together socially prior to the big day to get to know one another further and perhaps to discuss the mission further.

On that big Monday, the athletics center was alive by 6:30 a.m. The first wave of students was to arrive at 7 a.m. and head for those early

Long Beach State asks city to help save football program

The football program at California State University, Long Beach, may be dropped in order to solve a fiscal deficit being run up by the school's athletics department, a newspaper reported November 27.

Long Beach State President Stephen Horn has ordered the community to raise $300,000 by the end of the year or the football program will be dropped, the Long Beach Press-Telegram reported.

Horn said if the initial figure was raised, another $500,000 would have to be raised by June 1987.

If the football program were dropped, the university would save $1 million annually after players and coaches were relocated, the Press-Telegram reported.

Horn made the announcement at an emotional four-hour meeting, described as a "donnybrook" by an unidentified participant, set up to let representatives of the community and the school's academia know the proposal was being considered.

"I told them that I had before me the most difficult decision... in my 17 years here, and I did not intend to make that decision without input from the people who had been with us through thick and thin," Horn said.

According to the Press-Telegram, Long Beach State's athletics department has a deficit of $719,000; and it will grow to more than $1 million by June 1987.

The issue behind the possible decision is the $700,000 needed annually to pay for athletics grants-in-aid. That money comes from three sources of revenue: game receipts, game guarantees and community contributions.

Each grant-in-aid at Long Beach State is valued at about $4,800 for in-state students, $8,000 for out-of-state students.

"And the current level of contributions and the current level of attendance is simply insufficient to fund our current level of grants-in-aid," said Horn.

The Press-Telegram said that four years ago, Horn announced he would approve an increase in the number of football grants-in-aid from 55 to 85 "if the community would support the increase."

The extra grants were handed out even though the extra money needed was never received by the school.

NCAA denies Florida plea to reduce penalty on grants

An appeal by the University of Florida seeking to lessen the scholarships penalties imposed on the football program has been turned down by the NCAA.

The NCAA denied a request from Florida that would have allowed the Gators to sign 11 football players immediately and have them count on this year's recruiting class.

University of Florida President Marshall M. Criser argued that the two-year probation imposed by the NCAA Committee on Infractions will extend well past three seasons as a result of the scholarships limitations.

The limitations cut the number of scholarships per year from 30 to 20 for the 1985 and 1986 recruiting years and reduced the squad cap from 95 players to 85 last year and 75 this season.

The other sanctions against Florida expired after the November 29 game against Florida State. They included a ban on postseason bowl play after the 1984 and 1985 seasons and no live television broadcasts last year and this year.

The two-year probation was decreased from three years because Florida took actions to clean up its athletics department by dismissing a former head coach and two assistants.

In the school's appeal, Criser wrote that Florida, even after signing 30 players next season, will only have 84 on scholarships, 11 below the NCAA maximum of 95, because natural attrition has cut into the Gator roster. Criser said the squad will grow to 88 players in 1988, 90 players in 1989 and 94 players in 1990. The NCAA allows a maximum of 95 players on scholarships.

"This penalty actually stretches six years," Criser said.

The NCAA committee calculated that the university is in a position to have at least 88 players at the beginning of the 1987-88 academic year with no further attrition and assuming 30 initial grants-in-aid are allowed. The committee said it is not willing to assume further attrition.

morning assemblies. The FSU students were to check in at the athletics center, pick up some specially designed ("Say No to Drugs") posters and thousands of ("I Say No") stickers. The stickers would be placed on the chests of more than 40,000 kids before the day was over.

"It was incredible," said offensive lineman Tim Hebron after he returned from an area elementary school. "You would have thought we were giving away money. Those kids wouldn't leave until they got one of those stickers."

Hebron was just one of dozens of athletes who returned to the campus with heartwarming stories about how they were received.

"I really thought when we got in there all the kids would be talking and not paying attention," Hebron said. "You know how it was when you got out of class for an assembly. It's kind of like fun time. But it was amazing. They listened to every word we said."

Most of the athletes related personal stories of actual people they had known who had become involved with drugs. Many of the athletes related the tragedy of the Len Bias story — a great athlete like themselves, struck down in his prime by drugs.

Following the presentations, players were mobbed by the kids. Many signed autographs until they suffered from writer's cramp. The teams kept returning to the athletics center, hardly able to restrain their excitement.

"It was great," said punter Louis Berry. "I was really worried about how it would go. If everybody could have seen those kid's faces..."

In short, the students and student-athletes at Florida State carried out Chancellor Reed's idea to a degree that no one could have ever dreamed. This was a project that should make all of us realize that there are really more important things than who wins a football game.

You can believe that there are thousands of school kids who won't remember the score of the annual showdown, but they'll never forget that big football player who came to their school with a message. And that message — "Say No to Drugs" — will probably live longer in their minds than any victories or losses ever will.

Lawmakers, educators pressing for change in college athletics

By Doug Bedell

The Dallas Morning News

The NCAA is no longer alone with its problems.

Recent scandals — academic, recruiting and drug-related — have thrust the seamy side of big-time collegiate athletics into the white-hot light of public scrutiny. And, increasingly, the calls for reform are coming from those outside the NCAA's walls.

Frustrated with the huge Association's plodding ways, a committee of the American Council of Education has submitted recommendations for drastic change. A national organization of athletics department academic advisers is pushing for more say in the NCAA. And even Congress has set into motion preliminary steps that could take it right into the organization's board room.

"The sands of time are running out here," says Robert H. Atwell, the American Council of Education's president. "Before too long, unless substantial movement for reform is seen, the issue may be taken out of the hands of the college presidents and put into the hands of Congress or somebody else. Nobody wants that."

Within collegiate ranks, nothing frightens like the specter of congressional intervention. If reform measures don't come quickly, action in Washington, D.C., is a possibility. Already, Rep. Thomas A. Luken, D-Ohio, has succeeded in pushing through both houses of Congress a measure permitting a blue-ribbon panel to examine the troubles plaguing athletics programs.

The action was spurred initially by last summer's cocaine-induced death of University of Maryland, College Park, basketball star Len Bias.

As it moved through Congress, the proposal became more wide-ranging than Luken intended. As adopted, Luken's concept evolved into a $2 million study titled "The White House Conference for a Drug-Free America." And it is empowered to look at much more than drug abuse among athletes. The conference also will take testimony on academic requirements for athletes and their overall treatment while in college.

The NCAA lobbied vigorously against such an intrusion. "They have said that other studies have been done in the past," says Wade Warren, Luken's legislative assistant.

"We just think it's time for another body to look into this," he said.

Some university presidents bristle at the notion. "I think the idea of Congress getting involved in the governance of intercollegiate athletics is preposterous," says Edward T. Foote II, University of Miami (Florida), president. "Universities are not about to turn over their very, very heavy fiduciary responsibility to other organizations. It just isn't going to happen."

Edward T. Foote II

Richard Van Horn

Adds Richard Van Horn, University of Houston president: "The problem is a difficult one. It's the kind of thing Congress likes to get involved in."

Though Warren admits the latter statement is basically true, he says that option is open.

"If the conference comes forth with a solid set of recommendations and the NCAA ignores them, I don't know," Warren says. "Then if things worsen a few years down

'Congress views this as a very serious question'

—William C. Friday, president emeritus, University of North Carolina

the line, Congress might determine there is a need to get directly involved."

Meanwhile, in the halls of the U.S. Senate, retiring Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Missouri, is busy analyzing his own study on the state of college athletics. With the help of national Democratic Party policy committeemen, Eagleton has surveyed the presidents and chancellors at about 80 of the country's largest universities. On questionnaires, the senator asked questions on academic support systems, social lives and recruiting of athletes.

"I guess the Len Bias thing tilted his stack a little bit," says Ray Herbst, an Eagleton aide. "Some of these schools just seem like they've put way too much emphasis on athletics. The senator just wanted to get a feel for what's happening out there."

Just what will be done with the survey results has not been determined. But the fact that a U.S. senator and the Democratic Party are taking interest may make the NCAA move more quickly.

"What this really says, you see, is that Congress views this as a very serious question," says William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina. "And I think the public is viewing these (NCAA) delays in reform with increasing cynicism about whether anything's ever going to happen."

Though many institution leaders are content to let the Presidents Commission point the way toward reform, some have chosen to put together their own body.

A 10-member ad hoc committee of the American Council on Education presented the Presidents Commission with a list of changes it would like the NCAA to consider in January.

Among its suggestions: reduction of Division I-A football and Division I basketball scholarships, shortening of playing seasons, and elimination of spring football practice.

Rather than place the American Council on Education's proposals on the January agenda, the Commission decided to form yet another committee to study those measures, then submit recommendations that could be taken up at a special NCAA Convention next summer, if called.

Even academic advisers for athletics programs are crying for more say in the NCAA. This year, for the first time, members of their professional group requested and received permission from the organization to voice their views.

In summer meetings with the NCAA's Long Range Planning Committee, representatives of the National Association of Academic Advisers for Athletics asked for representation on key committees. They also expressed their wishes that practice hours be limited, playing seasons shortened and summer-school credit hours for athletes be curtailed.

"What we're asking them to do is listen to our ideas and use our expertise," says G. Lynn Lashbrook, the president of the National Association of Academic Advisers for Athletics. "We're really the persons who are with the athletes from the time practice is over to the next class period... We're looking for a power base to give input to the student-athlete concept."

Just like a growing number of bodies and organizations.

"The mood of the country has changed rapidly," says Lashbrook, the director of athletics at the University of Southern Illinois, Edwardsville. "People are asking a lot more questions about what we did to get that last touchdown."

Early expansion to 48 teams sought for College World Series

Expansion to a 48-team field for the Division I Baseball Championship could come a year earlier than currently planned, if the Executive Committee approves a recommendation by the NCAA Baseball Committee's Division I baseball subcommittee.

The subcommittee is recommending that the scheduled expansion of the current 40-team field be moved up to take effect next season during the 1987 championship, in anticipation of the NCAA's switch in 1988 to an eight-team, two-division College World Series. The recommendation came during the NCAA Baseball Committee meeting November 17-20 in Kansas City.

Approval for a 48-team field previously was given for 1988 by the Administrative Committee, at the same time it approved the new College World Series format. The baseball subcommittee, however, believes earlier expansion is justified by the number of quality teams currently vying for championship berths.

The Executive Committee will hear the request, along with a subcommittee recommendation that eight teams be seeded in the tournament instead of the current five, during its December meeting in Kansas City.

Recommendations also were made pertaining to the 1988 College World Series, which will be in Omaha, Nebraska.

The subcommittee proposed that when the new College World Series format goes into effect that year, it should follow a 10-day schedule. The schedule would allow for double-elimination play within two divisions of four teams each, followed by a single championship game between winners of the two divisions. In 1988, the tournament would run June 3-12.

Double-headers would be played the first five nights of the tournament, followed by single games on the sixth and seventh nights. If division winners are not decided at that point, deciding games would be played on the eighth day; if the winners are decided, there would be no games that day.

In either case, the ninth day—a Saturday—will be an off day and the single championship game will be played on the 10th day, a Sunday.

The subcommittee also is recommending that the two College World Series divisions be named the American and National divisions and that all eight teams in the tournament be seeded and assigned to one or the other division according to their seeding. Play in one division would open with matchups between the first and eighth seeds and the fourth and fifth seeds, while the other division's play would begin with games between the second and seventh seeds and the third and sixth seeds.

Several other recommendations also were made by the subcommittee, including:

- That Huntsville, Alabama, be approved as the site for one of the eight 1987 Division I regional tournaments, pending negotiation of a guarantee. If approved, Huntsville will become the first noncampus site in 10 years to host a regional.

- That automatic qualification be granted to the Trans-America Athletic Conference, in addition to all of the conferences that received automatic qualification last season.

Actions also were taken by the entire Baseball Committee, as well by the Divisions II and III baseball subcommittee.

Baseball Committee

The complete committee issued a statement urging manufacturers to pursue the development of nonwood bats that feature the performance characteristics of wood bats but do not produce a greater hit distance. It also reminded manufacturers that bats made of materials other than wood or aluminum must be approved by the committee.

Beginning with the 1988 season, the committee also will require that nonwood bats incorporating significant design changes be approved by the committee prior to the season for which they will be sold. In addition, any bats produced on an experimental basis must be distinctively marked and their use will be prohibited in regular-season games.

In another action, the committee deleted Rule 4-7 covering suspended games from the NCAA Baseball Rules. The action was taken because Rule 4-7 conflicts with requirements elsewhere in the rules for a regulation game.

Instead, during the 1987 season, an experimental "halted game" procedure will be in force allowing institutions or conferences to seek permission from the Baseball Committee to establish policies under which a game can be stopped and later resumed due to inclement weather, darkness, light failure or curfew.

According to the procedure, a halted game can be "continued by mutual agreement of the competing institutions reached prior to the start of the contest, conference agreement or tournament policy to a predetermined point of completion. In any event, a halted game must meet the conditions of Rule 5-5 to be considered a regulation game."

Division II subcommittee

The Division II baseball subcommittee took the following actions:

- Recommended to the Executive Committee that automatic qualification for conference champions be approved for the 1987 Division II Baseball Championship, utilizing procedures similar to those in Division I.

- Recommended that either two or three teams be selected to participate in the South and West regionals; previously, only two teams could be selected in each of the regionals.

Division III subcommittee

The Division III baseball subcommittee took the following actions:

- Agreed to form a committee of seven coaches to review the pros and cons of extending the length of the Division III Baseball Championship by one day.

- Recommended granting air-transportation expenses annually to three umpires for future championship finals, with the umpires to be selected from specified regions on a rotating basis.

- Approved guidelines for prospective Division III Baseball Championship hosts and invited institutions interested in serving as hosts to submit written proposals by April.
