Commission gains eight new members

Eight new members began serving four-year terms on the NCAA Presidents Commission at the conclusion of the 81st annual Association Convention January 6-10 in San Diego.

The new members were chosen by presidents of NCAA member institutions who voted by mail ballot for candidates representing the respective divisions within the NCAA.

New members and their divisions are as follows:

Division I: Harold H. Haak, California State University, Fresno (Pacific Coast Athletic Association); Bernard F. Sliger, Florida State University (Division I-A South independents), and Frederick P. Whiddon, University of South Alabama (Division I-AAA at large).

Division II: Billy C. Black, Albany State College (Georgia), and Lloyd D. Vincent, Angelo State University.

Division III: Jerry C. Lee, Galaudet University; William A. McMillan, Rust College, and Jack Stark, Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd-Scripps Colleges.

Commission prepared to push harder for athletics reforms

By Tom Witosky
Des Moines Sunday Register

When the NCAA Convention ended, there were the typical self-congratulations common to all governing boards.

And, for a Convention hyped as one of "reflection and not much action," there seemed to be some justification for it. Delegates surprised even themselves with the level of activity, which ranged from approving significant legislation to raising hopes again of a college super bowl to determine a national Division I-A football champion.

Before it ended, delegates approved sweeping new requirements that will give chief executive officers new power in controlling their coaches' outside income.

A college president will have to approve any contract that a coach may sign with a shoe or sporting equipment manufacturer.

The Convention also acted to begin reducing the costs and pressures of college athletics.

"It was a very harmonious convention. I was very impressed by it,"

Walter Byers, the NCAA's longtime executive director, said after it was over.

But while the delegates patted each other on the back as they departed for their homes, clouds of dissension already were on the horizon.

"There isn't any doubt that some of the things we will be discussing in the future will be drawing some opposition," said DeLoss Dodds, athletics director at the University of Texas, Austin. "It really should get interesting now."

"Let's just say that there are some big disagreements coming; and for the first time, it looks like everyone is going to get into the fight," said one coach, who asked not to be identified. "They've done all the easy stuff, now we are going to be fighting them tough."

At issue is who is going to control college athletics and what direction it will take between now and June when a special Convention will be held in Dallas.

Early in the Convention, the influential 44-member NCAA Presidents Commission met and ordered the special Convention to be held to approve what they euphemistically call "cost-containment measures."

"I think there is a genuine retrenchment going on within the academic institutions and the role of their athletics departments," said Michael McGee, athletics director at the University of Southern California.

Commission members themselves made it clear they are serious about making even more dramatic changes than even some people think possible.

Byers contends that the Presidents Commission has "set out to take intercollegiate athletics to a higher plane and they clearly want to keep the thing moving."

"It is my feeling that the Presidents Commission will be very good at pushing for things and the NCAA as a whole will be good at tempering it so major mistakes aren't made," Dodds said.

And several coaches, stung by cuts in grants-in-aid and jobs and the new regulations on outside income, are talking about how they can thwart any similar moves.

"Obviously, I have to start getting with my president more and make sure he understands my side of all this," said John Cooper, football coach at Arizona State University.

Cooper acknowledged that most coaches have been remiss in taking their views to their employers.

"That is something clearly that needs to be done," Cooper said.

But Byers and others insist that coaches and athletics directors are on the short end of the political stick on this. The Presidents Commission is the proverbial 300-pound gorilla who can do anything he wants.

"I don't know too many athletics directors and coaches who will survive very long if they aren't doing what their chief executive officer wants," Byers said.

He also disputed claims that cuts in practice time and games would hurt the quality of the game. "I just don't see it happening. The quality of competition must be maintained and I see nothing that will prevent it," Byers said.

As a result, many NCAA members are beginning to believe the face of college athletics is in for another change.

Out of the special Convention, there will be controversial proposals to tie the availability of scholarships to graduation rates and other cost-containment measures.

And there will be controversy, but that's nothing new for the NCAA, which was born in 1906 when President Theodore Roosevelt ordered educators to clean up college athletics.

"The NCAA was born in crisis, and that has always been its strength," said Byers. "We always do our best work when we have to throw ourselves into the breach."

NCAA too timid in seeking reform

Los Angeles Times

Excerpted from an editorial

"The campaign to clean up the scandals that taint intercollegiate athletics is moving forward, but the occasional signs of progress should not blur the fact that more needs to be done.

"...there is one more important step the NCAA and even the Presidents Commission seem reluctant to consider: eliminating freshman eligibility in certain high-visibility sports like football and basketball.

"The single most effective move that the NCAA could make to put college athletics back into proper perspective would be to keep first-year students out of such high-pressure sports until they have first proved that they can do college-level academic work.

"Some officials of the NCAA argue that the association must now take time to assess all the changes that have taken place over the last two years.

"Better to use the momentum developed in that time to push for even more reform. For even as the reforms made in the recent past have taken effect, new athletics scandals have surfaced to embarrass universities that are otherwise respectable."

"If these motions fail here (at the Convention in San Diego), we're in trouble at the special Convention.

"This turned out to be a wonderful straw vote on what we're (Presidents Commission) trying to accomplish, and it passed.

"...more effort must be forthcoming to clean them (college sports) up if all the chest-thumping by college administrators is to be taken seriously. It lends more value to that endangered basketball species, the 'suburban' player—some would simply substitute 'white'—whose game and skills are molded by hundreds of solitary hours shooting at a basket attached to the family garage.

How do five bowl winners go into four play-off spots?

By Hal Bock

The NCAA, always quick to spot a trend, decided recently to take one more look at a postseason play-off system for college football.

Just because the Fiesta Bowl showdown between the top two teams in the country gave a distinctly anticlimactic look to the other bowl games?

Just because NBC research reported a 25.1 rating and a shade under 22 million households, an all-time college football high, for the Penn State-Miami (Florida) show?

Just because there are vastly successful play-offs already operating in basketball, hockey, baseball and non-Division I-A football?

Are those any reasons to change the crazy quilt system we have always used before to decide the national championship?

Perhaps.

Penn State and Miami went down to the final play of the game, an appropriately dramatic finish for their pulsating confrontation.

"One play with everything riding on it," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. "You've got to do things in the clutch that require discipline and poise. It was the essence of competition and one of the reasons I've always been for a play-off."

There are three other reasons—Penn State's 1968, 1969 and 1973 teams, all unbeaten and all deprived of the national championship Paterno felt they would have won had they been able to play for it on the field.

Paterno's enthusiasm is contagious. You listen to the coach for 10 minutes and come away convinced that a play-off would be the easiest thing in the world to accomplish. But he faces strong opposition on this one.

For one reason or another, most NCAA member schools never have shared Paterno's play-off zest. Two years ago, the idea was rejected in a straw poll. Now, with the Fiesta Bowl evidence at hand—including, no doubt, the fancy $2.5 million paydays the game produced for Penn State

We're too easy on coaches who break rules, Miller says

By John McCormally

In 10 years as basketball coach at Ohio State University, Eldon Miller averaged 19 wins per season and took his teams to seven postseason tournaments. But now he is coaching at little University of Northern Iowa, a former state teachers college.

What forced him out at Ohio State? I asked Miller.

"We didn't win enough," he said. "What in heavens name is enough?" I asked.

"If you didn't lose a game," the soft-spoken Miller replied.

"Ohio State didn't agree with Eldon Miller's philosophy," he added.

I was talking with Miller, along with Gordon Eaton, new president of Iowa State University. Eaton had barely settled in, in his new job, when he fired football coach Jim Criner with two weeks remaining in last fall's football season, a month before the NCAA found Iowa State guilty of more than 20 rules violations. Eaton said the action would cost his athletics program $400,000 in legal fees, paying off Criner's contract and other costs.

Eldon Miller

It also has brought him loud criticism as well as support from football fans. But Eaton has no regrets.

One of his supporters is coach Miller, who thinks rule-breaking coaches aren't dealt with severely enough.

"People who violate rules should not be in coaching," he said. "We're not making enough of rules," he went on. "The moral fiber of our country is at stake. Anyone who allows anything that is a violation of rules in a university setting to happen is a total hypocrite."

"I don't think it's a matter of life and death, but by and large, the way we operate is going to determine the course of our country. I don't care if it's athletics or anything else."

Miller thinks it is not proper for the whole university to suffer for a coach's transgressions while the coach goes off to another job somewhere else.

Eaton, although he fired Criner, is less harsh. "His actions (in recruiting and other violations) were likely the result of pressures brought by alumni and other team boosters."

Miller agreed that outside pressure is a major factor and that neither schools nor the NCAA have jurisdiction over alumni and other team boosters.

But shouldn't someone have jurisdiction? Why doesn't the legislature make it a felony to tamper with school athletes or athletics programs? Call it contributing to the delinquency of minors. We'd like to think we can handle it ourselves, both responded.

Both agreed that college sports provides worthwhile entertainment to students and the community, but its emphasis has gotten out of proportion.

Eaton said he agreed generally with NCAA rules changes now under consideration that would reduce the length of the seasons and restrict freshman participation.

Schools like the University of Iowa, Notre Dame and Penn State seem able to be big winners over the years without scandal. Are they really that clean? I asked. Or clever at covering up? Can you play by the rules and still win big?

Of course, Miller replied. "You can do it. You must give the coach time; five years to build a program. You can't guarantee championships. But you can compete with anyone."

Listening to these two, the solution at first doesn't seem all that complicated. Have a set of rules, and people like Eaton and Miller who will demand their enforcement, and promptly fire anyone who doesn't play by them.

But to hear Eldon Miller's philosophy, and then hear him say "Ohio State didn't agree with Eldon Miller's philosophy," tells you how serious the problem is.

McCormally is a correspondent for the Harris News Service.

Lawmaker challenges NCAA on athletes' graduation rate

The sponsor of a bill demanding higher graduation rates for college athletes asks the NCAA to take action on improving those rates.

Rep. James Howard, D-New Jersey, whose bill failed to come to a vote in the 99th Congress, vowed to reintroduce the measure in the House of Representatives for the 100th Congress, which convenes next month, if the NCAA failed to act on the issue at its January Convention.

The NCAA opposes the legislation, saying it places unrealistic demands on colleges.

"I would be pleased if the NCAA had made my bill unnecessary by and Miami—the NCAA Postseason Football Committee will take another look. This is in keeping with the NCAA policy of carefully studying the impact of any change before implementing it. That explains, of course, why we now have three-point field goals from 19 feet, 9 inches in basketball.

DeLoss Dodds, athletics director at the University of Texas, Austin, chairs the subcommittee charged with examining the play-off idea and reporting its findings to the full committee at its next meeting April 8-10. Dodds, taking the traditional conservative approach, warned that circumstances had changed little since the play-off proposal was last rejected.

The message is clear. Don't get your hopes up, Joe.

One thing that certainly has not changed is the blissful marriage of college football and the bowls. They have prospered together, and neither shows any great inclination to change that cozy situation.

Paterno understands the politics of the situation, and he includes the bowls in his play-off plan. His suggestion is that the four major bowl-game winners advance to national semifinals. What would be wrong with that?

Well, for one thing, each bowl prefers to believe its queen is the prettiest, its festival the gaudiest, its game the biggest. They already share the postseason spotlight grudgingly at best. To be reduced to quarterfinal status certainly would not thrill any of the pastel-blazer crowd.

What's more, thanks to Paterno and Penn State, the Fiesta Bowl has achieved major bowl status. Perhaps a solution would be to rotate the five bowls, letting one host the title game each year.

But if you have five major bowl winners, which one doesn't make it to the semifinals? Would you like the job of explaining to the odd team out, just why it is not in?

Bock writes for the Associated Press.

enacting long-overdue changes at its January convention," Howard told United Press International. "Support will continue to grow for my bill because the Federal government should not be an accomplice in the exploitation of athletes."

A proposal to establish qualitative academic progress requirements for eligibility of student-athletes in Division I failed by a vote of 130 to 176 during the recent NCAA Convention.

Howard's bill would strip Federal tax deduction status from contributions to university athletics departments in which fewer than three-fourths of the scholarship athletes graduate.

"The Federal government has every right to ensure that a tax deduction is being used in the manner in which it is intended. The time has arrived for Congress to consider whether this particular deduction is warranted or deserved," Howard said.

Over a five-year period, under Howard's plan, a school must graduate at least 75 percent of all students who attended for three years or more on an athletics scholarship.

Failure to meet that cutoff would automatically strip the tax deduction eligibility of contributions to the athletics department and any organization funding university athletics. Under current law, an individual can deduct contributions to an athletics department because they are used for educational purposes.

Howard's measure has received the support of several high-profile coaches, notably Notre Dame head men's basketball coach Richard "Digger" Phelps, who has appeared in support of the bill on Capitol Hill.

But since the measure was referred last year to the House Ways and Means Committee's Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures, no hearings or votes have taken place.

NCAA officials call Howard's measure—particularly the three-fourths cutoff—unrealistic. They claim only about 10 percent of Division I colleges would make the cut. The NCAA also argues there is no significant difference between the graduation rates of athletes and nonathletes.

Howard said the NCAA's only attempt at addressing the issue is the enactment of Proposition 48, which requires minimum academic performance standards for incoming freshman athletes.

"Proposition 48 conveniently places the responsibility for educating athletes solely at the high school level," he said. "It warns high schools that their graduates may be ineligible for freshman-year play, but it says nothing about the type of education the athletes will receive once they arrive on a college campus."

"Why doesn't the NCAA subject its own institutions to some form of accountability?"

retaining an element of suspense until the final buzzer. That's fun for the fans. As for the shot itself, you haven't heard complaints from players.

"That doesn't mean the three-pointer is a proven stroke of genius. Many contend that at its current 19-9 distance, the shot is too close. Some say it has encouraged poor shot selection, though moving the line farther out merely would increase outlandish bombing by the likes of Northeastern's Reggie Lewis. Given current fouling rules, the three-pointer also serves as a reward for those who engage in intentional fouling to catch up."

"There's no magic to making rules. Room must always be left for amendment and for outright abolition if that's the wisest course. But let's give the three-pointer a try first and evaluate it based on reason rather than make an emotional rush to judgment."

The proposal's intent is to permit each member division to determine the maximum amount of financial assistance that can be received by a student-athlete in that division so long as no division adopts a maximum amount of assistance that exceeds the cost of attendance incurred by students enrolled in a comparable program at the institution.

Committee on Infractions takes action against four schools

The NCAA's Committee on Infractions has voted to accept the corrective actions taken by Tulane University, which included termination of the men's basketball program for NCAA rule violations found in the program.

The university's report to the NCAA revealed violations in men's basketball that involved improper inducements to prospective student-athletes, excessive recruiting contacts, extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes, improper certification of compliance with NCAA legislation by men's basketball coaching staff members, and use of funds from outside sources to supplement the men's basketball recruiting budget and to provide cash to student-athletes and coaches.

In addition, violations of the NCAA's ethical-conduct legislation were found by the Committee on Infractions in regard to the former men's head basketball coach and one former assistant basketball coach based on their involvement in several serious violations.

The NCAA's report to the university emphasized that the ethical-conduct findings were based only on the violations found and not on any lack of candor or cooperation on the part of the former coaches. The two former coaches will be permitted to petition the Committee on Infractions subsequent to August 17, 1989, to have the ethical-conduct findings removed from NCAA records.

Subsequent to the university's appearance before the Committee on Infractions, it was determined that another former assistant coach, Tom Green, who now is the head basketball coach at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck, New Jersey, should be requested to appear before the committee to discuss his possible involvement in the violations. Following Green's appearance, the committee determined that there was no sufficient reason to find that he engaged in improper conduct under NCAA rules, and the committee voted to close its consideration of the matter as to him.

The university's corrective actions that were accepted by the NCAA included: (1) the termination of the men's basketball program and receipt of the resignations of the men's basketball coaching staff; (2) a review of other major sports programs at the university; (3) a requirement for annual audits of the internal accounts of booster organizations; (4) establishment of educational programs concerning drugs and gambling for student-athletes at the university, and (5) implementation of a mandatory drug-testing program for all student-athletes.

University of California, Los Angeles
The NCAA has announced that an ineligible student-athlete represented the University of California, Los Angeles, on its 400-meter relay team that placed fifth in the 1985 NCAA Division I Women's Outdoor Track Championships.

It was determined that the young woman's performance in the 400-meter relay would be stricken from NCAA championship records. Also, the four points earned by the relay team will be deleted from the team's total, and the team's standing will be adjusted from a tie for fourth place to a tie for fifth place.

The student-athlete had received monthly expense payments under the Athletes Assistance Program of the Canadian Track and Field Association, which are prohibited by NCAA legislation. The NCAA Committee on Infractions took no further action in the case and was satisfied that the university was unaware of the improper payments.

Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville

The Committee on Infractions has announced that the record of participation by Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, in the 1986 NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship will be deleted due to the ineligible participation of one student-athlete in that event.

During the spring of 1986, the university discovered that one student-athlete had provided false information to the university in order to maintain sufficient academic credits to participate in the final seven regular-season games of the 1985-86 season and was ineligible when the university competed in two NCAA postseason games.

The violation was considered secondary in nature due to the university's self-disclosure of the matter to the NCAA and because the university had no reason at the time to question the young man's eligibility. No additional penalty was imposed by the NCAA.

Kenyon College

The Committee on Infractions has voted to announce its reprimand of Kenyon College for permitting its men's and women's swimming and diving teams to practice at a location that was more than 100 miles from the site of competition during a spring trip in 1985.

The college paid expenses for its swimming and diving teams to practice for approximately two weeks in Florida prior to participating in the 1985 Division III Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Championships in Atlanta, Georgia.

NCAA regulations prohibit the payment of expenses to practice at sites that exceed 100 miles from the site of competition. The violation was considered inadvertent in nature, and it was determined that a public announcement should be made in order to call attention to the proper application of NCAA legislation.

Smith averaging 23 victories a season at North Carolina

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

A 25-victory season is a notable achievement in men's Division I basketball, even in this era of longer schedules and expanded tournament play. Only 23 teams reached that goal last season—eight percent of the division membership—and one of them lost 11 times; another 12 times.

With that in mind, coach Dean Smith's record over the past two decades at North Carolina truly is remarkable. He has averaged 25.65 victories per season, with a 513-124 record and an .805 winning percentage. (Only 20 Division I teams last season won at least 80 percent of their games.)

In Smith's first five seasons at North Carolina, his teams played only a little more than 20 games per season, averaging 13.2 victories and 7.4 losses. Thus, his entire 25-year career shows an average of 23.16 victories per season, entering the current season.

Crum: 24.67 for 15 years

Louisville coach Denny Crum, who played and coached under John Wooden at UCLA, is the career leader among active coaches who have at least five seasons of head-coaching in Division I, with 24.67 victories per season for 15 seasons. Next is Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas at 24.22, then Larry Brown of Kansas (who played under Smith at North Carolina) with 24 victories per season for his five seasons of college coaching, the first two at UCLA. Smith ranks fourth, with Syracuse's Jim Boheim fifth.

Tarkanian's 6-3 NCAA tournament record when he coached at Long Beach State was vacated by the NCAA Executive Committee. With those six victories, his average would be 24.56—still second. Brown, however, would be first at 25 victories per season with his 5-1 NCAA tournament record (second place) in 1980 at UCLA, which also has been vacated. Smith the real leader?

One could argue, though, that Smith is the real leader, because he has averaged 25.65 victories—well above Crum—for more years (20) than Crum (15) and Tarkanian (18) have been head-coaching. Here is the top 10 entering this season:

Name, college, seasons #	Average
1. Denny Crum, Louisville (15)	24.67
2. Jerry Tarkanian, UNLV (18)	24.22
3. Larry Brown, Kansas (5)	24.00
4. Dean Smith, North Caro. (25)	23.16
5. Jim Boheim, Syracuse (10)	23.00
6. John Thompson, Georgetown (14)	22.93
7. John Chaney, Temple (14)	22.50
8. L. Carnesecca, St. John's (N.Y.) (17)	22.33
9. Pat Foster, Houston (6)	22.33
10. Eddie Sutton, Kentucky (17)	22.00

#Entering 1987 season.

Remember, this list includes only those with at least five head-coaching seasons in Division I. Among those with less than five years in Division I is Chicago State's Bob Hallberg, with 22.67 victories per season. A total of 29 Division I head coaches have averaged 20 victories over at least five seasons, and all but a few have five years in Division I.

II-III leaders

Division II features a tight four-man race with Wright State's Ralph Underhill on top, nudging Sacred Heart's Dave Bike by only 0.13. In Division III, Roanoke's Ed Green is first by a scant 0.03 victories per season over Wittenberg's Larry Hunter. Here are the top five (and ties) in each division, using the

Stanley leads women

Among women's Division I head coaches, Old Dominion's Marianne Stanley leads a formidable top-10 group with a remarkable 27.89 victories per

Wyoming's Lisa Daniels ranks second in Division I assists

Southern Mississippi (90-92) and Mississippi State (68-73)—both on the road. In his 22 seasons, Bridges' teams have played 51 games against Division I foes plus many more against strong Division II teams (many of which have since moved up to Division I). Over the past six years, his teams have the worst nonconference record in the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin and the best conference record. How many Division I teams in the Stanford, Rice, Harvard, Yale category have squads with higher average entrance-test scores than the student body average? (Ed Alsene, Illinois Wesleyan SID)

Army senior Laurie Goetz is among Division II scoring leaders

Pan American's Charles "Junior" Ray, a 6-9 senior center, was benched for one game after he gained 20 pounds during the holidays to go over the 300-pound limit he and coach Kevin Wall had agreed upon. Running and dieting, Ray lost 19 pounds in three days to edge down under 300. Playing at 292, he helped the Broncos win three straight, two on the road. After his crucial steal to save a 64-61 victory at Sam Houston State, assistant coach Dave Brown commented: "Junior grabbed that ball as if it looked like a big cheeseburger to him." (Jim McKone, Pan American SID)

Otterbein senior Dick Hempy was 20-for-25 from the field and 12-for-15 from the line for 52 points against Baldwin-Wallace, sending him past 2,000 career points (2,016) in his 13th game of the season. He is the first Ohio Athletic Conference player in 17 years to score more than 50, and he also set a school scoring record and had a career-high 19 rebounds. Said Hempy: "The way the guys were getting me the ball the last 10 minutes—right in between the defenders—makes me feel good, that people care that much about me." (Ed Syguda, Otterbein SID)

Jeff Price, Georgia Southern assistant men's basketball coach, was among the 4,000-plus fans who greeted Southern's Division I-AA national championship football team upon its return from the Diamond Bowl. Said Price: "This is a great crowd—I ought to rush out and try to schedule a basketball game." (Tim Crosby, Georgia Southern assistant SID)

Doggie in the window

Eastern Connecticut State men's head coach Dan Switchenko was driving the lead van when three vans left together for a game at Fitchburg State. About halfway there, the second van driver thought he saw the lead van taking an exit off the highway. The third van followed, and after 20 minutes, junior John Theriault noticed the "lead" van was empty, save for a dog visible in the back window (it also had a Connecticut state seal on the back and was similar in color). Meanwhile, Switchenko slowed, then stopped for 10 minutes in hopes the other vans would catch up, but to no avail. He notified Massachusetts state police upon arrival. As it turned out, the lost vans arrived in plenty of time and ECSU won, 75-52. Theriault capped the evening when asked by a youngster at a restaurant after the game if he played for the Celtics. Replied Theriault, who plays about seven minutes per game: "The Celtics? I don't even play for Eastern." (Bob Molta, Eastern Connecticut State SID)

Greg Grant, Trenton State, is a Division III three-point leader

Can you top these?

Potsdam State now owns a 46-game winning streak, extending its own men's Division III record. The Bears also have won their last 39 home games. (Dan Williams, Potsdam State SID)

In the first week of women's play in the North Central Conference, league players shot a collective 74.8 percent at the free-throw line. Can any league top that? (Grant Burger, North Dakota State women's SID)

Murray State sophomore Jeff Martin approaches three-point plays like Smith-Barney—he earns them the good, old-fashioned way. Over six games, he converted 14 of 15 from inside the 21-foot stripe by going strong to the hoop, getting the basket and the foul, then hitting the free throw. At the same time, he was 5-for-10 from beyond the stripe. Can any player top that? (Craig Bohnert, Murray State SID)

Niagara senior Gary Bossert, with a three-year scoring average of 5.3, is at 14.6 this season, thanks to the three-pointer. In a January 7 road game at Siena, he was 12-for-14 from 21-foot range for a career-high 37 points. He missed early, but then made his last 11 straight. Afterward, coach Andy Walker termed it "the most unbelievable shooting I've seen since the days of Calvin Murphy (1970 Niagara graduate)." Niagara won, 97-88. Can any player top 12-for-14? (Mike Jankowski, Niagara SID)

Bossert's 85.7 percent is the highest we've heard of, using a minimum of eight three-point shots made. Most attempts? Sixteen by Nevada-Las Vegas' Freddie Banks vs. Western Kentucky back on November 29. The best team performance we know of is Western Kentucky's 15-for-18 for an 85.3 percentage vs. North Carolina-Asheville January 14. Most attempts? Thirty by Providence (14 made) against Maine December 12.

Our midseason national survey will be in The NCAA News January 28, covering all Division I games through January 19. And once again, remember that the difference between the NCAA three-point distance and the pro distance measured to the backboard is 2 feet 9 inches, or 21 vs. 23-9 at the top of the key (the 19-9 measurement is to the middle of the hoop).

Women's coaching alma maters

Tina Krah, a teammate of three Division I head coaches—Marianne Stanley of Old Dominion, Theresa Grentz of Rutgers and Rene Portland of Penn State—on Immaculata's AIAW national champions of 1974, is the new head coach at San Jose State. She transferred to Edinboro and earned her undergraduate degree in 1977.

Ron Mitchell, new women's head coach at Alabama State, has had an unusual career. His career record as a women's head coach (January 14 notes) is 11-0. He took over a mediocre 10-7 Kentucky State team in 1981 and led it to the NAIA championship. Before that, he was one of the first black head coaches in the nation in men's Division I basketball in 1971 at Boston University.

Basketball notes

season, with Long Beach State's Joan Bonvicini second over Georgia's Andy Landers. It is formidable because the 25.12 victories per season by Texas' Jody Conradt is only fourth place, and the 10th-place average of 22.69 is well above the 10th-place figure in the men's table:

Name, college, seasons #	Average
1. Marianne Stanley, Old Dom. (9)	27.89
2. Joan Bonvicini, L. Beach St. (7)	26.43

9. Rene Portland, Penn St. (10)	22.70
10. Marynell Meadows, Fla. St. (16)	22.69

#Entering 1987 season.

One could argue that Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore belongs in the top 10 with his 29.25 average over four seasons because even if he finished with zero victories this season, he would have a 23.40 average over five seasons.

In Division II, Cal Poly-Pomona's Darlene May is far in front, and Salem State's Tim Shea is on top in Division III:

Winning formula

Illinois Wesleyan coach Dennis Bridges has an interesting winning formula at this high-level academic school in Division III where the average ACT score is 25.

He recruits players whose average entrance-test scores are above the student-body average, then plays nonconference games against Division I schools and succeeds in conference play. For example, this season five of his nine lettermen qualify for academic all-America, and a sixth is a "B" student in biology. His team played three Division I teams with the usual results—three losses—but the Titans nearly upset court with a career free-throw average above 80 percent. Off the court, she was second and third on the dean's list her first two semesters and has a perfect 4.000 grade-point average her last three semesters—straight A's from someone with the initials A.A. (John Balkam, Pace promotions director)

Oklahoma State's Traci Wheeler, a junior from Edmond, Oklahoma, maintains a 3.500 career grade-point average, including a perfect 4.000 last semester. The 5-6 guard was a freshman walk-on and received a scholarship this year. (Kent Blessing, Oklahoma State assistant SID)

Wake Forest senior Amy Privette, a first-team academic all-America last year, is a winner on the court, too. She had 26 points with 10-for-17 shooting, seven rebounds, five assists and four steals in a 78-77 victory over Old Dominion before a record home crowd of 1,500. Two games later, she had 22 points in 27 minutes in a 90-54 romp over Clemson. (Bert Woodard, Wake Forest assistant SID)

Raveling's readers

Southern California coach George Raveling says he is an avid reader and believes that "one can enjoy the present, touch the past and reach the future through reading." He hopes to increase awareness of this in youngsters by lecturing junior high school students in the Los Angeles area (30 schools are participating). Along with Trojan senior Rod Keller (a Pacific-10 Conference all-academic second teamer), he already has visited several junior high schools. Book covers and 6,000 tickets to Trojan home games also were distributed with the help of radio station KDAY. (Nancy Mazmanian, Southern California assistant SID)

Quotes of the week

Tampa men's coach Richard Schmidt, trying to control his excitement upon learning his team had been rated No. 1 in Division II: "Well, I suppose that and 60 cents will get you a cup of coffee in a lot of places." (Larry Grubburg, Tampa SID)

Asked why his Case Reserve team played in five regular-season tournaments at the start of this season, men's coach Bill Sudeck replied: "Any time

Summary of NCAA Council actions

Following is a listing of all actions taken by the Council in its pre-Convention meeting January 4-6 (1986 Council) in San Diego. Actions dealing with legislation at the 1987 Convention are excluded inasmuch as they are part of the record of that Convention.

Interpretations

All new or revised interpretations approved by the Council will appear in issues of The NCAA News, which constitutes official circularization per Constitution 6-2. Some appear elsewhere in this issue.

In addition to those, the Council:

Referred to the new Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism a review of the provisions of Case No. 368.

Agreed to review Case No. 108 in April.

Legislation

Agreed to present legislation at the 1988 Convention to permit both a National Collegiate Championship and a division championship in the same sport.

Agreed to present legislation at the 1988 Convention to grant the same Bylaw 1-2 exception in basketball that currently is granted in football for institutions with late-admissions procedures.

Corrected an error in the October 1986 Council minutes, noting that the Council had voted not to sponsor an amendment to Bylaw 5-1(j) to exempt foreign students from the test-score requirements of that legislation.

Agreed to review legislation in April that would eliminate or significantly modify the bowl-game invitation deadlines set forth in Bylaws 2-2(j) and (k).

Appointment

Appointed Albert M. Witte, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, to the Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals replacing Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University.

Membership

Referred to the staff the steering committees' suggestions regarding means of monitoring member institutions' compliance with the minimum-contests and minimum-participants requirements set forth in Bylaw 11-4(b) and agreed that for a one-year trial period, Division I member conferences should be asked to provide such monitoring of their own member institutions, with the staff to monitor the independent institutions.

The Division II Steering Committee approved a request by West Texas State University for a transfer of district membership from District 5 to District 6.

That steering committee denied a request by Michigan Technological University for a geographical waiver per Bylaw 11-2-4(g).

The Division III Steering Committee elected the Northern Collegiate Hockey Conference to conference membership and granted a request by Massachusetts Maritime Academy for a waiver of the sponsorship of a winter sport per Constitution 4-2(h)-(3).

Miscellaneous

Agreed that some committee should be asked to consider the subject of multidivision classification and all of its ramifications.

Approved for the coming year proposed revisions of the Association's procedures for determination of individual eligibility, including the establishment of an eligibility hearing officer on the national office staff who would be empowered to determine a student-athlete's eligibility; agreed to implement as many of the revisions as possible and to submit legislation for the 1988 Convention to implement the rest.

Committee reports

The Council received reports, with no actions taken, from the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification, the Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee and the Committee on Infractions, the latter two involving appearances by members of the committees before the Council. Actions taken on other committee reports:

Division II Steering Committee: Noted that the committee will contact the Division II Championships Committee to express concern regarding the handling of the Division II cross country championships, in which the actual finish was invalidated after a number of runners were steered off the course by unknown individuals.

Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals: Denied an appeal by Pepperdine University in behalf of one student-athlete, noting that no new evidence had been submitted.

Insurance Committee: Noted that the current members of the committee will be used as consultants by the staff when the committee is abolished.

Executive Director Search: Agreed that a major topic on the Council's April agenda will be determination of the process by which the final choice of a replacement for the executive director will be approved.

Following are the actions taken by the 1987 Council in its January 10 (post-Convention) meeting:

Interpretations

In addition to interpretations that will appear in issues of The NCAA News, the Council took these actions:

Agreed to consider in its April meeting definitions of "operating budget" for purposes of the provisions of Convention Proposal No. 61.

Concluded that those student-athletes currently under sanctions for misuse of complimentary admissions are not permitted to take advantage of the new "wild-card" admission from another student-athlete, per Convention Proposal No. 98-B as amended by No. 98-2.

Membership

Granted an appeal by Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck, and Duquesne University that they be placed on probationary status per Convention Proposal No. 111 immediately, rather than remaining in unclassified status for a period of one year. The Council concluded that the institutions should be considered on probation for the remainder of the year that they would have spent as unclassified members, and that they be unclassified again for 1987-88.

Appointments

Reappointed Merrily Dean Baker, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, for a five-year term on the Executive Committee and reappointed Francis W. Bonner, Furman University, for a three-year term on that committee, noting that a pattern of term expirations on the committee through the year 2000 had been developed to assure appropriate representation on that body.

Made numerous appointments to committees that were established, combined, merged or restructured due to Convention action. Those appointments will be announced after appropriate notification procedures have been completed.

Miscellaneous

Agreed that the newly expanded Academic Requirements Committee and the new Special Council Subcommittee to Review Academic Standards should review the provisions of unsuccessful Proposal No. 46 and submit recommendations to the Council.

Pledged the Council's assistance to the Presidents Commission in the latter's preparations for the special Convention to be held June 29-30, 1987, in Dallas.

Presidents Commission issues report to NCAA Convention

Following is the text of the NCAA Presidents Commission's report to the 81st annual Convention in San Diego. The report was prepared by the Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility, chaired by Chancellor Ira Michael Heyman, University of California, Berkeley, and then approved for submission to the Convention by the full Commission.

The report represents the official call for a special NCAA Convention, which will be held June 28-30, 1987, at Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas, Texas. More detailed information regarding the Convention will be announced as it is developed by the Commission.

The following represents the complete text of the report as it was distributed to delegates at the Convention, except that references to withdrawal of proposals at that Convention no longer are germane and have been deleted.

Resolution A: recruiting of student-athletes

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principle that college and university staff should respect the student-athlete's right to enjoy the full benefits of high school life—to attend classes, to study and to participate in the full range of extracurricular activities; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission finds that additional restraints should be placed on recruiting activities;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission supports, in principle, pending legislation (NCAA Council Proposal Nos. 47, 48 and 49) that is aimed at sensibly reducing the intensity of athletics recruiting;

Now, Therefore, Be It Further Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to develop additional legislation in this area, if warranted, for review by the Presidents Commission, at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at establishing additional restraints on the length of the recruiting periods in all sports, the number and timing of paid visits by prospects to member institution campuses, and the "extra" recruiting opportunities inherent in high school all-star games and in sports camps and clinics.

Resolution B: compensation of coaches

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principle that staff members of NCAA member institutions shall not engage in any activities that create a conflict of interest between the staff members' assigned functions and any other interest or obligation; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission believes that no one employed by an NCAA member institution should devote to private purposes any portion of time due to the member institution, nor should any outside employment interfere with the performance of institutional duties; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission believes that no one employed by an NCAA member institution should make or participate in the making of a decision if there exists a financial conflict of interest;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission supports, in principle, pending legislation (NCAA Council Proposal Nos. 50, 51, 52 and 53) that is aimed at ensuring that the chief executive officer of an NCAA member institution is informed of and approves of all compensation arrangements enjoyed by that institution's athletics staff members;

Now, Therefore, Be It Further Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to develop additional legislation in this area, if warranted, for review by the Presidents Commission at its April 1987 meeting.

Resolution C: playing and practice seasons

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principle that reasonable limits should be placed on the length of playing and practice seasons for all sports so that student-athletes are afforded reasonable opportunity to attend classes, to study and to participate in a full range of extracurricular activities;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission opposes, in principle, pending legislation (Proposal Nos. 127, 129 and 131) that would increase playing or practice seasons;

Now, Therefore, Be It Further Resolved, that the Presidents Commission requests that the Special NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Playing Seasons complete its work expeditiously for referral to the Ad Hoc Committee no later than February 15, 1987;

Now, Therefore, Be It Further Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility, upon receipt of the recommendations of the Special NCAA Subcommittee to Review Playing Seasons, to draft appropriate legislation for review by the Presidents Commission, at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at reducing or constraining playing and practice seasons in all sports.

Resolution D: size of coaching staffs

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principle that the size of coaching staffs should be limited to the extent possible and should bear some reasonable relationship to the size of team squads; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission believes that the current ratio of permissible coaches to numbers of student-athletes in some sports may lead to an unwarranted use of institutional resources;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to draft appropriate legislation for review by the Presidents Commission at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at reducing or limiting the number of coaches an institution can employ.

Resolution E: financial aid

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principle that reasonable limits should be placed on the amount of funds NCAA member institutions expend for athletics-related financial aid; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission finds that the current amount of funds expended on such financial aid by NCAA member institutions often constitutes excessive use of institutional resources; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission believes that the most equitable way of reducing the amount of funds institutions expend for financial aid is either to limit further or otherwise constrain the number of grants-in-aid permitted in all sports or to limit further the number of grants-in-aid permitted in nonrevenue-generating sports; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission believes that the most effective way of ensuring that NCAA member institutions administer grants-in-aid responsibly is to require that the number of grants-in-aid permitted in a sport be dependent on the graduation rates of student-athletes in that sport; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission finds that a reduction in the number of grants-in-aid permitted in some sports would not adversely affect competitive balance among NCAA member institutions and would enhance their ability to maintain broad-based athletics programs, allowing more students to participate in more sports;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to draft appropriate legislation for review by the Presidents Commission, at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at reducing the number of grants-in-aid permitted in any or all sports;

Now, Therefore, Be It Further Resolved, that the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to draft appropriate legislation for review by the Presidents Commission, at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at relating the number of grants-in-aid permitted in a sport to the graduation rates of student-athletes in that sport.

Resolution F: special NCAA Convention

Whereas, the Presidents Commission affirms the principles that a proper balance should be maintained between intercollegiate athletics programs and other institutional programs and that participation in intercollegiate athletics programs should complement the undergraduate experiences of student-athletes and should not detract from their academic performance; and,

Whereas, the Presidents Commission authorizes the Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility to draft appropriate legislation for review by the Presidents Commission, at its April 1987 meeting, aimed at maintaining balance in the areas of recruiting, coaches' compensation, playing and practice seasons, size of coaching staffs, and financial aid;

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the Presidents Commission calls for a special Convention for June 1987 for consideration by NCAA member institutions of such legislation as the Presidents Commission may propose. The special Convention shall be limited to those issues that relate to containing the costs of intercollegiate athletics programs and to maintaining a proper balance between intercollegiate athletics programs and other institutional programs, such issues to include the areas of recruiting, coaches' compensation, playing and practice seasons, coaching staff size, and financial aid.

Oregon asks for ruling on constitutionality of drug testing

University of Oregon President Paul Olum says that he asked for the state attorney general's opinion on constitutional issues raised by the university's testing of athletes for illegal drug use.

"We believe this is the best way of resolving all the questions various groups or individuals have raised about the effect of the drug-testing program on the rights of our young athletes," Olum said.

He said he could receive a response from Attorney General Dave Frohn-mayer in six to eight weeks.

The university filed its request with the Oregon System of Higher Education. State officials may expand the request before passing it on to the attorney general's office so other Oregon institutions could be included.

Oregon State University also has a drug-testing program for its athletes; and other schools, such as Eastern Oregon State College, are reviewing proposals to begin drug testing.

Last fall, the University of Oregon began requiring all intercollegiate athletes to participate in a drug-test program.

"We are confident that our program is constitutional and that no athletes' rights have been violated," said Dan Williams, the university's vice-president for administration.

He said the American Civil Liberties Union and the Associated Students of the University of Oregon believe the program is unconstitutional.

"We have listened carefully to all of their reasons and arguments for challenging the program and find that we do not agree with their conclusions," Williams told the Associated Press.

"Nevertheless, we recognize that any action that touches upon citizens' rights and the protection of those constitutional rights must be treated very seriously," he said. "We believe the requested opinion from the state attorney general... is the best possible forum for making sure that all questions regarding the constitutionality of the program are answered and for resolving these issues as expeditiously as possible."

The university has had a random drug-testing program for varsity football players for the past three years. The program was expanded to include all sports last fall.

In the Oregon program, all athletes are tested at the beginning of the season. In addition, random checks are made during the rest of the academic year.

The urine samples are tested for alcohol, marijuana, heroin, cocaine, methamphetamines and other drugs.

Wide receiver chosen again

Wide receiver Jeff Tiefertaler of South Dakota State, who caught 73 passes for 1,534 yards, was the only repeater on the Associated Press Little All-America football team for 1986.

Tiefertaler played in 36 regular-season games and averaged 100.6 reception yards per game, including 139.4 this season.

The other wide receiver was Wayne Ralph of Whitworth, who caught 105 passes for 1,204 yards and six TDs. Tight end Rich Schiele of Knox caught 48 passes for 695 yards and four scores.

They were joined on the team by North Dakota State quarterback Jeff Bentrin, who won the Harlon Hill Trophy as the outstanding player in the NCAA's Division II, and Texas A&I running back Johnny Bailey, who set a college football rushing record for a freshman.

Bentrin, who quarterbacked North Dakota State to its third national championship in four years, led the nation in scoring with 23 touchdowns, while Bailey became the third player in college football history to rush for 2,000 yards in a season. He carried 271 times for 2,011 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Bailey's running mate in the backfield was 250-pound Christian Okoye of Azusa Pacific, who led all NAIA schools in rushing with 1,680 yards on 235 carries, a 7.15 average, and in scoring with 21 touchdowns.

Rounding out the offensive unit were tackles Jim Angelo of Indiana (Pennsylvania) and Joe Billingsley of Jacksonville State, guards Joe Felton of Albion and Moses Horn of Texas A&I, center Jerry Gilinsky of South Dakota, and placekicker Tim Saiz, a sophomore from New Mexico Highlands.

The offensive line consisted of Dan Galante of Lawrence, Dan Holland of Denison, Pierce Holt of Angelo State, Rich Romber of Union (New York) and Lynn Thomsen of Augustana (Illinois), which won the NCAA Division III championship for the fourth year in a row.

The linebackers were Keith Coleman of Nebraska-Omaha, Jim Dick of North Dakota State and Kevin Johnson of Concord (West Virginia). In the secondary were Mike Grant of Albion, Todd Salat of South Dakota and Freddie Thomas of Troy State. The punter was freshman Tim Baer of Colorado Mines.

Broderick Cup presentation

Kamie Ethridge, basketball player at the University of Texas, Austin, accepts the Broderick Cup from entertainer Dinah Shore during the awards banquet in San Diego earlier this month. The cup is awarded to the top women's collegiate athlete each year.

Georgia Southern's Ham leads all-stars

Tracy Ham, the only quarterback in college football history to rush for 3,000 yards and pass for 5,000 in a career, was named to the Associated Press Division I-AA all-America football team for 1986 after leading Georgia Southern to its second consecutive NCAA Division I-AA championship.

Ham, who rushed for 1,048 yards and 18 touchdowns and passed for 1,772 yards and nine touchdowns, was joined on the first team by teammate Fred Stokes, a 250-pound offensive tackle who helped clear the way as Georgia Southern finished second nationally in rushing, averaging 307.7 yards a game.

Joining Ham in the first-team backfield are running backs Kenny Gamble of Colgate and Mike Clark of Akron. Gamble led the division in rushing with 1,816 yards, an average of 165.09 a game, while Clark finished second with 1,786 yards, a 162.36-yard average. He also averaged 7.3 yards per carry.

The wide receivers are Roy Banks of Eastern Illinois and Mark Carrier of Nicholls State. ## Athletes make up for subpar record with good grades

University of Southwestern Louisiana student-athletes, who haven't been extraordinarily successful of late on either the playing fields or in the gymnasiums, have more than redeemed themselves in the classroom, the school announced.

A news release said the composite grade-point average for all of USL's 270 student-athletes during the 1986 fall term was the highest in 10 years and that 58 of them—21.5 percent—were honor-roll students.

Additionally, it said, four scholarship athletes—three freshmen and a sophomore—compiled 4.000 grade-point averages, 14 others averaged between 3.900 and 3.500, and 40 others had between 3.500 and 3.000.

Legislative Assistance

1987 Column No. 4

Bylaw 5-1-(j)—combined test scores

The NCAA Council has approved an interpretation of Bylaw 5-1-(j) regarding ACT and SAT scores for students entering NCAA Division I member institutions during the 1987-88 academic year.

For students utilizing the SAT examination, the highest scores achieved on the verbal and math sections of the SAT from two different national testing dates may be combined in determining whether the student has met the minimum test-score requirement of Bylaw 5-1-(j).

For students utilizing the ACT examination, the highest scores achieved on the individual subtests of the ACT from more than one national testing date may be combined in determining whether the student's composite score has met the minimum test-score requirement of Bylaw 5-1-(j).

The Council will determine this year whether to extend this opportunity to combine scores achieved on more than one national testing date to student-athletes initially entering Division I institutions subsequent to the 1987-88 academic year.

Institutional endorsement—Proposal No. 51

The NCAA Council has confirmed an interpretation provided by the chair during the general business session of the 1987 Convention in regard to the application of Proposal No. 51 (institutional endorsement). The Council confirmed that if an athletics department staff member appears in an advertisement or other form of paid endorsement of a commercial business, product or service, he or she could not be identified as being affiliated with a particular member institution without the prior approval of the institution. This interpretation was reported by the chair in the afternoon business session January 9 to clarify an earlier response to a question regarding this issue.

Financial aid limitation—Proposal No. 44

The NCAA Council has reviewed the application of Bylaws 10-1-(a) and 11-1-(i) to 1987 Convention Proposal No. 44. Bylaw 11-1-(i) provides in part that Division subdivisions may not vote separately on the definition of "commonly accepted educational expenses." It is the Council's interpretation that this regulation would take precedence over the normal legislative principle that only those institutions that sponsor football vote on legislative issues that pertain only to that sport. Accordingly, an amendment from any Division I sponsor designed to increase the maximum amount of financial aid that an individual student-athlete could receive under this regulation would be voted upon by the full Division I membership. This would be the case even if the proposal pertained only to the sport of football.

Basketball coaching staff—Proposal No. 136

After the adoption of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 136 at the Division I business session, the NCAA Council confirmed previous interpretations concerning the application of NCAA regulations to existing personnel contracts. In accordance with previous interpretations, the Council determined that Division I member institutions cannot employ a part-time assistant coach (in addition to the head coach and two full-time assistants) in the sport of basketball beyond August 1, 1987, unless the institution had in effect prior to the adjournment (6:30 p.m. Pacific time, January 9, 1987) of the 1987 Convention a written obligation to the part-time assistant through academic tenure, an enforceable contract or a formal security of employment commitment. Those commitments that are not in writing must be terminated by August 1, 1987. Further, an existing written contract could not be renewed beyond its expiration or after August 1, 1987.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Reducing the size of front court would stimulate game, Krause says

As a long-time member of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee (and currently its chair), Jerry Krause has seen many rules changes take place in the game, most recently the adoption of a shot clock and three-point play.

Apparently, he would have preferred different changes. "What I'm opposed to is the whole package of the (shot) clock and the three-point shot," Krause told Associated Press writer Bernie Wilson. "I think instead of trying to create a balance and stimulate action by modifying the time element and then all the problems that come with that, we should approach the action and balance the situation by controlling space."

His suggestion is to paint rear-boundary arcs on each half of the court, extending to about six feet inside the current halfcourt line and touching the jump circle. The arcs, which essentially would form two halfcourt lines, would be about 41 feet from the baseline.

He admits it's radical, but he would like someone to give it a try.

"Instead of having two half-courts, we would reduce the size of the front court. And that in itself would stimulate action and stimulate the game."

The smaller area would encourage defense, said Krause, who also is research chair for the National Association of Basketball Coaches; assistant men's basketball coach at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington, and director of the physical education department at Eastern Washington University at nearby Cheney.

Teams would still have 10 seconds to get the ball into their front court, but the proposal would simplify officiating, according to Krause. "The more (five-second) counts, the more three-point shots, the more lines you have, the more difficult it is to interpret and understand, the more complex the game is," he said. Krause said the rear-arc plan first was suggested to the rules committee about five years ago by a fan in Salt Lake City.

The rules committee has given it experimental status, but Krause says leagues probably would be hesitant to experiment for a season and then return to the current rules for post-season play.

"The thing I feel is that we're at a crossroads, at a critical time," Krause said. "Unless we get someone to take a chance in a year or two... we could lose an opportunity to explore a reasonable alternative that might be better for the long-range future of game."

In the meantime, he'd like to try the rear arcs in off-season games, perhaps in intrasquad contests, and maybe in the NABC East-West all-star game, played the weekend of the NCAA finals.

Krause said he feels the new three-point shot might solve the problem of packed-in zone defenses, but he's not sure the line, now drawn at 19 feet, 9 inches from the center of the basket, is the right distance from the basket. "The other thing that inadvertently may happen is, it changes, in my opinion, the psychology of the game," Krause explained.

"It may make things more competitive because a team that's behind will not necessarily be discouraged. They still have an element of hope. I like it as long as it doesn't make a travesty of competitiveness. You have to earn a competitive advantage. If a team earns an advantage, and then it is destroyed in one fell swoop too quickly, it destroys the nature of competition."

Baseball Committee issues halted-game rulings

Two actions taken recently by the NCAA Baseball Committee pertaining to games disrupted by inclement weather, darkness, light failure or curfew will take effect in the 1987 season.

First, the committee deleted the suspended-game rule from the NCAA Baseball Rules. The action was taken because the rule conflicted with requirements for a regulation game in Rule 5-5, which states that any game called by the umpire after the completion of five innings (or fewer than five innings where specified) shall terminate, while any game that does not meet the requirements for a regulation game shall be considered "no game."

The committee also has enacted a "halted-game" procedure, for use on an experimental basis during the 1987 season only.

Under the procedure, a game that has been stopped at any time after its start because of the above-mentioned conditions may be continued by mutual agreement reached prior to the start of the contest by the competing institutions, or according to conference and tournament policy, to a predetermined point of completion. Any such game must meet the conditions of Rule 5-5 in the 1987 NCAA Baseball Rules to be considered a regulation game.

Because the halted-game procedure is experimental and is a deviation from the NCAA Baseball Rules, conferences wanting to establish the procedure must request permission from the Baseball Committee. Requests should be forwarded by February 15 to secretary-rules editor William Thurston, Athletics Department, Amherst College, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002.

Conferences receiving permission should use the procedure in a uniform manner throughout the 1987 season.

Diver challenging drug test allowed to compete by court

A Santa Clara (California) Superior Court judge January 13 ordered that a Stanford University diver who is challenging the NCAA over its drug-testing program be allowed to compete until a court hearing in two months.

Judge Peter Stone granted the captain of the Stanford women's diving team, Simone Levant, a temporary restraining order permitting her to compete until the March 11 hearing, the Associated Press reported.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed a lawsuit January 6 on behalf of Levant, charging that the NCAA's mandatory drug-testing program invades a student-athlete's right to privacy under the California constitution.

Sport to continue

Enough money has been raised to ensure that the sport of football will continue at Long Beach State, it was announced January 5 by Stephen Horn, the university president.

The program had severe financial problems that surfaced at the end of the 1986 season, and it was announced November 26 that if $300,000 wasn't raised by the end of the year, football would be eliminated.

John Kasser, the school's athletics director, told the Associated Press that $263,000 in cash was in hand January 5 and an additional $60,000 had been pledged.

Horn said that a three-year plan has been formulated to sustain the program.

Additionally, conferences should provide to the secretary-rules editor by July 1 a report describing how the policy was enacted and noting how many times and in what circumstances the halted-game procedure was used, along with any relevant reactions from coaches, umpires and other personnel. Information from the reports will be reviewed by the Baseball Committee at its summer rules meeting in Boston.

In nonconference games, the procedure can be used by mutual agreement of the teams.

ics scholarship, refused in October to sign a consent form agreeing to random drug testing, calling it "humiliating and degrading." She was then barred from intercollegiate competition.

In issuing the order, Stone said the lawsuit raised profound constitutional issues regarding students' due process and right to privacy.

In January 1986, the NCAA enacted drug-testing legislation that requires student-athletes to sign a consent form submitting to random drug-testing. If a student refuses to sign the consent form, he or she is barred from taking part in all intercollegiate competition.

Kindig, who lettered in football, track and boxing as a student at St. Joseph's (Indiana), served in the post for 15 years.

CORRECTION

Due to a typesetting error, the division involved in Proposal No. 64 was incorrect in the summary of voting actions at the 1987 Convention that appeared in the January 14 issue of The NCAA News. Division II adopted No. 64 in a roll-call vote, 93-70.

Due to an editor's error, a story on Silver Anniversary award winners that appeared in the January 1 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly stated that Wilma Rudolph is the only American woman to win three track and field gold medals in a single Olympiad. Valerie Brisco-Hooks duplicated the feat in the 1984 Summer Olympics at Los Angeles.

Convention sets record on voting

The 81st annual NCAA Convention established an Association record in terms of the number of counted votes cast on a single proposal.

The membership cast a total of 704 ballots on Proposal No. 44, which concerns financial aid limitations, to surpass the previous high of 641 votes counted on a single proposal in 1984 in New Orleans. In San Diego, the vote was 549 in favor to 148 against, with seven abstentions.

The 1986 Convention in New Orleans had the all-time high in terms of registrations with 1,861. An unofficial total of 1,760, second highest ever, registered in San Diego.

The 1987 Convention was covered by the Associated Press, United Press International and Reuters.

Among the major publications represented were The New York Times, Los Angeles Times, Chicago Tribune, Newsday, Philadelphia Inquirer, The Dallas Morning News, Dallas Times Herald, Sports Illustrated, the Baltimore Sun, The Chronicle of Higher Education, The San Diego Union and the San Diego Tribune, The Kansas City Times, The Washington Post, and USA Today.

Judge upholds fee use for athletics

A superior court judge has ruled against four University of Georgia students who claimed that payment of student fees to the school's private athletics association is unconstitutional.

Judge William Grant of Elberton, in a ruling filed in Clarke County Superior Court, rejected the claim. He said the fees are proper because the athletics association has a unique relationship with the school and because students and the state benefit from its projects.

Grant noted that the Georgia Supreme Court, in a 1986 decision opening the athletics association's records to the public, ruled that the association is a management tool used by the school president to administer Georgia's intercollegiate athletics programs.

He said that relationship negates the argument that student athletics fees violate the antigratuities clause of the Georgia constitution, the Associated Press reported.

Baker, Bonner reappointed

Two members of the NCAA Executive Committee were reappointed by the NCAA Council during that group's post-Convention meeting in San Diego.

Merrily Dean Baker, women's athletics director at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, was reappointed to a five-year term that will expire in January 1992. Francis W. Bonner, professor of English and faculty athletics representative at Furman University, was reappointed to a three-year term that will expire in January 1990.

Members generally are elected to five year terms on the Executive Committee. In reappointing Bonner, the Council noted that a three-year term was appropriate, since a pattern of term expirations on the committee had been developed through the year 2000 to assure appropriate representation on that body.

New Association President Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University, and incoming Secretary-Treasurer Thomas J. Frericks, Dayton University, will serve as ex-officio members of the Executive Committee. Also joining the group by virtue of their election as division vice-presidents are Albert M. # College soccer healthier than ever, coach McCrath believes Cliff McCrath, who has coached Seattle Pacific University to two consecutive NCAA Division II Men's Soccer Championships, likes everything he sees about the future of collegiate soccer in America.

"It's not going to skyrocket or anything like that, but we're going to have very steady, very consistent growth," he predicted in an interview with Jim Cour of the Associated Press. "I really like our future. It's very bright."

McCrath, 50, has coached the Falcons to five national titles and into the play-offs 15 times in his 17 seasons at Seattle Pacific. He has been a collegiate soccer coach for 28 years.

"The college game is healthier than it has ever been," he said. "Although it has slowed a little bit in recent years, it's still the fastest-growing team sport in the NCAA."

"Some statistics show that there are more people playing soccer in North America now than are playing football and baseball."

Although college soccer doesn't draw the crowds that major-college football does, there is a keen interest in soccer in the United States, according to McCrath.

He pointed out that 27 percent of the attendance at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles was for soccer.

"That's enormous," he said. "No other sport really had that kind of attendance. So people in this country will go to see top-quality soccer if it's available."

"If we could push a button and have a top-quality soccer league, we'd have people stepping over each other to pack stadiums."

Four of the Falcons' Division II crowns have come in the past nine years, and McCrath's Seattle Pacific coaching record is 233-79-45.

McCrath said he is not surprised American college soccer is flourishing despite the demise of the North American Soccer League following the 1984 season.

However, he thinks a professional outdoor soccer league—and a national television contract—would enhance the growth of soccer on the collegiate level.

"Right now, we have pockets in soccer in this country that are very active and very well-supported," he said. "But I don't think you'll see college soccer become more popular than college football in this country. At least not in this century."

McCrath said the caliber of athletes in collegiate soccer is improving every year as more top high school players are now choosing soccer over football, basketball and baseball.

Basketball grant cutbacks seen as boost for cheaters

The NCAA's decision to cut college basketball grants-in-aid from 15 to 13 a year could tempt schools to cheat and to drop more unproductive athletes, some Big Ten Conference coaches say.

"The cheaters will flourish," Michigan's Bill Frieder said during the conference's weekly telephone interview session with the Associated Press.

The coaches indicated that some schools will cheat with walk-ons and others will take away scholarships from players who do not live up to recruiting expectations.

"It's going to help the cheaters," said Frieder. "The cheaters will find a way to have 14, 15 or 16 guys in their program. At Michigan, you don't see a lot of transfers, walk-ons or non-predictors."

Frieder also feared certain schools would not renew scholarships.

"We have always renewed scholarships at Michigan, even if a kid is not on the team," said Frieder. "We do not Northwestern, said he was concerned, although he has not worked with as many as 13 scholarships in the past.

"One year, I had 10 at Duke," said Foster. "I was going to go to 14 this time. Because of pressure defenses and sophisticated running offenses, there are more injuries."

"You have to live with it," said Gene Keady of Purdue. "I voted against the three-point shot, and it still passed. If you get two or three kids hurt, it will be difficult to practice."

Bill Frieder

take away scholarships. A lot of programs will not renew scholarships and will send kids away."

Jud Heathcote of Michigan State said he was "disappointed" but called this a time to adjust.

"I hope this doesn't start a trend where players are cut off because of performance," said Heathcote. "Because of (recruiting) mistakes and practices, there could be trends and tendencies to drive these kids off."

"We've gone from 20 to 18 to 16 to 15 and now 13 scholarships," said Heathcote. "We'll all adjust. There will be more parity in college basketball the lower you go. Teams will not be able to stockpile players."

New coaches Gary Williams at Ohio State and Clem Haskins at Minnesota felt they would be affected more than others because they are trying to rebuild programs.

"If that's what the (college) presidents want, we'll have to live with it," Williams said. "It will hurt us because we're trying to rebuild. I wonder what will happen with walk-ons. But we'll be in the same situation as the others."

"When you're rebuilding, you have to take chances on kids, Haskins said. "It's going to hurt us the next few years."

Another new coach, Bill Foster of

Drug tests begin

A drug-screening program for student-athletes has been instituted at St. Leo College, Norman D. Kaye, athletics director, has announced.

"We've implemented this program to assist our student-athletes in resisting illegal drugs and controlled substances," said Kaye.

"I'm pleased that we have taken this step," President M. Daniel Henry said. "I'm very proud of our athletics department and student-athletes for the position they are taking. This shows the college is indeed serious about having a drug-free campus."
