Women in Sports Day events scheduled across the nation

America's leading female athletes and representatives of the Women's Sports Foundation will gather in Washington, D.C. and in state capitals across the country February 4 in recognition of National Women in Sports Dav.

"The goal of National Women in Sports Day is to demonstrate to the American public the value of sports in the lives of all girls and women and to insure that sports and fitness opportunities are protected in our educational system," said Carol Mann, president of the Foundation.

Congress designated February 4, 1987, as National Women in Sports Day in a joint resolution introduced by Senators Robert Packwood, R-Oregon; Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey, and Congresswoman Olympia Snowe, R-Maine.

President Reagan signed the resolution October 27.

In recognition of the day, prominant athletes Billie Jean King, Carol Mann, Anita DeFrantz, Kathrine Switzer, Willye White, Martina Navratilova, Mary Lou Retton, Lynette Woodard, Sacajuwea Hunter, Genna

Weiss, Lyn St. James and others will meet with members of Congress in Washington to urge their support of legislation that the group contends will restore Title IX to its original strength and protect all the civil rights, that the women say that are threatened by the Supreme Court's Grove City College decision

The 1984 Grove City decision ruled, in effect, that Title IX, a Federal statute prohibiting sex discrimination in schools, does not apply to athletics. National Women in Sports Day will be commemorated on Capitol

Hill at a ceremony in the Russell Senate Office Building, hosted by Senators Edward M. Kennedy, D-Massachusetts, and Ted Stevens, R-Arkansas

During the ceremony, the athletes will commend Senators' Packwood and Bradley and Congresswoman Snowe for coauthoring the resolution proclaiming National Women in Sports Day.

The resolution was initiated by Sen. Packwood in recognition of the outstanding contribution made to women's sports by the late Flo Hyman, captain of the 1984 U.S. Olympic volleyball team. She worked with Sen. Packwood on Title IX legislation

The ceremony will end with an award given in Flo Hyman's name to a woman athlete who captures "Flo's dignity, spirit, and commitment to excellence,"

Across the country, more than 40 governors have proclaimed Women in Sports Day in their states, and ceremonies involving governors and local leaders in women's sports will be See Women, page 13

Eligibility procedure streamlined

During its first meeting (January 29-30 in Atlanta), the recently expanded and federated NCAA Eligibility Committee took steps to streamline the procedure for the disposition of routine cases.

The group, which was expanded to 10 members and federated by the passage of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 24, voted to authorize Stephen R. Morgan, NCAA assistant executive director, to serve as an eligibility hearing officer to take initial action in eligibility matters. This action was taken after the NCAA Council approved the concept during its Convention meeting.

"An awful lot of the cases have been routine," Morgan explained. 'Until now, the Eligibility Committee has treated every issue. The membership is not losing an opportuntity to be heard by this change. This move simply is being made to permit the national office staff to help clear the agenda of cases that can be resolved to everyone's satisfaction before they get to the committee."

Passage of Proposal No. 24 doubled the size of the Eligibility Committee and authorized the disposition of cases in a federated manner (e.g., Division II cases would be handled by the Division II members of the group, etc.). Olav B. Kollevoll, Lafayette College, will serve as chair of the full committee until September 1987, when he will leave the committee and be replaced as chair by Edwin D. See Eligibility, page 4

Bailey said that regardless of the committee's decision on this issue, the group also will consider the concept of publishing specific sections of the book(s) as separate units. Rich TV pact to provide wealth of benefits to membership

By Bill Millsaps Richmond Times-Dispatch

Any large organization occasionally sends out mixed signals to the public. Recently, a couple of news items from the NCAA have been so contradictory as to make the reader exclaim, "Say what?

During the NCAA Convention in San Diego, cost-containment legislation was passed that will reduce the number of basketball and football scholarships and significantly curtail the recruiting period for both sports.

Not five days later, in an advisory to media members who previously had covered the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the organization announced, in fairly small print, its estimate of the payout to the four teams that make it to New Orleans March 28 for the Division I semifinals. This year's Final Four participants will probably receive $1,003,375 each.

Let's put that number in perspective. It is more than 15 times the amount of money paid to Final Four teams 15 years ago. It is nearly twice the amount paid to Final Four teams five years ago.

Take it one step further. Next year, the first of a new three-year deal with CBS for television rights to the tournament, the TV portion of the pot goes from $36 million to $57 million. If Final Four team shares of the revenue stay the same, a 1988 semifinalist could come away with $1,588,079.

That is a huge chunk of money and will be viewed by some as an amount large enough to encourage more cheating at a time when the NCAA is trying like the devil to reduce it to barely tolerable levels.

If Dick Schultz has his way, and he usually does, a large number of NCAA members and their athletes will share in the new windfall of TV money. Schultz, athletics director at the University of Virginia and chair of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, said there should be "a cap of $1.2 million or $1.25 million for Final Four participants."

In recent years, proceeds from the tournament have been split 60-40 between the competing teams and the NCAA, with the NCAA's share providing nearly three-quarters of the Association's operating revenue. It is now possible that the split may be narrowed to 55-45, with the increase to the NCAA making possible the funding of projects that have been, in the past, financially beyond reach.

In the next few months, Schultz and his colleagues on the committee, the Division I Championships Committee and the Special NCAA Television Negotiations Committee are expected to discuss a package of proposals that will be presented in May to the NCAA Executive Committee

The NCAA conducts 74 national championships, but only those involving Division I teams are fully funded. Block grants are given to Divisions II and III, which then decide which events will be subsidized and by how much. The new TV contract, said Schultz, "could make possible See Rich, page 3

Letters to the Editor

Joy of competition is worth risks To the Editor:

In the January 14 edition of The NCAA News, Bruce Bauerle makes the valid point that the "free ride" can be costly to student-athletes over the long haul of their lives.

Yes, indeed, it can, and I applaud Mr. Bauerle for pointing out many of the pitfalls of highly competitive sports. Still, Professor Bauerle fails to mention one aspect of athletics that goes beyond practical considerations-the joy of competing on an excellent level.

Good athletes are no different from any other gifted person: musician, scientist, dancer, architect or actor. I'm speaking about folks whose talents compel them to maximize their abilities. Unless these kinds of people make the effort, they can never be completely satisfied.

The exhilaration a scientist feels after proving a complicated theory or the wonder in the heart of an artist after he or she puts the finishing touches to a painting is no greater than the delight of the basketball player slicing through bodies and air, making the impossible shot. It doesn't matter that there are career-stopping risks or long-term dangers. Talented people will never stop pursuing excellence, pushing the outer limits of their talent.

Perhaps some athletes in college should be discouraged from intense competition, but only because they lack talent. Then, of course, the risks far outweigh the rewards. But for the young men and women who can fly, it would be a damn shame to see them walk.

If Bruce Bauerle thinks athletes are selling their bodies for a winning season and a few lines in the local sports pages, it is clear to me that he has never experienced first-hand the joy of excellence.

Student-athletes aware of costs

To the Editor:

I am writing not to rebut the article by Mr. Bruce Bauerle (A "free ride" often can be too costly for student-athletes, January 14, 1987, NCAA News), but simply to show there is another side to the coin. I also work at a four-year state university that has a large, winning athletics program.

We are an institution that attracts many applications for each space available, and we expect our athletes to measure up to our admissions standards. Therefore, the student-athlete who attends our university is aware of what expectations he or she must meet.

When a student-athlete decides to attend a college or university and participate in a sport, he or she must have some idea from the high school athletics experience that there are certain hours allotted each day to practice sessions. I would venture to say that the majority of schools in the NCAA or NAIA do not have four- or five-hour practice sessions. If Mr. Bauerle knows this to be commonplace at his institution, he might want to show his athletics coaches some research done on length of practice and productivity levels.

Mr. Bauerle also discusses risk and college students tending to believe they are immortal. I believe that youth in general have a propensity in the direction of the above-mentioned areas. Athletes may seem to have more of a leaning because they are competing before large crowds and their injuries are viewed by thousands of people.

Injuries are a part of athletics that should be handled in a competent and forthright manner; any other type of action should not be acceptable in an athletics program. A coach who encourages an individual to play when hurt, to the point where it would harm the individual for life, should not be in the coaching profession.

Finally, if student-athletes take the easiest courses and finish with no usable skills, then the wrong message is being conveyed to the athletes when they are recruited and enrolled.

In athletics, much discussion centers on setting goals and meeting challenges. This same message has to be instilled in the student-athlete so he or she can use it in the classroom. If the student-athlete is capable but not performing, then the motivation that is being used has to be questioned. This applies both on and off the playing fields. Much criticism has been directed toward college athletics over the years and some of it is justified, but surely that does not mean we should cease all attempts to make it a better situation. We must keep in mind that college athletics is what the institution wants it to be. If the proper amount of emphasis is placed on a person being a studentathlete, then a fulfilling and rewarding experience will be realized both on and off the playing fields. But if the emphasis is strictly athletics in nature, then not only is the person shortchanged, but the college or university is not fulfilling its duties as an institution of higher education. Rating system to measure school's success is misguided

By Jerry Heaster Business and Financial Editor The Kansas City Star

In a strictly business sense, the growing support for the notion of holding institutions of higher learning to some sort of measurable performance standard seems to reflect sound economic thinking.

Perhaps so, but an education being the kind of commodity it is, this seems a good time to keep in mind Oscar Wilde's line about a cynic being somebody who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing. The value of several years of higher learning can't be evaluated or assessed in terms of what it might add to the gross national product. To be sure, it would be nice if it could. After all, as much as this society is paying for this product called education, wouldn't it be nice to be able to quantify what we're getting for our money?

Sure it would, and it's frustrating when—as Missouri Gov. John Ashcroft noted recently-most institutions of higher learning "simply do not know what their students are learning.

Sad as it is to say, he's probably right. Sadder still, he'll probably always be right.

The only ones who ever really know what students have learned are those who hire erstwhile students. And as any working person knows, some of the products turned out by colleges and universities are either lemons or gems.

For the most part, though, they turn out to be a fairly average lot. What differentiates the eventual value of the product turned out by the higher-learning process usually has more to do with the desire to succeed than the level of raw knowledge.

Therefore, if you agree with this premise, any attempt to quantify what colleges and universities are accomplishing by measuring the knowledgeretention ability of students makes absolutely no sense whatsoevereconomically or otherwise.

If, for instance, a state designs a test to measure university performance and then links the level of government funding to the test results, it will impede rather than enhance the educational process.

This unintended consequence will be the result of making the institution more geared to serving bureaucratic imperatives than satisfying intellectual needs.

The focus of what the institution offers will be on achieving high test scores rather than challenging young minds. Instead of opening up the process, it will narrow its scope to anticipating how to satisfy those who control the government's pursestrings.

In fact, it might be argued that the efficiency of the educational process is being called into question because it already has become more oriented to serving the needs of the bureaucrat instead of the student.

Since higher education has become almost an entitlement since the early 1960s, Academe has become big business. The primary reason it has become big business is that big government has big bucks in the form of financial aid to students, professors and institutions alike.

In some respects, this probably has had a salubrious effect. Not only has it upgraded the quality of life for those employed in Academe, but it also has made a higher education available to deserving youngsters who otherwise might not have been able to get one.

But this growth hasn't come without trade-offs, and one of them has been the necessity to open the system to many who probably lack either the intellectual capacity or the preparation to handle college work.

Thus, as a practical matter, now that government has forced Academe to serve a certain segment of the population incapable of optimum performance, it seems highly unfair to link financial support to arbitrarily established measures of student performance

If measurable excellence is really what we're after, the only realistic way to achieve it is to allow institutions to close their doors to only the best and brightest.

This can't be done explicitly; but if smart administrators are pressured to prove the worth of their institutions, you can bet they'll find ways to limit access to all but those they perceive as "college material."

If this were to happen, those from segments of society who have benefited most from expanded access to higher education would once again find their opportunities severely limited.

That would be a pity, because the worth of a higher education is an incalculable thing that goes far beyond being able to score well on tests or get a job after graduation. If a higher education does nothing more than enrich intellectual lives in ways that can't be quantified, it should be considered worth it.

ons to get around the rule. I'm sure the elimination of two scholarships will prompt new cheaters. The cheaters have flourished long before this rule.

Maybe this rule will encourage Division I coaches to recruit a little more responsibly. No one likes having his shopping list cut, but it can make for a more frugal recruiter.

How many programs can night-in and night-out play 15 athletes? Yes, the rebuilding of a program and the threat of injuries constitute a solid argument for retaining 15 scholarships.

I wish we had the money to carry 15 top student-athletes. In Division II, we have a limit of 12; two-thirds of us cannot afford the maximum, but we have gotten by.

If we want to control spending in athletics, let's first look at the big-time Division I programs with an unlimited basketball budget-programs that stay at four- and five-star-rated hotels; charter planes to away games instead of flying regular coach, and trying to outdo each other in fancy locker rooms, player lounges and the like.

I don't know how some Division I programs can make ends meet with a mere basketball budget of from $750,000 to $1 million a year, and they are complaining about two scholarships. I could do nicely with 13 myself.

Legislation is a big disappointment

To the Editor:

The NCAA Convention was a tremendous disappointment.

Blatant disregard for people's lives within the sport of basketball was exercised in the elimination of the part-time coach in basketball (football retains the coaches it has had) and in the elimination of two scholarships in basketball from 15 to 13 (football retains the total allotment of 95 scholarships, but now the Convention says a school can give only 25 scholarships in a year rather than 30).

What a farce. Basketball has had to eliminate two full scholarships and a part-time coach, and football eliminates nothing. Yet, it is reported that football has decreased scholarships from 30 to 25 per year.

No mental problems are apparent

To the Editor

Bobby Knight's criticism of the NCAA in the January 14 issue of The NCAA News is typical of some basketball coaches. They need to sell their bosses on their opinion.

The Division I presidents are the ones making the rules of the NCAA. Probably over half of the Big Ten, SEC, Big Eight, ACC and Pac-10 voted for the basketball restrictions on scholarships and coaches. The larger institutions are the ones setting the pace on reductions. This is not led by Division II or III or by the less affluent Division I schools.

His quote that anyone who would propose or vote for reduction of basketball scholarships is an absolute idiot infers that a majority of the presidents and faculty reps in the Pac-10 have mental problems. The ones I know seem very intelligent.

the full funding of all our championships."

Money also could be made available for a number of other worthwhile projects. Schultz mentioned drug education and drug testing, more postgraduate scholarships, and catastrophic medical insurance for all Division I-A football schools. "We could do that for every I-A school in the country," said Schultz, "for a yearly premium of just over $1.5 million."

In addition, said Schultz, some of the money should be set aside as an endowment, the interest from which could provide the NCAA with extra operating revenue or as a safety net in times of unexpected financial hardship

At the same time, Schultz wants to do right by the 282 Division I basketball schools and make sure as many of them as possible share in tourna ment proceeds. Figures from 1986 are not available; but in 1985, 249 of the 282 schools received money from the national tournament as part of conference revenue-sharing arrangements.

cerned such an amount might encourage more Division II teams to seek Division I status. "That's where it gets tricky," said Schultz.

No matter how the details are worked out, there's more than enough money to go around. Even if the 60-40 split is kept, the NCAA stands to realize nearly $25 million off the 1988 Division I tournament, a boost of $8.4 million over 1987.

"What has happened," said Schultz, "is that we have ensured the future of the NCAA for a number of years as a first-class organization."

Luncheon meeting expenses (New case)

Situation: A local booster club or civic organization wishes to invite a student-athlete to be its guest at a luncheon meeting of the group. (648).

Question: May the student-athlete receive transportation and meal expenses in conjunction with participation in the luncheon?

Answer: Yes, provided the meeting occurs within 30 miles of the institution's main campus and no tangible award is provided the student-athlete. [C 3-1-(h)-(4)]

High school all-star contest

(Revises Case No. 159)

Situation: A student-athlete may jeopardize intercollegiate eligibility if, following completion of high school eligibility in the student-athlete's sport and before enrollment in college, the student-athlete was a member of a squad that engaged in any all-star football or basketball contest contrary to the requirements of Constitution 3-9-(a). (577)

Question: What is the definition of a high school all-star contest for purposes of this regulation?

Answer: A high school all-star contest shall be any contest in the sport of football or basketball that meets the following criteria: (1) The teams participating in the contest involve individuals who have completed their high school eligibility in the sport and have not yet enrolled in and attended classes during a regular term at a collegiate institution; (2) the contest is scheduled and publicized in advance; (3) the competition is sponsored and promoted by an individual, organization or agency, and (4) the individuals are selected for participation in the contest on an invitational basis and have not competed together previously as members of a team that played a regular schedule of games in an organized recreation or interscholastic program. Contests that are conducted under these criteria would be considered all-star competition for purposes of this legislation unless one or more of the following conditions is applicable: (a) The contest occurs within the framework of a regularly scheduled recreational program involving participants from the community solely in which the sponsor is located; (b) the competition is limited solely to participants from the community in which the sponsor is located and no revenue, including gate receipts, concessions, program sales or contribution is scheduled within the framework of an established cultural exchange program involving other educational activities, or (d) the contest is scheduled in conjunction with developmental competition sponsored by the national governing body of amateur of basketball (ABAUSA) or an active member thereof. Multiple competition (e.g., tournaments) involving more than one contest or two teams will be considered high school competition if the specified criteria are applicable, and each game conducted under such circumstances would be considered a countable contest for purposes of determining a student-athlete's compliance with the requirements of this regulation. Eligibility

Continued from page 1 Muto, State University of New York, Buffalo. Douglas W. Weaver, Michigan State University, will replace Kollevoll as a Division I representative on the committee.

Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, is Division I subcommittee chair. Robert A. Oliver, University of Northern Colorado, is Division II chair, and Muto is Division III chair. The 10 positions on the committee are outlined as follows: Four members are from Division I, and three each represent Divisions II and III. Three positions are allocated for men, three for women and four are unallocated.

The committee's current roster includes (division representation in parentheses) Kollevoll (I); Cryer (I); Oliver (II); Muto (III); Sherry Calvert, Whittier College (III); Della Durant, Pennsylvania State University (I); James P. Jorgenson, Northern California Athletic Conference (II); William A. Marshall, Franklin and Marshall College (III); Robert M. Sweazy, Texas Tech University (1), and Richard B. Yoder, West Chester University of Pennsylvania (II).

In dealing with routine eligibility matters, Morgan will determine the initial eligibility ruling, which must be ratified by the appropriate division subcommittee chair. All appeals of the initial rulings will be handled by the appropriate division subcommittee

As in the past, appeals of Eligibility Committee decisions will be handled by the NCAA Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals, which also has been expanded to 10 members and has adopted a federated approach to case disposition.

"Sometime between now and April," Morgan said, "the Council members on the Eligibility Committee and the division subcommittee chairs expect to meet with the members of the Council's Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals. Their goal is to develop consistency in procedures for handling case disposition. It also is hoped that the procedures the groups develop will be easy to understand and follow by the membership."

Morgan said the group would discharge most of its duties through the use of telephone conferences and probably would meet only twice a year as a full body.

Staffing changes also have been implemented for the committee, which previously had been staffed by members of the Association's legislative services department. Eligibility matters now will be handled by Morgan and Janet M. Justus of the comphance and enforcement department. Morgan noted that eligibility rulings will continue to be published in The NCAA News.

Legislative Assistance 1987 Column No. 6

Basketball coaching staff—Proposal No. 136 As noted in 1987 Legislative Assistance Column No. 5, the Division I subcommittee of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee has reviewed the implementation of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 136, which stipulates that Division I member institutions cannot employ a part-time assistant coach (in addition to the head coach and two full-time assistants) in the sport of basketball beyond August 1, 1987. The continued employment of a part-time assistant basketball coach by a Division I member institution subsequent to August 1, 1987, would be permissible only if the institution had in effect prior to the adjournment (6:30 p.m. Pacific time, January 9, 1987) of the 1987 Convention a written obligation to the part-time assistant through academic tenure, an enforceable contract or a formal security of employment commitment. After considering the implementation of this regulation, the Division I subcommittee concluded that each Division I member institution that purports to have on file such a written commitment authorizing the continuation (beyond August 1, 1987) of the employment of a part-time assistant basketball coach shall forward a copy of the written commitment to the NCAA national office for further review. Any such employment commitments involving Division I part-time assistant basketball coaches should be forwarded to the national office no later than February 16, 1987.

Printed recruiting aids—Proposal No. 88

As noted in 1987 Legislative Assistance Column No. 5, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee has reviewed the application of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 88, which was adopted as amended at the 1987 Convention to specify that the annual athletics press guide and recruiting brochure must utilize only one color of printing inside the covers. The committee has determined that a member institution may not develop a separate press guide or brochure to send to the media or alumni that does not meet the specifications outlined in Proposal No. 88; further, that a member institution may not avoid compliance with this regulation by developing prior to August 1, 1987 (the effective date for Proposal No. 88), a multicolored press guide or recruiting brochure that relates to any sports playing season that is initiated subsequent to August 1, 1987. The committee notes that the purpose of this interpretation is to preclude distribution of any multicolored press guide or recruiting brochure by a member institution subsequent to August 1, 1987.

Bylaw 5-1-(j)—Proposal No. 69

1987 Convention Proposal No. 69 provides that until August 1, 1987, a student who was educated in a secondary school outside the United States, has satisfied the grade-point and core-curriculum requirements, was admitted under an institutional admissions procedure that does not require the ACT or SAT for such students generally, and who has not taken either test prior to initial enrollment may satisfy the SAT or ACT requirement of Bylaw 5-1-(j) by taking the test successfully at the first local, regularly scheduled opportunity after initial enrollment. The Division I subcommittee of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee has affirmed that the provisions of Proposal No. 69 would require student-athletes who meet the specified criteria to take the SAT or ACT examination on a national testing date; further, that such individuals may be permitted to utilize test scores from an ACT or SAT examination taken subsequent to their initial collegiate enrollment or the adoption of Proposal No. 69 on the first national testing date for which they have an opportunity to register

Basketball evaluation seasons—Proposal No. 49

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee have reviewed the implementation of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 49 as it was amended at the 1987 Convention in reference to evaluation seasons in those states that conduct their high school basketball seasons in the fall. The Divisions I and II subcommittees confirmed that Proposal No. 49, as amended, establishes separate evaluation periods (without December and February dates) for those high school basketball seasons that are conducted solely in the fall by the states in question. It was noted that these evaluation periods, when coupled with applicable contact periods, are intended to provide a sufficient opportunity for the evaluation of prospective student-athletes participating in fall basketball programs. It is the committee's understanding that such programs are conducted for women's basketball in the states of Michigan, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Virginia and West Virginia.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Revived indoor track championships in Division II slated March 13-14

The Division II Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships, reinstated by the 1987 NCAA Convention, will be held March 13-14 at North Dakota State University. The championships were held one time, in 1985, before being eliminated by Division II. With only two months to prepare for the revived championships, the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee has recommended and the Division II Championships Committee and the Administrative Committee have approved a maximum field size of 134 male participants and 114 female participants. The approved field size is the same that was approved for the 1985 Division II indoor championships. The participation ratios are 1:17 for men and 1:14 for women. In the 1985 championships, the actual numbers of participants were 93 women and 129 men, due to the number of participants in multievents.

The eligibility of a swimming student-athlete found in violation of NCAA Bylaw 1-6 and Case No. 214 was restored immediately. The committee determined that the institution did not receive a significant recruiting advantage. The committee noted that this case involved institutional responsibility and recommended that it be forwarded to the appropriate department for further review.

Pomona-Pitzer Colleges

The eligibility of a tennis student-athlete found in violation of NCAA Bylaws 5-1-(k)-(3) and 5-5-(b) was restored subsequent to the first 13 intercollegiate tennis contests of the 1986-87 academic year. The committee noted that this case involved institutional responsibility and recommended that it be forwarded to the appropriate department for further review

Jayhawks' 44-game home winning streak tops in Division I

By James M. Van Valkenburg NCAA Director of Statistics

Kansas owns the nation's longest current home-court winning streak in men's Division I basketball at 44 games, but the Jayhawks are miles away from the all-time record, an incredible 129 games by Kentucky from 1943 to 1955.

In fact, the Jayhawks are not close to making the all-time top 10. Larry Brown's team has four more home games this season—against Oklahoma State February 7, Notre Dame February 8, Oklahoma (the last team to beat Kansas in Allen Field House, in an overtime game in 1984) February 14 and Kansas State February 18.

Long, long home winning streaks are becoming a thing of the past, with more big intersectional games, large arenas and the competitive balance in Division I. Of the six longest in history, two ended in the 1950s, two in the 1960s and two in the 1970s; the most recent—UCLA's third-place 98gamer—ending 11 years ago.

Among the 10 longest in history, only the seventh-place 80-game streak by Lamar, ended in 1984, extends into this decade.

A definition needed

In any discussion of home-winning streaks, a definition of a "home game" is needed. If all games in the team's home city are included, how about a game off-campus against another team in the same city? Should games in nearby cities be included? Let us explore the all-time top 10 for some answers.

When Kentucky's 129-game streak was ended January 8, 1955, by Georgia Tech, 59-58, it was considered one of the biggest upsets in college basketball history. John "Whack" Hyder, who was to become a 292-game winner at Tech, came to Lexington early in his career with a team that had gone 2-22 the previous season.

Eager to prove it was not a fluke, Georgia Tech did just that, 65-59, in the return match at Heisman Gym in Atlanta. As it turned out, those were Kentucky's only losses in Southeastern Conference play, and Adolph Rupp's team was ranked No. 2 nationally, while Tech finished 7-7 in the SEC and 12-13 overall.

All 129 games were coached by Rupp, and all were played on campus; first in Alumni Gym, then in Memorial Coliseum, starting with the 1951 season.

St. Bonaventure is second at 99 games during 1948-61, all in Olean Armory. We maintain that games the Bonnies played in Buffalo should not be counted. It is 80 miles away and at least a 90-minute drive.

Exclusive of games with Buffalobased Canisius and Niagara, St. Bonaventure was 28-7 in Buffalo in that span. Niagara ended the streak, 87-77, in 1961 at Olean.

UCLA's 98 games is next, 1970 to 1976, the first 81 under John Wooden. Gene Bartow's first UCLA team, which reached the Final Four, won its first 17 home games before Oregon, under Dick Harter, ended it, 65-45, in UCLA's final home game of the sea-

Lane leads Division I men in rebounding

Then comes Lamar's 80-game streak, ended, 68-65, by Louisiana Tech in the Southland Conference postseason tournament in 1984, soon after moving to new Montague Center. Billy Tubbs, now at Oklahoma, won the first 31; the rest came under Pat Foster, now at Houston.

Long Beach State's 75 games from 1968 to 1974 are next. Most came under Jerry Tarkanian, who was 63-0 at home in five years as Long Beach State's coach. Ninth is Nevada-Las Vegas' 72-gamer, all under Tarkanian, who lost a few at home at first, than started a run.

Tenth is Cincinnati again with 68 straight from 1972 to 1978. Cincinnati lists it as 72 games—45 in Armory Field House, four in Cincinnati Gardens and 23 in Riverfront Coliseum. But four victories at the last two sites were over Xavier, and we deduct those. Denny Crum's Louisville team ended it, 78-75, over Gale Catlett's team in 1978.

By the way, Lute Olson, now at Arizona, was the Long Beach State coach when San Francisco ended its streak, 94-84, in December 1974. New Mexico ended the Nevada-Las Vegas streak, 102-98, in 1978. Here, then, is the all-time top 10, defining a home game as any home-city game against onnosition from outside the city:

opposition from o	utatue i	ine enj	-
Team	Games	Start	End
1. Kentucky	129	1943	1955
2. St. Bona	99	1948	1961
3. UCLA	98	1970	1976
4. Cincinnati	84	1957	1964
5. Marquette	81	1967	1973
6. Arizona	81	1945	1951
7. Lamar	80	1978	1984
8. Long Beach St	75	1968	1974
9. Nevada-L.V	72	1974	1978
10. Cincinnati	68	1972	1978
Cincinnati is th	e only	team	with

Cincinnati is the only team with two streaks in the top 10, and Tarkanian the only coach involved in two streaks (135 of 147 games, to be exact).

Why long ones vanishing

"The home-court advantage, I think, is directly related to the strength of the home team," says Brown, the Kansas coach. Indeed, the longest streaks have been compiled by great teams. Kentucky won four national championships in its 129-game run, and UCLA was almost invincible, as was Cincinnati under George Smith and Ed Jucker, who won back-toback NCAA titles and just missed a third in a row. Conversely, though, marathon streaks are tougher now because there are more outstanding teams, more intersectional games, and big arenas do not offer as much of an advantage as "bandbox" gyms. "The crowd is on top of you in smaller places," says Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim. "In bigger places, the crowd doesn't have the same effect. We have four or five games a year when the noise reaches the same level as Manley (the fieldhouse where Syracuse won 57 straight

Stan Kappers, St. Joseph's (Indiana), ranks high in Division II scoring before losing its finale to Georgetown; his team is not quite so invincible in giant, 33,000-seat Carrier Dome)."

The race for second

Kansas is the only team with a current home streak dating back into the 1984 season. Thirteen games behind the Jayhawks at 31 is Northeastern, with its next home game February 14 against Boston U. Next are Bradley at 24 (next at home: February 7, Memphis State), Texas Christian 22 (February 12 against Southern Methodist) and Cleveland State 21 (February 7 against Memphis State).

Seventeen Division I teams had perfect home records last season, and quickly lost to Nevada-Las Vegas. Chicago State, now in just its third season in Division I, ran its home streak to 75 games before losing December 29 to Mississippi Valley State. The streak dated back to 1981, and the first four years included games mainly against NAIA opponents. II and III leaders

Abilene Christian had the longest reported current home streak in Division II at 37 games, heading into a February 3 home game with East Texas State.

Denver holds the Division II record at 79, from 1980 to 1985.

DePauw led Division III with a record 59 straight home victories heading into a February 4 home game with Taylor.

Women trying three-pointer

Eleven women's Division I conference are experimenting with the threepointer this season (same distance as the men: 21 feet to the backboard from the top of the key). We have received figures from six conferences, and they show that women are shying away from the shot, for the most part. Combining the six conferences, players are attempting only about 1.5 per game and making about 0.5 per game,

Pace junior Jennifer Di Maggio ranks among Division II rebounding leaders

bined. Defending national champion Texas has attempted only two all season, and coach Jody Conradt says it is not much of a factor. However, Cindy Scott, Southern Illinois coach, says, "I'm very much in favor of it. It adds another dimension to the game and makes it very exciting for the fans." And Elaine Hieber, Iowa State assistant athletics director and chair of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee, says she expects the three-pointer to be voted in for next season: "Experimental things tend to get adopted. To me, it's an exciting part of the game - even more so for women

NCAC favors, 4 to 3

North Coast Athletic Conference men's coaches favor the three-pointer, four to three, reports Dennis Collins, NCAC executive director. Two favored moving the line back a foot.

Ohio Wesleyan's Gene Mehaffey, coach of the two-time NCAC champions and a career 354-game winner, spoke for the opposition: "Three times zero is still zero.... I prefer the game as it was, which rewarded those teams who could effectively go to the hoop and score."

Wooster's Lu Wims, who recently got his 200th career victory, spoke for the majority: "It is good for the game because it opens up and cleans up the play inside, and it gives the little man a chance to be a factor. I feel that is important. Finally, it keeps a team in a game as never before."

Case Reserve's 65 three-pointers rank first. Quips coach Bill Sudeck, referring to his school's famous engineering curriculum: "My guys have slide rules in their head. They calculate the arc of the ball, distance and wind velocity, all in a split second. This proves academics and athletics can go together."

Kenyon's 51.8 percent leads the conference, which is shooting 40.6 percent—above the national accuracy mark in all three divisions (NCAC teams are in Division III).

Quotes of the week

Hunter College under Jeff Bieders is struggling at 3-15. He was feeling ill with a virus before a recent game and thought of letting his assistant run things, but, "At the last minute, I thought I'd better make it. The way things are going, I was afraid everyone would think I was forced to take the night off." (Jeff Bernstein, Hunter SID) Southampton coach Bill McGonegal's New Year's resolution: win a road game. After nine straight road losses, he tried something new. "I decided home cooking might be the answer," he said. "So I packed box lunches for the trip to Quinnipiac. It worked. We won, 95-91." (Bill Huffman, Southampton SID) Pan American's Charles "Junior" Ray, 6-9 and 285, takes a lot of kidding about his size (fans shout "boom" on the road when he sits down). But he quiets them with 88.9

Aurora's Kristen Benner is among Division III leaders in scoring at 20.1

percent free throwing. Says Ray: "My father told me, 'Keep on reaching for the sky; for even if you come up short, you're still among the stars.'" (Jim McKone, Pan American SID)

Ray Meyer, legendary 724-game winner at DePaul, on his son Joey, now in his third year as DePaul coach: "I can't tell you how relaxing it is for me to see Joey relaxed. As we go around the country, people say to me, 'You must be proud of your son. He's doing such a great job. He's his own man.' Joey Meyer used to be Ray Meyer's son. Now Ray Meyer is Joey Meyer's father — and very proud to be."

760 for Gaines

Winston-Salem State coach Clarence "Big House" Gaines recently got his 760th career coaching victory, upsetting North Carolina A&T. That moved him into fourth on the alltime, all-divisions list, trailing only Rupp (875) of Kentucky, F. C. "Phog" Allen (771) of Kansas and Henry "Hank" Iba (767) of Oklahoma State.

Wright State's Ralph Underhill, with the highest winning percentage in Division II (.808) entering the season, recently got his 200th career victory against 48 losses.

Can You Top These?

When Notre Dame's giant-killer's upset No. 1-ranked North Carolina, 60-58, February I, it was the fifth time in the last 13 seasons the Irish have knocked off the country's No. 1ranked men's team. It started with that 71-70 victory over UCLA at South Bend in 1974, ending the longest winning streak in history at 88 games.

North Adams State has made a complete reversal from last year's 3-21 record to a current 11-3 mark under second-year men's coach John Quattrochi. Can any team top that turnaround? (John Quattrochi, North Adams State head coach)

Youngstown State's Tilman Beverly scored 55 points in a recent game against Tennessee Tech, tying the Ohio Valley Conference record set by Western Kentucky's Clem Haskins (now Minnesota head coach) 22 years ago. Beverly was 19-for-27 from the field, including 4-8 in three pointers, and 13-for-17 at the line. Is 55 the men's national single-game high this season in Division I? (Greg Gulas, Youngstown State SID) California's women's team has three starters who are members of the Finnish national team. They are sophomore guard Mia Kuusisto, freshman guard Anja Hellman and sophomore forward Seija Leino. Hellman is shooting 56.7 percent, mostly from threepoint range, and hopes the women adopt the three-pointer in 1988. Leino was a former junior national high jump champion in Finland. She casually cleared 5-4 on her first try down at the track one day and track coach Tony Sandoval, wide-eyed, promptly picked a new team member. (Chris Dawson, California women's SID)

Cincinnati is next and presents a borderline case. It lists its home record as 90 games—72 in Armory Fieldhouse on campus and 18 in Cincinnati Gardens, from December 1957 to December 1964. However, six of those 18 were over Xavier, another Cincinnati team, in an off-campus arena. We believe those should be deducted, leaving the Bearcats with 84 straight home-city victories against outside teams—fourth place.

Marquette and Arizona are next at 81 straight each. Al McGuire, a 405game winner, was the Marquette coach, and Notre Dame, under Richard "Digger" Phelps, ended the streak, 71-69, in January 1973. Fred Enke, a 522-game winner, coached Arizona, and Kansas State, under Jack Gardner, a 486-game winner, ended it, 76-57, in December 1951. with an accuracy percentage of less than 32 percent.

There are some notable exceptions, of course. Gail LoBue of Southeastern Louisiana is 13-for-26 for 50 percent. She has made more three-pointers than the rest of the Gulf Star Conference combined. In the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, Barb Perkes, Eastern Illinois freshman, is 19 of 40 for 47.5 percent, Marialice Jenkins of Southern Illinois is 13-31 for 41.9 and Diane Roberts of Northern Iowa is 19-47 for 40.4. Gateway players have made nearly one per game (148 in 167 games)— about twice the national average—and are shooting 32.2 percent.

Penn State leads the Atlantic 10 with 46.4 percent on 13 of 28.

Rice players have nearly as many three-pointers (34) as the rest of the Southwest Athletic Conference com-

son

Tennis Preview

Prospects bright for Trojans' return to power

By Gibson Smith The NCAA News Staff

After years in the shadow of Pacific-10 Conference rivals Stanford and UCLA, Southern California may be ready to return to the sunlight of a Division I team tennis title.

Coach Dick Leach's Trojans, featuring two of the top players in the nation, have been picked as the favorite for the men's crown by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association (ITCA).

Except for Georgia's home-court victory in 1985, the Division I Men's Tennis Championship team title has remained in California since 1973. Stanford, the defending champion, has won eight times during that period and UCLA five times. The Trojans, second only to the Bruins in total Division I tennis titles, last were seen in the winner's circle in 1976, sharing the prize with UCLA.

Senior Rick Leach (the coach's son) and sophomore Luke Jensen, second and third behind Southern Methodist's Richey Reneberg in ITCA preseason singles rankings, give Southern California a potent one-two punch. The younger Leach, top-rated in singles play throughout the 1986 season, lost only one match in individual competition before being eliminated in the quarterfinals of the Division I singles competition. Jensen fell to Reneberg in the opening round after a sensational freshman season.

Sophomore John Carras (ITCA No. 22), senior Jonas Wallgard and junior Scott Brownsberger also return from the 1986 team.

Stanford and UCLA remain among the top-ranked teams, along with 1986 runner-up Pepperdine and Southwest Conference powers Southern Methodist and Texas.

"Being No. 1 in the preseason doesn't mean anything," the elder Leach said. "We know we have a good team, but there are a lot of other good teams out there. I think SMU, UCLA and Pepperdine are just as good as we are, and there are a whole bunch of good teams just below that. We have to prove ourselves by winning four days in a row against that kind of competition."

A rundown of the rest of the ITCA top 10, in order, follows:

Southern Methodist—Reneberg followed a brilliant 1985 freshman season with a runner-up finish in Division I singles last spring. After a fall campaign that saw him capture the Volvo all-America title, he is the player to beat in 1987. Also on hand in Dallas are junior Stefan Kruger (No. 6) and senior Den Bishop (No. 17). Reneberg and Bishop are ranked fifth in doubles, with Kruger and senior Ed Ross seventh.

UCLA—Depth and doubles play will be the strengths of the Bruins, who will seek their 16th Division I team championship. Glenn Bassett's squad has four players in the top 40, led by Tim Triguero (No. 15). Also ranked by the ITCA are senior Brett Greenwood (No. 34), Don Nahirney (No. 37) and Buff Farrow (No. 38). Nahirney and Patrick Galbreath are No. 6 in doubles listings and Triguero and Farrow No. 8.

Pepperdine—Tied with the Bruins at No. 3, Pepperdine hopes to overcome the loss of all-America Kelly Jones with the addition of freshmen Andrew Sznaidjer and David Wells-Roth. The Waves now have finished second in Division I twice, trailing UCLA in 1982 and losing to Stanford in last spring's final. Robby Weiss, Marty Laurendeau and Augustine Moreno all are ranked in the top 50 individually.

Texas—A veteran team hopes to shake Southern Methodist loose from the Southwest Conference championship and make a fourth straight NCAA tournament appearance. Senior Royce Deppe, a singles quarterfinalist last season, is 10th in the preseason singles poll. He and classmate Charles Beckman, doubles teammates throughout their college careers and NCAA runners-up in 1985, are second in the preseason doubles poll.

Stanford — The defending champion Cardinal plummets to sixth in preseason rankings with the loss of four key seniors, including 1986 singles champion Dan Goldie. Also gone are Jim Grabb, John Letts and Eric Rosenfeld, who helped Stanford upset three higher-seeded teams at the championships in Athens, Georgia, last May. Junior Patrick McEnroe of the 1987 team is ranked No. 9 in both singles and, with Scott Moody, doubles.

Georgia — Coach Dan Magill returns five standouts from last year's squad as the Bulldogs seek to regain the Southeastern Conference title. Senior Philip Johnson (No. 7) will try to bring the Division I singles trophy back to Athens, where Mikael Pernfors won before the home crowd in 1984 and 1985. Junior Trey Carter and sophomore Stephen Enochs are also in the ITCA top 30. Clemson—The Tigers lost three 1986 all-Americas but still are favored to win a fifth straight championship in the Atlantic Coast Conference and return to the Division I tournament. Junior Brian Page (No. 21) teams with Matt Frooman to form a potent doubles combination for Chuck Kriese, USPTA national coach of the year last season.

Tennessee—A surprise winner in the Southeastern Conference last spring, Tennessee seeks to hold that title with the help of the nation's topranked doubles team. Juniors Shelby Cannon and Byron Talbot will be joined on the Volunteer roster by prize transfers Tom Goles (1985 Division II doubles champion at Stephen F. Austin State, which dropped its tennis program) and Chuck Swayne.

Louisiana State—The Tigers are another strong entry in the Southeastern Conference, one of the most competitive leagues in collegiate tennis. Leading the way is junior Billy Uribe, No. 25 in the preseason poll. Carlos Homedes is the lone senior for Louisiana State, which lost only to Georgia in winning the SEC's regularseason conference championship.

Miami (Florida) — Sharing the 10th spot in the preseason poll with Louisiana State are the Hurricanes, who feature a senior-laden lineup and a pair of promising Swedish newcomers. Andrew Burrow and Chuck Willenborg are proven veterans. Top junior college player Ollie Jonsson and freshman Johan Donar will help compensate for the loss of Steve Kennedy, a late defector to the professional ranks.

Stanford women seek end to annual trade-off with rival ls it time for the Stanford women to break the pattern?

Since the NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships began in 1982, Stanford and Southern California have alternated claiming the prize. But now, in an odd calendar year, the Cardinal is favored by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association (ITCA) to become the first team to claim two straight titles.

With four players in the ITCA preseason top-20 singles rankings, coach Frank Brennan has his eye on a fourth national crown.

Defending Division I singles champion Patty Fendick (ranked No. 4 among singles players) and Leigh Anne Eldredge (No. 9) lead the experienced team. The two seniors also are ranked fifth among doubles combinations. Junior Kay Tittle and sophomore Eleni Rossides are 17th and 18th, respectively, and Cari Hegey and Stephanie Savides gives Stanford Athletic Conference crown from Texas A&M. Both the Longhorns and the Aggies lost to California powers in the first round last year. Beverly Bowes is No. 3 and Anne Grousbeck is No. 15, and the pair is eighth in doubles. Eileen Tell (No. 39) and Lanae Renschler (No. 47) provide depth.

Northwestern — Senior Diane Donnelly and sophomore Katrina Adams are ranked third in doubles and should win a third straight Big Ten Conference championship. Adams, 1986 ITCA freshman of the year, is No. 14 in singles and the often-overlooked Donnelly is No. 19. The Wildcats lost to Stanford in last year's quarterfinals.

San Diego State — The top-ranked singles player in Division I is Aztec sophomore Monique Javer. Missing is all-America Cynthia MacGregor, but Ann Moeller (No. 25) gives San Diego State another strong singles player. Moeller and Jessica Buss are No. 18 among doubles combinations for the Aztecs, defending champion in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Eldredge and Rossides both have been hampered by stress fractures but could be back at full strength for the stretch run.

"We have a pretty good group together, if we can get everybody healthy," Brennan said. "USC is always right on our heels and it may come down to who's healthy at tournament time. But it's a great advantage playing where we do. We play against the best, and usually we play the top teams twice. Teams from other regions sometimes come to the tournament not sure what they can do."

Here is a rundown of the rest of the top 10 teams in the ITCA poll:

Southern California—Caroline Kuhlman, singles runner-up as a freshman in 1985, sparks Southern California's hopes for returning to the winner's circle. The junior is ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll. Classmate Mary Norwood is ranked 12th. Also back from last year's national finalists are senior Maeve Quinlan and sophomore Ginny Purdy. The success of Dave Borelli's team may ride on doubles, where the Trojans have scrambled their combinations.

Miami (Florida) — Tied with Southern California at No. 2, Miami (Florida) has placed second and third in Division I the last two seasons. The best of the independents, the Hurricanes feature the top-ranked doubles team, Ronni Reis and Lise Gregory. Reis and Gregory (No. 5 and No. 6, respectively, in singles) were 29-0 last year in winning the doubles title. Elizabeth Levinson and Kerri Reiter are also in the top 50 individually.

Trinity (Texas)—Four-time all-America Gretchen Rush has graduated, but the rest of the Tigers' top six return. Junior Ann Hulbert, who reached the finals with Rush last May, is No. 20 in the preseason poll. Also ranked are Elvyn Barrable (No. 24), Jane Holdren (No. 29) and Jana Klepec (No. 33). Barrable and Klepec are No. 14 in doubles.

California—The return of Junior Wightman Cup veterans Jennifer Prah and Karen Shin boosts California's hopes of returning to the Division I quarterfinals. Prah is No. 10 in the ITCA listings and Shin No. 11. Sophomore Sharon Fletcher also will help the Golden Bears, who won six straight crowns in the Northern Pacific Athletic Conference.

Texas -- With two players in the top 15 of the ITCA singles rankings, Texas hopes to take the Southwest UCLA—The Bruins, hosts of the Division I championships May 14-21 in Los Angeles, have strength in doubles, where Jane Thomas and Jennifer Fuchs are ranked fourth. Joni Urban (No. 36) is another proven performer, and the return from injury of Allyson Cooper, who enjoyed an outstanding fall season, boosts UCLA into a contending position.

Oklahoma State—The Cowgirls have won the Big Eight Conference for six straight years and should have little trouble repeating in 1987. Senior Renata Baranski is ranked No. 16 and junior Libbie Brende is No. 40. Brende and veteran Lorna Browne See Stanford, page 11

Mustang men, Cougar women are favored in Division II

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, which last year became the first team besides Tennessee-Chattanooga to win a Division II women's title since 1983, will be a favorite to repeat in 1987. The Cougars hope to maintain a school tradition that saw the men's team win eight straight national championship. On the men's side, UC Davis is the preseason favorite to keep the title in California.

Division II men

After seeing Southern Illinois-Edwardsville win eight straight national championships, the California schools have bounced back to join their Division I brethren at the top of the heap. Chapman broke the Cougars' streak in 1985 and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo won last spring.

This season, the favorite in the ITCA preseason poll is UC Davis, which has four players among the top 40 singles performers.

Senior Aleco Preovolos, ranked No. 4, leads the Mustangs, who finished third in Division II last year. Also on hand are veterans Cort Schultz (No. 13), Chris Newman (No. 34) and Benji Aguirre (No. 48). However, Aguirre has suffered from back problems and may be limited in his 1987 action.

In doubles rankings, Preovolos and Newman are No. 2 and Schultz and Aguirre No. 15. Preovolos teamed with Elliott Dun to reach the 1986 doubles semifinals.

We're honored to be ranked so high," said coach Bob Biggs, "but it doesn't mean much until we prove ourselves. We're facing a formidable schedule and we should know more about ourselves by tournament time."

Hampton, which lost to UC Davis, 5-4, in the third-place match, is ranked second in the preseason poll. The Pirates, national champions in 1976 and runners-up in 1985, feature the top-rated doubles team in Rozzell Lightfoot and Greg Williams. Lightfoot and Williams also are Nos. 5 and 6, respectively, in singles rankings.

Datus Murray (No. 29), Stephen Martin (No. 42) and Eduardo Afini (No. 49) provide depth for Hampton.

Chapman suffered a bitter end to its 1986 season. A preseason favorite to repeat, the Panthers lost, 5-4, in the final, where all three doubles matches went the full three sets. Gone is fourtime all-America Troy Turnbull, but Paul Wekesa and Olivier Amerlinck are ranked seventh and eighth this season in singles. Amerlinck teams with Paul Charlesworth (No. 50) to form the No. 7 doubles team and Wekesa and Barry Hancock are No. 11.

Rollins' Pat Emmet will be looking for individual honors in 1987 while leading the Tars' drive for the championship. Emmet, ranked No. 2 in singles, lost in the semifinals last season to eventual champion Neil Smith of Stephen F. Austin State. Rollins, ranked fourth in the preseason listings, has three other players in the top 30, including Pat Johnson (No. 9) and Robert Green (No. 25), who with Emmet also is ranked third in doubles

Defending champion Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo returns only Dale Minney from last year's primary lineup, but adds strong players in Mike Giusto (No. 18), Jim Ault (No. 27) and Tim Fresenius (No. 33). Giusto and Steve Vogt form a strong doubles team in the tradition of the Mustangs' Paul Landry and Bob Zoller, who lost only one set on their way to the 1986 Division II doubles crown.

Cal State Hayward welcomes the arrival of Mauricio Achondo from Stephen F. Austin State, which dropped tennis after a successful history in the sport. Achondo is the topranked player in the competitive West region and ranks No. 3 nationally. Sophomore Tom Edwards is No. 23 and junior college product Tom Bogar (No. 38) is No. 6 in doubles with Achondo.

Defending Division III champions should contend again for crowns

Defending Division III men's team champion Kalamazoo and women's champion Trenton State each lose national singles titlists from last year, but have enough remaining talent to contend again in 1987.

Division III men

Kalamazoo, which won its third Division III title last May, enters the new season as the favorite to repeat. National singles champion Timon Corwin has graduated, but coach George Acker welcomes back defending doubles champs Alex Palladino and Jim Burda. The senior tandem is listed No. 1 in the ITCA preseason poll, with Palladino No. 8 in singles. Also on hand is junior Jack Hosner (No. 37), but the Hornets will miss Corwin and fellow all-America Butch Gebhardt.

Kalamazoo, which has been champion or runner-up in Division III six times since 1976, now has won the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Conference crown 48 straight times.

Washington and Lee, runner-up last spring, is tabbed for the same spot in 1987 but has the experience and depth to challenge the Hornets. Junior David McLeod is ranked No. 19, and teammates Roby Mize and Bobby Matthews are also in the top 30.

Robert Haley, a transfer from Army, is the Generals' key. His development could boost Washington and Lee's hopes for the title.

Swarthmore, champion in 1985, faces a realignment of doubles combinations this season but boasts strong singles players in Dave Sobeland and Vivek Varma. Whitman's Chris Gregerson is the ITCA's top-ranked preseason singles player. He lost to Corwin in the national finals last year as a freshman. Dave Olafsson (No. 30) is another quality performer for the Missionaries.

women's crown. All-America senior Kathy Crowley, who teamed with Daniel to reach the doubles finals, now is paired with freshman Tracy Prasa. Amy Danser is another proven veteran.

Perennial power Davidson, topranked in the preseason poll a year ago, will compete in Division I this season.

Occidental, last year's runner-up, has five of its top players back. Sophomore Sue Hulse was player of the year in the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and, with teammate Kristin Carter, looks to make an impact in doubles as well. Carter, now a senior, was an NCAA doubles finalist in 1985. Juniors Kiki Rue, Kendal Junta and Harriet Wilcox will also contribute.

Linda Topolsky was a top player for Kalamazoo for the last four seasons. This year, she will make a fifth NCAA tournament appearance, this time as coach of the Hornets. Sophomore Morgan Vis, junior Beth Blachut and an outstanding crop of recruits could lead the team to an improvement on last year's thirdplace finish. Kalamazoo will host the Division III tournament for a third time, May 12-16.

Colorado College, loser last year to Kalamazoo for third place, is led by seniors Melissa Forbes and Kathleen Delaney and junior Sara Ryan.

Emory enters 1987 with three players with national experience. Top-10 singles player Sandy Stein is joined by Cherie Brusko and Jennia Flick. Luther should continue its dominance of the Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and return to the NCAA field, Senior Karen Newcomer and junior doubles combination Melanie Miller and Kris Rutland lead the Norse effort. Mary Washington, another 1986 quarterfinalist, has all six singles players back, led by junior Suzie Groah and sophomore Mitzi Kimball. The Blue Tide adds key freshmen Gerri Hirsch and Dawn Schiller. Principia boasts perhaps the biggest name in the history of Division III women's tennis. Senior Courtney Allen, dominant since her freshman season, has won two singles and two doubles titles and made the singles finals again last year. Junior Sue Godfrey is on hand to help her defend the doubles championship.

Portia George, Steve Holmes and Christina Bokelund, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville

The dominant team in Division II over the last decade, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, is on the rebound with a team dominated by sophomores. Steve Holmes (No. 10) earned all-America honors as a freshman and is now the top-rated player in the Midwest. His classmates include Marco Winter (No. 24) and Dion Joannau (No. 40).

A sophomore is also the top player for Abilene Christian. Neil Berryman, currently No. 11 in singles, reached the doubles finals with veteran Roger White last spring. He now teams with Shane Thompson to rank 10th. The Wildcat roster also includes senior Mickey Navarro (No. 38) and newcomers Matthias Poth and Michael White

After losing to UC Davis to finish seventh last season. Tennessee-Martin must rebuild its squad following the graduation of several standouts, including Martin Bromfield. Only senior Richard Blond (No. 40) returns, but joining the Pacer roster is Richard Robinson (No. 15). The veteran and the newcomer are No. 20 among doubles teams.

The top-rated player in Division II is Ken Olivier, who leads defending Lone Star Conference champion East Texas State. Olivier reached the semifinals in NCAA singles play last spring. Also on hand is David Bushnell (No. 21), who pairs with Olivier to form the No. 4 doubles combina-

Other top-ranked teams, by region, include: East-Bloomsburg (12th), Mercyhurst (17th) and Millersville (20th); South-Florida Atlantic (14th), North Alabama (18th) and Florida International (19th); Midwest-Ferris State (15th), and West-UC Riverside (11th), Cal State Bakersfield (13th) and Cal State Northridge (16th), vision II women's champion in 1982, almost returned to the winner's circle in 1986, falling to Southern Illinois-Edwardsville in the last of the three doubles matches. Back to try again are junior Missy Conn, a singles quarterfinalist, and sophomore Kelly Grattan

Five other California schools could provide further challenges to Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

Cal Poly-Pomona has five players back from its 1986 third-place team, including three seniors. Mary Holycross reached the singles quarterfinals and the doubles semifinals. She and sophomore Xenia Anastasiadou, a member of the Greek national team, lost to the eventual doubles champions, Sandra Elliott and Nancy Roe of Northern Colorado. Senior Debbie Jung had the Broncos' best singles record.

UC Davis also has its 1986 nucleus back, including Karen Astrachan, all-America in singles as a freshman. Edged 5-4 by Cal State Northridge in the third-place match, the Mustangs also return senior Helen Nazar, who was all-America in 1984 and could contend for national honors again this season.

Northern Colorado must start over after losing the two top individual players in Division II. Sandra Elliott and Nancy Row won their second straight national doubles title (Elliott shared it in 1983 as well), and Roe beat her partner in the singles final. Senior Tricia Halle provides a solid foundation for Coach Rosemary Fri's rebuilding program.

Abilene Christian welcomes everyone back from last year's tournament team and adds an outstanding newcomer. Donna Sykes was all-America as a freshman and senior Carol Tavor reached the doubles quarterfinals. Transfer Kim Gidley strengthens the Wildcats.

Cal State Bakersfield loses all-America Mary Ann Hodges and two other key players. Still around is junior Mary Beth Hueve, who reached last year's doubles quarterfinals with Hodges. However, the Roadrunners must find more help. Cal State Los Angeles is young but talented. Sophomore Edna Olivarez is the top-ranked singles player in Division II. She was the ITCA rookie of the year after reaching the 1986 singles semifinals. Other key players include senior Jill Gauthier and sophomore Candace Wong.

Edna Olivarez

Enrique Leal, ranked behind only Palladino and Burda among doubles teams.

After finishing ninth last year with a team dominated by freshmen and sophomores, Claremont-Mudd-Scripps may be in a position to move up in 1987. Frank Hinman (No. 12) is the top gun.

UC Santa Cruz, Rochester and Wisconsin-Stout round out the preseason top 10 as voted by ITCA.

The rest of the top 20 includes Wheaton (Illinois), Carleton, De-Pauw, Redlands, Ripon, St. Thomas (Minnesota), Wooster, Denison and Wisconsin-Whitewater.

When the newly formed University Athletic Association stages its first tennis tournament, Emory will be the favorite. The Eagles are led by No. 7 Steve Gittleson and No. 11 Jimmy Strauss.

Gustavus Adolphus, national champion in 1980 and 1982, is listed as the preseason's No. 5 team but faces a rebuilding process.

Washington (Maryland) is led by seniors Alejandro Hernandez and

At Trenton State, people are wondering if there is life after Debbie Daniel.

The defending champion Lions must face 1987 without their ace, who turned pro after two brilliant seasons. Daniel unseated two-time defending champion Courtney Allen of Principia to win the singles title last year.

"Maybe we can't expect to be as dominating in No. 1 singles," said coach Brenda Campbell. "However, we could be even stronger in the rest of the lineup."

Trenton State, which won by 5-4 margins in both the quarterfinals and semifinals, hopes to become the first school to win a second Division III

At last year's championships, Bob Meyers' team won three matches by 5-4 margins, including the final showdown with Cal State Northridge. With everyone back from that squad, it may not be as close this time around.

Portia George, a freshman sensation in 1986, returns to pace the Cougar effort. The South Carolinian reached the quarterfinals in both singles and doubles to earn all-America honors as a rookie.

George's doubles partner is Christina Bokelund, another sophomore standout. Junior Michelle Wreen is also on hand.

The Cougars' chances to repeat are enhanced further by the move of Tennessee-Chattanooga, champion from 1983 through 1985, to Division

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo is another California school likely to contend.

Ferris State had a perfect fall, not losing a singles or doubles match in eight dual matches. NCAA veterans Diane Makonnen and Effie Mitrovich are joined by freshman Tanya Soemarno, a native of Indonesia. Georgetown and Pace are among the other schools that could contend for national prominence.

Cowboy coach gets same results no matter who's on the tee

By Michael V. Earle The NCAA News Staff

The names and faces change from year to year, but Oklahoma State coach Mike Holder continues to get the same results.

The Cowboys either have won or finished second in 11 of the last 12 NCAA Men's Golf Championships during Holder's 13-year stint as head coach

And despite the loss of 1986 individual titlist Scott Verplank, Holder and his Cowboys again are contenders for the team title that will be decided during the 90th annual championships next June at Ohio State.

Oklahoma State emerged from the fall season ranked No. 1 in most polls mainly because of their performance in late November at the Golf World-Palmetto Dunes Collegiate. Against most of the top teams in the nation, the Cowboys concluded play at 11 under par and had a comfortable nine-stroke lead over runner-up Southern California. In the final round, Michael Bradley fired a tournamentlow 67 to win medalist honors with a nine-under-par 207.

Bradley and the Cowboys also made a clean sweep at the Buckeye Intercollegiate. Bradley, who finished the fall season with a team-low 70.8 per-round stroke average, won individual honors, while the Cowboys outdistanced the field by 21 strokes to win the team title.

Depth-a trademark of Holder's teams-again is Oklahoma State's biggest asset. All-America and defending Big Eight Conference champion Brian Watts finished the fall season with a 73.1 stroke average and is a contender for a top-20 championships finish.

Lettermen Tim Fleming (71.8), E.J. Pfister (73.1), Kevin Whipple (75.5) and John O'Neill (76.3) round out Holder's talented lineup.

Other contenders

Although Oklahoma State is highly regarded, the Cowboys do not have a lock on the championships team title.

Defending champion Wake Forest lost four lettermen from last year's team, which overcame a 16-stroke deficit in the final round to win the title. However, coach Jesse Haddock has cornerstones to build his team on with the return of Len Mattiace, who tied for 14th at last year's championships, and freshman standout Eoghan O'Connell.

A number of other teams have promising regular-season outlooks and the potential to vie for the championships team title. Top contenders (with leading returnees' latest per-

The chances of disrupting Cal State Stanislaus' winning tradition are slim. Hanny returns eight lettermen, five of whom contributed to either the 1985 or 1986 drives to the championships team title.

Front-runners for Hanny's top five lineup spots and probable contenders for national titlist honors include 1986 championships participants Pat Lay, Glenn Andrade and Troy Williams and 1985 returnees Doug Potter and Tom Clark Jr. As usual, Hanny has arranged a tough regular-season schedule designed to get his team tuned up for next May's championships, where the Warriors once again will be the team to beat.

The Moccasins have dominated the NCAA Division II Men's Golf Championships since 1979, winning four team titles and placing second three times.

However, the loss of 1986 individual champion Lee Janzen and two other members of last year's championship team has left Matlock with some big holes in his lineup and could jeopardize his chances to keep Florida Southern atop the division.

The Moccasins will rely on championships veterans Scott Hawkins (74.9) and Mike Mantucci (78.8) to carry the team while Matlock searches for the combination that could make Florida Southern the first squad to win three straight Division II team titles. Senior Ralph Howe, who had a 75.0 stroke average last season, probably will fill Matlock's No. 3 spot in the lineup.

More rave reviews are expected for Florida's 'leading ladies'

One of the stars is missing from last year's five-woman cast, but the third season of "Florida Vise" could get ratings as high as the program's past two campaigns.

Under the direction of coach Mimi Ryan, the 1985 and 1986 NCAA Women's Golf Championships served as stages on which her Lady Gators could shine. Florida became the first team to win two straight titles after last year's eight-stroke victory over runner-up Miami (Florida).

With defending NCAA champion Page Dunlap and three all-America teammates returning, another episode of "Florida Vise" could take place next June.

Dunlap, a senior with a 75.7 perround stroke average, posted seven top-10 finishes last year, including a first-place finish in the prestigious Lady Gator Invitational, where she fired a season-low 217. She carded a season-low second round 70 en route to last year's NCAA individual title.

Junior Karen Davies also enters the season as a top contender for the NCAA individual title. The Newbury, England, junior returns with a teambest 74.3 per-round stroke average and was ranked second in the nation going into last year's championships. Davies, who ended last year's regular season with first-place finishes in the Florida State Collegiate, Lady Sun Devil and Southeastern Conference Championships, posted nine top-10 finishes, including a seventh-place showing at the championships.

Up-and-coming Lisa Nedoba also figures to be near the top of the leader board. Nedoba, who tied for 12th at the championships and posted seven top-10 finishes in 12 outings, was named Southeastern Conference freshman of the year for her efforts. She returns with the team's second lowest per-round average at 75.5 strokes.

Cheryl Morley rounds out Florida's talented group of veterans with a 76.1 per-round stroke average. Morley also had an impressive freshman year, posting six top-10 finishes in 12 tournaments and finishing in a tie for 27th at the championships.

With so much talent returning and the addition of some promising newcomers, Ryan again should lead Florida to an outstanding season. Entering her 17th season at the school, her teams never have finished lower than eighth in the nation and have finished no lower than fifth in the five-year history of the NCAA championships.

Other contenders

Top teams (with leading returnees' latest per-round averages in parentheses) that will be out to loosen Florida's vise include:

Miami (Florida) -- Tracy Kerdyk (73.5), Joye McAvoy (75.2) and Michelle Michanowicz (75.3).

Southern California—Flori Prono (76.1), Kim Cathrein (76.6) and Kim Saiki (76.9).

Arizona State-1985 titlist Danielle Ammaccapane (75.6), Pam Wright (76.5), Missy Farr (73.8) and Pearl Sinn (76.5).

Indiana — Michelle Redman (75.6), Tracy Chapman (77.3), Sarah DeKraay (76.7) and Mary Fechtig (78.2).

Georgia-Stephanie Lowe (75.3), Heather Kuzmich (76.9) and Nanci Bowen (77.1).

Stanford - Clare Dolan (76.9), Kay Cornelius (77.4) and Kathleen McCarthy (78.5).

Weber State-Chris Newton (77.6) and Becky Whitworth (79.7).

Marriage, motherhood can't keep Detroit player off the court she said. "It gets pretty tough."

By Dave Battagello

Mary Kay McNall did not start playing basketball until her sophomore year at Livonia (Michigan) Franklin High. Once she did, it didn't take her long to become one of the game's better players.

In her senior year, she averaged 19.7 points and 13.4 rebounds, and she accepted a scholarship to Michigan State.

She couldn't have imagined that her life was going to become what it is today.

Mary Kay McNall is now Mrs. Chris Whalen, married and the mother of a son, Erik, who will be two years old in February. She is no longer at Michigan State but is still in college and playing basketball-at the University of Detroit,

Whalen is a fifth-year senior for the Lady Titans. She played two seasons at MSU before deciding upon marriage and taking a year off. She and Chris decided to live in Livonia, so Whalen was in search of another college.

"At first, I decided to just finish school," she said. "U of D had what l wanted academically. I hadn't decided whether I was going to play."

It didn't take Whalen long to make a choice. "My best friend worked for the athletics department, so I was always around there. I think inside I always wanted to play, so later in life I'd feel that I didn't quit in the middle of something and regret it."

At MSU, Whalen, 6-feet-3, had a strong sophomore season, starting all 25 games and averaging 13.4 points and 7.8 rebounds as the Spartans' center. As the pivot player, Whalen was an important part of coach Karen Langeland's program. Her decision to leave was not an easy one to make.

"I chose State because I knew the coaches there," said Whalen, who also considered Washington and Louisville. "I knew most of the players. I thought it was a good program.

"It was a hard decision. It's weird because I still see them all (former teammates and coaches) a lot."

Since that time, Lady Titans coach Dewayne Jones has reaped the benefits of Whalen's move. After bouncing back from her one year lay-off, Whalen has started every game for U-D, last season averaging 10.4 points and 9.3 rebounds.

Through 16 games this season, Whalen is averaging 13.1 points per game. She leads the team in rebounding (8.1 average) and blocked shots (just over two per game). Her stats include a subpar performance (eight points, five rebounds) against MSU early in the season. Before that game, Whalen admitted to feeling "kind of nervous" about facing her former school.

Off the court, Whalen not only has to deal with the academic pressure of a full course load, but also has the responsibility of motherhood.

"I get a headache once in awhile,"

Metro Conference adds championship

Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference Commissioner Steven J. Hatchell has announced that the conference athletics directors unanimously approved a recommendation from the track coaches to reestablish the conference men's indoor track championship

The 1987 indoor track championship will be held February 28 in Blacksburg, Virginia.

The conference now has 13 championships, which include eight men's and five women's events

Larger complex sought for Colorado athletics

The University of Colorado athletics department has drawn up a $34 million "wish list" for a 13,000-seat Folsom Field expansion, an 18-hole golf course, a parking complex and a sports training facility.

Associate athletics director Jon Burianek emphasized that the ideas are part of a long-range planning project and that most of them are two or three decades down the road.

"Consultants met with the staff and

Scholarship fund to aid black schools

A scholarship fund to assist 35 historically black colleges and universities was announced January 29 by the National Basketball Association and Miller Lite beer.

The two organizations made an initial $50,000 donation and agreed to jointly provide $1 million to the fund, said Miller spokesman Brad Williams.

The fund will be known as the Thurgood Marshall Scholarship Fund, named after the first black Supreme Court justice.

There was no timetable for contributions, Williams said.

"We have made a long-term commitment to this fund, with no end of our support in sight," he said. He emphasized that the money would be used to provide academic—not athletics—scholarships for black students who want to attend any of the 35 schools.

Other money will be used to prepare television and radio ads publicizing the fund and the Office for the Advancement of Black Public Colleges, which will help in managing the scholarship fund.

The initial check was presented to N. Joyce Payne, president of the college organization, by former NBA stars Bob Lanier and Sam Jones and by Adrian DeGroot, president of NBA Properties, Inc.

Conference on disabled scheduled

The U.S. Olympic Committee's Committee on Sports for the Disabled will hold a conference on sports medicine and sports science for disabled athletes March 26-28 in the Mt. Washington Valley resort area, New Hampshire.

The conference, which is to be held adjacent to the National Handicapped Sport and Recreation Association's national championships, is intended to educate those who work with disabled persons about recreational and competitive sports opportunities for each coach, and we were told to write down anything you still need," Burianek said. "It's just a concept. We don't have a plan of how to finance it. We are still trying to pay each year as it comes.

"But North Carolina recently built a $31 million facility and raised something like $35 million."

Howard Needles Tammen and Bergendorf, a sports facilities design firm that also designed the Meadowlands in New Jersey and Royals Stadium in Kansas City, was hired by Colorado at a cost of $9,500 to devise a plan.

The proposed stadium expansion would push capacity to 64,000, moving Colorado past Missouri for the third-largest football facility in the Big Eight Conference. Burianek said the proposal would enclose the north end of the stadium to complete a bowl.

As for the golf course, there is no land available.

"It's probably 20 to 30 years away unless some rich guy with a ton of money owns some land and can give it to the university as a tax write-off with the idea of building a golf course," he said.

Such a course might be limited to university interests, or it could generate income as a public course.

Also, a multilevel parking facility, either behind the stadium or near the events center, could be a moneymaker for use other than athletics events.

"If you don't have an idea, things can't be done," Burianek told the Associated Press. "Everything is being based on today's dollars, as the university makes plans for space needs for academic and athletics housing and research projects. It's like a road map of where we'd like to be in the year 2006."

Strength, conditioning sessions set

More than 500 strength coaches, exercise physiologists, athletics trainers, sports scientists and sports-medicine physicians are planning to meet June 26-28 for the ninth annual National Strength and Conditioning Association national convention in Las Vegas.

Convention headquarters will be the Tropicana Hotel. All seminars will be conducted at the hotel, and the 120-booth convention trade show will be housed in the Tropicana's pavilion.

Sessions will be presented by top coaches and sports researchers. Two distinct study tracks run concurrently, offering a choice of learning experience. A comprehensive examination is available for those persons who want to obtain college credit for the convention. One credit hour is available through Creighton University.

Ron Johnson (left), president of Idaho State's Bengal Boosters organization, and Bengal athletics director Tom Jewell display an oversized check representing the $60,000 guarantee to the NCAA that is part of a proposed budget for the 1987 Division I-AA Football Championship.

Pocatello bids for I-AA title game

Apparently, when the folks in southeastern Idaho decide they want something, they go after it in a big way.

Take the Division I-AA Football Championship, for example.

When local radio station manager Jim Fox suggested that Idaho State University's Minidome be proposed as the site for the 1987 championship, the university's athletics administration, the Bengal Foundation booster organization and the entire region's population fell in love with the idea. In less than two weeks—and without corporate sponsorship—more than 10,000 tickets were sold.

"All the tickets were sold two at a time," said Tom Jewell, Idaho State athletics director, who made a formal bid for the contest in a January 30 presentation at the NCAA national office. Jewell was joined by Ron Johnson, president of the Bengal Foundation. "We asked the people of Pocatello and southeastern Idaho if they were interested in bringing an NCAA championship to the area, and their response was overwhelming," Jewell said.

A six-member committee, when finished with preliminary planning, announced its intention to bid for the championship January 16. When Jewell and Johnson arrived at the national office, they brought with them a letter certifying that funds already had been received for the purchase of more than 10,000 tickets.

"We thought sales would peak after about a week, but they just kept going," Johnson explained. At a chamber of commerce meeting January 20, the planning group asked for at the chamber office. By the end of that week, branch outlets had to be set up to handle the tremendous demand for tickets.

"Some of the stories are just unbelieveable," Jewell said. "We had a 90year-old lady who is sightless send a friend in to buy a ticket for her. My wife was working when a young fellow came in and asked if he could get a ($10) ticket for his dad on time...he wanted to pay us $2 a week from his paper-route earnings. It seems his dad was out of work and needed surgery, and this young man wanted him to have a ticket for the game. One of the workers at the desk wrote a check and bought the ticket...plus one for the kid.

"I could go on and on," Jewell said, "But the point is, we were very gratified at the overwhelming support the idea received." "We ran into a guy at the Salt Lake City airport from the area," Johnson said, "and he knew we were coming to the NCAA office. All he said was, 'Don't come home without that bid.' All the radio stations and media outlets in the area got behind this thing....I believe it really brought the community together."

Jerry A. Miles, NCAA director of men's championships, said the Division I-AA Football Committee has scheduled a February 9 telephone conference to review proposed budgets and possibly take action on recommending a site for the championship.

"We're real excited about bringing the game to Idaho State," Jewell said. "We believe the response our effort generated is evidence of the region's commitment to staging a first-class event."

To play, it takes $17,000 for tuition, top IQ and talent

By Mario Fox

To play on John Angelus' basketball team, you must have the brains to get into the University of Chicago and the wherewithal to pay $17,000 a year in tuition to stay there.

"We get brainy kids, but lately we've been getting good basketball players, too," Angelus, whose Maroons enjoy a 12-2 record this season, told the Associated Press.

Angelus admitted that he's at a recruiting disadvantage and has to send out 5,000 letters a year to attract high school athlete-scholars.

This year, the Maroons feature four gifted seniors who each have been averaging 12 to 16 points a game — forward Tom Redburg, guard Mike Clifford, and the double-post pair of 6-6 Dave Witt and 6-5 Tom Lepp.

"Redburg really is the key. He's back after sitting out a year. He had to go find the money for the $17,000 tuition. Like the others, he came here for the academic programs. He's a fine math student," said Angelus.

Chicago is 7-0 atop the Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference, playing the likes of Knox, Illinois College, Coe and Beloit.

disabled persons and to provide information about significant sportsmedicine and science practices and concepts and their application to athletes with a wide range of disabilities.

The program will include lectures, audiovisual presentations and panel discussions and will include a number of noted athletes and experts on sports for the disabled. A call for papers has been issued for relevant research.

Duane Messner, M.D., of Lakewood, Colorado, is program chair, and Jack Benedick, competition director for the National Handicapped Sport and Recreation Association, is serving as program cochair. For further information, contact Mary Margaret Newsom at the U.S. Olympic Committee, Department of Education Services, 1750 East Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909-5760 (303/578-4546). Preceding the convention May 24-25 is the preconvention tutorial session for persons seeking certification as a strength and conditioning specialist. The certification examination is May 25, also at the Tropicana.

new sports center

Wisconsin Governor Tommy G. Thompson is scheduled to be among the speakers for the formal dedication of Beloit College's new $6 million Sports Center February 6.

The dedication ceremony also will feature individuals who made major contributions to the construction of the building and many of the great athletes who share in the college's athletics heritage.

The Sports Center will serve as the home of the college's intercollegiate, club and intramural teams and as a facility for physical-education instruction and the general physical-fitness needs of Beloit's students, faculty and administration. "The advantage is that the type of man you get is first-rate," he said. "They play hard and they use their brains to make up for any lack of talent." Chicago is ranked No. 19 in the latest Division III poll.

Angelus' record is "about 120-108" in his 11th season as head basketball coach of the team.

"The first day of practice, I always tell them I'm their doctor or Ph.D. of basketball," Angelus said. "I don't try to keep up with them intellectually. They'd blow me away."

One of his recent players was a Rhodes scholar. One year, he had five medical students on the team.

"One of the guys recently operated on my ear, and when he was about to operate, he said, 'Coach, I was never satisfied with the playing time you gave me.' I told him, 'Get outa here,'" Angelus said. But the Maroons have played Division I schools, including Duke several years ago.

"We lost by 20 points, but Duke beat Villanova by 30 points that same year," said Angelus.

In past seasons, the Maroons also have played Northwestern, Northern Illinois, Tulane and Loyola of Chicago.

Next year, Chicago will play in the new University Athletic Association that also has New York University, Washington (Missouri), Emory and Carnegie-Mellon.

"We'll be playing teams from research-level universities like ourselves," Angelus said. "It's tough playing kids who don't have science lab twice a week."

with playing and practice seasons. "The people who visited the exhibit really seemed pleased with the plan to arrange all information on playing and practice seasons by sport, in alphabetical order," Andrus said.

Bailey said the group still intends to complete its work in time for the 1988 Convention, although he said the June special Convention may affect that schedule.

"We spent a great deal of time at our last meeting (January 27-28 in Dallas) projecting the flow for the remainder of our work and for the reviewers," Bailey explained. "We are still shooting for January 1988, but the special Convention in June will complicate things. Just about the time we get all of the changes from the 1987 Convention incorporated, it will down."

Bailey again indicated the special committee's desire to get suggestions for possible deregulation from member institutions. "We had a suggestion box in place for that at the Convention exhibit, and we received only three items," he noted. "And unfortunately, none of those really dealt with the issue of deregulation."

"One of the questions I was asked most often concerned how much smaller the revised Manual was going to be," Andrus said. "I pointed out that, in undertaking a project of this size and complexity, it was impossible to speculate on the size of the finished product. Instead, I stressed that regardless of the book's size, the special committee was committed to the publication of an NCAA Manual that is more useable."

A plan to boost the graduation rate of student-athletes at Florida's nine public universities has been announced following a study showing an alarmingly low graduation rate among male athletes.

The plan was included in a 65-page report issued by Dr. Charles B. Reed, chancellor of the state university system, the Associated Press reported.

Antispearing rule in football has cut injuries significantly

Some football players who used their bodies as "spears," tackling opponents helmet-first and ramrod straight, occasionally suffered catastrophic and sometimes fatal injuries, says a leading sports physician.

"Implementation of rule changes and coaching techniques eliminating the use of the head as a battering ram has resulted in a drop from 34 cases of permanent paralysis in the legs and arms in 1976 to five in 1984," Joseph Torg, M.D., told the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons recently.

Torg advised that similar rule changes in "diving, rugby, ice hockey and gymnastics" could possibly reduce the incidence of cervical spine injuries in those sports.

A team led by Torg, University of Pennsylvania Sports Medical Center physician, documented statistics that six defensive backs suffered severe upper-spine fractures and quadriplegia after using the battering-ram tackle in unspecified games in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Torg said in a paper that in addition to studying how injuries occurred between 1971 and 1975, the group tallied the number of deaths, types of injuries and quadriplegia cases due to head injuries.

Torg said 58 players died and 99 became quadriplegics in the period studied. He said some 52 percent of the quadriplegics had used their helmets to "spear" their opponents.

"These statistics are in marked contrast to statistics from 1959 to 1963 when more players died --65-but fewer --30-became quadriplegic while playing football," he said.

"By the 1970s, players were wearing helmet-mask units that provided better head and face protection. At that time, players began to use the 'headfirst' battering techniques to block and tackle the other team."

In 1975, quadriplegia occurred in 2.2 per 100,000 of high school players and 8.4 per 100,000 of college players, he said, noting that by 1977, the second year of the antispearing rule, the quadriplegia rate dropped to 1.3 per 100,000 and 2.7 per 100,000 of high school and college players, respectively.

Trials scheduled for U.S. women's basketball teams

Trials for the women's basketball teams representing the United States in the Pan American Games and World University Games will be held April 23-26 at the Olympic Training analyzed film clips of spearing injuries and learned how they happened, Torg told the Associated Press.

He explained that in a spear tackle, the top of the helmet collides with another player, transmitting forces straight through the compressed upper spine, damaging bones, discs and ligaments.

"When the cervical spine is in a normal tackling position, in which the shoulder absorbs most of the force of the impact, the loads on the spine are generally not great enough to cause injuries to it," said the doctor. I Sun Belt Conference. Others universities suggested for the conference were Florida Atlantic, North Florida, West Florida, Central Florida, Florida International and Florida A&M. Central and FAMU also are Division I schools.

The findings of a year-long study showed that 47 percent of nonathletes graduated compared to just 38 percent of male athletes.

On the other hand, 64 percent of female athletes graduated within six years of enrollment compared to the female average of 35 percent.

The study found that just 27 percent of student-athletes on basketball scholarships at the state's five Division I schools had graduated within six years of their enrollment, while only 35 percent of the football scholarship players at Florida, Florida State and Florida A&M graduated.

Florida State graduated 50 percent of its student-athletes who entered school in 1978 on basketball scholarships but just 29 percent of its football scholarship students.

The greatest disparity from the school average was at the University of Florida, where 55 percent of male nonathletes had graduated compared to just 40 percent of its male athletes.

The study focused on students who enrolled in the state's schools in the summer or fall of 1978. It was compiled by 11 out-of-state consultants who reviewed university self-study reports and conducted interviews on the campuses of the nine schools.

The resulting report issued by Reed made several recommendations to boost graduation rates as part of a plan to bring uniformity into athletics programs across the state.

The recommendations include: • Providing scholarship aid for Division I athletes who already have finished their eligibility.

• Not applying admissions standards for student-athletes that are different from those used for nonathletes.

• Putting academic advising and tutoring under supervision of an appropriate academic or student-affairs unit rather than the intercollegiate athletics program.

• Channeling all financial and inkind support for intercollegiate athletics programs through an officially certified direct-support organization.

• Requiring all state institutions to conduct an annual audit and provide copies of annual financial statements to the board of regents each year.

"We can have strong, competitive intercollegiate athletics programs and strong student-athletes who succeed in the classroom as well as on the playing field," said Reed.
