Schedule of meetings set for special Convention

The meeting schedule has been determined for the special NCAA Convention to be held June 29-30 in Dallas.

Time will be available for conference and other related meetings during the afternoon Sunday, June 28, if needed, and during the morning Monday, June 29.

The special Convention will begin at 1:30 p.m. June 29 with the opening business session, including necessary announcements and a general presentation of Convention issues.

From 2:45 to 5 p.m. June 29, any necessary division business sessions will be held. Until the content of Convention legislation is known, it cannot be determined if there will be sessions for all divisions and subdivisions or only for certain ones. In any event, the first voting will occur in those sessions during the afternoon of June 29.

A reception for all delegates will begin at 6 p.m. that evening.

The general business session is scheduled from 8 a.m. to approximately 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 30. It is anticipated that the Convention will adjourn at or before 1 p.m., although the volume of legislation presented will decide that.

A mailing to all member conferences regarding their interest in scheduling meetings at the special Convention will be sent from the NCAA office this week. The hotel reservation mailing to all members will be sent by the end of March.

The special Convention will be held at Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas.

Called by the Presidents Commission and announced in January, the special Convention is limited to "those issues that relate to containing costs of intercollegiate athletics programs and to maintaining a proper balance between intercollegiate athletics programs and other institutional programs."

Those issues specifically include the areas of recruiting, coaches' compensation, playing and practice seasons, coaching staff size, financial aid, and academic performance.

The Presidents Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility will meet in Arlington, Virginia, March 2 to determine the legislative proposals that it wants to ask the Commission to sponsor for the special Convention. The full Commission will act on those recommendations April 2, and they will be reported to the NCAA Council in the latter's April 13-15 meeting.

Deadline for receipt in the national office of all legislation for the special Convention is Thursday, April 30. The Official Notice of the Convention, containing an updated meeting schedule and all proposed legislation, will be mailed from the national office May 15.

Federal move on athletics is foreseen

"The Federal government is about three years away from stepping into the mess that colleges and universities have created for themselves" in athletics, according to former Yale President A. Bartlett Giamatti, the new president of professional baseball's National League.

"The country," Giamatti said in a speech earlier this month at the University of Hartford, "is finally getting sick of the fact that the very people who have been charged with the education of the young have been unable or unwilling to regulate their own standards, to clean up their own drug problems, to live up to their own high principles."

In his talk on the role of athletics in education at the University of Hartford Diamond Club baseball dinner, Giamatti attacked institutions of higher education that have failed to keep athletics in proper perspective.

"It is not simply the role of athletics in an educational process, but it is rather what the educational process is in the first place and how athletics fits into it. If that question is not asked by every institution that presumes to field teams—public, private, new, old, North, South, East, West—if the institution does not come to a view of what its philosophy of education is, it can only have education happening separately from athletics."

"If education happens in a place and is separate from athletics... then athletics are merely an ornament, an adjunct—a kind of marketing. And

Drug testing scheduled for tournament teams

John L. Toner, chair of the Special NCAA Postseason Drug-Testing Committee, told approximately 60 sports-writers attending the 11th annual College Football Preview that the NCAA will begin testing student-athletes participating in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship as soon as the 64-team field is selected.

Toner, who kicked off the February 23-24 preview in Kansas City, Missouri, said time constraints probably will prevent the processing of testing results from first-round games before the second round of games starts. Teams will be selected March 9. Some first-round games begin March 12.

"Our first goal is to have a clean regional championship, and in order to do that, we must test either before or after the first round," Toner said. "We will test continuously throughout the championship; however, we lack the time to guarantee a clean first round due to the schedule."

"We're going to subject every single student-athlete in the tournament to testing, either before a game or at the conclusion of a game. And that includes the Final Four."

Tests will begin some time between the announcement of the field and the end of the first round, Toner said.

Dr. Don Catlin, director of the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center, joined Toner in the panel discussion to explain the testing procedures utilized and the steps taken to ensure reliable and accurate testing.

Toner's presentation was followed by a series of panel discussions with the 10 football coaches selected to participate in this year's preview, which was moderated by University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, athletics director John D. Swofford, chair of the NCAA Communications Committee.

Coaches invited to this year's NCAA-sponsored preview included Bobby Bowden, Florida State University; Dick Crum, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Rocky Felker, Mississippi State University; Ken Hatfield, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Jimmy Johnson, University of Miami (Florida); Bill Mallory, Indiana University, Bloomington; Keith Piper, Denison University; Erk Russell, Georgia Southern College; Larry Smith, University of Southern California, and Denny Stolz, San Diego State University.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also attended the preview.

Toner said he was "pleasantly surprised at the low number of positive tests" conducted in the NCAA's inaugural program. According to Toner, See Drug testing, page 12

NCAA committee hopes to leave useful legacy

The NCAA Long Range Planning Committee doesn't have much of a future, but that isn't stopping the group from careful consideration of developments that may affect intercollegiate athletics in the years ahead.

Meeting in Mesa, Arizona, February 19-20, the committee devoted a major portion of its agenda to planning the topics to be discussed in its final meeting, June 4-5 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The committee will be dissolved after that meeting, to be replaced by the new Committee on Review and Planning, which was established by the delegates to the January Convention in San Diego. The new committee will be composed of six former elected NCAA officers and one nationally prominent citizen who is a former student-athlete.

Members of the new committee are not scheduled to be appointed until the April Council meeting, but the NCAA Administrative Committee has expressed hope that the new group can conduct its first meeting June 5-6 in Kansas City, meeting for a portion of June 5 with the Long Range Planning Committee.

Among the topics the outgoing committee will discuss in its final meeting are these:

- Ethics and integrity, including means of maintaining momentum toward greater integrity in college athletics.

- Loyalty to the institution, including means of diminishing "the use of college athletics for personal gain."

- Institutional chain of command in athletics matters, including means of reestablishing the athletics director's responsibility for the athletics program.

- Reemphasis on coaches' adherence to coaching creeds and codes of ethics.

- Continuing emphasis on academic standards, including attention to a consistent national definition of "good academic standing" for purposes of athletics eligibility.

- The chain of command in NCAA governance, including examination of the organizational roles of the NCAA Council, Executive Committee and Presidents Commission, as well as the NCAA roles of the chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative and athletics director.

- Examination of the NCAA membership's expectations of the NCAA—what the Association realistically can and cannot do.

- Recommendations by the student-athlete serving on the committee.

- A review of the Long Range Planning Committee's past recommendations and contributions to the Association through its 24-year existence.

Other actions

The committee, chaired by former NCAA President William J. Flynn, athletics director at Boston College, also took these actions during its winter meeting:

- Recommended that the NCAA Council and Nominating Committee consider a general guideline to the effect that a two-year commitment as an elected NCAA officer is sufficient. If such a guideline were adopted, officers generally would not be eligible for election to another office until at least one year had elapsed.

- Urged that the Divisions I, II and

Athletics should be run like any other business

By Bucky Waters
Eastern Basketball

I believe that there is a serious need for economic reform in college athletics, reform that must be initiated by both the NCAA and the universities themselves.

The NCAA's most recent attempt at fiscal reform appears to be both irrational and ill-conceived.

By reducing the number of scholarships allowed in men's basketball and initial grants in football, the powers-that-be are merely serving to penalize the only true revenue-producing programs at a vast majority of Division I schools.

A more prudent posture by the NCAA, a posture focused on academics, not economics, would have been to eliminate freshman eligibility in football and basketball.

As a former coach, I do admit to being somewhat biased, placing a breadwinner like men's basketball above most other intercollegiate sports. Nonetheless, we must face facts: About 75 percent of the NCAA budget is supported by college basketball.

Universities with profitable basketball programs—and there are quite a few of them out there—should be able to invest their money from whence it came. I resent the draining and cutbacks of a revenue producer when there is an overabundance of tennis players, golfers and gymnasts traveling around the country on scholarships.

Although I don't expect to make friends with too many racket-wielding college students with these comments, I nevertheless consider myself to be a rather practical and rational businessman when the talk turns to the "hows" and "whys" of running an athletics department.

Being actively involved in fund-raising and alumni relations for Duke University, I have a keen awareness for the economic stress on educational funds and on what most institutions hope to achieve with their investment in athletics. Many people seem to lose perspective of a university as a business, a business that must be organized and administered in a cost-effective manner, from the history department right down to the athletics department.

A majority of major-college athletics departments, specifically those on the Division I level, do not appear to be realistically administered from an economic standpoint. Too much money is invested in sports that provide little or no revenue for the university, sports such as baseball and women's basketball. Why should these sports be afforded many of the same opportunities (several scholarships per team, sufficient amount of travel, new equipment and uniforms each year) that breadwinners like men's basketball and football are afforded?

Before you start calling me a male chauvinist or a basketball-

Some ways to improve athletics fund-raising

By James E. Harris

Questions have been raised this academic year about the manner in which private contributions of cash or gifts-in-kind have been handled by some athletics departments.

Although there are many management approaches that could be implemented to help remedy this problem, one obvious and inex-opment staff fund-raising rules and priorities.

While many booster organizations are independent of general university development programs and need to stay that way, competition for donor dollars is increasing, fund-raising techniques have grown more sophisticated and the eye of the public is riveted on "cleaning up" intercollegiate athletics. Now is the time for athletics fund-raisers to take the initiative to create a system of checks and balances to protect their credibility and ensure donor confidence in athletics booster organizations.

Without sacrificing autonomy, nurturing a better relationship with development offices can reap benefits for athletics fund-raising programs, including a more professional system for accounting, the avoidance of "double dipping" donors, more appropriate recognition of donors who may be involved in several facets of the university, and a sharing of resources that can result in cost-saving for both athletics and development.

Probably the most important single element in this relationship is that arrangements be made to be certain all athletics contributions are properly logged in the university central gift-receiving and receipting system used by the development office, thus ensuring accounting integrity and the availability of documentation for any pensive solution lies in prevention through stronger working relationships between athletics fund-raising and university development staffs.

Traditionally, the relationship between the two entities has been loose at best; and it's typically fraught with suspicion, jealous competition and turf-guarding over potential donors. Many development directors have looked the other way rather than try to understand the special needs of athletics fund-raising, and, conversely, many athletics personnel have thumbed their noses at devel-

NCAA penalties aren't tough enough

John F. Rooney Jr., professor of geography

The Recruiting Game (University of Nebraska Press)

"The (NCAA) penalties seem to have had no effect upon the appeal of the guilty universities to the majority of potential recruits, and they are not stiff enough to dissuade the rule breakers. The new 'death penalty'... was designed to inhibit future rule-breakers. Unfortunately, the new penalty... is a response to the symptoms and not to the cause of the problem.

"Cheating stems from the irrational pressure to win. Coaches and boosters bend and break the recruiting rules in pursuit of their prey.

"Once landed, the student-athlete is subjected to inordinate time demands—time demands that frequently preclude progress toward a degree. Until tough restraints are placed on boosters and limits are imposed on the time devoted to sport, there can be no meaningful change.

"Only one conclusion can be drawn. Cheating is much more widespread than the number of NCAA sanctions between 1952 and 1985 indicate. The NCAA responds to complaints. It is not an effective monitoring agency like the CIA or FBI. It has a small, although recently increased, enforcement staff. To police the recruitment and off-campus care of athletes effectively would require a staff of 500 Columboes and a budget that would paralyze the system."

"It (National Letter of Intent) is the best instrument that NCAA schools have at their disposal. It's the least controversial document we deal with.

"Two years ago, the NCAA decided to get tough with repeat offenders, schools that used the rule book as little more than a paperweight and went along blithely busting the regulations whenever it suited their fancy.

"The warning was clear. Stay clean, or you're gone. Wouldn't you know the first customer to test the policy would be the good old Mustangs (Southern Methodist University), six-time violators of the code. Already under sanctions for improper benefits to athletes and improper recruiting, SMU did the same thing all over again....

"(Faculty athletics representative Lonnie D.) Kliever would not comment on what SMU and the (NCAA) enforcement folks had proposed as an appropriate price for the school to pay, but said it was substantial. 'The penalty we proposed is quite severe,' he said. 'It is intended to rectify any advantage the program has gained. Our penalties (proposed by SMU for its infractions) would do that.'

"So would the 'death penalty.'"

"I want to assure people that I am a supporter of intercollegiate athletics and that I have enormous respect for the storied tradition of athletics at Georgia. I want to win. I want the athletics program to be a point of pride for the university and the state. At a complex institution, you need unifying themes.

"We're not going to cheat while I'm president at Georgia (Knapp's appointment was approved in mid-February by the board of regents). We're going to abide by the NCAA rules—and I don't agree with every rule in that book, by the way. It's one of the most complex, convoluted publications I've ever run across. But those are the rules."

"The state of the union's classrooms is not what it ought to be. Education today is very complex because the needs and problems of our students are much more complex.

"An increasing portion of our population grows up in poverty, with English language deficiencies; in households without daytime parental guidance; as children of teenage mothers; fighting drug problems, or in other situations that present serious impediments to educational achievement and, ultimately, future productivity.

"If we are to remain competitive with our neighbors, allies and adversaries over the next century... we must make the investment now to prepare our children, especially those with special needs.

"While the majority of coaches still appears opposed to the rule...there is no evidence...that the game has suffered irreparable harm.

"To the contrary, the excitement level at college basketball games has never seemed higher. Some rule changes make subtle alterations in the game. The three-point shot is as subtle as a smash in the mouth. When you're leading by two points with the clock running down and the other guy throws one in from 20 feet—ouch, that hurts."

biased buffoon, please bear with me.

I am aware of Title IX, and I am aware that there are other sports out there. I am also a staunch advocate of the intramural and club sports programs at our universities. By competing in these programs, one can stay just as healthy, learn just as much about teamwork and sportsmanship, and have just as much fun as one has participating in an organized intercollegiate program.

There is no NCAA rule that specifically states that you must travel around the country and wear expensive uniforms in order to reap the benefits of athletics participation.

I am by no means anti-Title IX, despite what you may think. Great strides in women's athletics have been achieved because of Title IX, strides that should have been made years ago. I do feel, however, that in this age of serious economic restraints for universities, the Title IX mentality is adding undue pressure on athletics administrators to try to please everyone—from players to coaches to educators.

Because I played and coached college basketball on the Division I level, I certainly understand what an enriching experience it can be to travel, to play in large arenas against the best competition in the country and to stay in nice hotels. Everyone, from basketball players to swimmers to tennis players, enjoys the special treatgift.

Attending development-staff meetings on an ad hoc basis can provide insights into overall university plans for fund-raising and can be useful in very practical ways, such as timing of athletics fund drives to avoid an overlap with other university requests.

Familiarity with development office policies and procedures for fund-raising can be an invaluable starting point for a system of written, clearly defined policies on private contributions for athletics fund-raising so that staff, coaches and volunteers all operate under the same rules.

Constructive communication between athletics and development staffers can help improve mutual respect, increase positive visibility with university administration and improve chances for support when presenting requests for increased budgets, space, ment and the amenities of competing for a nationally prominent athletics program.

There exists, however, too much of this special treatment in college athletics. Universities that carry a heavy load of Division I programs should have more of their teams competing on the Division II, Division III or club level. Am I being too idealistic here? Perhaps I am.

Largely because of Title IX, the NCAA has decreed that all of its member schools must maintain a minimum number of men's and women's athletics teams in order for that school to be eligible for a national title in any intercollegiate sport.

Once again, I am not opposed to the principles set forth by Title IX, nor do I believe that women's sports should be the first to go in the wake of budget cuts.

Why should a university, however, be forced to field a minimum number of teams when many of those teams collectively are draining the athletics department's already tight budget?

Quite often, a school cannot even recruit enough qualified student-athletes to build competitive programs in specific sports. As I stated before, you just can't hope to satisfy everyone and still expect to run your business (or athletics department, in this case) at the same time in a cost-effective manner.

Division I schools should run (or be allowed by the NCAA to run) their staff or other considerations to university administration and committees.

The profession of athletics fund-raising has come of age with trained fund-raisers who have public relations savvy and are well-versed in NCAA and IRS rules managing sophisticated booster organizations that generate millions of dollars in support of intercollegiate athletics.

Ironically, we athletics fund-raisers have failed to devote the same level of attention to managing contributions with air-tight accounting procedures and scrupulous professionalism that we have to securing the gifts in the first place.

As athletics fund-raising professionals, we have ourselves to blame when others question the disposition of donor funds and gifts-in-kind or fail to give our booster groups the same level of respect afforded other athletics programs more like the way many Divisions II and III schools run theirs. There's much less economic waste, and money is invested most heavily in the sports that return the most revenue or exposure for the university.

The financial waste that exists in college athletics is a problem created by both the universities and the NCAA. College administrators are simply not being smart businessmen; they are not facing up to reality when organizing their athletics budgets.

There are many ways to financially streamline an athletics program, such as cutting back on scholarships, new uniforms and equipment, and slicing coaching salaries. I can assure you not enough of this streamlining is going on out there.

The NCAA also voted at its recent Convention to limit the amount of color that can be used in a school's basketball media guide.

Sadly enough, this is how the NCAA is waging the battle against financial waste in our nation's athletics departments. The next thing you know, all schools will be limited in the number of colors that they can wear on their road jerseys.

In fact, any school with a colorful nickname may have to change its moniker. Syracuse Orangemen, Stanford Cardinal, beware.

Waters formerly coached men's basketball at West Virginia University and Duke University.

institutional fund-raising entities.

We need to police our own profession now and upgrade our standards so that outmoded practices don't cause the destruction of the privilege of seeking, finding and building the private support so vital to ensuring fair intercollegiate athletics competition.

Working harder to communicate with and build relationships between athletics and development is just one way to gain new respect for athletics and fund-raising.

But most importantly, it will also result in the peace of mind that comes from the knowledge that a system of checks and balances is functioning, shared accountability for donor monies has taken place, and a firm record of donor involvement is immediately at hand.

Tapes of NCAA seminar are available for ordering

A series of audio cassettes of the 1987 NCAA Professional Development Seminar has been made available for purchase.

The seminar, held January 4-5 in San Diego in conjunction with the 81st annual Convention, focused on drug education and testing and related topics. Experts revealed how both education and testing have been used to combat and prevent drug abuse among student-athletes.

Included among the topics were the recognition of symptoms of drug abuse, the implementation of campus drug-testing programs, the NCAA's own postseason program and making student-athletes aware of the dangers of drug abuse.

Individual cassettes of seminar sessions are available for $6 each, and the entire package of nine cassettes is available for $45.

One of the tapes features former

Olympic swimming champion John Naber, who delivered the luncheon address.

Among the session topics also included in the cassette series are "Drug Testing at NCAA Championship Events," "Recognizing the Symptoms," "Awareness Programs" (two cassettes), "Implementing a Drug-Testing Program," "Drug Problems and the Media," "Drug Prevention and Education," and "Image of Excellence."

Seminar speakers included physicians, trainers and athletics administrators, as well as former professional football star Carl Eller.

Payment by check, Visa or MasterCard can be mailed to Seminar Cassettes, 508 Pyke Road, Lexington, Kentucky 40504. Checks should be made payable to "Seminar Cassettes." There is a postage and handling charge of $3. An order form appears below for the customer's convenience.

Kentucky has been one of best since college game began

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

College basketball's top teams, decade by decade, can be found in the story of the game's hall-of-fame coaches and their great players.

Not surprisingly, Adolph Rupp's Kentucky teams led the nation in the 1940s and the 1950s, while UCLA and John Wooden were on top in the 1960s and 1970s. So far in the 1980s, North Carolina and Dean Smith dominate. Oklahoma State and Henry Iba ranked second in the 1940s, North Carolina State and Everett Case were No. 2 in the 1950s, Cincinnati and Ed Jucker were second in the 1960s, Marquette and Al McGuire were No. 2 in the 1970s, and Georgetown and John Thompson rank second in the current decade. (This covers men's Division I only.)

In next week's notes, we will examine the top teams in NCAA tournament play, decade by decade.

The early years

The first college game with five players on a side was played in 1896 (Chicago 15, Iowa 12). Schedules were short in the early years, and opponents consisted of athletics clubs and YMCAs in nearby towns, to a large extent. It was not until the 1910-19 decade that intercollegiate play largely was the rule, but it was highly regionalized. Here are the top teams in winning percentage during 1910-19:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. Navy	109	9	.924
2. Wisconsin	129	34	.791
3. Texas	101	27	.789
4. Virginia	106	29	.785
5. Seton Hall	90	26	.776

Dr. Walter Meanwell coached Wisconsin. Navy had seven different coaches, Texas six. The game essentially still was in its infancy in this period.

1920-29

In the 1920s, the college game made great strides. Coaching came to be regarded as a profession, many field houses were built across the country, and basketball became more of a spectator sport. Here are the top teams in winning percentage, 1920-29:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. Montana St.	213	45	.826

The careers of a number of great coaches started in the 1920s—Paul "Tony" Hinkle at Butler, Clarence "Nibs" Price at California, Nat Holman at CCNY, just to name a few on the list above. Montana State under G. Ott Romney, with J. A. "Cat" Thompson, a four-time Helms Foundation all-America, had the top percentage, as the table shows.

Pennsylvania under Ed McNichol was second in total victories. In 1927, Penn's famous Palestra was opened. More than 200 college teams have played there—more than any existing college arena—and it has been the site of 52 NCAA tournament games, again more than any other arena. The name Palestra comes from the Greeks. Ralph Morgan, founder of the college rules committee and a former Penn trustee, said the name was suggested by William Bates, professor of Greek. "Palestra fit all our specifications," Morgan said, "... authentic, dignified, descriptive and novel (so old that it was new)."

The 1930s was a period of growth of the game as a spectator sport. The promotion of college basketball double-headers in New York's old Madison Square Garden was the brainchild of Ned Irish, 29, sportswriter and "boy promoter." The very first double-header, December 29, 1934, drew 16,188. New York University defeated Notre Dame, 25-18. The National Invitation Tournament began in 1938

West Georgia senior Anthony Barge ranks second in Division II scoring

Robin Graul, Alaska-Anchorage, ranks high in Division II scoring at 21.7

Oberlin freshman Chip Winiarski is among Division III scoring leaders

Jill Myers, Ohio Wesleyan, is among Division III leaders in rebounding and the NCAA tournament in 1939. One of the great intersectional games of the decade was in 1936, when Stanford, led by the great Hank Luisetti, defeated Long Island-Brooklyn, ending its 43-game winning streak. Luisetti's stunning one-handed shots—new to the East—made many converts to the one-handed style. Long Island-Brooklyn, coached by Clair Bee, the all-time leader in career winning percentage at .827 to Rupp's .822, was the top winner during 1930-39:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. LIU-Brooklyn	198	38	.839
2. Kentucky	162	34	.827
3. St. John's (N.Y.)	181	40	.819

winning percentage in the land under Rupp. The Atlantic Coast Conference was formed in this decade, and Case's North Carolina State teams led the way. There are nine new teams in the top 10 (all but Kentucky):

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. Kentucky	224	33	.872
2. North Caro. St.	240	65	.787
3. Seattle	233	69	.772
4. La Salle	209	65	.763
5. Dayton	228	71	.763

8. Connecticut	187	67	.736
9. West Virginia	205	74	.735
10. Louisville	202	77	.724

The first Division I seven-foot player of note was Bob Kurland at Oklahoma State in the 1940s. Several giants were on the scene in the 1950s, led by Wilt Chamberlain at Kansas and Bill Russell at San Francisco. Elgin Baylor led the Seattle run.

A number of coaching notables started about this time, including Ken Loeffler at La Salle (where Tom Gola was the big name), Jack Gardner and successors helped the team post an amazing .910 percentage for the decade. Marquette and Al McGuire had a remarkable decade, too, at .853. Here is the top 10 for the decade:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. UCLA	273	27	.910
2. Marquette	252	40	.863
3. Pennsylvania	223	56	.799
4. North Caro.	239	65	.786
5. Kentucky	223	69	.764
6. Louisville	224	70	.762
7. Syracuse	213	69	.755
8. Long Beach St.	203	68	.749
9. Indiana	208	75	.735
10. Oral Roberts	161	59	.732

Kentucky makes the top five for the fifth consecutive decade, as Joe Hall takes over for Rupp. You also find some current big names—Bob Knight at Indiana; Smith at North Carolina, the 1980s leader; Denny Crum at Louisville; Jim Boeheim, following Roy Danforth at Syracuse, and Jerry Tarkanian at Long Beach State and Nevada-Las Vegas. Dick Harter, Chuck Daly and Bob Weinbauer coached at Pennsylvania.

The 1980s

The arena-building boom in college basketball, which began in the 1970s, continues in the 1980s, and the spectacle of the Final Four in a huge dome—first seen at Houston in 1971—picks up speed in the 1980s. Appropriately, the largest crowd in history, 61,612 at New Orleans, watches the No. 1 team of the decade, North Carolina, vs. the No. 2 team of the 1980s, Georgetown, and Smith beats Thompson, 63-62, on a late shot by Michael Jordan. Here are the decade's top winners through last season:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. North Caro.	193	44	.814
2. Georgetown	191	49	.796
3. DePaul	164	44	.788
4. Nevada-Las Vegas	177	49	.783
5. Kentucky	175	50	.778
6. St. John's (N.Y.)	170	51	.769
7. Oregon St.	151	50	.751
8. Louisville	184	62	.748
9. Fresno St.	157	56	.737
10. Northeastern	154	55	.737

The game's grand old man, Ray Meyer, ends his career in this decade with a brilliant run. Lou Carnesecca takes St. John's back into the top 10, and veteran Ralph Miller, who like Smith played under Allen at Kansas, dominates the Pacific-10 Conference.

Crum and Louisville repeat in the top 10. But talk about repeaters... Kentucky makes it a sixth straight decade, ranking, in order, 2-1-1-5-5-5.

All-time leaders

Summing up the all-time winners, it should come as no surprise that Kentucky is No. 1. But perhaps it is a surprise that UCLA is fourth behind second-place North Carolina and third-place St. John's. After UCLA come Western Kentucky, Kansas, Notre Dame, DePaul, Syracuse and Duke:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. Kentucky	1408	440	.762
2. North Caro.	1372	507	.730
3. St. John's (N.Y.)	1339	560	.705
4. UCLA	1142	511	.691
5. Western Ky.	1152	520	.689
6. Kansas	1331	630	.679
7. Notre Dame	1243	605	.673
8. DePaul	987	486	.670

Basketball notes

Allen of Kansas, who founded the National Association of Basketball Coaches in 1927, helped organize basketball for the 1936 Olympics and helped start the first NCAA tournament, is fourth. Purdue was coached by Ward "Piggy" Lambert, and one of his top players was Wooden, a three-time all-America.

1940-49

Many schools suspended play during World War II, but most had teams and Kentucky and Oklahoma State, Rupp vs. Iba, ranked 1-2. The top 10 included five repeaters from the 1930s:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. Kentucky	239	42	.851
2. Oklahoma St.	237	55	.812
3. Rhode Island	178	44	.802
4. Eastern Ky.	143	37	.794
5. Western Ky.	222	66	.771
6. Tennessee	152	46	.768
7. Bowling Green	204	66	.756
8. Notre Dame	162	55	.747
9. Toledo	176	65	.730
10. St. John's (N.Y.)	162	60	.730

Throughout this compilation, we have used a minimum of eight seasons in a decade in Division I as a requirement for top-10 ranking. If this were waived for the 1940s, two teams that had only seven seasons because of the war would be included: Seton Hall under John "Honey" Russell was 128-22 for .853 and would be No. 1. Duquesne under Charles "Chick" Davies was 118-32 for .787 and would rank high.

1950-59

The decade of the 1950s is remembered for the point-shaving scandals that touched many teams, including Kentucky, which again had the top

1960-69

The most remarkable run of success in college basketball history started in the 1960s, when UCLA under Wooden won the NCAA crown in Kansas City, defeating Vic Bubas' Duke team in the finals. Rupp had won four titles at Kentucky, but Wooden zoomed past that and won seven straight—10 in 12 years—and 38 consecutive tournament games. Jucker's run at Cincinnati—two titles and an overtime title loss the third year, 1960-61 through 1962-63—preceded Wooden's run. Providence under Joe Mullaney was third, and Bubas' Duke teams were a close fourth. The top 10 for the decade:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. UCLA	234	52	.818
2. Cincinnati	214	63	.773
3. Providence	204	64	.761
4. Duke	213	67	.761
5. Kentucky	197	69	.741
6. Ohio St.	188	69	.732
7. St. Joseph's (Pa.)	201	74	.731
8. Dayton	207	77	.729
9. Bradley	197	74	.727
10. Princeton	188	71	.726

The only repeaters from the 1950s were Kentucky and Dayton, where Don Donohue took over after the death of Blackburn. Fred Taylor coached Ohio State, which had some big showdowns with Cincinnati. Jack Ramsay coached St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) the first seven years of the decade, Chuck Orsborn and Joe Stowell coached Bradley, and Princeton had some big years under Bill van Breda Kolff, with Bill Bradley the main man.

1970-79

UCLA's title run ended in 1975 with Wooden's retirement, but his

9. Syracuse	1179	588	.667
10. Duke	1236	653	.654

We have included colleges that have fielded varsity teams in Division I most of the way since the turn of the century. If you use a minimum of 20 years in Division I, Weber State would rank fourth on .698 (469-203 over 24 years).

In the second 10, entering the 1987 season, are Duquesne, .653; Louisville, .652; Villanova, .652; North Carolina State, .650; Houston, .648; Pennsylvania, .645; La Salle, .644; Navy, .643; St. Bonaventure, .643, and Utah, .640.

60 for Brown

Cindy Brown, Long Beach State's 6-2 center/forward from Portland, Oregon, set an NCAA women's Division I single-game scoring record with 60 points against San Jose State February 16. She hit 20 of 32 from the field and 20 of 22 free throws. The old record was 58 by Lorri Bauman of Drake vs. Southwest Missouri State in 1984.

Long Beach State won, 149-69, breaking the Division I record of 139 points by Grambling against Jarvis Christian (37), which was set last year.

Nearby turnaround

While James Madison enjoys the top turnaround in men's Division I basketball (The NCAA News, February 11), Bridgewater College (Virginia), just seven miles away, is enjoying one of the top turnarounds in Division III at 10 games (15-8 vs. 6-19 a year ago; nine more victories and 11 fewer losses is 20, divide by two).

Bridgewater coach Bill Leatherman and James Madison coach John Thurston both were assistants under Lou Campanelli at James Madison, and each is in his second year on the job. In addition, a James Madison transfer, Ramsey Yates, is leading Bridgewater in scoring and has helped the team clinch the regular-season championship of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference. (Curt Dudley, Bridgewater SID)

Quotes of the week

Canisius apparently had secured a 75-74 victory at Niagara recently when backup center Mike Brown scored with seven seconds left in overtime. But Griffin backup guard Nick Macarchuk, son of coach Nick Macarchuk, mugged Niagara's Gary Bossert on the inbounds play. Bossert made both free throws, and Niagara led, 76-75. With time running out, Brian Smith's partially deflected 25-footer won the game for Canisius, 78-76. Said Smith afterward, "It's like they say, luck always prevails—sometimes." Said coach Macarchuk: "Brian may have saved my son's life. I'm sure he would have gone over Niagara Falls in a barrel if we had lost." (John Maddock, Canisius SID)

Oklahoma State coach Leonard Hamilton on close games: "Almost doesn't count. Coming close only counts in pitching horseshoes, pitching pennies and maybe dancing with somebody's girl friend." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Lacrosse Preview

Changes make 1987 a 'season of opportunity' in Division I

By Michelle Pond
The NCAA News Staff

In Division I men's lacrosse, the 1987 season is one of opportunity. Teams will be vying for more play-off spots, including ones allocated to each of the three regions. Those who reach the tournament will be shooting for a trip to only the second final-four meeting in lacrosse history.

Last year, Johns Hopkins, North Carolina, Syracuse and Virginia became the first quartet to engage in final-four play. The teams traveled to a neutral site for a semifinal double-header on Saturday and the championship contest on Memorial Day. The event truly was a May classic, with North Carolina, the fifth seed in the tournament, posting identical 10-9 overtime victories over Johns Hopkins in the semifinals and Virginia in the title game.

"I thought it was a very enjoyable situation for the players," North Carolina coach Willie Scroggs said. "The games were pressure-packed, and the event was exciting for the players, spectators and the game of lacrosse."

This season the tournament field has been increased from 10 to 12 teams. A team will be selected from each of three regions—Northeast, Southeast and West—and the remaining nine teams will be chosen at large. The expansion will keep more teams in the play-off picture for a longer period of time, while the regional setup will allow some new faces to compete.

"Although lacrosse does not have the representation of some sports as far as number of teams is concerned, the sport is very competitive," Scroggs said. "I think the additional teams will add more excitement to the championship, which is already solid."

A rundown of some of the top teams, by region, follows:

Northeast

In the last four years, Syracuse has appeared in the championship game three times and made the final four last season. The Orangemen return five of eight players who received some level of all-America honors last season—the most bestowed on any team. But the three losses are substantial. Tom Korrie was the team's leading scorer and the top goal scorer in Syracuse history, while Kevin Sheehan and Jeff Desko were mainstays of the Orange defense for their entire careers.

However, coach Roy Simmons Jr. again will field a team that can put points on the scoreboard. Tom Nelson and Gordie Mapes, both seniors, and John Zulberti, a sophomore, combined to score 130 goals a year ago. Zulberti was the top scorer among the three attackmen with 33 goals and 41 assists for 74 points. Senior midfielder Todd Curry was a first-team all-America in 1986. Senior goalie Jim Gyory is a reliable net-minder whose experience may allow the close defense time to develop.

The Orangemen will be challenged early, opening the season at home against Johns Hopkins and traveling to North Carolina for their second game.

Massachusetts has a young team with outstanding veterans at both ends of the field. Coach Dick Garber has only five seniors while 22 of 32 team members are either freshmen or sophomores. Senior attackman Tom Carmean has been the team's leading scorer for two seasons and had 40 goals and 23 assists in 1986. Sophomore goalie Sal LoCascio is a stand-out. He set an NCAA tournament record with 29 saves against Johns Hopkins. Midfielder Neil Cunningham and attackman Greg Cannella will contribute to the offense.

Rutgers coach Tom Hayes looks for a solid defense to give a young offense time to mature. Seniors Tom Reilly and Rick Lewis are back on defense, while junior Jim Gilman returns in goal. Ed Trubulsky, a senior attackman, was the Scarlet Knights' leading scorer last season. Senior midfielder John Hutton also will provide experience.

Pennsylvania looks to get back into tournament competition after missing the play-offs for the first time since Tony Seaman became head coach. This year the Quakers will have plenty of depth with 25 lettermen returning, including six of last season's 10 top scorers. The attack includes seniors John Shoemaker and Kevin Nicklas and sophomore Stewart Fisher. Junior midfielder Chris Flynn and senior defenseman Dan Eigo are other top veterans.

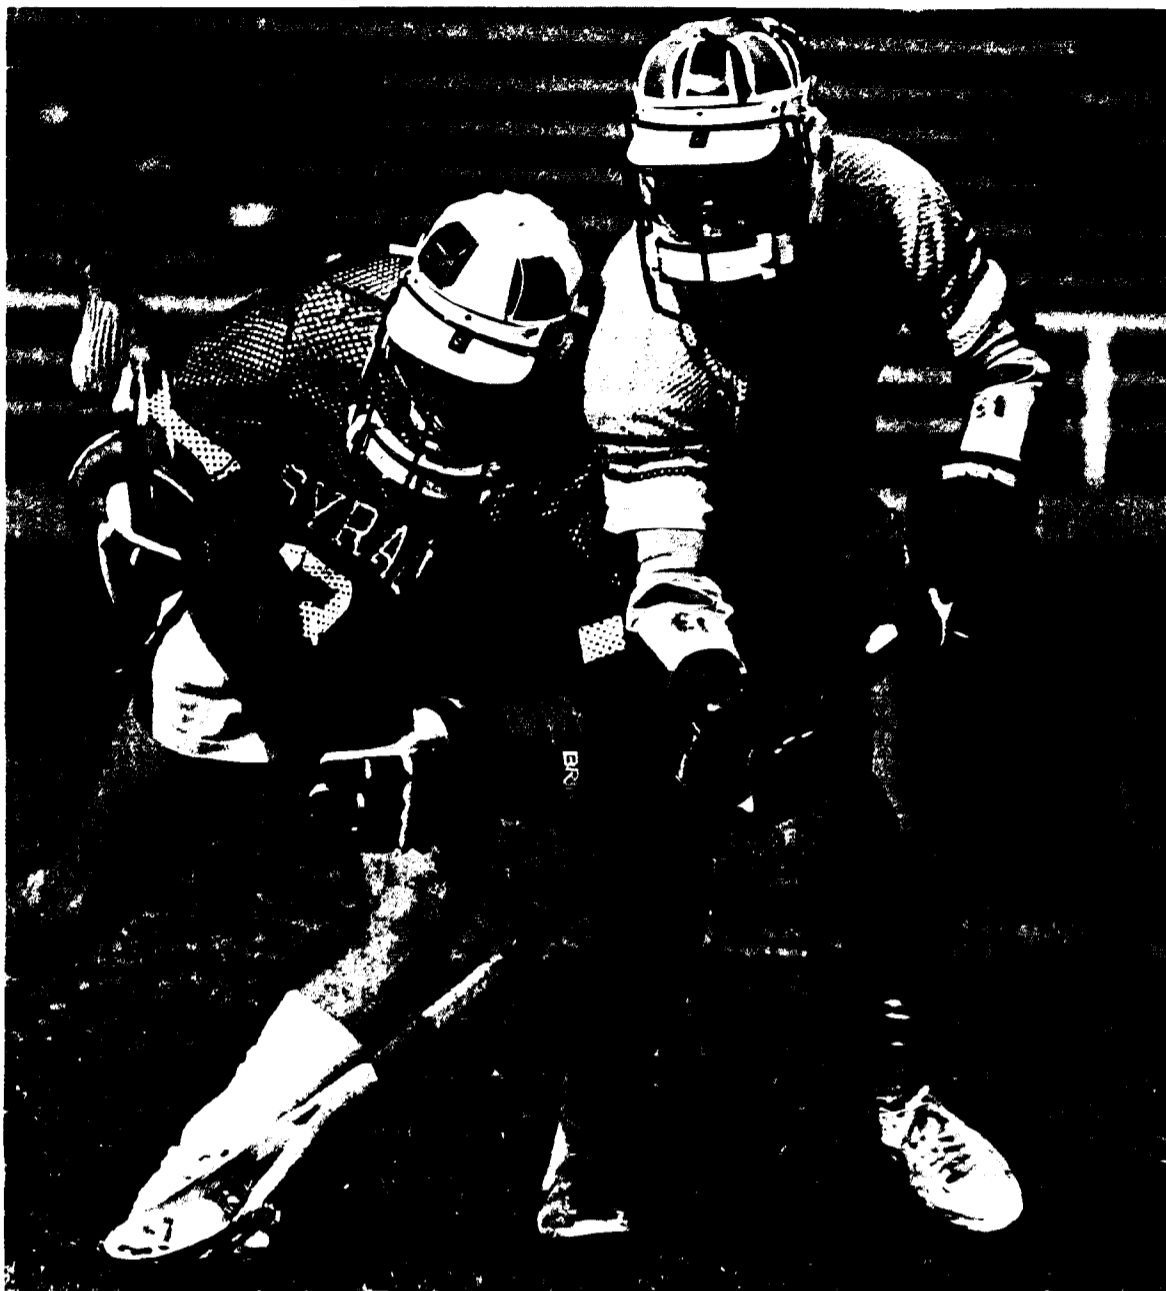

Brown, Cornell and Harvard tied for second place in the Ivy League last year behind the champion Quakers. This year, the conference looks forward to a very interesting race and may provide more than one NCAA tournament participant.

New Hampshire made its first appearance in the NCAA tournament a year ago and would like a return trip. Coach Ted Garber's squad plays its first eight games on the road, and the first three opponents are Delaware, Maryland and North Carolina. Senior Barry Fraser, who scored 39 goals and had 14 assists last year, will be joined on attack by junior Brendan O'Brien. Midfielder Mike McCaffrey is another key returnee.

Adelphi and Long Island-C.W. Post could be darkhorses.

Southeast

North Carolina surprised some teams in the play-offs last year, but that will not happen this season. In fact, this year the Tar Heels will be the target. They were highly rated early last year but suffered some key injuries. Those players return to a squad that lost only seven seniors.

"We did struggle offensively for the better part of last year," Scroggs said. "The one thing we did consistently was play good defense."

This year the defense looks just as strong while the offense looks better. Start with senior Tom Haus. He is a two-time first-team all-America, and he the Schmeisser Cup as the top Division I defenseman and the Enners Award as the Division I player of the year in 1986.

Senior Gary Seivold, the Tar Heels' leading scorer and the most valuable player in the championship game, returns on attack. The midfield will be bolstered by the return of two-time first-team all-America Joey Seivold and Tim Welsh. Both sat out last year with injuries.

Johns Hopkins had played in nine straight title games before its streak ended last season. The Blue Jays had four first-team all-Americas last year, but lost two. One of the graduates is midfielder Del Dressel, only the third lacrosse player ever to earn first-team all-America honors four times. The other is John DeTommaso on defense.

But the Blue Jays' Brian Wood and Craig Bubier were two-thirds of last year's first-team all-America attack. Other key returnees are Stuart Jones, Mike Morrill and Steve Mitchell. Coach Don Zimmerman's team must travel to both Syracuse and North Carolina this year.

Virginia had its best showing last year since 1980, when the Cavaliers lost a one-goal, overtime decision to Johns Hopkins in the title contest. However, coach Jim Adams has lost a lot of scoring power, including first-team all-America Roddy Marino, who was attackman of the year. Adams also lost two starters on defense.

Peter Sheehan, the nation's top goalie and a first-team all-America as a junior, is back in the net. Virginia also will have some new, but experienced, people in the lineup, but the Cavaliers will not have much time to develop as they play six of their first seven games on the road.

Another Atlantic Coast Conference member, Maryland, also will challenge for national recognition. The Terrapins defeated North Carolina, 10-9, and lost to Virginia, 8-7, during the regular season last year, then lost to the Tar Heels, 12-10, in the NCAA quarterfinals.

Coach Dick Edell begins his fourth season at Maryland with a team that has depth at both midfield and attack.

The defense is led by senior Brian Jackson, and Jim Beardmore and Dennis Sullivan both are capable goalies; Sullivan is coming off surgery. The Terps play consecutive games against North Carolina, Virginia, Navy and Johns Hopkins.

Navy returned to the play-offs last season for the first time since 1982 and for the first time under coach Bryan Matthews. Matthews, coach of the year last season, has 16 lettermen returning, including four of his five top scorers. Sophomore Tom Hanzsche and senior Bob Wehman scored 28 goals apiece while sophomore Paul Basile had 26 assists. Juniors Nick Amatuccio and Joe Donnelly, the goalie, also help make Navy a contender.

Loyola (Maryland) will use a strong defense to challenge for a play-off spot. Seniors Wayne McPartland and Jeff Bozel return at close defense and junior Tom McClelland is back in goal for the third straight year. On offense, John Carroll and Mike Ruland pace the attack along with midfielder David Sherwood. With veterans in every area of the field, coach Dave Cottle may find his team in the tournament for the first time.

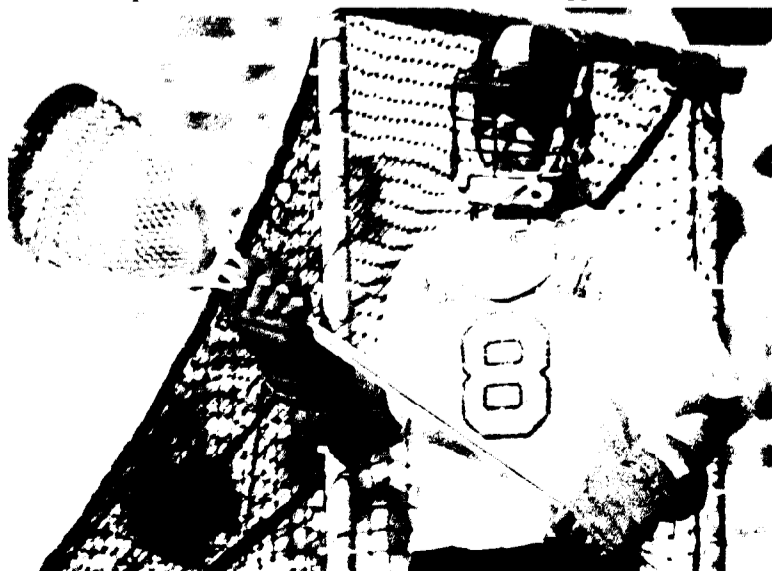

Delaware and Towson State, who finished one-two in the East Coast Conference last year, also have tournament aspirations.

Delaware lost premier attackman Randy Powers and face-off specialist Steve Shaw, but last year's starting midfielders—seniors Butch Marino, Denis Sepulveda and Chris Spencer—return. Senior Steve DeLargy returns in goal and Tom Ervin, the only returning starter on attack, is back as a sophomore. The Blue Hens are host to Virginia and Maryland, while traveling to Navy, Duke and Towson State.

Towson State has seven starters back. Jeff Peek and Richard Winkoff, both attackmen, were the team's two top scorers in 1986. Jason Stefanides and Ron Klausner return on close defense and Tom Manos is back in goal. Senior Matt Decker is a starter at midfield. The Tigers open the year at Maryland and close at home against Johns Hopkins.

Coach Dick Watts believes he has his strongest squad in four years at Maryland-Baltimore County, but he also has a schedule laden with tournament hopefuls. Jeff Nupp, Matt Lupero and Jim Bimestefer form a

Maryland women ready to begin defense of 1986 crown

Maryland's women's lacrosse team finds itself in a different position as the 1987 season opens. After two years of near misses, the Terrapins are the defending national collegiate champions.

"The group jelled as a team, and that was the reason for our success last year," coach Sue Tyler said. "If one player was not scoring, another one was. If one player was not intercepting, another one was."

Maryland lost five players from the championship team, including three all-Americans. With changing personnel comes a change in the team's areas of strength.

"We will be strong close to goal," Tyler said. "We will be strong in home and line defense. The midfield, which has been a strength for us, will need to develop."

Senior Anyisia Fedec returns after a record-setting junior year. Fedec scored 54 goals and had 25 assists for 79 points. Her totals for goals scored and points were Maryland season records. Fedec was an all-America in 1986 and was the outstanding attack in the championship game.

Junior goalie Kim Chorosiewski anchors the defense with help out front from senior Heather Lewis. Midfielder Carin Peterson, also a senior, lends experience to a unit where that trait is at a premium.

Last year, the Terps had a 5-4 record before posting 10 straight wins that carried them through the title contest. They also made their third straight appearance in the championship game. They would like nothing better than to start a string of consecutive titles by successfully defending their championship at Byrd Stadium on the Maryland campus.

Top contenders

The other top teams are similar to Maryland—each has talented returnees but has lost individuals who were important to last year's success.

Penn State—Coach Susan Scheetz took over the Lady Lion program a year ago and promptly led her team to the championship game. Penn State posted a 16-2 record with both losses to Maryland, including an 11-10 decision in the title contest.

Seven starters return, including seniors Mary McCarthy and Chris Vitale, two all-America defensive players. Sophomore Tami Worley scored 43 goals as a freshman. Senior Amanda Veal is the leading scorer among returning players with 38 goals and 16 assists.

Gone from the offense are all-Americans Maggy Dunphy and Beth Thompson. Dunphy scored 70 goals in 1986 while Thompson tallied 58 and scored in every game—consistency that will be hard to replace. All-America center Alix Hughes, a defensive specialist, also has graduated.

Temple—The Lady Owls have reached the semifinals of the tournament each year since 1983.

Coach Tina Sloan Green's defense was dismantled by graduation. Senior goalie Chrissy Muller, a three-time all-America, will need to be extra sharp to compensate for the heavy losses out front.

Temple's best defense might be a good offense. Junior Gail Cummings returns after scoring 67 goals and recording 22 assists in 1986. Kim Lumbdin, also a junior, had 25 goals a year ago.

Virginia—The Cavaliers will need to get more players into the offense in order to repeat last year's success. Coach Jane Miller's squad posted a 14-2 record and got its first NCAA tournament bid.

After losing top scorer Lindsay Sheehan, who had 59 goals and 66 assists, Virginia will sport a more balanced attack. Seniors Dawn Wisniewski and Abby O'Leary could lead the way on offense. Wisniewski had 62 goals and 11 assists a year ago.

A veteran defense includes seniors Elaine Maddox and Tracy Drummond, plus junior goalie Sarah Darling.

New Hampshire—The Wildcats will be paced by all-Americans Karen Geromini and Pauline Collins. Geromini had 29 goals and 35 assists while Collins scored 45 goals and had seven assists last season.

Graduation hit Coach Marge Anderson's defense, taking three starters including all-America Mary Rogers. Senior Cathy Narsiff returns in goal. Narsiff, who is in only her second year of playing lacrosse, had a .711 save percentage last season.

Northwestern—Coach Cindy Timchal's team posted a 10-4 record in 1986 and made a trip to the NCAA tournament.

Senior Kate Oleykowski already has tallied 152 goals in her career, including 68 a year ago. She is a two-time all-America. Junior Kathy Seelaus is looking to hit full stride after being plagued by a knee injury for two seasons. Sophomore Maureen Mullen and freshman Sue Novack also will add to the offense. The power of the offense will take some pressure off a young defense that may need time to develop.

Notes

Dartmouth will defend its Ivy League title but cannot improve on last year's conference record. The Big Green went 6-0 against conference opponents and deposed Harvard, which had won five straight titles... Delaware will be looking for its fourth East Coast Conference championship in five years. Sophomore goalie Wendy Kridel has only one game of varsity experience, but that game was the conference championship... James Madison graduated only three players from its South Atlantic Conference championship team. Junior Diane Buch has set school scoring records each year she has played, including her 41 goals last season... Maryland-Baltimore County moves to Division I this season and has road games with Temple and Virginia... Massachusetts had two seasons in one last year, consisting of a six-game winning streak and a four-game losing streak. The Minute-women, led by field hockey all-America Lisa Griswold, are ready to start another win streak... In her first year at Old Dominion, Coach Melissa Magee led her team to a second-place finish in the South Atlantic Conference....

Rutgers, which had a 9-6-1 record last season, faces national collegiate champion Maryland and runner-up Penn State, and Division III champion Ursinus and runner-up Trenton State, all within its last seven games... West Chester goes for a fifth straight Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference title. Sophomore Chris Karpinski, who set a school freshman scoring record in 1986 with 41 goals and 34 assists, leads the offense... Sandy Hoody, Towson State; Paula Petrie, Drexel; Chris Sailer, Princeton, and Sandy Campanaro, Loyola (Maryland), all are first-year coaches.

Trenton State and Ursinus out for Division III 'rubber game'

Trenton State and Ursinus may get to play the rubber game of their national championship series in 1987.

Both teams are strong favorites to reach the championship game again, just as they have during the first two years of the tournament. Trenton State won the initial title and Ursinus won the championship a year ago.

"Last year, I had a unique group," Ursinus coach Betsy Meng Ramsey said. "The seniors and I started out together and grew together. The teamwork was pretty strong and so was the rapport."

Ramsey, coach of the year in 1986, has lost three all-Americans, including two on attack and her starting goalie. Last year's backup goalie was also a senior.

However, the rest of the defense returns intact and is led by first-team all-America Bobbie Sue Copley and Jill Johnson, the outstanding defensive player in the 1986 championship game.

Senior Beth Bingaman will pace the offense along with JoAnn Schoenherr. Bingaman led the team in scoring last season with 52 goals and 16 assists. She tied an NCAA tournament record with four goals in the championship game. Replacements for the graduated seniors will come from the sophomore class.

Brenner now has experience both as a player and a coach in the play-offs. In 1982, she played defense on the Trenton State team that was runner-up in the 1982 National Collegiate Women's Lacrosse Championship. Last year, in her initial season as head coach at the school, she took the Lions back to the championship game, this time in Division III.

Trenton State set a school record with 229 goals a year ago and Peggy Engelbert and Laura Groppo scored 50 and 49, respectively. They return along with Penny Kempf and Sandy Stockl, the goalie. Key losses from last year include three all-Americans; one, Charlotte Clarke, was a two-time honoree at defensive wing.

The Lions have compiled a 63-10-2 record over the past five years. They travel to Ursinus for the last game of the regular season this year for what could be a preview of the title contest.

"Trenton State always has produced a solid team and I think always will," Ursinus' Ramsey said.

Other contenders

A look at some of the other top teams follows:

Cortland State—The Red Dragons outscored opponents 171-68 last season. Carol Rainson, the school's career leader in goals scored, had 61 goals. She has graduated, but Beth Breen (41 goals) and Chris Tindall (26) return. Liz Freer anchors the defense, while Cindy Cifone returns in goal.

Cortland State plays seven of its 11 games on the road this season. A key home game will be against Trenton State.

Denison—The Big Red graduated only one starter from last year's play-off team. Defense will be a strength with the return of first-team all-America Tara Maloney and senior Lynn Bowlby. Maloney scored 14 goals and had 10 assists. She was the team leader in interceptions with 25. Senior Ginger Walsh had 20 goals and 13 assists last season. Denison is the defending North Coast Athletic Conference champion.

Drew—Coach Maureen Horan-Pease lost an outstanding individual but still has a strong team. Colleen Hewlett was Drew's first four-time all-America in any sport. She ended her career second on the school's all-time lists for goals and total points.

However, senior Jody Evans (31 goals) and sophomore Jeanne-Marie Jodoin (37) will provide plenty of scoring. Juniors Sally Gormley and Kim Whynot and sophomore Kirsten Sutt also return on attack. The defense will be anchored by junior Bonnie Etheridge. Senior Liz St. John and sophomore Jamie Tome are likely to split time in goal. Drew plays both Trenton State and Ursinus on the road.

Haverford—Coach Debbie Gallagher took Haverford to a Middle Atlantic States Conference championship and its first NCAA tournament bid in her first season as head coach. She lost a top player at each end of the field, but has a strong nucleus returning.

The big loss on defense is all-America Lydia Martin. Leadership at that end of the field will fall to senior Chris Eaton. Haverford's offense will miss 1986 leader Debbie Anderson, who is studying away from campus this spring. Senior Wendy Smith returns after scoring 44 goals and having 13 assists a year ago. The team plays Drew, Ursinus and Lynchburg at home this year. Ursinus handed Haverford its only defeat of last season.

Lynchburg—The Lady Hornets have plenty of experience although they lost an all-America on defense and one in goal. Senior Amy Brunner will be a leader on defense this year. Three seniors return on attack—Allison Daly had 34 goals and 15 assists

Hobart men set to write another chapter of lacrosse history

Each year, the tradition of Hobart lacrosse challenges the team's players to write their own special chapter in a storied history.

"The players do what they can to ensure that when people look back on a particular season, they have something tangible to point to as an accomplishment," coach Dave Urlick said.

The past seven Hobart teams have accomplished the same thing. They have won the Division III national championship, making Urlick the only coach besides basketball legend John Wooden to win seven consecutive NCAA titles in a team sport.

Hobart lost 10 seniors from last year's team, but 13 veterans return. Two of the most talented are defenseman Devin Arkison and attackman Ray Gilliam. Both were first-team all-Americans in 1986 and were honored as the Division III defenseman and attackman of the year. Gilliam scored 51 goals and had 33 assists to lead the team in scoring.

"Our seniors are quality players but do not have as much on-the-field experience as you might expect," Urlick said. "Some who have played a specific role in past seasons will have the opportunity to let their total athletic ability show this year."

The Statesmen lost four of their top six players on defense and in the midfield. The losses on defense will be eased by the return of Tim Clark, who is coming off a major knee injury. Senior Al Randolph, junior Dave Maxwell and sophomore Shawn Trell are all vying for the starting spot in the net.

"Each year our seniors, who have been through everything from practice to the spring trip to the play-offs, help the younger players," Urlick said. "The players have a lot of pride and they are goal-oriented. They bring out the best in each other."

Top contenders

Several other Division III teams have Hobart targeted. They would like to create a little history of their own by becoming the team to unseat the perennial champion.

Washington (Maryland)—The Sho'men have been runner-up to Hobart four of the last five years, including the past three. Coach Terry Corcoran's team posted a 12-4 record last season.

Senior Dave Hilliard, a first-team all-America, is a stalwart on defense. Don Giblin, Chris Dollar and Mike McGuane, all seniors, will lead the offense.

Five of the team's first six games will be against potential Division I play-off teams, including the season-opener against defending champion North Carolina. In addition, the Sho'men play host to Hobart in early April.

Cortland State—The Red Dragons will be strong at both ends of the field but will need to develop at midfield. Senior Tim DeLany, a first-team all-America, has 196 career points, including 63 in 1986. He will be joined on attack by classmate Mike Kesseling, the leading scorer from a year ago with 40 goals and 23 assists.

Senior John McCarthy and junior Jeff Thomas return on defense. Hal Newman, also a junior, will be back in goal. Coach Jerry Casciani lost six midfielders to graduation. The replacements are skilled but lack experience.

Cortland State begins the season with four road games against Division I opponents, including neighbors Cornell and Syracuse. The Red Dragons also travel to Hobart. In State University of New York Conference play, Cortland State will be challenged by 1986 runner-up Geneseo State, Albany (New York) and Oswego State. The Red Dragons have won the conference title eight of the last nine years.

Ray Gilliam, Hobart

Denison—Denison lost four starters from last year's North Coast Athletic Conference champion and NCAA play-off team. They were two midfielders, a defenseman and the goalie. Coach Tommy Thomsen still will field a good defense, led by senior Sean Weston. The attack will be experienced but may lack depth. Senior Tim Wall will be a leader up front. The Big Red will take on Division I foes Michigan State and Notre Dame and has key Division III games against Ohio Wesleyan and Middlebury.

Ohio Wesleyan—Coach Mike Pressler guided the Battling Bishops to a 14-4 record and a spot in the NCAA tournament semifinals in his first year at the school. He lost only three starters from that team, but two were defensemen.

Junior Rob Alvino scored 31 goals and had 38 assists last season. He is joined on attack by senior Mike James, who scored 34 goals. The midfield includes veterans Toby Boucher and Craig Hall. Senior goalie Dan O'Neill will be counted on heavily due to the losses on defense.

Ohio Wesleyan travels to Hobart this season and faces strong Division I West region competitors Michigan State, Notre Dame and Ohio State.

Roanoke—Coach Scott Allison moves from Dartmouth to his alma mater. He inherits the Old Dominion Athletic Conference champion and a 1986 play-off team.

Senior Chris Richardson, a first-team all-America, scored 31 goals and had 48 assists last season. Midfielder Jim Guthrie, also a senior, had 42 points split evenly between goals and assists. Eight starters return from last year's squad.

The Maroons play Washington (Maryland) and North Carolina back-to-back. In conference play, they will face challenges from Washington and Lee, which moves to Division III after 39 years at the Division I level, and Hampden-Sydney, a sleeper that will rely on juniors and sophomores, including midfielder Jeff Jackson. Another foe is Lynchburg, which third-year coach Larry Hubbard thinks is ready to be competitive in the ODAC if it can overcome a youthful defense.

Rochester Institute of Technology—Coach Bill Glennon will stress the running game as he looks for his third straight Independent College Athletic Conference championship and the school's fifth straight trip to the NCAA tournament.

Defense will be a strength with seniors Jim Kimmel and Neil Mulane. Senior midfielders Tim Turner and Kevin O'Reilly will be important in the transition game.

The Tigers will face challenges from Ithaca, St. Lawrence and Alfred in the ICAC. They play the latter two teams on the road this year. They also travel to Clarkson, which had a 10-5 record in 1986, the best in its history. Clarkson also set school records for most goals scored in a season and lowest goals-against average.

last season, and Martha Reese and Patti Brennan also will provide scoring power. A solid freshman class will provide depth. The Lady Hornets are going for a sixth consecutive Old Dominion Athletic Conference title.

Wheaton (Massachusetts)—Coach Heidi Pike, in her first year as a head coach, inherits a team that has made consecutive trips to the NCAA tournament. She will miss the services of some key individuals, including Therese Ross, who was an all-America and the school's all-time leading scorer. Goal may be the biggest question mark with the departure of Janet Kelly.

Seniors Callie Roberts, Karen Wentling, Kay Lindsay and Sparky Colby form the nucleus of this year's team. Freshmen will play an important role. The team looks to be balanced on offense and solid on defense.

Notes

Bates had a 7-5 record last season, but four of the five losses were by two goals or less. All but two starters return from that team... Bowdoin had a 15-0 record and won the Northeast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (NIAC) championship... Franklin and Marshall had a 9-3 record last season but lost five seniors, including two who received all-America honors... Glassboro State's Sonia Martines set a school record for goals in a season as a junior. She had 63... Junior Cathy Wood is the most prolific scorer in Hartwick lacrosse history and is coming off a 51-goal season... Oberlin junior Robin Cardin has demonstrated versatility in her college career. Cardin was her team's leading scorer as a freshman, then became a goalie as a sophomore... Oneonta State's Sue Murray holds school records for most goals in Salisbury State—Coach Joe Rottelli lost some top offensive players but expects an improved defense to help ease those losses.

Junior Pete Roskovich and seniors Bill Larkin and Mike Murray are three reasons why it will be tougher to score on the Sea Gulls this year. On attack, Jim Sturgell scored 32 goals and had 18 assists in 1986. Senior Ron Sansone will be joined at midfield by juniors Ron McGann and Rick Maranto.

stingy defense. Junior college transfers Ed Jackson and Steve Scarbath should ease the loss of last season's three top scorers. The Retrievers open the season at Navy, then come home to face Virginia. They also travel to Colorado School of Mines and Air Force, two top schools in the West, and return home to play Towson State. Also on the schedule are games at Cornell, Delaware and Maryland and home contests with Duke, North Carolina and Loyola (Maryland).

West

Air Force lost five starters, including three on defense, meaning senior goalie Ken Wessels will have some new faces in front of him. The Falcons have won or shared the Rocky Mountain Lacrosse League title every year since the league started in 1967. Coach

Mike Hittle has added an Eastern flavor to his schedule with home games against Adelphi and Maryland-Baltimore County and road trips to Hofstra and Army.

Michigan State's strength will be in the midfield, where coach Rich Kimball has four top-notch players back. Junior Adam Mueller is the only returning letter winner on attack. The defense lacks experience and could be short on depth.

Notre Dame lost three of its four top scorers but has experience on defense. Senior Wally Stack heads the unit that will play in front of junior goalie Matt McQuillan. Senior attackman Jim Shields is the leading scorer among the returnees. Senior Dave O'Neill is one of six upperclassmen returning to the midfield. The Irish lost a 12-11 decision to Michigan State last season.

New faces, old rivals prepare to wrestle for NCAA honors

A new challenger has emerged in Division II, while traditional powers seem to have the inside track in Division III as the 1987 wrestling championships approach.

Division II

North Dakota State has won three consecutive national championships in football, and now the Bison hope to add a wrestling crown to their trophy case in Fargo.

Coach Bucky Maughan's team has been the Amateur Wrestling News' top-ranked squad in Division II through most of the season, just ahead of perennial power Cal State Bakersfield and three-time defending champion Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

North Dakota State long has ruled the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, arguably the toughest wrestling league in Division II, and consistently has placed in the top five nationally. The Bison now hope to put it all together at the Division II Wrestling Championships March 6-7 at SIU-Edwardsville.

Maughan's lineup includes Pat Johannes, a top contender for the individual title at 177 pounds, and freshman Marty Morgan (167), whose brother, John, was a four-time all-America.

Cal State Bakersfield, national champion seven times in the last 11 years, has two wrestlers at the top of the Amateur Wrestling News individual weight rankings, which include all three divisions.

Darryl Pope, defending champion at 167 pounds, now competes at 177 and even is ranked ahead of Division I semifinalist Rico Chiapparelli of Iowa. Eric Middlestead leads the national pack at 190, and heavyweight Mike Monroe adds to the Roadrunners' strength in the upper weights.

SIU-Edwardsville again hopes to use a home-mat advantage to claim its fourth straight title. One Cougar also has a chance to make college wrestling history before the local fans.

Senior Tim Wright can win his fourth consecutive individual title, something no wrestler has accomplished in any division. Wright, three-time champion at 118, now wrestles at 126.

Edinboro, another perennial power, will compete in the Division I championships this season.

Other top contenders in Division II include Nebraska-Omaha, North Dakota and South Dakota State, all powers in the North Central Conference, and Liberty, Pittsburgh-Johnstown and Ashland.

Division III

In 1986, Montclair State upset the status quo in Division III. Brockport State hopes to return things to a more familiar order at the NCAA championships March 6-7 at Buffalo.

Brockport State and Trenton State kept a seven-year hold on the team championship until last winter, when Montclair State captured its first title in a decade.

But in 1987, Brockport State, runner-up a year ago, is favored to win its fifth Division III crown. A December dual-match victory over old rival Trenton State gave the Golden Eagles a healthy dose of momentum going toward the national meet.

Todd Slade, the 1986 champion at 158, has been successful this season at 167 and hopes to challenge Montclair State's John Monaco for the individual championship. John Leone (158) will be seeking all-America honors for a fourth straight year.

John Carroll and Buena Vista join Montclair State and Trenton State among top-five teams likely to return to the upper echelon in 1987.

John Carroll, second in the Amateur Wrestling News rankings, is led by 177-pound runner-up Sam Walker, semifinalist Pete Hayek (134) and three other all-Americans. The Blue Streaks consistently have been among the top teams in Division III.

Trenton State, whose two-year reign as champion ended last March, hopes to rebound from a disappointing fifth-place finish. The Lion lineup is loaded with championships veterans, including 1986 third-place finishers Tim Jacoutot (118), Ralph Venuto (134) and Dwayne Standridge (158). A 1987 team championship for Trenton State would be the Lions' fifth.

Buena Vista, third last season, returns Dan Dresser, runner-up to Slade at 158 last season; Paul Van Oosbree, third at 142, and all-America heavyweight Craig Hanson.

Montclair State has two of the top-ranked wrestlers in Division III, and they come from the same family. John Monaco, 1986 champion at 177, has returned this winter to 167, where he took the title in 1985. Brother Karl was a semifinalist at 142 for the 1986 team champions.

If a team should come from back in the pack to win as Montclair State did last year, it could be Ithaca, Wisconsin-Whitewater or Central (Iowa).

Past winners shoot for Division II cage title

Two teams with championship traditions are contenders for the 1987 NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

Cal Poly-Pomona looks for its third consecutive title and its fourth in five years. Meanwhile, Delta State is hoping to return to the position it held three times in the 1970s, prior to NCAA sponsorship of women's championships.

The two teams met in the semifinals last year, and Cal Poly-Pomona won, 71-68. If both teams advance to the final four this year, the tournament's bracket ensures that they again will meet in the semifinals.

Delta State made its first NCAA tournament appearance a year ago. The Lady Statesmen set tournament records for a four-game series with 343 points (an average of 85.8 per game) and 141 field goals. Cal Poly-Pomona has been in the tournament every year since its inception in 1982.

Tim Wright (left), SIU-Edwardsville's three-time champion

Other contenders

North Dakota State is another of this year's top teams. The Bison reached the championship contest in their first tournament appearance last season, losing to Cal Poly-Pomona, 70-63. Because of changes in the bracket structure, these two teams would meet in the quarterfinals this year if both advance.

Hampton opened the season with a loss but had won 23 straight as of February 15. The Lady Pirates are looking for their third straight tournament bid. The team finished third in 1985, losing to Cal Poly-Pomona.

The tournament features a 24-team field, including automatic qualifiers from 12 conferences. At least one team will be selected from each of eight regions. Selections will be completed by Sunday, March 1.

First-round games will be played on March 7, with regional competition on March 10. The quarterfinals will be played either March 13 or March 14. The finals are March 19 and 21 at the Springfield (Massachusetts) Civic Center.

Division III hoop event may produce a repeat winner

In its first five years, the NCAA Division III Women's Basketball Championship has produced five different winners. This could be the year that a team cops its second title.

Former titlists Elizabethtown (1982), Rust (1984) and Scranton (1985) have joined Kean at the top of the NCAA's weekly poll throughout the season. In addition, defending champion Salem State looks like it will make another trip to the Division III tournament.

Regional competition will be March 6-7, while quarterfinal play will take place March 13 or 14. The finals are scheduled for March 20-21 on the campus of one of the finalists.

Thirty-two teams will be selected to participate in the tournament, including automatic qualifiers from nine conferences. At least one team will be selected from each of eight regions, and the remaining teams will be chosen at-large. Teams will be selected on Sunday, March 1, and participants will be notified no later than Monday, March 2.

Regional roundup

Following is a list of top teams in year's top teams by region, with records through February 15:

New England—New Haven (19-2), Bentley (20-2), Stonehill (21-4), New Hampshire (15-7).

East—Pittsburgh-Johnstown (19-3), Pace (21-4), Gannon (20-5), Clarion (15-7).

South Atlantic—Hampton (23-1), Mount St. Mary's (19-2), Virginia State (17-3), Navy (14-7).

South—Delta State (22-1), Albany State (Georgia) (23-0), Florida International (22-2), Alabama A&M (19-4).

Great Lakes—Northern Kentucky (19-4), Wright State (20-4), Lake Superior State (20-3), Bellarmine (17-6).

North Central—North Dakota State (23-2), Nebraska-Omaha (20-5), St. Cloud State (17-7), Eastern Montana (16-10).

South Central—West Texas State (21-3), Southeast Missouri State (22-3), Central Missouri State (19-5), Northwest Missouri State (15-8), Abilene Christian (15-9).

West—Cal Poly-Pomona (22-2), Cal State Chico (18-6), Cal State Los Angeles (18-8), Cal State Northridge (14-10).

Kenyon women after another championship

Three-time titlist Kenyon is favored again to win the Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team crown at C.T. Branin Natatorium in Canton, Ohio, March 12-14.

Eight national champions return for the Ladies, including all-America standouts Patty Abt, Amy Heasley and Erin Finneran. They accounted for nine of the 11 individual titles won by Kenyon at last year's championships.

Abt, a senior, leads Kenyon with records in the 50-yard freestyle (23.56), 100-yard freestyle (52.04) and 200-yard freestyle (1:52.80), and she shares NCAA team records in the 200-yard freestyle relay (1:36.21), 400-yard freestyle relay (3:28.49) and 800-yard freestyle relay (7:39.93).

Heasley, a junior, holds division records in the 100-yard butterfly (57.96) and 200-yard butterfly (2:07.57) and was a part of two record-setting relay teams. Sophomore Finneran accounts for records in the 100-yard backstroke (58.69) and 200-yard backstroke (2:04.90), in addition to being a part of three winning relay teams.

Other Kenyon standouts include senior Beth Welty (backstroke), juniors Teresa Zurick (freestyle) and Barb Misener (freestyle/butterfly), and sophomores Jeannine Gury (breast stroke) and Christine Jacob (freestyle/backstroke).

To this talented team, Kenyon coach Jim Steen has added seven freshmen, led by Missi Nelson of Illinois. Nelson's achievements include a 5:09.96 in the 500-yard freestyle and a 17:28.38 in the 1,650-yard freestyle. Beth Kraemer, Catherine Fletcher, Kim McMahon, Laura Richard and Tawny Stecker round out the group of newcomers.

Top contenders

UC San Diego appears to be Kenyon's major competition.

After losing three all-Americans from last year's second-place team, coach Bill Morgan will look to junior freestyler Tracy Mulvany, sophomore Michelle Steinberger (butterfly) and junior Laura Knochenhauer (freestyle). Mulvany won individual titles in the 500-yard freestyle (5:02.78) and the 1,650-yard freestyle (17:26.56) at the 1986 championships.

Bringing added depth to the Tritons are Marita Michelin (breast stroke), Alice Kirby (freestyle), Angela Nagamada (breast stroke) and Robin Isayama (breast stroke).

The Tritons also have junior college all-America Jeannie Reardon, a diver in her first season at UC San Diego.

Though plagued with the loss of top swimmers, Pomona-Pitzer may be destined for another top-three national finish—the sixth for the Sage Hens in the last seven years.

This year's team will be led by senior all-America Karah Coe (freestyle/butterfly), Lyn Cunliffe (breast stroke), Kristin McQueen (freestyle) and sophomore all-America Lynn

Patty Abt

Kline (butterfly/breast stroke).

Other swimmers to watch are sophomores Maggie Parr (backstroke) and Libby Stern (freestyle).

Coach Penny Lee Dean completes her squad with recruits Melissa Magallanes (4:36 in the 400-yard individual medley), Nancy North (54.00 in the 100-yard freestyle) and Nancy Nyhus. Also look for first-year diver Laura Reilly.

Other top teams include Ithaca and Lake Forest.

Skiing championships leave 'lower 48' for Alaska

For the first time in the 33-year history of the event, the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships will be held outside the contiguous 48 states. The meet will be run March 4-7 in Anchorage, Alaska.

That likely will be the only unique aspect of the championships.

Once again, Vermont coach Chip LaCasse will lead his Catamounts, the best of the East, against the best of the West, probably Utah. That is the way it has been for the past seven years. The two schools have finished out of first or second only once each in those seven years.

The Catamounts held the top ranking in each event going into the final carnival of the year and could emerge from regional competition with a sweep of the meet.

"We have five men and five women Alpine skiers," LaCasse said, "and we can take only four. After the Eastern championships, I will have about an hour to make my decision, and I'm talking about leaving at home two skiers with the potential of being top-three finishers."

Vermont's Nordic team may be even stronger, with four men and four women who are "solid as the top four in the East," according to LaCasse.

"Last year, we had only three good runners; this year, we have four. We are undefeated, and I guess we will find out what we are like compared to the West."

Utah does not hold the same dominance over the West that Vermont does in the East. The Utes are the defending champions, but Wyoming, third last year and the 1985 champion, and Colorado, the 1982 champion and holder of 11 titles, are perennial challengers.

The team that Utah may have to beat to win in the West is New Mexico, which got stronger as the season progressed. Certainly New Mexico will be a major factor in the race for the national title.

Still, Utah will have a full squad when the competition gets under way in Alaska, and that means Miller and his crew are strong contenders for the team title.

Or as Miller puts it: "It's difficult to predict what will happen, but our team always seems to ski together and pull it out when it counts."

The following is an event-by-event ranking of the top qualifiers in the East and West prior to the regional championships:

Softball play-off may leave Omaha

The NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship may leave Omaha after this season, according to Mary Higgins, chair of the Division I Women's Softball Committee.

Members of the committee are recommending that the eight-team women's college softball world series be played at Berkeley, California, in 1988 and 1989.

The 1987 CSWS will be at the Seymour Smith Softball Complex in Omaha beginning May 20, with the championship game scheduled for May 24. Creighton University will serve as the host institution.

After six consecutive years in Omaha, Higgins said the committee is recommending a new site to give

Volleyball committee seeks expansion

The Division II Women's Volleyball Committee will recommend that the championship bracket be increased from 16 to 20 teams for the 1987 season. The committee also will recommend that the finals be held December 11-12 at an on-campus site.

The recommended structure for championships play will be similar to that now in use, with the exception that there would be five teams at each of the four regionals, with games to be played December 4-6.

the tournament more exposure.

"I think (committee members) were real happy with Omaha, but they want to move it around for geographical purposes and to give someone else a chance," Higgins said of the committee's decision.

Money was another factor in the decision to move. "Berkeley submitted a very lucrative bid," she said. Omaha and Oklahoma City also bid for the 1988 and 1989 series.

The committee recommendation requires approval from the NCAA Executive Committee.

Omaha also has been host to the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship's College World Series for the past 37 seasons.

The recommendation will go to the Executive Committee for approval.

Realignment of regionals also was discussed to allow member conferences to be in a region where a majority of their member schools are located.

Regarding selection criteria, the committee is recommending that priority be given to teams that play best-three-of-five-game matches over those that play best-two-of-three.

Division II hoop contenders experienced

This season's top Division II men's basketball teams have had varying amounts of experience and success in the NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

Norfolk State has played in eight tournaments, while Tampa made its first appearance in 1984. Both teams are looking for a fourth straight bid. Norfolk State was eliminated last year by eventual champion Sacred Heart, 84-74, in quarterfinal action.

Kentucky Wesleyan has a strong track record. The Panthers have made the tournament 18 times and have reached the final four 11. Only Evansville (which now competes in Division I) and Philadelphia Textile have more tournament appearances, with 19 each. Cheyney also has played in the tournament 18 times. Kentucky Wesleyan has won four titles (also second to Evansville with five) and finished second once.

Mount St. Mary's has reached the final four five times in 13 tournament appearances. The Mountaineers won the 1962 championship.

West Georgia is looking for a seventh bid, while District of Columbia hopes for a third. The latter team won the championship in 1982 and was second in 1983.

Florida Southern has played in eight tournaments, reaching the final four in half of those, including 1986. The Moccasins lost to Sacred Heart, 86-80, in the semifinals.

This championship has real potential for a Cinderella team with 11 of 14 automatic qualifiers decided by season-ending conference tournaments. Final selections will be made Sunday, March 1. A maximum of

Standards fixed

Several qualifying standards for the 1987 men's and women's indoor track championships in Divisions I and II have changed.

Due to an error in the computation of the previously published qualifying standards for the Division I men's and women's 60-meter dashes and 60-meter hurdles, the following adjusted standards now are in effect:

	Men	Women
60-meter dash	6.79	7.50
60-meter hurdles	7.92	8.64

Several standards for the Division II meet also were incorrectly published. The men's standard for the long jump should be 7.24 meters, and the manual time for the women's 800 meters should be listed at 2:16.3.

32 teams will vie for the title.

The regionals will be March 5-7 with the quarterfinals March 13 or 14. The finals are March 20-21 at the Springfield Civic Center in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Regional roundup

The following is a list of some of the top teams by region, including records through February 16:

New England—New Hampshire College (20-5), St. Anselm (18-4), Stonehill (18-7), New Haven (19-6).

East—Millersville (22-3), Gannon (21-4), Long Island-C.W. Post (19-4), Lock Haven (19-6).

South Atlantic—Norfolk State (22-1), Mount St. Mary's (22-3), District of Columbia (21-4), Virginia

Union (19-5).

South—Tampa (22-3), West Georgia (22-3), Florida Southern (19-6), Alabama A&M (19-5).

Great Lakes—Kentucky Wesleyan (21-3), Southern Indiana (21-4), Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (19-5), Wright State (16-8).

South Central—West Texas State (20-5), Delta State (18-7), Northwest Missouri State (15-8), Abilene Christian (13-6).

West—Alaska-Anchorage (19-5), Eastern Montana (18-6), UC Riverside (19-6), Cal State Dominguez Hills (18-7).

Potsdam State targeted in Division III men's basketball

Defending champion Potsdam State will be the target in the 1987 NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship.

Coach Jerry Welsh's Bears posted a division-record 32 wins a year ago en route to the title. The winning streak stood at 53 through February 16.

The Bears have reached the championship game five times, more than any other team, and have won twice. They could become only the second team to win consecutive titles. North Park, which has won the title every time it has been in the final game, was the national champion in 1978, 1979 and 1980, and again in 1985.

The tournament field consists of a maximum of 32 teams. There are 17 automatic qualifiers from 16 different conferences. The Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference gets two berths. Final selections will be made Sunday, March 1.

The regionals will be March 6-7 and quarterfinals March 14. The semifinals and final will be March 20-21 at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Regional roundup

Following are some of this year's top teams by region, with records through February 16:

Northeast—Southeastern Massachusetts (21-0), Clark (Massachusetts) (19-2), Amherst (17-1), Norwich (17-3).

East—Potsdam State (21-0), Nazareth (New York) (19-4), Hamilton (15-4), Stony Brook (18-5).

Middle Atlantic—Widener (20-3), King's (Pennsylvania) (19-3), Franklin and Marshall (18-5), Scranton (18-5), Allegheny (17-6).

South Atlantic—Jersey City State (17-5), Stockton State (16-6), New Jersey Tech (20-3), William Paterson (16-6).

Midwest—North Park (21-3), Millikin (16-7), Wisconsin-Whitewater (15-8), North Central (16-8).

West—Nebraska Wesleyan (20-4), Cal State Stanislaus (17-6), Wartburg (15-6), Claremont-Mudd-Scripps (18-5).

March 4 issue to carry report

A complete summary of the findings from an NCAA investigation into the football program at Southern Methodist University will be published in the March 4 issue of The NCAA News.

Results of the NCAA investigation into possible rules infractions were to be announced Wednesday morning, February 25, in Dallas after this issue of the News had gone to press.

Printed recruiting aids—Proposal No. 88

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee has reviewed several questions regarding the application of 1987 Convention Proposal No. 88, which was adopted as amended at the 1987 Convention to specify that the annual athletics press guide and recruiting brochure must utilize only one color of printing inside the covers. The committee's interpretations in reference to this regulation were summarized in 1987 Legislative Assistance Column No. 7. One of these interpretations is that the one-color restriction would not be applicable to pictures and printing on the inside front cover or inside back cover of the press guide and recruiting brochure, but would be applicable to pictures and printing on any pages inside the covers of these items. The committee has noted in this regard that although the one-color restriction does not apply to the inside front cover or inside back cover, this would not permit a member institution to include multicolor fold-out pages attached to the inside front cover or inside back cover of the press guide or recruiting brochure.

In addition, the committee reiterated that a member institution would be precluded from the distribution subsequent to August 1, 1987 (the effective date for Proposal No. 88), of any press guide or recruiting brochure with multicolored pictures and printing on any page inside the covers of such items. Further, any multicolored press guide or recruiting brochure utilized by a member institution prior to August 1, 1987, may not relate to any sports playing season that is initiated subsequent to August 1, 1987.

Recruiting—complimentary admissions

The provisions of Bylaws 1-9-(f) and (m) permit member institutions to provide (in accordance with the criteria of the specified regulation) prospective student-athletes, high school coaches, college preparatory school coaches and junior college coaches complimentary admissions or tickets to campus athletics events. The Legislation and Interpretations Committee has confirmed that these regulations would permit a member institution to provide such admissions or tickets only on an individual-game basis. It is the committee's position that a member institution would be precluded under these regulations and Bylaw 1-1-(b) from providing season passes to such contests, inasmuch as the receipt of a season pass (or season ticket or admission) would constitute an improper inducement and benefit to the involved prospective student-athletes and coaches.

Satisfactory-progress rule—missed-term exception

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee have reviewed the missed-term exception to the satisfactory-progress rule permitted per Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(vi) and Case No. 332 (1986-87 NCAA Manual). The missed-term exception is available one time during a student-athlete's entire period of collegiate enrollment if the student-athlete misses a complete term or consecutive terms during an academic year, subject to certain specified conditions set forth in Case No. 332-(a).

The Divisions I and II subcommittees concluded that a student-athlete may not utilize hours earned while enrolled as a part-time student during the "missed term" in order to meet the satisfactory-progress requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6). A member institution certifying the eligibility of a student-athlete who has utilized the missed-term exception shall not count the term(s) or any hours earned by the student-athlete as a part-time student during that period. Instead, the student-athlete's eligibility must be determined on the basis of the number of other terms during academic years in which the individual was regularly enrolled and the number of hours completed during those terms.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Coach builds winning tradition—in three sports

When James Longnecker arrived at Grove City College in 1957 to coach men's swimming, he believed he was on the first rung of a ladder that would take him to the "big time."

He never left the school of approximately 2,200 students in Pennsylvania, but Longnecker still managed to climb that ladder, at least in the minds of his student-athletes, colleagues at the college and coaching peers.

His successes are by no means imaginary. His swimming teams never have suffered a losing dual-meet record in 30 seasons of competition. In 1958, he began coaching men's track, and his teams in that sport have recorded only one losing mark—a 5-6 record in 1971. Eight of his track teams and three of his swimming teams—including this year's pool squad—have completed their dual-meet schedules undefeated.

With 263 dual-meet victories, Longnecker has guided his swimming teams to more victories than any other active coach in Division III. Counting the 12 seasons he coached cross country (1960-71), his teams in all three sports have won 78 percent of their head-to-head contests with other schools.

Yet, Longnecker never planned things that way. Back in 1957, he fully expected to move on to bigger programs, like any good coach. But when his successes brought along the inevitable opportunities to step up, Longnecker passed. In the end, he just couldn't improve on Grove City.

"I didn't expect to stay, but everything seemed to fall into place here," said Longnecker, noting that he was made a professor of physical education without earning a doctorate. "I feel this is a great environment for me.

"I feel I've got a great product to sell," he explained. "We've got an outstanding academic program, an outstanding faculty, a supportive administration and excellent facilities.

"If I had it to do over again, I'd want to be at a similar place."

Thanks in large part to Longnecker, the school also offers a winning tradition. Today, the coach credits much of his continuing success to the fact that his student-athletes don't want to lose.

"There's been a great tradition; year after year, young men want to carry on the tradition," he said. "No one wants to be the first to lose."

it's those institutions that never have bothered to have a philosophy of education that includes athletics, but (have allowed) athletics to become a form of their extension into the marketplace... that have been the sources of an enormous amount of abuse and the number of scandals in this country," Giamatti said.

"Places that fundamentally don't care about athletics are the ones you read about all the time in the papers," he said.

These institutions, Giamatti continued, are the ones that set up separate facilities, separate dormitories, separate funding and separate curriculums for athletes.

"They think they're taking athletics very seriously, because they're making a lot of money from it. They are taking athletics not seriously at all because they have emptied them (athletics) of any educational content, and they simply have stuck them on like a bauble or decal to the rest of the institution.

"They are also the places that, if the NCAA doesn't regulate, the Federal government will," Giamatti said. There are a number of bills already in Congress, he noted, some linked to recent antidrug legislation, aimed at establishing commissions on intercollegiate athletics.

In referring to the over-commercialization of college sports, Giamatti said, "If you think for a minute that the NCAA will clean that situation up, you're wrong, because the NCAA has presided over it since the middle 1950s, since the influx of television money brought professional sports into every home... and the emulation by colleges of a certain kind of professional athletics led to the commercialization of undergraduates for the revenue of their institutions.

"That is the source of the abuse."

Institutions that merely construe sports "simply as a form of commercialism that they would never allow for their graduate students, or their faculty, or their staff, which they somehow believe is all right for their undergraduates, will get short-term revenue and long-term problems," he warned.

Making things even better for Longnecker is the fact that his charges want to win not only in competition, but in the classroom. Student-athletes possessing a wide range of talents—from potential national champions to those just looking for the chance to compete—come to Grove City not just to win, but also to gain a quality education.

"We get athletes here who are willing to pay the price," Longnecker said.

Many of those student-athletes have excelled in a spectacular fashion. Three of Longnecker's divers won national titles, and 42 of his swimmers and divers have earned all-America honors. His teams have claimed seven top-15 finishes in national championships competition and won 12 team titles in three different conferences.

And the school's student-athletes get a taste of the "big time," not only by competing nationally, but through their association with one of the country's most-respected coaches.

Among the honors Longnecker has received is recognition from the College Swimming Coaches Association of America as a "master coach." The award is appropriate for a man who constantly attends clinics, searching for the newest innovations and techniques that will help his pupils reach their fullest potential.

Longnecker also has been an influential coach. In 1964, largely as a result of his campaign to create an opportunity for small colleges to compete for NCAA swimming honors, the first College Division Swimming Championships were held at Grove

Referring to violence that increasingly has become a part of sports, Giamatti described the situation "as a kind of instinct for violence that is not sport. Violence and sports are two radically different human activities."

Violence, Giamatti maintained, symbolizes the erosion of the connection between athletics and education and undermines the public's faith in the academic and educational missions of the institutions involved.

He praised the University of Hartford's recent elevation into Division I athletics competition (a basketball program, for example, that he said has gone from "nowhere to somewhere"), and called the school "a first-class institution," where athletics and education are in proper balance.

Giamatti said that the University of Hartford's budding Division I baseball program should build on the fact that historically, colleges have not been the minor-league farm teams for the major baseball teams.

Keep the baseball program part of the larger educational program, he added.

The new National League president described part of his job as making sure that Major League Baseball understands the wisdom of encouraging student baseball players not to bypass college, and to discourage college baseball programs from becoming minor-league feeders for the majors.

III Championships Committees ask the appropriate NCAA sports committees to review what appear to be conflicting championships philosophies; i.e., whether the events are to be designed to feature only the best collegiate teams and individuals or whether they are to accommodate geographical balance and encourage the development of the sport on a national basis.

City.

Recently, when Longnecker's swimmers mounted the starting blocks against John Carroll for the current season's final dual meet, it marked the 700th time that one of the coach's swimming, track or cross country teams answered a starter's gun for such an event. For Longnecker, who expects to coach at Grove City for another 10 years, it was just another milestone.

"I'd like to be back in the top 10 (swimming teams), have another (individual) national champion and have as many all-Americans as possible," he said, reciting his goals as a coach for the coming seasons. "These are things you can work day and night to achieve; you can't let up."

After 30 years in the same job, enough things are happening for Longnecker to keep him enthusiastic about the next decade. There even is talk at Grove City about building a new eight-lane pool, he said. All that, plus a camaraderie with and support from his fellow teachers at the school, make him happy to be where he is.

"Each year, it's different," he said. "It's exciting and it's very challenging."

to the playing rules determined by NCAA sports committees.

• Suggested that the Council investigate use of the College Satellite Network as a vehicle for nationwide, on-campus presentations regarding NCAA rules, procedures and programs.

• Urged that member institutions, especially in Division I, establish career-counseling opportunities for their student-athletes, beginning early in the student-athlete's college enrollment.

• Noted a trend in certain states toward year-round calendars in public schools, suggesting that the appropriate NCAA committees monitor that development—as well as the effect of "no pass, no play" regulations—in view of their eventual impact on college athletics.

• Conducted its annual review of trends in sports participation and sports sponsorship at the high school and NCAA levels. A complete report on sponsorship and participation comparisons from 1984-85 to 1985-86 will be featured in the March 4 issue of The NCAA News.

of the 1,047 tests administered to date, only 32 were positive, almost all of which showed use of anabolic steroids.

Tests were conducted in 10 of the 18 postseason football games, but Toner said the committee hopes to conduct tests at all major bowl games next season and that it has given some thought to testing "other people; officials, coaches or anyone who makes a direct contribution to the conduct of a game."

Toner also expressed concern about the lack of team sanctions for individuals testing positive and said he expects the issue to be addressed at next January's Convention.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than March 9, 1987.

Professional Sports Liaison: Replacement for Douglas W. Weaver, Michigan State University, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be a Council member and should be a Division I-A director of athletics.

Director Of Intercollegiate Athletics University Of Wisconsin-Madison

The University of Wisconsin-Madison invites applications and nominations for the position of Director of Intercollegiate Athletics. The University is a member of the NCAA Division I, the Big Ten Conference and the WCHA. It serves approximately one thousand athletes in 13 men's and 12 women's sports with a budget of about $10 million.

Position Description: The Director is the principal administrator of the Division of Intercollegiate Athletics. The Director must provide leadership for an athletic program that is consistent with the goals and ideals of the University including the academic and personal development of its athletes. The programs must comply with NCAA, Big Ten, and University rules and regulations as well as Title IX and affirmative action guidelines. The Director has overall responsibility for the sports program and for the fiscal, personnel, and facilities management. The Director must communicate and work with the Athletic Board, University officials, the alumni, booster groups, the media and the public.

Qualifications: Candidates must have a baccalaureate degree, but an advanced degree is preferred. It is desirable that the candidate have knowledge of the operation of a comprehensive intercollegiate athletic program. Preferably the candidate would have substantial experience in athletic administration at a major University with recognized men's and women's programs, but candidates with comparable experience in other executive or senior management positions will be considered. The candidate must have superior leadership ability, effectiveness in sound fiscal and personnel management, and a demonstrated commitment to educational objectives.

Date Of Appointment: The position is available July 1, 1987.

The University of Wisconsin-Madison is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer and encourages applications from women and members of minority groups.

Applications and nominations should be sent to:

Professor Maurice B. Webb, Chair

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS Florida International University

Applications and nominations are invited for the position of Director of Intercollegiate Athletics at Florida International University. FIU competes as an independent NCAA institution in six varsity sports for men and six for women. The University plans to move its programs to Division I status in the fall of 1987. A teaching gymnasium with seating potential for 6,000 was completed in 1986; other facilities include a lighted baseball diamond and a first-class soccer field.

Florida International University (FIU) is the fourth-largest of the nine institutions in the State University System of Florida. It is a multi-campus university located in the Miami-Southeast Florida metropolitan area, with a rapidly growing enrollment that currently exceeds 16,500 students.

The Director is expected to support the philosophy of the scholar athlete and will have administrative responsibility for the guidance of athletic programs including organization, supervision of coaches, scheduling, budgeting, fund-raising, public relations, and coordination with the intramural program. Candidates should have a record of successful administrative experience including fund raising, preferably in athletics. Experience in teaching or coaching at the university level is desirable. Minimum qualifications are a master's degree in an appropriate area of specialization and four years of directly related professional work experience; or a bachelor's degree in an appropriate area of specialization and six years of directly related professional experience.

The search and selection process will be conducted in accordance with the provisions of the "Government in the Sunshine" laws of the State of Florida. The meetings of the Search Committee will be open to the public and all documents related to the search will be available for public inspection.

Applications consisting of a letter, a resume, and a list of references must be postmarked by April 9, 1987, and directed to:

Special college programs help former athletes get degrees

More than 20 universities and colleges across the country are helping professional and former athletes complete their degrees through programs that also give the athletes a chance to counsel youngsters on the importance of getting an education.

The schools are part of a consortium headed by the Center for the Study of Sport in Society, a program based at Northeastern University that began offering degree-completion opportunities to Boston-area athletes three years ago.

The consortium has grown from efforts by Richard Lapchick, the center's director, to convince young athletes that life after sports will be a disappointment to those who are academically unprepared.

"Unless student-athletes prepare themselves more fully for life after sports, they will have a difficult transition becoming 'ordinary citizens' again," Lapchick recently told the Chicago Tribune.

To drive home the point, Lapchick and his associates at the center cite statistics indicating that only one in 12,000 high school students will go on to a professional sports career and that the average pro athlete's career will last only four years.

In addition, the center says only 27 percent of college basketball players and 30 percent of college football players will graduate with degrees, figures lower than generally reported.

Young athletes too often are glorified for their accomplishments in sports, causing them to forget about their education, Lapchick believes. As a result, he and his colleagues hope that as they help current and former athletes pick up again where they left off in their schooling, those athletes may in turn be able to persuade younger athletes to tend to their own academic needs.

From its beginnings at Northeastern, the program has spread to such institutions as the University of California, Berkeley; Georgetown University, and St. John's University (New York).

One of the newest products of the consortium is Project Academus at DePaul University, which is directed by former Blue Demon basketball player Randy Ramsey. Several members of the Chicago Black Hawks professional ice hockey team recently participated in the program's first "Discovery Workshop," which was designed to ease athletes back into academic life by giving them an opportunity to evaluate their goals and create a plan for their education.

"The approach we are taking with professional athletes is to emphasize seizing the opportunity to develop a new profession while continuing an athletics career," said Ramsey, who holds bachelor's and master of business administration degrees from DePaul. "Having reached the top in one profession, athletes must begin to achieve all over again, creating a new set of ambitions, goals and skills. Project Academus helps athletes chart a new future."

Once the athletes are enrolled at DePaul, they receive special counseling, academic advising and individual tutoring. Job-placement assistance also is available.

As they pursue a degree, the athletes also are given an opportunity to put what they already have learned in the world of athletics to good use. Typically, they do so at such events as elementary and high school assemblies, where the athletes not only urge youngsters to get an education but also to avoid drugs.

"The outreach program is important because it will reach student-athletes at the elementary and high school levels, with professional athletes discussing the realistic view of professional athletics, the importance of academic achievement and the perils of drug abuse," Ramsey said.

DePaul's program enjoys support from people such as U.S. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Blue Demon head men's basketball coach Joey Meyer, both of whom serve on the project's advisory council.

"The response has been very positive from the athletes, coaches, and the owners and management of the six professional franchises in Chicago," Ramsey said.

Project Academus possibly will emulate the success of the program at Northeastern, where 45 current professional athletes have enrolled in degree-completion programs during the past three years. Boston Red Sox first baseman Bill Buckner and New England Patriots fullback Mose Tatum are among the participating athletes.

Another participant is former Patriots defensive back Keith Lee, who is working on a bachelor's degree in psychology and speaking with youngsters about the importance of athletics after retiring from football two years ago at age 28.
