SMU alum sues NCAA

The NCAA violated Southern Methodist University students' civil rights when it placed unprecedented sanctions on the school's football program, says an alumnus who is suing the Association for $35 million.

The Federal class-action lawsuit, filed March 19 by Galveston attorney David R. McCormack, also claims the NCAA violated provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The NCAA, citing a booster slush fund that paid a total of $61,000 to 13 players, stripped SMU of its 1987 football season and limited it to seven road games in 1988. The NCAA also allowed current Mustang players to transfer to other schools without losing athletics eligibility.

"These actions caused direct trauma to the university and are a direct harm to me and others interested in the overall reputation of SMU," McCormack said, adding that he has not been in any contact with other See SMU, page 12

70 percent of CEOs answer survey

Approximately 70 percent of the presidents and chancellors of Division I member institutions are participating in a survey that will determine the legislation to be sponsored by the NCAA Presidents Commission at the NCAA's sixth special Convention June 29-30 in Dallas.

As of March 24, 194 of the 291 Division I chief executive officers had submitted completed questionnaires in the survey designed and conducted for the Commission by the American Institutes for Research, Palo Alto, California.

That response included 68 of 105 Division I-A CEOs (65 percent), 53 of 87 in Division I-AA (61 percent) and 73 of 99 in Division I-AAA (74 per-

Convention schedule announced

The tentative meeting schedule for the special NCAA Convention June 29-30 at the Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas provides for conference meetings from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday, June 28, and from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday, June 29, prior to the start of the opening business session at 1:30 p.m. June 29.

Division sessions are scheduled from 2:45 to 5 p.m. June 29, followed by a delegates reception from 6 to 7:30 p.m. A general business session also is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Forms have been provided to conference and affiliated members for their use in scheduling meetings, and they should be returned to Louis J. Spry, Convention director, at the national office by April 6. Requests for meeting space after that date will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. After notification of meeting-room assignment, conferences should direct catering requests to Janet Johnston. convention services department, at Loews Anatole Hotel, 2201 Stemmons Freeway, Dallas, Texas 75207. The telephone number is 214/744-

The final survey results will be sent March 27 via rapid-delivery service to the members of the Presidents Commission. The results also will be published in the April 8 issue of The NCAA News.

The Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on Institutional Responsibility, chaired by Chancellor Ira Michael Heyman, University of California, Berkeley, will conduct an evening meeting April 1 in Greenbelt, Maryland, to review the results of the survey.

That committee will formulate its recommendations, based on the majority opinions reflected in the survey, and present them to the full Commission the next day.

The Commission then will vote on the legislation that it wishes to sponsor for the special Convention, and Commission Chair John B. # A couple of 'long shots' connect for berths in Final Four

NCAA Director of Statistics

It certainly can be no coincidence that the two most prolific three-point teams in the nation—Providence and Nevada-Las Vegas (ranking 1-2 in three-pointers made) — are in the 1987 Final Four. That is a measure of the impact of the new three-point shot on this 49th NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

At the same time, the other two Final Four teams - Indiana and Syracuse - are well below the national average in use of the three-pointer. Both were effective, however, when they did use it. In both cases, it largely was a one-man show—Steve Alford for Indiana and Greg Monroe for Syracuse.

Providence had three three-point bombers, plus a fourth off the bench, and averaged 10 per game in 19.5

attempts during the tournament. Coach Rick Pitino says, "The threepoint line helps post play; it helps the spectacular drive to the basket. It is great for college basketball. As time has gone on this season, people really played our three-point shooters. It created great drives to the basket by Billy Donovan. That is our philosophy with the three-pointers—to go inside and back out." Providence is shooting 51.3 percent from three-point range in the tournament.

The Friars bombed Alabama with 14-for-22 three-point shooting, yet adjusted and went inside with a new game plan against Georgetown, knowing the Hoyas would swarm their long-range people. Nevada-Las Vegas shot only 30.9 from three-point range in the tournament vs. 41 percent going in but averaged 24.3 shots in the tourney vs. 19.1 going in. The Rebels staged their amazing 31-6 comeback against Iowa for 32 tournament sessions, well above with the help of their long ones. "It got us here—that and our defense," said Jerry Tarkanian. "We staved with it. I would always rather shoot for three than take closer ones."

Scoring highest in 10 years

Tournament scoring is at 154.3 points per game, both teams combined — highest since 157.9 in 1977. A year ago, the average was 143 for the tournament. (Without the threepointer, tourney scoring would be 145.) National scoring was 145.3 entering the tourney, but without the three-pointer, 138.3—down from last year's final 138.7. Tourney shooting is 48.9 from the field and 71.4 at the line vs. 46.6 and 68.6 nationally going in. Tourney three-point accuracy now is 40.4 vs. 38.6 nationally going in.

Record attendance certain

Per-game attendance now is 16,775

the all-time record of 16,433 for the 1982 tournament. And the last two sessions are in New Orleans, where record crowds of 61,612 attended in 1982. The total now is 536,801, far above the record total of 499,704 set a year ago.

Two No. 1 seeds survive

The four No. 1 seeds this year also were 1-2-3-4 in the final wire-service rankings, and we found that never in history have the top four in the polls made the Final Four (11 times three of them made it). Then two were upset, and the last two needed fantastic rallies to survive. In 1980, all four No. I seeds were knocked out. Every year since then -- seven straight years -two No. 1 seeds have made the Final Four.

Let's open Division I men's basketball championship to all

By Al Browning

Scripps Howard News Service

Vanderbilt basketball coach C. M. Newton calls it the "NCAA Invitational." He favors opening the tournament to every Division I team. So do sportscaster Billy Packer and Florida coach Norm Sloan.

But Ole Miss coach Ed Murphy is adamantly opposed to changing the 64-team Division I Men's Basketball Championship so all 250 or so programs in the nation can play. He said an opening-round game featuring Nevada-Las Vegas and Maryland-Eastern Shore would be "an emptygym classic."

The issue, raised in 1974 when former Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said he favored an open tournament, will not go away. The debate will only help the NCAA tournament flourish.

"It's an invitational event now," said

Newton. "We don't just have deserving champions going. We don't have as many teams earning their way into the tournament as teams being invited to it. So let's let everybody play in it. It'd only take one more week of play to get down to 64.

"If you're gonna have a national-championship tournament, like we used to with 32 teams, you've got to let teams earn the chance to play in it. I'd rather go back to having conference champions and deserving independents only, like 32 or 40 teams, whatever the magic number is. But if we're gonna have 64, with the prospect of going to more teams in the near future, we might as well open it to everybody."

There are 29 automatic qualifiers, conference tournament or regularseason champs. The remainder of the field is invited teams. "It's as fair as it can be now," Newton said, "with the selection committee doing as good as it can with the power ratings."

But people wondered when Arkansas-Little Rock and Cleveland State made the tournament in 1986.

"We (CBS Sports) tried to shy away from Arkansas-Little Rock against Indiana and Cleveland State against Notre Dame," said Packer. "It turned out both the little guys won their games that year. James Madison almost beat (eventual national champion) North Carolina in 1982.

"I think that's part of the great history of the NCAA tournament, upsets and near-upsets, and that's a reason it should be open to every team. The chance to win is what this country is about.

"I thought Lefty (Driesell) was crazy when he first mentioned opening the tournament to everybody. Now, I think it's a good idea. Every time the field has been expanded, it has become more popular, developed grassroots support for college basketball.

"My hometown is Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Lehigh got into the tournament two years ago. That's a wrestling area up there. Those people normally don't watch college basketball. But they did that year, with Lehigh in the field, and that brought along some new fans for the sport."

Packer said "The power brokers, such as North Carolina, Alabama, Kentucky, Indiana and the like, don't want the tournament opened to everybody because they feel good about their chances of getting in it every year."

Sloan and Florida are a budding "power broker." His deserving team last year was left out. His more-deserving team this year made the field.

"I laughed when Lefty first mentioned opening the tournament," Sloan said. "I thought it was a stupid proposal. But I'm for it now. It's the only fair thing to do. When you've got as many teams in there as we do now, you're gonna be unfair to a lot of other teams with equal qualifications.

"So I don't see any negatives to opening it up to everybody. It makes too much sense. It's the only way we'll be able to have a true national chamnion"

Sportscaster Joe Dean, doing TV basketball analysis longer than anybody, points to high school tournaments open to all teams in a state. Indiana people love that format. Other states do, too.

"But that's high school," said Dean.
"I think you've got to have a cutoff at the collegiate level to ensure a pre-

"One case does not constitute a trend, of course, but the NCAA's invocation of the 'death penalty' against Southern Methodist University's football program is not an isolated crackdown.

"There is, indeed, a concentrated NCAA effort toward bringing college sports programs into tow.

"The days of high-flying, rules-ignoring athletics directors and coaches are numbered. College and university presidents are reclaiming the authority they relinquished in favor of money-making sports programs.

"There are exceptions: Georgetown University continues to recruit, educate and graduate great basketball players at a first-rate school. But the overall pattern of big-time collegiate sports-for-profit demeans the values and destroys the discipline of educational institutions.

"If the rich guys who are the source of the corruption in college athletics want to organize leagues for their own teams of 19-to-22-year-olds, I have no doubt they'll find a market among the TV and cable operators and the fans for whom the pro games are insufficient diversion."

"College costs are on a sprint that U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett contends is unjustified. Clearly, tuition, fees and other college costs that soar at double or triple the overall inflation rate are suspect.

"Increasing costs are most evident at the most prestigious private colleges and universities. But the burden also has grown weightier at most state-supported institutions.

"'Higher education is not underfunded,' Secretary Bennett says. 'It is under-accountable and under-productive. Our students deserve better than this. They deserve an education commensurate with the large sums paid by parents and taxpayers and donors.'

"Secretary Bennett's message is that colleges and universities contemplating major tuition increases should be prepared to explain why."

But there's a problem: field's already too big

By Steve Jacobson Newsday

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship is a jumbo bag of potato chips, a whole loaf of onion rings, an untouched box of coconut patties. It's too much of a good thing.

Too many teams, too many mediocre records, too many runners-up and lucky losers.

The whole tournament is a mixed assortment, a paradox. To begin with, it's a delight, which is what makes it a target of excess. It has a spontaneity that the professional game can't touch. It has the very real enthusiasm of the bands and cheerleaders and sections of students who've driven all night and camped out to watch their schools play. It has the spirit of youth in the cheerleaders who have to change into uniform on the back of the moving bus because they're already late for the opening tip.

Tell me that you've ever seen St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) play and not been impressed how the fellow inside that Hawk suit can keep flapping his arms continuously from buzzer to buzzer

It's another of those contradictions that the NCAA won't let Memphis State in the tournament because the basketball program is on probation and, at the same time, keeps the Tigerbelles out.

The basketball team deserves to be closed out, but all right-thinking viewers deserve to watch the Tigerbelles in their explosive routines and imaginative costumes at half time. It's only compensation for having to put up with those commercials and television time-outs.

Having 64 teams in the tournament is really providing so much cannon fodder for the good teams so there can be more television sessions. Have you noticed that field included 25 teams that have lost 10 or more games? Come now, what does the regular season mean, anyhow?

Do conference standings mean anything? There were six teams from the Southeastern Conference and five from the Big East.

Well, maybe the postseason conference tournaments give late-maturing teams like North Carolina State a chance.

Then how about the Big Ten, which began with six of its members in the big tournament and didn't even have a tournament. What they really ought to do is go back to 32 or maybe 40 teams, with the 29 conference champions—maybe a special dispensation for some teams that won during the regular schedule and got bumped in the conference tournament—and selected independents.

Including all 284 teams, according to the NCAA, would extend the tournament one more week; a modest proposal. It would be a touch of Americanism. "The chance to win is what this country is about," television broadcaster Billy Packer reminded us.

Yes, equality of opportunity, but why do the teams with the least op-See But there, page 4

NCAA drug-testing program is demeaning to the innocent

By Dave Kindred

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution

Our university athletics officials want to keep drugs out of their games. Good. Drug testing is not the way to do it. Drug testing is a blunt instrument of authoritarian power. It is ugly, demeaning to innocent people and insensitive to civil liberty.

A basketball player should no more be forced to prove himself clean of drugs than a coach should be forced to prove he doesn't burn down orphanages. If there's cause to suspect drug use, by all means test a player. But to test at the whim of the powerful is to create a police state.

An Ohio State player, 6-foot-9 junior John Anderson, said he is opposed to the drug test being done at NCAA tournament games. Something in his Iowa heartland soul says he is being defiled by the suggestion he could be on drugs. "It's an insult," he said, "but I go along. I want to

The price John Anderson pays to play a silly NCAA game is some small part of his freedom.

That price is outrageous and no one should be asked to pay it.

What, after all, are we talking

This is basketball. A game. This is not national security. No cokehead will launch a nuclear missile because he wants to see the fireworks. Good heavens, folks. This is a game. The worst that can happen is that college athletics will be embarrassed by a drug revelation. And as ugly as that might be, it is, in the large scheme of things, nothing. So what if Gary McLain did cocaine during the Final Four in 1985? A confessed liar, cheat, thief and drug addict who sold his package of deceit to Sports Illustrated for a reported $40,000, McLain swipes his slimy paw across the face of his coaches and teammates. He says the coaches didn't want to find out he was on coke. He never says his teammates used the stuff, but he drops their names next to his drug stories. The unspeakable

A sad story, McLain's, but so what? His addiction, deception and betrayal are no reason to force 500 basketball players to urinate in a bottle. If every player in this tournament is an addict. there still should be no testing. Just stop playing basketball. Better that than give up, for no good reason, the protection of privacy.

Ten minutes after a game, 16 players are escorted by NCAA "couriers" to a private room where they "fill out a bunch of papers that say if you don't take the test...you cannot play in the tournament," Anderson said. Refusal is considered a positive result for drugs, notwithstanding one's legal right against self-incrimination. Oliver North is lucky the NCAA is not on

A player next is asked to take the seal off a beaker, urinate into that beaker (eight ounces worth) and pour the urine into two beakers, four ounces each. A "validator" stands by, keeping an eye on the urinating proc-

Some players have had problems producing urine in public. Gary Williams, the Ohio State coach whose first-round game ended about 11:40 p.m., said his star Dennis Hopson didn't finish until 2 a.m. Because players are dehydrated after a game, Williams said, "I don't know why they don't do it before the game."

The question was put to a member of the NCAA Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee, Vanderbilt athletics director Roy Kramer, who said, "If you test before a game, after the test the player can still do his 'speed' or go sniff his cocaine."

This put one listener into a tizzy. Cocaine, yes. Not amphetamines. "Speed" produces anxiety and smallmuscle tremblings. Most of the listener's hair has fallen out in the 25 years he has been around college basketball. He has been in rooms where people talked about gambling, cocaine and fast cars for good shooters. Not once has he heard of a basketball player taking "speed" before a game.

So, the listener asked Kramer, "Have there been a lot of cases of players using 'speed?"

To which Kramer said, "It's highly used."

Not wishing to remain ignorant

forever, the listener rushed over to Gary Williams, once a college player and for 10 years a big-time coach. "Do basketball players use 'speed?" the listener asked.

'Oh, no," Williams said. "It would be very difficult to play basketball on 'speed.' Football players, linemen, use it, I think. But they don't have to be as fine with their movements."

"I've never heard of 'speed' being used in basketball," the listener said.

Williams said, "Neither have I." But now we have NCAA bloodhounds testing for it. They have the game's best interests at heart. We know that because they tell us so. There are just soooooo many problems these days. To solve one, the NCAA is asking players to urinate in public and pour the urine into two beakers, four ounces each.

OK. The NCAA is at war against America's problems. OK. And since college athletes are not the only sinners among us, one guesses the next step will be alcohol tests for athletics directors. Those who test positive will be fired. Those who refuse will be fired. Then we can begin lie-detector tests for coaches. Those who fail will be fired. Those who refuse will be fired. Then we can administer truth serum to university presidents. Those

Who is the winner if the courts overturn NCAA drug-testing plan?

The Dallas Times Herald

Simone LeVant insists she doesn't do drugs. Why then did she challenge the constitutionality of the NCAA's mandatory drug-testing program in court?

Principle, LeVant says.

The 22-year-old Stanford University diver claims the tests are an infringement upon her right to privacy. LeVant's attorneys, who are working with the American Civil Liberties Union, persuaded a California judge she was right.

Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Peter G. Stone agreed that mandatory urine tests are a constitutional invasion of privacy and granted LeVant a preliminary injunction allowing her to compete in the NCAA diving championships without submitting to urine tests.

LeVant's reaction was predictably

"I feel wonderful," LeVant said. "I am happy to hear everything the judge said. I feel I set a precedent. No other athlete has been willing to challenge the NCAA."

Nor foolish enough. Not that the NCAA is above reproach, but isn't the drug-testing program there to help student-athletes? If it prevents one drug addiction—or saves one life—hasn't it served its purpose?

Had the drug-testing program been in effect two years ago, Villanova guard Gary McLain might not have been addicted to cocaine when the Wildcats won the national basketball championship.

"Len Bias might still be alive," said University of Texas athletics director DeLoss Dodds. "I don't like the way the drug tests are conducted, but I've told our athletes I would be the first one in line because I think it's neces-

NCAA officials aren't sure what effect the LeVant ruling will have on collegiate athletics. But one thing appears certain.

"I think it's heading for trial," said University of Connecticut athletics director John L. Toner, chair of the NCAA Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee.

And that eventually will happen.

"I haven't yet talked to an NCAA counsel to get the kind of advice I need before making a definitive state-ment," Toner said. "I will say one thing. I wasn't completely surprised by the decision. We've been expecting this type of thing."

In other words, when the mandatory drug-testing program was adopted last year, the NCAA knew it would be challenged. The only surprise was that it took this long.

So far, LeVant is the only athlete out of an estimated 15,000 who have attended NCAA championships events since drug testing was adopted to challenge the program.

(LeVant since has failed to qualify for the Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships, and the NCAA has asked the California court to dismiss the case.)

"I find the program has been more or less accepted by athletes," Toner said. "The main reason for that is the institutions were really the ones who mandated the testing.

Meanwhile, drug testing will con-

'We tested last weekend, and we'll continue to test through this week and then next weekend at various championships, among them, of course, men's basketball," Toner said. "We will not be altering these plans, at least not as of this moment.

"I haven't had time to study the judge's opinion so it's hard to say what kind of ramifications it will have, but it doesn't appear to have a direct effect on us," said Southwest Athletic Conference Assistant Commissioner Dennis Robinson, who coordinates the league's drug-testing program.

Dodds said, "I don't think the ruling will affect what people are doing today. I think we'll always be able to drug test in athletics. I think where we have a right to test in athletics is on the safety side and fair competition."

Specifically, Dodds sees a need to test for performance-enhancing drugs such as anabolic steroids. Although he says he is sympathetic to the athletes' privacy, he says the advantages of drug testing outweigh the disadvantages.

"I think it's a great deterrent," Dodds said.

Statistics-both at Texas and the NCAA—appear to bear that out.

Dodds says of 600 athletes tested for drugs, only three have come back positive, none more than once. Toner says only about 2.5 to three percent of the athletes tested by the NCAA have been found to be using illegal drugs. The NCAA expected that figure to be between eight to 10 percent, Toner

"We've had a fairly small percent," Toner said. "However, it's significant when you consider most of the testing has been done to key participants in championships events."

Despite the LeVant ruling, Toner says the NCAA will test a minimum of 3,000 athletes during the 1986-87 academic year and plans to test even more next year. He also says the NCAA will make the drug-testing service available to member institu-

"I think after two years we'll have sufficient data to know whether the plan should be adjusted or whether we need to continue the plan at all," Toner said. "We're using this as a tool in the drug-awareness effort. We do feel drug testing has proven to be a deterrent.

"If we don't find reason—and by that I mean good, sufficient reason for testing—then we shouldn't be able to test. And the only good, sufficient reason to stop the testing would be if we found no positive

Collegiate baseball seems to be losing its prestige somewhat, but the sport that starts in the spring is an important facet of life to everybody enjoying the Football, basketball and soccer, in some cases, are considered the big three in several colleges; but with the ABCA (American Baseball Coaches Association) being strong and supportive, baseball will once again be a top-three power among collegiate sports. How many times have you heard of any infractions committee banning a baseball program? When a flower blooms in the spring, so does a kid who plays in his first Little League game.

Baseball, which is becoming a worldwide treat for everyone, should have the support like other sports and have the attention the so-called big three have. Positive approaches and significant values will conquer anything negative, and baseball is a definite asset to all colleges.

Sports offers great opportunity

Sports play an inflated role in American culture, former tennis star Arthur Ashe says, and although he believes black athletes are exploited, college athletics programs offer them a tremendous opportunity, he

"The ranks of Blacks attendings college are dwindling, and through athletics, Blacks are offered a great opportunity," he told the Associated

"Many Blacks would not see the inside of a college classroom if it weren't for their athletics ability, and they have to take advantage of that Ashe also said that the success in sports in the black community has taken on such significance that it overshadows other values. He said black youngsters tend not to pursue academics or other interests. "If it weren't for the athletics programs, many of our young Blacks would not even be in school. They just wouldn't go," he said. Ashe said he would like to see athletics kept in perspective with a view toward long-term educational values that last a lifetime.

After numerous honors, Demers plans to give something back

By Marvin West

Scripps Howard News Service

All sports stories don't end with arbitration, drug rehabilitation or the "death penalty." Some close out like perfect sunsets, settling softly out of sight, leaving glorious afterglows for wrapping memories.

Jeannie Demers is finished as a basketball shooter at Buena Vista College in Storm Lake, Iowa. She's ready to move on, to marry Mark Henningsen and become an elementary schoolteacher and coach. She's motivated to help youngsters and give something back to basketball.

Jeannie can move on without a bunch of what-ifs and I-wish-I-hads. She did well—3,171 points in four years of basketball and all A's in academics.

Jeannie, 5 feet, 5 inches and maybe 115 pounds, played in NCAA Division III but figures the ball and goal are about the same size everywhere. Better guards in the big leagues? Jeannie shot from places guards don't

"I wish we'd had the three-point rule," she said.

Demers' career scoring average was 30.2. In all of women's basketball, only Carol Blazejowski of Montclair State did better.

Buena Vista had a 70-34 record in Demers'time. Coach John Naughton, a veteran of 35 years, was pleased with the team and himself.

"Jeannie came to college with a running jump shot. It never did look exactly right," said the coach. "I don't have a Ph.D., but you know something? I was smart enough not to change that shot."

Demers hit 49.1 percent over 104 games. Three years she led the country in scoring. She got 30 or more points 56 times. Only seven times was she under 20. Six were blamed on being a portunity get shipped to far-away places? What kind of school time do the Marist players miss when school is in Poughkeepsie, the first round is at Tucson, the regionals at Seattle and the Final Four at New Orleans? That's really three weeks out of school, if they win.

These are defined as student-athletes, remember. The obvious answer is for schools shipped to distant points to lose in the first round, which is why they were shipped out there in the first place.

What they should be doing - especially in light of current and recurring scandals—is looking to come down to sanity rather than expanding.

Jeannie did all this shooting and scoring without irritating her teammates. They gladly gave her the ball and joined fans in cheering her records. Coach Naughton understands. He says Jeannie is an inspiration, a solid-gold person who remained humble even at the top of her game.

Demers considered basketball a tasty dessert to almost every day. She really enjoyed it. She came close to treating triumph and disaster the same. She chuckles when she recalls highs and lows.

"I hit only eight of 35 at Wartburg one night. Isn't that awful? My best game? It was in high school, 36 of 40. It was a little bit of heaven."

Jeannie Demers grew up a farm girl. Her idea of a big summer day was to get up earlier than three older sisters so she could go out on the tractor with her dad.

"That was first prize. First one up got to go with Dad."

It was a long time before Jeannie decided her sisters might be sleeping in and letting her win.

Jeannie is glad she went so many mornings. Dad isn't there any more to go a' farming. He died last year. Jeannie wishes he could have seen this senior season.

"He was pretty proud of me."

Mark Henningsen is pretty proud, too. He has recovered from the embarrassment of being struck out in Little League baseball by a girl.

"Publicly, he denies it ever happened," said Demers. "But, I got him. I struck him out. Maybe I better tell you he was trying to play with a cast on his broken arm."

Of course, Jeannie Demers was the only girl in Little League. She eventually switched to softball and has twice been an all-America in that sport. She is an alternate on the United States team for the Pan American Games.

Dirty spots in sports trouble Jeannie. She sees such joy in athletics, she can't imagine participants not treating sports with respect.

"I never went on the floor without feeling responsible to all the people who were watching."

The scouting report says Jeannie played hard, didn't complain about bad calls and didn't cry when she lost. If little eyes were looking for an example, she was one.

Murphy opened his first season at Ole Miss with an interesting pep talk. He told his Rebels to play for a place in the National Invitation Tournament, that they were not good enough to make the NCAA field.

"There has to be a standard for entrance into the NCAA tournament," Murphy said. "An open tournament would be self-defeating. It'd have an adverse effect on play during the regular season. It'd lessen the value of competition for the regular-season championship in various conferences.

"Let's face it. If you've won five or six games during the season, you don't need to be playing in a nationalchampionship tournament. You need

Murphy says playing where you don't belong would only prolong agony. He says a lot of teams would just get whacked again by teams that had whacked them during the season. He talks of a week of yawners and terrible mismatches.

"We've got it set up pretty good now. The injustices are gone. With 64 teams included, there's room for Idaho State, if it's deserving, to get in there with them. There's room in there for Cleveland State, and the like, to put some dents in some egos."

Of course, there's room for Nevada-Las Vegas. The door remains shut to Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Knight, Tarkanian return

Indiana's Bob Knight is back in the Final Four for the first time in six years, or since his 1981 team won the championship in Philadelphia. This is his fourth trip to the Final Four, a total exceeded by only five coaches in history.

Tarkanian returns for the first time in 10 years, or since his 1977 team finished third. Pitino and Syracuse's Jim Boeheim both are in the Final Four for the first time. What are their chances? Well, 19 coaches have won it all on their first trip.

Pitino revitalizes Friars

On Sunday, March 8, Providence made the NCAA tournament for the first time in nine years. The same day. Pitino lost his six-month-old son, Daniel. Thirteen days later, he became the second Providence coach in history to reach the Final Four (Dave Gavitt did it in 1973).

Pitino's team did it the same way it has been doing it all this seasonwith an all-out, swarming, relentless, ball-stealing defense using 10 players in waves, plus a quick offense that leads the country in making the new three-point shot. At 25-8 for the season, Providence hardly is a Cinderella team.

Pitino's Final Four trip in just his second year on the job at Providence with a program that suffered 20 losses in 1985 stamps the 34-year-old Massachusetts graduate as one of the top young coaches in the country. His career record is 133-73 heading for New Orleans. He will meet his closest friend, Jim Boeheim.

Donovan and Brooks

Pitino is being called one of the country's best motivators, and Billy Donovan, the senior playmaker and emotional leader of the team, is a prime example. The year before Pitino's arrival, Donovan was an overweight sophomore, 188 pounds on a 5-10 frame, who had averaged 3.2 points for an 11-20 team. He was thinking about transferring to a Division II team. Pitino convinced him to transfer about 20 pounds off his body, and his teaching and motivating of Donovan and other team members has done wonders.

Delray Brooks was lost in Indiana's system, scared to shoot and miscast as a ballhandler his freshman year. It was a nightmare. Now, he has trimmed down from 203 to 180, again loves to play and hopes to get a shot at Indiana at New Orleans.

Boeheim stands 260-83

Now that Jim Boeheim, in his 11th season, is taking Syracuse to the Final Four for the first time, perhaps the basketball intelligentsia suddenly will decide he is a genius. That is what happened to Rollie Massimino at Villanova, Lou Carnesecca at St. John's (New York) and, believe it or not, John Wooden at UCLA (who was 3-9 in his first 12 NCAA games and "couldn't win the big one" before winning 38 straight NCAA games). You would think that a coach who averages 23.6 victories per season would not have to plead for his credibility. But he was consistently convicted for nearly all his losses, while exonerated of all responsibility for his

Seikaly remembers

Rony Seikaly, the 6-10, 240-pound Syracuse center who led regional victories over Florida and North Carolina, spent the first 10 years of his life in Beirut, Lebanon. He vividly remembers seeing beautiful buildings reduced to rubble and hearing bombs disrupt sunny days. Stories of death were common. "You think the Carrier Dome is loud," Seikaly says. "You haven't heard anything until you've heard a bomb. There is no sound like it in the world. You'd go to school sometimes and wonder if you would ever see your parents again." His family eventually fled Lebanon for Athens, Greece, where he was first

Jerry Tarkanian, the controversial Nevada-Las Vegas coach, is nearing the end of the greatest season of his long career. He can win his first NCAA championship. His career winning percentage has reached .8269 at this writing, barely above the all-time Division I leader, Clair Bee, with .8266 for 410-86 at Long Island-Brooklyn in the 1930s, 1940s and 1950s.

Ironically, Tarkanian is the beneficiary of an NCAA ruling, the one that vacated his Long Beach State team's NCAA appearances in the 1971, 1972 and 1973 tournaments. Long Beach State was 6-3 in those tourneys. Put

Not desperados

The Las Vegas seniors are not desperados of the desert. The power forward, for instance, is a quiet, organ-playing son of a Baptist minister back in Library, Pennsylvania (outside Pittsburgh). Armon Gilliam, 6-9 and 230, went to junior college in Independence, Kansas, before coming to Las Vegas. He has a 3.000 grade-point average as a communications major.

The sixth man and defensive stopper is a studious social-consciousness buff who already has enough credits to greaduate and thought it would be a good idea for the team to wear warm-up shirts saying "Stop Drugs." His name is Gary Graham.

Freddie Banks, one of the top threepoint bombers around, comes from Las Vegas, of all places, which means he has to handle a lot of pressure. He has done it well. He is majoring in social work. "My major goal is to get a diploma," he says.

Only Bonvicini new

Long Beach State coach Joan Bonvicini is the only first-time coach in the Division I women's final four. And for Bonvicini, the fourth time was the charm. She had missed the final four by just one game three times, losing in the regional title games in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Jody Conradt, coach of Texas' defending champions, is making the final four for the second time. She and Tennessee coach Pat Head Summitt, making it for the fourth time (a record), are the only repeaters. Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore is making it a third time, twice as cohead coach. He was there a fourth time as an assistant to Sonja Hogg.

Record likely

A record attendance total seems likely for this sixth NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship. The total so far is 90,682 for 32 sessions (double-headers counting as one session), for an average of 2,834 per session. A year ago, the total was 81,266 at this stage for a 2,540 average. The record total of 98,569 was set in 1984. It seems obvious the record is well within reach—Texas is playing in its 16,000-seat home arena.

Conradt going for two

Jody Conradt, coach of top-seeded, 31-1 Texas, is going for two straight NCAA championships with a young team that has just one senior (Andrea Lloyd). Do we have a dynasty brewing Conradt has won just about every honor available in women's basketball. She has 470 victories—more than any female coach in college basketball (and just 113 losses). Her 10-year record at Texas is an eyepopping 353-50, with eight 30-victory teams.

Her current team has won 25 straight games, dating back to December 14, when Tennessee won, 85-78, breaking a 40-game Texas victory string that included its perfect 34-0 season of 1986. Texas came back to win, 88-74, over Tennessee at Coral Gables, Florida.

Conradt's humor and wit are as quick and effective as the Texas fast break. Her players respect her drive for perfection. She prides herself in always being organized.

Keeper of the flame

Louisiana Tech has tradition and discipline second to none in women's basketball. A Lady Techster is ladylike, a good student, a devout Christian and probably favors needlepoint over Madonna tapes on airplanes. The town of Ruston comes alive when the team plays, and some of Tech's greatest fans are senior citizens.

The keeper of this flame is Leon Barmore, 42, a Ruston native who was a gunning point guard for both Ruston High and Tech. He coached a winning men's team at Ruston High before becoming Sonja Hogg's assistant at Tech. His career record is an awesome 146-16 for five seasons. Says Texas coach Jody Conradt, whose team plays Tech in the semifinals: "Leon was one of the first to really push women, to demand the absolute best from them. He is very intense." Summitt rolls on Lady Vols head coach Pat Summitt in 1987 became the ninth active women's coach to top 300 victories. In 13 years at Tennessee, she is 317-102 and is the only women's coach to lead four teams in the final four. She was a member of the silver-medalist 1976 U.S. women's Olympic basketball team and coach of the 1984 goldmedalist team.

The Tennessee players knew exactly what they had to do to beat old rival Auburn in the Mideast regional finals at Knoxville. Summitt told her troops that they could count on two things: "I told them the sun will come up tomorrow and Auburn will go to the

The Lady Vols not only controlled the glass, 49-32, but shot 50 percent from the field and 80 percent from the line to win, 77-61.

Bonvicini's class act

After eight strong years as the Forty-Niners' head coach, Bonvicini is firmly entrenched as one of the top women's basketball coaches in the nation. Her 218-42 (.838) overall record speaks for itself. A graduate of Southern Connecticut State, she starred at guard and earned varsity letters in each of her four undergraduate years. She helped her teams to third- and fourth-place finishes in the 1974 and 1975 Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national championships. In 1981, she was head coach of the West team in the National Sports Festival and in 1982 was assistant coach for the U.S. national team. She also will serve as president of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association for 1987-88.

Knight has shown that greatness in any profession is adjusting to change, while maintaining an image of nonnegotiability, as Al McGuire put it. He has given us the answer to that old argument about whether a Vince Lombardi, a John Wooden or a Red Auerbach still would be successful in today's environment of overexposure and athletes who say, "Play me or I'll transfer."

Just look at the key players in Indiana's 26-13 drive to defeat Louisiana State. Joe Hillman, a redshirt junior from Glendale, California (redshirting is another thing Knight never used to do)—the first player Knight ever recruited from west of the Mississippi—made a three-point play (the old-fashioned kind) to pull Indiana within four at 75-1. Keith Smart, a junior-college star from Baton Rouge and Garden City (Kansas) Junior College, made two free throws to narrow it to 76-75 with 40 seconds left. Then Rick Calloway tipped in the winning basket. Along the way. Dean Garrett, who played junior college ball at San Francisco City College, showed with his rebounding and scoring why he was named Big Ten Conference newcomer of the year. Alford, all-America man

Everyone loves Steve Alford. And it is not only that he is the only unanimous all-America player in this Final Four, Indiana's all-time scoring leader, one of the top free-throw shooters in college basketball history (consistently around 90 percent over his career), the team's reliable threepoint shooter and likely to become the first man to be named Indiana's most valuable player four straight seasons.

Nor is it only because he is handsome and modest. He is a native son and a self-made player. He has worked countless hours on his game, on his free throwing, on many technical those back in his record, and Tarkanian's percentage drops to .824 on 479-102 (instead of the current 473-99). He has had duels with the NCAA, but this ruling helped his career per-

Nevada-Las Vegas is 37-1 in this watershed season, equaling the NCAA record for victories in a season, set by Duke a year ago. A victory over Indiana in the semifinals would break the record.

The team's fabulous 1987 season has resulted in immense national publicity for this towel-chewing 56-yearold. Tarkanian has taken advantage of the many opportunities to express himself. "I know what I've done and what I haven't done. I know how hard I've worked with our kids over the years, and I know how hard my wife has worked. Sure, a lot of them haven't graduated (his own son was an honor student and outstanding player). But you should have seen them when they got here." Says UNLV president Robert Maxson: "I think

title has a new home but is staying within state boundaries

Taking fully to heart the old adage that nothing lasts forever, Iowa State ended Iowa's nine-year hold on the Division 1 crown.

The Cyclones began a new chapter of the history in the sport with their victory at College Park, Maryland, March 19-21. It marked the first time since 1977 that Dan Gable's Hawkeyes left the Division I championships meet without the first-place trophy.

"I feel great to win the national championship," said Jim Gibbons, the 27-year-old Cyclones coach. "The people at Iowa State deserve, and hopefully share the feeling. This was a tough one, and I give Dan Gable credit for winning nine of them."

The championship was decided in a dramatic head-to-head match between Iowa State's Jim Kelly and Iowa's Brad Penrith in the 126-pound class, with Kelly pinning the defending champion in the third period.

"It wasn't over until the pin," Gibbons said. "Man, that was great."

Lady Longhorn swimmers 'add one more and make it f

The motto of Texas seniors—"One more to make it four"-became reality when the Longhorns claimed their fourth consecutive Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 19-21 at the Indiana University Natatorium.

Records were set by Betsy Mitchell in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke and Tracey McFarlane in the 100yard breast stroke. Also, the 200-yard medley relay and 200-yard freestyle relay teams set records.

Stanford came in a close second, just 17 points behind the Longhorns.

Top finishers for the Cardinal included freestylers Jenna Johnson and Aimee Berzins; backstrokers Michelle Donahue, Jennifer Pokluda and Laurie McLean; butterflyer Michelle Griglione, and breast stroker Susie Rapp, who set a record in the 200yard breast stroke.

Florida finished third and got topfive performances by freestylers Dara Torres, Mary Wayte and Tami Bruce. TEAM RESULTS

Murray State shooters claim second rifle crown

Murray State won its second NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships team title in three years March 21 at Xavier University (Ohio), after the most interesting team match in the eight-year history of the event.

After scores had been totaled, the Racers were locked in a dead heat with defending champion West Virginia at 6,205. The Mountaineers took team smallbore honors, and Murray State won the team air rifle match. Murray then was awarded the overall championship on the basis of inner 10s—perfect bullseyes—as it produced 21 more than West Virginia.

Chief statistical officer Neil Johnson asked West Virginia coach Ed Etzel and Murray State coach Elvis Green to review the targets before they were offered to the shooters for Both coaches agreed that the scoring and tie-breaking results looked accurate, and the targets were made available for review by the shooters, who may challenge the scoring of any target up to one hour after results are

When WVU team captain Mike Anti asked to see all of the targets of both teams, he, Etzel, Green and Murray State team captain Pat Spurgin returned to the official scoring area for another look at the 256 10bullseve targets scored for the two

During this second target check, two addition errors were discovered on West Virginia smallbore targets, which gave Murray an outright, twopoint victory-twice as large a winning margin as the 1985 Racers enjoyed in their championship victory over WVU.

Shooting in her last collegiate championships, Spurgin set a record in air rifle with a 394 (400 is perfect). Her team's total of 1,557 in the event also set a championships record, besting the 1,555 set by West Virginia a year

Tennessee-Martin's Rob Harbison captured the spotlight in individual competition by becoming the first shooter not representing Murray State, Tennessee Tech or West Virginia to win an NCAA title. His 392 tied the championships record for individual competition.

West Virginia's Web Wright took individual smallbore honors with a 1,174 (1,200 is perfect) in a competition that saw an individual championship record set and another tied.

Spurgin recorded a 386 for 40 shots standing, eclipsing the mark of 384 that been held by Tennessee Tech's Ray Slonena (1981) and Anti (1984). South Florida's Matt Suggs fired a 397 kneeling, which tied an individual record set by Tennessee Tech's Kurt Fitz-Randolph in 1981.

who helped lead Murray State to its second NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships team title in three years, head the lists of smallbore and air rifle all-Americas announced March 21 by the National Rifle Asso-

Spurgin added the honor to a list of awards that includes a 1984 Olympic gold medal, two NCAA individual national championships and the championships record for highest score in air rifle. She established the latter by firing a 394 (400 is perfect) during the team competition at the 1987 championships. Spurgin won the 1984 individual air rifle title and the 1985 individual smallbore championship.

Only a sophomore, Wigger owns a host of NRA records. Last year, she finished sixth in the NCAA individual air rifle championship, and her performance at the 1987 championships included third place in the smallbore event (1,171) and a tie for 11th in air rifle (387).

Three-time NCAA team champion West Virginia placed four shooters on the NRA smallbore first team and four on the air rifle team. Ten shooters each were named to the smallbore and air rifle first and second teams.

Lofton, Columbia men earn 1987 fencing championships

Michael Lofton has carved his name in the NCAA record book with a wide blade.

The New York University senior became the first collegiate fencer to win four individual titles when the 1987 men's championships began on the Notre Dame campus March 16. Lofton completed his career-long dominance of collegiate sabre competition by compiling an 18-0 championships record for the second straight season.

Columbia captured the team title, as the Lions succeeded the host Fighting Irish for their first outright championship since 1968. Columbia shared the national crown with New York University in 1971.

Under a new scoring system that permits only a team's top finisher in each weapon to compile points, Columbia scored 86 points to 78 for runner-up Pennsylvania. Penn State was third for a second straight year while Notre Dame faded to fourth.

Host Notre Dame women win tencing title

Notre Dame was right at home on the victory stand at the 1987 NCAA Women's Fencing Championships.

The Fighting Irish, undefeated in two dual-meet seasons under coach Yves Auriol, captured their first NCAA women's title in any sport with a 5-0 record at the national showdown, which they hosted.

Temple finished second, the highest finish ever for the Lady Owls. Columbia-Barnard defeated Fairleigh Dickinson Teaneck for third, with 1986 champion Pennsylvania fifth.

Columbia-Barnard senior Caitlin Bilodeaux completed her collegiate

Stanford swimmers braced for Texas' challenge

Stanford will be gunning for its third consecutive team title while Texas seeks its first title since 1981 at the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships, set for April 2-4 at the University of Texas Swim Center, Austin, Texas.

Skip Kenney, the Cardinal coach for eight years, has led his team to the Pacific-10 Conference championship the past five seasons. Stanford also has put together four straight unbeaten dual-meet seasons and finished among the nation's top four teams the past five years.

Returning world-class swimmers Pablo Morales, Jeff Kostoff, Sean Murphy and Anthony Mosse are joined by what Kenney calls "the best recruiting class in the nation."

Morales holds championships records in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly (46.26 and 1:42.85, respectively) and has a good chance of claiming titles in those events again. Also, he was the top finisher in the 200-yard individual medley (1:45.43) and will seek to repeat that performance as well.

New Haven women win their first team title

New Haven's women's basketball team became the first Charger squad to win an NCAA team championship by defeating defending champion Cal Poly-Pomona, 77-75, at the Division II Women's Basketball Championship in Springfield, Massachusetts, March 21

New Haven had five players in double figures in scoring and three of them also were in double figures in rebounding. Joy Jeter led the team in both of those categories with 30 points and 15 rebounds.

Cal Poly-Pomona, which had won the last two championships, was paced by Niki Bracken and Michelle McCoy. Bracken led the team in both scoring and rebounding with 28 points and 13 rebounds. McCoy added 22 points.

New Haven needed an extra period to down Northern Kentucky, 77-74, in the semifinals. Jeter had 21 points and nine rebounds in that contest.

Cal Poly-Pomona advanced to the title game for the fifth time by downing Pittsburgh-Johnstown, 72-70. Bracken had 21 points and nine rebounds while Paula Tezak scored 18 points and led the team with 11 boards.

Sonja Beamon of New Haven tests Cal Poly-Pomona's Marcine Edmonds (31) and Paula Tezak (32)

Distance freestyler Kostoff will defend his 1,650-yard freestyle title (14:37.87) and should be a finalist in the 500-yard freestyle (4:18.03). Adding depth for the Cardinal will be three-time all-America David Louden (1:37.43, 200-yard freestyle), John Hodge (44.83, 100-yard freestyle; 1:37.23, 200-yard freestyle) and a host of talented freshmen.

Murphy will provide the backbone for the Cardinal backstrokers after establishing himself as one of the division's best. He finished first in the 200-yard event last year at 1:45.90 and turned in a 49.36 in the 100-yard backstroke. Junior Matt Nance, sophomore Kurt Kroesche and freshman Rick Gould also have scoring potential.

Butterfly specialist Mosse has been a finalist in both the 100- and 200-yard events the past two seasons, finishing second in the 200 (1:43.96) and fifth in the 100 (47.86).

Stanford has dominated the 400yard medley relay the past two years, including a 3:12.47 victory last year. With the loss of top swimmers John Moffett and David Lundberg, the medley relay team could drop a notch but should still challenge for the title.

Texas, coming off a third-place performance in the 1986 championships, will do its best to take the title from Stanford. The Longhorns go into the championships ranked No. 1 by the College Swim Coaches Association of America, only four points ahead of the Cardinal.

If Spencer Martin continues to improve as he did in 1986, he could be the key performer for Texas. He swam a 55.03 in the 100-yard breast stroke and a 2:00.91 in the 200-yard breast stroke

Other veterans for the Longhorns are Andy Gill (1:47.27, 200-yard backstroke; 49.46, 100-yard backstroke) and Bill Stapleton (1:46.63, 200-yard butterfly; 3:51.21, 400-yard individual medley). Gill is one of a few swimmers who will be able to challenge Stanford's Murphy for the 200-yard backstroke title.

Rounding out the team will be a strong freshman class, including world-class freestyler Jeff Olsen, Doug Gjertson (backstroke), Kirt Stacker (breast stroke), Andre du Plessis (freestyle) and Hans Dersch (breast stroke).

Florida returns 11 swimmers from last year's fourth-place team, including six all-Americas. With no individual titlists returning, the Gators hope their successful recruiting year will give them a boost toward the title.

Among the freshmen on the squad are national junior-team member Troy Dalbey; Paul Robinson, and Sandy Goss, a world-ranked breast stroker and Olympic relay medalist from Canada.

Veterans for the Gators are Jason Gorrie (4:17.48, 500-yard freestyle; 14:56.15, 1,650-yard freestyle), Paul Wallace (1:46.49, 200-yard individual medley), David Fairbanks (50.13, 100-yard backstroke; 1:49.22, 200-yard backstroke), Duffy Dillon (48.86, 100-yard butterfly), Jayme Taylor (1:46.82, 200-yard butterfly) and Jerry Frentsos (3:51.11, 400-yard individual medley).

Southern Cal returns several finalists from its seventh-place team of 1986 and introduces some important freshman talent to the ranks.

Returnees include Thomas Fahrner (1:37.28, 200-yard freestyle), Steven Bentley (1:57.97, 200-yard backstroke) and Dave Cademartori (48.42, 100-yard butterfly; 1:44.69, 200-yard butterfly).

Among the new faces for the Trojans will be freestylers Dan Jorgensen and Chris Chalmers and breast stroke performer Ray Looze.

California will rely on sprint freestyler Matt Biondi and an outstanding group of distance freestylers to pave the way to a top-five finish in 1987. The Golden Bears were runners-up for the 1986 title.

Biondi holds NCAA records in the 50-, 100- and 200-yard freestyle events (19.22, 41.87 and 1:33.22, respectively) and is favored to repeat in April. He also swam on two first-place relay teams.

Last year's freshman class of Jeff Prior, Tommy Werner and Paul Kingsman should improve its times of 1986. Prior swam to a fifth-place finish in the 400-yard individual medley (3:49.74); Werner claimed fourth in the 200-yard freestyle (1:35.74) and fifth in the 100-yard freestyle (43.78), and Kingsman turned in a 1:49.86 in the 200-yard backstroke.

The top newcomer for the Golden Bears is Sean Killion, a gold medalist in the Goodwill Games.

Other top teams going into the championships include UCLA, Michigan, Arizona State and Louisiana State.

Panthers win fifth basketball crown

Kentucky Wesleyan won its fifth Division II men's basketball title, but its first since 1973, with a 92-74 win over Gannon in Springfield, Massachusetts, March 21.

The Panthers dominated tournament play in the late 1960s, winning three out of four championships from 1966 to 1969. Gannon reached the finals for the first time in nine play-off appearances.

Sam Smith led Kentucky Wesleyan with 28 points and nine rebounds. John Worth added 21 points. John Bowen topped Gannon with 17 points and eight rebounds.

A record crowd of 6,894 watched the championship game.

Gannon made up an eight-point half-time deficit to upend Eastern Montana, 61-55, in the semifinals. Mike Runski scored 17 points for the Golden Knights.

Kentucky Wesleyan, which made its 19th appearance in the NCAA tournament this year, defeated Delta State, 98-75, in the semifinals. Smith had 28 points and 13 rebounds while James Johnson scored 22 points.

North Park takes fifth Division III men's basketball title

North Park won the Division III Men's Basketball Championship, 106-100, over Clark (Massachusetts) March 21 in Grand Rapids, Michi-

The point total for both teams was only four points shy of the tournament record set in 1975. Kermit Sharp of Clark (Massachusetts) set a new fivegame tournament scoring record with 160 points.

North Park jumped out to a 55-30 lead at half time. Michael Starks, the tournament's outstanding player, scored 30 points and had nine rebounds to help North Park to its fifth basketball title. Mike Barach added 21.

North Park defeated Wittenberg, 75-70, in the semifinals despite being down 42-31 at half time. Wittenberg's Steve lannarino led all scorers with 32 points. Starks had 24.

Clark (Massachusetts) defeated Stockton State, 77-71, to advance to the finals. The Cougars trailed, 39-34, at the half. Sharp had 30 points, including 20 in the first half.

Stark, Barach, Iannarino and Sharp were joined on the all-tournament team by Donald Ellison of Stockton State.

Kenyon rules again in Division III men's swimming

Kenyon won its eighth consecutive team title at the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 19-21 in Canton, Ohio.

The victory gives coach Jim Steen an unprecedented 12 team titles (eight men's, four women's), surpassing the mark set by Ohio State's Mike Peppe, who guided the Buckeyes to 11 championships from 1943 to 1962.

Dennis Mulvihill was the star for the Lords, setting meet records in the 200-yard freestyle (1:37.43) and the 500-yard freestyle (4:25.05). Also, he was a member of all three first-place relay teams.

Paul DiFrancesco contributed to the Lords' 142-point margin of victory over runner-up Denison with titles in both the one- and three-meter diving

Both Mulvihill and DeFrancesco qualified for the Division I championships, as did Kenyon's 400-yard freestyle relay team.

Other Kenyon swimmers finishing in the top five in their events were freestylers David Greenlee and George Pond, backstroker Alan Schmidt, breast stroker Nathaniel Lierandi, butterflyer David Waltuch. and Craig Hummer (individual medley).

Denison received top-five performances from P.J. Schaner (freestyle, individual medley), Chip Thomas (freestyle, individual medley), Matt Steckley (backstroke, individual medley), Tom Anderson (breast stroke), Charlie Lownes (breast stroke) and Mike Williams (butterfly).

Versatile Bill Kazmierowicz and breast stroker Derron Fredrick led UC San Diego to third place at the championships.

St. Olaf's Robert Hauck was named swimmer of the year by the Swimming Coaches Association of America. Other awards went to DiFrancesco. diver of the year; Dave Hauck of St. Olaf, swimming coach of the year, and Fletcher Guilders of Kenyon, diving coach of the year.

Senior's four goals spark Plattsburgh State in ice hockey

Senior center Dave Piromalli scored four goals to lead host Plattsburgh State past Oswego State, 8-3, in the title game of the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship March 21.

The Cardinals defeated Oswego State, a fellow State University of New York Athletic Conference member, for the sixth time in as many meetings this season to capture their first Division III title.

Piromalli scored in all three periods of the championship match and closed out the Cardinals' onslaught by scoring his third and fourth goals only 15 seconds apart late in the final period. His performance tied a tournament record for most goals in a game set in 1984 by Curt McLeod of St. Thomas

Shortly after Oswego State's John Staerker tied the game early in the second period, 1-1, Plattsburgh State powered home four unanswered goals in a 16-minute stretch to put the Lakers away. The Cardinals ended the season with a 36-6 record, while Oswego State bowed out with a 25-12

In the semifinals, Plattsburgh State defeated defending champion Bemidji State, 7-4, in a game matching last year's finalists. The Cardinals pulled away from the Beavers with three goals in the third period after the teams played to a 4-4 tie through the first 40 minutes.

Oswego State reached the championship game with a 5-2 victory over St. Cloud State.

In the third-place game, St. Cloud State finished its first season under head coach Herb Brooks by beating the Beavers, 6-4. The Huskies closed with a 25-10-1 record, while Bemidji State ended play with a 22-11-1 record.

"The lawsuit puts forward actions that NCAA activities against SMU have caused great damage to the university and those who associate with it," McCormack, who graduated from SMU law school in 1976, told the Associated Press.

The lawsuit seeks $20 million on the civil rights claims and $15 million for allegedly violating the Sherman Antitrust Act.

It alleges three NCAA violations against SMU:

The NCAA's investigative and enforcement procedures violate the principals of due process of law, McCormack said.

Academic success by Blacks linked to 'acting white'

A major reason black students lag behind other racial groups in school achievement is that they're afraid their friends will deride them for "acting white," a study by a professor at the University of the District of Columbia concludes.

Black students intentionally limit their academic success or try to downplay their achievements in response to peer pressure, according to the study.

Anthropologist Signithia Fordham drew her conclusions from interviews with 33 students from a 99 percent black District of Columbia high school over a one-year period.

Shelvy, an honor-roll student whose grades have been declining, told Fordham she was not putting forth full effort because she didn't want to be labeled "a brainiac."

"So what most brainiacs do," Shelvy said, "they sit back and they know an answer and they won't answer it. 'Cause see, first thing everybody say, 'Well, they're trying to show off."

Sidney, a football player who earned A's and B's earlier, said he has earned mediocre scores on recent standardized tests because his friends started calling him "Mr. Advanced Placement."

Male students who get good grades try to hide their performance from their peers because they are afraid they'll be accused of being homosexual, Fordham told the Associated Press.

"This problem arose partly because white Americans traditionally refused to acknowledge that black Americans are capable of intellectual achievement and partly because black Americans began to doubt their own intellectual ability, began to define academic success as white people's prerogative and began to discourage their peers...from 'acting white,' "Fordham said.

District of Columbia School Superintendent Floretta McKenzie said the city is working to improve the selfimage of black students to counter the problem. amentally unfair and violated the rights of the university," said McCormack, who belongs to the school's Mustang Club.

• Civil and constitutional rights were violated when SMU was denied equal protection, he said, adding that the school was singled out for investigation over several years.

He said the NCAA has discriminated against SMU by not taking an equal interest in other schools who may have violated their rules.

• McCormack said the NCAA has violated the antitrust act, claiming that eliminating SMU's football program is a restraint of trade.

Other relief sought in the suit includes an injunction that would keep the Mustangs' 1987 football program intact.

The suit also asks that the court direct the NCAA to revise its investigation and enforcement process to insure that schools on probation be provided with procedural safeguards.

Legislative Assistance

1987 Column No. 13

Camp directories

As noted in 1986 Legislative Assistance Column No. 10, the NCAA Administrative Committee reviewed the application of Case No. 184 (page 353, 1987-88 NCAA Manual), which includes a general prohibition against the purchase of advertising space by a member institution in publications designed to provide information concerning the athletics participation or evaluation of prospective student-athletes. During the 1986 Convention, the membership determined that although the prohibition in Case No. 184 would extend generally to advertisements regarding member institutions' summer camps or clinics, such advertisements would be permissible if placed in a periodical that includes a camp directory in which the size and format of such advertisements placed by any member institution are the same.

Several member institutions have requested additional information indicating whether this interpretation includes a limit on the size of summer-camp advertisements that may be placed in the periodical's camp directory (assuming all such advertisements are the same size). The Administrative Committee has agreed that in order to meet the requirements of this interpretation (assuming all such advertisements are the same size), a "camp directory" must include multiple listings of summer camps on each page, and that a full-page advertisement for a member institution's summer camp may not be considered an appropriate listing in a camp directory. Accordingly, each page in a permissible "camp directory" must include at least two summer-camp advertisements, and no single advertisement may exceed more than a half-page in size in order to meet the requirement that the size and format of such advertisements placed by any member institution in a particular periodical must be the same.

Participation for improper expenses

As set forth in Case No. 10 (page 304, 1987-88 NCAA Manual), an individual who participates in competition (e.g., tennis, golf, track and field) for which the amount of expenses received is based upon the place finish achieved would jeopardize eligibility for intercollegiate athletics competition. Receipt of such expenses would be considered taking pay for participation in that sport and would be contrary to the Association's permissible-expenses legislation as set forth in Constitution 3-1-(a)-(1) and 3-1-(h)-(1). For example, his case is applicable to satellite tennis tournaments both in the U.S. and abroad, which base reimbursement of expenses on place finish achieved in the tournament.

Postseason award banquet

As plans are being made for postseason award banquets, member institutions are reminded to review Case No. 91 in the 1987-88 NCAA Manual. This case states that "postseason team award or recognition meeting" is defined as a banquet or other meeting held at the conclusion of the sports season to commemorate the accomplishments of the team and individual studentathletes, conducted by and subject to the control of the member institution, and held within 100 miles of the institution's main campus within the same state. Further, only one such event is permitted per season per team in addition to the institution's regular, annual all-sports banquet or meeting, and only the institution or representatives of its athletics interests (through the institution) are permitted to provide expenses for such an event, pursuant to Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1). Further permissible awards that a student-athlete may receive without jeopardizing eligibility for intercollegiate athletics are set out in Constitution 3-1-(i).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hurn, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Wake Forest to upgrade athletics, with emphasis on women's sports

Wake Forest University athletics officials have announced a restructuring of the school's sports program that will involve significant increases in scholarships, coaching staff and facilities support.

Each of the school's 15 varsity teams will be affected in some manner by the new program, which has been established after a lengthy and thorough study of the entire department, according to athletics director Gene E. Hooks

"The university administration has urged each department to undertake a long-range plan for its program," Hooks said in a prepared statement. "Our proposals, which are part of this total university planning process, have resulted from a great deal of study within the athletics department and have been endorsed by the athletics

Hooks said the study determined that in all sports in which Wake Forest participates, the Atlantic Coast Conference school will provide the scholarships, coaches and facilities necessary to be competitive in the ACC and in NCAA Division I.

"If we cannot provide that manner of support, it is our feeling that the sport should compete at a reduced level or be discontinued," Hooks said.

"We are very excited with the step forward and anticipate attaining new heights of success throughout our total program in the near future."

The thrust of the restructuring involves women's programs, the Associated Press reported. Eleven new scholarships have been added, with basketball and golf being upgraded to the NCAA maximum number of grants. Cross country, indoor track and outdoor track, with an emphasis on distance running events, now will have 10 full scholarships.

Women's tennis already has been operating at a full scholarship allotment. Field hockey will continue as the department's only nonscholarship sport, competing on a regional basis. Volleyball has been discontinued as a varsity sport.

"We felt that in order to be competitive in the ACC, which is the only option available to us in the sport of

NAIA clarifies academic rule

Athletes at National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics colleges will be required, starting in the fall term of 1988, to maintain a 2.000 cumulative grade-point average entering their junior year.

The clarification in the organization's bylaws was approved by delegates at the NAIA annual meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, March 17.

The athletes also would have to maintain a 2.000 average for the remainder of their college careers.

The old rule did not specify a grade-point average but said athletes must maintain normal progress to remain students in good standing at their school.

Delegates also voted for a bylaw change defining institutional credit hours as any credit that counts toward an institutionally approved degree. The regulation was designed to deny use of remedial work in satisfying the normal-progress rule of the NAIA.

"These regulations, coupled with the existing policies that require eligibility certification at the conclusion of each term, reaffirm this association's position that progression toward a degree remains the priority of our Wallace member institutions." Schwartz, the NAIA associate executive director, said.

The NAIA membership also agreed that athletes must be eligible for intercollegiate competition before taking part in scrimmages, practices and out-of-season competition.

volleyball, we would need a major commitment in scholarships, coaching staff and additional facilities," women's athletics director Dorothy Casey

"Upgrading the schedule (to at least 60 percent Division I opponents) would also be necessary so as not to jeopardize the conference's standing with the NCAA."

The primary men's sport to be affected in the new program was full allotment of 13 scholarships, while the men's distance running sports will have 10 scholarships available.

As for physical improvements, a baseball stadium is under construction, while future development is planned for both the outdoor track and a permanent soccer stadium. Construction is about to begin on a new outdoor tennis stadium and improvements to locker-room facilities both on campus and at Groves Stadium are planned.

Funding for many of the projects has been obtained or pledged, and some fund-raising drives will be undertaken to enhance the present financial base for facility improvement, which would be in addition to the $5 million campaign currently under way for the new Lawrence Joel Memorial Coliseum.
