Schultz to succeed Byers as executive director

In announcing the appointment of Richard D. Schultz as NCAA executive director-elect, Association secretary-treasurer Thomas J. Frericks recalled a statement made by a selection-committee member during the early stages of the selection process.

"One of the group said that a properly developed (screening and selection) process would cause the best candidate to rise above the others," he told a group of media in Kansas City June 8. "Last Thursday (June 4) in Dallas, it was apparent to us that one candidate did stand out."

NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey, who chaired the committee that narrowed a list of 80 applicants and nominees to a group of four finalists, noted Schultz's strong management background. "Dick is widely sought as a management consultant, not only by other athletics departments but also by many major businesses in this country," Bailey explained. "That type of (management consulting) work is not usually associated with departments of athletics or athletics directors."

Executive Director Walter Byers, who will complete 36 years in his position October 1, said he thought the committees that had to approve the decision (the NCAA President's Commission, Council and Executive Committee) "showed a remarkable perception of what this job needs. More than any other single thing, I believe Dick possesses the unifying ability to lead the NCAA to new heights."

Schultz has served on the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee since 1983 and has chaired the group since 1985. He spoke at Association-sponsored Professional Development Seminars in 1985 and 1987, and he chaired the committee that negotiated a new, three-year television contract for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship and several other NCAA postseason events.

Background

Richard D. Schultz is a native of Kellogg, Iowa. He attended Central College (Iowa), where he earned all-conference awards as a Division III standout in football, basketball and baseball. The 1950 graduate (with a bachelor's degree in physical education and history) delivered his alma mater's commencement address in May and received an honorary doctorate.

For the decade following graduation from Central, Schultz taught high school physical education and biology and coached football, basketball and baseball in Humboldt, Iowa. From 1955 to 1960, he also served as the school's athletics director.

During that time, Schultz also owned and operated a highly successful home-building business in Humboldt (1956 to 1960). He also played and managed professional baseball from 1953 until 1956.

He moved to the University of Iowa in 1960 as freshman basketball and assistant baseball coach. He received a master's degree from the school in 1964 and was named head baseball coach and full-time assistant basketball coach.

Schultz became Iowa's head men's basketball coach in 1970 and served until 1974, when he was named special assistant to the university's president. In that position, he

Peterson named to Commission

Chase N. Peterson, president of the University of Utah, will become the representative of the Western Athletic Conference on the NCAA Presidents Commission, effective July 1.

He replaces Haskell M. Monroe Jr., president of the University of Texas, El Paso, who has been named chancellor of the University of Missouri, Columbia.

Peterson, the 11th president of the University of Utah, was appointed to that position in June 1983. He had served as vice-president for health services since 1978.

He received a bachelor's degree from Harvard College and later was graduated from the Harvard Medical School.

After an internship in medicine at the Yale-New Haven Medical Center, he served with the U.S. Army Medical Corps in Germany from 1958 to 1960.

He served as vice-president of alumni affairs and development at Harvard University from 1972 to 1978 and was dean of admissions and financial aid and a member of the faculty of arts and sciences at Harvard College from 1967 to 1972.

Peterson was engaged in medical practice in Salt Lake City from 1962 to 1967 and taught at the University of Utah Medical School.

Peterson served as the coordinator and spokesman for the Utah Artificial Heart Project from 1981 to 1983.

NCAA considers in-season testing of student-athletes for steroids use

In-season testing designed to eliminate the use of long-term anabolic steroids may be one of the next steps in the NCAA's drug-testing program.

The Executive Committee will study the issue and seek the views of the membership and the Collegiate Commissioners Association before acting upon recommendations of the Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee. The drug-testing committee has recommended the introduction of legislation to permit NCAA testing for steroids during member institutions' playing seasons and spring football practice.

Oil-based steroids such as methyltestosterone can be stored in the body's fat tissue for long periods of time, creating hazards to the health and welfare of the student-athlete, according to officials.

The Executive Committee, meeting last month in Kansas City, suggested that it may be more appropriate for such legislation to be initiated by the NCAA membership, perhaps as a condition of division membership. The committee will continue to consider the matter.

The application of team sanctions, which will begin this fall (The NCAA News, January 14, 1987), is another drug-testing subject under examination. Full sanctions will apply to a member institution that knowingly permits the participation of a student-athlete with positive results from NCAA drug testing conducted prior to championship competition. If a student-athlete is declared ineligible as a result of testing during the championship, the team will be allowed to advance.

The Executive Committee will give further consideration before acting on the drug-testing committee's recommendation that the institution's share of receipts be forfeited, the student-athlete's award returned to the Association and team results adjusted in the case of positive testing during or following competition.

Registration hours extended

The registration desk for the special Convention in Dallas will be open Sunday, June 28, from 3 to 6 p.m.

Those additional hours are designed to assist those delegates who have indicated arrival on Saturday or Sunday. They are in addition to the registration periods announced in the Official Notice of the Convention: from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday, June 29, and from 7 a.m. until the Convention ends Tuesday, June 30.

As reported in the Official Notice, the Convention registration fee is $35, which includes the delegates reception June 29 and a luncheon for all delegates June 30.

A number of modest graphics changes—including larger body type—are being introduced in this issue of The NCAA News. The new look is intended to enhance readability while retaining the basic appearance introduced five years ago this month.

After 18 years of publishing from six to 18 issues per year in an almost magazine-type format, the News began publishing 46 times each year in a definite newspaper style June 16, 1982.

Readers also will notice some changes in content in the coming year, including some new (and some rejuvenated) features and much greater coverage of the news and personalities in the various NCAA-recognized sports.

Byers reviews issues in athletics

"There is nothing fundamentally wrong with college athletics."

"Intercollegiate athletics is a mecca for the alibi."

"It is not possible to have much institutional control where there is a relationship between the 'power coach' and a prominent booster or trustee."

"Is the student-athlete to be held to a higher standard of conduct and academic performance than the student body generally?"

Those were among the remarks by NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers in a joint meeting of the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee and the new Committee on Review and Planning June 5.

The meeting was the last for the Long Range Planning Committee after 24 years of existence. It has been replaced by the new, smaller Committee on Review and Planning, which has a broader charge and includes six former elected NCAA officers.

Byers had been asked by the outgoing committee for his views on current conditions in college athletics and perspectives for the future. Among the highlights of his remarks:

"The membership so often wants the NCAA to do so many things that it is unfairly criticized for not accomplishing everything." He urged the new committee not to "lose focus" by attempting to deal with too many topics.

Citing "the quality of the student-athletes, the quality of the coaches and the quality of the facilities," Byers emphasized that college athletics is fundamentally sound. "Athletics has high visibility, and we shouldn't panic at superficial happenings." He cited examples of widely reported and criticized conduct by student-athletes when the same conduct probably is more common among students in general.

He decried the use of the alibi in intercollegiate athletics: institutions that claim everyone else cheats; coaches who claim that they lost because of officiating. "There's always someone else to blame," Byers said. He said it is a grossly overused technique in college athletics.

Urges compliance

"The near-term and long-term concentration should be on compliance" with conference and NCAA rules, Byers emphasized. "We should

It's time to give college athletes a piece of the pie

By Bob Smizik
Pittsburgh Press

Cheating in college athletics once was the domain of coaches and boosters. They had the market on collegiate athletics wrongdoing, which up until about 20 years ago wasn't all that much.

But the game is changing. Cheating is more widespread. Today, it is not just coaches, boosters and an occasional administrator who cheat. Today, we have players and agents ripping off the system.

No one should be surprised. The game hasn't changed. But the rules by which it is played have.

College athletics has become a multi-million-dollar business. All kinds of people are getting wealthy of this business, the most notable among them, coaches and agents.

Also pulling down large sums of money are the universities that field major teams in football and basketball.

Everyone is making out except the most important part of the business—the players. It's time for the players to make some money off collegiate sports, too.

Twenty years ago, coaches were making five-figure salaries—about the same as professors—living in their own home in the suburbs, driving their own cars.

At the same time, universities had athletics budgets that were in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. If the football team received an occasional check from a television appearance, it was nice, but not enough to affect the overall doings of the athletics department.

Coaches' salaries today start at six figures. Coaches frequently live rent-free in splendid houses owned by the university. Their cars are supplied by boosters, their gasoline by the university. They are forever leaving town to do clinics or make speeches for which they often receive four-figure payments.

University athletics budgets are in the millions of dollars. Television appearances are so lucrative the colleges have allowed the networks and syndicators to dictate the dates and times of games.

The money involved in collegiate athletics is staggering. Schools such as Michigan, Ohio State and Penn State take in more than $1 million for every home football game.

Members of the Big Eight Conference might gross $1 million as their share of the league's television contract and postseason tournament.

What is a player to think about all of this? Can anyone be surprised that players cheat, that they accept illegal money from agents and alumni?

Why shouldn't they get their share?

A four-year grant-in-aid is a significant reward; but while the rewards going to coaches and universities have grown enormously over the years, the players' reward has not.

There is nothing wrong with coaches and universities making more money off athletics. Making money is the American way.

So why shouldn't the players want—and get—more? Doesn't the

"A player can grow up playing high school football in Texas, go to college to play in Ohio, and then play pro football in Florida and use an agent from California. After years of little respect, college baseball has arrived

By Joan Ryan
Scripps-Howard News Service

They wore clean uniforms and white cleats. Their gloves always smelled new. Every one of them carried a comb in his hip pocket and chattered about joining The Firm.

Later on, after exchanging hearty handshakes with the good chaps in the other dugouts, they gathered at the club for a round of Rob Roys and offered toasts to tweed and the Republican Party.

They were college boys.

Real baseball men sneered at college boys. Real baseball men were of the cornfields of Iowa and the playgrounds of New York, plucked by wily scouts at the first blush of adulthood and packed off to places like Huntsville and Shreveport for a special kind of education. Their gloves smelled of neat's-foot oil, their uniforms of sweat. Dirt streaked their foreheads and cheeks.

Though grungy, tired and broke, real baseball men always seemed to be grinning those great grins, toothy proclamations of the inner joy and smugness they felt in knowing they were among the chosen few to be playing pro ball. Real ball.

When Americans deemed baseball their national pastime, it turned out they meant only Little League, American Legion and Major League. College baseball got about as much respect as a call girl in Salt Lake City. The networks scratched and slapped each other for the rights to Final Four basketball and football bowl games. But college baseball? Please.

Shunned and ignored, college baseball slinked off to ESPN's doorstep to peddle its World Series.

College boys. The very sound of it made folks spit. Fast forward to 1987.

Mark McGwire of Southern California leads the Oakland Athletics and the American League with 16 home runs. Pete Incaviglia of Oklahoma State is the star left fielder for the Texas Rangers. Joe Magrane of Arizona just won his fourth consecutive game for St. Louis. The Cleveland Indians' Greg Swindell of the University of Texas, Austin, is second in the American League and fourth in the majors with 66 strikeouts.

Jeff Ballard of Stanford and Baltimore won his second game since being called up from the minors. Will Clark of Mississippi State, Robby Thompson of Florida, Matt Williams of Nevada-Las Vegas and Mike Aldrete of Stanford have had an impact on the San Francisco Giants within three years of their signing. The list goes on.

There's a new breed of college boys.

The NCAA West I regional at Stanford drew thousands of spectators and more than a few pro scouts. The Giants had two watching Stanford against Oral Roberts. It's not that the Giants hadn't scouted the college before—they've always canvassed the campuses.

The difference is that today's scouts aren't looking for diamonds in the rough but polished players who can have an immediate impact on their teams.

"In the last few years, we've seen more and more players

CFA takes path of cooperation, not confrontation, with NCAA

By Keith Dunnavant
Dallas Time Herald

Before the College Football Association was formed in 1977, Tom Osborne didn't know whether to feel like an idiot or an outlaw.

"It was almost like the NCAA thought we coaches were either not smart enough or couldn't be trusted to have input into the game we knew better than anybody else," the longtime University of Nebraska, Lincoln, coach said during a break at the 11th annual CFA convention. "Coaches had no voice. We were in a situation where we had to obey rules made by people who knew less about the game."

But for better or worse, the CFA in the last decade has given college coaches a forum for input into their game, although not the autonomy they seek.

It has moved from rebel-like confrontation with the NCAA to cooperation. "We should not forget the progress we have made, the legislation we have recommended that has been passed by the NCAA, like

LaVell Edwards Vincent J. Dooley

Proposition 48," Executive Director Charles M. Neinas said.

Some CFA leaders still talk about their dreams of creating a super division, separating the big-time powers from the marginal members of what they see as an unwieldy Division I-A. But most admit that plan never will be viable without the cooperation of the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences, which have dogmatically refused to join the fold.

Although the 63-member CFA includes the members of all other major conferences and major independents such as the University of Notre Dame and Pennsylvania State University, the absence of those two leagues has sniped at the group's credibility since its inception.

"It's really hurt not having them," Brigham Young University coach LaVell Edwards said. "It's hard to present a united front for major-college football when two big conferences won't stand with us."

Penn State's Joe Paterno is less diplomatic.

"They've really been a pain in my backside," Paterno said. "From the beginning, they pointed to us like we were a bunch of troublemakers, and I resent that."

The rebel image was not without a cause. In 1981, the CFA effectively declared war against the NCAA by signing a four-year, $180 million television package with NBC. But under the threat of sanctions from the NCAA, the CFA membership turned cold on the plan, approving it with only lukewarm response. Five months after the contract was signed, the CFA informed NBC that it would have to cancel because of low participation.

Since then, the alliance has strayed from direct confrontation with the college governing body. But when the U.S. Supreme Court declared the NCAA's TV contract an invalid monopoly in 1984, the CFA assembled a package of its own, and it has remained in the TV business. It recently signed a four-year pact with CBS worth an estimated $133.5 million.

"I think I speak for the majority when I say we never wanted to take on the NCAA," Baylor University coach Grant Teaff said. "We never envisioned anything but establishing a forum for coaches, to give us some input into the rules-making process."

"A lot of people had the idea that we were a renegade outfit that wanted to pull away from the NCAA. But that was never the case."

Instead of revolution, the CFA has advocated legislation. At its first meeting in '77, the group recommended what would become Proposition 48, the plank that went into effect last year, requiring specific high school academic achievements for college athletics eligibility. It also supported such measures as the satisfactory-progress rule and the "death penalty" for repeat rules violators.

But the coaches, pointing to the agenda of next month's NCAA Convention, still complain their input is too small.

Measures aimed at limiting such often-modified venues as coaching staffs and grants-in-aid are proof enough to some coaches that their organization has a long way to go.

"They want to tamper with spring practice, and that totally boggles my mind," Teaff said.

As long as the CFA continues to have success in implementing its proposals, however, coaches say they are happy with the marriage of convenience.

"The NCAA has slowly changed because of some of the things we have done," University of Georgia coach Vincent J. Dooley said. "The CFA has helped the schools live within the rules of the NCAA. We headed off direct confrontation; and hopefully, we can continue to work within the framework of the NCAA and avoid conflict."

of them will have to be minorities, for the simple reason that minorities are growing at a faster rate than whites and will constitute a growing percentage of the youth population.

"But there is another trend that deserves attention. The rate of college attendance by minority youngsters—especially Blacks—has been falling in recent years. What that means is that just when the opportunities for minorities will be greatest—because of demographic necessity—their fitness for those opportunities will be diminished.

"What is happening? One answer—according to a new report by the United Negro College Fund and the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities—is that the decline in Federal aid for college education is hitting Blacks especially hard.

"That being the case, we had better stop thinking of college access for the nation's minorities as a form of charity we can no longer afford and start thinking of it as an investment we can't afford not to make."

"I was disturbed by the article that appeared in your March 22 issue, 'Devon Prep Has Drop in Mind.' I think the article gives the reader a very misleading impression about what being a student-athlete at the collegiate level entails.

"The article suggests throughout that academic success and athletics success at the collegiate level are incompatible. This simply is not true.

"It certainly is not easy to become a successful student-athlete in college. The level of competition is much greater than in high school in both areas. It takes determination and desire to succeed at both. It also takes time.

"However, students at thousands of colleges throughout the United States have this desire and have succeeded at both. These student-athletes have learned to set their priorities and avoid wasting time.

"I say 'avoid,' because the next student who doesn't ever waste time while attending college will be the first. The point is not to make a habit of it."

Proposal No. 43 addresses many concerns in collegiate athletics

By John H. Keiser
President, Boise State University

I am asking my colleagues to seriously consider Proposal No. 43 to be presented at the NCAA special Convention in Dallas. Proposal No. 43 addresses many of the concerns for which the special Convention was called, including:

1. Cutting costs and reducing recruiting;
2. Addressing the freshman-eligibility question;
3. Increasing graduation rates;
4. Providing a more substantial and realistic scholarship;
5. Simplifying the rules;
6. Eliminating the need for red-shirting and the hardship rule, and
7. Making the participation rule—Bylaw 5-1-(d)—consistent with the 12-hour-per-term rule—

John H. Keiser

Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6).

This proposal would simply allow student-athletes to compete for five years instead of four out of five as is currently allowed.

By allowing a student-athlete to compete for all five years, seven benefits result:

First: Institutions can reduce costs two ways: 1. Recruiting will be cut by 20 percent, resulting in significant savings. This is also consistent with the new proposals to reduce recruiting periods. By awarding a scholarship to a student for five years instead of four, 20 percent fewer scholarships will be available to award entering students each year. By saving money in recruiting, schools might be able to continue sponsoring other sports that are now being dropped.

The fifth year of education can be paid for at no additional cost. This would eliminate the need to use NCAA basketball tournament revenues to fund a fifth-year endowment program that will only benefit some. Many institutions currently are paying thousands of dollars

Olympic tennis should stay amateur

To the Editor:

In a recent newspaper article on tennis in the Olympics (The New Orleans Times-Picayune, May 28), Philippe Chatrier, president of the International Tennis Federation, expressed his dissatisfaction about the fact that professional tennis players are unwilling to play in the Olympics.

Mr. Chatrier should be recognized for his work of placing tennis competition back in the Olympics. However, I differ with his thinking that the Olympics should be open to professional tennis players and that this is the only way that countries will financially support tennis.

In the news release, John McEnroe expressed his opinion that the Olympics should be open to amateur tennis players only. In my opinion, the greatest amateur tennis competition is found in the U.S. at the collegiate level. Just about every nation is represented in NCAA tennis. The number of foreign players who want to come to the U.S. has mushroomed.

Six years ago, I did not have a single letter from a foreign player; last year, I had 15 foreign players who were searching for tennis scholarships. Some nations, like Sweden, do a much better job than others.

I do not think that having professional tennis players representing their nations is the way in which tennis should be funded. Rather, funding at the grass-roots level with emphasis on developing talent is the way it should be done. The Olympics can be a natural offshoot for those collegiate players over and above the scholarship limitations allowed in order to fund the fifth year of school for those students who have completed their eligibility. (While 95 scholarships are allowed in I-A football, some schools could actually be paying for 105 to 115 scholarships when fifth-year seniors with no eligibility remaining are counted in.)

Other institutions currently may only fund scholarships for students with eligibility remaining, as they cannot afford to pay for the fifth year when a student's eligibility has expired.

If students were allowed to compete for five years, those schools who are paying for the fifth year would save money (in I-A football, they would only be paying for 95 scholarships, no more); and the schools that have been unable to afford the fifth year would not be able to provide it at no additional expense.

Second: Proposal No. 43 would address the freshman-eligibility question with a feasible alternative. Much talk has been given to freshmen being ineligible in order to reduce the pressures and time demands placed on them. This is really a money issue. Coaches explain that if freshmen were ineligible, they would need more scholarships to survive—we can't make 25 percent of their team ineligible without adding some scholarships.

Because it would cost more money to add scholarships, most schools vote against freshman ineligibility, even though athletics director, coaches and presidents may believe in it philosophically. Competing for five years would be a way of solving this dilemma. By having another year of upperclassmen and upperclasswomen to draw from, coaches would have more players to choose from and would not have to rely on freshmen.

Few, if any, freshmen would play regularly, thus allowing them more time for studies and shielding them from the pressures of varsity competition—all of this without adding a single scholarship. Proposal No. 43 is a way to achieve what many presidents want (less freshman involvement) and what the coaches need (enough students to draw from) at no additional cost.

Third: Proposal No. 43 will increase the graduation rate of student-athletes and address one of the NCAA's biggest concerns. An NCAA study conducted by the American College Testing Program between 1975 and 1980 reported that after five years, only 42 percent of male students had graduated. Proposal No. 43 would finally acknowledge a well-known fact: The vast majority of student-athletes do not graduate in four years, and they take at least five years to graduate.

Fourth: Proposal No. 43 will provide a more substantial and realistic scholarship to students at no additional cost. Many students are left empty-handed after their eligibility is used up in four years and cannot afford to complete school.

Fifth: The proposal will simplify the rules. Students will have five years to play five instead of five years to play four.

Sixth: Proposal No. 43 will eliminate the need for the hardship rule and for redshirting. This will simplify the rules and protect coaches and players by not pressuring coaches to use injured players in order to save another player's red-shirt year.

Seventh: The proposal will make the participation rule—Bylaw 5-1-(d)—consistent with the 12-hour-per-term rule—Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6). If a student takes 12 hours per term (the current NCAA requirement), it will take five years to graduate, so why don't we allow students to compete for five years?

Please take the time to consider the benefits Proposal No. 43 offers. It addresses many of the concerns that take us to Dallas for the special Convention.

Lacrosse rules clarified

Rules changes concerning illegal crosses, efforts to improve officiating, and recommendations of future sites for the Division I semifinals and finals highlighted the Men's Lacrosse Committee meeting May 31-June 4 in Monterey, California.

"The areas of primary committee action were the clarification of the crosse-check, holding and pushing rules, along with a clarification of the definition and penalty for use of an illegal crosse," said Jim Grube, head men's lacrosse coach at Middlebury College and secretary-rules editor of the committee.

The committee approved allowing an official to check a crosse that he believes is illegal. A crosse that is found to be illegal during a check initiated by an official will be removed for the duration of the game, unless the illegality is a deep pocket. A deep pocket may be corrected, and the crosse may be returned to the game.

When a coach calls for a stick check and the crosse is found to have a deep pocket, a one-minute nonreleasable penalty will be assessed. The crosse may be returned to the game if the pocket is corrected. For any other illegality, a three-minute nonreleasable penalty will be assessed and the crosse will be removed for the duration of the game.

In a related action, the mechanics of a stick check requested by a coach were clarified. The check will be made in a dead-ball situation, but will be no time-out situation. The crosse that is checked must be identifiable as the crosse that was on the field. It will be checked to ensure that it meets all the specifications of a legal crosse, rather than being checked for a specific shortcoming.

Other rules changes involved clarifying the definitions of holding, pushing and crosse-checking. Holding with the crosse in a crosse-check position was removed from the definition of a crosse check and made part of the definition of holding. The committee also reduced the infraction from a personal foul to a technical foul.

In other actions, substitution during a dead-ball situation due to an equipment problem was limited to the player whose equipment failed. Also, the width of the playing field was changed from a range of 53 1/3 to 60 yards to simply 60 yards.

In its discussion of officiating, the committee decided to request a two-year grant to produce videotapes highlighting officiating techniques and points of emphasis. Funds also will be used to allow the secretary-rules editor to attend clinics. The goal of these projects is to improve officiating and create consistency in the administration of the rules.

The University of Maryland, College Park, will be recommended as the site for the 1989 Division I semifinals and final. Rutgers University, New Brunswick, will be recommended as the site for 1990.

The recommendation for game times for the 1988 semifinals at Syracuse University is 1 p.m. Saturday for the first game. The second game will begin 45 minutes after the field has been cleared.

For both Divisions I and III, the committee will recommend that game times be set by the committee with input from the participating institutions. For Division III, the committee will recommend that the top four teams be seeded and paired against the remaining four teams by geographic location. The committee also will recommend that Division III teams be ranked by the committee during the selection process and that these rankings be used as a tie-breaker in site-selection decisions.

American way apply to them?

The time has come for players to get financial rewards, beyond their scholarships, for their service to their universities. The time has come for the NCAA to rewrite its hopelessly outdated rules.

Sure, they can keep the rules as they are and attempt to maintain the last bastion of amateurism in major sports. But that will only cause more cheating.

Human nature won't change. The players see what is going on around them. They want—and deserve—their share.

The question is: Where should that money come from?

There is slim likelihood the colleges will ever part with a cent of their profits.

The beauty of this situation is they don't have to. They could pretty much keep their hands off what some might think is the dirty business of supplying college athletes with money and at the same time gain control of the disbursement of that money.

Legislation is needed by the NCAA that would legally allow agents to make loans to college athletes.

What could be more simple? All the risks fall to the agents, who will gladly accept them for a chance to get in with the athletes.

The NCAA would have to set up an administrative arm to monitor the system, but it would be well worth the effect and price. It would allow the NCAA to register agents and perhaps throw out some of the bums.

Of course, the best players would be the most sought-after. But isn't that the way the world works? A third-string tackle won't get any attention. A first-string wide receiver will get plenty, and a starting quarterback even more.

With money in hand—the amount of which would be dictated by a written contract that also would spell out repayment terms—the players would have no need to accept illegal money. By accepting a loan from an agent, a player would be bound to that agent at least through the life of his first professional contract.

This plan would help eliminate cheating, give the players a share of the pie and regulate agents. It may have its flaws, but it is far better than the current system.

After years

going directly from college to the big leagues, or after a short stay in the minors," said A's general manager Sandy Alderson. "It's causing a lot of clubs to look more closely at college players."

In last year's draft, 11 of the 26 first-round picks were college players. Three already have played in the majors. None of the high school draftees has played. In 1985, 17 college players were drafted in the first round, and 12 have played in the majors. None of the high-school draftees has played yet. In 1984, 18 college players were drafted in the first round, and seven have played in the majors. Only one from high school has played.

Total the figures from the past three years and you've got 22 college first-rounders who have seen major-league action versus one high school first-rounder.

The reason: better college programs, better coaches, more scholarship opportunities, better facilities. All of which translates to a better class of player.

It used to be that a handful of schools, with Southern Cal leading the way, dominated the college baseball market by offering up to 40 scholarships. Other schools couldn't compete. Baseball players who did go to college often went on football scholarships, as Reggie Jackson did.

"Fifteen or 20 years ago, there were maybe eight or nine good programs," said Stanford coach Mark Marquess. "Now there are a hundred."

With the programs so much improved, good young ballplayers have a choice. Ballard was drafted out of high school but chose to attend Stanford for two reasons. The Pac-10 is at least as competitive as Class A ball and perhaps as good as AA. And if he didn't cut it in the majors, he'd have a college degree to fall back on. He was drafted in 1985, spent last year working his way to Class AAA and was called up last month. He's now in the starting rotation.

"If you play well in the Pac-10, that's a pretty good test," Ballard said. "I also think you get more individual attention in college. You get more quality work."

Plus, the money isn't bad. A free ride at Stanford is worth about $72,000.

Baseball theorist Bill James, examining in a magazine article last year the value of college players, suggested that the Oakland clubs of the 1970s were so successful because Charlie Finley was the first to draft college players en masse—Sal Bando, Jackson and Rick Monday, to name three.

Need more evidence that college baseball has arrived? How's this? CBS Sports has purchased the rights to the College World Series.

who are competing, or those who wish to compete, at the collegiate level, to represent their country.

Mr. Chatrier stated, "The Olympics are no longer amateur." However, when I look back at great moments in the Olympics, one that stands out in my mind is the U.S. hockey team's victory. I am not a hockey fan, but that truly was a thrilling moment.

Do we have NBA and professional baseball players playing in the Olympics? Mr. Chatrier's view is rather shortsighted in his thinking that only professional talent is worthy of Olympic competition. Should we add the Olympics to the Australian Open, the French Open, the U.S. Open, Wimbledon and the Davis Cup?

I certainly agree with McEnroe, who said that professional tennis players have enough competition, especially when one considers the Slims and Grand Prix/Volvo tournaments as well as those previously mentioned.

Let's keep the Olympics for the nonprofessionals, even though Mr. Chatrier said that McEnroe is fooling himself if he thinks that the Olympics are for amateur competition.

If Mr. Chatrier's premise is correct, I say we need to get back to the basics. The Olympics should be for the nonprofessional or, if you will, Mr. Chatrier, for amateurs!

We do not need another Davis Cup.

Recruiting contacts—representatives

The provisions of 1987 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 47 [reference: the provisions of Bylaw 1-2-(b) that become applicable to Division I member institutions August 1, 1987] prohibit any on- or off-campus recruiting contacts with prospective student-athletes, including correspondence and telephone calls, by representatives of a Division I member institution's athletics interest. The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee has agreed that this regulation is not intended to relate to unavoidable incidental contacts with prospects by representatives of a member institution's athletics interests, it being understood that such a contact is not prearranged by the representative or an athletics department staff member, is not made for the purpose of recruitment of the prospective student-athlete and involves only normal civility. Following are examples of the application of this regulation:

a. Contacts between a prospect and an athletics representative regarding permissible preenrollment activities (e.g., a discussion of summer employment arrangements that occurs subsequent to the prospective student-athlete's signing of the National Letter of Intent) would be permissible.

b. All institutional coaching staff members are permitted to recruit off campus in their sports, it being understood that they are involved in sports other than football and basketball. Only the permissible number of full-time football and basketball coaches may contact prospects off campus in the sports of football and basketball, respectively. Faculty members may contact prospective student-athletes for recruiting purposes in all sports, but only on campus.

c. Recruiting contacts on or off campus between a member of the institution's board of governors (or regents) and a prospective student-athlete would not be permissible.

d. Off-campus, in-person recruiting contacts between enrolled student-athletes (or other enrolled students) and a prospective student-athlete are permissible if such contacts are incidental and do not occur at the direction of a coaching staff member. NCAA Case No. 80 remains in effect and would permit recruiting telephone calls and correspondence involving enrolled student-athletes and prospects.

e. Contacts between an athletics representative and a prospective student-athlete while playing "pick-up" basketball would be permissible if the contacts are incidental, rather than for recruiting purposes.

f. An institution may show a prospect a videotape of an athletics representative making a recruiting presentation, provided the presentation is generic in nature and is not prepared for any particular prospective student-athlete.

g. An athletics representative may speak to a prospective student-athlete via the telephone only if the prospect initiates the telephone conversation and provided the call is not for a recruiting purpose. Under such circumstances, the representative must refer questions about the institution's athletics program to the athletics department staff.

h. Casual contacts between a prospective student-athlete and an athletics representative at a basketball or football game would be permissible only if the contacts are incidental (i.e., not prearranged, not for recruiting purposes and involving only normal civility).

i. A prospective student-athlete may visit a locker room after a game when athletics representatives are present in the room; however, when an institution permits athletics representatives in the locker room area, it does so at its own risk, and any contact with a prospect other than incidental contact would be a violation.

j. An athletics representative who is a doctor or a dentist may treat a prospective student-athlete through the normal working relationship with a patient as long as no recruiting contacts are involved.

k. An athletics representative may view a prospective student-athlete's athletics contest on his or her own initiative, subject to the understanding that the athletics representative may not contact the prospective student-athlete on such occasions.

l. An athletics representative may not contact a prospective student-athlete's coach, principal or counselor in an attempt to evaluate the prospect.

m. An athletics representative may not visit the prospect's educational institution to pick up film or transcripts pertaining to the evaluation of the prospect's academic eligibility or athletic ability.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q An item in the June 3, 1987, issue of The NCAA News announced publication of a common set of playing rules for men's and women's basketball. Why were the rules combined into one book? Will there be any differences in men's and women's rules next season? If so, how are those differences listed in the combined rules book?

A At the direction of the NCAA Executive Committee, the two rules committees have been working toward a combined rules book since the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee was established in 1985. At the recommendation of an ad hoc group, which included the chairs and secretary-rules editors of both committees, the Executive Committee directed in its August 1986 meeting that the two books be combined for the 1987-88 season. There are a number of differences between the rules for men and women, and those differences are explained in the body of the rules. For example, specifications for the size of the basketball differ between the men's and women's games. Those size differences are noted in the rule dealing specifically with the ball.

Executive Director-Elect Richard D. Schultz and Executive Director Walter Byers

Schultz

concentrated on athletics and external programs.

Schultz became director of athletics at Cornell University in 1976 and served the Ivy League school until 1981, when he was named athletics director at Virginia. He will resign that position, effective September 1, to join the NCAA staff.

He chaired the Atlantic Coast Conference television committee in 1983 and the league's basketball committee from 1982 to 1984. He also has served on the board of directors of United Virginia Bank.

Comments

"Jack Davis, John Ryan and Harvey Schiller (the other finalists for the position) are talented, outstanding individuals," said Schultz, "and Walter Byers truly is a legend in his own time. Many of the things he has done have been accomplished by very few people. For those reasons, I am very honored and humbled to accept this position.

"The decision (to accept the offer) did not come easily," he explained to a group of writers and photographers assembled at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City. "This is a position I did not pursue. When I was contacted by the search committee, I took a week to 10 days before agreeing to talk to them about the position.

"The major question about the job in my mind was, 'Would I really be able to make or have a positive impact on intercollegiate athletics on a national level.' Obviously, I believe that I will or I wouldn't be here. I guess time will tell.

"I also must point out that I am the executive director-elect," Schultz continued. "I have a lot of learning to do, and I intend to be a good listener and student."

"I have known each of the four finalists for some time," said Byers, "and I believe that each is eminently qualified for the position. The NCAA has a very complex structure...it is not a simple, straight-line business structure. I believe Dick has the ability to bring the various groups closer together than they are today."

Answers

Following are comments made in answer to questions posed by the media attending the press conference:

Schultz: "I have a lot to learn (about the NCAA). There won't be any question who's in charge (Byers). I don't think anyone knows what the date (of official transition of duties) will be.

"What I intend to do this fall is to visit as many conference and education association meetings as I can. I want to spend time with them and be a good listener.

"I come in (to the job) with no biases, having never been a member of the Council or Executive Committee. I view that as an advantage. You only get one opportunity to do that (approach a job with a fresh, unbiased outlook)...when you're new."

Byers: "It is largely a journalistic myth that I've had power (as executive director).

"The growth and dynamic nature of the NCAA has turned this job into something requiring more management skills. My job has become more like that of a management executive.

"Dick has had a record of success as a coach and athletics director. I do believe he has the unique ability to rally support around goals the Association has and will have. He has that talent better than I do."

Schultz: "I think the condition (of the NCAA) is excellent. Sometimes perceptions become larger and more important than issues. I believe one of my major goals is to bring reality and perception together.

"Some people believe the NCAA is some bureaucratic organization in Kansas City that makes all these decisions. The NCAA is us (member institutions). Institutions have to play a larger role in solving the problems facing college athletics today.

"Walter Byers has instituted a management style in the national office that is very close to my heart. I delegate a lot of authority and use department heads. I want them to be very innovative in their own areas...to put some of themselves into the job."

Other comments

Schultz also commented on the following subjects during the 55-minute session:

His background—"I have a diverse background...as a player in Division III to administration and coaching at Division I and in the Ivy League. And my two years as assistant to the president at Iowa gave me a good understanding of how educators view athletics."

Academics vs. athletics—"I stand here as executive director-elect of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. It's important to note that the C comes before the A in our name. Certainly, athletics is important on a national level. However, I believe the college side and academic integrity have to be first. Academic achievement and athletics integrity go hand in hand. I think the stage is set for the academic improvement of student-athletes."

Division I-A football championship—"In the back of my mind, I feel it will happen one day in the future. I don't think anyone knows when that will be."

Freshman eligibility—"I can't speak intelligently on that until the study currently being undertaken is completed. One consideration I would like to see investigated in that research is what kind of pressure is placed on (freshman student-athletes)."

Contract

Schultz agreed to a five-year contract with the Association, and he will replace Byers as executive director no later than August 31, 1988. Following the transition, Byers will serve as executive director emeritus (a half-time position) until August 31, 1990.

Omaha signs CWS contract

The NCAA has signed a contract to keep the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska.

The Association's new one-year contract with the local sponsor, College World Series Inc., features automatic-renewal clauses that would keep the Division I Baseball Championship at Rosenblatt Municipal Stadium through 1990.

The title series has been held in Omaha since 1950, after three years at other sites.

A record total of 130,659 fans attended 10 sessions of the 1987 series. The championship now has drawn over 120,000 spectators for four straight seasons.

The city has committed to some $3.4 million in improvements to Rosenblatt Stadium by 1989. The new construction will include 2,000 seats along the first-base line, a new stadium club and additional parking facilities.

"I'm really pleased to keep the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska," said Mayor Bernie Simon.

The 1988 tournament will be the first under a new format pitting the winners of two four-team divisions in a single championship game. CBS will televise that title contest.

The tournament has been televised by ESPN since 1980.

Stanford stirs up first Division I baseball crown

Stanford used a solid blend of hitting, pitching and defense—the latter including a championship-record-tying 12 double plays—to notch consecutive victories over national powers Louisiana State, Texas and Oklahoma State and win its first Division I Baseball Championship June 7 in Omaha, Nebraska.

The Cardinal's 9-5 victory over Oklahoma State in the championship game avenged its only loss of the College World Series.

Stanford scored four times in the fifth inning and added three more in the ninth against the Cowboys. Steve Chitren turned in a solid pitching performance in relief of all-America Jack McDowell.

"Balance is what has made this team so good," said Chitren. "Our three times in the first and shut out the Longhorns for the rest of the contest.

In the final game, the Cardinal used three singles to score twice in the first. But the Cowboys, who brought a team batting average of .353 into the tournament, got back-to-back homers in the fourth from Benny Castillo and Brad Beanblossom to take a 3-2 lead.

Stanford responded with three doubles after a walk in the fifth, the last two coming with two outs. A single completed the Cardinal's four-run inning.

Oklahoma State pulled back to within two in the bottom of the inning and threatened to get more when McDowell walked the first two batters in the eighth. But Chitren came in to strike out the next two and, after loading the bases by hitting a batter, fanned Ray Ortiz to end the inning.

Stanford added three insurance runs on three hits and a wild pitch in the ninth.

With one out in the bottom of the inning, Cowboy designated hitter Jim Ifland hit a solo homer. But Chitren coaxed first baseman Jimmy Barragan to foul out and fielded Monty Farriss' bouncer, throwing him out to end the game.

The game marked the fourth time that Oklahoma State had lost in the championship game. The Cowboys, making a sixth straight appearance in Omaha, won the national crown in 1959.

Stanford becomes the fifth member of the Pacific-10 Conference to take the title at Omaha. Arizona, Arizona State, California and Southern California had won in previous seasons. That conference now can claim 22 championships in 40 years of the College World Series.

The Cardinal, which had reached the Division I play-offs for a seventh straight season, was making its sixth appearance in the College World Series. Stanford finished third in 1967, with current coach Mark Marquess named the all-tournament first baseman.

Joining Carey on this season's pitching, our hitting and our defense have all been good."

The key games of the tournament came June 5, one day after Oklahoma State handed the Cardinal its first loss. Tied 2-2 with Stanford after nine innings, Louisiana State scored three runs in the top of the 10th on a double by Craig Faulkner. But the Cardinal loaded the bases in the bottom of the inning, and freshman outfielder Paul Carey delivered a dramatic game-winning grand slam.

Carey, who drove in two more runs in the championship game, was named the tournament's most outstanding player.

In the other June 5 game, Texas' Coby Kerlin tripled in the bottom of the 10th and Kevin Garner singled him in to give Oklahoma State its first loss of the series.

On Saturday, Stanford eliminated Texas and set up the championship showdown with a 9-3 victory over the Longhorns, who entered the tournament as the nation's top-ranked team. Senior Al Osuna entered the game after Texas scored all-tournament squad were Cardinal teammates David Esquer (shortstop) and Mark Machtoff (designated hitter); pitcher Pat Hope, Barragan, catcher Adam Smith and second baseman Beanblossom of Oklahoma State; third baseman Scott Coolbaugh and outfielder Brian Cisarik of Texas, and outfielder Jack Voight and pitcher Gregg Patterson of Louisiana State.

After forcing Oklahoma State's Robin Ventura at second, all-tournament shortstop David Esquer of Stanford throws first to complete his team's 12th double play in the 1987 championship, tying a College World Series record. Ventura had a 58-game hitting streak snapped during the series.

Also of note in the tournament was Oklahoma State third baseman Robin Ventura, who extended his record hitting streak to 58 games before coming up empty in the Cowboys' victory over Stanford.

The tournament drew a record 130,659 fans to Rosenblatt Municipal Stadium, breaking the attendance mark of 125,970 set in 1985.

UCLA captures seventh men's track title by record margin

UCLA athletes captured three individual championships, placed second or third in five other events and ran away with the Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships team title June 3-6 in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

The Bruins outscored runner-up Texas, 81-28. Texas Christian finished third with 27 points, followed by Arkansas (26) and Louisiana State (25). For the Bruins, it was the seventh outdoor track championship in school history, while the winning margin of 53 points was the largest in meet history, dating back to 1921.

The Bruins' 1,600-meter relay team of Anthony Washington, Kevin Young, Henry Thomas and Danny Everett set a meet record with a 3:00.55. Also, Jim Connolly set a personal record with 8,121 points in the decathlon and defeated two-time NCAA champion Rob Muzzio of George Mason. Connolly, the son of two former Olympic athletes, did not take the lead from Muzzio until the ninth event, the javelin, with a throw of 229-7. Finally for UCLA, junior Kevin Young, runner-up to Danny Harris in last year's 400-meter hurdles, captured that title with a time of 48.90.

Ohio State's junior sensation Butch Reynolds set a championships record in the 400 meters with a 44.12, the second-best time ever at sea level and the fifth-fastest time in history.

Floyd Heard of Texas A&M ran the 200 meters in a wind-aided 20.03 to capture his second straight title in that event. The sophomore recently set the collegiate mark of 19.95 at the Southwest Conference championships.

George Mason junior Abdi Bile recorded the fastest 1,500 meters in the U.S. this year with his 3:35.79 at the championships, but narrowly missed setting a meet record. However, Texas Christian set a world-best for 1987 in the 400-meter relay with a 38.32 effort from Roscoe Tatum, Andrew Smith, Greg Sholars and Raymond Stewart.

Relay miscue propels Louisiana State to women's track title

An illegal baton pass by a member of the Alabama 1,600-meter relay team resulted in disqualification for the Crimson Tide and gave Louisiana State its first Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships team title.

The Crimson Tide appeared to have won the team championship after finishing first in the 1,600-meter relay, which was the final running event of the June 3-6 championships at Baton Rouge, Louisiana. But Pauline Davis had one foot outside of the passing zone at the second exchange, costing Alabama 10 points. Louisiana State, which finished fourth in the relay, was moved up to third place and earned six points.

The Tigers scored a total of 62 points, followed by Alabama with 53. Southern California placed third with 51 points, followed by Tennessee (33) and Texas (28½).

Louisiana State's Sheila Echols showcased her multidimensional ord-holder Jackie Joyner-Kersey. Echols also shattered the meet record of 22-1 set by Carol Lewis of Houston in 1985. In the 100-meter dash, Echols finished third with a time of 11.41, and she ran the second leg for the 400-meter relay team that tied for second place.

Sheila Hudson

Six championships records were set, highlighted by California's Sheila Hudson, who set a world-best mark in the triple jump with a leap of 45-2½. Hudson's effort broke the previous championships record by ¾ inches.

Alabama's Lillie Leatherwood

King, a two-time champion in the 400 meters, set a championships record in that event with a 50.90.

Regina Cavanaugh of Rice became the first three-time champion in women's Division I outdoor track history as she won the shot with a put of 56-10¼, breaking the championships record she set last year.

Wisconsin's Suzy Favor shaved almost three seconds off the 1,500-meter record as she clocked a 4:09.85, while Villanova sophomore Vicki Huber clipped more than five seconds off the 3,000-meter record with a 8:54.41.

The only double winner of the championships was Georgia's Gwen Torrence, who became the first woman athlete in Georgia history to win an NCAA outdoor championship. Torrence captured the 100 meters in 11.25 and notched a wind-aided 22.37 in the 200 meters, out-kicking Alabama's King.

Alabama weathers storm of protest over priority ticket plan

By Bill Lumpkin
and Paul Finebaum
Birmingham Post-Herald

When Ray Perkins resigned as head football coach and athletics director at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, in December, he left his alma mater with two new football facilities, stadium expansion under construction and a projected long-term debt service of almost $41 million.

He also left his successor as Alabama's athletics director, close friend and former teammate Steve Sloan, another monstrous headache—a priority ticket plan waiting to be implemented.

When Sloan went public with Perkins' ticket plan, a storm of controversy and confusion erupted.

An immediate misunderstanding that grew out of the new fund-raising vehicle was that Alabama's athletics department is struggling financially.

"We're definitely not broke," Sloan says. "We do have a substantial debt."

Perkins said he left a substantial bank account when he resigned December 31 to become coach of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League.

"I don't know how they could have financial problems," Perkins said. "There's between $17 and $18 million in the kitty."

"Without the ticket increases, all the facilities I built when I was there would have paid for themselves in between 10 to 12 years, with the things we had in place."

Sloan said, "We do have what would be known as reserves. Some are corporate (bonds) that you can't touch. Some are moneys like a personal savings account. We're trying to utilize that money for emergencies. For example, the roof of the coliseum has to be replaced."

"Some of this money is endowed money that cannot be taken out," Sloan said.

"Alabama is the only major university in the entire country that doesn't have priorities on tickets," Perkins said. "All the other universities are getting big lump sums of their money from that. The University of Alabama—the university, not the athletics department—needs help, whether anyone there wants to admit it not. The only source of help that's there is the athletics department."

Last summer, Perkins indicated that the athletics department might have to eliminate some programs if things didn't change.

"I think a lot of teams in the future are going to have to look at cutting down the number of programs," he said. "The NCAA requires you to have 14 teams (total for men and women). Now, we have 18."

Sloan said, "If we are able to implement that (ticket) plan properly and it works, then I wouldn't anticipate any cutbacks here. I wouldn't anticipate adding any more sports, either."

The plan developed under Perkins came off the drawing board July 31, 1986.

"Basically, the athletics department never has tried to raise money so it wouldn't be in conflict with the university's fund-raising drives," Sloan said. "Alabama put the priority seating plan into place because that was about what everybody else was doing."

When Alabama announced the policy in April, effective in the fall of 1988, an uproar soon followed.

Assistant athletics director Tommy Limbaugh acknowledges,

Steve Sloan

"We didn't handle it right. We should have called a press conference and explained everything in great detail."

One reason for the number of complaints was the information that reached fans through radio call-in shows, Alabama officials said.

One misconception was that there would be a surcharge placed on each seat.

"This is not a surcharge," said Jim Goostree, executive athletics director. This is a donor program. It enables people to make a choice of where they want to sit in two stadiums (in Tuscaloosa and Birmingham). They can do this making different donations to participate in different ticket priority plans."

Limbaugh said, "I think the biggest concern is for the guy who has a season ticket and has sat in the same seat for 30 years. We are going to give him the opportunity to purchase the same seat if he will donate. We will not take a seat away from anyone without giving them that opportunity."

Sloan said the reaction to the plan has been good in meetings with alumni groups. "My mail has been 70 to 30 in favor of it. The people against it just don't understand it," he said.

Goostree said the seating in Bryant-Denny Stadium on campus will be increased by 11,000 to 12,000, bringing capacity to about 70,000.

When Paul "Bear" Bryant was head football coach, he was aware a priority seating plan was needed but decided to leave that to the next coach, Goostree said.

The season-ticket plan started with a survey conducted by Jay Sterling, an assistant professor of marketing at Alabama. He looked at 30 schools and the origins of their ticket plans.

In college football, the best seats are reserved for the rich. The day of paying face value for a ticket and sitting on the sideline is gone.

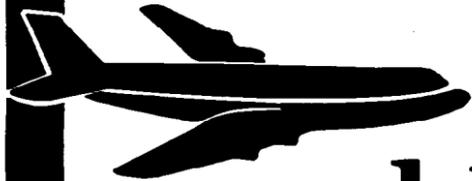

But priority seating isn't new. The University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, started a priority seating program in 1927.

Beginning in the fall of 1988, Alabama will offer football tickets in six categories:

- The Ivory Club requires a $2,500 donation and provides an option to purchase four season tickets to in-state games, four additional Auburn-game tickets, four not be stamped into quasi-reform and perceived reform that lead to more rules of dubious value."

He said the special Convention called by the Presidents Commission in June 1985 "set a new tone of morality for intercollegiate athletics that I think has proved very salutary."

He said the NCAA's rules are "sound and good" and suggested that the Association "quit adding on more and more rules to take care of parochial interests." Instead, he said, the Association should concentrate its interest "on convincing and compelling practitioners to live by the rules."

"We cannot live with the proposition that adults make a deal with a youngster, who then has to lie for four or five years to maintain his eligibility," he asserted.

'Power coach'

Byers urged the new committee to discuss how to strengthen the role of the faculty athletics representative as "the arm of the president" and how to reemphasize the athletics director's role in athletics management, noting that both of those persons—as well as the chief executive officer—frequently are bypassed in the "power coach" structure.

Despite the strides made by the Presidents Commission, the chief executive officer in the "power coach" situation is no stronger than he was five years ago, he stated.

"Establish the fact that the institution has a control mechanism in place that should not be bypassed by the 'power coach,'" he urged.

Student-athlete

He said there are sufficient data to prove that the graduation rate of the Division I student-athlete is equal to or better than that of the student body in general, noting that this was contrary to "repeated claims by the media and egotist academicians who like to dump on intercollegiate athletics."

Byers also said he was not convinced that student-athletes take courses that are less demanding than those taken by students in general. He said courses taken only by student-athletes should be eliminated by the institution, but student-athletes should not be criticized for taking accredited courses if they also are taken by nonathletes.

He acknowledged that student-athletes sometimes have advantages that other students do not have, such as tutoring programs and the coach acting as a substitute parent; on the other hand, he emphasized the lost class time, pressures and practice time demands that student-athletes face and most other students do not.

Walter Byers

Committee actions

Long-Range Planning

• Noted that current legal pressures on student-athletes as a result of recent player-agent activities may result in the student-athletes' revealing rules violations by institutions, which the committee believed would be healthy. It also suggested consideration of limitations on institutional responsibility in certifying a student-athlete's eligibility when the student-athlete has lied about an agent relationship.

• Recommended that an NCAA member's postseason opportunities in team sports be limited to NCAA championships and other NCAA-approved events.

• Urged the Committee on Review and Planning to consider opportunities for women and Blacks in athletics management and for appropriate competitive opportunities for the growing college enrollments of Orientals and Hispanics.

• Suggested that the new committee consider the Long Range Planning Committee's earlier support for legislation requiring written evidence of a prospect's admissibility to an institution before a letter of intent is signed.

• Recommended a long-range, unified study regarding television matters in light of the fact that nearly all major contracts involving college and professional sports will expire from 1989 to 1991.

• Proposed that the new committee consider means of maintaining momentum toward greater integrity in college athletics, including the possibility of assuring governing boards' commitment to institutional control of athletics.

• Asked the new committee to consider means of diminishing coaches' use of college athletics for personal gain and reestablishing the athletics director's responsibility for the athletics program. Included in this general topic was continued attention to proposed codes of ethics in college athletics.

• Suggested that all member institutions be asked to provide their definitions and policies regarding "good academic standing."

• Proposed refinement of the role and tenure of the faculty athletics representative.

• Noted the continuing trend toward a single conference affiliation for an institution's men's and women's programs, which has increased annually since 1982-83.

• Noted again a strong recommendation by the student-athletes on the committee that institutions implement career-counseling programs for their student-athletes, beginning early in their enrollment and continuing until graduation.

Review and Planning

• Developed reactions to the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification's proposed procedures regarding interpretations of NCAA legislation, which will be reported to the Council and the special committee.

• Began an ongoing review of various membership issues and will report to the Council that it will consider, among other things, a proposal to continue the current instances of multidivision classification but permit no additional such classifications in the future. The committee also will review a proposal to eliminate current circumstances in which both a National Collegiate Championship and a division championship exist in a sport, instead proposing that if Division III has sufficient sponsorship for a championship, Divisions I and II would be permitted to conduct a combined championship regardless of the sponsorship in those divisions.

• Decided to review in its fall meeting a procedure by which the current unclassified and probationary membership categories would be combined into a category termed "restrictive status," with such status to apply only to the sport involved the first time criteria are not met and to all sports thereafter.

• Urged the NCAA Research Committee to complete its pilot qualifying conferences, consideration will be given to withholding only the ineligible institution's share of net receipts.

The Executive Committee also addressed the issue of leniency for the use of declared banned substances in therapeutic doses, limiting such leniency to sympathomimetic amines, primarily cold medications. Consideration will be given to declaring a student-athlete ineligible only upon a second positive test for such use during his or her career. Among the aspects studied will be the application of that policy under Bylaw 5-2.

In another matter relating to a particular substance, a level (25 micrograms/millimeters) has been established for immediate ineligibility sanctions for a positive test for tetrahydrocannabinol (THC). That level would preclude a positive finding for passive inhalation of marijuana. Previously, a first positive test for marijuana had brought only study regarding the reasons sports are discontinued by institutions and then extend such a study to the entire membership. The committee took the position that the Association should take every step to sustain and increase the number of sports sponsored in order to assure the greatest possible number of opportunities for participation by students.

• Agreed to review in future meetings the previous attempts at reducing the number of members in Division I and at making it more difficult to achieve membership in that division, as well as to review a compilation of various characteristics of Division I member institutions. The committee also will express concern to the Executive Committee that certain steps being proposed for use of the increased basketball revenues in the future will encourage even more institutions to seek Division I membership.

• Recommended that the Council appoint a task force or subcommittee to address the issue of increased opportunities for minorities, and especially Blacks, in coaching, athletics management, officiating, conference offices, NCAA committees and the NCAA staff, reviewing the Association's 1981 position in support of black representation on committees.

• Asked that several of the Long Range Planning Commission's recommendations be referred to appropriate NCAA committees or Council subcommittees, and placed its remaining recommendations on the review and planning committee's fall agenda.

• Encouraged the Faculty Athletics Representatives Forum to continue toward development of a definition of the faculty athletics representative's role.

• Requested development of a summary of state-government initiatives that might involve intercollegiate athletics, especially those that would make violations of NCAA rules civil offenses in those states.

William J. Flynn, director of athletics at Boston College, was unable to chair the Long Range Planning Committee's final meeting due to illness, and he designated John L. Toner, retiring director of athletics at the University of Connecticut, to serve as acting chair. John R. Davis, faculty athletics representative at Oregon State University, is chair of the new Committee on Review and Planning. All three are former presidents of the Association.

Ueberroth claims responsibility

Major leagues should pay prep draftees' college bill

Most high school athletes end up losers if they spurn college education for a shot at major-league baseball, Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth says.

"If a youngster wants to go to college, (baseball and the colleges) should be encouraging him," he said June 8 in an address to the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics in San Diego.

The commissioner said major-league baseball should pay the cost of college education for athletes drafted into baseball directly out of high school who want a college education, the Associated Press reported.

Ueberroth said the majority of high school athletes never graduate from the minor leagues to the Major Leagues and are left unprepared when they try to find a job outside baseball.

The commissioner estimated there are 300 to 400 players who entered baseball's minor-league system directly from high school.

"The truth is, of those 300 or 400 players, how many will make it to the Major Leagues? Forty? I don't feel very good about that," he said. "We have them in the minor leagues earning pennies for about four, five, six or seven years.

"They're married, have a couple of kids. They have no careers, nowhere to start. They just kind of drop out of our system. Together, we're not benefitting human life."

Ueberroth told 800 NACDA delegates that baseball and the schools should work together to allow high school athletes to continue their education while they play baseball.

"It would be a good expenditure in the development of the youngster to have him become educated at the same time. And I think the costs should be borne by baseball, not the (college) institutions," he said.

Schedule change

This issue of The NCAA News marks the end of the weekly publication schedule and the start of the summer schedule.

Beginning with the June 24 issue, the News will be published every second Wednesday until September 14, when the News returns to the weekly Monday publication schedule.

Summer issues will be published June 24, July 8 and 22, August 5 and 19, and September 2.

a warning. The new policy will become effective September 1, 1987.

In all, 2,023 student-athletes were tested during fall and winter championships and for NCAA-certified postseason football games. Based on 1,968 results, 1.7 percent of the student-athletes tested positive and were declared ineligible.

Football players in all three divisions constituted the largest group tested, 1,008. Other groups of tested student-athletes included 38 in Division I cross country, 288 in Division I men's basketball, 32 in Division I women's basketball, 55 in gymnastics, 320 in swimming and diving, 162 in indoor track, and 120 in Divisions I and II wrestling.

The testing of officials assigned to championships and to certified postseason football games has been approved in concept. The governing sports committees will be asked to recommend through division championships committees which officials should be tested and the categories for which testing should be conducted.

Legal advice will be sought before including coaches in the drug-testing program.

Further information on the Association's drug-testing program will be provided to team physicians at NCAA member institutions at a meeting before the start of the next academic year.

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

1. Reviewed the application of Constitution 3-2-(g) and determined that all coaching-staff members (e.g., full-time assistants, part-time assistants) who have contractual agreements with a member institution would be subject to the requirements of Constitution 3-2-(g); agreed that a "contract" is considered to include the written form of communication utilized by the institution to advise coaching-staff members of the conditions and terms of their employment, including letters of appointment; concluded that all reports of athletically related outside income (for the period beginning January 10, 1987) must be made to the institution's director of athletics prior to the beginning of the 1987-88 academic year; agreed that subsequent reports must be made on an annual basis prior to the beginning of each successive academic year; referred to the Divisions II and III Steering Committees the recommendation that Constitution 3-2-(g) be amended to apply its provisions on a division basis; further, agreed that the application of Constitution 3-2-(g) would require that the contracts of all coaching staff members stipulate that the coach is subject to disciplinary action for violations of NCAA regulations.

2. Reviewed an earlier committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 7 of the minutes of the committee's April 2, 1987, conference) with regard to a member institution's strength and conditioning coach and determined the following:

a. The oversight responsibilities of the strength and conditioning coach should be confined to the supervision of the weight room during any period outside the permissible practice season for those sports with out-of-season practice limitations.

b. It is permissible for a member institution's strength and conditioning coach to provide a prospective student-athlete with a weight program and lifting schedule; however, the coach would be prohibited from prearranging or monitoring the prospect's lifting schedule, thus assuring voluntary participation. The oversight responsibilities of the strength and conditioning coach may involve supervision of appropriate lifting techniques by the prospective student-athlete.

3. Reviewed the application of Bylaws 1-9-(j)-(2)-(i) and (ii) (student hosts) and confirmed that those student-athletes who do not receive athletically related financial aid are permitted to serve as student hosts and receive the benefits (e.g., meals and entertainment expenses) associated with being a student host; asked the Special NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review the Recruiting Process to consider: (a) the possible development of a limit on the total number of student hosts (per visiting prospect) permitted to receive benefits incidental to serving as a host, and (b) the permissibility of a prospective student-athlete receiving entertainment (through the arrangements of a coach or an athletics representative) that costs more than the $10 or $20 limit per day.

4. Determined that the application of Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1) and Case No. 186 would permit a member institution to provide an honorarium or fee to a high school, preparatory school or junior college coach who speaks or participates at an institutional camp or clinic, with the understanding that the member institution must be able to document that the honorarium or fee provided to the coach is commensurate with similar fees paid to other individuals for like services; referred to the Council's recruiting subcommittee the issue of whether an institution may provide actual and necessary expenses for a coach's family to attend the clinic or camp.

5. Asked the legislative services staff to review the application of Bylaws 1-1-(b) and 1-2-(b) to the involvement of student-athletes and representatives of an institution's athletics interests in leadership tutorial programs as tutors or administrators, and requested that the staff develop criteria that would permit such participation for review during the committee's next conference.

6. Reached the following conclusions regarding the application of Constitution 3-1-(g)-(1) and Bylaw 6-1-(a):

a. Agreed that a member institution is prohibited from providing a student-athlete with a calculator for use in a course requiring such an item, inasmuch as the legislation must be amended to permit the inclusion of "supplies" in a full grant-in-aid.

b. Determined that a member institution is permitted to provide a student-athlete receiving a full grant-in-aid (which includes fees) with the cost of a field trip, provided the field trip is required of all students in the course and the fee for such trips is specified in the institution's catalog.

c. Concluded that it is permissible for an institution to provide student-athletes the cost-free use of computers and typewriters in the institution's student-services areas, including the athletics department; agreed that a member institution may not provide the cost-free use of a copy machine only for its student-athletes.

d. Recognized that the Divisions I, II and III Steering Committees may wish to consider sponsoring an amendment to Constitution 3-1-(g)-(1) to permit the full grant-in-aid to include the provision of course-related supplies for student-athletes.

7. Reviewed Constitution 3-9-(b) and 3-9-(b)-(1)-(ii) and Bylaw I-6-(c)-(6) and agreed that the principles expressed in Constitution

3-9-(b)-(1)-(ii) should be extended to prohibit the participation of a member institution's coach in the Superior Basketball League of Puerto Rico, inasmuch as that competition more closely resembles a summer basketball league than a national training program.

8. Reviewed an earlier committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 9 of the minutes of the committee's February 19, 1987, conference) regarding 1987 Convention Proposal No. 1 and Constitution 3-2-(c) and determined that institutions meeting the established $300,000 budget criteria first could be exempted from the audit requirements for fiscal years beginning on or after July 1, 1986, noting that the revised interpretation would be consistent with the established July 1 date for determining the application of audit legislation generally, and would require that each member institution complete an annual financial audit of its athletics department at least once.

9. Determined that the application of Bylaw 5-1-(e) permits a student-athlete who begins participation at the initial competitive (regional) level of an NCAA championship and then is declared academically ineligible by the certifying institution to continue to participate in the final round of competition for that championship event; agreed that Executive Regulation 1-4-(d) applies in situations involving a protest filed by another institution regarding the eligibility of a student-athlete at a competing institution when the question does not relate to a change in the individual's academic status.

Vols to open biggest on-campus basketball arena this year

By Steve Baker

Unobstructed views for 25,000 fans of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, new home court has basketball coach Don DeVoe dreaming of big-time recruits, and school officials thankful the long-overdue arena is almost ready.

The media were taken on a tour of the $30 million arena, and Volunteer athletics director Doug Dickey said he plans to open the facility during football season so basketball

Fenner held without bond

A Maryland judge's decision to continue holding without bond University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, football star Derrick Fenner, who is charged with murder, is "cruel," according to the defense attorney.

"It's very disappointing," attorney Joel Worshtil said after Prince George's County District Court Judge Sylvania Woods refused to set bond for the Tar Heels tailback, who holds the Atlantic Coast Conference rushing record for a single game.

"I don't think there's any reason to hold Derrick. No bond is cruel, it's just cruel," Worshtil said.

Fenner, 20, of Oxon Hill, Maryland, was charged June 2 with first-degree murder in what police said was the drug-related shooting death of Marcellus Leach, 19.

Leach was gunned down May 23 in the courtyard of the Kirkwood Apartments, according to Hyattsville city police.

A 17-year-old youth was injured in the shooting. Police still are seeking three other suspects.

Woods said he was not worried that Fenner, who has been jailed since he surrendered to Hyattsville City police June 3, would not appear at his court hearings.

But after being assured by prosecutors that a witness was certain he had seen Fenner fire the gun that killed Leach, Woods ruled to withhold bond because "it's more likely than not that they arrested the right person."

"If I set bond, I would put an imminent danger to the community," Woods said.

On June 14, Creech urged Woods to withhold bond on the murder charge to "protect the people of Prince George's County."

Woods set a preliminary hearing for July 2.

fans can pick their own season seats.

The arena, two years overdue, is situated next to the 92,000-seat Neyland Stadium on the banks of the Tennessee River; and, when completed, it will be the largest on-campus college basketball arena in the country, Vol officials say.

The bowl-shaped lower-seating area contains 10,000 seats, while the upper deck will seat about 15,000, including an estimated 3,000 on benches on the top eight rows.

A 25-foot-wide concourse surrounds the 10-story arena, which is 85 percent complete, and will more than double the concessions available at Stokely Athletic Center, the former home of the Vols.

The seat farthest from the court in the new arena still is 15 feet closer than the seat farthest from the court at Stokely, architect Joe Goodstein said.

Doug Dickey Don DeVoe

The Lady Volunteers, defending NCAA Division I champions, will inaugurate the facility December 3 against Stetson in the first half of a basketball double-header that also pits Tennessee's men against Marquette.

Ticket prices will remain $8 per game, $10 for eight double-headers scheduled in the 1987-88 season, said Dickey, who estimates the university needs to draw crowds of 16,000 per home game to break even.

"This gives us the finest basketball facility in the world," said DeVoe. "It will make us more attractive to the nation's best players."

"In the past, we haven't actively recruited West Coast players. But now, why not? We've got a great place for anyone to play," DeVoe said.

Basketball will make up about half of the arena events every year, according to Tennessee officials. Concerts by performers who regularly draw 15,000 or more and conventions also will be scheduled.

The media tour was led by Ray Bell of Ray Bell Construction, a Tennessee-based firm that took over midway through the project when the university and the initial contractor agreed to break off their contract.

"We did have problems, but we turned them all around," Bell said. "The arena will open December 3, and there will be a basketball game here."

Bell's firm had to replace parts of 48 concrete supports that hold the upper deck of seats in place. A lawsuit over the dispute is in Federal court and could ultimately determine how much the university pays for the new arena.

The original $30 million for the project was made up by $7 million in state funds, $10 million in county funds, $5 million from an anonymous donor and $5 million raised by the university to match that donation, and a separate $3 million donation from the Vols' athletics fund.

Baker writes for the Associated Press.
