Record $79 million operating budget approved

A record general operating budget of more than $79 million was approved for 1987-88 by the Executive Committee during its meeting August 10-11 at Point Clear, Alabama.

New moneys generated by the extension of the Association's contract with CBS-TV for the 1988, 1989 and 1990 Division I Men's Basketball Championships made possible a 39.2 percent increase over the 1986-87 budget.

Included in the $79,941,000 budget is approximately $10 million for such purposes as establishing a limited undergraduate scholarship program; granting approximately $3.5 million to Division I men's and women's basketball-playing conferences for the improvement of officiating, drug education, and enforcement of and compliance with rules, and funding a catastrophic-injury insurance plan for Division I student-athletes.

The committee approved a payment of $5.8 million from the supplemental rights fee paid prior to the 1987 Division I Men's Basketball Championship to establish a scholarship-granting National Collegiate Foundation. In addition, grants of $1 million will be paid from the net receipts of each of the next three men's basketball championships to fund the program that will provide undergraduate scholarships to Division I student-athletes who have completed eligibility.

Also, $3,505,000 will be used from 1988 tournament receipts for grants to the Division I basketball-playing conferences as follows: $90,000 each to 30 men's automatic-qualifying conferences; $30,000 each to 18 women's automatic-qualifying conferences; $50,000 each to two men's nonautomatic-qualifying conferences, and $15,000 each to 11 women's nonautomatic-qualifying conferences.

To be eligible to receive the grants, each conference will be required to employ a full-time administrator and to implement a minimum standard of programs for its members in the areas of basketball officiating improvement, compliance and enforcement, and drug education.

Appropriate NCAA committees will be asked to establish the minimum standards for the conference programs. Association officials hope to notify conferences of the standards by late fall, so that each may advise the national office of its plans for the grant by late in the spring or early in the summer of

Women show gains in attendance

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Statistics Service

Women's national college basketball attendance, due to a record year in NCAA Division I, reached three million for the second consecutive year in 1987 and set a record for the fifth straight season.

The national total was 3,121,159, excluding double-headers with men's teams, for an increase of 101,135, or 3.35 percent, over 1986. The figures include all 1,188 senior colleges in the country with women's varsity teams—756 of them NCAA members (283 in Division I).

Women's national college basketball attendance has increased by 30 percent over the six seasons of official compilation by the NCAA Statistics Service. The 1987 total is 724,245 more than the 1982 figure of almost 2.4 million. All women's rankings over the six years have been based on net attendance, excluding double-headers with men. Over the same six-year period, men's attendance has risen 805,353 or just 2.6 percent to 31.9 million.

NCAA Division I totaled a record 1,667,470 and averaged 572 per game, up 40 over 1986. NCAA Division II averaged 260 (down 18) and NCAA Division III 157 (down four). The other declines were by the 11 NCAA corresponding-member teams and by the Division II and Division III tournaments.

Taking up slack

The 1987 increase, like the 1985 increase, was due entirely to NCAA Division I, which was up 155,468, while the rest of the country was

Council seeks deletion of bowl invitation dates

The NCAA Council will sponsor legislation at the annual Convention in January to eliminate the calendar restrictions on offering and accepting invitations to participate in certified postseason football bowl games.

Noting that such action had been recommended in past years by the NCAA Committee on Infractions and the former Public Relations and Promotion Committee, both the Council and the Division I Steering Committee voted to support deletion of Bylaws 2-2(j) and (k) during their summer meetings August 12-14 at Point Clear, Alabama.

Under the current legislation, representatives of bowl games are not allowed to extend an invitation and representatives of member institutions are not allowed to consider one from August 1 to the third Tuesday in November. If adopted by the Convention, the Council's legislation would leave no restrictions on the timing of bowl invitations.

Other highlights of the Council's summer meeting:

- The Council agreed to discourage the submission of any legislation for the 1988 annual Convention that would deal with the amount of an athletics grant-in-aid or with the concept of basing athletics aid on financial need.

It was noted that the new Committee on Financial Aid and Ama-

House trims $2 million from request for NYSP

The U.S. House of Representatives has passed a fiscal year 1988 appropriations bill containing $7 million for the National Youth Sports Program. The appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services; Education, and Related Agencies will be taken up by the Senate soon after the current congressional recess.

Although the measure as passed August 5 by the House appropriates less than the $9 million requested by the NCAA and NYSP supporters, the NYSP received the largest dollar increase and the largest percentage increase of the four discretionary programs authorized under the Community Services Block Grant. The House-passed appropriation represents an increase of $1.134 million (19.3 percent) over the $5.866 million appropriated by Congress in fiscal year 1987.

Senate consideration of the measure will begin shortly after Labor Day with markup by the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, HHS, Education and Related Agencies. Sen. Lawton Chiles (D-Florida) chairs the subcommittee, and Sen. Lowell Weicker (R-Connecticut) serves as ranking minority member. Following subcommittee markup, the bill will go to the full Senate Appropriations Committee and then to the Senate floor.

Drug-testing case to be heard in Federal court

At the request of NCAA legal counsel, a case involving the drug testing of student-athletes at the University of Washington has been moved from King County Superior Court to the U.S. District Court in Seattle, Washington.

Plaintiffs in the case, Washington student-athletes Elizabeth O'Halloran and Alan Burch, have requested that the action be remanded back to the county court. A Federal judge will hear arguments on that motion August 21 in Seattle.

"There is no way to be certain," said John J. Kitchin of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clark and Kitchin, the Association's Kansas City, Missouri, legal counsel, "but I suspect that a decision on the August 21 arguments will be made within a couple of weeks."

The original suit challenged only Washington's drug-testing program. But in a July 22 ruling, King County Superior Court Judge George T. Mattson brought the NCAA into the case by issuing a temporary restraining order prohibiting Association testing of Washington student-athletes. He also ordered the NCAA to take no action against the university for not participating in the postseason drug-testing program.

A complete report on the ruling was published in the August 5 issue of The NCAA News.

Kitchin said the decision to seek movement of the legal action to Federal court stems from charges in the suit that the NCAA drug-testing program violates individual rights granted under the U.S. Constitution.

He said it was possible that all or part of the suit could be sent back to the local court. "The whole matter or only those parts of the suit dealing with violations of the state constitution could be remanded," Kitchin noted. "Or, the Federal court could conceivably ship back only the university's part of the case."

"Washington's position is that it was forced to sue the NCAA," he continued. "Certainly, the July ruling directed the school to bring the Association into the suit as a third party."

1988. It is anticipated that funding will be approved and distributed to the conferences by September 1988.

The Executive Committee also earmarked $765,000 to pay 100 percent of the catastrophic-injury insurance premium for Division I men's and women's basketball players, drawing from the institutions' share of net receipts, and 50 percent of the premium for other Division I sports, to be paid from the Association's share of net receipts.

During its meeting, the committee also projected increases in participating institutions' share of net receipts from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. The increases will be approximately eight percent in 1988, 8.1 percent in 1989 and 9.6 percent in 1990.

Another highlight of the new budget is the allocation of $1,370,000 from the NCAA's share of net receipts to pay transportation and per diem expenses for all National Collegiate and Division I championships, except Division I men's basketball. In addition, $430,000 was devoted to paying transportation and per diem expenses for one coach or trainer in National Collegiate or Division I individual championships.

The committee also modified the committee reimbursement policy to provide a $30 per diem to NCAA committee members, with hotel room and tax to be paid directly by the Association. Full per diem will be provided for each day on committee business (rather than one-half for day of departure) and the $100 "flat rate" will be maintained.

In other actions involving scholarships, the committee approved 10 new postgraduate scholarships to be awarded in sports other than football and basketball, bringing the total number of awards to 100. Also, the amount of the scholarships will be increased from $2,000 to $4,000. The committee also allocated $200,000 for postgraduate scholarships in sports administration.

Another $309,000 was allocated for 18 Youth Education through Sports clinics in 1987-88.

In actions concerning block grants, the committee evenly split $700,000 between the 1988-89 Divisions II and III grants, bringing the total allocation for each division to $1.55 million. Also, as a result of surpluses in each division's 1986-87 grant, the committee approved payment of 100 percent of transportation for team and individual championships in Divisions II and III, as well as a $25 per diem for Division II and elimination of the transportation assessment in Division III.

The committee also acted on requests for championship bracket expansions in several sports.

A request to expand the Division I Women's Basketball Championship field from 40 to 48 teams was denied, but expansions were approved in Division I men's ice hockey (from nine to 12 teams), Division II men's golf (88 to 90 individuals), Division I men's soccer (23 to 24 teams), Division III women's cross country (116 to 136 individuals, with two additional seven-member teams and six additional participants), Division II women's basketball (24 to 32 teams), Division II football (eight to 16 teams) and Division II women's volleyball (16 to 20 teams).

A request to increase the field of the Division I Women's Softball Championship from 16 to 20 teams was approved, but the Executive Committee plans to review further a format for the enlarged tournament. The committee also approved expansion of the Division II Women's Softball Championship field from 12 to 16 teams, but deferred a proposal to increase the Division III field from 16 to 18 teams in order to obtain more information.

Likewise, the committee deferred proposals to increase the brackets in Division II women's tennis but approved an expansion in the Division I Women's Tennis Championships team field from 16 to 20 teams.

In other actions involving recommendations from the various sports committees, the Executive Committee:

- Approved proposed regional alignments for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship placing members of the Southwest Athletic Conference, Southland Conference and Association of Mid-Century

More revenue for participants

Among the actions taken by the Executive Committee during its August meeting were the following:

- Increased participating institutions' share of net receipts from Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

- Allocated $1.3 million to pay transportation and per diem expenses for all National Collegiate and Division I championships.

- Suspended application of team-ineligibility sanctions for positive tests during NCAA drug testing until at least the January 1989 Convention.

- Increased NCAA postgraduate scholarship total to 100.

- Expanded championships in Division I men's ice hockey, Division I women's tennis, Division II men's golf, Division I men's soccer, Division III women's cross country, Division II women's basketball, Division II football and Division II women's volleyball.

Universities, as well as Pan American University and the University of Texas, San Antonio, in the Midwest region; moving the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and University of North Carolina, Asheville, to the East region, and moving Coastal Carolina College and Winthrop College to the Southeast region.

- Approved changes in the format of the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships that are designed to improve attendance, including moving the team championship from Saturday afternoon to Friday night and holding the all-around championship Saturday afternoon.

- Directed the Men's and Women's Golf Committee to explore and report on alternatives to its proposal to create a regional qualifying system for Division I men's golf.

- Approved replacing the 500- and 1,000-meter runs with the 400-meter dash and 800-meter run in Division I indoor track.

The Executive Committee also voted to continue the four-day Convention format. In another action, the committee approved a 60 percent/40 percent division of royalties from official-ball designations (40 percent to the Association) for those sports that have guaranteed minimum royalties of at least $15,000 for one year.

Members of the committee also decided to suspend the application of team-ineligibility sanctions for positive tests resulting from the NCAA drug-testing program until at least the January 1989 Convention (See story on page 3).

Division I academic-reporting procedure

Revisions that have been made in both form and content to the 1987 Division I academic-reporting process (for which NCAA Form 87-6 is utilized) have prompted a number of questions concerning the completion of the form. Following are interpretations that have been provided by the national office to assist Division I member institutions in completing the report:

1. Form 87-6 must be completed in its entirety by any institution classified as a member of Division I on October 1, 1987, even if the institution was classified in a different division prior to that time.

For Division I institutions that have classified a single men's sport (and/or a single women's sport) in Division II or Division III in accordance with the provisions of Bylaw 10-3, the academic-reporting requirements do not apply to student-athletes participating only in a sport so classified.

Similarly, Division II or Division III institutions that conduct a single men's sport (and/or a single women's sport) in Division I need not submit a report for purposes of Bylaw 5-6(e).

2. Throughout Form 87-6, the term "entering freshmen" refers to individuals who enrolled initially and were classified by the certifying institution as first-time freshmen during the year in question. Individuals who entered the institution after the fall term during an academic year would be included, if the institution considered those individuals first-time freshmen.

3. Throughout the form, information should be reported only for those students considered by the institution to be enrolled in a full-time program of studies. In addition, in questions pertaining solely to student-athletes, information should be reported for those student-athletes recruited per O.I. 100 (page 53, 1987-88 NCAA Manual.)

4. The form's glossary defines "satisfactory progress" by listing criteria in three areas (i.e., degree progress, institutional progress and NCAA progress). A student-athlete must meet all three criteria to comply with satisfactory-progress requirements.

5. In Item No. 2, student-athletes are included in the total if they were recruited per O.I. 100 and were in attendance at the institution on the first day of class.

Please note that recruited student-athletes who attended the institution should be included even if they did not participate in intercollegiate athletics. Recruited student-athletes would not be included if they attended practice but left the institution before the beginning of the term.

6. Item No. 5 requests both "core" and overall grade-point averages for entering recruited student-athletes in football and men's basketball for the 1986-87 academic year. Please note that if the reporting institution does not require an overall grade-point average for admissions purposes and the information is not included on a particular individual's official high school transcript, the line for "GPA Overall" should be left blank.

7. In the same item (i.e., No. 5), the "core" grade-point average should be reported on a 4.000 scale; however, if an individual fails to meet the core-curriculum requirement due to the number or distribution of core classes attempted, the line for "GPA Core" should be left blank and a note should explain the omission.

8. Please note that the graduation rates in Item Nos. 8 and 9 include only those students who entered the institution as first-time freshmen and not as transfer students. This calculation reflects a change in the information requested by NCAA Bylaw 5-6(e)-4.

In addition, this year's form does not include the option to estimate the institutional graduation rate. Accordingly, reporting institutions should submit graduation rates based on reliable data.

9. The information concerning classification of multisport participants in Item Nos. 11 and 12 applies also to Item Nos. 6 and 7.

Completed academic-reporting forms, signed by the institution's chief executive officer, must be received in the NCAA national office no later than October 1, 1987. Any form received after that date must have been postmarked no later than September 23. Failure to return a properly completed form by the deadline will render the institution ineligible to enter a team or individual competitors in an NCAA-sponsored meet or tournament during the 1987-88 academic year.

Questions concerning the annual Division I academic-reporting requirement should be directed to John H. Leavens, director of compliance services, at the national office.

teurism has begun its study of such issues, and that work should be allowed to evolve before attempts are made to alter the Association's legislation in those areas.

- The Council will sponsor an amendment in January to strengthen the satisfactory-progress rule by requiring Divisions I and II institutions to certify eligibility under that legislation annually in all sports, at the beginning of the fall term.

In addition, the Academic Requirements Committee will be asked to review the concept of term-to-term eligibility certification, in addition to year-to-year, and to propose legislation in that regard if warranted.

- In response to a recommendation by the Committee on Review and Planning, the Council authorized the Administrative Committee to appoint a subcommittee of the Council to study the issue of opportunities for minorities, especially Blacks, in coaching, athletics management, officiating, the NCAA governance structure, and conference and NCAA staffs.

That subcommittee also is to consider means of developing minority talent for the future. It will be authorized to use consultants as needed.

- The Council approved a number of steps proposed by the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification in its efforts to revise the NCAA Manual. Included was a timetable calling for the complete revision to be sent to the membership in the fall of 1988 for action at the January 1989 Convention.

In addition, the special Committee proposed and the Council approved several minor amendments for action at the 1988 Convention, as well as several revisions of cases in the Manual's case book.

- The Council and the division steering committees elected 12 new NCAA members. When those and several earlier membership actions all become effective (September 1), the Association's total membership will exceed 1,000 for the first time.

A complete listing of all voting actions in the August 12-14 Council meeting will appear in the September 2 issue of The NCAA News.

Top labs ensure reliability of NCAA drug tests

By B. Gibson Smith
The NCAA News Staff

The collection of specimens for NCAA drug testing has taken place at sites all across the country in the last year. Discussion of the program occurs in even more locales.

But the process culminates at only three locations—the laboratories that are certified for NCAA testing.

One such laboratory, the University of Quebec's National Institute for Scientific Research-Health (INRS-Sante), recently moved to expanded facilities in Pointe-Claire, Quebec, from which Robert Dugal and his staff hope to serve better the needs of the Association's testing program.

After renting cramped space in a psychiatric facility for 15 years, the laboratory now boasts state-of-the-art equipment and some 27,000 square feet of lab space.

Members of the Special Postseason Drug-Testing Committee, meeting recently in Montreal, were impressed with what they saw at INRS-Sante.

"They have taken advantage of all the knowledge gained in this field in recent years and have designed the facility to best utilize that knowledge," said John L. Toner, committee chair. "No one on the committee was more impressed with what they saw than the members with medical backgrounds."

Dugal earned praise from the committee both for his efforts as a consultant and for the standards of his laboratory, and responded to the committee's plaudits with a positive evaluation of the NCAA program's first year of operation.

"My perception is that the work done by the NCAA in a short amount of time is tremendous," he said.

"I have enjoyed working with NCAA committee members and staff," he said. "Based on my international experience, this is one of the best thought-out and managed programs in sports."

The NCAA's three certified laboratories—which also include the Paul Ziffren Olympic Analytical Laboratory at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the laboratory at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis—have been relied upon heavily since the drug-testing program began last fall.

Beginning with the Division I cross country championships last November, the laboratories have processed over 3,500 specimens collected at NCAA championships and bowl games.

The procedure includes receiving samples from testing sites according to a stringent chain-of-custody protocol, performing the actual chemical analysis and reporting the results to the NCAA national office.

The drug-testing committee also encourages member institutions to utilize the accredited labs for testing on the institutional and conference levels.

"In addition to the technical excellence of the administration and the staff, the committee and the membership have enjoyed a close relationship with these laboratories," Toner said. "We have felt like they are working with us as well as for us."

The first step toward NCAA certification is for laboratories to be accredited by the International Olympic Committee. There are 11 facilities with such accreditation, which must be renewed every two years.

Linda Bouffard of the University of Quebec's National Institute for Scientific Research-Health

"The International Olympic Committee and the U.S. Olympic Committee have given us a head start in this area," Toner said. "We've been able to immediately associate ourselves with the highest-caliber laboratories in this hemisphere."

The Olympics were actually at the root of the development of laboratories specializing in sports testing. "When I was a young researcher in 1973, there was almost no funding for this work," Dugal said. "We proposed a plan to the Montreal Olympic Committee for testing at the 1976 Games, and six months later we had a million dollars for equipment, the training of our staff and the development of a drug-testing system for the Games. That was our start."

The Quebec facility was chosen to serve the same function at the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, New York. Dugal and his staff moved the entire laboratory across the border to provide testing of athletes.

In the same way, the laboratory at UCLA grew to meet the needs of the 1984 Los Angeles Games and continues to work closely with the Olympic movement.

The Indianapolis facility is currently occupied with its own responsibilities in international competition, supervising the testing of athletes at the Pan American Games.

It was the last incarnation of the Pan American Games, at Caracas, Venezuela, in 1983, that helped spark the current concern over performance-enhancing drugs.

"The scandal over steroids at Caracas made a lot of people, and many governments, aware of the potential for problems," Dugal said.

Experience in large-scale amateur competition also has taught testing laboratories about the necessity for automation, Dugal said. Streamlined procedures enabled INRS to analyze some 350 specimens with a turnaround of three days or less during the two weeks last December that preceded NCAA-certified bowl play.

Don H. Catlin, director of the UCLA lab, sees a promising future for the Association's program.

"The NCAA has the opportunity to be a leader in this field," he said. "Not only is there a large, large number of athletes tested on the championship level, but the NCAA's influence on its colleges and universities is likely to be a major factor in the direction of drug testing in years to come."

Team drug penalties on hold until '89

Team-ineligibility sanctions for positive tests resulting from the NCAA drug-testing program will be suspended until at least the January 1989 Convention, the Executive Committee has decided.

However, team sanctions will be applied in cases when a student-athlete is declared ineligible prior to an NCAA team championship or certified postseason football game and the institution knowingly allows that individual to participate.

The action was taken by the committee at its August 10-11 meeting to allow time for a comprehensive analysis of all issues relating to the application of team- and individual-ineligibility sanctions. Committee members believe their action provides member institutions with an opportunity to discuss more fully the many serious and far-reaching concerns that have been raised regarding team sanctions.

Among those concerns are possible inconsistencies in the application of sanctions for drug testing compared with actions taken for such reasons as academics or professionalization; institutions' accessibility to adequate testing facilities and funding for tests; rapidly changing drug-testing technologies, and possible inequities in applying sanctions to schools participating in certified postseason football bowl games, where receipts are not controlled by the Association as they are in NCAA championships.

A recent survey of athletics directors at member institutions revealed a lack of support for team sanctions in the face of these concerns, except in situations where an institution knowingly allows a student-athlete who has tested positive to participate in NCAA competition. The survey was conducted by an Executive Committee subcommittee that was appointed to review team-ineligibility sanctions.

The Executive Committee hopes its action will encourage a "thorough, thoughtful review" of these issues before further action is taken.

The committee voted:

"That the application of all executive regulations pertaining to team ineligibility sanctions for positive tests resulting from the NCAA drug-testing program be suspended from September 1, 1987, until at least the January 1989 Convention, except in the following situation: If a student-athlete is declared ineligible prior to an NCAA team championship and the institution knowingly allows him or her to participate, all team-ineligibility sanctions shall apply (i.e., the team shall be required to forfeit its awards and any net receipts it may have earned, and the team's and the student-athlete's performance shall be deleted from NCAA records). In the case of certified postseason football games, the team's and student-athlete's performance shall be deleted from NCAA records.

"In the interim between September 1, 1987, and the January 1989 Convention, it is proposed that a comprehensive analysis of all issues related to the application of team- and individual-ineligibility sanctions be undertaken, including (but not limited to) the application of sanctions for other reasons of ineligibility (e.g., academic, professionalization); the return of net receipts (or other financial penalty) from postseason football games; funding of institutions' and/or conferences' in-season or postseason drug-testing efforts, and the total regulatory role of the Association relative to the drug-testing program.

In another action relating to drug testing, the committee decided not to support testing of officials in NCAA championships, at least for now. Committee members noted that such testing does not appear to be necessary or desirable.

Comment

More recruits are meeting academic requirements

Proposition 48 appears to be having less negative effect than a year ago on the eligibility of incoming freshman student-athletes at NCAA institutions, but some claim that progress in meeting academic requirements for athletics eligibility seems to be slow.

Last year, reports said that approximately nine percent of Division I football recruits and 13 percent of basketball recruits were not allowed to play or practice with their teams during their freshman seasons because of failure to meet Proposition 48 requirements.

A survey of 16 major Midwestern basketball programs this year showed that nine of 54 recruits will miss their freshman season, compared with 11 of 46 last year.

This year, a Chicago Tribune survey shows that football recruits are doing better than those in basketball.

At the University of Oklahoma, only two of 30 recruits failed to meet requirements. Last year, there were 11 of 23 sitting it out. At the University of Pittsburgh, three of 29 failed this year compared to eight of 18 last season.

In the Southwest Athletic Conference, eight schools had 23 ineligible recruits last year. This year, there were only 13.

Complete final figures on this year's recruiting class are not available, but Richard Lapchick, director of Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society, told the Tribune, "If I had to make a prediction, I'd have to say it will probably be 10 percent better." The early figures, however, indicate a higher percentage.

Some college athletics observers credit the use of preparation courses for SAT and ACT with providing the improvement.

Larry Hawkins, president of the Institute for Athletics and Education and director of the University of Chicago's Office of Special Programs, has provided test preparation at the institute he founded since 1972.

"Tests provide information to show a student where he or she can improve, where the problems are," Hawkins said. "To focus on them as an end simply because of Proposition 48 is a bit narrow."

"To change these scores takes time and concentrated effort, and support at home and at school. It's not a magical situation. It requires dedication and hard work, and we have to have time. Ideally, we want to deal with kids a year ahead of time."

Many athletes are beginning to prepare earlier, and that is why proponents of the rule have argued all along that athletes would start meeting Proposition 48 requirements at an increasing rate.

DePaul University head men's basketball coach Joey Meyer said, "I think it's going to get better every year, because it's really sinking in at the high schools that they have to do better."

Comment about Division III unfair

To the Editor:

I take exception to Mr. Rosado's foolish implication (The NCAA News Letter to the Editor, July 22, 1987) that Division III is a place for "mediocrity in athletics."

While there may be institutions in all divisions that work for mediocrity, it is wrong to apply that definition to those institutions just because they choose to compete in Division III.

Performance bond of no real help

To the Editor:

I read with some concern an article in the July 22, 1987, issue of The NCAA News entitled "$1 million performance bond suggested for sports agents." In it, sports agent Jim Abernethy suggests that the requirement of a $1 million performance bond would weed out the unscrupulous agents preying upon student-athletes. He goes on to impute the integrity of many good people by arguing that only those persons who can afford such a bond are "serious agents." (I assume "serious" means honest.) Both of Mr.

Among other things, Walters fills a need

By Ron Rapoport
Chicago Sun-Times
Excerpted from a column

With little more than the judicious use of some relatively paltry sums of money, (sports agent Norby) Walters has managed to show big-time college athletics for what it is. And unless I miss my guess, he has that world frightened in a way no recruiting scandal ever could.

But the most important aspect of Walters' handiwork does not have

"It's just a loan. You can pay me back. Do it. They're doing it. They're making money off you. Why shouldn't you make money off you?"

to do with the number of athletes he has suborned, or with the prestige of the schools implicated, but rather with how cheaply he was able to accomplish his ends.

Walters never pays anything close to what the top college athletes can get from the pros.

So why do the athletes do it? The answer is simplicity itself. It is the NCAA's institutionalized hypocrisy that gives Walters an argument big enough to drive his checkbook through. It is the system that allows everybody connected with college sports to chase after every dollar that isn't nailed down as long as he can prove he didn't actually play the games that created the money in the first place.

It is not hard to imagine what Walters tells the athletes he wants to sign.

"How much money did your coach make last year?" he probably asks them. "How much in salary and how much from his radio and television shows and how much giving lectures and how much from his summer camp and how much from making you wear a certain brand of shoe?"

"How much did the athletics department make off what you and your teammates did? How much from ticket sales and how much from television and radio and how much from luxury-box sales and how much from that bowl game you went to and how much from concessions and parking and booster club donations from alumni?"

"How much did your school make? How much in free publicity and how much in increased public awareness and how much in greater admission applications from impressionable high school seniors?"

"And what did you get? A schol-

Former Ohio State track great serves U.S. with distinction

By Dick Kishpaugh

The election of Mal Whitfield to Ohio State University's Sports Hall of Fame in 1978 recognized his outstanding achievements in both NCAA and Olympic track competition from 1946 to 1952.

But today, the achievements extend far beyond the field of athletic competition, for he is at the peak of a long and distinguished career of service to his country. Whitfield took advantage of the recognition provided to him as an outstanding student-athlete to help launch a noteworthy career.

He currently is the sports affairs officer for the United States Information Agency in Nairobi, Kenya—a post that covers all of sub-Saharan Africa, with the exception of South Africa, and thus requires extensive travel throughout the continent. As a good-will contribution by the United States, he provided major assistance to the All-Africa Games, which were just completed in Nairobi.

Whitfield graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School in Los Angeles in 1943, after an outstanding career as a prep middle-distance runner. He became a B-25 tailgunner in the Air Force, serving in the Pacific and in Asia, remaining in military service until 1952.

Assignment in 1946 to Lockbourne Air Force Base near Columbus, Ohio, provided the opportunity to enroll at Ohio State, where his boyhood idol, Jesse Owens, became one of his sponsors. That was the start of dual representation of the university and the Air Force in world-class athletic competition. He won four letters in track at Ohio State, was a Big Ten Conference and NCAA champion in middle-distance events, and was the Buckeye track captain in his 1949 senior season.

In London in 1948, Whitfield set an Olympic record in the 800 meters and anchored the winning 1,600-meter relay team. Four years later, at Helsinki, he repeated as Olympic 800-meter champion. He also won three gold medals in the 1951 Pan American Games and was the winner of the coveted Sullivan Award in 1954 as the outstanding amateur athlete in the United States.

Whitfield became a civilian Air Force contract specialist in 1953 and became a foreign-service officer in 1963. This year, he is completing 34 years of foreign service, during which time he has visited 115 countries. Most of his foreign service has been in Africa, with previous posts in Nigeria, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Ethiopia and Somali. He's contemplating retirement in 1988.

Assisting with the 1987 All-Africa Games may have been one of the toughest assignments of Mal's career. Travel distances, logistics, political considerations and facility problems all have contributed to postponement or cancellation of similar continent-wide proposals in past years.

But with the help of the United States and several other non-African countries, Kenya accepted the challenge. Nyayo Stadium, seating 40,000, is located in Nairobi; and the 60,000-seat Kasarani Sports Complex, a gift from the People's Republic of China, has been erected near the city. Whitfield was heavily involved in the use of these facilities and with the arrangements for several thousand athletes from nearly 50 participating countries.

Since recent college graduates are prime candidates for the Peace Corps, Whitfield's observations on the work of that agency in Africa should interest American collegians.

In Kenya, for example, Mal notes that prior to colonial days, indigenous sports were a source of pride to the outlying villages and were a means of stimulating sociability and understanding among different groups. But colonial governments and missionaries discouraged such gatherings, with the loss of those social benefits. In some areas, in fact, such contacts were restricted to just one "games day" per year.

When Kenya gained independence in the early 1960s, the Peace Corps appeared on the scene, bringing an influx of staff members with recent exposure to college basketball. They popularized that sport in Kenya and restored the friendly competition and subsequent social benefits.

In Whitfield's words, Kenyans took to basketball as a duck takes to water, and basketball now is the fastest-growing sport in East Africa. He points out that native Kenyans, living close to nature, have long imitated the movements of animals and birds, and these same graceful motions are reflected in this sport.

American collegians who are considering service in the Peace Corps, particularly in Africa, would find it worthwhile to include basketball manuals when they head overseas. And those who look for role models to follow should consider the career of Mal Whitfield, who as a collegian, an Olympian and a good-will ambassador has served his country with distinction.

Ross tells NFL he'll cut access to players

In an effort to keep NFL scouts from selling information about his players to sports agents, Georgia Tech head football coach Bobby Ross is restricting the access scouts have to his players.

Ross wrote to all 28 NFL teams recently to outline the new policy.

Sports agents Lloyd Bloom and Norby Walters, whose policy of putting undergraduates under contract is being investigated by a Federal grand jury in Chicago, have said they paid some NFL scouts for information about prospects.

Gil Brandt, vice-president of the Dallas Cowboys, said Ross' letter told the scouts, "Please do not visit any of our players. Please do not enter the locker room. I want to emphasize that if you do visit, any information that is gathered is confidential and is to remain only in your organization."

"It's an offshoot of the Bloom thing," Brandt told the Associated Press. "It's disturbing because Bobby Ross, for example, is one of the great people of all time for the NFL and NFL scouts."

"It's the first time I've ever sent anything out to the clubs," Ross said. "I don't know if it's a drastic change. I still plan on being pretty cooperative. But because of some of the things that have been reported, we wanted to spell it out."

Ross said he does not like the idea of scouts' selling information to agents or opposing teams.

"The people I have dealt with, it's always been a professional-type relationship," he said. "But as it relates to agents, and anybody we play on the schedule, I want that information strictly confidential. It has been pointed out that some scouts are selling it. I believe it is a small percentage, but that is enough to cause concern."

arship? Nice, if you graduate. Room and board? Laundry? A few trips? Dreams of a career in professional sports? Swell, about what you would have received if you'd joined the Army, isn't it? But what will any of it buy you? What is any of it worth in relation to what other people—the same people who tell you it's illegal to take a dime—are getting?

"Here's a couple of thousand dollars. Buy a car. Buy some clothes. Take your girlfriend out on the town. Send some money home to your mother. Sign here. It's just a loan. You can pay me back. Do it. They're doing it. They're making money off you. Why shouldn't you make money off you?"

Norby Walters may be a bum. He may be all those other things people say about him.

But he is one other thing as well. He is a businessman who is filling a need.

Women officials favor drug tests

An informal poll of the membership of the Council of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators shows a high percentage in favor of NCAA drug testing (74 percent) but less enthusiasm for institutional testing (56 percent).

Respondents showed overwhelming support (86 percent) for disqualification of individuals testing positive for use of banned drugs, but they strongly opposed (86 percent) team disqualification when a team member fails a drug test. Forfeiture of championship receipts by a team that has a member who tested positive was opposed (68 percent).

The poll was the first conducted by the CCWAA, which has announced it will conduct quarterly polls of its membership on various athletics issues.

Abernethy's suggestions, while probably well-intentioned, are wrong.

The first false premise is that unscrupulous agents cannot afford a $1 million performance bond. On the contrary, there is at least one well-heeled agent whose activities recently have subjected him to a grand jury investigation and substantial notoriety. I don't think anyone would suggest that he could not afford to post a $1 million performance bond and continue his practices. Furthermore, it is precisely those agents who have money who entice the athletes with cash and gifts.

The second false premise is that only those agents who are wealthy enough to afford a $1 million bond have integrity. Finding an agent who has more money in his pocket than another does not mean you have found the more competent or honest agent. To suggest otherwise is absurd.

As long as a college athlete can enter a supplemental draft if his eligibility is terminated due to improper conduct, the improprieties will continue. Coordination with the NFL and other professional sports leagues is essential if the NCAA rules are to be enforced.

Keep press guides as they are

To the Editor:

I read with interest the recommendation of the Communications Committee concerning the use of two colors in media guides.

Our institution will realize an annual savings of more than $20,000 by limiting the interior of media guides and recruiting books to one color.

I am opposed to changing this piece of legislation for two reasons. First, the increase in costs may be slight, but it is an increase. Second, what about those institutions that have three school colors? Do they get three colors inside?

Media guides are designed to provide information to the media. Granted, they are used in recruiting, but let's make them as simple as possible and use them to inform.

image—the doors are shut to nonwhites. As Lee McElroy, the University of Houston's Black associate athletics director, put it, it's a 'sad commentary on this business' that racial prejudice is still evident in sports in which minority participants often are in the majority.

"It is illogical to assert that minorities can excel as athletes but virtually none of them have the capability to go beyond that and impart their knowledge to the next generation of football, baseball, basketball players and track stars.

"Surely, if those in a position to hire coaches and athletics directors would make competence the question, and not how well an applicant may appeal to alums or fit into the 'good-old-boy network,' then this indefensible state of affairs finally would end."

"Informed citizens should beware of NEA propaganda dressed up as serious research. The unions have a vested interest in promoting a crisis mentality with regard to teacher supply: The message is that governments should throw fistfuls of money at the problem of filling all those empty classroom teaching positions.

"In reality, more objective researchers have failed to find hard evidence that any serious shortage of teachers either exists or is likely to develop within the next 10 years. Just about everyone agrees that there are 'spot' shortages in certain geographical regions and in certain academic subjects.

"But as for a universal 'crisis,' a comment by Dorothy M. Gilford, study director for the National Academy of Sciences' committee on national statistics, provides needed perspective: 'There are 16,000 different situations,' she's said of the teacher supply situation, 'and it's fair to say that no two are alike.'

"A recent academy report concluded that discrepancies in data collection from state to state make it difficult for anyone to draw absolute conclusions about teacher supply."

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

1. Reviewed the provisions of Case No. 287 defining collegiate competition and agreed that such competition would include any athletics event that is open only to collegiate competitors or involves individuals or teams from collegiate institutions participating in competition to score points for their respective institutions; agreed that for purposes of this interpretation, collegiate competition would encompass all individual events within a particular collegiate meet, which in turn would include any "open" event in the meet that might involve noncollegiate competitors; noted that an exception to this interpretation may be necessary for national championship events sponsored by the national governing bodies in certain sports; suggested that this issue be reviewed further through the legislative services conference contact program.

2. Agreed that members of an institution's intercollegiate team are permitted to travel to away-from-home athletics contests in their regular institutional warm-up uniforms, provided these uniforms were previously issued for physical practice activities or competition and do not represent supplementary travel apparel.

3. Reviewed the application of Case No. 128 in regard to a member institution providing athletically related financial aid to a student-athlete who was drafted by a professional baseball team and who wishes to participate in another sport on the intercollegiate level; agreed that prior to receipt of the athletically related financial aid, the student would be required per Case No. 128 to indicate that he no longer is involved in professional athletics; further, recommended that Case No. 128 be revised to indicate that if the individual later becomes involved in professional athletics while still a student-athlete with remaining eligibility, the individual would be considered to have violated the principles of ethical conduct per Constitution 3-6-(a)-(1)-(iv) by knowingly furnishing the individual's institution with false or misleading information concerning the individual's involvement in or knowledge of a violation of an NCAA regulation, thus rendering the individual ineligible for intercollegiate competition; agreed that under such circumstances, the application of O.I. 11 permits the NCAA Eligibility Committee to restore the eligibility of the student involved in such a violation only when circumstances clearly warrant restoration.

4. Reviewed the application of Case No. 152 to a situation in which a member institution's volleyball coach has the opportunity to participate as a player in major-league professional volleyball; agreed that the institution must document adequately that the individual is in no way involved in the scouting or contacting of athletics talent, or the negotiating of contracts for such talent, and the member institution's coaching staff member may participate for only one year as a member of the professional volleyball team; recommended to the NCAA Council that Case No. 152 be amended to delete the reference requiring that such employment must be for a limited rather than an ongoing period and may not recur, thus permitting the member institution's staff member to participate on a yearly basis as a member of the professional volleyball team.

5. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(3) and Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and agreed that the application of these regulations would not preclude a member institution from providing an enrolled student-athlete or his or her former educational institution (e.g., high school) with an unframed photograph of the individual student-athlete.

6. Reviewed the application of Bylaw 1-9-(f) and O.I. 100 as they relate to a prospective student-athlete receiving complimentary admissions to a campus athletics event in which the institution's intercollegiate team competes, and agreed that a prospective student should be considered a prospective student-athlete upon receipt of an individual complimentary admission for purposes of O.I. 100, with the understanding that an individual may receive a complimentary admission as a member of a group visiting the campus (e.g., high school team, band) without being considered a prospective student-athlete; recommended to the Council that O.I. 100 be amended accordingly.

7. Considered Executive Regulation 1-4-(a) and agreed that the Eligibility Committee has initial responsibility in all appeals pertaining to restoration of eligibility of student-athletes who wish to participate in championship events; further, unless the committee's actions are appealed to the Council's Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals, such actions are final and represent full authority on the part of the committee.

8. Determined that under the provisions of Case Nos. 262 and 287, a student-athlete would be considered to have utilized a season of competition by participating in a foreign tour with an outside team if the tour subsequently must be counted as the institution's foreign-tour opportunity in that sport (because of the number of participants from the same institution), regardless of whether the provisions of Case No. 287 are applicable to such participation.

9. Affirmed that the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14), which indicate that a transfer student from a four-year college is not subject to the residence requirement for NCAA championships under certain specified conditions, may not be used by a student-athlete who is serving a residence requirement at one institution to attempt to qualify for a waiver upon transfer to another institution, inasmuch as this would circumvent the original residence requirement; recommended to the Council that legislation be introduced to confirm that the application of Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14) would be precluded under these circumstances.

10. Reviewed the application of Bylaws 6 and 10 and agreed that in the years prior to the initiation of a new intercollegiate sport, an institution is permitted to award athletically related financial aid to student-athletes in that sport, with the understanding that the institution must comply with the numerical limitations (initial and overall limits) of Bylaw 6-5 for that particular sport; agreed that the institution must demonstrate compliance with the applicable regulations for a period of two years preceding the initiation (or reinstatement) of the sport in question.

11. Agreed that the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) [extra-benefit rule] prohibit an institution from purchasing campus parking spaces for student-athletes.

12. Determined that NCAA regulations would not preclude an institutional promotion in which an individual, selected through a random drawing, wins a sum of money based on the number of points scored by the institution's intercollegiate team; agreed that all individuals attending the contest would be eligible to receive such a prize except for those student-athletes from the host institution and any prospective student-athletes (individuals who have begun the ninth grade or are 15 years or older, whichever comes first).

13. Reviewed the application of Case No. 184 to a situation in which a member institution's athletics booster organization wishes to purchase an advertisement in a high school football program congratulating the institution's intercollegiate team, and agreed that Case No. 184 would prohibit such an arrangement by a member institution or its athletics representatives.

14. Agreed that any financial assistance received by a student-athlete who is enrolled in one of the U.S. military academies does not constitute athletically related financial assistance for purposes of Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14), inasmuch as the students of the military academies receive such aid pursuant to their military-service contracts following appointment to the institutions, and the aid received is in no way based on athletic ability.

15. Determined that the provisions of Bylaw 3-5, which indicate that a member institution shall conduct all of its intercollegiate contests under the official playing rules of the Association in all sports for which the NCAA develops playing rules, would not apply to institutional scrimmages with outside competition.

16. Reviewed the application of Bylaw 6-1-(a) to a situation in which an institution does not provide a 21-meal plan for all of its students (i.e., institutional dining facilities are closed for the weekend), and determined that a member institution may provide its student-athletes receiving full athletically related financial aid with the cash equivalent (per Case No. 132) of the unavailable meals; referred to a future Legislation and Interpretations Committee agenda the issue of adjusting financial aid for meals provided to student-athletes in conjunction with home and away contests.

17. Confirmed the existing interpretation that participation (representing an institution per Case No. 287) in intercollegiate competition in the sport of indoor soccer would constitute "participation" for purposes of Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(1) in the sport of soccer.

18. (Division II) Recommended to the Council that Richard B. Yoder (West Chester University of Pennsylvania) be selected to replace Ade L. Sponberg as the Division II Council representative on the Legislation and Interpretations Committee.

19. (Division I) Reviewed 1987 NCAA special Convention Proposal No. 28-D indicating that effective August 1, 1988, no more than six full-time assistant coaches may be employed by each institution in Division I-AA football and agreed that those member institutions with seven full-time assistant coaches in Division I-AA football are required to eliminate (by August 1, 1988) one of the full-time assistant coaching positions unless written employment commitments (in effect by June 30, 1987) prevent compliance.

Bowl shifts date

The All American Bowl has announced that it is returning to a pre-Christmas date and has lined up a television network to replace Turner Broadcasting System.

The postseason football game will be played at 7 p.m. Central time December 22 and will be televised by Raycom Sports.

The last two All American Bowl games were held on New Year's Eve at the request of TBS, which did not to renew its contract.

Starting salary for teachers up 7.1 percent

The average starting salary for school teachers rose 7.1 percent for the past year to $17,800, with six states offering more than $19,000 to beginners, according to the American Federation of Teachers.

The increase for the 1986-87 school year over 1985-86 was larger than the average raise of 5.7 percent for all public school teachers, the union said at the start of a conference to discuss changes in education, the Associated Press reported.

The federation estimated that the average salary for all teachers in 1986-87 was $26,698. That is $6 less than the $26,704 that its rival union, the National Education Association, listed in a salary report made public May 27. The education association's data did not include starting salary figures.

The federation said the current salaries were the highest ever, even when adjusted to account for inflation. The previous high was in the 1971-72 school year when teachers earned an average of $26,296 in current dollars and the actual average salary, when not adjusted to take inflation into account, was $9,705.

The 660,000-member federation said the six states where starting salaries were above $19,000 for teachers were New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Alaska, California, and Texas. They were below $15,000 in seven states: Idaho, Iowa, Maine, Mississippi, Nebraska, South Dakota and Vermont.

Teachers' salaries in New York State averaged $32,000, to rank it No. 3 in the amount paid, with starting salaries averaging $19,669; Connecticut teachers' salaries averaged $29,860, to rank it No. 7, with starting teachers earning $19,444, and New Jersey teachers averaged $28,718, for No. 9 ranking, while starting teachers earned $19,100.

Alaska and South Dakota were the highest and lowest paying states, on average, for all teachers, even after adjusting salaries for regional differences in the cost of living, the federation said. Alaska paid teachers an average of $42,063, and South Dakota paid an average of $18,781.

The union's research was based on data from state education departments.

But the union, using a cost-of-living index developed by private forecasters, said Texas moved up to fifth from 22nd when salaries were adjusted to take this into account. With the cost of living taken into account, New York ranked No. 7, Connecticut No. 34 and New Jersey No. 36 in the average salary paid teachers.

NYSP goal is to help teach youngsters to be good sports

By Janet Caggiano
Richmond Times-Dispatch

Displaying good manners might sound simple enough, but that's the main theme hammered home each summer at the National Youth Sports Program at Virginia Union University.

"We want to modify behavior," said Joe Taylor, activities director for NYSP at Virginia Union. "But we want to help them (participants) become more disciplined and help them feel better about themselves. We want them to walk tall, talk tall and stand tall."

The program is targeted at underprivileged children 10 to 16 years old.

Seven activities — swimming, basketball, modern dance, football, track and field, tennis, and gymnastics — make up NYSP, and NCAA-sponsored project. Taylor said about 80 percent of the time is devoted to instruction of skills, and 20 percent goes to recreation. An "enrichment program," designed to teach children about health issues, also is offered.

"These kids have so much to learn other than swimming and gym," said Howard Hopkins, enrichment coordinator. "These things are obviously not being taught at home because there are many youngsters who don't have proper manners, etiquette or language. They are victims of their environment."

Southern Cal coach and player are reprimanded

The NCAA men's tennis subcommittee has publicly reprimanded University of Southern California head coach Dick Leach and student-athlete Rick Leach for their actions during the 1987 NCAA Division I Men's Tennis Championships. Also included in the subcommittee's action was a partial withholding of the institution's transportation and per diem reimbursement from the NCAA.

"In reviewing the incident, the subcommittee recognized a tradition of exemplary behavior in the past by both Dick and Rick and also determined that there was a certain level of provocation from a very few spectators," said Jeff Frank, subcommittee chair and men's tennis coach at Davidson College. "However, the subcommittee does not condone their actions and comments immediately following Rick's third-round singles loss or subsequent public statements made by his father. It believes their behavior was highly inappropriate. Their concerns should have been addressed through other channels."

Frank said the subcommittee shared some of the Leaches' concerns with crowd behavior at the championships, which have been held in Athens, Georgia, since 1977, and that tournament officials have been asked to implement specific steps for the 1988 tournament.

The Leaches verbally abused and threatened spectators following Rick Leach's loss in the singles championship.

The men's tennis subcommittee's actions were taken in June; however, Southern California appealed those actions to the NCAA Executive Committee. The Executive Committee reviewed the incident and voted to sustain the tennis subcommittee's action during its August 10-11 meeting. The subcommittee was instructed to develop a comprehensive crowd-control plan relating to both spectators and participants.

"Our goal is to provide topics for all youngsters of day-to-day activities that they can learn from. We want to teach things to enrich their future lives."

Hopkins, who teaches physical education at John Marshall, said such topics as hygiene, nutrition, drugs, peer pressure and teen pregnancy are discussed. Each of the 490 students must attend such classes for about one hour each day.

"[NYSP] is aimed at those who may not have the opportunity of those who have a better income," Taylor said. "The parents look at us as babysitters, and the city manager looks at us as crime fighters. But the program is for those who would not get the opportunity to experience the skills and experience of a college campus... a chance to find out that life can be better than what goes on in their neighborhood.

"Some will go on to college when before, that was the farthest thing from their minds. Certainly, we are not going to solve all the problems of the world. But these kids are hungry for leadership and advice. If they know what to do and how to do it, they will be better people."

Even though the program is Federally funded, Taylor said NYSP needs more help. The cost of such a program is about $147,000 a year, but the grant is only $46,000. Volunteers make up the difference.

"If it were not for them (volunteers), we would be in real trouble," Taylor says. "A lot of effort went into this—and it is good—but it could be even better. If people would realize how important the program is and make a collective effort, things would be much easier."

Yvette Williams, a rising sophomore at Virginia Union, participated in NYSP for five years before returning as a gymnastics instructor for the program. Today, she teaches modern dance.

"I just love the whole, entire program," Williams said. "It keeps the kids out of trouble—I know it kept me busy and off the street."

When the program ends this summer, Hopkins can only hope his pupils will stay away from trouble.

Hopkins told his class, "We hope what we've taught will carry weight so you won't do things you are not supposed to do."

"I could go on and on and name the problems you will encounter. You will have to make a commitment not to be involved in them. We hope we have helped you to prepare for that... but we can't make the decision for you."

Hopkins admits that his lectures are not always heard.

"Sometimes, I don't think they hear me at all, but what I'm doing is worth it 10 times over," he said. "There are other things I could do, but I like this because I feel I'm contributing to someone who is reaching a turning point in his or her life."

And such contributions are working, Taylor said.

"(If it weren't for the program) they'd be somewhere as a statistic or wasting time," he said. "We have enough youngsters in jail already."

"Over 50 percent have been in the program before. In other words, they are coming back. I don't think they would if they were not benefiting from the program. I know we are touching them in a special way."

Southern Cal enjoys record year, raises $5.7 million for athletics

By Jim Perry

The University of Southern California will celebrate its football centennial in 1988; but in the athletics department, the celebrating has already begun.

In the past fiscal year, Southern Cal raised nearly $5.8 million ($5,793,212 to be exact) for athletics, the most successful fund-raising season in the university's athletics history and nearly $900,000 more than the previous record. In 1984-85, when the school last went to the Rose Bowl, Southern Cal raised $4.9 million for athletics.

The remarkable success in 1986-87 was almost $2 million more than the non-Rose Bowl year, 1985-86, when USC raised $3.85 million. Faced with high tuition costs, the school has a budget for men's and women's athletics of around $14 million.

What led to the big fund-raising year?

"We have two main goals in the athletics department," said athletics director Michael B. McGee. "We want to give our athletes the finest education possible, and we want to field the most competitive teams we can. And I think the new leadership in football, basketball and baseball and the department's strong focus on academic programming for athletes have given Trojans everywhere a sense of confidence and rejuvenated their interest."

One of the more impressive examples of renewed donor support this past year was the growth in Cardinal and Gold, the athletics department's primary support group that has a $1,500 annual membership fee. The group increased by 120 new members.

In the past year, donors also have pledged $250,000 for each of 12 positions on the football team under the school's innovative plan to raise that amount for 24 positions (in-

Bluebonnet gets financial boost

The Houston Sports Association has retired more than $250,000 in debts belonging to the Bluebonnet Bowl and will host the New Year's Eve game in the Astrodome for at least the next 10 years, Bluebonnet Bowl president Jim McConn has announced.

The HSA, which operates the Astrodome, also will have an option to extend the agreement for an additional five-year period.

"I want to make it clear that the HSA has cleared our debts so that we can continue this lengthy association," McConn said.

The 1986 Bluebonnet Bowl was played at Rice Stadium and drew only 36,500 fans for the afternoon game, well below the break-even point.

McConn said the financially strapped Bluebonnet Bowl is continuing to seek a corporate sponsor and anticipates making an announcement soon.

"We think we're close to a three-year arrangement with a major U.S. corporation that could come within the next 10 days," McConn said August 10.

Baylor, defeated Colorado 21-9 in last year's game, and both teams have been paid in full for their participation in the bowl game.

The Bluebonnet Bowl earlier announced a three-year television contract with a national television network.

cluding placekicker and punter). The money is invested by the university, with the yearly interest income going to pay for football scholarships.

It should be noted that the $5.8 million figure this past year is all cash. It doesn't count gifts of supplies, for example, or gifts of insurance policies.

McGee said that donors had made athletics the beneficiary of $10 million in insurance policies in the last academic year.

McGee also was pleased that the athletics department had balanced its budget for the first time since a year before the deregulation of college football television, which caused appearance fees and revenues to drop.

"It's very difficult to balance your budget these days, particularly for private schools," he said, "but our development staff—headed by Don Winston, Ron Orr, Craig Fertig and Mara Hunter—has worked tirelessly, and their efforts have been rewarded," McGee said.

Perry is a former member of the Southern Cal athletics department staff.

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q Of all the services and programs offered by the NCAA, which is the oldest?

A The formulation and publication of football rules unquestionably is the oldest service provided by the NCAA. In fact, the first Football Rules Committee was appointed by a group of 62 institutions convened on December 28, 1905, to reform the game of football.

A year and a day later, the Football Rules Committee made its first report to the first Convention of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association of the United States; and the IAAUS assumed publication of the Official Football Guide on the same day. A year later, the Basketball Rules Committee was formed; three years later, the Track and Field Rules Committee was authorized.

By 1913, three years after the IAAUS had changed its name to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, swimming and soccer rules committees had been appointed.

Today, the NCAA publishes rules for 13 different sports.
