Brazil to serve on Commission

John R. Brazil, president of South-eastern Massachusetts University, has been appointed to serve as a Division III representative on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

Brazil replaces Jerry C. Lee, who has resigned at Gallaudet University to return to private business. Commission Chair John B. Slaughter made the Commission appointment.

A graduate of Stanford University with a degree in history, Brazil earned a master's and a Ph.D. in American studies at Yale University, where he also served as a teaching fellow in English, history and American studies.

He served at San Jose State University from 1973 until he accepted the presidency at Southeastern Massachusetts in 1984.

In addition to moving from assistant professor to professor in American studies at San Jose State, he also was coordinator of the American studies program from 1976 to 1979, special assistant to the academic vice-president from 1979 to 1981, executive assistant to the president from 1981 to 1983, associate academic vice-president in 1983 and academic vice-president in 1983-84.

John R. Brazil

Brazil was a Fulbright Senior Scholar in English and American studies at the University of Sydney in 1980.

Public needs a truer picture of college sports, Schultz says

Guilt by association, in that rules violations by a few NCAA members cast shadows of doubt over the majority, is a major problem confronting intercollegiate athletics, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told two athletics organizations last week.

Schultz told an audience at the Indianapolis Athletic Club October 8 that one of his top priorities was to change the public's perception that intercollegiate athletics is fraught with recruiting problems and drugs.

"When most people think of intercollegiate athletics today," Schultz said, "they think of what they read in the newspapers or what they hear on television. Their first thought is that athletics really is in an identity and integrity crisis...that all is wrong in intercollegiate athletics: They have recruiting scandals...they have drug problems...they have mismanagement."

"Nothing can be further from the truth," Schultz said. "One of the big challenges of my job is to change the perception of intercollegiate athletics today, while at the same time challenging and solving the problems that do exist."

The Indianapolis speech was the second of two addresses by Schultz last week. He also spoke October 7 during the annual convention of the Eastern College Athletic Conference in Hyannis, Massachusetts.

Schultz told ECAC delegates that the NCAA should use its visibility with the public as a positive force, and he emphasized that an effort has to be made to restore the position of coaches and student-athletes as role models for the youth of the country.

"We need to take our visibility and use it to our advantage. Intercollegiate athletics has been scrutinized by many due to major issues such as drug use, recruiting violations, as well as academic violations, and agents negotiating with athletes and giving them cash advances before their eligibility is completed," Schultz said.

He said the Association is in need of "fine-tuning" rather than massive reform. He said the majority of institutions are not committing violations, but they are deemed guilty by association.

Athletics administrators have to make an effort to be action-oriented rather than reaction-oriented and strive to make an impact in providing opportunity for minorities and restoring coaches and athletes as role models, to bring integrity to athletics programs, he said.

Schultz said an effort to control recruiting is needed so that all institutions have a fair chance with young athletes.

Sports agents also were discussed.

"Agents are a serious problem, not just at the Division I level but at all levels. It's difficult because we can't legislate against the agent," Schultz said. He said state legislatures possibly could provide a solution through legislation and professional athletics organizations could be persuaded to bring pressure on unethical agent activities.

During his tenure, which began October 1, Schultz said he would like to see the positive aspects of college athletics emphasized. "Students are graduating from colleges and universities and making significant contributions to society," he said.

Presidents name Ryan as consultant on Forum

John W. Ryan, former president of Indiana University, and the first chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission, has agreed to serve as a consultant to the Commission, working primarily with its planning for the National Forum.

"John Ryan will play a major role in the directions we're pursuing," Commission Chair John B. Slaughter, University of Maryland, College Park, said in announcing the agreement late last week.

"He has agreed to help us with the planning, formulation and conduct of the National Forum; play a major role in directing the efforts of the research group; serve as an arm of the Ad Hoc Committee on the National Forum, and represent the Commission on a first-hand basis in interfacing with all of our communities in this effort," Slaughter said.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the National Forum, chaired by President Bernard F. Sliger of Florida State University, recommended in August that a former chief executive officer be retained to assist in the National Forum activities.

Slaughter emphasized that Ryan's assistance may extend to Commission activities other than the Forum but that the Forum is the major topic on the Commission's agenda at this point.

A native of Chicago, Ryan earned his bachelor's degree at the University of Utah and the master's and Ph.D. at Indiana University. He retired this year after 16 years as president of Indiana University. He served as chair of the Commission from the time of its formation in 1984 through the 1986 NCAA Convention.

Hearing set on drug-test restraining order

Witnesses for "all sides of the issue" will testify the week of October 12 before a California judge who has been asked to extend a temporary restraining order against the NCAA's championships drug-testing program, according to the Association's legal counsel.

"Oral arguments were heard September 29-30," said John J. Kitchin of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clarke and Kitchin, the NCAA's Kansas City, Missouri, legal counsel.

"The court now will hear evidence from all parties involved in this attempt to extend a temporary restraining order that prohibits the NCAA from requiring that consent to drug testing during championships be obtained from student-athletes."

The suit originally was filed by former Stanford diver Simone LeVant, who has since graduated.

Testifying on behalf of the Association will be Don Catlin, M.D., director of the Paul Ziffren Olympic Analytical Laboratory at the University of California, Los Angeles; Robert Dugal, M.D., director of the laboratory at the National Institute for Scientific Research, Montreal; Daniel Hanley, M.D., Bowdoin College, a past member of the Special NCAA Postseason Drug-Testing Committee; Judith R. Holland, senior associate athletics director at UCLA, and Robert Voy, M.D., of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Kitchin said Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Conrad Rushing, who granted the temporary restraining order August 26, will rule on the extension request following testimony from the individuals mentioned above and from parties representing Stanford University and student-athletes Barry McKeever and Jennifer Hill.

"The judge could take a few weeks to write an opinion, or he could issue a ruling from the bench after the testimony concludes," Kitchin noted.

Toughest football league? SEC likely winner again

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The Southeastern Conference, the leader four straight years and five times in the 1980s in the national nonconference rankings, seems certain to do it again this season, and this time by a comfortable margin.

A year ago, the Pacific-10 Conference held a narrow lead going into the bowls, but the Pac-10 was 3-3 in bowls while the SEC was 4-2, enabling the SEC to squeeze by, .696 to .686, for another unofficial championship.

Two years ago, the Big Ten Conference pushed the SEC to the wire, finishing at .727 (24-9) to the SEC's .755 (36-10-5). If that does not look close, consider that if just one of those nine losses had been a Big Ten victory, the Big Ten would have won at .758. Consider, too, that .755 and .727 are the two highest non-conference percentages of the entire decade. It was the Big Ten's best mark in 25 years.

This fall, no conference appears to have a chance of overtaking the SEC, unless it does an unbelievable downturn in its remaining games. However, the Eastern independents, an unofficial group of nine teams, hold a strong second place.

The SEC currently is 23-9-1 for .712 against outside Division I-A opponents, while the Eastern independents are 18-9 for .667. The Big Eight Conference is a distant third at 16-11 for .593, followed by the Big Ten at 15-12-3 for .550, the Pacific-10 17-15 for .531, the Atlantic Coast Conference 9-8 for .529, Southern independents 13-12-1 for .519, other independents (Notre Dame, Cincinnati, Akron, Northern Illinois, Tulsa and Southwestern Louisiana) 11-16-1 for .411, Southwest Athletic Conference 8-12 for .400, Western Athletic Conference 8-13 for .381, Mid-American Conference 4-12 for .250 and Pacific Coast Athletic Association 3-16 for .158.

1980s history

Executive Regulations

Editor's Note: The Executive Committee has adopted executive regulations consistent with the provisions of Constitution 6-3. Executive regulations may be amended at any annual or special Convention by a majority vote of the delegates present and voting in accordance with the procedures set forth in Bylaws 13-1, 13-2 and 13-3. Publication in this column of executive regulations adopted or revised by the Executive Committee constitutes official notice to the membership. Bold type indicates new wording; italicized type indicates wording removed.

Executive Regulations 1-9(c) and (d) were revised as follows:

(c) Gross receipts, as reported in the championship financial summary, shall be all revenues derived from the championship, including sale of tickets, program sales and advertising, radio rights, television rights, movie rights, and any other income derived from the operation of the championship except concessions and parking, which shall accrue to the host institution or sponsoring agency. However, a the host institution or sponsoring agency shall not include, in its the financial report or its percentage of net receipts, television rights fees or income from the sale of championship programs and merchandise, if the latter are produced and sold under contract between the NCAA and an outside agency, nor shall these revenues be included in determining the host institution's percentage of the net receipts. Income from program advertising or sales shall not be included in the host institution's or sponsoring agency's financial report or percentage of net receipts if the program is produced and sold under contract between the NCAA and an outside agency. The NCAA reserves the right to sell items developed through the NCAA marketing program at the site of the championship. Any exception to the above policies shall be approved in advance by the Executive Committee.

(1) All tickets shall be accounted for at face value and shall become a part of gross receipts. Working passes may be provided to bona fide working personnel, including media representatives; and participation passes may be provided to student-athletes competing in the meet or tournament, as well as to their coaches, athletics trainers, managers and other members of the participating institution's official party as defined by the Association.

(2) Net revenue from marketing items sold at the site of a championship through or by the host institution (as opposed to an outside agency) an outside agency under contract with the NCAA shall be included in the gross receipts of the championship financial summary. Sales commissions received by a host institution selling marketing items on behalf of an outside agency under contract with the NCAA shall accrue to the host institution and shall not be reported in its financial report.

(d) Gross receipts shall be used first to pay game expenses. Game expenses shall be those actual costs directly related to printing of tickets, ticket sellers, ticket takers, sales taxes, ushers, game officials, police, buildings and grounds expenses, printing of entry blanks and related material, motion pictures of the competition (if authorized by the Executive Committee), reasonable entertainment, expenses of selection committees authorized by the governing sports committee, games committee representatives of the governing sports committee, liability insurance coverage, and any other out-of-pocket expense directly related to the administration and conduct of the championship.

(1) The cost of permanent equipment, local transportation of competing teams and on-campus facility rental charges are not permissible items of game expense.

(2) Athletics department staff members of the host institution (e.g., athletics director, assistant athletics director, business manager, ticket manager, coach, sports information director, athletics trainer) may not be paid a fee or honorarium from receipts of an NCAA championship unless such payment is made from the host institution's share of the net receipts.

(3) Any exception to the foregoing policies shall be approved in advance by the Executive Committee.

Public

The cooperation and compliance with rules by NCAA member institutions would help improve the public image of college athletics, he said, adding that a solid set of checks and balances in the conferences would significantly enhance the effort toward integrity.

Because of the number of people involved, there is a considerable challenge facing college athletics, Schultz said. "The biggest challenge we face is the diversity in college sports. Division I has the greatest diversity, with school budgets ranging from $500,000 to $15 million.

"We need to make the Division II level more attractive to colleges rather than have it looked upon as a transition division for the Division I ranks. In Division III, we need to take a closer look at how financial aid is being administered, along with the admissions process of the schools," he said.

"Schools should not judge others at different levels for the stand they take on certain issues. Concurrently, schools should not aspire to be in divisions they cannot fit into philosophically. Each school is important at the level it represents."

Schultz also mentioned that he wants to see graduation rates of student-athletes improve, although they now are comparable nationally with those of regular students.

Still, a large segment of the public perceives the student-athlete as a nonstudent, Schultz said. An effort has to be made to improve graduation rates among athletes to dispel that misconception, he said.

Ex-coach honored

Colgate University has dedicated the Mark S. Randall Room in Lineberry Natatorium in honor of the former head coach of men's swimming for 20 years.

Made possible by the generosity of 50 former swimmers and friends, the room will serve as a team meeting area, video viewing room and physical education classroom.

Randall guided Colgate teams to 164 victories against 58 losses.

He is a 1933 graduate of Springfield College, where he was an all-America in soccer and lacrosse.

White named to new post

Alfred B. White has been named associate director of communications in the NCAA national office. White has been on the Association's staff since September 1983.

A 1979 graduate of Texas Tech University, White earned his undergraduate degree in broadcast media operations. Before joining the national office staff, he served three years as assistant sports information director at his alma mater and handled publicity for the school's football, basketball and baseball programs.

As assistant director of communications, White was involved with production of souvenir programs for NCAA championships, the promotion of women's athletics, media coordination at various championships sites and merchandising of officially licensed products.

In his new position, White will be involved with the promotion and merchandising of all Association championships, television research, the NCAA corporate sponsor program and other activities coordinated with Host Communications, Inc. He also will work with the recently appointed Special NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities.

Basketball's return at Tulane studied

A 16-member study committee has been appointed by Tulane University President Eamon M. Kelly to determine whether the university should revive the men's basketball program, dropped in April 1985 amid gambling and rules-violation scandals.

"The committee will be charged with making a judgment as to whether it is now the proper time and environment for the reinstatement of the men's program," Kelly said.

He said he hoped the committee's report will be ready by January, and its recommendation will be forwarded to the university senate and the board of administrators, the Associated Press reported.

The board "will make the final determination," he said.

Four months ago, the board of administrators approved a five-year plan designed to make the school nationally competitive in sports.

When Kelly recommended abolishing men's basketball in 1985, he said then coach Ned Fowler had admitted violating NCAA rules, including player payments. Fowler and his staff resigned.

John "Hot Rod" Williams, the team's outstanding center, and four other members of the basketball team were accused of shaving points—or manipulating the final score for gambling purposes—in two games that year.

Williams was acquitted of sports-bribery charges last summer.

Legislative Assistance

1987 Column No. 35

Practice limitations

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee considered a previous NCAA Council-approved interpretation (August 1987) stipulating that coaching staff members of a member institution are prohibited from engaging in out-of-season practice activities with enrolled student-athletes during the academic year, noting that this prohibition applies to any member of the coaching staff of the student-athlete's institution. The subcommittees concluded that the application of this interpretation would preclude a member institution's coach from being involved with enrolled student-athletes from the coach's institution during any U.S. Volleyball Association practice sessions and events conducted during the academic year, unless such activities occur within the institution's 26-week playing and practice season segments for the sport of volleyball.

Preseason practice

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee confirmed the current interpretation that the application of NCAA Case No. 245 (pages 371-372, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) would preclude a member of an institution's coaching staff from observing enrolled student-athletes in "pickup" basketball games between September 1 or the first day of classes and October 15. Further, the committee determined that observing such contests in any other period outside the permissible playing and practice seasons is prohibited.

NCAA Constitution 3-2(e)—athletics representative

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee reviewed the application of a previous committee interpretation (Call No. 16, August 6, 1987, Item No. 2) to a situation in which a member institution makes an offer of future employment to (rather than arranging immediate employment of) a high school coach of a prospective student-athlete. The committee determined that the proposed arrangement of future employment for a high school coach by a member institution renders the high school coach an "athletics representative" of the member institution's athletics interests per Constitution 3-2(e). Further, the committee agreed that under such circumstances, the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 1-2-(b) would prohibit the high school coach from any contact with a prospective student-athlete for purposes of recruitment on behalf of the member institution. Finally, the committee concluded that this interpretation would not preclude the high school coach from normal communication with a prospective student-athlete, with the understanding that the high school coach is not involved in any direct recruitment of a prospective student-athlete on behalf of the member institution that has offered him employment.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Committee will increase its scrutiny of agents

At the urging of Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and under the leadership of Big Eight Conference commissioner Carl C. James, the Professional Sports Liaison Committee is increasing its efforts to deal with issues involving player agents.

As part of that effort, the committee is becoming more involved in the education and counseling of student-athletes on the role of the player agent.

In remarks to the committee during its meeting October 5-6 in Kansas City, Schultz emphasized that the group has a responsibility to represent the NCAA and the student-athlete in matters pertaining to player agents.

"The NCAA will provide the leadership," replied James, who chairs the committee. "We (the committee) should be the communicating arm for the NCAA to the professional organizations in situations dealing with student-athletes and player agents."

"Dick Schultz has spent a great deal of time talking with various representatives from professional sports and he will continue his personal attention with the various management groups and player associations, especially with regard to the certification of sports agents."

Dialogue is key

In taking a leadership role, the committee is stressing the need for clear lines of communication among all groups.

"As a committee, we want to serve the various coaches' groups, athletics directors, student-athletes, etc., and communicate to them as effectively as possible," James said. "Good dialogue is the key, and I think we are getting just that. But we also are educating ourselves, so that in the near future we can adequately deal with all professional sports."

Enjoying a lighter moment during the October 5-6 meeting of the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee in Kansas City are, from left, Dean Smith, head men's basketball coach at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, the National Association of Basketball Coaches' representative to the committee; Jeanne Taylor, University of Mississippi; Emma J. Best, University of District of Columbia; Andrew J. Baylock, University of Connecticut; Richard J. Evrard, NCAA legislative services department, and Carl C. James, committee chair and commissioner, Big Eight Conference.

The committee agreed that education is still the key to decreasing the number of student-athletes who sign early with player agents. Thus, the committee has taken steps to get closer to student-athletes and persuade them that it is in their best interest to stay in school.

One means is through approximately 75 career-counseling panels currently in place, mainly at Division I institutions. The number of panels is increasing.

"Through education and counseling the student-athlete, we hope to improve the student-athlete/player-agent situation," James said. "We have to build on what we have now, and that starts with career-counseling panels that are in place at various institutions."

A subcommittee was appointed to monitor career-counseling panels, in hopes of improving communication with the panels.

"We also hope to find out what the more successful career-counseling panels are doing; what ways we can strengthen the weaker panels, as well as initiate more career-counseling panels," James said.

The committee also agreed to develop a videotape featuring professional athletes advising student-athletes on the pitfalls of signing early with a player agent.

Developmental funding

In other actions, the committee agreed to look aggressively into developmental funding as a means of providing more services to the membership.

Impressed with what Major League Baseball has contributed to summer baseball leagues, the committee agreed to evaluate the system's possible implementation with other professional sports leagues. The committee, however, will develop further criteria for the professional leagues to follow.

Also, the committee instructed the NCAA staff to develop a legislative proposal for use by any state that wants to control the activities of the player agent. The committee hopes to develop consistency in state legislation across the country that will include "the strongest possible legislation against the player agent," James said.

Among the states that have developed player-agent legislation are Texas, Michigan, Louisiana, Ohio, Alabama, California and Oklahoma.

The committee also agreed unanimously to support an increase in Pell Grant amounts for student-athletes, should the Council decide to sponsor such legislation.

Women's sports group seeks nominations for new award

The Women's Sports Foundation's Coaches Advisory Roundtable is seeking nominations for a new award designed to honor female coaches working at the grass-roots level.

Females who coach at the NCAA Division I or II level are not eligible, and neither are females coaching national teams or at the professional level. All others—including NCAA Division III female coaches—are.

"We know there are women across the country who work diligently with youth, school or college programs, increasing the opportunities for girls and women in sports," the Women's Sports Foundation said in announcing the award. "They serve as inspiring role models for the athletes with whom they work, and they have made other outstanding contributions to the enhancement of the image of girls and women in sports."

Nomination forms are available from the Women's Sports Foundation, 342 Madison Avenue, Suite 728, New York, New York 10017. The deadline is February 1, 1988.

Yale University has been playing football for 116 years, but the Elis waited until 1987 to make their longest-ever football trip. They winged across the nation, off the mainland and through six time zones, only to get thumped, 62-10, by the University of Hawaii, October 3.

More potential division movement: Southeast Missouri State University, reportedly unhappy with the decision of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association to bring in four new members, including two in Kansas, has appointed a task force to study the possibility of moving from Division II to Division I. The task force will complete its work by January 1988, and the institution's board of regents will receive a recommendation in May 1988.

Trivia time: When Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, presented Walter Byers, NCAA executive director-emeritus, with the Collegiate Commissioners Association's Award of Special Merit September 30 (see the October 5 issue of The NCAA News), he mentioned that 10 of Byers' former NCAA national office staff members have gone from there to serve as Division I conference commissioners. They will return to Cal State Dominguez Hills to play a game against an area police team late this month.

The team is coached by Ray Malavasi, former Los Angeles Rams head coach, and Johnny Johnson, a member of the Dominguez Hills coaching staff. The team's football experience is from playing rugby and watching American football on television.

Duke University will add women's soccer as a varsity sport next fall. It will be the institution's 11th varsity sport for women and 24th overall. Coach (and former Hartford athletics director) Gordon McCullough called it "the most significant individual achievement in the history of Hartford athletics."

Former NCAA staff members currently serving as Division I conference commissioners: James E. The other three? Wiles Hallock, formerly head man in the Western Athletic Conference and the Pac-10, now retired; Charles M. Neinas, one-time Big Eight commissioner who now heads the College Football Association, and David Price, now associate commissioner of the Pac-10 but formerly commissioner of the Missouri Valley Conference.

Upgrading scholarships, grants to walk-ons raise questions

By James C. Mohr

Like most sports fans, I like to peruse the Sunday papers for college football results. On September 19, I was doing just that when a story reminded me suddenly and forcefully of an issue that has long troubled me in my capacity as an NCAA faculty athletics representative.

The story was about the previous day's nonconference contest between Utah and Wisconsin. The description suggested a terrific game, just the sort that makes so many Americans love college athletics. Utah won, 31-28, on a last-second field goal by a kicker who had dreamed of and practiced for a dramatic finish like this one for six years.

What came next, however, was what bothered me. The Utah coach, celebrating in the locker room, "announced to the entire team" that the kicker "was now on scholarship."

James C. Mohr

The incident struck me with special force, since virtually the exact same thing had happened last year at the College Park campus of my own university system. A placekicker won an important and emotional game with a final field goal, and the coach was quoted after the game to the effect that a kick like that was worth a scholarship. Presumably, the coach followed through and awarded one to the kicker, who previously had been in the same situation as the Utah kicker: a nonscholarship athlete.

My purpose is not to focus a spotlight on these specific situations, for the issue that concerns me is far larger and more pervasive than these two stories a year apart. But these two stories do raise the issue in particularly obvious fashion.

Moreover, since they both were wire-service news spots, they raised it in a particularly public fashion.

The issue is this: Under what circumstances can we reconcile the awarding of scholarships to current nonscholarship players, on the one hand, with the NCAA's longstanding opposition to play-for-pay, cash-for-results and performance bonuses, on the other?

The same issue is raised, far more commonly, I suspect, in requests from coaches to upgrade the scholarship of a player recruited on partial aid, who subsequently has proven himself or herself and is making a far stronger contribution to the program than might earlier have been anticipated.

The reason the issue troubles me is that I ultimately do not see how that reconciliation can be made.

Those kickers, it seems to me, were being rewarded for performance, pure and simple. Was the nonscholarship kid who held for the kicker in practice all those years given a scholarship? I doubt it, but mention of that kid illustrates just one of the problems that arise in this context.

Favoritism and intrasquad competition are among the obvious others.

I certainly can understand lots of reasons why a coach would want to upgrade the scholarship of an athlete he or she had recruited for partial money after that athlete turns out to be every bit as important to a program as full-scholarship recruits.

And I certainly can understand why a coach would want to offer a walk-on some tangible reward for playing a role as significant as that played by scholarship athletes.

But how do you distinguish such upgrades from an out-and-out "raise" for a job well done?

Letter to the Editor

Critics ignore progress in athletics

To the Editor:

I, for one, am sick of reading comments from alarmists who continue to degrade the educational process of intercollegiate athletics and the values it promotes.

Certainly, athletics has experienced its share of problems; and as long as imperfect people are involved, we always will have problems.

But significant progress is being made in every area associated with athletics, and it is time we quit promoting the negative and start talking about the positive. Graduation rates are improving, drug use and abuse in the majority of programs is declining, cost awareness is under scrutiny, positive lifestyle values are being promoted, and concern for intercollegiate athletics as a whole is improving.

Thomas Edison said, "No quality is more essential for success than perseverance." We are persevering and we will be successful, so let's appreciate progress.

Scholars shun majority in criticizing athletics

By J. Malcolm Simon
New Jersey Institute of Technology

Thanks to a professor-emeritus of humanities and the dean of the college of engineering at my university, I had the opportunity to read a series of articles concerning intercollegiate athletics in the July-August 1987 edition of Academe.

Having recently completed a comprehensive internal and external study of our athletics program, which resulted in a reaffirmation of the university's commitment to athletics excellence in partnership with academic achievement, I am sure that my colleagues had more than a premonition that I would wish to respond to the articles. They were correct.

In the first paragraph of the introduction to the issue—"Despite burgeoning scandal and growing evidence of runaway commercialization, the world of intercollegiate athletics shows little interest in reforming itself"—the editor sets the tenor for a series of disturbing articles.

With the notable exception of Professor Alan W. Childs, the authors ignore the more than 90 percent of colleges and universities with programs of intercollegiate athletics that have "sane and sensible athletics in an intellectually stimulating and educationally sound academic environment."

The tendency to generalize and hyperbolize, which might be expected of sensation-seeking media, is quite unacceptable when written by those who profess to espouse academic excellence.

Credit for the most flagrant misuse of academic freedom goes to

"I have... resentment for those who lack the intellectual integrity to be specific in their attacks and take the lazy way out by blaming the entire system."

Professor George Hochfield, whose diatribe, "The Incompatibility of Athletic and Academic Excellence," reeks of envy and jealousy. I find it particularly ironic that a professor of English can state so haughtily that "...scandal has never been so rife in the world of college sports... a wasteful, corrupt and degrading system."

One is tempted to ask Hochfield

Taking sports away from the kids

Donald Kagan, athletics director
Yale University

The Chronicle of Higher Education

"In football and basketball, we've taken the game away from the kids. Take basketball. Timeout should be banned in the last two minutes. Right now, with the excessive timeout, the coach is fine-tuning everything that happens out there.

"The players are not allowed to decide what to do, or to make a mistake. Athletics are supposed to be an act of mind as well as of body, to be able to think clearly and sharply. Now, they (athletes) just become fodder, machinery that the coach then just winds up and sends out there.

"The thinking seems to be that the athletes will do less well than the coach would have them do. It would be as though I teach my students (as a professor of classics), and then I help them answer the questions. What kind of teaching is that? I want to train them so they can answer the questions themselves. And possibly—and this is the dream of a teacher—better than I do."

Joseph V. Paterno, head football coach

"Not all of their reasons are valid (commenting on the NCAA Presidents Commission's unfavorable vote against a Division I-A football championship).

"Overemphasis, missing classes—those are so hypocritical when they allow players to go to the NCAA basketball tournament and miss classes week after week after week. There are a lot of inconsistencies with all the rules of the NCAA."

"As the costs of higher education rise, the dream of a college education is beginning to elude all but the most dedicated and financially able families."

Robert Ruxin, attorney and author
"An Athlete's Guide to Agents"

Athletic Business

"A central dilemma right now for (sports) agents is whether to abide by NCAA rules. The Norby Walters matter has just brought out into the open what's been going on for years. Agents should recognize that undergraduate athletes are subject to NCAA rules; and regardless of what (they think) of those rules, it doesn't set the right tone to violate them.

"The rules, I think, are unrealistic; but until such time as they are changed, the point is that the agent who violates them, or causes an athlete to violate them, is setting the wrong example."

Edward H. Jennings, president
Ohio State University

The Associated Press

"I think that rule (satisfactory progress) by itself is more important than Proposition 48. It forces students to take courses toward a degree, so they can't avoid the real purpose of this—namely, getting an education.

"We should see improvements in those (graduation rates). It will take probably five or six years, particularly at the big, public schools where the average nonathlete takes five years to graduate anyway."

Forget the pros, college football is much better

By Art Spander
San Francisco Examiner

There are a great many people complaining about the NFL walk-out. Don't include me. I'll take college football over the pro game any day. The reasons are many.

College football doesn't go on strike. Maybe some day the undergrads will set up a picket line demanding more money for incidentals or higher grades in English lit. But for the moment, the kids are just happy to run out on the field.

College football doesn't have exhibition games. The NFL calls them "preseason" games; but whatever you call them, they're a joke. Except to the owners. To them, they're a gold mine.

College football doesn't have a two-minute warning. That means a 70-yard drive for the winning touchdown isn't dissected by Spuds McKenzie selling beer or John Madden pushing oil. The two-minute warning began a million years ago when radio stations needed a last gasp to squeeze in commercials before the end of a game. Now it's an art form.

College football is played Saturdays, which of course is the reason pro football is held Sundays. Imagine how much better life would be if we didn't have to wake up Sunday mornings to Jimmy the Greek mumbling incoherently about the spread. The only spread he's an expert at is the one under his belt.

College football still has room for players who can buy their clothes off the rack—and I don't mean the rack at Refrigerator Perry's tailor.

College football has great nicknames. I'm not referring to the Virginia Tech Hokies or IC Irvine Anteaters, but to the individuals. Hey, William Perry became a refrigerator at Clemson long before he joined the Chicago Bears. And what about the "Galloping Ghost" and "Old 98"? In pro football, Tom Harmon, 98, would have been ordered to wear 33. Yeah, I hear you, Brian Bosworth.

College football has the Heisman Trophy. Sure, the selection has more to do with publicity than talent, and Mikhail Gorbachev has a better chance of winning than a linebacker or offensive tackle. But the campaign provides as many laughs as Bill Cosby. And the trophy itself looks impressive.

College football doesn't have a championship game. Who's No. 1? Who cares, except for the alumni, the coaches, the players and people in the neighborhood?

Arguments are the lifeblood of sport. When the college season ends, everybody's arguing whether Penn State could have beaten Oklahoma, or Arizona State could have defeated Miami. The only arguments in the pros are with scalpers trying to get $600 for a Super Bowl ticket.

College football can disappear from campus without materially changing life as we know it. What was Oakland after the Raiders moved to L.A.? A place for traffic to back up for people trying to get on the Bay Bridge during the morning rush hour.

College football doesn't have over-times. You tie, you tie, and let's go back to the parking lot for another beer. So it's like kissing your sister? What if your sister is your stepsister and looks like Heather Locklear? But college football doesn't have as many ties as the NFL. See following for explanation.

College football has the two-point conversion. What's the most boring part of a game, besides a timeout for measurement? Right, the conversion kick.

But in college, you can pass or run the ball for two points. Or, failing, no points. Don't you love 15-14 scores? And coaches who have the guts to go for two and the victory when time has run out?

College football is as unpredictable and whimsical as the students who play it. When was the last time you saw a pro game come to an end with five laterals and a halfback crashing into a trombone player for the deciding touchdown? Case dismissed.

ulty athletics representative chairs the athletics scholarship committee, which must review in detail every cent that is awarded to every student-athlete who plays for us.

I consistently have taken the position that scholarships are recruiting devices, not ways of rewarding players for doing what we hoped they might be able to do, no matter how unequal their grant amounts and their performances later appeared to be.

Consequently, scholarship upgrades have been extremely rare on our campus over the past 15 years, the period of my service as faculty representative, and scholarships to walk-ons almost nonexistent. The grounds for awarding such bonuses never seemed to me to be either consistent with the spirit of the NCAA, which I am charged to uphold, or philosophically justifiable when the chips were down.

But stories like the one that caught my attention that Sunday are beginning to convince me that I am simply out of step with the true spirit of the NCAA.

And our coaches assure me that I probably am. They maintain that scholarship rewards to walk-ons and increases from partial grants to full grants are a part of normal business.

Battlefield promotions of the sort I read about, or "knightships," as they are sometimes called, should be seen as great public relations, Horatio Alger material, and Cinderella stories, not as favoritism (however inadvertent or well-intentioned), play-for-pay or performance-based raises.

Much less is said of the reverse, of course: taking scholarships away on a performance basis. But this is not the time to consider that, I suppose. This appears instead to be time for me to rethink my whole position.

It is comforting to know, at least, that the newspaper-reading public will not have to do any agonizing on this score.

Stories like the ones that caught my eye can leave but little doubt in their minds where we stand. In our business, we jolly well pay key performers, even those who apparently were content to attend our schools and happy to play for our teams without full cash incentives.

why he does not "... notice the log that is in his own eye," and to suggest that perhaps he is referring to the wrong "world" and "system."

I suggest further that he might devote his time and energies in a more meaningful way by discovering and correcting the "scandal" behind why so many students and graduates of schools, colleges and universities are unable to communicate, orally or verbally, in an effective manner.

Hochfield's disregard for scholarly standards is most obvious in his statement, "The average college athlete is much more likely not to graduate.... And while proceeding to nongraduation, the average college athlete is likely to take a bizarre melange of remedial, trivial and sport-related courses."

Although, as William Cowper said, "Even a fool must now and then be right, by chance," Hochfield, who apparently stayed out too long in the "blizzard of '77," misses the boat again as he fails to consider the student-athletes at the many institutions where the "average" athlete is treated no differently from the "average" student.

That athletics can exist within the framework of academic priority is evidenced at my university, where more than 15 percent of our scholar-athletes achieve GPAs of 3.300 to 4.000 in curricula such as engineering, architecture, computer science, physics and chemistry, and where almost all of our scholar-athletes graduate (the few who don't, transfer to other institutions).

I am confident that such academic achievement is no less outstanding at MIT, RPI, Stevens, Lafayette and Lehigh, to name a few other technological universities.

Lest it be said that I am ignoring or being naive about the problems of intercollegiate athletics, let me state that this is not the case.

Obviously, there are abuses in some intercollegiate athletics programs, but these are mainly at institutions with questionable academic reputations and/or incompetent or unethical administrators.

I share in the concern over such programs and resent having my program likened to them. However, I have a greater resentment for those who lack the intellectual integrity to be specific in their attacks and take the lazy way out by blaming the entire system.

Those who feel the urge to join in the plethora of verbal diarrhea concerning intercollegiate athletics are urged to acknowledge the many creditable programs. No less is fair; no less is worthy of scholarly consideration.

Ohio Legislature delays action on bill to control sports agents

Ohio's Legislature, despite a second appeal for prompt action from Ohio State University football Coach Earle Bruce, has deferred action on a bill regulating professional sports agents.

The House sponsor asked for the delay to make sure, he said, that the Senate-passed bill does not unfairly punish agents who play by the rules and respect what is best for college athletes.

Bruce agreed with Rep. John Stozich, R-Findlay, that some agents conduct business legitimately but said "it is not too soon" for the legislature to crack down on unscrupulous agents, the Associated Press reported.

The coach, whose testimony helped win Senate approval of a bill that is similar to Stozich's House version, referred to OSU's loss of all-America Cris Carter, a wide receiver who got into trouble for accepting money from agents.

Carter was disqualified for violating rules of the NCAA with a year of college eligibility remaining. He has since signed a contract with the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

However, Bruce said, "I wouldn't want you to think that just the Cris Carter incident brought this to the forefront."

He told the House Ethics Committee he has been bothered for years by "these men in suits, with briefcases" who pressure players with offers of cash, alcohol, drugs and women. "This isn't a fairy tale," he said.

Earle Bruce

Richard M. Bay, Ohio State's director of athletics, who also testified in the Senate, echoed much of Bruce's testimony, saying he believes the legislature should act "expeditiously." Bay also said, however, that lawmakers should "do it correctly."

Under the Senate bill, agents would have to register with the Ohio Department of Commerce, paying a $500 fee and posting a $25,000 bond that could be revoked if they failed to disclose, within 30 days, that they have signed an eligible college player to an agent's contract.

Such disclosure would cost the player his college eligibility. The agent would be required to reimburse the athlete for the loss of his scholarship—a provision Stozich doesn't like. He said the player knows the rules have been broken "and should assume some of the responsibility."

Stozich also criticized a part of the Senate bill that limits coverage to athletes awarded grants-in-aid at state-assisted universities. He said those at private colleges should receive the same protection.

Bruce said that since 1972, he has seen the ranks of agents increase from just a few to thousands, and that he knows of one high school football player who had signed with an agent when he enrolled at college.

"These kids are under pressure. I get calls at midnight, telling me 'these guys won't leave me alone.' If you will pass this bill, you'll be taking pressure off the kids," Bruce said.

"Coaching enables me to get next to some young men at some crucial times in their lives. Some of the best sermons I preach are during the fall, because I have so many vivid allusions. But I do have to be careful not to overload my sermonic material with football because not everyone enjoys sports allusions.

"I don't want to be a patsy, and I don't want to lose. What we're starting with is the inner man. We've had coaches who have worked on character development, and we've had coaches who have worked on developing characters. The lessons we teach and coach transcend the scoreboard.

"We want to win a certain way. If we win and taunt the opposition or we start raising our fingers, that would be discouraging for me.

"In my first couple of years as a coach, I slipped into praying for God to give us a win. But not anymore. I've matured. Football is only a game in terms of overall perspectives."

Michigan's Abbott is second hurler ever to win Golden Spikes Award

University of Michigan pitcher Jim Abbott is the winner of the 1987 Golden Spikes Award, given annually to the outstanding amateur baseball player in the country by the United States Baseball Federation.

Abbott, a junior from Flint, Michigan, is the 10th recipient of the award, and only the second pitcher to be honored.

He was selected from among nine finalists. Panelists making the selection base their decision on such attributes as athletic ability, sportsmanship, character and overall contribution to the sport.

"It makes me very proud to have won the Golden Spikes Award," said Abbott. "I never really expected it. I know a lot of people had a great year, and I never considered myself a candidate. I still don't know if it has really hit me yet."

During his sophomore season, Abbott led Michigan with an 11-3 record and 2.08 earned-run average, and was named the Wolverines' most valuable pitcher. During the year, he had a streak of 35 consecutive innings without allowing an earned run. Michigan prospered behind Abbott, winning its sixth Big Ten Conference championship in eight years.

The third-team all-America pitcher was brilliant in international competition as a member of Team USA, posting a mark of 8-1 with a 1.70 ERA. He also notched 51 strikeouts in 47 2/3 innings. Perhaps his biggest win came in July when he defeated the world-champion Cuban team, 8-3, in Havana.

Born without a right hand, the 20-year-old Abbott received a standing ovation from 50,000 fans and won the praise of Cuban President

Fidel Castro, himself a former pitcher.

"Twenty years from now, they will still remember Jim Abbott," said Team USA coach Ron Fraser, also head coach at the University of Miami (Florida).

"I thought he was looked at (by the Cubans) as a handicapped guy who worked hard for a chance to play. He walked off that field as a pitcher, not as a handicapped guy."

At the Pan American Games in Indianapolis, Abbott was 2-0 with a 0.00 ERA in three games. In 12 2/3 innings, the left-hander struck out 15 and allowed only one unearned run in boosting Team USA to a silver-medal finish.

"I didn't have any idea I would be this good," said Abbott. "When I went to school, I had dreams of being a pro player like everyone else does, but there is a lot I would like to do. I want to win the College World Series. I want that more than the pros or the Olympics. That is why I went to Michigan."

Abbott is the third Wolverine in as many years to be nominated for the Golden Spikes Award. Barry Larkin was nominated in 1985, as was Casey Close in 1986.

This year's finalists included Cincinnati (Ohio) Moeller High School outfielder Ken Griffey Jr., the first high school player ever named as a finalist. Other finalists were Cris Carpenter, pitcher, University of Georgia; Don Guillot, outfielder, Pan American University; Derek Lilliquist, pitcher, University of Georgia; Jack McDowell, pitcher, Stanford University; Mike Remlinger, pitcher, Dartmouth College; Martee Robinson, first base, Seton Hall University, and Robin Ventura, third base, Oklahoma State University.

Schiller says he supports current bowl-game setup

Southeastern Conference Commissioner Harvey W. Schiller says a major-college football play-off system would edge the collegiate sport closer to professionalism.

"I'm not sure that we need that (Division I-A play-offs) in the intercollegiate ranks," he said at the annual Peabody College Roundtable dinner October 8 in Nashville.

"I'm not sure we need a champion. I think that's an extension of the professional game."

Schiller said he is concerned about the overlapping of professional and amateur sports.

He supports the current system of college bowl games, the Associated Press reported.

On another matter, Schiller said college athletes should have high ethical and academic standards and should not follow the example of professional athletes who have had problems with drug abuse or who have tampered with equipment.

He cited several recent cases in which professional baseball players were caught filling bats with cork and sawdust.

"Just think what would happen if that happened in collegiate (athletics). We would all be in an uproar about that," he said.

He also said professional agents should not be allowed to have contact with college athletes.

"We need to keep agents from stealing players from our institutions," Schiller said.

Northeastern will honor Zabalski

Northeastern University will name its athletics field house for longtime coach and administrator Joseph P. Zabalski. Ceremonies will be held at Edward Snow Parsons Field October 10 before the Huskies host the University of Maine in football.

The field house was constructed in 1930 on the Kent Street Brookline playing field and has served six decades of Northeastern athletes.

Zabalski joined Northeastern in 1948 as head football coach and recorded 101 victories, 77 losses and 6 ties over a 24-year career. He retired from coaching after the 1971 season to become associate athletics director. He was named director of athletics in 1976.

Zabalski was inducted into the Northeastern University Hall of Fame in 1976 and is a past president of the Gridiron Club of Boston and the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

He is a graduate of Boston College, where he played guard on the 1940 Cotton Bowl team and the 1941 Sugar Bowl team.

Big Eight gets basketball sponsor

The Phillips 66 Company will become the major title sponsor of Big Eight basketball and its annual conference basketball tournament.

Raycom Sports will produce and televise Big Eight basketball for the third consecutive year. The 1988 Phillips 66 Big Eight basketball tournament will be the 12th in conference history and will be played in Kemper Arena, March 11-13, in Kansas City, Missouri.

In addition to air time on the Raycom Sports Network, Phillips 66 will receive merchandising, which includes printed materials, signage, message-board and public-address announcements, radio mentions, and a consumer promotion.

"We are delighted to have the Phillips 66 Company join with the Big Eight Conference and our good friends at Raycom as the title sponsor of Big Eight basketball," said Commissioner Carl C. James.

Russ Bookbinder, director of corporate development for Raycom, was instrumental in developing the relationship between Phillips 66 and the Big Eight. Bookbinder manages Raycom's Dallas office and is responsible for the sales and marketing of all Raycom title sponsorships.

Bowling Green linebacker's goal: 'Nyet yardage!'

By Dave Hackenberg
The Toledo Blade

Charles Dotson had one word for those Ball State University ball carriers who tried to advance in his direction September 19.

Nyet!

The Bowling Green State University linebacker had a team-high eight primary hits in the Falcons' 24-0 victory, and his three-game total of 32 tackle participations is second best on the squad.

But Charles Dotson, a product of Waite High, is rarely second best at anything. Especially in the classroom.

After all, you won't find this in many college football media guides, but it's in Bowling Green's book as part of Dotson's biography: a Russian studies major with a minor in political science.

Da!

Really.

"My interest in Russian was actually sparked in junior high school, where they gave you a little taste of all the languages," Dotson said. "I thought it would be interesting to study the Soviet Union and its language because of the relationship between that country and the United States."

Before that revelation, Dotson described himself as "sort of a normal student. But in the eighth grade, I realized my potential in academics. I'd never made the honor roll before; then I made it and realized there was prestige involved and that I got a lot of respect from teachers and coaches."

He went on to Waite, where he enrolled in honors programs, delved deeply into Russian studies and was a national merit scholar. Dotson admits it didn't all come easily and that there were times he struggled. But he never lost sight of one objective.

"I knew that you could be an average football player and still get into college on a full scholarship if you had excellent grades," he said.

Indeed, there was plenty of interest in a far-above-average player named Dotson after three years in Waite's starting lineup, where he had played both fullback and linebacker, the position at which he excelled. Ah, but the interest waned a bit under the realization that Dotson weighed just 178 pounds, not your basic college linebacking size.

"Schools like Purdue and Cincinnati wanted me as a cornerback because they questioned my ability and my size," Dotson said. "I didn't know if I could make the adjustment, having never played in the defensive backfield."

So Dotson came to Bowling Green to play linebacker and, of course, was immediately switched to the defensive backfield.

"We really liked him as a linebacker, and that's why we recruited him," Bowling Green coach Moe Ankney said. "But when he got here, he was so small that we felt we had to try him at strong safety. He was like a fish out of water, though."

It wasn't due to lack of effort. While redshirted last season as a freshman, Dotson did everything he could to adapt to his new position, where he found that it's a different game covering an opponent than it is converging upon one. "I worked hard at backpedaling, running with my hips open, everything I could do," Dotson said.

But last spring, bulked up to 200 pounds, the Bowling Green coaches moved him back to weakside inside linebacker.

"He's a linebacker, it's that simbacker as long as we use him right. We can't let linemen get right out on him or he'll be overpowered and overwhelmed."

Charles Dotson

So the Falcons protect Dotson, who shares playing time at the weak-side position with senior Jon Rolwing.

"Our defensive scheme is a strong front," Dotson said, "so there's a guard in front protecting me so I can be free to run and tackle. That's my job at that position."

"I don't have much body fat, and it's hard for me to hold weight. But I watched Paul Schweitzer play this position last year and he wasn't very big for a linebacker either. He was strong and tough, though. I may not be real big, but I'm just as strong as the average linebacker. I think I can play like Schweitzer. I just have to prove it.

"I've always been a small person playing a big position."

Articulate, well-groomed and deeply religious, Dotson began his weight training under Waite High coach Jim Wasserman and was part of the group of athletes who brought winning football back to the east-side school. Presently measuring 6-0 and 185 pounds, he bench-presses 350 pounds and squats 560.

Dotson is one of five sons who were raised by their mother, Angela Bass, and his feeling for her played a role in his decision to attend Bowling Green.

"I'm the baby of the family, and I'm a mommy's boy," he said, smiling. "I wanted to stay close to her. She's a heckuva lady... an inspiration, raising all of us by herself. And we've all had some success."

Dotson's success as a college football player is just beginning. But there's little question he'll also be a success when his career comes to an end.

"I'm not so sure I want to be a translator or a teacher," he said. "In addition to Russian, I'm studying political science and criminal justice. I'm going a lot of different directions, and I'll probably be looking forward to a graduate school program. I'm hoping for a field where I can work with the Soviet people, perhaps as a political scientist on Soviet affairs."

Sounds like a big position. For a small person.

Soccer match draws over 12,000

One of the largest soccer crowds on record—12,214—witnessed the September 27 regular-season match between the Fresno State University and the University of San Francisco.

NAIA signs contract with ESPN

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, whose men's basketball championship was carried live by ESPN in March, has signed a five-year contract with the sports cable television network.

The agreement, announced October 7, calls for live broadcasts of the semifinals and championship games in the first year. In subsequent years, only the championship will be carried live.

"The dream of all NAIA players is to go to Kansas City and play in the tournament," said ESPN Presi-

San Francisco won, 1-0, knocking the Bulldogs out of the top spot in the national rankings.

The record for an NCAA championship soccer game is 9,214, set in 1972 during a quarterfinal match between Howard University and the University of Pennsylvania. Official records are not kept for regular-season matches.

Bigger crowds have been reported, but they have included a combination of paid admissions and special promotions. For example, a crowd of 22,512 watched the annual match between St. Louis University and Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, in 1980. All tickets for that game were offered for $1 through a special promotion that included a postgame concert.

For Fresno State, which led the nation in average attendance per match in 1986, it was the biggest soccer crowd in history. Average attendance for six home games this season is 4,029.

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

1. Considered Constitution 3-1-(i) and O.I. 2 in regard to the permissible awards that an individual may receive without jeopardizing eligibility for intercollegiate competition; recommended to the Council that O.I. 2 or other governing legislation be amended to include the principle that awards (as opposed to expenses) received by individuals not yet enrolled as student-athletes shall conform to the regulations of the recognized amateur organization applicable to the involved event, with the understanding that the receipt of cash for such participation shall not be permitted in any case.

2. Considered the application of Case No. 86 as it applies to transportation provided by a member institution for student-athletes in conjunction with regular-season contests (as opposed to NCAA championships or special events) scheduled during an institution's vacation periods; declined to recommend to the Council that Case No. 86 be revised in order to modify its application to such regular-season contests; agreed that the staff should review alternatives designed to revise Case No. 86 to simplify its application, and that the committee should be advised of the results of this study.

3. Reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (February 1982) that indicated that the waiver opportunity in Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(10) is not available if the student-athlete who wishes to transfer was recruited per O.I. 100 by any four-year collegiate institution; recommended to the Council that this interpretation be revised to indicate that the term "recruited" as used in Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(10) should apply only to a prospective student-athlete's recruitment by the certifying member institution.

4. Reviewed the application of Bylaw 8-2-

(a) to a situation in which two member institutions will participate in a football contest in Australia December 5, 1987, with the difference in time zones between the United States and Australia resulting in the game being telecast in the United States after 7 p.m. on Friday; agreed that the provisions of Bylaw 8-2-(a) would not be applicable in this instance, because no high school football games will be played on this date in the states in which the collegiate institutions are located or in the states in which the contest will be telecast.

Conference No. 20
September 28, 1987

5. Considered the application of Case No. 45 and Constitution 3-1-(e) as they relate to the sale and distribution of an institutional highlight film; agreed, subject to the Council's review and approval during its October 12-14, 1987, meeting, that Case No. 45 and Constitution 3-1-(e) would not preclude a third party other than the institution (e.g., a distribution company) from being involved with the sale and distribution of an institutional highlight film that contains the names and pictures of enrolled student-athletes, it being understood that the following conditions are satisfied:

- The institution specifically designates any third-party agency that is authorized to receive orders requesting the videotape.
- The sale and distribution activities have the written approval of the institution's director of athletics.
- A third party, retail store or distribution company (e.g., Sears, 7-Eleven, a video retail store) would be permitted to sell and distribute an institutional highlight film, with the understanding that the distribution company or retail store is precluded from using the name or picture of an enrolled student-athlete in any poster or other advertisement to promote the sale or distribution of the film.

d. Agreed that the application of Case No. 45 would permit a sponsoring commercial company or service to depict more than the company's regular trademark or logo (e.g., conduct a 60-second commercial) in the production of an institutional highlight film, provided there is no indication in the makeup or wording of the advertisement that the squad members, individually or collectively, or the institution endorses the product or service of the advertiser.

e. Recommended that the Council review the current interpretation restricting the sale and distribution of commercial items bearing the name or picture of enrolled student-athletes and revise this interpretation to permit such activities.

6. Considered the application of Constitution 3-1-(a)-(2) and 3-1-(c) to a situation in which a student-athlete wishes to market his or her own athletic ability to a professional team or organization without asking that the individual's name be placed in a professional draft; concluded that a student-athlete is permitted to receive information from a professional team or organization regarding the individual's market value without jeopardizing the individual's eligibility; however, the application of Constitution 3-1-(a)-(2) and 3-1-(c) would preclude an individual from accepting an offer or encouraging an additional offer with a professional sports team or organization.

7. Reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (August 1986) indicating that the charitable and institutional fund-raising activities permitted per Bylaw 3-3-(m)-(3) must occur within a 30-mile radius of the institution's main campus, and that the student-athletes may participate only with the approval of the director of athletics; recommended that the Council revise the previous interpretation to permit student-athletes to participate in fund-raising activities within the state in which the institution is located, within a 100-mile radius of the institution's main campus or in conjunction with official athletics competition, provided the student-athletes do not miss additional classes as a result of their participation in the fund-raising activities and these activities have the approval of the director of athletics.

8. (Division I) Considered a previous Council-approved interpretation (reference: Item No. 15 of the minutes of the committee's June 4, 1987, conference) indicating that off-campus and in-person recruiting contacts between enrolled student-athletes (or other enrolled students) and a prospective student-athlete are permissible if such contacts are incidental (nonrecruiting) contacts and do not occur at the direction of a coaching staff member; agreed that it remains permissible under the provisions of Bylaw 1-2-(b) for enrolled students (as well as enrolled student-athletes) to make recruiting telephone calls and have written correspondence with prospective student-athletes for purposes of recruitment.

9. (Division I) Reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (April 1987) reaffirming that the oversight responsibilities of the strength and conditioning coach should be confined to the supervision of weight-room activities during any time outside the permissible practice period for those sports with playing and practice season limitations; considered the application of this interpretation to a situation in which a member institution's head coach or assistant coach also serves as the institution's strength and conditioning coach; concluded that such an arrangement is permissible, provided the individual's designation as the institution's strength coach is made on a bona fide basis.

10. (Division I) Reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (May 1986) indicating that the opportunity to participate in voluntary conditioning, physical-fitness or weight-lifting activities supervised only by an institution's "strength coach" (and, therefore, not considered to be practice activities) would be limited only to those individuals who are full qualifiers or partial qualifiers who receive athletically related financial aid, inasmuch as the partial qualifiers have utilized a year of eligibility upon receipt of the institutional financial assistance; recommended to the Council that it revise its previous interpretation to indicate that both a partial qualifier and a nonqualifier may participate in voluntary physical-fitness and weight-lifting activities supervised only by an institution's "strength coach," inasmuch as these activities do not constitute "practice" per O.I. 301, and all nonqualifiers and partial qualifiers now are deemed to have utilized a season of eligibility per Bylaw 5-1-(d).

11. (Divisions I and II) Considered a previous Council-approved interpretation (August 1987) stipulating that coaching staff members of a member institution are prohibited from engaging in out-of-season practice activities with enrolled student-athletes during the academic year, noting that this prohibition applies to any member of the coaching staff of the student-athlete's institution; concluded that the application of this interpretation would preclude a member institution's coach from being involved with enrolled student-athletes from the coach's institution during any U.S. Volleyball Association practice sessions and events conducted during the academic year, unless such activities occur within the institution's 26-week playing and practice season segments for the sport of volleyball.

Toughest

winning years, the Big Eight and SWC five each, the ACC four and one .500 mark (last year), the Big Ten four, and the WAC three.

The SWC won the 1981 race, 19-10-1 to 31-21-1 for the SEC and 21-15 for the Big Eight. In 1982, a bowl sweep lifted the Pac-10 on top at 24-10-1, while the SEC was 2-5 in bowls and finished 34-18-1.

In 1980, it was the SEC 33-19, Pac-10 21-15-1 and ACC 21-16. In 1983, the SEC was far in front at 36-16-3 to the Big Eight's 21-14-1; while in 1984, the SEC's winning mark was almost identical at 36-15-3 with the Pac-10 a strong second at 24-12. The 1985 and 1986 races were covered above.

Schedule quality?

Of course, the won-lost records say nothing whatever about the quality of each conference's outside schedule. Usually, the first-division teams in one conference meet the second-division teams in another conference.

Not until bowl time do the best meet the best, but bowl history is not much help, either, with few exceptions. Over half a century, every conference is within a few games of the break-even .500 level.

Like "toughest schedule," the "best conference" argument is colored by regional bias, television exposure and so on. It just stirs up a lot of friendly arguments.

Why I-AA only?

Games vs. Division I-AA opponents (and those below I-AA) are deleted because the I-AA teams annually win well over 70 percent of such games. So far this season, I-AA teams have won 37 of 46 games vs. I-AA teams for an .804 percentage. Pacific-10 teams played no such games, Big Ten teams just one and SEC teams only two. Games against teams below I-AA are almost nonexistent; only two so far, by PCAA teams.

Including all games below I-AA, the SEC is 25-9-1, ACC 16-8, Eastern independents 19-12, Big Eight 19-13, Big Ten 16-12-3, Southern independents 17-13-1, SWC 14-12, Pac-10 17-15, WAC 10-13, other independents 13-17-1, PCAA 10-17 and MAC 7-14.

Southern, Big Sky lead

It is tough to get a clear picture in Division I-AA because of the wide variety of schedules. Two conferences or independent groups have played zero games vs. I-AA teams and four others just one game each, while the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference and the Southern Conference have played nine each, the Southwest independents seven, and the Big Sky Conference and Southland Conference five each. That means just five (of 12) conferences or independent groups have played 35 of the 46 games vs. I-AA teams.

Excluding I-AA opponents and counting only games against outside I-AA opponents, the Big Sky at 4-1 for .800 and the Southern at 7-2 for .778 lead the list. Next are the Southwest independents at 7-4, Ivy Group 8-5, Southern independents 8-5-1, Eastern independents 9-6, Gateway 5-5, the Colonial League (not the basketball Colonial) 5-5, Southwestern Athletic Conference 3-5-2, Ohio Valley Conference 5-8, Southland 4-7-1, Yankee Conference 2-9 and Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference 0-5.

If you add games vs. teams below the I-AA level (some are strong, but I-AA teams hold a big edge at 50-21-2 so far), the picture changes again, although the same two are at the top, this time the Southern 15-2

Oklahoma State's Thurman Thomas continues to lead Division I-A in rushing

Barry Garrison, New Mexico, leads Division I-A in total offense

Marshall's Tony Petersen is among Division I-AA total-offense leaders

Eric Stein of Eastern Washington leads Division I-AA punters

.882 first and the Big Sky 13-3-1 .794 second. Then come the Gateway 8-4, Eastern independents 12-6, Southwest independents 10-5-1, Ivy 8-5, Southern independents 10-9-1, OVC 11-11, SLC 8-8-1, Colonial 6-7, SWAC 5-9-2, Yankee 5-9 and MEAC 4-8.

Comparisons with last year are largely pointless because conference and independent lineups have changed quite a bit. Our Eastern independents are Northeastern, James Madison, William and Mary, and Villanova (not yet competing for the Yankee title). Our Southern independents are Georgia Southern, for the first time since 1960 (a Rose Bowl season).

Indiana beat Ohio State (31-10) for the first time since 1951 (Woody Hayes' first year) and is 4-1. Oregon is 4-1 after beating Southern California for the first time in 16 years. Michigan State upset Michigan, Pittsburgh upset Notre Dame, Memphis State upset Alabama for the first time ever, and winless Ball State beat Kent State.

And can anyone remember the last time Michigan, Ohio State, Notre Dame and Southern California all lost on the same Saturday? In case you are wondering, Oregon

Steven Webster rushed for a career-high 132 yards against his team: "I walked off the field with Steven and asked him how big he was. He said, 'Not very big,' and I told him I thought he was big enough. But my gosh, he's a skinny little kid (listed at 5-11 and 185). He runs hard and did a great job." Off the field, Webster has spoken at the team's weekly chapel services and meets with a "couple of guys" each week to share and read the Bible, "to help give them a stronger foundation in their faith." (Nancy Mazmanian, Southern Cal assistant SID)

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden on unbeaten Miami (Florida): "They look so good to me, I'm amazed they are not on strike."

Kansas coach Bob Valesente on unbeaten Nebraska: "To be honest, I'd rather face one of the NFL scab teams." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Louisiana State quarterback Tom Hodson after a tie game with Ohio State was asked if the kissing-your-sister cliché was true. "I have a good-looking sister," he said. "I don't mind kissing her. This feeling is a lot worse." (Hodson avoided that feeling October 10 with his team leading at Georgia, 26-23; a tie looked possible before LSU's last-minute interception on a tipped pass.) (Arthur Triche, Louisiana State assistant SID)

Louisville junior flanker Calvin Dixon Jr. on his first taste of college football: "I passed out at the end of the first practice and they revived me by throwing a bucket of ice water on me. Once I came to, Rocky Belk (former receivers coach) asked me if I was okay. I said yes. Then he said, 'Son, welcome to college football' and just turned and walked away. Then I made a commitment. I typed up a contract that said I would leave the university if I stopped moving forward or quit trying. My academic counselor, Steve Milburn, and coach (Howard) Schnellenberger both signed it, too." Dixon is campus president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. (Jeff Schneider, Louisville assistant SID)

Cincinnati quarterback Danny McCoin, one of the country's leaders in career passing and total offense and the school record-holder in both, had just run for the game-winning touchdown vs. Miami (Ohio) on a quarterback draw. Interviewers asked him who called the play. "That's one thing I'd like to find out," he said. "We haven't used that play all season. We haven't even practiced that play all season." (Tom Hathaway, Cincinnati SID)

Susquehanna's Al Bucci, who had four touchdowns among 12 receptions in the first game, drew double and triple coverage in the second game and was held to three catches. Said Bucci: "I was so well covered that when I went to the restroom at half time, two Moravian players followed me." (Scott Deitch, Susquehanna SID)

Jimmy Johnson, Miami (Florida) coach and an Arkansas graduate, asked his sophomore center, Rod Holder, if he had ever heard anyone call the Hogs, as at an Arkansas game. Holder replied: "I'm from Chicago. The only thing they call up there is a taxi." (Rich Dalrymple, Miami (Florida) SID)

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz on his troubles in communicating with wife Beth: "When I say 'a broad,' she thinks about a trip to Europe. When she says 'diamond,' I think of baseball."

Albany (New York) coach Bob Ford on his fourth-and-one, fake-punt gamble that led to a Western Connecticut touchdown: "I made a horrible decision. I don't know why. Maybe the devil made me do it." (Lou Zalowitz, Albany, N.Y., SID)

Can you top these?

Northeast Louisiana went 87 yards in the last 16 seconds without a timeout to beat Northwestern State (Louisiana), 33-31, October 3, after stopping Northwestern just inches from a first down. First, Stan Humphries passed 39 yards to Jeff Steele, but Steele was unable to get out of bounds and Humphries then passed out of bounds to stop the clock with one second left. On the last play, a pass into the end zone, two Northwestern players slapped the ball away but a third tried to intercept it, accidentally batted it into the air and tight end Jackie Harris made a diving catch for the winning, 48-yard touchdown. Ironically, Northwestern had beaten Northeast Louisiana on a final-play field goal, 17-14, last year. (Bob Anderson, Northeast Louisiana SID)

Indianapolis senior cornerback Troy Wooten from Peru, Indiana, has blocked seven punts in his career, with seven games still to be played. (Chris Denari, Indianapolis SID)

One week after throwing a school-record six interceptions, UC Santa Barbara came back October 3 and intercepted a school-record eight passes against Redlands. (Bill Mahoney, UC Santa Barbara assistant SID)

Virginia State tied a Division II record with three interception touchdowns in a 64-7 victory over St. Paul's. Several teams share the record, and assistant coach Mark Robinson was a member of the Virginia State team in 1984 that did it against Elizabeth City State. (Wallace Dooley Jr., Virginia State SID)

Football notes

Western Kentucky, Tennessee State (not yet competing for OVC title), Florida A&M (not yet competing for MEAC title) and Towson State. Our Southwest independents are Lamar, Arkansas State, Nicholls State and Louisiana Tech.

One could argue with the way we divided them up, but not with the fact that they are strong as a group. All 13 are nine games above .500 and each group three above .500 against I-AA opponents only.

Just for the record, the Gateway and Southern each stand 1-8 vs. I-AA foes, Southwest independents 2-5, Big Sky and SLC each 0-5, OVC 2-2, Colonial 2-1, Eastern independents 1-0, Yankee, Ivy and Southern independents each 0-1, SWAC and MEAC each 0-0. You can add these figures to those above for an all-games nonconference ranking, but we will not do it because the results would not be a fair representation of real strength.

Look at play-offs?

Once again, the numbers tell you nothing about the quality of opposition—even less than the I-AA numbers. The Colonial, for instance, is 2-1 against I-AA teams (Holy Cross over Army and Lehigh over Navy) but 1-2 vs. teams below I-AA (both losses by Davidson).

Should we look at play-off results? That is a mixed picture, too, because many I-AA members used to be in Division II. The play-offs tell much about outstanding teams, but not much about conferences.

Upset Saturday

October 10 was a big Saturday for historic upsets and fast-starting teams. Wake Forest under new coach Bill Dooley is 5-0 for the first time since 1944 after upsetting North Carolina. Oklahoma State is 5-0 for the first time since 1945 (a Sugar Bowl season), and Minnesota is 5-0 next meets UCLA, Oklahoma State next meets unbeaten Nebraska, Wake Forest meets Maryland and Indiana meets Minnesota, all this weekend. Oh yes, Syracuse, 5-0 for the first time since its national title year of 1959, runs into Penn State.

Attendance up in I-A

With the season nearing the halfway point, attendance figures are starting to take on some credibility. In Division I-A, the per-game average now is 43,183—a scant 52 per game above the figure for the same 104 teams at this stage in 1986. However, percentage of capacity now is 79.8 vs. 80.3 at this stage last year. This is because the schedule is different every year.

In I-AA, the per-game average now is 11,520, or 102 less than the same 87 teams averaged at this point a year ago. Percentage of capacity, however, is the same—56.3 both times.

Quotes of the week

Pittsburgh's Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, who rushed for 134 yards and had 40 receiving in that upset over Notre Dame October 10 (30-22), has really put the tail back in tailback. He is a fullback in a tailback's body at 265 pounds, keeps gaining weight as he gains yardage, and already he is over 2,000 yards with a season and a half to go. Concerned about Heyward's weight, coach Mike Gottfried has had an assistant chart his tailback's meals and even agreed to go on a diet with him. The result? Gottfried lost 45 pounds and Ironhead gained five. The coach asked him to make a list of everything he ate in a day. Heyward returned, says Gottfried, "with a list that included every meat, vegetable and fruit known to man."

Oregon State coach Dave Kragthorpe after Southern California's

NACDA plans drug-abuse seminars

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will sponsor three regional substance-abuse seminars this fall as a follow-up to last year's workshops.

The seminars are offered as a free service to NACDA's more than 2,300 members. Funding for the seminars is derived from NACDA's sponsorship of the annual Kickoff Classic football game. Some of the proceeds from the Classic support the NACDA Foundation, presenter of the seminars.

NACDA will sponsor the three two-day seminars at these locations and dates: Philadelphia (November 9-10); Stockton, California (November 16-17), and St. Louis (November 19-20).

The focus of these seminars will be student-athlete assistance programs, drug-testing procedures, legal aspects of drug testing, alcohol abuse, and use of tobacco and smokeless tobacco. The seminars will be coordinated by Heitzinger and Associates in conjunction with the National Substance Abuse Consultants and Analytix, Inc.

"Due to the substantial response from last year's workshops, NACDA is again providing guidance and instruction on substance abuse through this year's seminars," said Carl R. Miller, director of athletics at the University of Pacific and NACDA president. "Every athletics director, as well as staff members, medical personnel, trainers and those involved with academic advising, will benefit from these seminars," Miller continued.

In addition to Miller, who will host the Stockton seminar, other host athletics directors are Jack Lengyel, director of athletics at the University of Missouri, Columbia (St. Louis), and Robert Mullen, director of athletics at La Salle University (Philadelphia).

Supreme Court denies bid by SMU to join litigation

Southern Methodist University, suspended from intercollegiate football for recruiting violations, has lost a Supreme Court appeal in its battle to keep certain records from the news media.

The court, without comment, refused to let SMU take part in a lawsuit seeking to force the NCAA to reveal records of the NCAA's investigation of SMU recruiting, the Associated Press reported.

The suit was filed in 1985 against the NCAA and the Southwest Athletic Conference by Belo Broadcasting Corp. and its reporter, Carole Kneeland. The Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald later joined the suit.

The news organizations, seeking records of NCAA investigations since 1980 of football recruiting practices at SMU, said the Texas Open Records Act required disclosure of the material.

SMU, a member of both the NCAA and the SWC, sought to intervene in the case as a defendant to make its own arguments why the records should not be made public.

The university said disclosure would violate rights of privacy and academic freedom and argued that the NCAA and SWC would not represent its interests adequately.

But the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the NCAA and the SWC "have the same ultimate objective as SMU... to prevent disclosure of the documents."

Former teammates challenge each other as coaches

By Michelle A. Pond
The NCAA News Staff

Nine women who shared a special moment in international field hockey history now share their experience and expertise with student-athletes as head coaches at NCAA member institutions. Once former teammates, most now are in competition with each other.

All played on the bronze-medal-winning 1984 U.S. Olympic team, the first U.S. women's field hockey team to compete in the Olympic Games. Three years after making history in Los Angeles, these women continue to represent their sport with distinction.

Vonnie Gros, the associate coach at Princeton University, was the head coach of that team. Others are Karen Shelton, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Sheryl Johnson, Stanford University; Gwen Cheeseman Alexander, Temple University; Beth Anders, Old Dominion University; Charlene Morett, Pennsylvania State University; Chris Larson Mason, Williams College; Diane Moyer, Yale University, and Judy Strong Dubiel, Smith College.

Gros, a graduate of Ursinus College, played on the national team for 16 years. She coached at West Chester University of Pennsylvania for 12 years, compiling a 118-6-13 record and winning Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIW) championships in 1975 and 1976. She moved to Princeton in 1977 and coached there for two seasons before taking a leave of absence to work full-time with the U.S. team. She returned to Princeton in 1985.

Vonnie Gros

Gros headed the national team from 1976 to 1984. In 1979, the squad finished third in the World Cup, earning the right to compete in the 1980 Olympics. Because of the United States' boycott of those games, the team did not compete. The players had to decide whether they would continue playing, with an eye toward the 1984 Olympics. That commitment included two years of in-residence training in Philadelphia and another set of tryouts to earn a spot on the Olympic team.

A common thread

"We have the common thread of competition, ways of preparing, setting goals and handling adversity,"

Gros said. "We have an appreciation for each other, where we came from and what we went through."

Shelton already was the head coach at North Carolina when she played halfback on the Olympic team. A graduate of West Chester, Shelton played on three AIW championship teams and was a three-time Broderick Award winner. She is a member of the NCAA Field Hockey Committee.

"Karen was a student of the game," Gros said. "She always rose to the occasion and thoroughly enjoyed the level of competition."

"It is hard to learn high-level play without being involved in high-level play," Shelton said. "What we learned about techniques, strategy and tactics we were able to take back and teach to young players."

Shelton's Tar Heels currently top the Division I field hockey poll. North Carolina has made three straight NCAA tournament appearances and finished third a year ago.

Johnson, a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, has been a member of the national team since 1978 and is currently a cocaptain of that squad. She played forward in 1984, but has since become a midfielder.

"Sheryl was quietly effective," Gros said. "She showed great determination and the will to succeed."

Johnson became an assistant coach at Stanford in 1984 and became head coach the following season. She has guided her team to two straight NCAA tournament appearances. The 1987 Cardinal is ranked ninth.

"There is a respect there," Johnson said about coaching against her former teammates. "We know each other well from having played together so long. We know what we are teaching is good."

Cheeseman Alexander is a graduate of West Chester and played for the national team from 1973 to 1984. She has recorded over 100 victories since becoming the head coach at Temple in 1980. Her 1981 team reached the finals of the AIW championship, and her 1984 squad placed third in the NCAA tournament. The Lady Owls are ranked 13th.

Best in the world

"In 1979, she was the best goalkeeper in the world," Gros said. "She was the best at maintaining concentration. She knew defense and not just goalkeeping."

In Los Angeles in 1984, a 2-0 victory by Holland left the United States and Australia tied for third place and forced a stroke-off. While five U.S. players, including Larson Mason, Anders, Johnson and Strong Dubiel, scored a remarkable 10 times in 10 attempts, Cheeseman

Charlene Morett

Sheryl Johnson

Cheeseman Alexander

Alexander stopped six of the 10 strokes she faced.

"Goalkeeping is a specialty in the sense that the skills you use are not the same as the field players," Cheeseman Alexander said. "A lot of your game is mental because the game does not (always) come to your end. You have to be ready; because if you make an error, it is crucial. You have to be playing every ball."

Anders, a graduate of Ursinus, was a cocaptain of the 1984 team. She overcame injury to make the team and went on to be the leading scorer in the Olympic competition with eight goals.

"There was not a stronger or more powerful competitor," Gros said. "She had the competitive spirit and great skills."

Like going to Disneyland

"You have to enjoy the sport, that is number one; and you have to enjoy the competition," Anders said. "Playing in the Olympics was like a kid going to Disneyland; that is how much fun it was for me."

Anders was the head coach at Old Dominion from 1980 to 1984 and compiled a 93-8-2 record. Her teams won NCAA championships in 1982, 1983 and 1984. The 1984 team posted a 23-0-0 record. She returned to Norfolk this season and has the Lady Monarchs ranked seventh.

"I love it," she said about coaching against her former teammates. "You know they are going to compete against you, and that is where the fun is."

Morett attended Penn State and played for Gillian Rattray. She played left wing on the national team. Charlene contributed something more than just athletic skills to the team.

"She had a great sense of humor," Gros said. "She was able to laugh at the right moment to break the tension."

Morett was Anders' assistant coach at Old Dominion for four years and worked with the 1982 and 1983 national-championship teams. She became head coach at Boston College in 1984 and held that position until this season when she succeeded her former coach at her alma mater. The Lady Lions are ranked fifth.

"There is a lot of fun in it," Morett said of coaching against her former teammates and continuing to share the action on the field with them. "The sport has been good to us. This is our way to give back to it."

Moyer is a graduate of La Salle University and became the first woman inducted into that school's hall of fame in 1985. She was a goalkeeper on the national team.

"You have to have two goalkeepers," Gros said. "Diane practiced hard and was always ready to go into the game."

Moyer coached at Villanova while training with the U.S. team. She became the head coach at Yale in 1984. She has remained involved with the national team as a coach.

Being creative

"I really enjoy coaching," she said. "It is as much fun as playing. Coaching is not only knowing the game but being creative."

Larson Mason is a graduate of Penn State. She coached at Boston University in 1978 and 1979 before moving to Williams in 1980. She played right wing in 1984.

"Chris had a great attitude toward competition," Gros said. "She always was willing to work at the things she could not do well."

That intensity level and willingness to work on her own to improve are qualities that Larson Mason tries to instill in her players. In addition, she hopes one more characteristic shows through:

"I love field hockey," she said. "I guess my players see that, and I hope they love the game, too."

Judy Strong Dubiel was only a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts when she made the 1980 Olympic team. She graduated in 1982 and headed for Philadelphia and in-residence training. She is in her first year as head coach at Smith.

"Judy was a strong player with speed and power," Gros said. "She could change the flow of a game."

"Representing the country in the United States and being part of the medal count was a great experience," Strong Dubiel said.

Notre Dame joins MCC

The University of Notre Dame has joined the Midwestern Collegiate Conference and will compete in all MCC sports for men except basketball and in all women's sports except softball, the conference has announced.

The Irish will begin conference competition immediately in the men's sports and in the women's programs beginning with the 1988-89 academic year, subject to prior scheduling commitments.

The league does not compete in football, and the Irish football and men's basketball programs will remain independent. Softball is a club sport at Notre Dame.

The university was an associate member of the MCC from 1982 to 1986 and competed only in men's nonrevenue sports.

"We are extremely excited about reestablishing our ties with the Midwestern Collegiate Conference," said Notre Dame athletics director Richard Rosenthal. "It's definitely an up-and-coming league, and I look forward to a very competitive relationship."

Notre Dame will compete in the conference in men's baseball, cross country, golf, soccer, swimming and tennis, and in women's basketball, cross country, swimming, tennis and volleyball.

Villanova to test for drugs

Villanova University has announced plans to initiate a program for drug and alcohol education and the prevention of drug abuse. Included in the program will be mandatory drug testing for all Villanova varsity athletes.

The drug- and alcohol-education program and the drug-testing policy will go into effect starting with the 1987 fall sports.

"After an intensive review of Villanova's needs and other institutions' drug and alcohol programs, I feel we came up with the best-fitting drug policy for Villanova University," said athletics director Theodore A. Aceto. "I feel the policy is unique for our own program. A key issue is the extensive education program our student-athletes and coaches will receive. The main thrust of the program is to help deter any student-athlete from alcohol and or drug abuse."

Any athlete refusing to be tested will be ineligible to compete in any Villanova intercollegiate or club sports. Sanctions for confirmed positive results range from individual counseling and a rehabilitation program to immediate suspension from any intercollegiate or club sport team for at least one year and the loss of all related athletics financial aid at the earliest possible date.

Southwest Texas plans tournament

Southwest Texas State University plans to host its first national-level collegiate basketball tournament December 4-5.

Bobcats coach Harry Larrabee, who guided the Great Alaska Shoot-out to national prominence while coaching at the University of Alaska, Anchorage, has announced the creation of the Jowers Jamboree.

The two-division tournament will feature Southwest Athletic Conference champion and NCAA tournament participant Texas A&M University, Gulf Star Conference champion Stephen F. Austin State University, Texas Southern University and host Southwest Texas State in the Division I bracket.

The small-college division will highlight the return of Abe Lemons to central Texas as Lemons will bring his Oklahoma City University team to compete against Texas A&I University, St. Edward's and Concordia Lutheran.

The Jowers Jamboree is named for the late Milton Jowers, who guided Southwest Texas State to national prominence in the 1950s and 1960s.
