Bond, Schwartz elected as Commission officers

Michael Schwartz, president of Kent State University, and Thomas A. Bond, president of Clarion University of Pennsylvania, have been elected to serve as officers of the NCAA Presidents Commission, completing the Commission's selection of officers who will assume those positions at the conclusion of the January NCAA Convention.

They will join John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, who was re-elected to chair the Commission for the next two years, and George Drake, president of Grinnell College, who will serve as Division III subcommittee chair until his Commission term expires in January 1989. Slaughter and Drake were elected earlier.

Schwartz was elected by the Division I Commission members to replace Ira Michael Heyman, chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, as Division I subcommittee chair; and Bond was chosen by the Division II members to succeed James W. Cleary, president of California State University, Northridge, as chair of that division's subcommittee.

Schwartz, the Mid-American Athletic Conference representative on the Commission since the fall of 1986, will serve until his term as a Commission member expires in January 1989. Bond, a member since 1985, will serve for two years inasmuch as his Commission term does not end until January 1990.

Schwartz

Affiliated with Kent State University since 1975, Schwartz was named president in 1982. He went to Kent State originally as vice-president for graduate studies and research and then was named vice-president for academic and student affairs. In 1980, he added the duties of provost. He also served for several months as interim president.

Before joining Kent State, he was a faculty member, department head and dean of the college of social science at Florida Atlantic University, where he received a Distinguished Teaching Award in 1971.

He also taught sociology for six years.

Convention to consider season and coaching-staff limits

(Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of seven articles detailing the legislation to be acted upon by delegates to the 1988 NCAA Convention in Nashville. This concluding installment discusses the proposals in the playing-seasons and personnel legislative groupings.)

Adjustments to the playing- and practice-season limits adopted by all divisions in June and additional restrictions on Division I coaching staffs highlight the final two legislative groupings for the Association's 82nd annual Convention next month in Nashville.

Most of the 16 proposals in the playing-seasons category are intended to modify the season limitations that were approved at the NCAA's sixth special Convention last June. Half of those 16 are applicable to single divisions and will be decided in the division business sessions January 12, while the other eight will come up in the general business session January 13 or 14.

The eight amendments in the personnel section, on the other hand, all apply only to Division I (or Division I-AA). All of those, therefore, will be handled in the Division I-AA and Division I business sessions January 12.

Seasons

The key proposals in the playing-seasons grouping include these:

- An NCAA Council proposal to apply the Divisions I and II limits on a year-round basis, rather than only during the academic year, thus eliminating the "summer practice season" that reportedly has developed in some sports as a result of the academic-year limitation.

- Two other attempts to treat organized summer practice, one by the Atlantic Coast Conference that would permit such practice only if specifically authorized in the bylaws and the other by six Division III institutions (but applicable to all divisions) that would prohibit beginning an institution's nontraditional segment in a sport before September 1 or the first day of classes in the fall term, whichever occurs first.

- An attempt by the California Collegiate Athletic Association to make the Division II 26-week season limitation the same as that in Division I; i.e., applicable only in team sports other than football and basketball.

- A proposal by six members of the Wisconsin State University Conference to increase the Division III limitation from 21 weeks to 26 and to make it applicable only during the academic year.

The rest of the proposals in this grouping deal with single sports or represent relatively minor adjustments in the Bylaw 3 legislation.

Coaches

The lead item in this grouping is an NCAA Council proposal, recommended by the Special Council

Subcommittee to Review the Recruiting Process, that would permit no more than two coaches in any Division I sport other than football and basketball to recruit or scout prospective student-athletes off campus in each sport.

Other major proposals in the personnel segment include:

- Two alternative approaches to Division I basketball coaching-staff size, one from six members of the Big Eight Conference and the other from the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Big Eight proposal would reduce the staff size to four (a head coach and three assistants, of any type), while the ACC approach would permit five (head coach, three assistants and one graduate assistant). In both cases, the institution annually would designate three coaches who would be permitted to recruit and scout prospects off campus.

- An attempt by the Western Collegiate Hockey Association to establish staff limitations in ice hockey for the first time. The proposal

Committee acts on Olympics-related items

For the benefit of student-athletes from NCAA member institutions who are making plans to participate in the 1988 Olympic Games, the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee has acted to head off eligibility-related problems that the games could pose in the coming months.

The committee, responding to questions suggested by the Association's legislative-services staff, recently issued a set of Olympics-related rulings based on such relevant legislation as the outside-competition rule, satisfactory-progress and enrollment requirements, and amateurism and extra-benefits rules.

"We have tried to address the situations that we at the national office think will arise to hinder student-athletes from participating fully in the games," said Stephen J. Horton, NCAA legislative assistant.

The effort to anticipate eligibility issues is part of a recent move toward improved cooperation between the NCAA and the Olympics movement, added Kevin C. Lennon, also a legislative assistant.

In an April 1986 meeting, representatives of the Association and the U.S. Olympic Committee—including NCAA Executive Committee member Harvey W. Schiller, who was then the faculty athletics representative at the U.S. Air Force Academy and is now stepping down as Southeastern Conference commissioner to become the USOC's executive director—exchanged concerns about student-athletes' participation in Olympic events.

As one result of that meeting, Horton began to compile a list of unanswered eligibility-related questions. The questions were submitted beginning early last month to the Legislation and Interpretations Committee, which subsequently issued rulings in its telephone conference of December 2 (see Legislative Assistance column on page 2 of this issue).

Current concerns

Most current concerns involve student-athletes hoping to participate in the 1988 Summer Olympics at Seoul, South Korea. In a departure from past Olympiads, this summer's games will be staged during the summer months.

Thiel student-athlete becomes a 'total package'

How Come You Never Hear About These? Department: Thiel College women's basketball player Cindy Bynum, a senior, should become the first lady hoopster in school history to score 1,000 career points and match that number in rebounds. She entered her final season with 928 points and 887 rebounds.

But she wondered at the reason for a call from David G. Bryan, the school's sports publicist. "I really didn't know why the sports information director wanted to talk to me," she said.

"I knew that I had amassed some good numbers, but wins and losses on the court, with the team, were what really counted to me. I never really took time out to look back at what I've done. I've always been moving forward to graduation and keeping my grades up."

In a feature on Bynum's accomplishments at Thiel, where she has led the team in rebounding and blocked shots for three seasons, Bryan noted that the 5-11 center's personal highlight is the fact that she will graduate on time (with a double major of business administration and accounting) with a cumulative grade-point average higher than 3.000.

"People should remember me as a complete package," Bynum told Bryan, "a student-athlete who did not spare the books for the ball. If they remember me just as an athlete, they are leaving out the best part of me."

Drake University wrestler Tim Ascherl, who suffered a paralyzing neck injury December 12 while competing at the "Oklahoma State Duals" tournament, was transferred December 22 from Baptist Medical Center in Oklahoma City to Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines.

Ascherl, a freshman who was competing in the 118-pound class, suffered a fracture/dislocation of vertebrae C5 and C6, as well as nerve damage to the spinal cord. He currently is paralyzed from the chest down.

Drake officials have formed the Ascherl Family Assistance Fund to accumulate moneys that will be used to cover expenses that are not covered by insurance. Donations payable to the "Drake University — Ascherl Family Assistance Fund" are being accepted by the university, Des Moines, Iowa 50311.

Orange Bowl bans beer sales

Beer sales will not be allowed at the Orange Bowl for the first time in years as the game's sponsors attempt to curb rowdy behavior by fans.

The move follows similar beer bans this year at the Cotton and Fiesta Bowls.

Walter Golby, who manages the city of Miami-owned stadium, announced the no-beer policy December 28, saying an agreement had been reached by the city, the Orange Bowl Committee and the beer concessionaire.

Under the agreement, the city will waive its share of the profit from beer sales, estimated at around $37,000, and the Orange Bowl Committee will pay the concessionaire an estimated-lost profit, around $29,000, Golby told the Associated Press.

The committee also will pay various service clubs that sell beer at the game about $8,600 each, he said.

"We're dedicated to having the best atmosphere we can at the game," said Orange Bowl Executive Director Steve Hatchell. "That means a fun atmosphere, a family atmosphere. It means sobriety, safety and keeping things under control."

"We're showcasing Miami to the world," he said. "We have an obligation."

Miami city commissioners will have to approve the agreement at their January 9 meeting — after the game.

However, a majority of the commission, polled by the city staff, indicated a willingness to waive the city's fee if an agreement was worked out.

More Coaching Milestones: Elizabethtown College women's basketball coach Yvonne Kauffman has become the second women's coach in Division III to earn 300 career victories. She reached the mark with a 77-57 road triumph over Moravian December 12. She joins Laura Mapp, the most successful coach in the division, who had 344 victories as she started the current season at Bridgewater College (Virginia).

Wilkes College wrestling coach John Reese became the third college wrestling coach to reach the 400-victory mark when his Colonels defeated American University, 32-14, in a tournament at Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania. Oregon State University's Dale Thomas and the retired Harold Nichols, who coached at Iowa State University, are the others who have coached 400 wrestling victories.

Nine guest coaches, representing the general university community, have been lined up for women's basketball games at George Washington University this season. The program is part of the school's "Watch GW Colonial Women Make The Grade" marketing and promotional campaign.

"We are happy to involve other members of the university community in our program and give them the opportunity to see the talent of our student-athletes and the intensity of women's basketball up close," said Mary Jo Warner, director of women's athletics. The guest coaches will assist Linda Makowski, who in 1987 (her first season at the school) led the Colonials to their best finish ever in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

University of California, Berkeley, officials December 21 officially dedicated the basketball floor in Harmon Arena "Pete Newell Court," in honor of the former Golden Bear head coach. In six years at the school, his teams compiled a 119-44 record, and the 1959 squad won the NCAA men's title.

Officials also announced formation of an endowed scholarship in Newell's name. Once endowed, the Pete Newell Basketball Scholarship will provide moneys in perpetuity for student-athletes in the California basketball program.

"Pete is a great coach, a good friend and has contributed a great deal to our athletics tradition," said Dave Maggard, director of athletics. "We are privileged to honor Pete in this way."

Trivia Answer: The University of Oklahoma defeated the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, 42-8, in the 1987 Orange Bowl—a 34-point margin of victory. Legislative Assistance

1987 Column No. 46

Olympic Games issues

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee confirmed that the provisions of NCAA Constitution 3-9-(b) and (c) (outside competition rule) permit student-athletes to participate in the Olympic Games without the necessity of a waiver request from the individual's member institution.

The Divisions I and II subcommittees agreed that NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) and Case No. 328 (page 398, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) permit the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii) (satisfactory-progress rule) to be prorated at 12 hours per term of actual attendance during an academic year in which the student-athlete does not enroll for a term or terms as a result of participation in the Olympic Games. The subcommittees recommended to the NCAA Council that for purposes of the application of Case No. 328, "participation" in the Olympic Games would encompass the officially recognized training of bona fide candidates for the Olympic Games, provided the training directly qualifies participants for final Olympic tryouts (the Council will review this recommendation in January and the result will be printed in this column at a later date). The subcommittees concluded that a student-athlete who is not enrolled for a term or terms as a result of participation in the Olympic Games may have the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii) prorated at 12 hours per term of actual attendance, with the understanding that no more than two semesters or three quarters may be considered "missed terms" for purposes of this exception.

The Division I subcommittee considered the application of Bylaw 4-1-(a)-(1) and Case No. 274 (page 380, 1987-88 NCAA Manual), which give the Council the authority to grant a student-athlete an extension of the normal five calendar years of eligibility to permit the student-athlete to participate in various Olympic activities. The subcommittee agreed that if a student-athlete does not attend the fall term of 1988 because of Olympic training and participation, his or her eligibility per Bylaw 4-1-(a) would be extended only for the period of time missed during that term plus the first opportunity to enroll thereafter. The subcommittee also agreed that the NCAA Eligibility Committee should review on a case-by-case basis those student-athletes who seek an extension of the normal five calendar years of eligibility and whose participation was limited to officially recognized training (as opposed to officially recognized competition) directly qualifying participants for final Olympic tryouts, and that such training should not extend the student-athlete's eligibility more than one year.

The committee reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (reference: Item No. 5 of the minutes of the committee's June 18, 1987, conference) involving the Pan American Games and agreed that the principles expressed should be extended to apply to the Olympic Games; therefore, photographs or images of enrolled student-athletes may be placed on posters, post cards, films, stills or videotapes designed to promote the Olympic Games or the athletics arena housing the event; however, Constitution 3-1-(e) and Case No. 45 (page 313, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) would prohibit a corporate sponsor (other than through the reproduction of the sponsoring company's trademark or logo on the item) from selling any promotional item from the Olympic Games that utilizes the name or picture of an individual enrolled student-athlete (as distinguished from an item that features a team picture). The committee concluded that the Olympic Games governance structure is permitted to utilize the names or pictures of enrolled student-athletes in conjunction with its fund-raising activities.

The committee noted that the Council has proposed legislation (Proposal No. 129 in the Official Notice for the 1988 Convention) that would permit the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee to waive the enrollment and satisfactory-progress requirements of Constitution 3-3 for any participant in the Olympic Games who, because of such participation, may lose eligibility for practice and intercollegiate participation in a sport; however, if the legislation is not adopted by the membership, for those student-athletes who are unable to enroll in a full-time program of studies, the application of Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) would require that a student-athlete who participates in the Olympic Games be enrolled in a full-time program of studies as determined by the institution before the student-athlete is eligible to practice or participate in intercollegiate athletics.

The committee noted that inasmuch as the 1988 Winter Olympics are scheduled for February 1988 and the 1988 Summer Olympics are scheduled for late September or early October 1988 (as opposed to August of previous years), a number of student-athletes participating in the winter games will not be attending an NCAA member institution during that academic term. The committee agreed that those student-athletes who are permitted to enroll at their respective institutions subsequent to the "normal" starting date of the term would be eligible to compete in intercollegiate competition during the spring and fall of 1988, provided they are eligible under all applicable NCAA and conference regulations [e.g., enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies per Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) and 3-3-(b)]. Further, the committee noted that those student-athletes who are prohibited from enrolling at their respective institutions subsequent to the initiation of the spring and fall terms of 1988 would not be permitted under current NCAA legislation to participate in intercollegiate competition; under such circumstances, the current application of Bylaw 5-1-(c) would permit such a student-athlete to begin participation on the day after the last scheduled examination period listed on the institution's official calendar for the term that is ending, provided the student-athlete has been accepted for enrollment as a regular full-time student for the immediate succeeding regular term.

The committee reviewed the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(a) (amateurism) and Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) (extra-benefit rule) to a situation in which a commercial company has offered to provide the parents of all Olympic competitors transportation to South Korea for the Summer Olympic Games; further, the company has indicated that these funds will be administered through the national governing bodies of each sport. The committee concluded that the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(a) and 3-1-(g)-(5) would not preclude the parents of a student-athlete from receiving free transportation to South Korea to attend the summer games.

Committee

ing late September and early October—after most NCAA institutions have begun their fall terms.

Since many student-athletes who participate in the summer event also plan to attend school in the fall, the timing of the games potentially poses satisfactory-progress and enrollment problems.

The 1988 Winter Olympics threaten fewer problems, even though the February event is staged during a time when nearly all member institutions are in session. The reason is that most student-athletes who participate in the winter games elect not to enroll in school during the time needed to prepare for and participate in the games.

By issuing its rulings now, the Legislation and Interpretation Committee hopes it is anticipating most of the questions that will be asked by Olympics-bound student-athletes during the coming months.

"We're trying to get this information out as soon as possible, so decisions can be made by the people involved," Horton said.

Highlights of the committee's rulings, broken down by classification, follow:

Outside competition

The committee ruling that will have the widest impact is based on the provisions of Constitution 3-9-(b) and (c), which pertain to outside competition.

In its deliberations, the committee affirmed that the legislation allows student-athletes to participate in the games without waiver requests from their institutions.

Satisfactory progress and enrollment

The committee took note of legislation proposed by the Council for the 1988 Convention that, if passed, would permit the waiver of satisfactory-progress and enrollment requirements for student-athletes who otherwise could lose eligibility for practice and competition as a result of their participation in the games.

Proposal No. 129 would permit the Academic Requirements Committee to waive requirements of Constitution 3-3 in cases where student-athletes are unable as a result of the games to enroll in a full-time program of studies.

However, the committee ruled that if the legislation is not approved at the Convention, Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) will require that a student-athlete who participates in the games be enrolled in a full-time program of studies as determined by the institution before being eligible to practice or participate in intercollegiate athletics.

Furthermore, the student-athlete will be required to enroll under the same procedures set forth by an institution for all of its students. In cases where institutions do not permit student-athletes to enroll prior to the beginning of a term and participation in the games prevents enrollment, the student-athlete would not be permitted to participate in intercollegiate competition during that term.

Amateurism and extra benefits

The committee agreed that, in accordance with principles approved by the Council for the Pan American Games, the Olympics governance structure will be permitted to use photographs or images of enrolled student-athletes to promote the games or an athletics arena housing an Olympics event, as well as for fund-raising activities.

Among the materials that may be produced for promotional reasons are posters, post cards, films, still photographs and videotapes.

However, the committee noted that Constitution 3-1-(e) and Case No. 45 prohibit corporate sponsors from selling any promotional item from the games that utilizes the name or picture of an individual enrolled student-athlete (although a company's trademark or logo may be reproduced on a promotional item).

Addressing another matter, the committee ruled that NCAA amateurism and extra-benefit rules [Constitution 3-1-(a) and 3-1-(g)-(5), respectively] do not prohibit the parents of a student-athlete from accepting free transportation to the 1988 Summer Olympics from a company that is making the offer under the auspices of the national governing bodies of Olympic sports.

The committee's rulings in the areas of amateurism and extra benefits represent the Association's desire to place student-athletes on as equal a footing as possible with other athletes at the games, Lennon said.

"We are acknowledging that when student-athletes are involved in the Olympics, they should be accorded the same treatment as other athletes there, short of actually violating rules of amateurism," he said.

Other concerns?

Although the committee hopes it has addressed the most pressing questions pertaining to Olympics participation, it stands ready to grapple with other problems that may arise.

"If we haven't covered all the issues, we hope that the membership will contact us with any additional questions that may arise," said Horton. Questions that cannot be answered by the legislative-services staff at the national office can be referred to the committee for a ruling, he said.

Comment

Major-sport athletes deserve reasonable wages

By Tom Littlewood

On the scale of human injustice, it hardly ranks at the top; but the time is at hand, nevertheless, for the leaders of America's great universities to do what is right by beginning to pay a reasonable wage for the extraordinary services of their football and basketball players.

The existing system defies logical behavior and the laws of economics. Consider how the marketplace works. There is a limited supply of people with the requisite skills. Their labor is bid for (it's called recruiting) by many competing coaches. The special talents of these highly skilled young men are then packaged and served to mass audiences at a substantial profit, none of which is supposed to financially benefit the performers themselves.

The presidents of the universities in the Big Ten Conference are considering an expansion of television-inspired sports activity—a conference basketball tournament at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis after the conclusion of the arduous regular conference season and before the national (NCAA) tournament.

It has been estimated that the event would yield member institutions an aggregate minimum of $5 million a year in television rights, ticket and souvenir sales, and corporate sponsorship. In 1986-87, the athletics association budget at the University of Illinois, Champaign, which is far from the plushiest of the conference programs, reached $9.5 million. This figure did not include the more than $3 million a year in private grand-in-aid contributions. What is significantly new in this picture—and it's something Pop Warner and Dr. Naismith could never have foreseen—is the powerful alliance of empire-building university athletics directors and television network "syndicators."

As the stakes go higher, the pressure to produce winning teams increases in step with the hypocrisy of the recruiting process. The idea that young men, many of them from disadvantaged families, would work long hours and risk disabling injury solely for the uncertain dream of future riches in the pro leagues is absurd. As a result, a bizarre sub rosa marketing system has evolved in which the coaches all suspect one another of cheating but no one can be sure exactly how.

While he was a linebacker at the University of Oklahoma, Brian Bosworth said he devoted 50 hours a week to football during the season. At many schools, football players not lucky enough to have a bowl game in their holiday plans are already in the weight rooms doing whatever it is that turns a 220-pound redshirted frosh into next fall's 265-pound sophomore guard. The coaches are rewarded openly in a variety of imaginative ways. To cite only one of those ways, the company that sells football shoes to the Fighting Illini paid a $30,000 endorsement fee last year to the head coach.

Whenever it is suggested that the players themselves should share in the sports-generated income, purists invoke the mythical image of the "student-athlete" hurrying from the chem lab to strap on the pads for Ol' Siwash.

How, one might ask, is the student-athlete different from the "student editor"? The editor of the Daily Illini, the student newspaper at Urbana-Champaign, is paid $95 a week, an arrangement that appears to incite no one.

Both jobs contribute to the life of the university. They involve similar hours, are governed by semiautonomous boards and produce a sizable cash flow.

There are differences, of course, the athletics scholarships being the most obvious. When final exams and the holiday season approach, however, the campus newspaper suspends publication. About this time last year, the Illini basketball team returned by bus at 1:15 a.m. from a December 23 game in St. Louis, practiced on Christmas Eve morning and again on Christmas night.

It is too late to take the commercialism out of intercollegiate athletics.

The people would never stand for it. But we can do what is fair and decent by paying a modest share of the television-induced riches to the young athletes who are providing the talent on the football field and the basketball court.

Littlewood is a professor of journalism at the University of Illinois, Champaign.

Letter to the Editor

Let's reverse the play-off trend

To the Editor:

It is interesting to follow the discussion concerning a championship football play-off for Division I-A. Quite often, it is argued that a play-off is the logical thing to do because the NCAA already sponsors championships in Divisions I-AA, II and III.

Perhaps we should consider a move in the other direction. The Division III Football Championship currently involves teams from 16 institutions playing 15 contests over a four-week period to determine the champion. By sponsoring one more game, and playing with a "bowl" model rather than a play-off model, we could double the number of teams involved to 32.

Each team selected to play would play a single postseason contest. Expenses could be reduced by pairing teams on a regional basis. Attendance likely would increase as travel distance would be shorter and only one trip would occur.

This concept has even more merit when you consider that 210 teams play Division III football, as opposed to one-half of that number in Division I-A. Why not involve more Division III teams in postseason play, reduce expenses and take students out of the classroom for less time?

Q How is an institution selected to be represented in the NCAA Injury Surveillance System Survey that is conducted in 13 sports?

A In June, a survey form is sent to the director of athletics at NCAA member institutions, providing an opportunity to be represented in compilation of injury data in seven men's and six women's sports. By July 1, institutions that are not selected for fall are considered for the remaining two seasons.

The sports surveyed are as follows: fall—football, women's volleyball, field hockey, men's and women's soccer; winter—wrestling, men's and women's gymnastics, and ice hockey; spring—baseball, softball, men's and women's lacrosse.

Laws may not cure the agent problem

Norm Frauenheim, columnist

"Legislation has been proposed as a way to control (sports) agents. In Texas, legislators are talking about a bill that would make them register and post a bond with the department of state. But you have to wonder how effective state government could be.

"Agents would continue to push cash, cars and contracts on kids from homes that had trouble filling the cupboard, much less the gas tank. Besides, a few hundred dollars a month for a few years is worth more than four bowl rings.

"A monthly stipend for college athletes represents a hedge against the agents. Those additional dollars also are an extension of the mechanism that already is in place. The schools are paying tuition, room and board, and books.

"In the ivory tower, the suggestion is always met with contempt. Ideas don't sell well at an auction. But the game already is being sold to the highest bidder, regardless of the NCAA's power to suspend (student-athletes).

"The NCAA is ignoring the agents by disciplining only the athletes and universities. There's a dangerous new player in the arena. If the NCAA doesn't deal with him soon, he'll own that ivory tower."

"From what I have seen and observed, a good official won't be influenced by the TV cameras or the crowds. If they do, they're out.

"Now, I'm not saying every official is doing a great job on either the college or pro level, but I think you have to adjust to the changing style of the game and another official was added in college, and they should do the same for the pros."

Mackay Yanagisawa, executive vice-president
Aloha Bowl

Gannett News Service

"It was the wish of the (television) network people that the Aloha Bowl be played on Christmas day. We're not doing it by preference but by necessity.

"We would prefer not to play on Christmas day. But you can't have your cake and eat it, too. In order to have a network contract, you have to play ball with them."

Al Carter, columnist

Houston Chronicle

"Big-time college football isn't going to survive without it (a Division I-A play-off). TV ratings are plummeting. Disinterest among the general public is undercutting attendance at schools where sellouts once were common. The national media confine their attention to scandals, the Heisman Trophy race, the annual mass execution of head coaches and maybe, if we all get lucky, a bowl game.

"To survive, college football must eliminate the hypocrisy of the bowl system. Moreover, college football must broaden its base of fan support or be completely engulfed by the pros. That means a play-off."

Bylaw 5-1-(j) called 'athlete punishment'

Instead of helping students academically, NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j) is unduly punishing young athletes and destroying their dreams, Temple University's head men's basketball coach says.

"We've got more kids now who have lost their aspiration level than in any time in the history of athletics," said John Chaney.

"You can't measure that. You can't measure the youngster whose dreams we've destroyed because he's terrified of being viewed in a negative light due to this rule."

The NCAA guideline requires a student-athlete to have at least a 2.000 high school core-curriculum grade-point average and a minimum Scholastic Aptitude Test score of 700 or a minimum of 15 on the American College Test.

Bylaw 5-1-(j), often called Proposition 48, made 599 Division I scholarship athletes ineligible to play as freshmen last year, according to the Associated Press. In basketball alone, there were 150 casualties. This year, about 50 less are expected to fall to the guideline, including 30 in basketball.

The bylaw's supporters cite the declining number of casualties as proof of the guideline's success. But Chaney said the figures are deceptive.

"Don't think for one minute that Proposition 48 is working," he said. Syracuse University head men's basketball coach Jim Boeheim agreed.

"If the number of Prop 48 kids is going down, then that means either as many kids aren't taking the SAT, or that the kids are cheating," said Boeheim, who lost a coveted recruit, guard Earl Duncan, to Proposition 48 last year.

"The only thing I'm in agreement with the rule is that it may make kids think about school a little more," said Boeheim. "But from the high school coaches I've talked to—and I talk to a lot—that's not true."

Chaney leads critics who say that NCAA officials are not looking closely enough at how the regulation psychologically affects the athlete and who assert that the SAT is culturally biased.

The NCAA is conducting a 10-year study to determine, in part, the effectiveness of the SAT and ACT as predictors of whether a student-athlete is capable of college-level academics.

The study began with the incoming class of 1984. Both Bylaw 5-1-(j) qualifiers and nonqualifiers are included.

The NCAA's position is that it is premature to predict the overall effects of the rule based on the total number of nonqualifiers in a given year.

Volleyball classic set

Four all-tournament team members from the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship are among the 20 senior standouts selected for the first Yugo East-West Collegiate Volleyball All-Star Classic.

Middle blocker Suzanne Eagey and outside hitter Diana Jessie, both from 1987 Division I champion Hawaii, and setter Wendi Rush and outside hitter Nancy Reno of runner-up Stanford are among the 10 selections for the West squad. The two teams will meet January 16 at the University of the Pacific's A. G. Spanos Center in Stockton, California.

The first match of its kind for women, the classic will pit top senior players from across the country in a best-three-of-five contest to be televised by ESPN January 19 at 7 p.m. Central time.

Carol Dewey of Purdue and Hawaii's Dave Shoji will coach the East and West teams, respectively. Assisting Dewey will be Mick Haley of Texas, and joining Shoji on the bench will be Kathy Gregory, head coach at UC Santa Barbara.

Of the 10-member East squad, two players each come from the Big Ten and Southeastern Conferences while the Big East, Atlantic 10, Big Eight, Southwest, Gateway and Mid-American Conferences have one representative each.

On the West roster, six players come from the PCAA, three from the Pac-10 and one from the High Country Athletic Conference.

Rosters for both squads are as follows:

East

Mary Bernhardt, Northern Iowa, setter; Kathi DeBoer, Nebraska, outside hitter; Annette Ewasek, Kentucky, outside hitter; Disa Johnson, Illinois, setter; Karen Kramer, Texas, middle blocker; Lisa Leap, Penn State, outside hitter; Lise Martin, Western Michigan, outside hitter; Linda Reichl, Purdue, middle blocker; Lisa Smith, Louisiana State, middle blocker, and Lisa Stewart, Pittsburgh, outside hitter.

West

Big Ten, agents reach settlement

A lawsuit filed against sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom has been settled with an agreement that the two will not sign eligible Big Ten Conference athletes without notifying the league and the school involved.

Bloom, whose dealings are being investigated by a Federal grand jury impaneled in Chicago earlier this year, said the agreement was "meaningless" because he now is concentrating on representing Hollywood entertainers instead of athletes.

"That's fine with us," said Byron Gregory, an attorney representing the conference. "Our concern was always that, when agents deal with student-athletes, they not jeopardize their eligibility or break any rules."

The Big Ten filed a lawsuit in August, seeking to bar Bloom and Walters from dealing with its athletes, and asked for damages if the conference could not stop the contacts.

The settlement was signed by U.S. District Judge William T. Hart, the Associated Press reported.

The consent decree also requires the agents to turn over to the conference all original documents pertaining to their past contacts with athletes.

"They did turn over documents to us, but I won't say what they were until I've talked with (Big Ten officials)," said Gregory.

High School. He also was an assistant women's basketball coach at Hofstra.

CONFERENCES

Bob Showalter appointed supervisor of men's officials for the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, replacing Mike Bohan, who resigned. Showalter has been a Big Ten Conference basketball official for 17 years.

DEATHS

Ray Malavasi, former Los Angeles Rams football coach who played as a lineman at Army and was a coaching assistant early in his career at three NCAA member institutions, died of a heart attack December 15 in Santa Ana, California. He was 57. Malavasi began his coaching career in 1956 as an assistant at Minnesota and later served at Memphis State and Wake Forest. He led Los Angeles to its only Super Bowl appearance, in 1980.

More than 40 secondary infractions cases are processed

During the period from September 1, 1987, to December 23, 1987, 41 secondary infractions cases were processed by the NCAA enforcement staff. In such cases, the assistant executive director for enforcement is empowered to determine whether a violation should be considered secondary or major in nature. Penalties may be imposed in accordance with provisions of Section 2-(e) of the NCAA enforcement procedure after consultation with a designated member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

In two cases, punitive or corrective action was imposed by the NCAA. Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, reported that a prospective student-athlete in men's basketball resided temporarily with a student-athlete and that the prospect practiced briefly with the intercollegiate team. The young man did not attend the university, but it was determined that the head coach should have taken action to avoid the violations. Accordingly, the men's head coach was prohibited from participating in any off-campus recruiting or evaluation activities during the period from September 17, 1987 to January 1, 1988.

In a case involving Savannah State College, the institution failed to ensure that a student-athlete completed 36 quarter hours of academic credit during the 1985-86 academic year prior to participating in football competition in 1986. The violation appeared clear and avoidable. It was determined that the continuing eligibility certification of all football team members should be documented for 1987 at the college. Correspondence concerning those procedures is continuing.

In another case, Tennessee State University reported that an internal audit found that procedures used to determine eligibility for student-athletes at the university were deficient during the 1985-86 and 1986-87 academic years. Four errors in the certification process were reported and corrective actions were taken by the institution. Although the corrective actions of the university were accepted by the NCAA as meaningful and sufficient, it was determined that the matter should be reported to the membership.

Secondary violations are those that provide only a limited recruiting or competitive advantage and that are determined to be isolated or inadvertent in nature. The remaining 38 cases appeared for the most part to involve technical or inadvertent violations, and no further action was taken by the NCAA (in accordance with Section 2-(f) of the NCAA enforcement procedure) in light of the corrective actions taken by the involved institutions or conferences. Thirty-three of the cases were self-reported to the NCAA office either by the involved institution or its conference.

The cases processed involved institutions that misinterpreted the preseason-practice limitations for football or basketball, institutions that either failed to submit written statements to grant recipients or failed to notify grant recipients by July 1 of the status of such aid, basketball workouts on an institution's campus by prospects, use of more than one color of ink in press guides, brief use of a staff member's automobile by a student-athlete, an unauthorized payment to a part-time coach, failure to meet the deadline for an independent financial audit of athletics program expenditures, exceeding the permissible limit of financial aid for a student-athlete, brief participation by a student-athlete who was enrolled in less than 12 academic hours and another who was not enrolled, exceeding the 48-hour limit for an official paid visit, attendance at a high school football game by a graduate assistant football coach, and misuse of complimentary-admission privileges.

Institutional or conference corrective actions included declaring student-athletes ineligible in cases involving eligibility regulations, correcting institutional procedures to avoid future violations, forfeiting games that involved ineligible participants, terminating the recruitment of prospects involved in recruiting violations, reprimands to appropriate personnel, guaranteeing financial assistance to student-athletes who did not receive appropriate notifications, eliminating the use of recruiting brochures for a one-year period, personnel changes and limiting or terminating complimentary-admission privileges.

Quarterly reports of secondary cases will continue to appear in future issues of The NCAA News in accordance with the reporting requirements of the NCAA enforcement procedure.

Bailey heads AP all-America list

By Herschel Nissenon

Johnny Bailey of Texas A&I University, who last year as a freshman became the third player in college football history to rush for 2,000 yards in a season, has been named to the Associated Press Little All-America team for the second year in a row.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound Bailey, who averaged 7.4 yards a year ago while gaining 2,011 yards on 271 carries, had the same 7.4 average this season although he carried only 217 times for 1,598 yards in 10 games.

Bailey was one of four players to make the Little All-America team for the second year in a row.

The other repeaters are defensive linemen Pierce Holt of Angelo State University and Rich Romer of Union College (New York) and defensive back Freddie Thomas of Troy State would permit a head coach, two assistants and two others (part-time, volunteer or graduate-assistant coaches).

Three other proposals in this segment deal with Division I-AA football staff limitations. There are no football-staff amendments proposed for Division I-A.

Summary

Following is a summary of the 16 playing-seasons proposals and the eight dealing with personnel:

Playing seasons

No. 140: Apply the 26-week playing and practice-season limitations on a year-round basis in Divisions I and II.

No. 141: Restrict application of the Division II 26-week limitation to team sports other than football and basketball, as is the case in Division I.

No. 142: Increase from 21 weeks to 26 the season limitation in Division III and apply it to the academic year only.

No. 143: Eliminate institutionally organized or financed practice during the summer unless specifically authorized in the NCAA bylaws.

No. 144: Specify that an institution's nontraditional segment in a sport (including practice) cannot commence before September 1 or the first day of classes in the fall term, whichever date occurs first.

No. 145: Confirm that an institution is permitted to conduct practice after the end of its last contest in its normal nontraditional segment, provided that all practice in that segment occurs within the applicable 26-week or 21-week limitation.

No. 146: Permit practice in tennis to begin one week before the first contest scheduled in the nontraditional segment, regardless of any limitations restricting such activities to the academic year.

No. 147: Stipulate that student-athletes attending a physical-fitness class during a summer term at a Division I institution must be enrolled in at least one additional course for degree credit during that term, while retaining the current regulation (not requiring the additional course) for Divisions II and III.

No. 148: Permit the last contest or date of competition in a sport to include the national governing body national championship in that sport in immediate preparation for the Olympic, Pan American or World University Games.

No. 149: Permit a Division III institution to utilize either games or scrimmages for the 11 football contests allowed in that division (currently, only 10 can be games).

No. 150: Eliminate the Bylaw 3-3-(k) limitation applicable to basketball foreign tours by Division I institutions, instead specifying that the institution shall not engage in a foreign tour in that sport in any academic year (or the summer immediately following) in which it utilizes any of the remaining exceptions in Bylaw 3-3-(k).

No. 151: Permit Division III baseball and softball teams to exclude from countable-contest limitations and won-lost records a maximum of two informal scrimmages or games against two-year colleges during the traditional segment in those sports or immediately prior to the NCAA championships in those sports.

No. 152: Permit Division I institutions and individual players to participate in the national indoor team tennis championships for men and women without having such competition count against the permissible dates of competition.

No. 153: Exempt the Sun Bowl all-American Classic golf tournament from counting against the permissible dates of competition in that sport.

No. 154: Make the Division II spring football legislation consistent with that governing Divisions I-A and I-AA in football.

No. 155: Specify that in certain sports, there are no limitations on the number of student-athletes with eligibility remaining in those sports who may be employed or otherwise participate in camps and clinics in their sport at their own or any other institution, or who may practice and compete on outside amateur teams at any time other than during the institution's playing season in their sport.

Personnel

No. 156: Specify that no more than two coaches may recruit or scout prospective student-athletes off campus in each Division I sport other than football and basketball.

No. 157: Limit the number of permissible coaches in Division I basketball to four—a head coach and three assistants, of any type—and specify that the institution annually shall designate no more than three of the four who shall be permitted to recruit or scout prospects off campus.

No. 158: Limit the number of permissible coaches in Division I basketball to five—a head coach, three assistants (of any type) and one graduate assistant—and specify that the institution annually shall designate no more than three of the five who shall be permitted to recruit or scout prospects off campus.

No. 159: Establish coaching-staff limitations in Division I ice hockey—a head coach, two assistant coaches, and two others who may be volunteer, part-time and/or graduate-assistant coaches—and specify that only those counted as full-time coaches would be permitted to recruit or scout prospects off campus.

No. 160: Increase from six to seven the permissible number of full-time assistant coaches in Division I-AA football.

No. 161: Permit a Division I-AA institution to meet the current football coaching limitations through normal attrition without terminating any member of the staff who was employed as of May 15, 1987.

No. 162: Specify that a Division I-AA institution is permitted to use a maximum of five part-time or graduate-assistant coaches in meeting the Division I-AA football coaching limitations.

No. 163: Confirm that a graduate-assistant coach may receive four complimentary tickets to the institution's football or basketball games.

LSU awards radio contract

Louisiana State University's new LSU Sports Network has awarded a contract to a Baton Rouge radio station to serve as the network's flagship station and advertising sales representative, school officials announced.

WJBO Radio will pay the university $2.1 million over three years, including $825,000 for flagship status and $1,290,000 for the right to handle network advertising sales. The contract will replace the school's current five-year, $1.45 million broadcast-rights pact beginning with the 1988 football season.

Under the agreement, the LSU Sports Network retains all program rights and will control station clearance and network-affiliate relations. The agreement is unusual in that respect, since most schools grant programming rights to the broadcaster.

The package also calls for free football and basketball game programs; free commercials to promote Louisiana State athletics and tickets, and promotion of concerts in Assembly Center or Tiger Stadium, with net proceeds being split between the network and the radio station.
