Federal judge backs NCAA position on drug tests

The NCAA's drug-testing program does not violate a student's privacy rights, a Federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern's decision February 25 also upheld the University of Washington's right to enforce the drug-test program.

The challenge to the NCAA's drug-testing program was brought by track athlete Betsy O'Halloran, 19.

McGovern said, "The invasion of her privacy interest by the specimen-collection procedures of the drug-testing program is outweighed" by the NCAA's interest in protecting student-athletes' health, reducing temptations to use drugs and ensuring fair competitions.

"I think the decision is correct in all particulars and accurately stated the law," said John J. Kitchin, NCAA legal counsel in Kansas City, Missouri.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which filed the suit on behalf of O'Halloran and another athlete who later joined the case, will likely appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said Kathleen Taylor of the ACLU.

"It's a defeat in a way," O'Halloran said. "But I think we've got a great chance in the 9th Circuit. I really don't think his arguments are very good."

O'Halloran initially filed suit against the university for its mandatory drug-testing program, and a King County Superior Court judge ruled in July that the university program was a violation of both state and U.S. constitutional privacy rights.

But that oral ruling was never formally entered; the NCAA was ordered to be a defendant in the case, which was then moved to Federal court.

Last month, the university dropped the mandatory aspect of its drug-testing program, revising it so that testing was voluntary and required only for those athletes suspected of drug use.

The claim against the university program was then dismissed, with the claim against the NCAA program and the university's participation in the program remaining.

Washington athletes still are required to sign a drug-testing consent form required by the NCAA.

Milo R. Lude, the university's athletics director, said O'Halloran would be welcomed back if she complies with the NCAA rules and Programs recommended for minorities, women

The NCAA Council in its April 18-20 meeting will consider several recommendations to enhance opportunities for ethnic minorities and women in intercollegiate athletics.

The recommendations were sent to the Council by the Administrative Committee after it considered several proposals by the Special Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics and the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics.

Raymond M. Burse, president of Kentucky State University, chairs the Council subcommittee, and the women's athletics committee is chaired by Phyllis Howlett of the Big Ten Conference.

The Administrative Committee has approved the creation of a position in the Association's national office to coordinate and administer an ethnic minority enhancement program, which the Council subcommittee has recommended be established.

The program would consist of an internship program in the national office for minority college graduates, a vita bank at the national office of qualified job candidates and a postgraduate scholarship program for minorities interested in sports administration.

The women's athletics committee has requested that the internship program be expanded to include women and that the length of the internship be nine to 12 months, that women be included in the vita-bank proposal, that 50 percent of the previously approved funds for postgraduate scholarships in sports administration be allocated to women, and that a subcommittee of representatives of the Committee on Women's Athletics and of the Council subcommittee be appointed to monitor the administration of the minority enhancement program.

The subcommittee on minorities has recommended internships at the national office that would last about 14 weeks, but it agrees that the program could be extended with

Format changed for June Forum; group discussion sessions planned

The format for the June 20-21 Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando, Florida, has been changed to provide a half day for each of three topics and to include "breakout" discussion sessions in each half day.

Meeting February 26 in Atlanta, the Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on the National Forum agreed to extend the schedule for the June Forum to a full day June 20 and a half day June 21. Originally, the program was scheduled from 1 p.m. June 20 to 1 p.m. June 21.

The committee also decided that those attending will be divided into seven smaller groups for discussion of each of the three topics on the agenda—the NCAA membership structure, NCAA legislative and interpretative procedures, and the proper basis of financial aid for student-athletes.

"The Commission's executive committee and the NCAA Administrative Committee suggested to us that the original time schedule was not sufficient to cover adequately these three important topics," said Bernard F. Sliger, president of Florida State University and chair of the ad hoc committee. "They proposed that each topic be allotted approximately half a day, and we agreed."

Those same groups also urged the ad hoc committee to achieve more interaction with delegates than has been possible in the previous two Forum sessions, in June 1987 and January 1988.

"Each of the first two programs featured a single topic, and that naturally led to something of a lecture approach," Sliger said. "With three distinct topics this time, we can schedule open discussion of each before moving to the next one."

"When delegates preregister for the Forum, each will be assigned to one of the seven discussion groups," he explained. "Each group will have a 'convener' who will coordinate the discussion, and the seven 'conveners' then will submit a coordinated report from the 'breakout' sessions when the full group reconvenes."

Sliger also said each group will

Final Four history parallels country's growth

(The fourth in a 10-part series commemorating the 50th anniversary of the NCAA Final Four)

The continental United States was much larger in the 1940s than it is today. It had nothing to do with geographical size. It had everything to do with being able to bridge those thousands of miles between East, Midwest and West.

Television was not part of every home then. Transcontinental air travel was for daredevils and military pilots, not vacationers and businessmen. Fast food was a peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

And college basketball was largely isolated in various regions, where everyone thought they had the best players and teams.

The game was strong along the Eastern seaboard from New York to Washington. Midwestern states like Indiana, Kansas and Oklahoma were considered hotbeds, as were Oregon, Washington and northern California in the West.

But teams in those areas had no way of judging just how they matched up against others. Inter-sectional play was infrequent and usually meant teams from the West and Midwest traveling long days on trains to the East to play in college double-headers at New York's Madison Square Garden.

"You didn't have any idea who was the best team in the country," said longtime DePaul University coach Ray Meyer, who retired in 1984. "Maybe one team from the West would come east, and then all the teams out there would gauge how well that team did against Eastern teams against how well they had played that team. You compared a lot of scores."

Slowly, the barriers of time and travel began to fall. Barnstorming tours like those taken by Stanford University, Oklahoma A&M College and the University of Oregon in the late 1930s helped change that. So did the developing NCAA basketball championship.

The first 11 championships made it apparent that basketball was played well everywhere in the country. The 22 teams that played for the title came from 18 states and from every region in the country. The tournament was bringing together East, West, Midwest, South and Southwest at the end of each year. Finally, there was a way of finding out just who was the best team.

"The key to Harold Olsen's original idea of a championship was establishing the eight different regions and that each region would

Football fatalities in 1987 were at an 11-year low

Deaths directly due to participation in football during 1987 equaled the lowest number recorded in the past 11 years and were down sharply from the 1986 season, according to an annual report on football-injury research.

Four deaths—all at the high school level—were directly attributable to football last season, according to the latest Annual Survey of Football-Injury Research. Another five deaths—three in high schools and two in colleges—were reported as indirectly due to football.

During the 1986 season, a decade-high 11 deaths were directly attributed to football, while eight deaths were due indirectly to the sport.

The report was prepared by Frederick O. Mueller of the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Richard D. Schindler, assistant director of the National Federation of State High School Associations. The annual study is conducted for the American Football Coaches Association, National Federation of State High School Associations and the NCAA.

Very low rate

Mueller and Schindler describe the number of directly related fatalities occurring in 1987 as "very low," considering that approximately 1.575 million people participated in the sport at the high school, college, sandlot, and professional and semi-professional levels.

New push on promotions is proposed

A new promotions package designed to increase awareness of NCAA championships and improve championships attendance was approved by the NCAA Communications Committee at its annual meeting February 23 in Kansas City.

The new plan, which includes five different promotion tiers, will go into effect for the 1988-89 championships season, if approved by the NCAA Executive Committee's Budget Subcommittee.

The new promotions package would include, among other items, television exposure for in-season women's basketball games and for the women's volleyball championship in Division I.

Two new features of the promotion plan would be the development of special video spots for selected championships and the provision of all promotional materials to a championships site six months before the event.

Promotional materials would include posters, premiums, radio spots and ticket trade-outs with local media. Every round of competition for each championship will be incorporated into the plan, including first- and second-round sites.

In other action, the committee:

- Voted to endorse a program of regional meetings with NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and student-athletes at member institutions.
- Suggested that the NCAA reinstitute regional media seminars.
- Recommended that the NCAA staff continue to attend meetings of member conferences and national organizations.
- Suggested that the NCAA be allowed to use photographs of eligible student-athletes in posters promoting NCAA championships.

The rate of directly related deaths per every 100,000 players was 0.25. Broken down, the rates are 0.30 in high school/junior high football and zero for college football.

Directly related deaths are defined as those resulting directly from participation in the fundamental skills of football (tackling, blocking, etc.). Indirect deaths are defined as fatalities caused by "systemic failure" as a result of exertion while participating in football (cardiac arrest, heat stroke, etc.), or by a complication that was secondary to a nonfatal injury.

The four directly related deaths recorded in 1987 equaled previous lows recorded in 1979 and 1983. The number of direct deaths has topped 10 only three times since rules were changed in 1976 to prohibit using the head as a primary and initial contact area for blocking and tackling. The number fell from 18 in 1976 to 10 in 1977, then fell to single figures before rising to 11 in 1986.

Two of the directly related deaths that occurred in 1987 resulted from head injuries and the other two resulted from neck injuries.

Games more hazardous

Mueller and Schindler also report that three of the direct deaths occurred during regularly scheduled games, compared to one in practice, and that three of the players suffered their injuries while tackling. The activity of the fourth player was unknown.

Two of the deaths occurred in September, one in October and one in November.

In addition to the deaths termed direct and indirect, four deaths were reported as not related to football. They involved a college player who collapsed while working out on his own and died from cardiac arrest; a college player who died after an asthma attack in his dormitory; a high school player who suffered cardiac arrest during minor knee surgery and died three months later, and a high school player who collapsed on a practice field and died due to reasons not related to football trauma.

"The authors of this research are convinced that the current rules (that) eliminate the head in blocking and tackling, the helmet research conducted by NOCSAE, excellent physical conditioning, and proper medical supervision have played the primary role in reducing fatalities and serious head and neck injuries in football," Mueller and Schindler state in the report.

They note that deaths related to head and cervical spine injuries increased from 1965 to 1974 but fell after the 1976 rule changes outlawing such activities as butting, ramming and spearing.

"There is no doubt that the 1976 rule change has made a difference and that a continued effort should be made to keep the head out of the fundamentals of football," the authors write.

Proper conditioning exercises, fundamentals and equipment should be made part of that effort, and emphasis should be placed on the idea that a helmet should be regarded as a protective device rather than a weapon, according to Mueller and Schindler. Also, coaches are urged to seek immediate medical attention and supervision for players who show any sign of head trauma.

Mueller and Schindler also urge increased vigilance for the problem of heat stroke, noting that it was the cause of 74 deaths from 1960 to 1987, compared to only five deaths from the survey's first year (1931) to 1959. One indirect death involving a high school player was attributed to heat stroke in 1987.

Other recommendations

The authors make several other recommendations based specifically on data collected during the 1987 football season:

- Mandatory medical examinations and medical histories should be taken before allowing an athlete to participate in football.

- All personnel concerned with training should emphasize proper, gradual and complete physical conditioning, with emphasis on neck-strengthening exercises.

- A physician should be present at all games and practice sessions.

- Personnel should be knowledgeable about problems and safety measures related to physical activity in hot weather.

- Institutions should try to retain an adequately prepared and qualified team trainer as a regular member of the faculty.

- Coaches, trainers, physicians, manufacturers, administrators and other groups interested in athletics medicine should maintain cooperative liaisons.

- Games rules and administrative regulations designed to protect the health of athletes should be enforced by administrators, coaches and officials.

- A renewed interest should be placed on employing well-trained personnel, providing excellent facilities, and securing the safest and best equipment possible.

- Research concerning safety in football should continue.

have a team in the tournament," said Howard Hobson, who coached the Oregon team that won the first championship game in 1939, beating Olsen's Ohio State University team, 46-33.

"A committee selected the teams, but everyone knew that each region would have a representative. You always had a chance to play for that spot. You didn't have to hope for an invitation. If you were successful in your conference, you knew there would be at least a play-off for the spot," Hobson said.

It would be safe to say that the East was in for the biggest surprise in the first NCAA championships. The Western champion won six of the first eight games: Oregon (1939), Stanford (1942), the University of Wyoming (1943), the University of Utah (1944) and Oklahoma A&M (1945 and 1946). Branch McCracken's 1940 Indiana University, Bloomington, team and the 1941 University of Wisconsin, Madison, team under Harold Foster were the only Eastern teams able to beat the West.

Oregon's first title had been built on a 10-game, 22-day barnstorming tour of the East and Midwest early in the season. Hobson said the trip exposed his players to difficult opponents, officiating and conditions, and prepared them for the tournament. Henry Iba's Oklahoma A&M teams made similar trips, and that helped build tournament toughness.

Maybe the most surprising of those early Western victories was by Utah in 1944. World War II was at its height then, and many colleges were forced to cancel sports seasons because of the lack of able young men. It was under these circumstances that a team of homegrown Utah players made its way to New York to play for the NCAA championship.

The Utes averaged 18 years of age and had not yet been drafted for the war. They played a Dartmouth College team dominated by older players, who had been sent there for schooling by the military. Utah won, 42-40, in overtime.

"I think it would be hard to find in the history of the tournament two teams that were so different as Utah and Dartmouth that year," said C. Arnold Ferrin, an 18-year-old freshman on the Utah team who won the tournament's most-valuable-player award. He is chair of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, which selects the teams and coordinates the 64-team tournament.

"Dartmouth had Dick McGuire, and he had been an all-America at St. John's University (New York) before he ended up in the service. We had a bunch of kids from Utah, and only two of us had ever been outside the state."

The last five championship games in the 1940s produced the first back-to-back winners. Not surprisingly, they were coached by two of the game's great coaches: Iba, with his Oklahoma A&M teams led by 7-foot center Bob Kurland, did it in 1945 and 1946, and Adolph Rupp had his University of Kentucky team winning the 1948 and 1949 championships. Only Holy Cross College in 1947, with George Kaftan and a young Bob Cousy, was able to break up these early dynasties.

And the tournament continued to grow. After early success in Kansas City, the title game was moved to New York City's Madison Square Garden, where for six years it built a base of support in the country's most influential city.

"A lot of people didn't like the idea of playing in New York, but there is no question it helped establish the tournament," said Hall of Fame coach Pete Newell, who won the 1959 championship while at the University of California, Berkeley. "Let's face it, at that time, to make it, you had to make it in New York. I think the tournament did, and it just grew from there," Newell said.

Program

The June session now is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. Monday, June 20, at the Hyatt Orlando. The ad hoc committee is attempting to schedule a keynote speaker to lead off the program, after which the three topics will be presented in this order:

Morning, June 20: NCAA membership structure. A speaker will outline the encompassing issues in this topic, emphasizing greater "federation" of the membership divisions and subdivisions. A second speaker will argue for greater autonomy for the major athletics programs, and a third will suggest caution in the move toward increased "federation." After a break, the topic will be discussed in the seven smaller group sessions.

Afternoon, June 20: NCAA procedures. The first speaker on this topic will review the issues involved in refining the Association's legislative and interpretative procedures, followed by two other speakers—one calling for radical changes in those procedures and the other proposing more moderate adjustments. The seven separate discussion groups then will convene after a break.

Morning, June 21: Financial aid. An opening speaker will present a case for basing athletically related the consent of the NCAA, the institution and the students involved.

The vita bank would assist member institutions seeking to fill athletics positions.

The subcommittee has recommended that sports-administration postgraduate scholarships be valued at $6,000 each and that about 10 be available for minority candidates in the fall of 1988. The Executive Committee already has approved $200,000 for such a program.

At its February 17-19 meeting, the Committee on Women's Athletics asked the Council to sponsor legislation that would allow a full-financial aid on the demonstrated need of the individual student-athlete, and another will propose increased aid for athletes. Then, a panel of members of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism will review that committee's study and preliminary recommendations. After the morning break, the seven "breakout" groups will discuss this topic.

A reception for all attending the Forum is scheduled for the evening of June 20.

Attendance

The ad hoc committee also developed plans for encouraging attendance at the Orlando session, noting that a turnout of 500 to 600 is expected.

"We realize that this session of the Forum is the only one not held in conjunction with an NCAA Convention," Sliger said, "and there is no expectation that institutions will send as many delegates as they do to a Convention."

"The committee does believe, however, that most members will want to be represented at the Forum and will be encouraged by the opportunity to take part in smaller discussion sessions. The Presidents Commission will be urging chief executive officers either to attend in person or to assure that their institutions are represented at the meeting."

Registration materials and hotel information will be mailed to the membership later this month.

Field hockey championships have no automatic qualifiers

The topics of automatic qualification and rules modifications highlighted the NCAA Field Hockey Committee's February 22-25 meeting in Kansas City.

The committee voted to recommend to the Association's Executive Committee that a conference must have a minimum of two institutions in the championship field from the previous year and must be judged competitive with regard to both won-lost record and strength of schedule in order to be considered for automatic qualification.

The committee did not grant automatic qualification to any conferences for the 1988 Division I and Division III championships.

The committee voted to retain the rules modification that allows a goal to be scored from any point on the playing field. This modification was supported by the results of the coaches survey.

The committee also added the terms "long hits" and "sideline hits" to define a ball outside the field of play in the modification pertaining to free hits on or within the offensive 25-yard line.

The committee will recommend the University of Pennsylvania as the host institution for the Division I semifinals and final November 19 and 20, 1988.

The Division III semifinals and final will be held November 11 and 12 on the campus of one of the finalists.

Fights during games should result in suspensions

By Randy Minkoff

Several Big Ten Conference coaches have voiced concern about fights in college basketball games, saying suspending players could help curb violence in the game.

The Big Ten has been known as one of the most physical conferences in the country. However, the league hasn't had any cases of bench-clearing fights this year.

Purdue University head men's coach Gene Keady said coaches, rather than officials, should bear the responsibility of increased fighting in college games. He suggested a two-game suspension for players involved in fights.

"So much of the fighting occurs as a retaliation thing," Keady said. "I just believe it is my responsibility if there is a fight to make sure that the players understand that I won't tolerate it."

Ohio State University's Gary Williams, who said he has only had his teams involved in fisticuffs three times in 10 years, said the increased fighting is a dangerous trend.

"I think the players see fights on the pro game filter on down to our game," he said. "Maybe one way of stopping it is a suspension of the players involved."

Williams agreed that coaches, rather than officials, are the ones who can prevent fights.

"I think as a coach it is my responsibility," he said. "Officials, if they start to call it too closely, are going to be criticized for doing it that way."

Northwestern University coach Bill Foster didn't offer a suggestion to curb fighting but said the issue has to be addressed.

"We have to start paying attention to do something to curb it, because it is getting to be a serious problem," Foster said.

Michigan State University coach Jud Heathcote said once someone swings, "it's time for a one- or two-game suspension." He said coaches must caution players not to get carried away in physical contests.

"It's something we're going to have to look at more closely. Instead of fewer fights, we're getting more," he said. "If you leave the bench, it's a technical. We thought it would alleviate bench clearing, yet it hasn't stopped it."

University of Michigan coach Bill Frieder also said the NCAA should consider game suspensions for players involved in fights.

"I think we can't allow it to mar one of the greatest spectator sports," Frieder said.

"Referees have to stay on top of it. If a kid is ejected, an NCAA rule should be put in for a game or two. We have to hit this hard and deal with it. We had a couple of shoving matches ourselves, but I thought the referees and Jud and myself handled it."

Academic progress best left to schools

By Carl F. Ullrich

George Schubert's letter in the February 10 issue of The NCAA News and your excerpt from The Washington Post editorial in the same issue disturbed me deeply, and I feel a need to make some comment.

One issue in the ultimate defeat of Proposition 39 (enhanced academic requirements for Division I athletics eligibility) at the January 1988 NCAA Convention that has been overlooked in much of the rhetoric is the fact that Division I members of the Presidents Commission overwhelmingly indicated opposition to passage of this legislation. Father Edward Glynn of St. Peter's College made this statement on the Convention floor just prior to the final vote.

There were a number of people

who spoke much more eloquently than I to the negative aspects of passage of this legislation.

I can only say that we at the U.S. Military Academy sincerely believe that such legislation would move student-athletes struggling with the difficult courses to lighter course loads and the easier choice of less

Deeds can make better role models

"The saddest and greatest teacher is experience. Remember how sad it is? A lot of people end up dead from having to experience something.

"My major concern is and forget about basketball, I'm talking about life—what are you going to do when you go down this road, and there is a barrier, or you go up this hill, and someone says this is the end here.

"We want people to be role models. And people make mistakes. Then our bubble is crushed. That doesn't add up. Deeds should be the role model, not people. Put that in your grab bag and go from there."

Glenn Tropsf, varsity basketball player

"They wanted it (three-point shot) to change the game, and there isn't much doubt it has done that.

"Putting it (the three-point line) out there at 23 feet or whatever it is for the pros just wouldn't work. It's not up to me to say if the rule is right or wrong, but I like it.

"It's not a chip shot. It's a fair distance. Guys who used to play are talking about how they would have scored x-amount of points with the rule, but they wouldn't have scored all that much more."

Ray Patterson, president, general manager

Beaumont Enterprise

"It's easy for a (sports) agent to come in and say, 'Boy, I'm going to protect you against the plantation boss,' or, 'We're going to protect you against all that white establishment.'

"Unfortunately, Blacks are in a position to buy that stuff. Because Blacks have been mistreated and they have been misused; naturally, if some great white savior is going to come in and say, 'I'm going to save you from the worst of the white world,' Blacks are going to buy it.

"But it just boggles my mind when I see players come in and be represented by people who don't have one-tenth the brain power that the player has himself.

"The agents that players should never deal with are agents who give them money up front. But there's a great temptation when somebody hasn't had money all of his life."

John H. Harvey, director of athletics

Athletic Administration

"This year, 1988, is critical. Lack of action (on athletics reform) by the nation's small colleges will indicate one of two conditions: that they don't feel improvement of college sports is all that important to Division III, or that this unique division, without outside guidance, is not independently strong enough to mount the reform movement. Either would be a discouraging message to send.

"We can't hope that, initially, the big-time athletics powers... will accept educational and moral leadership from a band of institutions in a division that, at times, almost has been forgotten. But confidence in an intelligent and cooperative movement for reform among well-known small colleges in the largest numerfriends and family only to have my spot jeopardized by a great athlete who makes hundreds of thousands of dollars in another sport.

"There should be a place in the Olympics for an amateur like me. It may be impossible to prevent politicization of the Olympics, and it's probably too late to stop the professionalization of the Games, but I hope the Olympics can continue to give amateur athletes the opportunity to participate equally in this ultimate competition.

"Soon, there will be no amateurs left. Two professionals gave up the National Hockey League season to play for the Canadian hockey team. I don't have a big problem with that. But timing is important. When a professional athlete can come in at the last minute and replace an amateur who already has qualified for the team, something is wrong."

Maybe the NCAA needs a rule against making more rules

By Rodney C. Kelchner

Delegates to the 82nd annual Convention of the NCAA in January at Nashville approved 122 changes in the rules and regulations governing intercollegiate athletics.

The same organization met in Dallas only six months earlier and approved numerous new rules at the gathering.

The NCAA alters rules too often. Is it any wonder that athletics directors and college presidents are hard-pressed to keep up?

I have felt for some time that the NCAA is in danger of sinking itself with detail. In an effort to legislate fairness, the organization has created a jungle of legal tripwires.

Even the most conscientious coaches and administrators are in danger of stumbling over a few of them.

In dark moments, I think maybe we need a rule against more rules. At the very least, we need to examine what has led to the current situation.

Individually, one can make a good case for many of the rules. Let's look at one of the minor regulations approved at the Convention as a case in point.

The delegates approved a proposal allowing athletics officials to transport a recruiting prospect to the campus from the bus or train station or the airport. Only one round trip is permitted.

Delegates felt this matter of common courtesy had to be codified to prevent abuses.

By itself, such a rule is all right. We have hundreds of rules, however, to enforce. We ought to be looking at root causes of problems rather than addressing each potential transgression.

Fights

University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, coach Clem Haskins offered a dissenting view, insisting the fights fans have seen on recent national television games may not signal a trend.

"The fighting in basketball isn't anything to be concerned about," said Haskins. "In the heat of the battle, things like that happen and emotions run high. I don't see anything serious happening there."

Minkoff writes for United Press International.

Game's proceeds used to assist scholarship funds

The University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, athletics department has made a $50,000 gift to the school's university fund from proceeds received from the Collegiate Legends Classic basketball game between the Tar Heels' alumni and University of California, Los Angeles, alumni.

The basketball game, played last June at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, matched North Carolina's Dean Smith and the Bruins' former coach John Wooden. The Tar Heels won the nationally televised contest.

Proceeds from the game and television rights were shared equally by the two schools. UCLA used its share to create the Nell and John Wooden Postgraduate Scholarship Fund. The Carolina portion was designated by Tar Heel athletics director John D. Swofford and Smith to be donated to the university fund, which helps qualified students who have limited funds.

Happily, that seems to be the direction of the new leadership.

In his speech to delegates, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said it might be a good idea to hold Conventions to address a single topic such as academics or recruiting or financial aid.

If that were done, the NCAA could tackle a subject in depth and come up with a plan to reduce the tangle of rules, while making enforcement more effective.

Rodney C. Kelchner

College presidents have been urged to be more involved in the fight against abuses in intercollegiate athletics. I don't think most will be able to do that unless the NCAA streamlines operations.

Athletics, remember, is just one of many areas of concern for a college president.

Relatively few presidents can devote a great deal of energy to enforcing the regulations of an organization that changes its rules 122 times at a single Convention.

The good news is that the NCAA leadership seems to recognize the problem. The next step is to do something about it.

Kelchner is president of Mansfield University of Pennsylvania and was the representative of the 14-school Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference at the recent NCAA Convention.

Academic

difficult courses.

Consequently, they would move into majors programs such as highlighted in television bowl coverage — "general studies" and "undergraduate studies."

How can anyone see fairness in ruling a junior student-athlete ineligible in the fall semester on the basis of a 1.750 grade-point average at the end of his sophomore year with a course load of 19 to 21 credit hours throughout his four semesters majoring in electrical or nuclear engineering and at the same time declaring eligible a student-athlete with a 1.800 grade-point average in a meaningless major having taken 12 credit hours per semester during his first two years in residence?

There is a basic unfairness in having some outside agency decide for each institution the athletics eligibility of its students.

Academic progress is required by our institution, not for athletics eligibility but for the privilege of remaining a cadet.

Each of us as members of the NCAA needs the flexibility to make these academic integrity and academic progress decisions for ourselves.

Everyone should consider the issue from this perspective.

Division I track offers two stories in one place

The settings have been the same for the men and the women in Division I indoor track over the past four seasons, but the stories have been very different.

Since 1984, first at Syracuse and then at Oklahoma City, there have been four different women's champions. On the men's side, Arkansas has won every showdown, last March becoming the first team to win four straight national indoor championships.

Another chapter in these contrasting sagas will be written at the 1988 Division I Men's and Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Among the women, defending champion Louisiana State suffered heavy graduation losses. Tennessee, Villanova, Arizona and Texas will be among the challengers bidding to maintain the tradition of crowning a new champion every year.

Meanwhile, Arkansas' men, after seeing their margin of victory dwindle to eight points last season, will seek to add to their remarkable modern legacy of success in cross country, indoor and outdoor track.

Men's championships

Arkansas likes its brand of monotony.

Since 1984, the Razorbacks have found the results of Division I track and cross country championships delightfully dull. Coach John McDonnell's team has captured seven national titles in that span, four of them indoors. With the 1987 cross country crown already in hand, a fifth straight Razorback victory indoors would be another step toward the three-title sweep they first accomplished in 1985.

"We had a good conference meet, but I don't think we're as strong as in the past," McDonnell said. "We have a few good people but not the overall strength. We will just have to depend on some other athletes coming through at the right time."

Cross country champion Joe Falcon will lead the Arkansas effort in 1988. Falcon's victory in November gave him individual NCAA titles in three different seasons. In 1987, he captured the 3,000 meters indoors and the 10,000 outdoors. Cross country teammate Reuben Reina, all-America in the mile, and Canadian record-holder Doug Consiglio also should contribute distance points once again.

Roddie Haley, two-time champion and record-holder in the 500 meters and one of the world's leading quarter-milers, has sat out the indoor season with academic woes.

The Razorback 3,200-meter relay team, which set a record at last year's meet, has been unable to match that chemistry in 1988. However, Lorenzo Brown could contribute individual points in the 800.

McDonnell foresees a wide-open battle for the title, with fast-rising Illinois among his leading challengers.

The Illini are led by middle-distance standout Carlton Hamer and Timothy Simon, outdoor distance all-America David Halle, and pole vaulter Dean Starkey.

Southwest Conference rival Southern Methodist again will be one of Arkansas' leading challengers for national honors. Mustang senior Kevin Robinsone finished just behind Haley at both the indoor and outdoor meets in 1987 and now hopes to run out of Roddie's shadow. Robinsone also anchors Southern Methodist's national-championship 1,600-meter relay team, which brings to Oklahoma City a streak of three straight titles.

The Mustangs' other defending indoor champion is shot putter Lars Nilsen, who also won the 1986 outdoor crown.

Farther behind Arkansas and Southern Methodist last March were Indiana and Georgetown, which themselves staged individual battles. The Hoosiers and the Hoyas placed just behind Arkansas in the 3,200-meter relay, and Georgetown's Michael Stahr edged Indiana's Mark Deady for the mile championship. Both will be back at the championships.

Tied with the Hoosiers and the Hoyas for third was McNeese State, which again will be led by individual standout Brian Cooper. Cooper, now a senior, was second in both the long jump and the 55-meter dash.

Other individuals to watch will include two-time 55-meter dash champion Lee McRae of Pittsburgh, currently ranked sixth in the world in the 100; 1,000-meter champion Robin Van Helden of Louisiana State, and long jumpers Andre Ester of Northeast Louisiana and Kenny Harrison of Kansas State.

Schowanda Williams

Joe Falcon

Women's championships

Louisiana State's perch atop the indoor field is a precarious one.

The Tigers, easy winners over Southeastern Conference rival Tennessee at last year's meet, have lost to graduation the field-event nucleus of long jump champion Sheila Echols, high jumper Kym Carter and shot putter Theresa Williford.

But Louisiana State remains strong in the middle distances, where Schowanda Williams will try to improve on her fourth-place finish in the 500 meters. Opal Cunningham and Danyel Wofford also return from the Tigers' championship 1,600-meter relay team.

Tennessee also lost much of its 1987 scoring to graduation. Gone are runners-up Ilrey Oliver (500 meters) and Alisa Harvey (1,000 meters). But the Lady Volunteers have a returning star in senior Lavonna Martin, champion in the 55-meter hurdles. Gary Schwartz's Tennessee team has been indoor runner-up three times in the last five seasons and hopes to finally move up in 1988.

Villanova, long noted for its distance specialists, will rely on a dependable junior class in its hopes to move up. Vicki Huber won the 3,000 meters last March and repeated that victory at the outdoor meet. Classmates Celeste Halliday and Kathy Franey were sixth in other races, Halliday in the 1,000 and Franey in the mile. The Wildcats also were champions in the 3,200-meter relay.

Arizona scored well in the field events in 1987 but must do without two graduated jumpers. Katrina Johnson was second in the high jump and Carole Jones third in the triple jump. Back in the Arizona fold is Carla Garrett, runner-up in the indoor shot put.

Texas, Division I champion in 1986, slipped to fourth last season but has enough returning talent to contend again. Senior Karen Nelson was third in the 55-meter dash, and the Longhorns also will depend on such proven distance veterans as Trina Leopold and Kelly Champagne.

Wisconsin also will score well in the distances. Suzy Favor took only her freshman year to establish herself as one of the brightest distance stars in the history of NCAA women's track. After finishing as runner-up in cross country in 1986, Favor captured the mile at the indoor meet and set a meet record in winning the 1,500 outdoors.

Other returning champions include Trena Hull, Nevada-Las Vegas, 1,000 meters; Lisa Bernhagen, Stanford high jump, and Yvette Bates, Southern California, triple jump.

Other contenders for team honors include Stanford, Southern California and Nebraska.

Championships profile

Event: Division I men's and women's indoor track.

Field: Twenty athletes per event (except for 24 in the 55-meter hurdles) and 12 teams in the relays will participate, based on qualifying times made during regularly scheduled indoor meets.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: Arkansas won a fourth straight men's title in 1987, besting second-place Southern Methodist by eight points (39-31). Louisiana State won the women's title with 49 points. Tennessee (30) finished second.

Schedule: The men's and women's championships will be contested March 11-12 in The Myriad, Oklahoma City.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will appear in the March 16 issue of the News.

Contenders: Men's contenders include Arkansas, Indiana and Southern Methodist. Women's contenders include Arizona, Louisiana State, Tennessee and Villanova.

Championships notes: Only two men's records (3,200-meter relay and high jump) were set at the 1987 championships... Six women's records were set at the same meet... Nebraska's 1984 women's team scored the most points (59) in the championships, and Texas-El Paso (76 in 1980 and 1981) scored the most points in men's team competition... Athletes from 55 different institutions scored points a year ago in men's events... Women's competitors from 34 different institutions scored points in 1987.

St. Augustine's teams are Division II contenders again

Even with coach George Williams in England, St. Augustine's managed to claim titles in both the men's and the women's Division II Indoor Track and Field Championships last March. Williams, who was helping the U.S. national team to its own victory against European competition while his collegians were winning national crowns, will be back for the 1988 Division II showdown.

"They did all right without me," Williams said. "I may just go back over and see if it works again."

The Mighty Falcon men, who enjoyed a 74-38 margin over runner-up Mount St. Mary's (Maryland), again will be the favorite. The St. Augustine's women's team, stung by several key losses, will face a strong challenge from Hampton.

Men's championships

Traditionally laden with talent in the sprints and jumps, St. Augustine's will rely on the same strengths at Vermillion.

Joining a strong nucleus returning from last year's championship team is freshman high jumper Darren Moore, who has cleared the 7-foot mark on a consistent basis this winter.

"Overall, we've been very impressive," Williams said. "We just have to keep our composure at the nationals and do what we have to do."

Derrick Knowles, defending champion in the 55-meter hurdles, is among the Mighty Falcons' top veterans. Also returning are Terrell Carpenter, second in the long jump and fourth in the 55-meter dash last season, and Trevor Graham, second to teammate Tyrone Harrell in the 400 meters.

Triple jumper Earl Randolph and the usual sprint depth will further bolster the St. Augustine's cause. Four athletes have qualified in the 55 meters, and the Mighty Falcon 1,600-meter relay team has shaved over a half-second from last year's championship time.

Abilene Christian, which bypassed the Division II meet in 1987, is likely to be a major factor this time around. The Wildcats have won six straight Division II outdoor crowns. Don Hood's team, long noted for excellence in the pole vault, will be represented by three vaulters who placed at last year's outdoor meet.

Among the Wildcat's other standouts are outdoor shot put champion Ahmed Shata, sprinter Greg Meghoo and distance specialist Michael Moloto.

Mount St. Mary's (Maryland), with its brilliant Kenyan distance specialists, will be a contender based almost solely on its points in the longer events.

The Mountaineers' Charles Cherviyot, the 1987 Division II cross country champion, will seek to add to a collection of individual titles that also includes the 5,000 meters at last year's indoor meet and the same event at the last two outdoor championships.

Twin brother Kip, who sat out the cross country season after an exhausting summer of international competition, is the defending champion in the 1,500 meters both indoors and outdoors. Both brothers have held the world junior records in their specialties.

Also on hand for Mount St. Mary's will be Peter Rono, runner-up to Charles Cherviyot at last fall's cross country championships.

Southeast Missouri State, champion in 1985, loses the services of such standouts as outdoor pole vault champion Bob Ferguson, hurdler Derec Haynes and distance man Pedro Caceres. But the Indians return Art Waddle, outdoor cham-

Event: Division II men's and women's indoor track.

Fields: In men's competition, 102 athletes will participate in 11 individual events, and six teams will compete in the 1,600-meter relay. Ninety women will compete in individual events, and six teams will run in the 1,600-meter relay.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: St. Augustine's (74 points) literally ran away from the men's field a year ago. Second-place Mount St. Mary's (Maryland) had 38. St. Augustine's women's team captured the title with 73 points. Hampton, with 62, finished second.

Schedule: The University of South Dakota will host the March 11-12 championships.

The NCAA News coverage: Complete championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of the News.

Contenders: Abilene Christian, Mount St. Mary's (Maryland) and St. Augustine's will contend for the men's crown. Women's contenders will include St. Augustine's, Hampton and New York Tech.

Championships notes: Athletes from 24 schools scored points in the 1987 men's finals... Athletes from 23 schools scored points in the 1987 women's finals... St. Augustine's has dominated these championships in their short (two-year) history. The women's team has captured both titles, while the men's squad won in 1987 and finished second in 1985... The championships were not held in 1986.

Anything could happen during Division III finals

The Division III Men's and Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships are shaping as wild and unpredictable. Anything could happen.

No clear favorites have emerged for the fourth Division III meet. On the women's side, Massachusetts-Boston has won three straight titles but has been beset by injuries. Among the men, four teams were within 13 points of the crown a year ago. And the picture has been further scrambled on both sides by the influx of East Coast teams that elected to pass up last year's meet in Chicago.

Men's championships

If Wisconsin-LaCrosse can repeat as men's champion, the Indians would become the first team to win the Division III indoor title for a second time. The meet's history has seen leaders come to the fore only to fade again. In three years, six different teams have claimed the champion and runner-up spots.

New Wisconsin-LaCrosse head coach Mark Guthrie is not sure that

Championships Previews

his team can be the one to break the pattern.

"We have a lot of people on our squad and we have some talent, but I really don't know what we're up against," Guthrie said. "We just don't see much of the other teams until the nationals. But I know we would have to score more points than we did last year."

A powerful nucleus of field-event scorers will be supplemented by distance specialists from the Indians' Division III runner-up cross country squad.

At the top of the roster is Terry Strouf, champion in both the shot put and the 35-pound weight throw last season. Strouf, who twice has captured both the indoor and outdoor shot titles, set meet records in both events last season. He still has a season remaining.

Also on hand for Wisconsin-LaCrosse are triple jumpers Chris Schumacher and Eric Keller and sprinter Earl Novotney. All have been all-America. Cross country stars Jim Batchelor and Mike Junig again will bolster the distance effort.

St. Lawrence has one of the division's top sprinters in Tim McCrossen, 400-meter champion indoors and 100-meter champion outdoors. McCrossen also anchors a 1,600-meter relay team that returns almost intact from last year's third-place finish.

Rich Wright, third in the 35-pound weight throw, will be counted upon for points, as will freshman pole vaulter Alex Grelland.

Frostburg State, the 1987 outdoor champion, also will be among the leaders. The Bobcats captured the 1986 indoor title as well. Gone are indoor individual winners Joseph Barber (55-meter dash) and Maynard Hurd (55-meter hurdles), pion in the 10,000 meters, and 1,500-meter specialist Brian Radle.

Norfolk State boasts a brilliant individual performer in long jumper Kerry Vivett, who won national titles both indoors and outdoors last year as a freshman. The Spartans also will score points with sprinter Martin Smith.

Ashland is led by shot putter John Walters and 800-meter man Dariusz Janczewski, both juniors.

Other contenders for the men's championship could include Northwest Missouri State, Central Missouri State and Liberty.

Women's championships

If St. Augustine's has confidence in its men's team, George Williams' women's squad will face a stiff challenge from its own backyard. Hampton, a narrow runner-up to the Lady Falcons last winter, scored a decisive victory over St. Augustine's in the championships of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

St. Augustine's ranks were thinned by graduation, including that of sprinter and long jump champion Regina Hawkins. In addition, three qualifying athletes have been suspended after discipline problems. But the Lady Falcons will not travel to South Dakota bereft of talent, and St. Augustine's likely will maintain its reputation in the sprints and jumps.

Back on hand is Kim Scott, defending champion in the 55-meter hurdles. The St. Augustine's cause also has been bolstered by the addition of a pair of dynamic freshmen. Newcomer Sheena Sturup will be among the favorites in the 55 meters, and classmate Cynthia Baggett will contend in the long jump.

New York Tech, loaded with veteran talent on both the men's and women's sides, has improved throughout the winter, notching victories against the East Coast's top teams. Pete Zinno's team, strongest in the 400 and the triple jump, will be among the leaders at Vermilion.

St. Augustine's and Hampton compete long before reaching the nationals, dueling in local and conference meets. And Hampton's decisive victory over the Lady Falcons in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships does not bode well for Williams' women's team.

Hampton too relies on sprinters and jumpers. Defending champion Vivienne Spence (400 meters) is joined by speedy teammates Maureen Wiltshire, Debra Alexander and Santa Williams.

Like their men counterparts, the Southeast Missouri State women's team, fourth last season, loses several key performers, including sprint star Michelle Hicks. Back for the Otahkians, however, are sophomore Benita Thomas, fourth in the 55 meters indoors and fourth in the outdoor 100; seniors Kehinde Vaughan (400) and Laura Byrne (1,500), and junior LeAnn Powers (shot put).

Norfolk State boasts several promising young sprinters, including Denise Liles, third in a strong 55-meter field as a freshman last season.

Other contenders for team honors could include Air Force, Navy and Southern Connecticut State.

Tennessee Tech, South Florida test rifle's best

Tennessee Tech and South Florida are ready to give Murray State and West Virginia a test at the 1988 NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships. Both teams turned in impressive qualifying scores, and each has the potential to pull an upset if either the Racers or Mountaineers have an off day.

Just listen to the coaches:

Jim Newkirk, Tennessee Tech: "This is the best team we've had in the past five years... we are vastly improved over the past couple of years."

"We're not there yet... not ready to make a strong challenge for the overall championship, in my opinion. We're probably a year away. I think Murray State will win, with West Virginia second. I think it's a toss up between Tech and South Florida for third and fourth."

"I also think Tennessee-Martin is the darkhorse of the field. (Head coach) Bob Beard has done a marvelous job with that team."

Roger Johnson, South Florida: "We shot our worst match of the year in qualifying (for the championships). We beat Tennessee-Martin by 45 points the night before but lost to them by two (in the qualifying match)."

"I think the overall team competition between (Tennessee) Tech, WVU, Murray State and South Florida will be much closer than in past years. West Virginia still has a great team, for example, but they seem to have off days now."

"We have the shooters capable of doing quite well this year."

Elvis Green, Murray State: "We lost to West Virginia by 30 points during the regular season, but we have those 30 points in these shooters... we just didn't get them."

"South Florida is going to be tough, and Jim Newkirk has a vastly improved team at Tennessee Tech. We're already preparing the shooters for the finals. We're looking forward to it."

Greg Perrine, West Virginia: "We finished the regular season undefeated, and we fired against every potential contender except for South Florida and Air Force. Web Wright has shot quite well. He has an 1,173 average in smallbore (1,200 is perfect) in 10 matches."

"Every shooter has helped the team this season, and the coaching transition (Perrine is filling in for Ed Etzel, who is completing doctoral work at Duke University) has been excellent."

Scores have been down this season, according to the coaches. Winning teams in dual and invitational matches have been finishing closer to the rest of the field than at the 1987 championships, for example, where Murray State and West Virginia finished almost 30 points ahead of third-place South Florida.

In the individual competition, defending champions Wright (smallbore) from West Virginia and Tennessee-Martin's Rob Harbison, who surprised the 1987 field with a stunning victory in air rifle, will be back. Here, too, tighter-than-ever competition is expected.

Following is a list of teams and individuals who have qualified to shoot at the championships:

Teams: Alaska-Fairbanks (4,590 smallbore, 1,547 air rifle), Murray State (4,629, 1,547), Navy (4,601, 1,510), St. John's (New York) (4,573, 1,526), South Florida (4,633, 1,525), Tennessee-Martin (4,577, 1,527), Tennessee Tech (4,641, 1,529), West Virginia (4,628, 1,542).

Tennessee-Martin's Rob Harbison became the first shooter not representing one of those three schools to win an individual title when he captured the 1987 air rifle championship... This is the only NCAA championships event where men and women compete side-by-side, against each other, for individual and team honors... VMI hosted the 1982 championships.

Middlebury skiers set to have fun at contenders' expense

Middlebury will stay home and try to have some fun at the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships.

The Panthers can stay home because they host the event for the first time in 28 years. And they will have fun playing the spoiler in what otherwise will be the traditional showdown between Vermont and Utah.

Vermont still is the class of the East, which it has dominated the last 20 years or so. And defending champion Utah again is emerging as the leader of the pack in the West.

However, neither team has found winning easy skiing this winter.

"It is an interesting team," Vermont coach Chip LaCasse said of his Catamounts. "We have a lot of young people, and we really have been pushed hard."

Dartmouth's men's and Middlebury's women's alpine teams have challenged Vermont through the winter carnival season. The Catamounts lost the men's alpine competition at Bates and Middlebury.

"My biggest concern is whether we have learned to ski as a team rather than as individuals," LaCasse said. "We have created all of our own problems. The big question is how good are we compared to the top four in the West."

Dean Keller will lead the attack for the Cats. He was fourth in the slalom and third in the giant slalom last year.

"There is no question that Middlebury and Dartmouth can displace some points in the alpine events," said Pat Miller, whose Utes have won five of the last seven championships. "But we may be hitting our stride."

In a season where the meets have been decided by margins of five to 15 points, Utah dominated the regional competition in late February with a 30-point edge over its nearest competitor.

Utah's Vibeke Hoff, who won the women's giant slalom and finished second in the slalom last year, is the only returning national champion in any of the individual events. Utah's Henrik Smith-Meyer, third in the slalom last year, and Colorado's John Walsh, second in the giant slalom, will lead the charge for the West in the men's Alpine events.

Wyoming may be Utah's biggest challenge in the West. Alpine skier David Kincaid is ranked second in the slalom, and Dag Bjorndahl is the top-ranked skier in the West in the individual cross country competition.

The following is an event-by-event ranking of the top qualifiers in the East prior to regional competition and in the West following Event: Men's and women's skiing.

Field: Approximately 160 competitors (80 men and 80 women) will be selected.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: Utah won the school's second straight championship with a 710-627 victory over Vermont.

Schedule: Middlebury College will host the championships March 9-12.

Women's events were added beginning with the 1983 championships.

Division III contenders hope for home-ice edge

Unlike last year, when Plattsburgh State plowed through the opposition en route to the national title, this year's Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship is shaping up as a four-team race.

The one variable that might turn the tide for the eventual winner is the home-ice advantage that will be awarded to the top seed in the tournament.

With the conference play-offs in progress, Babson, Bemidji State, Elmira and Wisconsin-River Falls all are aiming to be the top seed. The four schools know all about the comforts of home, as evidenced by their combined 46-8 record on friendly ice.

"We would love to stay at home for the duration of the tournament," said Elmira assistant coach Al Hill, who also handles the school's sports information duties. "To play the entire championship on your own ice would be a big advantage."

The Babson Beavers (20-6), winners of the first Division III championship in 1984, are playing as well as anyone right now. Tom Sasso (31 goals, 24 assists, 55 points), winner of the college division's Hobey Baker Award the last two years, leads the way for Babson. The senior is on the verge of breaking the all-time school marks for goals, assists and points. Joining Sasso on the first line are Ron Beran (23-20-43) and Shawn Martin (12-23-35). Sasso has connected on seven game-winning goals, while Beran has scored 14 power-play goals.

Tom Sasso

Tricaptain Joe Flaherty, a physical defenseman, leads the way for the Beaver blue-liners. Jim Creamer and Todd Crabtree (5-4-9) will also play an important role at the defensive end.

Championship Preview

Freshman goaltender Joe Caprini has had a banner season, posting a 2.62 goals-against average as well as a .907 save percentage.

Despite losing six of their top 18 players to injury at midseason, the Bemidji State Beavers won 13 of 14 games from November 21 to January 9, including a nine-game winning skein. The Minnesota-based Beavers, 21-6-3, have one of the country's highest scoring lines in Ian Resch (14-52-66), Dan Richards (32-26-58) and Jim Tyler (34-24-58).

Despite the loss of two-time all-America defenseman Greg Biskup to a shattered kneecap December 18, the defense has held up well. Terry Mattson (5-28-33) and Tom Shinabarger (4-26-30) have excelled at both ends of the ice.

Steve O'Shea has notched a 14-5-3 record in goal for the Beavers. He had a 3.11 goals-against average and a .904 save percentage at the end of the regular season.

Expectations are high at Elmira, where the Soaring Eagles have spent some time this season as the top-ranked team in Division III.

Elmira started quickly with an 8-0 burst and has continued to play consistent hockey. The Soaring Eagle won 12 of their last 14 regular-season contests, including 4-0 and 7-2 victories over Plattsburgh State.

George Swarbrick (10-21-31) centers the top line, flanked by left wing Hank Banas (18-15-33) and right wing Tom Morrissey (13-22-35).

The Soaring Eagles are a big team, but one that skates very well.

Defensively, the unit is solid with Dan Williams (7-23-30) and Mike Nelson patrolling the blue line.

In goal, Tony Mongillo has been very steady all year long. The senior allowed 2.67 goals per game in the regular season and had a save percentage of .910.

Wisconsin-River Falls is without a doubt the most physical contender of the group, as its 826 regular-season penalty minutes attest. The formula has been successful, however, as the Falcons won their seventh straight Wisconsin State University Conference title as well as their first Northern Collegiate Hockey Association championship this year.

Arron Scott (21-35-56), who centers the Falcons' attack, hopes to propel River Falls to the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1984. Butch Kaebel (19-29-48) and Gordy Hahn (23-14-37) handle the top forward spots, while Joe Lagoo (9-27-36) and Mike O'Hara handle the defensive duties.

Goaltender Chris Hanson finished the regular season with a 16-4 mark, including a .889 save percentage and a 3.25 goals-against average.

The Falcons were 12-1 at home this year and ripped off a 14-game winning streak from December 5 to February 6.

Plattsburgh State (22-10) already has wrapped up a berth in the championship. The Cardinals won the State University of New York Athletic Conference—one of the three automatic-qualifying conferences in the division.

Kenyon women reload, set sights on fifth Division III championship

Though the graduation of 11-time champion Patty Abt and all-America Bethann Welty undoubtedly will hurt a bit, Kenyon by no means has lost potential for capturing the school's almost-traditional first-place spot in the Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Under head coach Jim Steen, the Ladies are ready and waiting to claim the top spot for the fifth time in the seven years of the championships.

Top performers for the 1987-88 season have been championship veterans Amy Heasley, Erin Finneran, Jeannine Gury and Melissa Nelson. Among them, these four have captured 11 first-place finishes, including five winning performances on relay teams.

Underdogs

"Everyone has been swimming her best, but that's no guarantee," Steen said of the team's chances of repeating. "They've all bettered their conference times from last year, but we're still approaching the championships with the attitude that we're the underdogs."

In her final year with the Ladies,

Championships Previews

Heasley has a good chance of defending her 1987 titles in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly and the 200 individual medley. The senior holds NCAA records in both fly events.

After setting records in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke in 1986, Finneran reclaimed the top spot in the 200 last year and finished second in the 100 behind Allegheny's Marci

Hennessey. Also, Finneran contributed to the first-place finishes and records of four relay teams in 1987.

Gury swam to first in the 100 and 200 breaststroke events and Nelson claimed the title in the 400-yard individual medley. Gury also swam on two winning relay teams.

Strong challenger

"I think our No. 1 competition will come from UC San Diego," Steen predicted. "They've got the numbers that are comparative to ours and they've already defeated us once at a dual meet this fall."

"The rest of the field will be a close race between Allegheny, Denison and Ithaca, and there's always the possibility of a couple of surprise teams," Steen added.

UC San Diego swimmers returning under coach Bill Morgan include the entire squad from last year's third-place team, plus a multitude of outstanding freshmen.

The strongest returners for the Tritons include senior all-America Tracy Mulvaney and junior all-Americas Michelle Steinberger and Michelle Ruble. Mulvaney's time of 1:55.02 in the 200-yard freestyle gave her third place in 1987. The Tritons also may get a point boost from diver Julie Hicks.

Steinberger finished fourth in the 200 fly while Ruble's top finish in the championships was a seventh-place performance in the 400 individual medley at the 1987 championships.

Moving up

Allegheny and Denison are expected to improve their 1987 finishes and compete for a spot in the top five. Allegheny sophomore Marci Hennessey will try to hold her 100-yard backstroke title while attempting to better a second-place finish in the 200 back.

Erin Finneran

Amy Heasley

Additional depth will come from junior breastroker Tamara Bachman and senior diver Donna Killion. In addition to Killion, two top national divers will be competing for the Gators this year.

Denison's Liz Cooper just missed several titles in 1987 but managed second-, third- and fourth-place finishes in the 200 individual medley, the 200 breaststroke and 400 breaststroke, respectively.

First-year coach Gregg Parini, formerly head coach at nearby Mount Union, has added several new faces to the Big Red squad. Among the additions are six swimmers and two divers who should help the team gain a top-five finish.

II men's teams favor game-by-game approach

Balance and consistency could determine the winner in this year's Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

"No. 1, you have to play each game one at a time," Florida Southern coach George Scholz said. "You cannot look too far down the road. You have to keep doing the things that you do well."

Florida Southern has been doing many things well this season. The Moccasins were tops in the nation in field-goal percentage through games of February 13, hitting 56.3 percent of their shots. They ranked ninth in scoring offense with a 92.1 average and ninth in scoring defense, yielding an average of 67.5 points per game.

Jerry Johnson and Kris Kearney, both guards, were averaging 18.3 and 17.1 points, respectively, through 26 games. Kearney was one of the top scorers in last year's tournament, averaging 21 points for three games. He also was the leader in field-goal percentage, making 68.6 percent of his shots. Michael Bradley and Donolly Tyrell are averaging in double figures this season.

Up-tempo style

St. Cloud State likes to play at a fast tempo and is paced by Reggie Perkins. Perkins is the team's leading scorer this season and the career leader in assists. He can play either backcourt spot. Todd Spaulding may join Perkins in the backcourt or play small forward.

"This is a blue-collar team that plays well together," coach Butch Raymond said. "We are probably the smallest team in our conference, but we do not apologize for that."

Alabama A&M ranked fifth in scoring offense with a 95.7 average and sixth in three-point field goals made per game with 6.8. Ondray Wagner, who ranked ninth in three-point field goals made with 3.4 per game, was averaging 22.9 points through 27 games and was the team leader in assists. Frank Sillmon had a 20.5 scoring average and an 8.9 rebounding average, the best on the team. Willie Hayes was scoring 15.7 points per game and was the assist leader with a 6.9 average.

Been tentative

"We have got to improve on the defensive end and take the shots that we normally have been taking," coach Van Pettaway said about competing in the tournament. "In the past, we have gotten tentative about taking the shots we had been taking during the season."

Southeast Missouri State has played in the tournament 10 times under coach Ron Shumate. This season, Ray Pugh has been the team's top scorer, averaging about 17 points per game. Michael Morris is in his fourth year as a starter and holds the school assist record. Cleo Conley is a sound defensive player and a threat at three-point range. Through 25 games, the team had a 9-1 record on the road.

Defense wins

"I have always lived by the philosophy that offense puts people in the stands and defense wins games," Shumate said. "If you do not play good defense, you will not have the opportunity to win."

North Carolina Central was ranked No. 1 in scoring defense, giving up 57.8 points per game. The Eagles were scoring 70.3 points per game. Senior Cleo Hill is a threat from outside.

New Haven was third in scoring offense with a 96.3 average. The Chargers have four seniors — three of whom are in their fourth year as starters. Herb Watkins was averaging 22.8 points and 8.9 rebounds through 25 games and led the team in both categories. He also was hitting 80 percent from the free-throw line.

"At tournament time, you have got to play good defense and make foul shots and layups," coach Stu Grove said. "You also need a little luck. (The ball) has got to go around the rim and in instead of around the rim and out."

Newcomers may make big splash among Division II men, women

Both the men's and women's fields for the Division II swimming and diving championships have changed dramatically since the 1987 finals, so expect some surprise finishes. Outstanding recruiting seasons for several schools will be a big factor in the final outcomes.

Following is a look at some of the top teams and individuals for both the men's and women's fields.

Men's championships

Despite the fact that the two teams finished 233.5 points apart at the 1987 championships, chances are good that defending champion Cal State Bakersfield and Oakland will be up against each other for top honors this year.

When asked to predict who will come out on top, Cal State Bakersfield coach Ernie Maglischo pretty much avoids a concrete answer. "As near as I can figure, we're pretty much even with Oakland right now."

"If Oakland gets some really outstanding swims at its conference meet, it could upset the balance," Maglischo added.

Top point scorers for Maglischo's Roadrunners are Bartt Frey, Wayne Wehrli, Richard Graves and Kennon Heard.

Frey, plagued by illness the past couple of years, should be a top contender for titles in the 100, 200 and 500 freestyle events. He reached first in the 200 free last year, second in the 500 free and third in the 100 free. The senior holds an NCAA record in the 200 free with a time of 1:39.35 in 1986. Also, he swam on three first-place relay teams in 1987.

Wehrli swam his lifetime best in the 1,650 free at the conference meet, which leads Maglischo to hope Wehrli can turn on the speed and win a title in that event this season.

In his senior season, Heard already has turned in his best performance in the 100-yard freestyle at the conference meet and should be able to add points to the Roadrunners' efforts.

Junior Richard Graves will be defending his 1987 first-place finish in the 400 individual medley.

Maglischo has the added benefit of freshman Andrew Krenak, sophomore Andrew Shattuck and sophomore Amon Emeka. They all swam personal bests in the conference meet, which included a first in the 200 individual medley by Krenak.

Extra points should be added by sophomore diver John Farrell, who won the three-meter event at the conference meet.

On the other side of the picture, Oakland is hoping to make it a close race to the finish. Not only is stroke and 200 individual medley.

A big plus for Hovland's team this year is backstroke Rich Swoboda, a transfer from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. Swoboda, the defending titlist in the 200-yard backstroke, also turned in outstanding performances with second-place finishes in the 100 backstroke and 400 individual medley events.

Bringing additional depth to the team are butterflyers Mike Nation and Eric Dresbach. Nation finished fourth in the 100 fly, followed by Dresbach in sixth place. Also, Nation claimed third in the 200 fly and Dresbach captured sixth in the 200 individual medley.

An important new face for the Pioneers is freshman Hilton Woods, a bronze medalist in the 1987 Pan American games in the 50 and 100 freestyle events.

Pete Accardy's Cal State Northridge team is expected to finish at least third. A traditional power in diving, the Matadors will rely a bit more on swimming performances this season due to the loss of several top divers to graduation.

"We're ranked third, and that's probably where we should be," Accardy said.

there a competitive rivalry between Oakland coach Pete Hovland and Maglischo, there also is a friendly rivalry.

Hovland swam under Maglischo at Cal State Chico from 1974 through 1977 and served as assistant coach at Oakland when Maglischo coached the Pioneers to a team championship in 1980.

Making a return appearance for the Pioneers will be Mark Vandermey, Oakland's top point-scorer at the 1987 championships. Vandermey swam to titles in the 100 breaststroke and finished second in the 200 breast-

Larger field, on-campus final pose challenge for Division II women

This year's Division II Women's Basketball Championship will be more competitive than ever.

The tournament field has been expanded from 24 to 32 teams, eliminating the first-round byes that eight teams used to receive. Also, the championship rounds will be played on the campus of one of the finalists, ending a seven-year run for the tournament in Springfield, Massachusetts.

The top seven teams in the February 23 Division II women's basketball poll were quarterfinalists last year. Of those seven teams, all but one have reached the tournament semifinals at least once.

Back for more

Cal Poly Pomona has played in the final game five times in six years and has won three titles. Niki Bracken earned all-tournament honors last year, averaging 18 points and 11.5 rebounds in four games. Paula Tezak also was among the top performers in last year's tournament, with four-game averages of 11 points and 10.5 rebounds.

"The things she does cannot be put on paper," coach Darlene May said of Tezak, the lone senior on this year's squad.

Pittsburgh-Johnstown reached the semifinals last year and Jill Halapin made the all-tournament team. She averaged 14.7 points and 8.7 rebounds in three games. Halapin and Sally Mosay are both scoring about 19 points a game this season.

"The things we do well are press effectively and run the floor," coach Jodi Gault said. "We have to continue to do that well."

Another semifinalist

Northern Kentucky, also a semifinalist last year, has a veteran starting five and a young bench. Julie Wells and Bev Walker team up in the backcourt, while Cindy Schlarman controls the defense and the boards.

"I would like to see our team be prepared, play as hard as it can and be relaxed," coach Nancy Winstel said. "Basketball is still a game and it is meant to be fun."

North Dakota State was runner-up to Cal Poly Pomona in 1986 and lost again to the Broncos in last year's quarterfinals. Pat Smykowski and Kristi Kremer are the backcourt duo and Edie Boyer is the key defensive player.

"One thing we are trying to stress is to be consistent," coach Amy Ruley said. "We need to play 40 good minutes and not rely on spurts here and there."

Triple-digit offense

Hampton, which finished third in 1985, was ranked No. 1 in scoring offense through games of February 13 with an average of 105.2 points per game. Hampton's high-powered offense is a result of pressure defense.

Junior Jackie Dolberry was seventh in scoring with a 24.2 average through 25 games. She also was sixth in three-point field goals made with 2.5 per game. Senior Venice Frazer was seventh in rebounding with a 13.0 average through 24 games.

Coach James Sweat listed good defense and execution of fundamentals as keys to success in the tournament. Free-throw shooting may be another factor.

"In a tournament where most games go down to the wire, you have to be able to shoot free throws," he said.

Delta State finished third in 1986 and lost in the quarterfinals at Pittsburgh-Johnstown last year. The Lady Statesmen will have to overcome the loss of veteran Betsy Hubbs, who is out for the season for medical reasons. She was averaging 19.6 points and 9.8 rebounds through 24 games.

"When you lose a great player, the other players reach down and give something extra," coach Lloyd Clark said.

Second time a charm?

West Texas State made its first tournament appearance a year ago, losing to Northern Kentucky in the quarterfinals. This year, the Lady Buffs have been entrenched in the No. 1 spot in the Division II poll.

West Texas State was ranked first in scoring defense at 53 per game and was scoring 82.5 points per game. The team ranked second in field-goal percentage, shooting 53 percent. Vanessa Wells is the school's career scoring leader and is averaging about 18 points per game. Von Tucker is the all-time leader in rebounding and Angela Seay is the career leader in assists.

cardy said. "Cal State Chico is strong in diving, so we'll have to compete with them for third place at the championships."

Women's championships

Though his men's team may not be destined for a No. 1 finish this season, Accardy's women's squad is the favorite to claim the crown for the second consecutive year.

Helping pave the way to the crown will be 1987 national champions Jude Kylander, Tina Schnare, Stacy Mettam and diver Xiao Xia Chen. Kylander, Schnare, Mettam and teammate Sandy Barnes all were on the 200-yard medley relay team that claimed first last year. Also, Schnare and Mettam swam on the winning 400 medley relay squad.

In 1986, Schnare set records in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke and repeated last year as the champion in both events. When Schnare's accomplishments are considered along with Kylander's first-place finishes in the 50 and 100 free and

Bartt Frey

Mettam's titles in the 100 and 200 back, it's not difficult to see why the Matadors set 1986 records in both medley relay events.

Doria Mamalo

Chen boosted the team's efforts last year with a top finish in three-meter diving and a fourth-place performance in the one meter. Extra strength on the diving squad will come with the addition of three potential scorers, including junior transfer Nina Fodor and freshman Misty May.

"At her best, Chen can claim both boards," Accardy said. "She's coming off a slight sprained ankle, but I have no doubts she will turn in a top-five finish."

Who will follow Cal State Northridge is anyone's guess. Northern Michigan, which finished 1987 in fourth place with 247.5 points, had an outstanding recruiting year that may be just what was needed to boost the Wildcats to higher ground.

Coached by Ann James, the Wildcats return six scorers from last year's championship, including 200 free champ Julianna Wilemon. She also claimed fourth in the 200 freestyle.

Though boasting what may be its best team ever, Tampa will have to work hard to hold on to last year's third-place finish. The Spartans look for assistance from four scorers who return from the 1987 team.

Laura Atteberry, Jenny Cornwell, Gail Thompson and Karen Pitre combined to claim seven No. 2 finishes in individual events. Atteberry and Pitre also were members of the first-place 400-yard freestyle relay team.

Clarion still will make a strong bid for a top-five finish, backed with outstanding diving by four-time champion Doria Mamalo. She was the top diver on the one-meter board in 1986 and 1987 and held the title on the three-meter in 1985 and 1986. Cal State Northridge's Chen ousted Mamalo on the three-meter board in 1987.

Professors explore 'life after athletics'

Two Memphis State University professors recently completed a survey of former Tiger football and basketball players as part of a long-range study of college athletes after their grant-in-aid eligibility expires.

The researchers found that football players succeed academically or professionally about as well as those at most other major universities.

They also found, however, that the record of success by former basketball players is lacking, with few graduating or becoming professional athletes.

The study addressed the former athletes' accomplishments after leaving college, their problems in earning a living, and their attitudes toward college athletics and academics.

The majority of the athletes professed a desire to return to college to complete their degree requirements, and most believe Memphis State should help with tuition should they return to school.

Here are some of the findings:

- Of the 76 former football players who completed their eligibility between 1978-79 and 1983-84, 39 (51 percent) graduated, and 11 (15 percent) had professional football contracts.

- Eighteen basketball players completed their athletics eligibility during the period; but only two (11 percent) graduated, and only one was given a professional contract.

- Former football players, who had been out of school for as long as seven years, averaged $21,000 a year in salary, but the income range was from $11,000 to $45,000. Those who had been out of school for seven years averaged $30,000.

- Former basketball players' salaries averaged $18,000, but some earned as much as $30,000 a year.

- A majority of the former athletes reported that they had stable employment and had received promotions and salary increases.

- Only four of those interviewed reported receiving unemployment compensation, and only seven said they needed financial aid from their parents.

- Most of the former athletes were married, and only four (three football players) said they had been divorced.

- Four of those interviewed had faced criminal charges ranging from multiple driving while intoxicated to cocaine possession. Four former athletes reported having alcohol or drug problems.

Fund to help ex-athletes get degrees

Avron Fogelman, coowner of the Kansas City Royals, says he will help pay for former Memphis State University student-athletes to return to school and finish their education.

Fogelman, who last year offered scholarships for poor high school students, said he has started a foundation to provide funding for student-athletes who used up their athletics grants-in-aid but failed to get a degree.

Too much is expected sometimes of students who must play sports well and attend classes, Fogelman told United Press International.

"Sometimes, the college degree is what becomes lost in the process," said Fogelman.

The program begins immediately, and Fogelman said he is willing to spend "whatever it takes" to back it up.

Fogelman credited the Memphis branch of the NAACP with giving him the idea. The NAACP has for years criticized Memphis State for the dropout rate of black student-athletes.

Fewer than 30 percent of MSU's athletes earn degrees within five years of beginning their freshman year, school officials said. NCAA

"We would like to do something about the perception that colleges are exploiting these people."

— Thomas S. Carpenter,
Memphis State president

rules limit athletics scholarships to five years.

"There are literally thousands of former Memphis State students who did not graduate and who are inhibited from getting meaningful jobs," Fogelman said.

MSU students who played sports "for a day, a minute, three years" are eligible, he said.

But the program stipulates former athletes must show financial need, make good grades and qualify for a degree within five years of being awarded a scholarship.

The foundation will also help them get jobs, he said.

"We would like to do something about the perception that colleges are exploiting these people," Memphis State President Thomas S. Carpenter said.

Student-athletes are deserving of the extra help, Carpenter said when asked if other students might resent this program. "It's more difficult than any job," he said.

Hawkins' 63 not a record, but it's among the best

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Bradley's Hersey Hawkins, the national scoring leader in Division I, shot his way into a special category with his 63-point game at Detroit February 22. He became only the sixth Division I player to score as many as 63 against a Division I opponent, and his total is tied for eighth place on that list.

Louisiana State's Pete Maravich scored 63 or more three times, Anthony Roberts of Oral Roberts did it twice and four others once each. They are Niagara's Calvin Murphy, Washington and Lee's Jay Handlan, Mississippi's Johnny Neumann, and Hawkins. Here is that list:

Pts.	Year
69—Maravich vs. Alabama	1970
68—Murphy vs. Syracuse	1969
66—Handlan vs. Furman	1951
66—Maravich vs. Tulane	1969
66—Roberts vs. North Caro. A&T	1977
65—Roberts vs. Oregon	1977
64—Maravich vs. Kentucky	1970
63—Neumann vs. Louisiana St.	1971
63—Hawkins vs. Detroit	1988

As the list shows, Hawkins is the first Division I player to score at least 63 against a Division I foe in 11 years, or since Roberts did it in 1977 against Oregon in a National Invitation Tournament game won by Oregon, 90-89.

In fact, Hawkins is the first Division I player to reach 60 since Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale four seasons ago, when he pumped in 61 against Texas-San Antonio (December 28, 1983). Texas-San Antonio was a Division I member that year (Washington and Lee was a Division I member when Handlan hit 66 in 1951).

On 10 other occasions in Division I history (1948 was the first season of national player rankings), a Division I player reached 63 or more points but did it against opponents below the Division I level.

Portland State's Freeman Williams did it three times and Furman's Frank Selvy twice (including his Division I record 100). Five other players did it once. They are Villanova's Paul Arizin, Temple's Bill Milkv (the "Owl without a vowel"), Furman's Darrell Floyd, Bob Zawoluk of St. John's (New York) and Sherman White of Long Island-Brooklyn. Here is that list:

Pts.	Year
100—Selvy vs. Newberry	1954
85—Arizin vs. Philadelphia NAMC	1949
81—Williams vs. Rocky Mountain	1978
73—Milky vs. Wilkes	1951
71—Williams vs. Southern Oregon	1977
67—Floyd vs. Morehead St.	1955
66—Williams vs. George Fox	1978
65—Zawoluk vs. St. Peter's	1950
63—Selvy vs. Mercer	1953
63—White vs. John Marshall	1950

Morehead State, St. Peter's and Mercer all are Division I teams but were not in the years listed above (St. Peter's came in the division in 1955, Morehead in 1956 and Mercer in 1979).

Interestingly, none of the players on the above list reached 63 against Division I teams even once. In summing up the two lists, 63 points or more have been scored 19 times by 13 Division I players.

Dorothy Bowers, Youngstown State, ranks third among Division I women in scoring average.

63 on 28 shots

Hawkins was extremely efficient, as usual, on his big night. He scored 63 points on just 28 shots from the field, making 21 (including three-for-seven from three-point range

Aaron Baker, Mississippi College, ranks No. 2 in Division II three-point shooting

Division I has reached 63 against a team other than Division I opposition in the last 10 years.

Going to extremes

Two extremely different basketball games were played in one night, February 20, in the West Coast Athletic Conference. Santa Clara beat St. Mary's, 40-33, and Loyola Marymount beat Pepperdine, 142-127. Pepperdine's Levy Middle-toughest-schedule rankings include both past and future opponents combined. However, it is a factor in tournament selection and provides at least a rough idea of where a team may rank at selection time, at least in schedule strength.

North Alabama's Teenia Harris is among Division II leaders in three-point shooting

Listed below are the top 150 teams in terms of opponents' success through February 14.

Four vs. three

The freshman-eligible rule of 1973 brought a big expansion in the number of career 2,500 scorers in men's Division I basketball. Entering this season, 28 players had surpassed 2,500. Only 10 did it in three seasons.

But there is another angle—shots taken rather than seasons played. For instance, Wayman Tisdale is fifth on the three-seasons list at 2,661 (before turning pro after the 1985 season). Kansas' Danny Manning moved past Tisdale's Big Eight Conference record with 30 points February 24 at Oklahoma. But at that stage, Manning had taken 25 fewer shots from the field and attempted 135 fewer free throws than Tisdale, even though this is his fourth season.

Too much focus on total points can obscure a player's all-round abilities. Manning already ranks first in Kansas history in career rebounds (1,089), first in career blocked shots, second in career steals and fourth in career assists.

Manning earlier became the 13th player in history to have more than 2,500 points and 1,000 rebounds. Only four in this group had more than Manning's 2,702 points. Larry Bird (Indiana State, last season 1979) had 2,850 points and 1,247 rebounds, Elvin Hayes (Houston 1968) 2,884 and 1,602, Oscar Robertson (Cincinnati 1960) 2,973 and 1,338, and Harry Kelly (Texas Southern 1983) 3,066 and 1,085.

Hartwick senior Tim McGraw is one of the best free-throw shooters in Division III

And of these 13, only one—Navy's David Robinson at 61.3 percent—is above Manning's current career field-goal accuracy of a shade under 60 percent. Only two others, with less than 2,500 points but more than 2,000, plus 1,000 rebounds, have topped 60 percent for a career. They are Lew Alcindor (UCLA 1969, now known as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) and Patrick Ewing (Georgetown 1985).

This has become a big year for career 2,500-point career scorers. Already, a record four players have done it, and four more are likely to reach that level (three made it in four other years). Through games of February 28, Bradley's Hawkins had become only the ninth player in history to surpass 2,800, Manning the 11th to surpass 2,700, Lehigh's Daren Queenan the 16th to surpass 2,600 and Xavier's (Ohio) Byron Larkin was closing in on 2,600.

In addition, Missouri's Derrick Chievous, Iowa State's Jeff Grayer, Marshall's Skip Henderson and Florida's Vernon Maxwell all seem likely to reach 2,500, although Maxwell might need a few NCAA tournament games to do it.

Five more have reached 2,000 points, and five others have a chance. Manning is the only one to also reach 1,000 rebounds, but Queenan is close, Chievous is likely to do it and Wyoming's Fennis Dembo has an outside chance.

500 for Henson

Illinois coach Lou Henson, with a 75-65 victory at Indiana February 29, became the 21st Division I coach in history to reach 500 career victories. He ranks sixth among active coaches.

Quotes of the week

Diminutive (5-6) sophomore Lawrence Jordan, who holds all the school records for assists at Indiana-Purdue-Fort Wayne, has this to say about his size: "Hey, I did not have anything to do with it. My father is 5-4, and my mother is 5-3, so actually I'm the giant in the family—they call me Kareem." His teammates call him "Biggs." (Chris Seidel, Indiana-Purdue-Fort Wayne SID)

Livingston freshman guard Robert Kistner truly has earned his nickname, "Gilligan." After five players missed practice with the flu the day before a game, Kistner told coach Rick Reedy: "Gee, coach, if two more players get sick, I'll get to start." (Dee Outlaw, Livingston SID)

Quiz Answer: Kentucky on 12 occasions has missed the Final Four by one game, by losing a regional championship game. Before the advent of the Final Four format in 1952, Kentucky missed the semifinals (or top four) once by losing its first game.

Final Four Quiz:

UCLA has finished in the top four 14 times in NCAA tournament history, including its vacated second place in 1980, while Kentucky and North Carolina have reached the Final Four nine times each, Ohio State eight times, and Kansas and Louisville seven each. Which college has most often missed the Final Four by one victory? Hint: It is one of the six colleges above. Answer later.

and 18-for-21 from two-point range). At the free throw line, he was 18-for-20. He also had 11 rebounds and dished out four assists, and his team won, 122-107.

Hawkins' big game helped raise his season average to 36 through February 29—by far the highest by a scoring champion since Portland State's Williams hit 38.8 a decade ago in 1977. Only three champions in the 1980s have topped 30, led by Army's Kevin Houston last year at 32.9.

It is true that Hawkins and Houston had the benefit of the three-point play, but it is also true that the current, 15-year-old free-throw rule (no free-throws on the first 12 common fouls in each half) removed many free-throw opportunities for scorers over that span. The three-pointer somewhat offsets that.

As mentioned, Hawkins is the first to reach 63 against Division I foes since 1977. Seven of the nine 63-plus performances against Division I opposition came between 1969 and 1977. And no player in brooks, a 6-7 senior from San Francisco, had 40 points and 25 rebounds, while the entire St. Mary's team had 33 points and 20 rebounds. Pepperdine's 127 set a Division I record for most points by a losing team in regulation time, breaking the 118 by West Texas State in losing to Hardin-Simmons (122) in 1969. But the combined total of 269 points fell short of the record 275 by Nevada-Las Vegas (164) and Hawaii-Hilo (111) in 1975 (again for regulation time). (Don Ott, West Coast Athletic Conference SID)

Bennett critical of 'stall' in college entrance test scores

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett says that college entrance test scores "are in dead stall," and the public is still not getting its money's worth from the schools.

"In saying that I am disappointed, I think I speak for the American people," said Bennett in his annual report card on the states.

John Weiss, executive director of FairTest, a Cambridge, Massachusetts group that is critical of standardized tests, said, "It makes no sense to use a faulty thermometer to measure the nation's educational health."

Bennett said the school reform movement is yielding positive results in some states, but "there still is too much resistance to sensible and needed reform," including accountability measures and merit pay.

The percentage of high school graduates taking Advanced Placement tests has doubled since 1982, from less than five percent to nearly 10 percent. Minority participation has grown by 78 percent since 1984, double the increase among whites.

Test results "show that poor, black and Hispanic children are performing better," said Bennett.

This year, for the first time, the chart includes a list of seven states (Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, New Jersey, Ohio, South Carolina and Texas) with laws allowing state officials to intervene in "academically bankrupt" school districts.

It also lists the percentage of high scorers in the Scholastic Aptitude Test and American College Testing programs.

The college entrance test scores were made public last fall.

The 1987 scores are basically unchanged from last year. The ACT average dipped by 0.1 point to 18.7 on a scale of 1-36. The SAT remained the same, 906, on a scale of 400-1,600.

Rankings of the 28 states where

"Test results show that poor, black and Hispanic children are performing better."

the ACT is the dominant test: 1. Wisconsin, 20.4; 2. Iowa, 20.3; 3. Minnesota, 20.2; 4. (tie) Colorado, Montana and Wyoming, 19.9; 7. Nebraska, 19.8; 8. South Dakota, 19.6; 9. (tie) Kansas, Arizona and Ohio, 19.3; 12. Missouri, 19.2; 13. Nevada, 19.1; 14. Idaho, 19.0; 15. (tie) Illinois and Utah, 18.9; 17. (tie) Michigan and North Dakota, 18.8; Alaska, 18.7; 20. Kentucky, 18.3; 21. (tie) Alabama, New Mexico and Tennessee, 18.0; 24. Arkansas, 17.8; 25. Oklahoma, 17.7; 26. West Virginia, 17.6; 27. Louisiana, 16.9; 28. Mississippi, 16.3.

Among the 22 SAT states, the rankings were: 1. New Hampshire, 938; 2. Oregon, 928; 3. (tie) Maryland and Vermont, 914; 5. Connecticut 912; 6. Delaware, 910; 7. Massachusetts, 909; 8. Virginia, 907; 9. California, 906; 10. Maine, 899; 11. Rhode Island, 898; 12. New York, 894; 13. Florida, 893; 14. New Jersey, 892; 15. Pennsylvania, 891; 16. Hawaii, 881; 17. Texas, 875; 18. Indiana, 874; 19. District of Columbia, 842; 20. Georgia, 840; 21. North Carolina, 838; 22. South Carolina, 832.

Bennett said the graduation rate from public high schools slipped from 71.7 percent in 1985 to 71.5 percent in 1986. No figure was available for private schools.

The rates are estimated by dividing the number of 1986 graduates by the number of freshmen enrolled four years earlier.

"All of this is not particularly good news," said Bennett, who recently began his fourth year as secretary of education, but he did find some encouraging signs.

"Last year, a greater proportion of students took the ACT and SAT tests and the Advanced Placement exams than ever before," he said. That "means we are succeeding in keeping scores level despite a larger pool of test-takers."

Survey measures bowl's impact on San Diego

The total economic impact of the Sea World Holiday Bowl on San Diego nearly doubled the best figures of previous years.

A survey conducted by CIC Research of San Diego shows the 1987 game brought 32,700 out-of-county visitors to San Diego.

Total economic impact created by bowl visitors was more than $14.5 million, compared to the previous high mark of $8.9 million set in 1986, bowl officials said in a news release.

In addition, $95,000 was paid by bowl visitors to the City of San Diego through transient occupancy tax, with another $57,160 paid in sales tax — a total of $152,160.

Another record was set in 1987 with the highest-ever pay-out to Sea World Holiday Bowl teams. The Universities of Iowa and Wyoming received $1,543,249 for participating in the game ($771,624.50 each), an increase of 16 percent over 1986.

Proceeds to Holiday Bowl teams have increased a dramatic 253 percent since the inauguration of the bowl in 1978, when the disbursement to each team was $218,000.

Amplifying the Western Athletic Conference's sponsorship participation, Herb Klein, 1987 president of the bowl, announced that the WAC and the Sea World Holiday Bowl have agreed that the WAC champion will represent the conference at the Holiday Bowl through 1992. After 1992, the bowl and the WAC have agreed to negotiate for extension of the contract to include 1993 through 1995.

As part of the agreement, the WAC has become a $100,000 sponsor of the bowl. With the bowl's assistance, the conference will seek a corporate sponsor to cover the conference obligation. The commitment will run through 1990 or until the bowl pay-out reaches $1.5 million without the conference funds.

The 1988 bowl will be played Friday, December 30, at San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium.

NCAA to help schools set up off-season drug-test programs

The NCAA will schedule visits through April to institutions that have indicated an interest in establishing off-season drug testing for steroids for their football student-athletes.

Off-season drug testing was initiated with the approval of Proposal No. 80 at the annual Association Convention in Nashville in January.

"We are pleased with the number of member schools that have expressed an interest in securing the services of the NCAA drug-testing crews and in having the Association signs a consent form.

"I will not do that," O'Halloran told the Associated Press.

Under NCAA rules, students must consent to be tested before regular-season competition begins, although the random testing would not occur until postseason play-off time.

Students who refuse to sign are prohibited from regular-season competition.

O'Halloran asked McGovern to grant her a preliminary injunction allowing her to compete for the women's track team this spring.

But McGovern denied her request, saying any harm done to her by being barred from competition was outweighed by the potentially greater harm to the NCAA if its "effective regulation of intercollegiate athletics was to be impaired."

Gustafson wins 1,000th

University of Texas, Austin, baseball coach Cliff Gustafson recently became only the third collegiate coach in the sport to coach 1,000 victories.

Gustafson's Longhorns won the first game of a February 21 double-header, 9-3, against the University of Texas, Arlington, to give the coach his 1,000th victory against collegiate competition. Another 38 victories against noncollegiate competition are not included in the total.

The Longhorns completed a sweep of the double-header, 13-3.

Gustafson, who is in his 21st season at Texas, trails retired University of Southern California coach Rod Dedeaux (1,332 victories) and University of Miami (Florida) coach Ron Fraser (1,025 victories) on the all-time list.

The NCAA will continue to schedule visits to campuses for late March and April.

"The goal of the off-season program is to deter steroid use year-round and to make available to the membership at no cost state-of-the-art testing laboratories and experienced specimen-collection teams," Berkey said.

The rationale behind the proposal for off-season testing was "the drug-testing committee's concern that student-athletes merely were changing their patterns of steroid use with the current championships testing program," Berkey said.

"There was evidence that the short-term, water-based steroids were being used in the training season in place of the oil-based, injectable steroids, which tend to be retained in the body for a month."

"Steroids are considered to be training drugs; and in order to test for them effectively, an institution must schedule testing during the training season," Berkey said.

Following are the guidelines under which the program will be administered:

1. Member institutions that wish to participate in the off-season testing program should contact Berkey in writing.

2. Written notification of intent to participate should include the number of student-athletes to be tested and the method by which the institution will determine those student-athletes to be tested. In addition, the institution should recommend three possible dates of testing.

[Note: Institutions should avoid recommending testing dates during winter and spring championship months (March and June).]

3. The NCAA will test no more than 24 student-athletes from any one institution.

4. Institutions may participate in NCAA off-season testing not more than once each year, and testing will be conducted in accordance with NCAA drug-testing methods established pursuant to Executive Regulation 1-7.

5. The institution must provide documentation that demonstrates that all student-athletes selected for NCAA off-season testing have signed a written consent form for such. The NCAA Drug-Testing Consent as part of the Student-Athlete Statement may be used as a model for the development of such a form.

6. The NCAA will provide drug-testing supplies and appropriate personnel for collection of specimens.

7. An NCAA testing crew will be assigned to administer the collection of specimens. Selection and assignment of testing crews will be the responsibility of the NCAA.

8. NCAA drug-testing protocol regarding chain-of-custody and specimen collection will be followed.

9. Institutions will be requested to provide adequate on-campus facilities for the drug-testing and beverages for consumption by student-athletes, which comply with Section No. 5.2.4. of the 1987-88 NCAA drug-testing protocol.

10. Results will be reported to the institution upon request.

11. Expenses for testing crews, supplies, transportation and laboratory analyses will be charged to the NCAA.

Cliff Gustafson

versity of Southern California coach Rod Dedeaux (1,332 victories) and University of Miami (Florida) coach Ron Fraser (1,025 victories) on the all-time list.

"This wasn't just another game," Gustafson admitted to The Dallas Morning News. "I was a little more apprehensive, a little more excited for a game this early in the season. Obviously, I was aware of what could happen. I'm just happy and thrilled I've been able to stay around long enough to accomplish something like this."

Under Gustafson, the Longhorns won the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship in 1975 and 1983 and were runners-up in 1984 and 1985.

Let's hear it for the fencing team!... I said, let's hear it for...

By Ronald Blum

At a school known for losing big, George Kolombatovich has put together a big-time winner.

Almost everyone knows Columbia University has lost 41 consecutive football games since 1983.

Few realize the Lions' fencers have won 41 consecutive matches and are trying to win their second straight NCAA men's team title.

How hard is it to gain recognition beneath the shadow of the all-time losing team of college football?

"When I talk to people back home, they know about the football team," said junior Jon Normile, who is 23-0 at epee this season. "They may not even know what fencing is."

Columbia hasn't lost since February 13, 1985, when Yale University beat the Lions, 14-13. Columbia has won four consecutive Ivy League titles and last year won its ninth NCAA fencing championship, its first since 1971.

"Every single thing that counts as a disadvantage for Columbia football works in our favor," said Kolombatovich, Columbia's director of fencing. "New York City is the capital of fencing. An article in Sports Illustrated derided the subway ride to practice for the football team. For fencing, having the top competition a subway ride away is a tremendous advantage for us."

"We're the smallest school in the Ivy League. That hurts football recruiting. If I get in four guys a year, I'm in tremendous shape. I only need two or three, and I have a national-championship program."

Kolombatovich is 95-17 in eight seasons at Columbia. When the Lions started a women's program in 1983, he brought in Aladar Kogler from Wayne State University (Michigan) as the women's coach. Kogler's role has become more prominent each year; and in 1987, Kogler became cohead coach of both men and women, and Kolombatovich was promoted to director of fencing/head coach.

Kogler is no mere assistant. He is head coach of the United States men's and women's national teams, directed the United States' teams at last summer's Pan American Games, and will be head coach for the United States at this summer's Olympics.

"Once people get here, he makes them better," said Normile, who is ranked seventh in the United States at epee. The top five go to the Olympics.

Kolombatovich, like Kogler, has fencing responsibilities beyond Columbia. He is director of fencing for the Metropolitan Opera, a role he inherited from his father.

"I got my job through nepotism," he said.

At the Met, Kolombatovich teaches portly tenors and baritones

Bo declines post

University of Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler has declined an offer to become the school's athletics director, electing to remain in the job he has held since 1969.

Schembechler made the announcement after meeting with interim university President Robben Fleming. The Ann Arbor school is seeking a replacement for Donald B. Canham, who has announced plans to retire.

"I'm a football coach first," said Schembechler. "Since the job did not include football after the 1988 season, I have decided to turn down the athletics director's position."

George Kolombatovich

the fine arts of parrying and riposting.

When he isn't coaching the Pavarttis and Domingos, he jets around the world to fencing competitions both as a coach and as an official. He is in charge of assigning officials for the United States national championships and was an official at the 1984 Olympics. This gives him an edge in recruiting.

"Of the fencers on the U.S. Junior World team, four of 12 are at Columbia," Kolombatovich said. "No other school has more than two."

Normile has a chance to make the Olympic team at epee, and Bob Cottingham, the Columbia captain, has a chance at sabre. Cottingham is 105-7 at Columbia and was a finalist at the Pan Am Games.

"There are many here who are going after the Olympic team," Kolombatovich said. "Not necessarily 1988, but for some, 1992 or 1996."

Intercollegiate competition is only part of the routine for most of Columbia's team. The fencers are involved in junior, senior and international competitions.

"This is despite the asinine NCAA rules that say they can't use Columbia equipment and must identify themselves as 'unattached,'" Kolombatovich said.

But no matter how much recognition Columbia gets in the fencing community, Kolombatovich realizes the woes of Columbia's football team will precede the fencers.

"People have heard of Columbia football all over the place," Kolombatovich said. "Especially after all the media attention last year. Of course, people give more attention to football."

"When we went out to Penn State for a meet last year, this was after they won the national championship; when we drive into State College, there were pictures, statues, posters, records. They all said 'Penn State — National Champions.'"

"We said how could that be? You guys haven't even fenced us yet."

Blum writes for the Associated Press.

Three repeat on academic all-America basketball team

For the second consecutive year, basketball players Michael Smith of Brigham Young University, Shon Morris of Northwestern University and Kevin Locke of Denison University have been named first-team GTE academic all-Americans in their respective divisions.

The men's basketball teams are selected by a vote of the 1,300-member College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). To be eligible, an athlete must be a varsity starter or key reserve and must maintain a cumulative grade-point average of at least 3.200 on a scale of 4.000.

Smith is a 6-10 junior and leads the Western Athletic Conference in scoring. He was chosen GTE academic all-America of the year for basketball in the men's university division. This honor goes to athletes who "best represent the qualities of an academic All-America."

Brian Branson of Elon College received the honor in the men's college division.

the latter a three-time champion. But waiting to step into Barber's shoes is senior Steven Terry, runner-up to his teammate last year.

The Bobcats' other strengths come in the field events. Triple jumper Raymond Toppins was the 1987 runner-up both indoors and outdoors and seems ready to take over the limelight in his final season. Oliver Kyler is the defending outdoor champion in the high jump.

Lincoln (Pennsylvania), fourth last season, again will be among the contenders. The Lions have lost all-America hurdler David Hightower but return 400-meter runner-up Mark Long, the anchor on Lincoln's championship 1,600-meter team.

Other contenders could include Albany (New York) and Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Women's championships

Last season, with the first two Division III women's team titles behind him, Massachusetts-Boston coach Sherman Hart was pessimistic about his team's chances of defending.

This winter, with a third trophy on display, is Hart any more enthusiastic about the Beacons' prospects for maintaining their hex over the rest of the field?

"No, actually I'm less confident than I was last year," said Hart, whose squad won by a scant four points in 1987. "We're not healthy, and most of them aren't even track injuries. I have to get people to stop walking into walls."

Leading the Beacons once again is Genesia Eddins, indoor and outdoor champion in the 800 meters for two straight years and the anchor on Massachusetts-Boston's championship 1,600-meter relay team. Also seeking a third individual crown will be Murtonda Durant, who last year set a meet record in reclaiming the 800-meter title she captured at the first Division III indoor championships in 1985.

Other all-America performers returning for Massachusetts-Boston include Darelle Boyd (800 and 1,500) and Jackie James (55-meter hurdles).

Two released

Robert K. Marcum, athletics director at the University of South Carolina, was released March 1 as a result of findings of a task force investigating drug testing of athletes at the university.

Team physician Paul Akers, M.D., also has been relieved of his duties and "termination proceedings are being instituted," university President James Holderman said at a news conference.

The five-member task force, appointed by Holderman recently, found that no random drug testing of athletes had been done since the spring of 1986, the Associated Press reported.

"We haven't had the people qualify that we've had in the past," Hart said. "We do have some ability if we can get some athletes healthy and get them into the meet."

The Beacons' greatest challenge again is likely to come from Christopher Newport. The Lady Captains boast the division's top individual star in sophomore Lisa Dillard, who cut a wide swath through both championships meets in her initial collegiate season. Dillard set meet records in the 55-meter dash and the long jump indoors and went on to win the 100, the 200 and the long jump at the outdoor championships.

Joining Dillard in both her specialties is junior Michelle Dickens, a consistent scorer. But Christopher Newport must overcome the graduation loss of shot putter Claudia Stanley, who won the event at all three Division III indoor meets.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse hopes to match the 1987 success of its men's counterparts. The Roanoke won the outdoor championship in 1983 and 1984 and were second in 1986. Wisconsin-LaCrosse is strongest in the field events and the distances.

Macalester lost one of the most dominant distance performers in NCAA history with the graduation of Julia Kirtland, who won eight individual national titles in cross country, indoor track and outdoor track. The Scots still will rely on distance specialists. The state of New York will provide several contenders, foremost among them CCNY and Concordia (New York).

Stopping Penn State's McConnell (5-3) a tall order

Pennsylvania State University athletics publicists literally sing the praises of senior women's basketball player Suzie McConnell these days. The school's promotional flyer, which pushes McConnell for all-America honors, has been built around the classic tune "If You Knew Suzie."

McConnell apparently prefers to let her play, as opposed to the music, do the talking. In a February 8 game against West Virginia, she was the shortest player on the floor (5-3). However, she led both teams with 13 rebounds and produced her seventh career "triple double" by adding 22 points and 12 assists.

Pittsburgh Press sportswriter Gene Collier calls McConnell "a certifiable goddess of a sport in which the talent has boomed in the past 15 years."

Trivia Time: Only one woman other than Penn State's Suzie McConnell ever has been named annual assists champion by the NCAA. Who was she? Answer later.

University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, wrestler Carlton Haselrig made news last year when, after capturing the Division II championship as a heavyweight, he advanced to the Division I finals and won that heavyweight title too. Not bad for an athlete who wrestled "unattached" in high school.

While still in junior high, Haselrig saw wrestling dropped as a varsity sport at the high school he would attend. He kept right on competing, however, and eventually won a state high school championship. According to a recent feature story distributed by Pitt-Johnstown, by doing so he became the first wrestler ever to win a prep crown without school representation.

Haselrig's unique outlook on the sport might best be summed up by his thoughts on dual-match competition. "I like it when (the outcome of his team's matches) comes down to me winning. I like that situation... when everybody thinks the chips are down."

Morehead State University's athletics department and Ashland Oil sponsored "Pat on the Back Night" February 22 when the Eagles hosted Austin Peay State University's men's and women's basketball teams. Local high school students who earned straight-A grades received free admission, along with their families, to the double-header and special mementos of their selection for a pat on the back.

Trivia Answer: As a senior at Loyola University (Illinois), Faith Minnaugh won the first NCAA assists championship for women's basketball players when she averaged 11.7 per game in 1985. McConnell has taken the 1986 and 1987 crowns with averages of 10.6 and 11.8, respectively.

More Report Cards: Six student-athletes were unanimous selections to the Lone Star Conference academic football team for 1987. Leading the group was Abilene Christian University sophomore Bill Clayton, who earned a 3.850

Methodist College women's soccer players excelled in the classroom and on the field last fall. While compiling a 16-4 record, team members combined to produce a 3.170 GPA (4.000 scale) for the fall semester. The 11 starters had a cumulative 3.240. Leading the way were senior all-Americans Lori Silvasy (4.000 GPA for the past three semesters) and Brenda McKimens (3.800 GPA during the same period).

Judy Devine, Kent State University associate athletics director, has announced that nearly one-third of the school's 376 active student-athletes posted GPAs of 3.000 or higher (4.000 scale) for the fall 1987 semester. The total of 122 students with 3.000 or higher GPAs was the highest since Kent State began tracking the academic progress of student-athletes over four years ago.

At Washington and Lee University, Director of Athletics William D. McHenry announced that 48 student-athletes were named to the academic-athletics honor roll for the fall 1987 term by earning a GPA of at least 3.500 while participating on a varsity team. Fourteen of the school's 18 fall varsity teams produced cumulative GPAs above the student body's combined average. "I am very proud of these numbers," McHenry said. "They show that W&L athletes are students first and that there is a correlation between athletics success and academic achievement."

Seven Illinois State University student-athletes earned perfect 4.000 GPAs during the fall of 1987, and 123 of the school's 402 varsity athletes earned at least a 3.000—the highest total for any semester since the school began officially recognizing academic achievement among athletes in the fall of 1983. The combined GPA for all student-athletes was 2.510—up from 2.460 in the fall of 1986 and 2.490 in the spring of 1987.

Odds 'n Ends: Hiram College honored men's basketball coaches Bill Hollinger and Bill Proverbs February 20. Both will retire from coaching at the end of the season, although each will retain academic, administrative and other coaching positions at the school.
