Nominations are open for committee positions

Vacancies on the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees and the Nominating Committee will be filled by the Council during that group's April 18-20 meeting in Washington, D.C.

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for these vacancies, which must be received in the NCAA national office by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, no later than March 30.

Following is a list of those whose terms expire, including those eligible and not eligible for reappointment.

Committee members' divisions, districts or regions are in parentheses:

Men's Committee on Committees—Three-year term with no immediate reelection. Four expirations. Not eligible for reelection: James W. Lessig, Mid-American Athletic Conference (I-4); Noel W. Olson, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (II-5); Allen F. Ackerman, Elmhurst College (III-at large); Roy F. Kramer, Vanderbilt University (I-at large). The chair is to be selected from among members

House overwhelmingly passes bill to broaden Title IX scope

The House overwhelmingly passed a landmark civil-rights bill March 3 that would broaden the scope of Title IX and three other statutes, but President Reagan has vowed to veto the measure.

The Civil Rights Restoration Act was sent to the White House on a 315-98 vote. The Senate passed it by an equally lopsided 75-14 vote in January.

Both chambers passed the bill by the two-thirds margin needed to override a presidential veto, but it was unclear whether the margins would hold up following Reagan's vow to reject the measure.

The restoration act was designed to reverse a 1984 Supreme Court decision in a case brought by Grove City College. In that case, the Supreme Court held in a 6-3 ruling that Title IX—a law barring sex discrimination in Federally funded education programs applies only to specific programs or activities receiving Federal assistance and not to the entire institutions of which they are part.

Supporters of the act said hundreds of discrimination complaints had been dropped or restricted since the decision, the Associated Press reported.

In letters delivered to several House Republicans, Reagan said flatly he will veto the measure "if it is presented to me in its current form."

The President said the bill "dramatically expands the scope of Federal jurisdiction over state and local governments and the private sector" and "poses a particular threat to religious liberty."

The restoration act expands current law to provide that entire institutions and government agencies are covered if any program or activity within them receives Federal aid. The broad coverage also applies to the private sector if the aid goes to a corporation as a whole or if the recipient principally provides education, health care, housing, social services or parks and recreation.

In addition to Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments, the act amends three other civil-rights laws potentially affected by the Supreme Court ruling: the 1964 Civil Rights Act, barring racial discrimination in Federally assisted programs; the 1973 Rehabilitation Act, barring discrimination against the handicapped in any program or activity receiving Federal aid, and the 1975 Age Discrimination Act, barring employment discrimination against older people in any such programs.

Finch earns 'big assist' for helping women's basketball reach its goals

The NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship is in a constant state of development. One constant in that development thus far has been Nora Lynn Finch, chair of the Division I Women's Basketball Committee.

Finch, an associate director of athletics at North Carolina State University, has been the committee's only chair. She will go off the committee this fall.

"In 1982, with the inaugural tournament, there were so many policies we had to set up," she said. "You had to decide what to do best first. All of our initial policies were centered on providing the best experience for a team."

This is still the No. 1 priority, and policies are geared to maximizing competition, with a minimum of distractions. Policies are reviewed and adjusted annually, with feedback from the teams weighing heavily in the decision-making process.

Finances and television have been two areas of growth. In 1982, the championship had a deficit of approximately $162,000. Last year, the championship netted about $360,000.

Television rights fees have more than tripled since 1982 and so has coverage. All four regional championships and the championship semifinals are televised by ESPN, and the championship game is televised by CBS. In 1982, only the final game was televised by CBS.

Two milestones were reached earlier than Finch had expected. One was the expansion of the tournament field to its current 40 teams. The other was the sold-out status of last year's championship semifinals and finals at the University of Texas, Austin.

"(A sellout) is a milestone for anybody after six years," Finch said. "That is a tribute to the championship and to the host school."

With the big picture always in focus, Finch recognizes what has been accomplished and sees what still needs to be done. The committee supports expansion of the tournament field from 40 to 48 teams and will continue to seek Executive Committee approval of this recommendation.

"NCAA tournament participation is an acknowledgement of ex-

Great players of 1950s focused attention on Final Four

(The fifth of a 10-part series commemorating the 50th anniversary of the NCAA Final Four)

In the history of college basketball, the 1950s will be remembered as a time when some of the greatest players in the sport's history left their mark on the court. And just about all of them imprinted their names in the archives of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, which celebrates its 50th championship this year in Kansas City.

Players like Cliff Hagan and Frank Ramsey of the University of Kentucky, Clyde Lovellette of the University of Kansas, Bob Pettit at Louisiana State University, the University of Washington's Bob Houbregs, and La Salle University's Tom Gola all starred in tournaments during the early 1950s.

Then, in the last half of the decade, there were players like Bill Russell and K.C. Jones of the University of San Francisco, the University of Kansas' Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor of Seattle University, Jerry West of West Virginia University, and the University of Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson.

They all took part in the Final Four. "Look at the talent in those years; it's just amazing how it all came together," said Hall of Fame coach Pete Newell. "If you had to pick a top five from that decade, guys like Tom Gola and Clyde Lovellette probably would not make the first team; and they were both great players, just outstanding players. Had they come 10 years earlier, or 10 years later, they would have been challengers for player-of-the-decade awards."

Yet, as good as many of those players were, not all of them were on teams that won an NCAA championship. In fact, West, Baylor, Robertson, Chamberlain and Pettit—an all-star team any coach would love—all played on teams that either lost in the final or in semifinals.

And while the players were getting better, so was the basketball tournament. A number of administrative decisions in the 1950s helped to establish the importance of the championship.

In 1951, the field was doubled from eight to 16 teams; and later, it would grow to more than 20 teams. With the larger field came the concept of conference champions' receiving automatic berths.

For the 1952 tournament in Seattle, the first true Final Four was held. That year, four regionals were set up, with each regional winner moving on to the site of the championship for the semifinals. A year later, the NCAA established an independent office in Kansas City, and newly appointed Executive Director Walter Byers took over administration of the tournament. National television arrived in 1954, although it would not become an annual event until 1963.

All of this combined to give the great players of the 1950s a showcase for their talents. Some were successful. Others were disappointed. West and Chamberlain experienced the biggest heartbreaks. West's West Virginia team lost the 1959 title game to Newell's University of California, Berkeley, Bears at Louisville. See Great, page 3

Two attendance records set at '88 Convention in Nashville

Two NCAA Convention attendance records were established at the 1988 gathering January 10-13 in Nashville.

The total number of organizations represented was 866, nine more than at the 1987 annual Convention in San Diego. And the number of Division I members (institutions and conferences) in Nashville was 328, one more than the 327 in San Diego.

The total attendance at Nashville did not set a record. The 1,816 registrants ranked third behind the record 1,861 at New Orleans in January 1986 and 1,820 in San Diego in January 1987. Those three Conventions are the only ones in NCAA history to exceed 1,800.

The total number of proposals acted upon (including amendments to amendments) in Nashville—200—ranks fourth in the all-time list and was the highest number since 201 faced the delegates in Dallas in January 1984.

Here are the key statistics regarding attendance and representation at the 1988 annual Convention:

- Total attendance: 1,816. Record: 1,860 in New Orleans, 1986.
- Organizations represented: 866. Previous record was 857 in San Diego, 1987.
- Registered voting members: 732. Record: 741 in San Diego, 1987.
- Percentage of all voting members present: 83.8 percent, second highest ever. Record: 85.7 percent, New Orleans, 1986.
- Active member institutions: 665. Record: 678, San Diego, 1987.
- Division I members: 328. Previous record was 327, San Diego, 1987.
- Division I percentage: 95.3 percent. Record: 95.8 percent, New Orleans, 1986.
- Division II members: 170. Record: 178, San Diego, 1987.
- Division II percentage: 83.3 percent. Record: 86 percent, San Diego, 1987.
- Division III members: 240. Record: 241, San Diego, 1987.
- Division III percentage: 68.2

percent. Record: 70.3 percent, San Diego, 1987.

• Number of proposals acted upon: 200. Record: 257, St. Louis, 1976.

Other attendance data:

All but five Division I member institutions—287 of 292—were in attendance, as were 41 of the 52 Division I conferences. All 114 of the Division I-A institutions and conferences were there. The size of the delegations in Division I ranged from 3.95 delegates per member in I-A to 2.70 in I-AA and 1.93 in I-AAA, for an overall Division I average of 2.84 persons per member.

In Division II, 155 of the 187 member institutions (and 15 of 23 conferences) were in Nashville, with an average of 1.93 delegates each.

A total of 223 of the 320 Division III institutions (and 17 of 32 conferences) were represented. Their delegations averaged 1.42 persons.

The overall registration figure of 1,816 included 1,495 delegates from active member institutions, 109 from member conferences, 24 representing affiliated members, nine corresponding members, 67 registered as visitors and 112 representatives of the news media.

Voting

Divisions I, II and III all set unofficial voting records in Nashville, but the records for an overall Convention vote and votes in Divisions I-A and I-AA were below the all-time recorded highs.

Here is a summary of the voting records:

- Overall recorded vote: 562 on an unsuccessful motion to rescind Division II's approval of a tryout rule. Record: 704, San Diego, 1987 (proposal to move financial aid legislation to bylaws).

cellence," she said. "What a great compliment—you have achieved excellence. (Expansion) would bring more compliments to worthy student-athletes."

Finch believes that site selection for future championship semifinals and finals is taking a different turn. Cities rather than member institutions are taking an interest in hosting these games.

"The city of Tacoma (site of the 1988 and 1989 championships) bid for the championship in concert with the University of Washington, but the city was the initiator," she said.

She would like to see two steps taken in the relationship between television and women's basketball. The first is the extension of national television coverage to regular-season games and conference tournaments. The second is the reporting of women's game scores on a national level. These two steps would increase visibility and credibility of the sport.

"You cannot have role models for young players if they do not see them," she said.

Increased visibility would, however, have a price.

"We are about to go to a new plateau with television," she said. "With that, the leaders in women's basketball have to be responsible for the games televised and the image portrayed. Coaches and student-athletes will be more accountable for their actions on and off the court."

Bill would give principals power to test students

After more than one hour of lively debate, the Tennessee House education committee recommended a bill giving school principals the power to order students to take drug tests.

Rep. Ray Davis, D-Milan, defended his legislation against charges it might be misused by some principals. Davis said he graduated from high school in 1965 and "got my little tail whipped a lot, and I'm not deranged or anything."

"I can't see where it will warp a student or make him deranged if he had to take a test and it came out not showing anything," the sponsor told United Press International.

But Rep. Roy Herron, D-Dresden, said the bill could "leave the door wide open to principals' testing every student in a school because of suspicions that one had smoked marijuana."

An amendment by Rep. Steve Bivens, D-Cleveland, requires local school systems to pay for tests principals order. Another amendment tacked on by Rep. Maria Peroulas, R-Knoxville, protects principals from lawsuits.

Parents of students being tested must be notified under the pending legislation, and principals who misuse it may be fired.

1988 Column No. 10

NCAA Bylaw 1-9(e)—expense-paid visits

Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that the application of O.I. 106, which indicates that the limitation on total number of visits set forth in Bylaw 1-9 (i.e., that a prospect may accept not more than one expense-paid visit to not more than five member institutions) would apply separately to the period in which the prospect is in high school and to the period beginning with the prospect's enrollment in college preparatory school or junior college. The principle in O.I. 106 would relate to two separate periods of time and permit a total of no more than 10 paid visits to NCAA member institutions for a prospect. Accordingly, the opportunity to visit five member institutions exists when the prospect is in high school, and the opportunity to make five additional visits exists if the prospect enrolls in a college preparatory school or junior college, or transfers from a four-year college. Further, a transfer student under such circumstances would be considered a prospective student-athlete per Case No. 177 (page 351, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) and could receive a paid visit only if it is counted within the five-visit limitation for the period following the completion of high school enrollment.

NCAA Bylaw 7-1(f)—expenses for part-time and graduate assistant coaches

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee reviewed the application of Case No. 391 (page 418, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) and agreed that a member institution is permitted to provide actual and necessary expenses for a part-time coach to attend the National Association of Basketball Coaches coaching clinics and conventions, as well as to make visits with professional teams, inasmuch as these expenses would be considered an acceptable employee benefit (i.e., professional enhancement activities) available under similar circumstances to other institutional employees. The subcommittee concluded that the provisions of Case No. 396 (page 420, 1987-88 NCAA Manual) would preclude a member institution from providing such expenses for its graduate assistant coaches.

NCAA Bylaw 1-2(a)-(6)—contact and evaluation restrictions

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee agreed that the provisions of Bylaw 1-2(a)-(6) would preclude a coaching staff member of a member institution from serving as a speaker or attending a meeting or banquet in which prospective student-athletes are in attendance during any "dead period" as specified in Bylaw 1-2(a)-(6). The subcommittees confirmed that during such "dead periods," a member institution is precluded from visiting a high school, or contacting, evaluating or entertaining a prospective student-athlete on its own campus.

NCAA Bylaw 1-2(b)—leadership tutorial programs

Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that the NCAA Council has approved the following criteria per Bylaw 1-2(b) regarding the involvement of member institutions' student-athletes or athletics representatives in leadership tutorial programs (and any similar educational programs) designed in part to improve the probability of prospective student-athletes' qualifying academically to receive athletically related grants-in-aid from member institutions:

1. A member institution may not serve as a sponsor or cosponsor of the program.
2. No member of an institution's coaching staff may participate in the program.
3. No representative of an institution's athletics interests or enrolled student-athletes may be involved in the selection of the participants in the program; however, both representatives and student-athletes may serve as bona fide tutors or instructors in the program, provided their employment is determined through a legitimate, nonpartisan selection process.
4. At no time may student-athletes or athletics representatives attempt to recruit any prospective student-athlete in the program.
5. The program must be open to athletes and nonathletes alike.
6. The program must be conducted within 30 miles of the institution's campus or the home town of the involved student-athlete or athletics representative.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

ville's Freedom Hall, 71-70. It was considered then as the biggest upset in NCAA tournament history.

And in 1957 at Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium, Chamberlain and his Kansas team played the undefeated University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, Tar Heels for three overtimes before losing the championship game, 54-53. Many consider it the greatest title game in tournament history.

"Over the years, a lot of people have come to believe that game was poor old North Carolina finding some way to beat Wilt," said Frank McGuire, who coached that North Carolina team and sent out 5-11 Tommy Kearns to jump center against the 7-foot Chamberlain to start the game.

"But we went 32-0 that year. There haven't been too many teams before and since that played an entire season undefeated."

The shining star of the decade was Russell. A scrawny 6-10 center from across the bay in Oakland, he was the foundation on which coach Phil Woolpert built one of the more dominant college basketball teams in history. The San Francisco Dons won 60 consecutive games at one point and back-to-back titles. They beat Gola and La Salle, 77-63, in 1955 at Kansas City and then Iowa, 83-71, at Evanston, Illinois, in 1956 to cap an undefeated season.

"Oh my, but Bill Russell was a great player," remembered Hall of Fame coach Henry Iba. "In basketball history, only a few players have changed the game. He's one of them, especially defensively. He was the greatest shot blocker I've ever seen."

The 1950s started with rare double-victories as Nat Holman's City College of New York team won both the NIT and NCAA championships. CCNY did it with a young and well-rounded team that a year later would be in shambles after several players were implicated in the game-fixing scandal. The same fate befell the Bradley University team that lost both title games that year.

Dual participation in the post-season tournaments was outlawed

Committee encounters a lack of cooperation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions issued a public reprimand of the men's basketball program at the University of Kentucky for what the committee termed a lack of cooperation by the university in investigation of charges that were reported in articles in the Lexington, Kentucky, Herald-Leader newspaper.

S. David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, said, "The committee felt the university failed to go far enough in attempting to interview some individuals who have refused to talk to the university and in following up possible leads on violations that were discussed by some of the individuals the school did interview."

The newspaper interviewed 33 people who claimed there were serious NCAA rules violations, such as cash gifts to players.

Berst said only one person identified by the newspaper reported similar violations to the NCAA or the university.

Berst said the newspaper would not cooperate in the investigation. John S. Carroll, the paper's editor, said, "We have never allowed any outside organization to rummage through our notes or tapes."

the next year, and long time powers Kentucky (1951), Kansas (1952) and Indiana (1953) won the following NCAA tournaments.

Adolph Rupp's championship team at Lexington was keyed by Hagan, Ramsey and Bill Spivey. Phog Allen's only NCAA champion was built around Lovellette, the only man to lead the nation in scoring the same year his team won the championship. At Indiana, coach Branch McCracken used the combination of big man Don Schlundt and little man Bob Leonard to beat a Kansas team that had a starting guard named Dean Smith. La Salle won the 1954 title thanks to Gola, who many considered the greatest player in the game's history to that point. At 6-7, Gola was able to play inside and outside because of his quickness and ability to handle the ball.

"Tom Gola, what a ballplayer," said Hall of Fame coach Ray Meyer. "There wasn't anything he could not do with the basketball. He was way ahead of his time."

As the decade of the great player came to an end, it was two great teams that won the NCAA championship. Kentucky in 1958 and California in 1959 did not have superstars. Yet, those teams disappointed Baylor, Robertson and West, and delighted a nation that year after year was being shown that the NCAA tournament was college sports' most exciting event.

Rozelle suggests NFL study on drafting of underclassmen

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has asked the league's rules-making committee to look into regulations that could, for the first time, allow underclassmen to enter the college player draft.

Rozelle's spokesman, Joe Browne, said during a national conference call with football writers March 8 that the proposal had been presented to the competition committee, now meeting in Hawaii, and could come up during the league's annual winter meetings in Phoenix the week of March 14.

Under NFL rules, the only players who can be drafted have used up their college eligibility, have been in college for five years or have earned their degrees with eligibility remaining. The NFL is the only major professional league with such eligibility requirements. The NBA, NHL and Major League Baseball all allow underclassmen to be signed.

But the NFL has been under increasing pressure to take underclassmen, particularly in the past two years, when players lost their eligibility after disclosures that they had signed with agents.

Last year, for example, wide receiver Chris Carter was declared ineligible for his final year at Ohio

Funding available for drug-education speakers

NCAA member institutions already are participating in the Association's drug-education speaker grant program.

The program is designed to pay honorariums to speakers for their participation in drug-education and wellness programs for student-athletes or athletics personnel at member institutions. Grant funds are available to offset honorarium expenses of up to $1,500 per academic year. Speakers are expected to be well-qualified to discuss drug-education or wellness topics.

Request forms for the grants were issued in January. The University of Hartford, Loyola College (Maryland) and Randolph-Macon College are among the first institutions to receive grants.

"We already had a drug-education program in place, and we bring in three or four speakers a year to talk to our student-athletes," said Richard L. Cote, head athletics trainer, University of Hartford. "It's not cheap, and I'm not talking about bringing in celebrities. By the time you pay travel costs, you're running into a lot of money. We found out about the NCAA program when we were planning our next event, and we applied right away. We're delighted to be able to offset some of our costs, and we're now going to be able to put together a seminar for our professional staff."

The Association's national office can assist institutions and conferences in developing one-day or multoday training sessions conducted by experts in the drug-education field.

"We feel that educating our coaches is just as important as educating our athletes," said Thomas M. Brennan, director of athletics, Loyola College (Maryland). "We do have drug counseling available on campus, but this program enables us to bring in different people from outside to talk to our staff and our teams. For schools like ours without large budgets, every little bit helps."

The NCAA Drug-Education Speakers Bureau grant-request form must be submitted and approved prior to the event for which funding is requested, and an evaluation form must be completed by event participants and returned to the national office before grant funds are released.

For more information, contact Frank D. Uryasz, director of sports sciences, at the national office.

Readjustment of grading policy sought

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee is taking steps to put the pluses back into eligibility standards.

The committee, expressing the belief that disallowing plus and minus grades in the computation of high school grade-point averages is unjust to some prospective student-athletes, recommended to the NCAA Council that such grades be allowed in the conversion to the 4.000 scale.

The committee, meeting March 3-4 in San Francisco, also recommended that midyear graduates be protected from the Bylaw 5-1-(j) requirement that test scores be achieved no later than the July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first enrollment in a collegiate institution. It was recommended that the deadline be changed to the end of an individual's last semester in high school.

In other action, the committee addressed the need for test scores to be validated by an official report from the testing agency.

The committee continues to examine both the combining of scores from separate administrations of tests and the feasibility of creating a national clearinghouse for test-score information. The committee will monitor a study undertaken by the Big Ten Conference on the creation of such a clearinghouse.

Also, the committee denied the use of the Washington Precollege Test as a blanket alternative to the ACT and SAT, but decided it would consider its application on a case-by-case basis.

Big East honors Syracuse's Jones

Vera Jones, who helped lead the Syracuse University women's basketball team to the Big East Conference regular-season championship this year, is the conference's 1988 Basketball Scholar-Athlete award winner.

The Big East has honored the outstanding student-athlete in basketball since 1985. Only junior and senior players are considered. Jones, from Fort Washington, Maryland, is the first recipient from Syracuse.

She is a dean's list student in broadcast journalism and works as a reporter for WJPZ-FM radio, a campus station.

In this profession, it's easy to become a cynic. You learn early, even when there's an "up" side to something, to check - just to make sure that there isn't a "down" side, too.

That, after all, is a requirement of the newspaper business. If you want everything sugar-coated, go to the candy store. If you want everything one-sided, go to Moscow.

But if you want a chronicle of real life—all the good, the bad, the ugly and, on occasion, the flip side of the coin—then go to your newspaper.

For years, however, sports were all but exempt from the media microscope. Coverage of teams and players was, at worst, downright cheerleading and horn-tooting. At best, it was antiseptic...hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil.

In some areas, that still exists, particularly in smaller towns where the local guy's job might hinge on his relationship with and accessibility to a coach. A lot of TV sports guys, too, are somewhat limited in their freedom because they can't afford to make anyone angry, lest they tune to another channel and the ratings go sour.

And any beat writer would be lying if he told you he was totally objective concerning the success or failure of the team he covers. That just isn't human nature.

For the most part, however, heroes and their games now are fair game. And even sports journalists pursue both the good news and the bad with equal zeal.

The result of going after "both" sides, however, has resulted in a public perception that there is as much wrong with athletics—especially college athletes—as there is right.

Is it the media's fault for focusing on recruiting violations, or poor graduation rates, or failed drug tests, or coaching excess? No. Is it the media's fault because these matters often merit headlines? No.

But it may be the media's fault—mine included—for not focusing enough on the positive in relationship to the negative. We all are guilty of sensationalizing the wrongs and trivializing the rights.

What started me thinking along these lines was a speech given by the NCAA's executive director, Richard D. Schultz, to a group of sports-writers at the NCAA College Football Preview in Kansas City.

He made some valid points concerning college athletics. I'd like to share them with you.

"If you were to ask the average person on the street," Schultz began, "they would say that universities are

Administrators, not sport, are problem

To the Editor:

This letter is being submitted in response to the February 17, 1988, article in The NCAA News, "Night play seen as one remedy for failing tennis program," by Wilson Campbell.

If Campbell's statement "Collegiate tennis is an ailing patient. And without some quick surgery, the game as we know it may die" was meant to raise an alarm, it was successful.

Based upon personal observations, tennis is alive and well. There is, however, pervasive sickness, but it is not with the sport of tennis. Rather, it is with those in administrative positions who decide which sports are played, based upon the sport's ability to generate revenue.

The basic premise for sports used to be to provide those higher-skilled athletes with the opportunity of participating against higher-skilled athletes from other institutions.

Somewhere along the way, some human parasites perceived athletics as a business that could generate revenue, enhance and perpetuate their own egos and wallets at the expense of student-athletes.

Standards established by the NCAA often were circumvented, overlooked or flagrantly violated.

Through all of this, some educational institutions and athletics conferences such as the Ivy League have maintained high academic standards while protecting the dignity of the student-athlete. They display little concern about the amount of revenue produced as a result of the competition. They have even continued to sponsor sports—that individuals may pursue for the greater part of the remainder of their lives—that produce absolutely no revenue; i.e. swimming, archery, badminton, bicycling, squash, rowing—and yes, even tennis—that have not become, as yet, "professional intercollegiate sports."

I am proud to be associated with an institution of higher education with broad-based athletics, sports clubs, intramurals, physical education and recreational sports programs where a person's professional employment security does not rest solely with the number of victories amassed. Instead, it rests with the quality of instruction and services to the student-athlete.

Theodore Roosevelt once said, "It is far better for a person to participate in a sport, even if they play it poorly, than to go and watch someone play it well."

Is it the sport of tennis and other nonrevenue-producing sports that are ailing, or is this situation a symptom of a corrupt, greedy society that is ignorant, misinformed or void of values?

Is athletics ultimately for the participating student-athletes, or is the primary purpose to provide vicarious entertainment for spectators?

An editorial

Who should benefit financially from the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship radio broadcast? Those who support the NCAA or private interests?

I think the NCAA has its priorities in the wrong order when it comes to the radio broadcasts of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The NCAA Radio Network is a division of Host Communications of Lexington, Kentucky.

Several years ago, Host Communications entered into an agreement with the CBS Radio Network, and the result was that those radio stations affiliated with the CBS Radio Network are offered the first opportunity to broadcast the NCAA tournament games.

Is it fair? We don't think so, and here's why: Shouldn't those radio stations that financially support and broadcast college basketball throughout the entire season get the first opportunity to broadcast the climax of the season, the NCAA tournament? That would seem logical, but it is not the way things are handled right now by the NCAA Radio Network.

In this radio market, for example (Chattanooga, Tennessee), the radio station that pays a rights fee to the local university (the Study shows decrease to continue in number of women in coaching

Although interest and prestige in women's sports have increased over the last 10 years, the percentage of women in coaching jobs has decreased, says Dorothy J. Lovett, a University of Texas, Austin, researcher.

"Because of the popularity of women's sports on the college and high school levels, men are more interested in pursuing these jobs today; and for whatever reason, they're getting them," she said.

The greatest disparity exists in women's basketball at the junior and senior college levels, according to a survey by Lovett and Carla Lowry of Southwestern University.

The survey indicates the number of female basketball coaches in Texas has decreased from 47 to 30 since 1977, while the number of males coaching women's basketball teams has increased from 21 to 46.

A similar trend exists in tennis. The survey found that in 1977, there were 29 women and 26 men coaching women's teams in Texas. Ten years later, there were 18 women and 44 men.

"This isn't to say that fewer women are involved in sports these days," Lovett said.

"In fact, the number of women participating has increased six-fold, but fewer are finding their way into leadership roles."

Lovett speculated that the decline in women coaches could be the result of the "old-boy network," which automatically awards high-paying jobs to men.

She also cited the lack of female role models and frustrations specific to women in coaching careers that cause them to seek more satisfying employment.

"There's even a study that shows that young girls prefer male coaches because they consider men to be more competent, based on nothing more than their 'maleness,'" Lovett said. "Attitudes like this on the part of students undoubtedly add to a female coach's frustration."

The study, commissioned by the Texas Athletic Equity Project, offers little hope for reversing the trend unless people concerned about the problem intervene, she said.

According to figures developed by the study, the percentage of female coaches in the United States will continue to decline over the next five years, United Press International reported.

"We need to raise the consciousness of the school boards, the principals, the athletics directors and the young girls who participate in athletics," Lovett said.

University of Tennessee, Chattanooga) and broadcasts the basketball games during the entire season does not get the opportunity to broadcast the NCAA tournament games on the NCAA Radio Network.

On the other hand, the radio station that does not broadcast a single college basketball game during the regular season (or pay a radio rights fee to the local university) does get the first opportunity to broadcast the NCAA tournament on the NCAA Radio Network, simply because that radio station is affiliated with the CBS Radio Network.

Host Communications and the NCAA Radio Network clearly have their priorities in the wrong order when it comes to the right to broadcast NCAA tournament basketball.

The radio station that broadcasts and financially supports NCAA basketball throughout the season should get the first opportunity to broadcast the championship tournament.

It certainly seems as if the NCAA, the NCAA Radio Network and Host Communications are ignoring the local radio stations that have earned the right with their financial support throughout the year to broadcast the NCAA tournament.

making millions of dollars off athletics programs at the expense of the student-athlete, that all coaches cheat, that athletes don't graduate. And that's just not the case.

"We have problems, the same problems that are commonplace in society. But they are not any greater and not any smaller. All is not wrong in the world of intercollegiate athletics.

"There are a handful of schools making money, but most just hope to break even at the end of the year. If statistics are right, just as many finish in the red as the black.

"All coaches don't cheat. We have about 12 percent (of member schools) being investigated, and most of those are self-reported, secondary violations. There is a real interest and effort among coaches, athletics directors and presidents to establish real integrity, and the vast number are running programs the right way. We've told them, 'We can't legislate integrity; that starts at home.' All we can do is ask coaches, athletics directors and presidents to promise to run their programs with integrity and class. If they do that, they accomplish what volumes of legislation can't.

"Athletes are graduating at an eight percent higher rate than the rest of the student body in the same time period, so we do have student athletes representing institutions.

"So, if you add up the pluses, take away the minuses, intercollegiate athletes looks pretty good. Most of the coaches and athletes are the role models they should be, not only for young people but for everybody."

Schultz is right. I've often felt — and sometimes written — that there is too much emphasis on athletics.

In light of what he says, though, perhaps not enough emphasis is given to the group of people who meet challenges and play by the rules.

Those who coach and play the games we so ardently follow on the college level do not need to be put upon a pedestal. But most — not all, but most — certainly deserve being looked up to.

And that's something even we cynics need to remind ourselves of from time to time.

More teams than ever have legitimate shot at title

Temple's Tim Perry goes up to block a shot

Predicting the winner of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship is easy. It will be one of 64 teams.

Parity may not have stretched that far, but more teams than ever are likely to enter this tournament believing it is their turn to win it all. The difference between the winner and the rest of the field could be one shot that drops or does not, a pass that finds the right hands, or a great defensive play.

"There are more teams that could win it all than at any time in the four years I have been on the selection committee," Fred Schaus, director of athletics at West Virginia and NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee member, told a recent media gathering in Atlanta.

Experience helps

"Tournament experience helps you somewhat," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said about doing well in the tournament. "The experience on your team—the more juniors and seniors—is a big factor."

Last year, the Orangemen reached the Final Four for the second time and reached the championship game for the first time.

"If you get to playing well, it gets easier to play well," Boeheim said. "We started playing well against Western Kentucky (in the second round) and got better and better every game."

Two teams that have played well this season are Temple and Arizona. Coach John Chaney's Owls led the nation in field-goal percentage defense through games of February 29, while coach Lute Olson's Wildcats were the top team in field-goal percentage and three-point field-goal percentage.

Temple has four veteran starters in Tim Perry, Ramon Rivas, Mike Vreeswyk and Harold Evans. Perry ranked fourth nationally in blocked shots and Evans was fourth in assists. Mark Macon, the fifth starter, has plenty of support for freshman-of-the-year honors.

Looking for luck

"We are certainly one of the teams that have a chance to win the championship," Chaney said in Atlanta. "I think, with luck, we can be like the 1985 Villanova team. That was a team that no one figured would win, but kept doing the things it had to do."

Through 28 games, Arizona's Sean Elliott was averaging 18.6 points and 6.1 rebounds. Anthony Cook was scoring 13.3 points per game and had a rebounding average of 7.3. Tom Tolbert and Steve Kerr were averaging 14.4 and 12.8 points, respectively, and Kerr ranked second nationally in three-point field-goal percentage, hitting 59.9 percent. His overall field-goal percentage was 59.2, and he was averaging 4.1 assists.

"He is the glue, the guy everybody looks to for leadership and direction," Olson said about Kerr.

"Arizona has got the experience back I think you need," Boeheim said. "The team plays very well together and is going to be very tough in the tournament."

Tournament-tested

Purdue is another team with a nucleus of juniors and seniors who have competed in the tournament. Seniors Troy Lewis and Todd Mitchell were averaging 17.8 and 16.8 points, respectively, through 26 games. Mitchell also was averaging 5.7 rebounds. Junior Melvin McCants had a 13.3 scoring average and a 5.0 rebounding average. Senior Everette Stephens was the fourth starter in double figures with a 12.9 scoring average.

Other teams to watch include Oklahoma, which was averaging 106 points per game through 28 contests; North Carolina, a perennial tournament favorite, and Nevada-Las Vegas, a Final Four team a year ago.

Pittsburgh and Syracuse are prime candidates to continue the Big East Conference's tournament success. In eight years, the conference has seven Final Four appearances and two championships to its credit.

Lady Vols haven't been resting on their laurels since 1987 title

A transformed Tennessee may run itself straight to a second consecutive Division I Women's Basketball Championship title.

Coach Pat Head Summitt's teams have been known for tenacious defense and half-court offense, but this Tennessee team is different. The Lady Volunteers have gone from deliberate to fast-paced and the offense has moved from the post to the perimeter. In statistical rankings through games of February 29, Tennessee topped the nation in scoring offense with an average of 91 points per game.

"This team has been explosive at times," Summitt said.

"Tennessee is a much more diverse scoring team than last year," Auburn coach Joe Ciampi said. "That is something you have to be concerned about."

Junior Bridgette Gordon was averaging 20.2 points through 26 games. If she maintains that average, she will be the first Tennessee player in 10 years to average 20 points a game for a season. Gordon was the leading scorer and rebounder in last year's tournament with 111 points and 41 rebounds in five games. She is averaging 6.7 rebounds this season.

Elevated game

"She has elevated her game to another level between her sophomore and junior years," Summitt said. "She has shown that a great offensive player can do more than just put the ball in the basket."

Sheila Frost, another junior, is averaging 15.6 points and 7.8 rebounds. She also is hitting 63.2

percent of her field-goal attempts and was ranked fourth nationally in that category. Sophomore Tonya Edwards was the tournament's most outstanding player as a freshman. This season, she has come off the bench to average 13.6 points and

Championship Preview

4.9 rebounds. Senior Lisa Webb is averaging 7.4 rebounds a game and point guard Dawn Marsh leads the team in assists with a 7.1 average.

"Dawn has provided tremendous leadership," Summitt said. "She sets the tone offensively and defensively."

Southeastern Conference rival Auburn lost to Tennessee in the regional final last year. The Lady Tigers hope to use good defense and strong rebounding to snare the title for themselves.

Consistency and pursuit

"Defensively, from a coaching standpoint, you can develop consistency," Ciampi said. "We talk about delaying and disrupting the offense. Our offensive system is designed to have rebounding position. We talk a lot about pursuing the rebound."

Auburn was ranked second nationally in both scoring offense and rebound margin. The team also was eighth in field-goal percentage defense and 12th in scoring defense.

"I think Auburn is truly a great team," Summitt said. "They have one player that has allowed them to be a notch better—Vickie Orr, a great paint player. The supporting cast makes Auburn a great team."

Orr, a 6-2 junior, was averaging 17.1 points and 7.1 rebounds through 27 games. Sharon Stewart, a 6-3 senior, was scoring 14.3 points and averaging 8.9 rebounds.

The Iowa Hawkeyes have both defense and the national championship in their minds.

Hawkeyes in control

"Defense is predictable," coach C. Vivian Stringer said. "We determine what shots (an opponent) can shoot and what shots we will not tolerate. We take real serious pride in the way we play defense."

Iowa was ranked sixth in scoring defense, yielding only 55.8 points per game. The team was 13th in field-goal percentage defense, holding opponents' shooting percentage to 38.6. The Hawkeyes also were shooting 50.1 percent from the field.

Senior Michelle Edwards averaged 19.6 points and 4.8 rebounds through 24 games. She is the Iowa

Iowa teams' dominance threatened in Division I wrestling

Where once there was only Iowa, there are now a host of claimants to the Division I wrestling throne.

Last season, Iowa State snapped the Hawkeyes' streak of nine Division I wrestling titles. Now, a field of contenders that includes those rivals and another traditional power, Oklahoma State—as well as upstart Arizona State—will challenge for the team title March 17-19 at Ames, Iowa.

Those contenders have spent much of the season defeating one another in dual-meet action.

After struggling with injuries early in the winter, Iowa State has regained a measure of health and is likely to offer a strong defense of the crown on its home floor at Hilton Coliseum.

One of the pack

"We're putting the whole idea of 'defending' out of our minds," coach Jim Gibbons said. "We're just going to be one of several teams in there scrapping and trying to win."

The Cyclones lost a pair of individual champions but have two others back. Tim Krieger (150 pounds) and Eric Voelker (190) each won a narrow victory at Maryland last March, but each has enhanced his reputation in his class this season.

team titles, more than the combined total of traditional rivals Iowa, Iowa State and Oklahoma, but the Cowboys have not won since 1971.

Coach Joe Seay's team does feature perhaps the top performer in collegiate wrestling in John Smith. Named the most outstanding wrestler at last year's championships, the 134-pound titlist went on to capture a gold medal at the world championships.

Among Oklahoma State's other top performers are Vince Silva (158) and Chris Barnes (177).

Still a threat

While Iowa has slipped from its previous position of dominance, the Hawkeyes will not escape notice at Ames. Dan Gable, acknowledged as one of the top wrestling coaches in NCAA history after barely a decade on the job, has revitalized his program and has his team hungry for another title. Head-to-head victories over Iowa State at both Iowa City and Ames this season should serve as a reminder of Iowa's capabilities.

Royce Alger, individual champion at 167, is back to lead the Hawkeye effort. Runners-up Brad Penrith (126) and Jim Heffernan (150) also have performed well this season.

Arizona State upset the Division I status quo in December by grabbing the top spot in the national rankings. Coach Bobby Douglas, long considered one of the sport's top theorists and a recent inductee into the hall of fame for his international success as a competitor, guided the Sun Devils to the title at the prestigious Las Vegas Invitational within a week of defeating Iowa and Oklahoma in dual meets.

Arizona State relies on exceptional balance, boasting eight wrestlers among the nation's top 10 in their weights. Heading the list is 190-pounder Mike Davies, third last season.

Super sophomores

But the key to the Sun Devils' emergence has been the rapid progress of sophomores Zeke Jones (118), Tommy Ortiz (142) and Dan St. John (158), each of whom reached the finals in the Pacific-10 Conference as freshmen.

A third team from wrestling-rich Iowa also will challenge on the home-state mats. Northern Iowa features a top-notch brother combination at the lower weights. Mark Schwab, just a sophomore, will be a favorite at 118 if he is healthy by the tournament. Brother Mike (126), a senior, also is among the leading contenders in his class.

The Panthers also are strong at the other end of the lineup with heavyweight Joel Greenlee.

Some found it hard to believe that traditional power Oklahoma posted a losing dual-meet record in 1987. But with new blood in the lineup, Stan Abel's Sooners have bounced back this season. William "Junior" Taylor, junior college champion at 150 pounds last year, will be among the top contenders in that class at the championships.

Other top teams include six Big Ten Conference squads—Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio State, Indiana and Purdue—and Penn State, Lock Haven, North Carolina State, Edinboro, North Carolina and Bloomsburg.

career leader in both steals and assists. Shanda Berry had a 14.6 scoring average and an 8.4 rebounding average. Franthea Price was scoring 13.5 points per game and grabbing an average of 5.8 rebounds.

Texas and Louisiana Tech will be in the thick of the competition once again. Last year, Louisiana Tech defeated Iowa in the regional final and Texas in the championship semi-final to advance to the final game. Through February 26, the Lady Techsters were ranked first in rebound margin, second in scoring defense and fourth in scoring offense. Texas was fifth in scoring offense and has remained one of the nation's top teams despite the loss of Clarissa Davis to an injury. Senior Yulonda Wimbish has paced the team in scoring.

Division I women's swimming has four teams vying for championship

Texas and Stanford finished way out in front of the competition at the Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships last year, but a four-way battle is brewing for the top spot this season.

Second-place Stanford finished just 17 points behind Texas, but a whopping 316.5 points ahead of third-place Florida in 1987. The teams will gather again March 17-19 at the University of Texas Swim Center in Austin for the seventh Division I women's meet.

"There should be a real battle for first between us, Stanford, Florida and possibly California," said Texas head coach Richard Quick. "We have a very talented team but we're not as balanced as we've been in the past."

"Our strength lies in the sprint freestyles, which is a little bit risky, and we have some definite weaknesses," Quick said.

"Of course, we have the home-team advantage, but I think it will only be slight. Stanford and Florida have swum here before and know what to expect—it's a really fast, exciting pool. But the crowd element will be to our advantage."

Mitchell returns

Eight returning scorers and a strong freshman squad should help Quick's Longhorns overcome the 152.5 points the team lost to graduation. Key to the Longhorns' success last year was Betsy Mitchell, who is back for her final season.

Mitchell set records in both backstroke events last year, finished first in the 200 individual medley, and swam on the record-setting 200-yard medley relay team and the first-place 800 freestyle relay team. She also claimed titles in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes in 1986.

"As team captain, Betsy provides leadership in and out of the water," said assistant coach Jill Sterkel. "When she's at her best, the rest of the team follows her."

Though she was Texas' top point-scorer in 1987, Mitchell by no means is the only standout returning. Other veterans include Ann Drolsom, Carrie Steinseifer, Tracey McFarlane, Jodi Eyles, Stacy Cassidy, Andrea Hayes and Kim Rhodenbaugh.

Drolsom, McFarlane and Eyles joined Mitchell on the winning 200-yard medley relay team; and Mitchell, Steinseifer and Cassidy were part of the winning 800-yard freestyle relay squad.

McFarlane also claimed an individual title with her record-setting performance in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Key freshmen

Newcomers Kelley Davies and Susan Johnson will add depth to the team with their performances in the butterfly and breaststroke events, respectively. "Kelly and Susan are two key freshmen who are real quality swimmers and who will play important roles," said Sterkel.

"With Davies and McFarlane in the breaststroke, we should be able to sweep both events."

"But I also think in order for the team to win, everyone has to perform. The competition is so good, we can't just rely on a few swimmers to carry the team."

The Cardinal returns more point-scorers than rival Texas but has faced a couple of setbacks that may prevent it from overcoming Texas' dominance at the championships.

Although she suffered a twisted ankle and torn ligaments early last summer, senior Susie Rapp is swimming the breaststroke faster than in 1987; however, she has dropped a bit in the individual medley. Teammate Dana Anderson had a broken arm in January but still is expected to qualify for the championships.

Add to that Michelle Griglione's decision to leave the squad to concentrate on training for the Summer Olympics and you come up with a combination of weaknesses that may leave the Cardinal trailing Texas again this year.

Hope to 'give fits'

"Texas is going for its fifth championship and will be tough to beat at home," Stanford coach George Haines said. "We were just 17 points behind them last year so we're practically guaranteed second place this year."

"We're just going to go down there and give them fits," he added.

Cardinal strength will come from veterans Jenna Johnson, Aimee Berzins, Laurie McLean, Michelle Do-

Newcomers add excitement to play-off in men's ice hockey

As is customary every four years, collegiate men's ice hockey swelled hard as many of its brightest stars competed for the U.S. Olympic team. The absences, however, allowed new stars and new teams to surface in quest of a national championship.

Old reliables like Minnesota (14 NCAA appearances), Wisconsin (eight) and Harvard (12) always seem to emerge at tournament time. But keep an eye on Maine and Lake Superior State as each strives for only its second bid in the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Winter hot spot

With Maine (29-6-2 overall, 24-2 conference) perched atop Hockey East and primed for a trip to Lake Placid, the Black Bears' Alford Arena is the hottest place in the Northeast. Over 4,300 fans (200 over capacity) gather for every Maine home game, and the Black Bears have not let them down.

Hockey East coach-of-the-year Shawn Walsh, in his fourth season at Maine, honestly can believe that his Black Bears have a shot at the title. Led by Hockey East player-of-the-year Mike McHugh (27-34-61) and forward David Capuano (29-46-75), who set a Maine single-season record for points, Maine is loaded. Throw in defensemen Jack Capuano (12-34-46); U.S. Olympian Eric Weinrich, who joined the squad after the Olympics, and goaltender Scott King (21-3-1 record, 3.02 goals-against average, .900 save percentage), and Maine has the ability to walk away with a championship trophy.

Minnesota (31-7 overall, 30-7 conference), picked by many to finish third or fourth in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association at the outset of the season, accepted coach Doug Woog's concept of team defense and survived the loss of three players to Team USA.

Sophomore goaltender Robb Stauber has had an unbelievable year. In the last nine games of the regular season, he had four shut-outs and allowed only 12 goals (1.33 goals-against average, .964 save percentage).

Right wing Peter Hankinson (23-

Championship Preview

19-42) came on strong near the end of the regular season and led the Gophers in goals scored. Randy Skarda (18-24-42) tied a league record for defensemen with 18 goals.

Minnesota's team defense, balanced scoring (16 players have scored 10 or more points) and Robb Stauber might give the Gophers an edge.

Stingy defense

Defense is the name of the game at Lake Superior State (27-5-6, 22-4-6), as well as the main reason why this may be the best Laker team ever.

Coach Frank Anzalone can count on Kord Cernich (14-20-34) and Terry Hossack (13-14-27) at both the blue line and the offensive end. The Lakers allowed only 97 goals in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association 26 fewer than Michigan State, the next-closest team.

At the other end, Mark Vermette (41-25-66) led the nation in goals scored. Vermette scored a goal in 28 of 38 games and scored a point in 33 of 38 contests.

As the only Division I team with five or fewer losses, Lake Superior State consistently runs four solid lines at its opponents, with Peter Stauber (24-25-49), Anthony Palumbo (13-29-42) and Mike de Carle (23-33-56) supporting Vermette.

Freshman Bruce Hoffer is 17-2-3 in goal, with two shut-outs in 23 games (2.63, .906). He allowed two or fewer goals in 13 of his last 17 regular-season contests.

The Wisconsin Badgers (26-12-1, 20-9-1), runner-up to Minnesota in the WCHA, are seeking their fifth NCAA championship.

After starting out with a 6-4 record through November 13, the Badgers lost defenseman Shawn Sabol to the National Hockey League's Philadelphia Flyers. Wisconsin responded by winning eight of its next 10 games and notching an 18-6-1 record since November 27.

First-team all-conference left wing Paul Ranheim (31-24-55) and right wing Steve Tuttle (25-34-59) spur the Badger offensive attack. Defenseman Paul Stanton (8-35-53) led the squad in assists during the regular season.

Goaltender Dean Anderson (3.31, .895) had his best year ever as he played all but 11 minutes during the regular season.

Surprising seniors

After losing Lane MacDonald and Allen Bourbeau to Team USA, many thought Harvard coach Bill Cleary would have to rely on a talented but unproven freshman class to advance the NCAA tournament. Lost in the shuffle was a talented and determined senior class.

"I think a lot of people are surprised with the way we have played this year," said Cleary, in his 18th year as head coach. "Our seniors have really done an amazing job. They have brought the young kids along real well."

At the heart of any Cleary-coached team is defense, and this year's bunch is led by seniors Don Sweeney (6-19-25) and Jerry Pawloski (2-18-20). Harvard killed 57 straight penalties during one stretch this season.

"Our defense is our strongest suit. We just have not given up many goals this year. And that takes all six people playing well together on the ice. We take pride in our defense," said Cleary.

Offensively, Harvard is led by seniors Steve Armstrong (13-13-26) and Andy Janfaza (13-9-22), as well as Peter Ciavaglia (7-19-26) and C. J. Young (10-9-19).

Aggressive forechecking permitted Harvard opponents an average of only 25 shots per game and helped goaltender John Devin (2.67, .900) in front of the net.

St. Lawrence was the victim, the year was 1961 and the final score was 12-2.

nahue and Rapp.

Sprint freestyler Johnson will be defending titles in the 50 and 100 events and may better her second-place finish in the 100 fly. If Rapp does regain her strength and form, she should contribute significantly with a repeat victory in the 200-yard breaststroke. She also has the potential to finish first in the 100 breast and 200 individual medley.

Stanford is a strong favorite to defend its 400 free relay and 400 medley relay titles because all members—Johnson, Rapp, Berzins and McLean in the freestyle and Johnson, Rapp, Berzins and Donahue in the medley—are back.

Also battling for the top spot will be Florida and California.

Slight advantage

Florida seems to have a slight advantage over the Golden Bears with the return of Dara Torres and Tami Bruce. Combined, the two scored 121 of the Gators' 315 points at the 1987 championships.

Bruce, who considered devoting herself to Olympic training instead of returning for her junior year, is the defending 1,650 freestyle champ and a top choice to claim that spot again. Torres, in addition to a third-place finish in the 50 free, contributed to four of the Gators' relays.

California's loss of Mary T. Meagher is a crucial one, but coach Karen Thornton has compensated by adding top recruit Hiroko Nagasaki. Nagasaki set a U.S. Open record last year in the 200 breast, cutting more than two seconds off Rapp's previous title winning time.

Depth will come in the mid- and long-distance freestyle events with the assistance of Lisa Meyers and Cheryl Kriegsman. Meyers' top finish in the 1987 championships was a second-place spot in the 500 free, and Kriegsman added points with her fourth-place performance in the 1,650 free.

Championships profile

Event: Division I women's swimming.

Schedule: Texas will host the 1988 championships March 17-19.

The NCAA News coverage: Championships results will appear in the March 23 issue of the News.

Contenders: California, Florida, Stanford, Texas.

Championships notes: Texas, Stanford and Florida are the only teams ever to finish first or second in the team competition... Florida leads in individual title winners with 40 through the first six years of the championships... At the 1987 championships, meet records were set in half (nine) of the events contested... Swimmers from 41 schools scored points during the 1987 event.

Fencers turn attention to play-offs

Yves Auriol sees a parallel between the recent Winter Olympics and the sport of fencing.

"You hear people talking about the problems the U.S. was having in the Olympics, but then you won't hear any more about skiing or skating for the next four years," said Auriol, the women's fencing coach at Notre Dame. "It's the same with fencing. There will be some exposure for the sport during the Olympic year, then it will be over."

"The U.S. is struggling even in some of the better-known sports. We are such a sports-oriented society. There has to be some attention given, between those big events, to ways to improve the country's sports performances."

Attention divided

The Fighting Irish's Molly Sullivan

is among several fencers whose attention is divided between collegiate competition and the quest for Olympic glory. Sullivan, who just returned from Olympic preparations in the form of international competion in Italy, will seek to regain the NCAA individual title when the National Collegiate Women's Fencing Championships are held March 21-23 at Princeton.

Auriol's squad also will have a team title to defend. Last season, the Fighting Irish snapped the Ivy League's three-year hold on the crown and brought home Notre Dame's first NCAA women's championship.

"We lost our first two matches this season, but I think we still have a good shot," Auriol said. "We have a good team, but it's hard to repeat."

Sullivan, a senior, will be attempting to regain the individual championship she captured in 1986 but lost to Caitlin Bilodeaux of Columbia-Barnard last March. Bilodeaux has left the collegiate ranks and now is devoting her full attention to preparation for the Olympics. Sullivan, even with her own time divided, ranks as a clear favorite, and her individual success will determine whether Notre Dame can repeat.

Kenyon men seek ninth swim title

When the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships are mentioned, the first team that pops into mind is Kenyon.

The Lords have compiled an amazing string of eight consecutive titles in the 13-year history of the championships. They return March 17-19 in search of No. 9 at Emory University.

Kenyon coach Jim Steen has an experienced squad returning for the 1988 competition, including all-America Dennis Mulvihill. Recently named North Coast Athletic Conference swimmer of the year, Mulvihill will defend NCAA titles in the 200- and 500-yard freestyles and again will be an integral part of the 400 medley, 400 free and 800 free relay teams.

Mulvihill's times of 1:37.43 in the 200 free and 4:25.05 in the 500 free set Division III records last season.

Other veterans are David Greenlee, who finished first in the 100 free and second in the 50 free; George Pond, second in the 100 free; Nathaniel Lierandi, fifth in the 200 breaststroke, and Alan Schmidt, third and fifth in the 100 and 200 backstrokes, respectively.

Relay strength

Kenyon's real strength seems to be in the relay events, which it swept last year. The Lords are prepared to do the same in 1988—Mulvihill, Pond, Greenlee, Lierandi and Schmidt all were on at least one of the winning relay squads.

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, after settling for a disappointing fifth place last year on the heels of four consecutive second-place finishes, is heading into the championships with a "we're back" attitude. The Stags did not suffer as much from graduation this season as was the case last year.

"I have five seniors this year who really are the guts of the team," said coach Michael Sutton. "Plus we have two strong freshmen who can score big in at least one race each, maybe more."

Freestyle rematch

Top returners for the Stags are all-Americans Don Kuhn and Todd McKenzie. Kuhn, who swam to the No. 2 spot in the 1,650 free, will again be up against defending

North Dakota State takes Division II wrestling title

After 24 seasons as a head coach, Bucky Maughan finally has his national championship.

North Dakota State handed the veteran mentor the team title during the Division II Wrestling Championships March 4-5 at Nebraska-Omaha. The Bison's 88 points, the lowest winning total in the event since 1970, outdistanced the host team by 6¼ points. Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, champion from 1984 through 1986, was third.

Maughan was voted coach of the year after the victory.

North Dakota State was led by senior Rick Goeb, who captured the individual championship at 126 pounds. The Bison also got runner-up finishes from Dave Calliguri (118) and Matt Palmer (190) and semifinal points from Gene Green (158) and Pat Johannes (177).

R. J. Nebe led Nebraska-Omaha by winning the 177-pound title before the home fans.

Succeeding Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's four-time champion Tim Wright as the tournament's dominant individual was Pittsburgh-Johnstown's Carlton Haselrig, who was named most outstanding wrestler after successfully defending his heavyweight title. Haselrig recorded three pins in his four matches. He also will defend his Division I crown next week at Iowa State.

Also repeating as individual titlists from 1987 were Pat Dorn of South Dakota State (134) and Kory Mosher of North Dakota (158).

Another individual of note was Roger Singleton of Grand Valley State, who emerged from years in Wright's shadow to win at 118 pounds.

St. Lawrence wins its first Division III wrestling crown

Upstart St. Lawrence, led by heavyweight champion Pat Conners, captured its first Division III wrestling team title March 4-5 at Wheaton (Illinois). Montclair State, despite winning three individual championships, had to settle for second.

The Saints totaled 71 team points to 66¼ for Montclair State, the 1986 champion. St. Lawrence had finished no higher than eighth since 1983. Traditional Division III powers Ithaca, Trenton State and Buffalo followed in the standings.

Conners tiptoed through the heavyweight field, winning none of his four matches by more than two points. Among the Saints' other leaders were John Canty, runner-up at 118 pounds, and semifinalists Kevin Bishop (134) and Dan Keating (150).

Montclair State's individual champions were Pete Gonzalez (126), Karl Monaco (142) and Pete Georgoutsos (177). It was Monaco's third straight title.

Named outstanding wrestler at the meet for the second time was 118-pound champion Tim Jacoutot of Trenton State, who won his third title. Jacoutot received the same honor as a freshman in 1985. Brothers Tom and Mike also each won a Division III crown.

champion Kevin Casson of St. Olaf for the honors this year. Kuhn also was a top contender in the 500 free, coming in third behind Mulvihill and Casson.

McKenzie brought in points with his performances in the 200 individual medley (third place, 1:52.60), 200 freestyle (fourth, 1:41.09) and the 200 backstroke (eighth, 1:56.92).

Senior Bob Moore, who sat out his junior year to play water polo, returns in the 200 individual medley and the backstroke events. Other seniors with scoring potential are Ed Smith and Bud Coppersmith.

"This year should be exciting with the two new relay events (the 200 medley and 200 freestyle relays) and a new order of events," Sutton said. "Changes are good sometimes to keep things exciting, which is what we're in for this year."

Under the leadership of first-year coach Gregg Parini, Denison will be looking for a top-three spot again in 1988. Parini led Mount Union to a 10th-place finish last season.

Veterans fill gap

The graduation of all-America breaststroker Tom Anderson will mean the loss of almost 40 points, but the Big Red squad should be able to make up the loss with top performances by veterans P. J. Schaner, Chip Thomas, Matt Steckley, Paul Belanger and Charlie Lownes.

Schaner was the top point-getter at the 1987 championships with a third-place finish in the 1,650 free and fourth-place finishes in the 500 free and 400 individual medley. Steckley finished highest among teammates last year as he swam to second place in the 100-yard backstroke. He also finished fifth in the 200 individual medley.

The breaststroke events—led by Lownes, Jim McCracken and Steven Ray—should produce some major scores for the Big Red again this year.

Fencers

junior Kristen Kralicek also will be factors for Auriol's team.

Contender suffers losses

Temple, second last season, suffered substantial graduation losses, including top-20 individuals Rachael Hayes, Mindy Wichick and Lisa Miller. Coach Nikki Franke will respond with a talented young team dominated by sophomores.

Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck has one of the tournament's top fencers in Denise Piccininno, eighth as a sophomore last season.

Pennsylvania, champion in 1986, will contend again in 1988. The Quakers had won six straight Ivy League titles coming into this month's showdown. Pennsylvania is led by senior Gail Rossman, who has posted over 30 individual victories this season, and by junior Jane Hall.

After Bilodeaux

Columbia-Barnard lost the only two-time women's champion in Bilodeaux but remains strong among the other Ivy Group powers. Aladar Kogler, who also is head coach of the U.S. Olympic team, welcomes back juniors Darlene Pratschler and Wendy Louie and sophomore Amee Mangus.

Harvard, led by top-10 finisher Penelope Papilias, is among the other Ivy contenders. Yale was hurt by the loss of individual standout Sue Kembell-Cook but boasts a rising star in Kris Campbell.

Wayne State (Michigan), which won the first team championship in 1982, has been rebuilding after being out of contention for a period of time. Loredana Ranza finished eighth individually in 1987.

Among the other leading performers, DeAnn Dobesh of Ohio State has finished in the top 10 as a freshman and sophomore; with the graduation of several fencers who finished ahead of her last season, she will be in a position to contend for the individual championship.

It's been a ball for Cinderella teams in the 1980s

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Heading into "Selection Sunday" for the 50th NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship tournament, it is time to take a look at the "Cinderella teams" and upset games of the 1980s.

Why limit it to the 1980s? Because NCAA tournament expansion and the proliferation of conference post-season tournaments have produced more Cinderella teams and upset games in the 1980s than in the first four decades combined.

By far the two biggest upsets in Final Four history—according to a poll of writers conducted by the Final Four Foundation—were Villanova 66, Georgetown 64, for the 1985 championship, and North Carolina State 54, Houston 52, for the 1983 championship.

Both of those Cinderella champions were 10-game losers. North Carolina State got in by winning the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament after going 8-6 in regular-season ACC play. Villanova, 9-7 in Big East Conference regular-season play and 1-1 in its postseason tournament, was an at-large choice for the first 64-team field. North Carolina State finished 26-10 and Villanova 25-10. With expansion, neither would have been in the tournament. Before 1980, upsets were few and far between.

Overcoming .500

In making the at-large selections, the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee pays very close attention to a team's conference record and several other factors. It is extremely difficult for a team with a .500-or-less conference record to become an at-large choice, but it is possible if the team has a great nonconference record in a highly rated conference.

Only 14 teams in the 1980s were at-large choices despite .500-or-less conference records (regular-season and postseason tournament combined), and 10 came in the last three years of 64-team fields. As a group, they won 83 percent of their non-conference games in the regular season (148-30).

These 14 vindicated the committee's judgment with an outstanding 21-14 (.600) record in NCAA tournament play, including two Final Four teams, three second-place teams in regional play (one victory from the Final Four) and one that reached the regional semifinals.

Virginia's 21-12 team in 1984 was 6-8 in the ACC regular season, 0-1 in the ACC tournament, but 4-1 in the NCAA, losing to Houston in the Final Four, 49-47, in overtime to finish in a third-place tie. Louisiana State's 26-12 team in 1986 was 9-9 in regular-season Southeastern Conference play, 1-1 in the SEC tournament, but 4-1 in the NCAA, losing to eventual champion Louisville in the national semifinals.

The three that reached the NCAA regional finals (one victory from the Final Four) were 23-9 Wake Forest (7-7 and 1-1), loser to Houston; 21-13 North Carolina State in 1987 (7-7 and 0-1), loser to Kansas, and 24-15 Louisiana State in 1987 (8-10 and 3-1), loser to Indiana. All three were tight, hard-fought contests.

Boston College's 20-11 team of 1985 (7-9 and 0-1 in the Big East) reached the regional semifinals. Ohio State in 1987, Maryland in 1986 and Auburn in 1987 all were 1-1, and the others lost their first games. We are not including three teams that were .500 in league play but 2-1 in conference-tournament play—24-10 Duke in 1984, 21-13 Iowa State in 1985 and 20-12 Tennessee in 1983. And remember, this does not include conference-tournament upset winners and many upset games. More about that later.

Conference leaders

The 32 Final Four teams of the 1980s and the 32 regional second-place teams (one victory from the Final Four) in the decade have come from 14 conferences and the independent ranks. But most of the NCAA tournament entrants from the other 16 conferences were highly competitive and produced many upsets and near-upsets. The eight champions came from four conferences—two each from the ACC, Big East, Big Ten Conference and Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference. The Big East leads with seven Final Four teams, the ACC with 10 regional second-placers.

Please note, the records include actual conference lineups year-by-year and not current lineups entirely, as was true in past compilations. For instance, Pittsburgh and Villanova were members of the Atlantic 10 Conference (then called the Eastern Eight) early in the decade before moving to the Big East. Western Kentucky went from the Ohio Valley Conference to the Sun Belt Conference, etc. Here are the top 14 plus all independents, by victories:

If it is a surprise to see the East Coast Conference in this group, remember that St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), now an Atlantic 10 member, was in the East Coast when it reached the regional finals in 1981. St. Joseph's tied for second in regular-season ECC play that year behind American's 11-0, but it won the ECC tournament; edged Creighton in the NCAA first round; stunned 27-1 DePaul, 49-48; upset Boston College, 42-41, and then lost the regional championship game to eventual national champion Indiana to end 25-8.

The other 16 automatic-qualification conferences have not reached the regional finals in the 1980s, but the chart below shows that three—the Atlantic 10, Southland Conference and Association of Mid-Continent Universities—have winning records in the first round:

Conf., entrants	Tour. W-L	*First Game

Underdog winners

Teams from the so-called underdog conferences have proved themselves highly competitive throughout the 1980s with some stunning upsets. Often, these are excellent teams in reality but not recognized because they seldom show up on television.

Two of the biggest upsets in recent years came in 1986, when Cleveland State of the Mid-Continent—an at-large choice—beat Indiana, and Arkansas-Little Rock of the Trans Tennessee-Chattanooga upset North Carolina State in 1982.

Of course, teams in the top-14 list have pulled some surprises. For instance, James Madison—under current California coach Lou Campanelli (then in the ECAC South, whose members formed the Colonial Athletic Association) upset Georgetown in 1981, Ohio State in 1982 and West Virginia in 1983.

Hard-luck losers

Some conferences and independents have experienced very hard luck in NCAA tournament play in the 1980s. West Coast Athletic Conference teams have lost a series of close ones, including San Diego's one-pointer to Auburn last year and Pepperdine's two-pointer in double overtime to North Carolina State's eventual champions in 1983. So have Mid-American Conference teams, including Ball State to Boston College, 93-90, in 1981, and overtime heartbreakers for Miami (Ohio) in 1985 (to Maryland) and 1986 (to Iowa State).

DePaul's luck was all bad at the start of the decade, with three straight once-beaten teams losing their first game, but it has reached the regional semifinals the past two years. Notre Dame lost cliffhangers to Missouri in 1980, Brigham Young in 1981 and North Carolina in 1985 before, as mentioned, Arkansas-Little Rock in 1986. Dayton's 1984 Cinderella team reached the regional finals before losing to Georgetown. Dayton and Marquette recently

Only one player in Final Four history made consensus all-America three times and played for a national-championship team the same three years. Name him. (Answer on page 20.)

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs, reached the regional semifinals in 1980 by stunning Oregon State's Pacific-10 Conference champions, 81-77. In 1981, Lamar did it again, upsetting Missouri's Big Eight Conference champions, 71-67. In 1985, Louisiana Tech reached the regional semifinals before losing to Oklahoma, 86-84, in overtime. In the Big Sky, Idaho upset Iowa, 69-67, in overtime in 1982. In the Ohio Valley, Middle Tennessee, third-place in the 1982 regular season, won the OVC tournament and stunned Kentucky, 50-44, in the NCAA. Last year, Austin Peay State, fourth in regular season, upset Illinois, 68-67, then nearly derailed the Providence Final Four express before losing in overtime.

In the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, Xavier (Ohio) upset Missouri's Big Eight champions last year, 70-69, before losing to Duke, 65-60, and Loyola (Illinois) reached the regional semifinals in 1985 before losing to Georgetown. In the Southwestern Athletic Conference, Alcorn State won its first games in 1980, 1981 and 1984 before losing to Louisiana State, Georgetown and Kansas, respectively—the last one by 57-56 in the final seconds. And Mississippi Valley State scared Duke in 1986.

In the ECAC North Atlantic Conference, Northeastern three times won its first game and took Villanova to triple overtime before losing in the second round in 1982. Iona, now in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference, was in the ECAC Metro Athletic Conference in 1980 when it beat Holy Cross before extending Georgetown in a 74-71 loss. In the Ivy Group, Pennsylvania beat Washington State in 1980, and Princeton upset Oklahoma State in 1983. In the Southern Conference, have joined the Midwestern. Independents are a vanishing breed.

The end result

It often is said that every time a non-regular-season champion wins a conference tournament and thus gains the automatic berth, the regular-season champion gains an at-large bid and the end result is that a worthy team is left out of the tournament.

Actually, our survey of the 1980s shows that to be an exaggeration. First, there have been 177 conference tournaments in the 1980s involving conferences with round-robin schedules and automatic qualification. The champion or co-champion won 102 times (57.6 percent). In the other 75 cases, a total of 60 regular-season champions or co-champions did not make the tournament, while only 34 did. In the top conferences, about half of the upset winners, by our calculations, would have made it anyway. In the lower conferences, the upsets usually mean the best team is not going. At least 21 upset winners would not have made the field without conference tournaments.

The end result is that less than three worthy teams per year are squeezed out. Nonchampions won six times in eight years in the Missouri Valley; five times in the ACC, SEC, Atlantic 10, East Coast and Trans America, and four times in the Big Eight, Sun Belt, SWAC and OVC. Only one nonchampion won in the Metro (and it was on probation), one in the SLC, one in the Colonial and one in the MAAC.

Kentucky reprimanded for not cooperating in investigation

I. Introduction.

At the request of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, the University of Kentucky submitted a May 19, 1987, written report of the findings and conclusions resulting from its investigation of allegations of NCAA violations that appeared in a Lexington, Kentucky, newspaper October 27, 1985. The university's report acknowledged violations the university was able to substantiate and identified corrective and disciplinary actions to be taken. The NCAA enforcement staff conducted independent inquiries primarily concerning possible violations occurring within the NCAA's four-year statute of limitations and failed to develop information substantially different than that of the university. In this regard, representatives of the newspaper that printed the original article refused to assist either the university or the NCAA in efforts to verify or support statements that it published concerning violations of NCAA rules. The enforcement staff recommended to the Committee on Infractions that the university's findings be adopted and that the corrective and disciplinary actions be accepted in lieu of a penalty to be imposed by the committee.

The committee, however, determined that university representatives should be requested to appear before the committee for the purpose of reviewing the information developed concerning the men's basketball program. An appearance was scheduled for June 4, 1987, during which the university's written report identifying the allegations and findings, detailing the scope of the university's inquiries, stating the university's position as to the probable truth of falsity of the allegations, and identifying the corrective or disciplinary actions taken would be discussed. The university's report had been submitted under the provisions of Section 7-(g) of the NCAA enforcement procedure, and the university renewed a standing request for the committee to accept its findings as sufficient and to take no further action in the case.

At the June hearing, the university reported that although some violations occurred prior to 1981, no violation could be confirmed within the NCAA's four-year statute of limitations (i.e., October 1981 to October 1985). The university also reported that corrective actions had been implemented in an effort to prevent future violations. The committee was concerned, however, that complete information had not been developed in the case and determined that the university again should be requested to appear before the committee to discuss both the specific allegations and the university's investigative techniques and policies. This request was made pursuant to NCAA Constitution 4-2-(a), Bylaw 9-5-(e) and the Preamble to the Official Procedure Governing the Enforcement Program, which provides in part that the university is obligated to cooperate fully with the NCAA Committee on Infractions in the conduct of relevant inquiries into the university's intercollegiate athletics program. The committee requested the institution to be prepared to discuss its responses to the following specific questions:

A. Did the university's investigative techniques hinder or reduce the opportunity to obtain complete and correct information in this case?

B. Has the university taken all reasonable steps to develop information and to confirm information initially reported in a local newspaper?

C. Has the university taken adequate steps to interview all potential sources of information?

D. Should additional action be taken by the university against outside representatives or former student-athletes who have refused to cooperate in its investigation?

E. Does the university contend that the newspaper accounts are substantially incorrect and, if so, why?

Subsequent to the committee's request, the university's new president, David P. Roselle, met with NCAA enforcement staff members to discuss the committee's concerns and then directed the university's investigators to renew efforts to interview several individuals prior to the university's hearing before the committee. Questions relating to the university's investigation, as well as the specific allegations regarding the basketball program, were discussed in detail at the university's appearance February 6, 1988. Allegations concerning extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes, including "cash handshakes," excessive remuneration for speaking engagements, discounts for clothing purchases, free meals and improper sales of complimentary tickets, were considered. Concerning each of these categories, the university asserted either that it was unable to develop sufficient information to conclude that a violation had occurred or concluded that any proven violation was outside the NCAA's four-year statute of limitations. The NCAA enforcement staff also was unable in its investigation to develop substantial information (either from individuals identified in the newspaper article or from other possible sources) to confirm violations occurring within the four-year statute of limitations.

After the February hearing, the committee concluded that the university conducted an inadequate investigation of the matters that were within the NCAA's four-year statute of limitations. General denials of involvement by principals were accepted with little, if any, follow-up questioning as to specifics or independent investigation of facts. For example, although statements by former student-athletes included information indicating that there may have been rules violations regarding the sale of complimentary tickets and the impermissible receipt of money for speeches by student-athletes, the university did not pursue these statements with other possible sources. In addition, the committee found that inadequate efforts were made to induce former student-athletes and representatives of the university's athletics interests to cooperate in the investigation, despite the continued enrollment of some former student-athletes in professional schools at the university and the fact that these student-athletes and representatives had talked with the newspaper reporters. For example, in its letters to former student-athletes who were not reached by telephone, the university seemed to suggest, as a viable option, that refusal to be interviewed would be a satisfactory response (e.g., "In order for us to complete our investigation, it is necessary for us to interview you regarding the article or obtain your refusal to be interviewed. In an effort to assist you in making this determination, I am enclosing a list of questions that we would like to ask you."). Nothing in the letter indicated that the university preferred the cooperation of the addressee, rather than a refusal to be interviewed. Not surprisingly, many recipients of the letter refused to be interviewed.

In addition to submitting information about the men's basketball program, the institution also reported a minor violation in another sport. The committee agreed that adequate action was taken by the university in this matter.

The committee's finding concerning this case is set forth in Part II of this report, and the committee's action in the case is set forth in Part III.

II. Finding of violation, as determined by committee.

A. [NCAA Constitution 4-2-(a), Bylaw 9-5-(e) and the Preamble to the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program.]

The committee finds that the University of Kentucky failed to satisfy its obligation to cooperate fully with the NCAA Committee on Infractions in the conduct of relevant inquiries into the allegations described as having been reported by former student-athletes in an October 27, 1985, newspaper article. Specifically: (1) the university's investigative techniques reduced the opportunity to obtain complete information from the principals in this case; (2) the university did not take all reasonable steps to develop full information and to confirm information initially reported in the newspaper, and (3) the university did not take adequate steps to interview all potential sources of information.

III. Committee on Infractions penalty.

A. The University of Kentucky shall be publicly reprimanded.

B. The university shall be required to report periodically to the NCAA enforcement staff in writing concerning the results of a comprehensive institutional monitoring program in men's basketball, which shall include economic audits of student-athletes' employment earnings and expenses for speaking engagements (whether during the academic year or vacation periods), and the use of complimentary tickets. This monitoring program also shall include periodic in-person inspection by NCAA enforcement personnel, as well as the submission of written reports by the university at the end of the 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 academic years.

[NOTE: Should the university appeal either the finding of violation or proposed penalty in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Section 6 of the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program. A copy of the committee's report will be provided to the university prior to its appearance before the Council and, as required by NCAA procedures, will be released to the public.

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the university that when the committee's action in this case becomes effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that the requirements of the committee are observed. Further, any action contrary to the terms of any of the committee's requirements shall be considered grounds for extending the monitoring requirements, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.]

NCAA COMMITTEE ON INFRACTIONS

Minnesota men's basketball program placed on probation

I. Introduction.

In 1986, a series of events resulted in the men's athletics program at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, being the subject of an investigation, which was conducted jointly by the NCAA, the Big Ten Conference and the university. In January 1986, three members of the men's basketball team were accused of criminal activity in Madison, Wisconsin. The university's president then took actions regarding the school's intercollegiate athletics program in general and the men's basketball program in particular. Among these actions was the creation of an internal task force to examine policies and problems in the intercollegiate athletics program.

In early 1986, there were newspaper articles that reported alleged violations of NCAA rules in the men's basketball program. During this same time, the university's men's director of athletics self-reported one significant violation in men's basketball to the NCAA. By May 1986, the NCAA began an investigation of the men's basketball program and, thereafter, the NCAA, the Big Ten Conference and the university agreed to conduct a joint investigation. This joint investigation represented a good-faith effort by all parties to gather full information, and the NCAA Committee on Infractions believes that the processing of this case was accelerated substantially by these cooperative efforts.

Prior to the university's February 1988 hearing in this case, the university took several self-corrective measures, including the establishment of a rules-monitoring and compliance program at the university and disciplinary actions that were taken against several coaches who were involved in violations of NCAA rules.

On February 7, 1988, the Committee on Infractions conducted a hearing concerning the university's report of the violations discovered during the joint investigation. Based upon the written and oral evidence presented to it, the committee made the findings of violations that are set forth in Part II of this report.

Violations in the men's basketball program included: (a) the provision of excessive compensation to part-time and volunteer basketball coaches; (b) the provision of a substantial amount of money to an attorney from representatives of the university's athletics interests for the representation of a student-athlete in a criminal case; (c) payment of costs for a student-athlete's airline ticket by a men's basketball coach; (d) the provision of hotel accommodations to a student-athlete's mother at no cost to her, and (e) the provision of a variety of extra benefits and recruiting inducements to student-athletes and prospective student-athletes, including prepayment of airline tickets for student-athletes (subsequently repaid by each student-athlete), the provision of local automobile transportation and lodging for student-athletes and prospects, the provision of meals for student-athletes and prospects, the provision of items of clothing to several student-athletes and prospective student-athletes, the provision of "hard tickets" for men's basketball games to student-athletes, and the provision of complimentary admissions to professional sports events on several occasions to student-athletes and prospects. The committee also made findings regarding out-of-season practices by the basketball team and the donation of proceeds from intrasquad exhibition basketball games to high schools.

The joint investigation also determined that rules violations occurred in the university's football program related to the prepayment of airline tickets for two student-athletes who repaid the costs of the airline tickets.

The committee determined that certain violations that occurred in the men's basketball program were serious in nature, and many occurred because the men's basketball coaching staff did not seek guidance concerning rules interpretations. Additionally, the committee found that the scope of the violations demonstrated an absence of effective university control over the men's intercollegiate athletics program. Normally, the committee's findings would have warranted very severe penalties; however, the thoroughness of the university's self-investigation, its cooperation in the NCAA investigation and its corrective actions (including taking disciplinary action against the involved coaches and the creation of a comprehensive compliance program) constituted reasons for mitigation of the penalties in this case. The university's actions demonstrated its current commitment to operate an intercollegiate athletics program with integrity. As set forth in Part III of this report, the committee believes that significant penalties should be imposed upon the university's men's basketball program, but has reduced some penalties on the basis of these mitigating factors.

The committee's findings are set forth in Part II of this report, and the committee's penalties are contained in Part III.

II. Violations of NCAA requirements or questionable practices in light of NCAA requirements, as determined by committee.

A. Significant violations found in the consideration of this infractions case.

1. The involvement of the former men's head basketball coach and a former men's assistant basketball coach in the violations set forth in this report demonstrates a knowing and willful effort on their part to operate the university's men's intercollegiate basketball program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation. [NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a)-(1)-(iii)]

2. An assistant football coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics. Specifically, he failed to report a student-athlete's delayed payment for an airline ticket the coach had arranged, and he hindered the investigation of the matter by making misleading statements when he initially was questioned. [NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a) and 3-6-(a)-(1)-(iv), and the Preamble to the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program]

3. With knowledge that certain practices of the university's men's intercollegiate basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the former men's head basketball coach and a former men's assistant basketball coach each attested in 1983, 1984 and 1985 on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university that they had reported their knowledge of or involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving the institution when, in fact, they had not done so; further, relying on information provided by the former men's head basketball coach and a former men's assistant basketball coach, and without intent to do so, the university's chief executive officers erroneously certified the university's compliance with NCAA legislation in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

4. In November 1985, a representative of the university's athletics interests raised approximately $1,500 to help defray the legal costs of the attorney representing a student-athlete in the defense of criminal charges. This individual raised these funds after being advised by the basketball coaching staff that such fund raising would not violate NCAA legislation. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and 3-2-(d)]

5. During the period 1983 to 1986, the former men's head basketball coach knowingly provided student-athletes with hard tickets to basketball games on a game-bygame basis. In addition, an interim men's head basketball coach provided hard tickets to student-athletes for two games, until he was informed that the practice violated NCAA legislation. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(h)-(6) and 3-1-(g)-(3)]

6. In the winter of 1984, a student-athlete was provided, at no cost to him, a winter coat by a former men's assistant basketball coach. The former men's head basketball coach provided at least a portion of the funds for the coat. In the fall of 1985, this student-athlete received an overcoat from a representative of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young man. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

7. The former men's head basketball coach reimbursed the organization that had paid for an airline ticket for a student-athlete to return home after the death of the young man's son. Although the initial arrangement for travel may have been proper, the coach knew or should have known that he was not permitted to reimburse the organization for the cost of the airline ticket, which was $340. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

8. In April 1985 and January 1986, a hotel provided the mother of a student-athlete with complimentary lodging at no cost to her. Although the person who arranged this complimentary lodging has not been identified, the university has admitted, and the committee has found, that the complimentary lodging could only have been provided at the request of a member of the men's basketball coaching staff or through the intervention of a representative of the university's athletics interests. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

9. In 1986-87, payments in excess of commonly accepted educational expenses (and in excess of actual and necessary expenses in the performance of coaching duties) were paid to three part-time assistant coaches who acted consecutively, but not concurrently, as "counselor/advocates" in assisting members of the men's intercollegiate basketball team to assimilate into campus life. These payments were made for work not sufficiently separate from a coach's normal duties, and no significant duties other than those related to the basketball team were performed. [NCAA Bylaw 7-1-(b)]

10. In November 1986, a volunteer assistant basketball coach received $4,000 from a basketball support group of the university to act as the "alumni coordinator." In consideration of these payments, the volunteer coach helped coordinate the year-end basketball awards banquet and prepare the team highlight film. These duties were not sufficiently separate from a coach's normal team duties to justify the payment and, furthermore, this excessive payment was made substantially in advance of the performance of these duties. [NCAA Bylaws 7-1-(b) and 7-1-(f)]

11. In the summer of 1985, two prospective student-athletes resided in a dormitory on the university's campus for 10 and 20 days, respectively, at no cost to them; further, during a portion of that period, the prospects also were provided meals at the dormitory at no cost to them. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

12. In the summer of 1985, a representative of the university's athletics interests advanced two weeks of compensation to three student-athletes for their services as counselors in a youth program. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

13. On one occasion, a representative of the university's athletics interests provided a loan to a student-athlete in the amount of $100, which was not repaid. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

14. On several occasions, a representative of the university's athletics interests provided meals to former student-athletes at no cost to them. Also, this representative provided numerous sweaters to student-athletes, either at no cost or at a discount. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

15. During the 1985-86 academic year, a student-athlete sold, or exchanged for value, complimentary admissions to several men's basketball games to a representative of the university's athletics interests. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(3)]

16. During the 1985-86 academic year, a former student-athlete borrowed approximately $50 from the men's head basketball coach. Subsequently, the student-athlete repaid approximately $20 of the loan. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)-(ii)]

17. In December 1985, at the request of the former men's head basketball coach, a basketball support group provided two sweaters to each member of the men's intercollegiate basketball team at no cost to them as a Christmas gift. In 1982-83 and 1983-84 the support group purchased team jackets for each member of the men's intercollegiate basketball team at no cost to them. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

18. During the period 1982 to 1985, the men's basketball program conducted out-of-season practice sessions, which were prohibited by NCAA legislation. At various times, these practices were conducted at the conclusion of preseason conditioning drills or after the conclusion of the regular season. [NCAA Bylaws 3-1-(a)-(1) and 3-4-(b)]

19. Over a substantial period of time, there were repeated failures to exercise adequate institutional control over the administration of the university's men's intercollegiate athletics program. In addition to the findings set forth previously in this report, this failure of institutional control was demonstrated by: administrative procedures that allowed student-athletes to receive prepaid airline tickets; the provision of mileage expense money to the student hosts for prospective student-athletes during official visits; the disbursement of "meal money" and other very small amounts of cash in a manner that may have constituted rules violations; the provision of meals to more than one student-athlete who dined with a prospective student-athlete during the prospect's official visit in a manner that violated NCAA legislation; inadequate administrative procedures to ensure that financial aid given to student-athletes in a school year following the completion of their competitive eligibility was in conformance with NCAA legislation. [NCAA Constitution 3-2]

B. Additional violations found in the consideration of this infractions case.

1. In March 1985, a prospective student-athlete was provided transportation from his home in California to the university's campus on a credit basis. The travel was arranged by an assistant football coach. The student-athlete made partial repayment upon his arrival on campus and paid the balance of the air fare within six weeks. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

2. In November 1985, a student-athlete in the sport of football was provided with a round-trip airline ticket on a credit basis to travel between Minneapolis, Minnesota, and his home. The student-athlete's mother repaid the cost of the travel in March 1986. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

3. In February 1985, a student-athlete in the sport of football was provided round-trip transportation on a credit basis between Minneapolis, Minnesota, and his home. The travel was arranged by an assistant football coach, and the student-athlete repaid this coach for the cost of the travel in August 1985. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

4. In March 1985, a prospective student-athlete was provided two meals and one night of lodging at no cost to him at the home of a then—assistant football coach. [NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(j)]

5. During the fall recruiting seasons from 1980 through 1985, on approximately five occasions each year, a former men's assistant basketball coach arranged for student managers to use automobiles borrowed from two local car dealers to transport prospective student-athletes and their student hosts around campus during official visits. [NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(j)-(4)]

6. During several years prior to 1986, members of the men's basketball team received items of Nike wearing apparel and sporting goods at no cost to them. The former men's head basketball coach had received these items through his affiliation with Nike. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

7. On four occasions from 1983 to 1985, the men's basketball team donated a portion of the revenue generated by pre-season basketball intrasquad team scrimmages to high schools where the scrimmages were conducted. [NCAA Bylaw 1-10-(a)]

8. In June 1985, a prospective student-athlete was provided transportation from his home to the university's campus at no cost to him. The provision of a prepaid airline ticket to this prospect may have been inadvertent and the result of an administrative error. When the student-athlete and the coaching staff learned that a violation had occurred, the young man paid the cost of the travel. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

9. In April 1985 and January 1986, while in Minneapolis, Minnesota, the mother of a student-athlete was provided with local transportation from the airport to a hotel and between her hotel and a county courthouse at the direction of the former men's head basketball coach. Also, in January 1986, she was provided with transportation to the home of the former head coach where she was provided a meal at no cost to her. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

10. In December 1983, at the direction of the former men's head basketball coach, a former assistant coach sent a prospective student-athlete one pair of basketball shoes at no cost to the prospect. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

11. During the summer of 1985, a former men's assistant basketball coach sent a maroon sweat shirt and matching sweat pants bearing the university's logo to a prospective student-athlete. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

12. During the late spring or early summer of 1983, a former men's assistant basketball coach sent souvenir pictures of an official paid visit to a prospective student-athlete. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(3)]

13. In April 1985, during the official visit of a prospective basketball student-athlete, the student host purchased a hat and shirt bearing the university's logo for the prospect. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

14. On three occasions during the summer of 1982, a former assistant coach provided a prospective student-athlete with local transportation to the assistant coach's home for meals. [NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(j)]

15. On two occasions during the summer of 1983, a former men's assistant basketball coach provided local automobile transportation in Minneapolis for two prospective student-athletes to visit the home of the former head basketball coach where the prospects were provided a meal at no cost to them. [NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(j)]

16. In August 1985, a prospective student-athlete was provided a meal and one night's lodging at the home of a former men's assistant basketball coach. [NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b)-(1) and 1-9-(j)]

17. In May 1985, a prospective student-athlete and a friend spent at least one night at the home of a former assistant basketball coach. Further, this assistant coach provided local transportation and one meal to the young man at no cost to him. [NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b)-(1) and 1-9-(j)]

18. On three occasions in 1983 and 1984, several student-athletes and prospects were provided complimentary tickets to professional basketball or football games through the arrangements of assistant basketball coaches. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

19. On numerous occasions in the years 1982 through 1986, various members of the men's intercollegiate basketball coaching staff provided local automobile transportation to student-athletes. On one of those occasions, the parents of a student-athlete were also provided such transportation. [NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)]

20. In January 1986, during the official visit of a prospective student-athlete in football, a student host purchased a hat and T-shirt for the prospect at no cost to the prospect. [NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1)]

21. From 1982 through 1985, the men's intercollegiate basketball coaching staff provided transportation from the Minneapolis airport to the university's campus for many prospective student-athletes when they arrived on campus for enrollment. [NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(g)]

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

A. The university's men's basketball program shall be publicly reprimanded and placed on probation for a period of three years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the university notifies the executive director that it will not appeal to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, whichever is earlier, or the date established by Council subcommittee action as the result of an appeal by the institution, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. [NOTE: The committee hereby suspends the third year of probation. Although the infractions found in this case normally would have warranted a three-year probationary period, the probationary period has been reduced on the basis of the university's corrective actions, the thoroughness of its investigation and its cooperation in the NCAA investigation.]

B. The university's men's basketball team shall conclude its 1987-88 and 1988-89 seasons with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in any postseason competition following those seasons.

[NOTE: The committee hereby suspends the postseason sanction in the 1988-89 academic year on the basis of the mitigating factors in this case that are cited in paragraph III-A above.]

C. From July 1, 1988, to June 30, 1989, the university's men's basketball program shall permit no more than two full-time basketball coaches (rather than the normal three) to engage in off-campus recruiting activities (including the evaluation of prospective student-athletes).

[NOTE: The two coaches who will engage in off-campus recruiting activities shall be identified by the university prior to July 1, 1988.]

D. The university's men's intercollegiate athletics program shall be subject to monitoring by the NCAA enforcement staff until July 1, 1990. In this regard, the university shall conduct annual audits of its basketball program at the conclusion of the 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 academic years, and the results of these audits shall be submitted in writing to the NCAA enforcement staff and Committee on Infractions prior to June 30 each year.

E. The university's football program shall be reprimanded for the rules violations in the sport of football that were found in this case. Further, the university is admonished to implement a compliance program that will preclude the issuance of prepaid airline tickets to a student-athlete in any sport.

F. The findings of violations in Part II of this report regarding the principles of ethical conduct normally would result in penalties directed against current or former members of the basketball and football coaching staffs. However, the Committee on Infractions found that no further actions or penalties regarding the former men's head basketball coach or a former men's assistant basketball coach were required due to the university's disciplinary actions and the separation of these persons from the university's basketball program. These individuals cooperated in the investigation of this case and appeared before the committee. They provided what appeared to be candid information concerning their involvement in the violations, which enhanced the committee's understanding of the violations. In addition, the committee adopts the university's disciplinary action taken against an assistant football coach who was involved in the issuance of a prepaid airline ticket to a student-athlete (who repaid the university for the ticket) and who was not forthcoming in providing information about this incident when questioned. The university's penalty included: (1) a one-year probationary period and (2) "freezing" his salary for the 1988-89 academic year at its current rate.

[NOTE: Should the university appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Section 6 of the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program. A copy of the committee's report will be provided to the university prior to its appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by NCAA procedures, will be released to the public.]

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the university that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed. Further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the university's probationary period, as well as for considering imposing more severe sanctions in this case.]

Notification as required by NCAA enforcement procedures

[NOTE: The following is notification of applicable NCAA legislation as required by Section 7-(h) of the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program and is not a penalty proposed by the NCAA Committee on Infractions upon the university.]

Please note that in accordance with the provisions of Section 5-(d) of the NCAA enforcement procedures, the institution shall inform the involved individuals of their opportunities to appeal through the institution the ethical conduct findings of violations involving them, as well as of their opportunities (along with personal legal counsel) to appear before the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members at the time it considers such an appeal.

Ex-goaltender gives program an endowment of $5 million

A former University of North Dakota ice hockey goaltender, Ralph Engelstad of Las Vegas, Nevada, has given the hockey program an endowment valued at more than $5 million dollars, according to athletics director and head ice hockey coach John Gasparini.

To express its appreciation for the large endowment, the North Dakota ice hockey rink officially was renamed the Ralph Engelstad Arena by action of the North Dakota Board of Higher Education at a January meeting.

Engelstad and his wife, Betty, were present February 19 when University of North Dakota President Thomas J. Clifford and Gasparini officially unveiled a plaque and outside facade announcing the renaming of the arena.

Engelstad, a 1954 University of North Dakota graduate in business administration, today is a successful business entrepreneur.

A native of nearby Thief River Falls, Minnesota, Engelstad worked as a carpenter and played goal while attending college. After graduation, he formed his own construction company. In 1960, Engelstad moved to Nevada. In 1971, he acquired a parcel of land and a small motel on the Las Vegas strip. That location now is the site of the Imperial Palace hotel and casino. He also has real estate holdings from Florida to Hawaii and numerous business enterprises.

Engelstad has long maintained contact with his alma mater. He said at the ceremony renaming the arena that he hoped the youth and students of today will benefit from use of the building and from the endowment. "I am deeply honored to have this arena named after me," he said.

Q May an institution appeal a positive result of a drug test taken in conjunction with or in preparation for a postseason football contest or NCAA championship event?

A Yes. According to section 7.2.2.2. of the drug-testing protocol, a positive finding may be appealed to the committee responsible for drug testing (or a subcommittee thereof). The affected student-athlete will be given the opportunity to participate in the telephone conference when the appeal is heard. The appeal must be made on the date that test results of Specimen B are known.

Payment for lost revenue to be sought

Alabama state attorneys prosecuting two sports agents for their dealings with former University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, basketball star Derrick McKey plan to seek at least $250,000 in restitution for the university if the men are convicted.

McKey, the cornerstone of the Crimson Tide's 1987 Southeastern Conference championship team, was declared ineligible after the season ended for accepting money from New York agent Norby Walters and partner Lloyd Bloom.

In part because of McKey's ineligibility, the school forfeited $250,000 in NCAA tournament revenues. Senior Terry Coner also was declared ineligible in the post-season.

Walters and Bloom are scheduled for arraignment March 16 on misdemeanor counts of game tampering, commercial bribery and violating state trade laws.

Bill Wasden, an assistant attorney general prosecuting the case, said the $250,000 "certainly would be part of the restitution order we request" were Walters and Bloom convicted, the Associated Press reported.

"Loss of the proceeds from the tournament is a valid subject of restitution, subject to the order of repayment under the crime victim's restitution statute. We'd certainly present that argument," he said.

Jurors in Lee County convicted former Atlanta sports agent Jim Abernethy of game tampering, while acquitting him on the related charges of commercial bribery and unlawful trade practice for his dealings with former Auburn University football player Kevin Porter.

Wasden said prosecutors were encouraged by the trial of Abernethy, who was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $2,000.

"Based on our conversations with jurors after the trial, we feel we solidified our bases for pursuit of the charges against Walters," he said. "The evidence was well-received and the jurors completely understood the issues involved. We feel confident we'll get similar results in Tuscaloosa County."

Porter was not allowed to play for Auburn in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day, and the school suffered no apparent financial loss.

U.S. students fare poorly on international science tests

The scores of American students from elementary through high school on international science tests reflect poorly on science education in the United States, a National Science Foundation expert has stated.

A recent 24-nation study showed U.S. students placed in the middle at best and more often landed at the bottom among test-takers around the world, United Press International reported.

"The data paint a dismal picture of science education in the United States today," said Bassam Shakhashiri, the foundation's assistant director for science and engineering education.

Various tests were given to some 204,308 students in 7,581 schools as part of the Second International Science Study. The foundation released the preliminary results from 17 nations that took part in the study.

The study concluded that "for a technologically advanced country, it would appear that (in the United States) a reexamination of how science is presented and studied is required."

The preliminary report of the study showed that 10-year-olds from Japan, Korea and Finland bunched at the top, with U.S. fifth graders ranking eighth among students from 15 nations. Singapore, Hong Kong and the Philippines were at the bottom.

At the intermediate level, Hungarian, Japanese and Dutch students scored the best marks on the test, with U.S. ninth-graders placing 15th among 17 nations. Hong Kong and the Philippines trailed.

Among the various tests administered, students from Hong Kong, England and Singapore received the highest marks, and those from Canada, Italy, Finland and the United States were among the worst.

Among high school seniors considered "advanced placement" students who were studying a second year of biology, U.S. students placed last with an average mean score of 37.9 percent.

Advanced chemistry students in the United States came in 11th in a field of 13 nations' high school students, and second-year physics students from America ranked ninth among test-takers from 13 countries.

In an attempt to combat the trend, Shakhashiri said the foundation is supporting the development of new science curriculum materials in all grades from kindergarten through high school. "The training of elementary school teachers is a high priority," he added.

Abbott wins Sullivan Award

Jim Abbott, University of Michigan varsity baseball pitcher, has received the 1987 Sullivan Award as the outstanding amateur athlete in the United States. It was the first time the award has been presented to a baseball player.

Abbott, who also won the 1987 Golden Spikes Award, sponsored by the American Baseball Coaches Association, is a left-handed pitcher who suffered a birth defect that prevented his right arm from growing to its normal length and his right hand from developing.

He helped the U.S. win a silver medal in the 1987 Pan American Games.

Abbott was offered a contract by the Toronto Blue Jays when he graduated from high school, but he chose to enroll at Michigan.

Administrative Committee minutes

1. Acting for the Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Appointed Sandra T. Shuler, North Carolina Central University, as the Council representative on the Communications Committee, replacing Joan Board, resigned from the committee.

b. Appointed Joan Girgus, Princeton University, the Research Committee, replacing Marianne Jennings, no longer at a member institution.

c. Authorized the executive director to approve exceptions to the incidental-expense legislation (per 1988 Convention Proposal No. 65), in accordance with the principle of Constitution 5-1-(g); noted such approval of a request by Georgetown University for permission to pay expenses for the captains of one of its intercollegiate athletics teams to attend the funeral of a teammate; agreed that the Council would review in April all approved and disapproved requests for such exceptions.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Reviewed a revision of the previously approved affidavit prepared by NCAA legal counsel for use in conjunction with the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championship, per Bylaw 5-1-(o), noting that the revision makes clear that the affidavit is binding throughout a team's participation in the tournament; determined that each institution selected to participate in the tournament is responsible for administering the affidavits to its basketball players and keeping the affidavits on file, and that each institution's certification of student-athletes' eligibility for the championship will include a confirmation that the affidavits have been administered; reviewed a letter that will be sent to directors of athletics of those institutions to set forth these procedures.

b. Approved a request by the Men's and Women's Soccer Committees for permission to have three members of each committee meet in Kansas City, Missouri, this spring to discuss the feasibility and desirability of establishing common playing rules for men and women in that sport.

c. Approved a request by the Division I Women's Volleyball Committee for permission to conduct its April meeting in Minneapolis, Minnesota, site of the 1988 championship, rather than in Kansas City, Missouri.

d. Agreed that the Administrative Committee may act for the division championships committees and the Executive Committee in approving or disapproving playing rules in the areas of player safety, financial impact and image of the sport, per 1988 Convention Proposal No. 36, with such action to be taken on a case-by-case basis.

(1) If the Administrative Committee chooses not to act on a given case, the matter will be placed on the agendas for the next meetings of the division championships committees and the Executive Committee. If such a decision necessitates, the rules committee will be directed to delay implementation of the rule for a year.

(2) Approved a rule adopted by the Football Rules Committee to require goal posts to be padded with resilient material from the ground to a height of at least six feet, noting that facilities used by most member institutions reportedly already meet this requirement.

c. Declined to reconsider its earlier decision to make platform diving a nonscoring event at the 1988 Division I Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Championships, noting that the appropriate subcommittee of the Men's and Women's Swimming Committee had sustained its earlier recommendation in that regard.

f. Approved a recommendation by the Division II Men's Basketball Committee that the automatic-qualification privilege granted earlier to the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference for the 1988 Division II Men's Basketball Championship be rescinded, per Executive Regulation 1-6-(f), inasmuch as a member institution in that conference has used an ineligible player during the current season and thus has been ruled ineligible for postseason competition by the conference.

3. Acting for the Council and the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

Reviewed the recommendations of the Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics, as well as related recommendations submitted by the Committee on Women's Athletics, taking these actions:

a. Authorized the establishment of a position in the national office to administer the "ethnic minority enhancement program" being recommended by the Council subcommittee, with the understanding that the title and departmental assignment for the new position are to be determined.

b. Deferred action on the subcommittee's recommendations regarding national office internships, establishment of a "vita bank" and apportioning the previously approved postgraduate scholarships in sports administration, as well as the Committee on Women's Athletics' request to include women in those activities, placing those matters on the agenda for the April meeting of the Council and, as necessary, on the agenda for the May meeting of the Executive Committee.

c. Authorized the staff to proceed with the necessary planning for the recommended activities, developing adequate information to serve as the basis for decisions by the Council and Executive Committee in their spring meetings.

Conference No. 4
February 25, 1988

4. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 5-1-(g) and 5-2-(d).

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

Financial aid

1. Permissible financial aid beyond a five-year period. Concluded that the provisions of Constitution 3-4(b), which preclude a student-athlete from receiving financial aid from a member institution for more than five years during a six-year period, encompass only "unearned" athletics aid for which the athletics department intercedes on behalf of the student-athlete; therefore, the application of Constitution 3-4(b) permits an athletics department to employ a student-athlete who previously has received five years of institutional financial aid; further, a student-athlete who previously has received five years of institutional financial aid is permitted to receive additional financial assistance from a member institution from a source outside the athletics department (e.g., a graduate school scholarship), with the understanding that the athletics department has not interceded on behalf of the student-athlete.

Professional sports organization

2. Donation by a professional sports organization. Considered the provisions of Case No. 2 (professional organization funds) and determined that a local professional baseball franchise is precluded from providing financial support for the conduct or promotion of a regional NCAA baseball championship.

Advertising/endorsements

3. Use of a student-athlete's name or picture on a game ticket. Agreed that the application of Constitution 3-1(e) permits an institution to utilize a game ticket that has the name or picture of an enrolled student-athlete on the face of the ticket and a commercial company's coupon or advertisement (unrelated to the student-athlete) on the back of the ticket.

Career counseling/permissible expenses

4. Campus student development and career-counseling materials. Noted that the provisions of Constitution 3-1(h)-(4) permit a member institution to provide student-athletes with on-campus student-development and career-counseling materials, and agreed that the institution may provide such materials to student-athletes independently of any related presentation or seminar by a source outside the institution.

Clothing (advertising/endorsements)

5. Identification of a contest sponsor on institutions' bibs. Concluded that an identification bib utilized by a student-athlete in sports such as cross country and skiing may include a reference to the corporate sponsor of the competition, provided the involved commercial company is the sole title sponsor of the athletics competition.

Satisfactory progress

6. Between-seasons option during 1988-89 (Divisions I and II). Considered 1988 Convention Proposal No. 41 amending Bylaw 5-1(j)-(6) [satisfactory-progress rule] in regard to its August 1, 1988, effective date; confirmed that this legislation would apply to student-athletes previously enrolled in a certifying institution; determined, however, that a limited exception (as follows) should be granted for those student-athletes who have not satisfactorily completed either 24 semester or 36 quarter hours of academic credit since the beginning of the previous fall term or averaged at least 12 semester or quarter hours during each of the previous terms of attendance; agreed that in such instances during the 1988-89 academic year only, a student-athlete may be eligible if he or she has satisfactorily completed 24 semester or 36 quarter hours of academic credit since the beginning of the student-athlete's last season of competition.

Contacts (evaluation period)

7. "Dead-period" restrictions (Divisions I

Conference No. 3
February 18, 1988

and II). Agreed that the provisions of Bylaw 1-2(a)-(6) would preclude a coaching staff member of a member institution from serving as a speaker or attending a meeting or banquet in which prospective student-athletes are in attendance during any "dead period" as specified in Bylaw 1-2(a)-(6); further, confirmed that during such "dead periods," a member institution is precluded from a visiting high school or contacting, evaluating or entertaining a prospective student-athlete on its own campus.

Playing seasons (out-of-season practice)

8. Participation by coaches on outside teams during 1988 (Division I). Considered the August 1, 1988, effective date of 1988 Convention Proposal No. 140 and confirmed that coaching staff members of Division I member institutions are permitted to be involved with student-athletes from their own institutions on outside teams during the summer prior to August 1, 1988; agreed that coaching staff members may continue to be involved with their student-athletes on such outside teams subsequent to August 1, 1988, in those instances in which the playing seasons on the outside team began prior to that date, provided the coaching staff member ceases his or her involvement with the outside team prior to the beginning of the 1988-89 academic year.

Coaches (part-time and graduate assistants)

9. Expenses for coaching conventions, clinics and professional practices (Division I). Reviewed the application of Case No. 391 (part-time coaching benefits) and agreed that a member institution is permitted to provide actual and necessary expenses for a part-time coach to attend coaching clinics and NABC conventions, as well as to make visits with professional teams, inasmuch as these expenses would be considered an acceptable employee benefit (i.e., professional enhancement activities) available under similar circumstances to other institutional employees; however, concluded that the provisions of Case No. 396 (graduate-student coaching expenses) would preclude a member institution from providing such expenses for its graduate assistant coaches; recommended that the Council revise Case No. 396 to permit graduate assistant coaches to receive the same employee benefits available in Case No. 391.

Playing seasons (contest limitations)

10. Football contractual agreements for competition that exceeds the minimum number of contests (Division III). Considered Bylaw 3-3(a)-(5), which was amended at the 1987 special Convention to indicate that effective August 1, 1988, the maximum number of contests in Division III football is 11 (including not more than 10 games); reviewed a situation in which a member institution has entered into contractual agreements (executed prior to May 15, 1987) to play 11 football games during the 1988-89 and 1989-90 academic years; agreed that the institution is permitted to participate in 11 football games only during the 1988-89 academic year, and must adjust its 1989-90 schedule accordingly.

Financial aid

11. Guaranteed student scholarship endowed by a student-athlete's relative (Division III). Reviewed a previous Council-approved interpretation (April 1987), which determined that the application of Bylaw 11-3(a)-(4)-(ii) [relating to institutional awards of circumstance] would not exempt a guaranteed tuition scholarship with the sole criterion that it must be awarded to members of the donor's family; agreed that a guaranteed student scholarship donated by a student-athlete's great-grandfather (in 1917) could be considered exempted financial assistance consistent with the provisions of Constitution 3-4(a)-(2) [assistance unrelated to athletic ability], and asked the Council to reconsider this issue during its April meeting.

(8) Granted a waiver per Bylaw 4-1(a)-(1) to extend a student-athlete's five-year period of eligibility by one year after participation in official Olympic training, tryouts and competition.

b. Acting for the Executive Committee:

Granted waivers per Executive Regulation 1-5(e) to permit California State University, Los Angeles; Livingstone College, and Washington State University to be eligible for championships, noting that the institutions had failed to submit appropriate information forms or to pay dues by the specified deadline and, in appropriate cases, the required fines had been paid.

22 seasons and is 16-11 this season. (Barry Smith, Fresno State women's SID)

Northern Iowa's 6-9 Jason Reese was dribbling past the Western Illinois bench when WIU men's coach Jack Margenthaler, an 11-year coaching veteran, suddenly reached out and stole the ball. "I didn't foul and that's the fastest move I've made in 22 years," joked the coach after the game (his team fell behind on the technical but came back to win). (Larry Heimbarger, Western Illinois SID)

Indiana State women's coach Andrea Myers to trainer Patty Leavitt on 6-1 junior center Amy Vanderkolk's size 12 feet: "Do you bring one case of tape for Vandy's feet and another case for the rest of the team?" Myers to Vanderkolk after her record 43 points vs. Bradley (14 of 17 from the field and 15 of 16 from the line) to put ISU in a first-place tie in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference: "Vandy, I want you on the track tomorrow running laps for those shots you missed." (Karen Griess, Indiana State associate SID)

Seldom-used Siena senior Larry McMahon after his career-high five points against Colgate: "You get a little nervous when we're up 20 and you think you're going in. You think 'Oh God, what am I going to do wrong this time.' The first basket felt great. I was walking around wondering whose hand I should shake. It was a power move, I guess. It was a great pass, too — Tom (Huerter) told me to mention that." (John D'Argenio, Siena SID)

Glassboro State women's coach Dawn Shilling kept wandering outside the coach's box in a close game against Jersey City State. When the official motioned her back, she replied: "Sorry, I got lost." (Sheila Stevenson, Glassboro State SID)

Stony Brook's Leslie Hathaway, the No. 8 rebounder in women's Division III basketball despite her 5-8 size, wears jersey number 34 and has "Hath 34" on her license plate, after Pittsburgh's Jerome Lane and ex-Auburn star Charles Barkley. She also is a 3,500 student in liberal arts and a district academic all-America choice. Asked which is more important, studies or basketball, she replied: "They are even. I'm from a big basketball family. It's a good part of our social life. We have season tickets to St. John's and go to a lot of high school games." (Pat Murray, Stony Brook SID)

Yeshiva coach Jonathan Halpert is proud of the fact that 100 percent of his players graduate, and 80 percent have postgraduate degrees in law, medicine, business, etc. Asked about this in a recent radio interview, he said: "My boys don't make the pros, they become lawyers and doctors who treat the pros." As the most recent example, he cited 1987 cocaptain Lance Hirt, who graduated with a perfect 4.000 grade-point average and is now in Harvard Law School. He edited the school newspaper and earned the maximum 42 on his LSAT test. (Michael Cohen, Yeshiva SID)

Can You Top These?

Appalachian State senior Valerie Whiteside has 2,894 points through regular-season play and has a chance to become the ninth player in Division I women's basketball history to reach 3,000 career points. It will depend on how far the team advances in postseason play, beginning with the Southern Conference tournament. (John Weaver, Appalachian State assistant SID)

North Alabama's Louis Newsome leads Division II in field-goal accuracy at 74.9 percent through games of February 20, giving him a chance to break both the division record 75.2 by Tampa's Todd Linder last year and the NCAA all-division mark of 75.3 by Pete Metzelaars of Wabash in 1983. (Jeff Hodges, North Alabama SID)

After his team's third 79-76 victory of the season, Middlebury men's coach Russ Reilly said, "Well, I know what number I'm going to play in this week's lotto. (John Zehner, SID intern at Middlebury)

Army women's coach Lynn Chivaro: "We are the No. 3 defensive team in the country, and we've lost 11 games. We have a school full of leaders, but no one wants to be scoring leader on the floor." (Maddy Salvani, Army women's SID)

Quiz Answer: UCLA's Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) in 1967, 1968 and 1969. (UCLA's Bill Walton in 1972-74 and Ohio State's Jerry Lucas in 1960-62 also made consensus all-America and played in three Final Fours, but Walton's team won two titles and Lucas' team one.)

Correction: The answer to the February 24 Final Four Quiz should have been four states, not three. In addition to Missouri, New York and California, Texas also had more than one city host the Final Four, with Houston in 1971 and Dallas 1986.

Coach's criticism of game officials brings reprimand

Ohio Valley Conference Commissioner James E. Delany has announced a public reprimand and censure of Tom Deaton, head basketball coach at Tennessee Technological University, for his criticism of game officials following Tennessee Tech's 80-57 loss to Austin Peay State University February 29.

Delany noted that conference presidents and athletics directors have adopted a policy prohibiting coaches' public criticism of game officials and that unless and until those regulations are changed, all coaches are expected to refrain from public criticism of game officials.

Conference policy requires coaches, players and officials to conform and restrain their conduct so that the game of college basketball can be presented consistent with the principles of fair play and good sportsmanship.

Delany noted that Deaton disregarded the conference policy requiring all evaluations of game officials to be routed through the conference supervisor of officials.

Delany said that, consistent with normal conference policy, the supervisor of officials will review game tape.

Charges dropped

Assault and battery charges against Brown University head men's basketball coach Mike Cingiser have been dropped by David Kirkpatrick, assistant district attorney in Orange County, California.

The charges had been filed at the request of University of California, Fullerton, fan Bill Harvey after he and Cingiser had a confrontation during a basketball game December 30. Cingiser, through his attorney, entered a plea of 'no contest' to an infraction of disturbing the peace and was fined $100.

Mylla Urban to direct combined Carleton departments

The men's and women's physical education departments at Carleton College will be combined next fall into a single department of physical education, athletics and recreation.

Mylla Urban, associate dean of the college and associate professor of physical education, has been appointed chair of the new department and director of athletics by President Stephen R. Lewis Jr.

Combining the two departments, each of which has both an athletics director and department chair, will provide a more balanced program and a more effective use of facilities and staff, Lewis said.

Urban said her objective will be to build upon the current strengths of the department and to maintain balance "not just between genders but between physical education, recreation, varsity athletics and intramurals.

The decision to merge the two departments followed recommendations by an internal review committee of faculty, students and staff not connected to either department, and an external committee of persons from five other colleges.

Urban said one of her major tasks will be to coordinate planning efforts for additions to the Carleton athletics plant, which, she said, are no longer adequate to accommodate the growth in both men's and women's programs in the past 15 years.

In 1986-87, 215 women and 326 men about 30 percent of the student body—competed in 24 varsity sports at Carleton.

Under the current system of two separate departments, William Terriquez, associate professor of physical education, is director of men's athletics and head track and cross country coach. Leon Lunder, associate professor of physical education and an assistant football and track coach, is chair of the men's department.

On the women's side, Marjorie Mara, assistant professor of physical education, is director of women's athletics and volleyball coach. Patricia Lamb, professor of physical education who recently retired as tennis coach, is chair of the women's department.

Iowa measure puts tight controls on sports agents

The Iowa General Assembly is considering legislation requiring sports agents to register and regulate their activities, and overwhelming passage of the measure is expected, according to Sen. Larry Murphy, who chairs the Senate education committee.

"We need government involvement as well as action by the NCAA," Murphy told a reporter from the Iowa Newspaper Association news service. He also said he would like to see Congress get involved.

Under the proposed legislation, an athlete's agent wanting to represent an eligible student-athlete would have to register with the Iowa secretary of state. Upon receipt of the application, the secretary of state would evaluate and investigate the education, training, experience and character of the applicant.

The registration would be valid for one year. The agent would have to pay a filing fee of $250 and post a $25,000 surety bond.

An athlete's agent could not do any of the following:

- Pay money, give anything of value, or loan money or other property to a student-athlete.

- Knowingly give false information or make a false promise or representation to any person concerning employment.

- Divide fees with or receive compensation from a professional sports league or franchise or its representative or employee.

- Knowingly publish or cause to be published any false, fraudulent or misleading information, representation, notice or advertisement.

Basically, the restriction would apply until after completion of the student-athlete's last intercollegiate contest, including postseason games.

The bill would allow an institution of higher education in Iowa to sponsor athletes' agent interviews on its campus before the student-athlete's eligibility is completed. Only student-athletes in their final year of eligibility could visit with the registered sports agents.

According to the bill, each university would have rules with regard to the time, place and duration of the agent interviews.

An athlete's agent who violates the proposed law would be subject to the following penalties:

- Forfeiture of any right of repayment of anything of value received by a student-athlete as an inducement to enter into an agency contract.

- Refund of any consideration paid to the athlete's agent on the student-athlete's behalf.

- Payment of reasonable attorney fees and court costs incurred by an eligible student-athlete in suing an agent for a violation of the law.

- An athlete's agent or other person who violates the law would be guilty of a serious misdemeanor.

The bill also calls upon the state board of regents to urge the NCAA to adopt rules to permit the compensation of collegiate athletes.

Bill seeks to protect school's income

The Tennessee Senate has taken up a bill holding sports agents and boosters personally liable for the financial losses they cause schools by persuading student-athletes to violate NCAA rules.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. James Kyle, D-Memphis, was prompted by a nationwide problem with some sports agents' signing students but not advising them to notify their schools. The young athletes' schools have been barred from tournaments and bowls, resulting in lost ticket sales and other revenues.

Once students sign professional contracts, they are prohibited by NCAA rules from playing on amateur school teams.

Under Kyle's bill, students and the agents would be required to notify officials within 72 hours that a contract had been signed. It also proposes a 20-day period during which a student could get out of the contract and possibly regain college eligibility. The student would be required to repay the sports agent any money that changed hands.

Not only does the bill hold the agents or boosters financially liable for school losses, it also says they may be fined three times the value of athletics scholarships furnished the student-athletes.

Students could no longer claim they did not know they were violating the rules of collegiate athletics associations. The bill, which has a companion in the House sponsored by Rep. Bill Purcell, D-Nashville, requires a warning in large bold type on professional contracts.

The language, spelled out in the bill, must be, "Warning: A student-athlete signing this contract may lose his or her eligibility to compete in intercollegiate athletics."

Tennessee is one of 18 states that have passed or are considering sports-agent bills.

"We need to do everything we can to discourage people from preying on these athletes," Purcell told United Press International.

Only one school in Tennessee has a problem. Memphis State University suspended starters Marvin Alexander and Sylvester Gray in December after learning they had signed contracts with an Atlanta sports agent. The players were suspended for the season.

The sports-agent bill has cleared the House Education Committee.

New lobbying group seeks reform of product liability laws

Product Liability Sports, a Florida-based political and lobbying organization, has announced the formation of a political-action group called "Save Our Sports." "The PLS Save Our Sports PAC is open for business and ready to do battle in the 1988 Congressional and presidential races," said Richard Feldman, PLS executive director.

"The real fight has just begun," said Howard J. Bruns, PLS president. The formation of the political-action group has come in response to development of a similar group by the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, which has lobbied against tort reform as it relates to product liability in sports and recreation.

"Over 150 million sports enthusiasts in America can aim their sights on fence-sitting Congressmen and force them to stand with the sports community or the narrow special interests of a few personal-injury lawyers," Bruns added.

Grinnell College basketball continues to benefit from the contributions of the McJimsey family.

Twin brothers Robert and George McJimsey played on strong Grinnell teams in the late 1950s. These days, Robert's children, Elizabeth and George, are carrying on the family tradition.

Elizabeth, a senior, is averaging 10 points and 8.4 rebounds per game. She holds the school record for most rebounds in a women's game (21).

A freshman, George is averaging 8.4 points per game as a reserve.
