NCAA scholarships aimed at minorities, women

College graduates can apply now for postgraduate scholarships in sports administration that the NCAA plans to provide for the 1988-1989 academic year, including a specific number of scholarships that will be set aside for minority and women candidates.

Although the NCAA Council still must determine the number of scholarships that will be available and their amounts, applications are being solicited from ethnic minorities and women who have completed or will earn an undergraduate degree during the current academic year and have been accepted into a sports administration program at an accredited NCAA member institution.

The scholarships are being offered to increase the pool of qualified and available minority and women candidates for coaching and administrative positions in intercollegiate athletics.

"We're pleased that we have this opportunity to open a new path for minorities and women into the sports-administration field," said Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director. "The enhancement of opportunities for minorities and women in intercollegiate athletics is a top priority of the Association, and we believe that a scholarship program is one of the most effective ways to provide better access to a career in the field."

Establishment of the scholarship program is one of several recommendations related to enhancement of minority opportunities that the Council will consider at its April 18-20 meeting (see The NCAA News, March 2). The Administrative Committee forwarded the recommendations after considering several proposals by the Special Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics and the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics.

Although details of the scholarship program await Council action, applications are being accepted now in an effort to aid students who are making plans for the coming academic year.

"We are pleased that we will be able to establish these scholarships and make them available for the coming year," Schultz said. "The expeditious work of the various committees that have been involved in this project is allowing us to get off to a quick start."

Application packets can be obtained from the national office and completed applications will be accepted until June 1. It is hoped that applicants will be notified no later than July 1 whether they will receive scholarships for the 1988-1989 year.

Further information about the program and application materials can be obtained by writing to the following address: NCAA Sports-Administration Postgraduate Scholarship, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

NFL balks at loosening draft rules

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said March 14 that the league's owners seem firmly opposed to loosening league rules to allow underclassmen to be drafted, and at least one influential figure said he would be willing to test the stand in court.

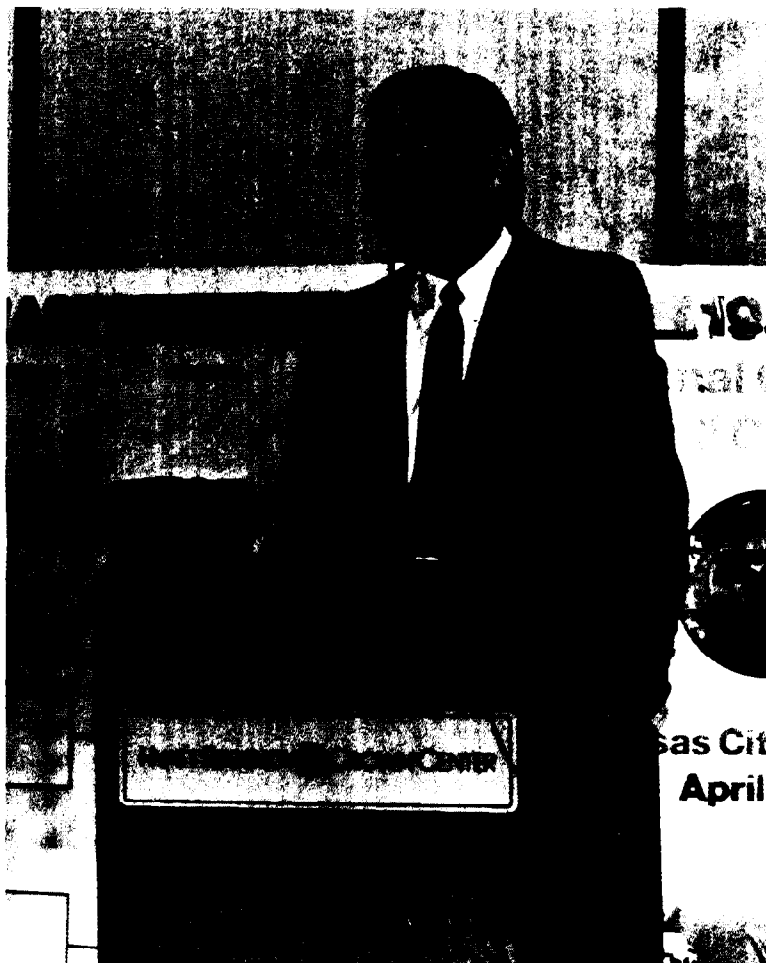

"Coaches and general managers and owners whom I talk to think it just doesn't make sense to change for anyone," Rozelle said at a news conference following the opening session of the annual-winter meetings.

"Particularly in football. You have to be completely developed physically. You take a kid who's a sophomore in college, he signs an initial contract; then he doesn't make it, and he also doesn't have a college education. People I talk to are just very much opposed to it."

The NFL is the only professional league that does not regularly draft underclassmen, allowing only those players to be drafted who have used four years of eligibility, have spent five years in school or have graduated.

But the eligibility issue has become increasingly controversial in recent years as underclassmen, declared ineligible for college play for

Pairings announced

Committee reinforces ban on play-off fights

Fighting by student-athletes participating in the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championship will not be tolerated by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee, which has the responsibility to administer all aspects of the tournament, the NCAA announced March 11.

The committee reviewed misconduct that has occurred in college basketball games this season, especially in recent weeks.

It agreed to instruct game officials and the games committee that is appointed at each championship site to deal firmly with any misconduct that may arise during the tournament.

"The procedures to deal with misconduct have been in place for NCAA championships for some time," said committee chair C. Arnold Ferrin, University of Utah.

"The committee has in the past disciplined players and coaches for misconduct that has been detrimental to the tournament, but we are placing special emphasis on fighting and the adverse effect it can have not only on the tournament, but also on intercollegiate basketball.

"Our committee was unanimous in its feelings on this issue," Ferrin said.

NCAA Executive Regulation 1-

2-(o) permits a governing sports committee for an NCAA championship to reprimand, disqualify or ban from participation in subsequent championship competition a student-athlete or coach who is guilty of misconduct.

"We're going to warn players that if they throw a punch, their chances of missing the rest of the tournament are very, very good," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said.

"We're also going to tell them that if somebody throws a punch at them, they'd better walk away from it, or they could wind up out of the tournament along with the player who threw the first punch."

Schultz made it clear that NCAA officials have kept a wary eye on the fights that have erupted in several games this season.

The NCAA has no authority to enforce antifighting rules during the regular season. That's entirely up to the conferences and the schools themselves.

But the NCAA intends to move decisively against any players who get into fights during its 64-team tournament.

"It will be a special edict dealing with the possibility of fighting," said Schultz, who resigned as chair of

Final Four in 1960s: UCLA begins its record run of titles

(The sixth of a 10-part series commemorating the 50th anniversary of the NCAA Final Four)

Two words best describe college basketball and the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship in the 1960s:

Television and dynasties.

They dominated the scene, pushing the championship to a new level of appreciation among American sports fans.

TV was coming of age in the 1960s. It was a decade of turmoil and war that was brought into our living rooms through television.

And, for the first time, the NCAA championship game became an annual fixture on television. Many previous games had been televised in the cities of the teams competing; and in 1954, a modest network of stations was strung together to televise the La Salle-Bradley game from Kansas City. Three years later, an 11-station network carried the Kansas-North Carolina triple-overtime game.

But it was not until 1963, when young Chicago lawyer Eddie Ein-horn negotiated a six-year contract with the NCAA for the championship game, that it became a yearly part of the picture. The television rights fees totaled $140,000, and Einhorn and college basketball began a relationship that would benefit both.

"You can't ignore what Eddie Einhorn did for the tournament," said Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke, who served as the championship game's director for the NCAA during the 1950s and early 1960s. "Television was becoming a big part of people's life. To be a truly top-drawer event, you needed the exposure television could provide."

Maybe the biggest television event in college basketball history came in 1968, when UCLA, with Lew Alcindor, faced Houston, led by Elvin Hayes, during the regular season at the Astrodome in Houston. It was the two best players of the day and the two best teams facing off before 50,000 fans and a national television audience set up by Einhorn and his TVS network.

"I was against playing that game," UCLA coach John Wooden said. "I had to be talked into it by J. D. Morgan, our athletics director. He told me it was too good an opportunity to pass up, not only financially but for the exposure it would give to the game of college basketball. He was right."

By the end of the 1960s, NBC-TV would pay more than $500,000 for the television rights; and in 1969, the tournament's net income exceeded $1 million for the first time.

On the college campuses, student unrest was making itself evident in the form of demonstrations and student strikes. Yet, on the basketball floor, all was calmed by the great dynasties of Cincinnati and UCLA, two schools that won seven of the 10 championships in the 1960s.

It started with Ed Jucker's Cincinnati Bearcats. With Oscar Robertson as the star, Cincinnati had finished third in the 1959 NCAA tournament. But Robertson was a senior that year, and a much different team came back to finish third in 1960.

That proved only to be a warmup. Jucker's club won the title in 1961 and 1962, beating Ohio State both times. That was an Ohio State team featuring players like Jerry Lucas, John Havlicek, Larry Seigfried and a reserve guard named Bob Knight. The 1961 game in Kansas City went into overtime, before the Bearcats won, 70-65.

"It was a very emotional game for us," remembered Jucker. "We had tried to schedule them during the regular season, but we never worked it out. We always got excuses. They kind of looked down their nose at us. Ohio State was the Big Ten; we were the Missouri Valley. Everybody thought we would get battered."

But with the inside play of Paul Hogue and Bob Wiesenbahn and the talents of guards Tony Yates and Carl Bouldin, Cincinnati overcame Ohio State that day, and then again the next year. The Bearcats even made it back to the 1963 title game, before losing to Chicago's Loyola University, 60-58, in overtime.

While Jucker's team was ruling the tournament, Wooden was building a base for the program that would replace Cincinnati as college basketball's best. Wooden had been at UCLA since 1948, but he had not reached the semifinals until 1962, when his team lost to Wake Forest.

"It had been a struggle," Wooden remembered. "Several times, we thought we had enough players to do it, but we would fall short."

All that ended in 1964, when a UCLA team led by Walt Hazzard and Gail Goodrich beat Duke, 98-83, for the NCAA championship. The next year, Goodrich and Keith Erickson led the Bruins to a repeat, beating Michigan, 91-80, and attracting the attention of a senior at Power Memorial High School in New York named Lew Alcindor.

The 1965 tournament in Portland, Oregon, featured one of the biggest Cinderella stories and top individual performances in Final Four history. Ivy Group champion Princeton reached the semifinals, thanks to the play of Bill Bradley. In the third-place game against Wichita State, Bradley scored an incredible 58 points, which is still a Final Four record. It proved to be the Ivy Group's only appearance in a Final Four.

In 1966, one of the biggest underdogs in NCAA history came through to win the title, as Don Haskins' team from Texas Western College (now UTEP) beat Kentucky, 72-65, for the title.

The next year, UCLA was back with Alcindor, now a 7-1 sophomore. By the time his tenure was over, UCLA had beaten Dayton (1967), North Carolina (1968) and Purdue (1969) in winning three straight titles.

As great as Alcindor was, UCLA

1988 Column No. 11

NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j)—national testing dates

Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that in accordance with the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j) [effective August 1, 1988, for Division II institutions], a student-athlete who initially enrolls in a Division I or II member institution and wishes to be eligible for intercollegiate competition during the freshman year must achieve a minimum SAT or ACT test score along with a minimum grade-point average in a core curriculum of courses. The minimum score on the SAT or ACT examination must be achieved no later than July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first enrollment at a collegiate institution. Further, the examination must be taken under normal testing conditions on a national testing date [i.e., no residual (campus) testing is permitted]. The testing date must be a national (as distinguished from regional) testing date.

Following are the SAT and ACT examination dates remaining for students entering during the 1988-89 academic year:

SAT	ACT
March 19, 1988	April 16, 1988
May 7, 1988	June 11, 1988
June 4, 1988

Member institutions are encouraged to contact the SAT or ACT offices directly in reference to the administration of these examinations.

NCAA Bylaw 3-1—out-of-season practice (Convention Proposal No. 140)

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee considered the August 1, 1988, effective date of Proposal No. 140 and confirmed that coaching staff members of Division I member institutions are permitted to be involved with student-athletes from their own institutions on outside teams during the summer prior to August 1, 1988. The subcommittee agreed that coaching staff members may continue to be involved with their student-athletes on such outside teams subsequent to August 1, 1988, in those instances in which the playing seasons on the outside team began prior to that date, provided the coaching staff member ceases his or her involvement with the outside team prior to the beginning of the 1988-89 academic year.

NCAA Constitution 3-1-(e)—institution game tickets

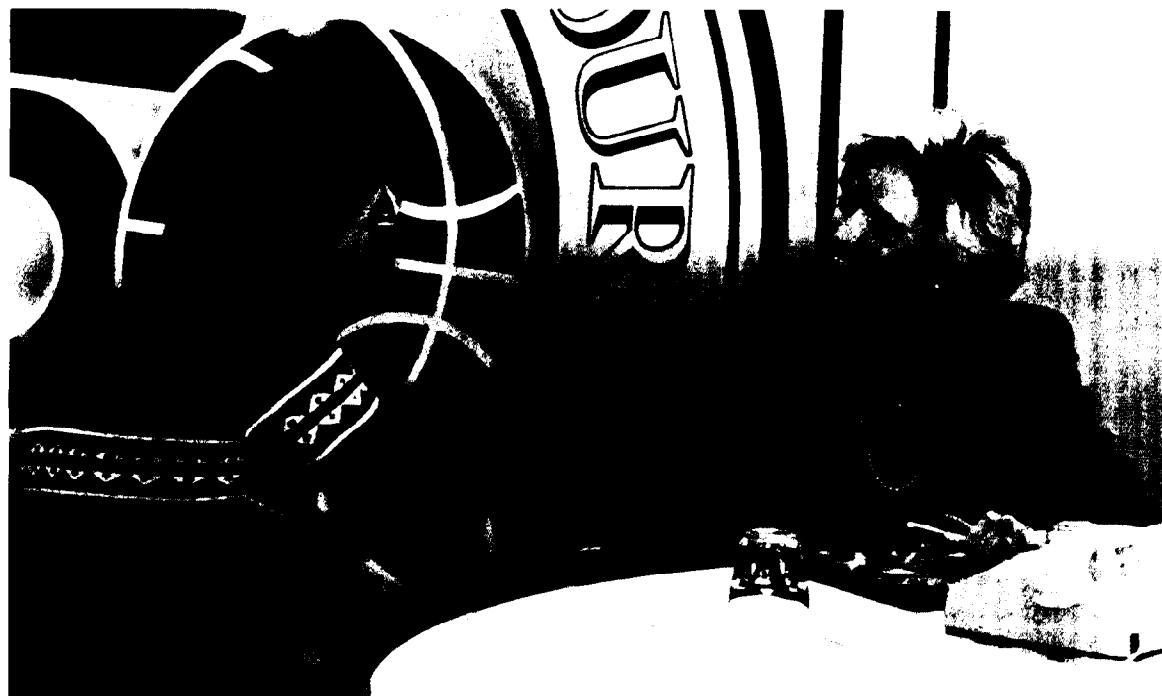

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee agreed that the application of Constitution 3-1-(e) permits an institution to utilize a game ticket that has the name or picture of an enrolled student-athlete on the face of the ticket and a commercial company's coupon or advertisement (unrelated to the student-athlete) on the back of the ticket.

NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3)—20-year-age rule

Member institutions are reminded of the appropriate method of calculation for the application of Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3). Accordingly, the appropriate method of calculation under this regulation is to count each 12-month period dating from the student's 20th birthday and to determine whether a season of competition occurred during each such period. Please note that in no event shall the student-athlete be charged with more than one year of competition in that sport in any 12-month period after the student's 20th birthday.

For example, a student-athlete participates in organized competition after the 20th birthday and then enrolls (during the same 12-month period) in a member institution. Under such circumstances, the student-athlete must complete the institution's season in the applicable sport within the same 12-month period in order to avoid being charged with an additional season of eligibility. If the institution's season extends beyond the 12-month period, the student-athlete would be charged with an additional season of eligibility during his or her first year of participation in intercollegiate competition.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

reasons stemming from misconduct to illegal contract with agents, have petitioned for either the regular or supplemental draft, the Associated Press reported.

Last year, for example, the league held a supplemental draft for Ohio State University wide receiver Cris Carter, who was declared ineligible for college play because he signed with an agent. He was subsequently taken in the fourth round by the Philadelphia Eagles.

This year, Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, an almost sure high first-round choice, has applied for the draft after being declared ineligible for his senior year at the University of Pittsburgh.

The Carter draft was held reluctantly because of the threat of lawsuit challenging the NFL's policy. Asked if the NFL's policy could survive a legal challenge, Rozelle replied:

"I don't know, I don't know."

But Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and one of the league's most influential figures, said he'd be willing to test the NFL rules in court.

"There are a lot of people who are simply afraid of a suit," he said. "I say, 'Let's go to court and see what happens.'" the Division I Men's Basketball Committee when he succeeded Walter Byers as executive director.

"We've always had a misconduct rule that applies to on-court as well as off-court behavior," Schultz said. "The misconduct rule applies as long as your team is in the tournament, even if something happens back at the hotel.

"But we have issued this statement dealing with the fighting issue so that everybody knows we are not going to tolerate it."

"The game officials can always eject a player from the game. But we're talking about suspending a player from the tournament altogether," Schultz said. "The basketball committee would be the appeal board if a player is suspended. We don't think there will be any fighting. But the committee needs to go on record right up front that it will not be tolerated. We think this is especially important in light of what's been happening."

Mississippi agent bill moves ahead

The Mississippi Senate has adopted a bill banning sports agents from contracting with university or high school athletes until they have completed their eligibility for collegiate athletics.

Violators could be fined up to $10,000 and sentenced up to two years in prison, or both.

Ohio laws aimed at agent control

New Ohio laws are in place restricting professional sports agents who deal with the state's college athletes.

The sports-agents bill requires that any proposed athlete's contract with a professional agent be submitted to the college two weeks before it is signed to ensure that no college or NCAA rules are being violated.

The legislation was pushed after former Ohio State University all-America football player Cris Carter lost his final year of college eligibility when he signed prematurely with a New York sports agent to represent him in negotiations with the National Football League.

Lawmakers originally wanted to place sports agents under the jurisdiction of the Ohio Department of Commerce, license them and forbid signings before a student-athlete's graduation.

As passed, the bill requires prior disclosure of the terms of the contract, subject to a civil penalty of up to $10,000, a maximum six-month jail term and a fine of up to $1,000 for the agent.

The law applies to athletes participating in any sport at an Ohio public or private college or university. Ohio courts are given jurisdiction over a nonresident agent who signs an Ohio college athlete.

The latter provision could give rise to a constitutional challenge in court, according to United Press International.

ESPN to carry Ivy football for next three years

ESPN will present live, exclusive national coverage of Ivy Group football games next fall under a three-year agreement. ESPN will televise a total of 19 games during the 1988, '89 and '90 seasons.

At least six games will be televised during the 1988 season, with kickoff times scheduled for early afternoon, generally at 12:30 p.m. Eastern time.

"Ivy League football, with its rich tradition and flavor, holds a unique place in the American sports scene," said J. William Grimes, president and chief executive officer of ESPN. "ESPN is delighted to further strengthen its college football schedule with the addition of the Ivy League."

"We are extremely excited about the national exposure ESPN will provide Ivy League football on a long-term basis and we look forward to a great season," said Ivy Group Executive Director Jeffrey H. Orleans.

Trans World International will produce the telecasts in association with ESPN. TWI has produced Ivy football for PBS the last four seasons.

In 1988, ESPN will televise 27 College Football Association games in prime time and during the late afternoon. ESPN's coverage will begin Saturdays with its preview show, "College Football Game Day."

The bill, steered to passage by Sen. Jim Bean Jr., Hattiesburg, now goes to the House.

"The main thrust of the bill is that it will allow the athlete to be left alone to complete his or her education without harassment of being enticed to violate the rules of the NCAA," Bean told the United Press International.

Bean said there are upward of 20,000 sports agents nationwide competing annually for the right to represent a few hundred athletes who have the potential to play professional sports.

He said the situation has gotten out of hand because some agents resort to offering athletes money and vacation trips that jeopardize the athletes' standing with the NCAA and their grants-in-aid.

The bill has the backing of athletics officials at the state's universities and colleges.

"That's a good bill, and it's legislation that's badly needed," said Mississippi State University athletics director Larry Templeton. "The problem we've had is people talking to them when we don't know about it. I guess it's the unknown that scares you."

Templeton said, however, the bill would not guarantee complete honesty among agent-player dealings. But, he said, "we'll feel a little more comfortable. This puts some teeth into enforcement if something happens."

In addition to banning agents from contacting athletes, the bill requires that they register with the secretary of state's office, disclosing information about their qualifications and background; it also requires agents to post a $50,000 surety bond or other sources of collateral to safeguard the athletes they represent.

Blue-chip recruits no guarantee of football success

By Jerry Fricke
Omaha World-Herald

If you wanted to build a winning college football program, should you spend most of your money on blue chips?

You know, blue-chip high school football players, the ones often labeled as can't-miss by talent analysts such as Max Emfinger of Houston; the Super Prep publication out of Costa Mesa, California, and others.

Football talent-rating services have proliferated in recent years—they're money-makers—but those in the business of recruiting agree that you can't rely on someone else's opinion. You have to make your own judgments.

Just as in gambling, when you push blue chips forward, you don't always rake in the pot.

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, head football coach Tom Osborne said he doesn't put a lot of stock in blue-chip lists. Neither do George Kelly, assistant athletics director at the University of Notre Dame; Steve Pederson, the new recruiting coordinator of Ohio State University, and Dave Gillespie, who succeeded Pederson at Nebraska as recruiting coordinator.

Not relied on

"Over the years," said Osborne, "I don't think you'll find us signing too many so-called blue-chip players. We've never signed as many as Notre Dame or UCLA and some other places; and yet, we've done pretty well."

The facts seem to support Osborne. In six seasons from 1982 through 1987, Nebraska signed 20 athletes who made the World-Herald blue-chip list of the top 100 high school players. The newspaper compiles the list after talking with coaches and studying numerous publications and high school all-America teams.

Nebraska's record for that six-year period is 63-11. The University of Notre Dame, on the other hand, signed 47 on the World-Herald blue-chip list, almost double the number of any other school. Yet, the Irish's record for those six years is 39-29-1.

Notre Dame hasn't finished in the top 10 of either major news-service poll in that period. The Huskers have been rated in the final top 10 five of those years by the Associated Press and all six by United Press International.

Irish supporters will quickly point out that their team plays one of the most difficult schedules, and their column isn't padded with victories over Kansas State, Kansas, Iowa State and Utah State.

If you want more evidence that it's possible to win without a lot of blue-chippers, take a look at Miami (Florida) and Oklahoma. The Hurricanes signed just eight blue-chippers in the 1982-87 period, have posted a 57-14 record and have won two national championships.

The Sooners, who signed 14 blue-chip athletes in the period, show a record of 58-13-1, four straight Big Eight championships and a national championship.

Steve Pederson

Kelly, who spent seven years at Nebraska as an assistant under athletics director Robert S. Devaney, said there is a paradox in blue-chip or top-100 recruiting lists.

"Players are making the blue-chip lists," he said, "because the Michigans, the Alabamas, the Oklahomas and teams like that are recruiting them. If none of the big schools goes after them, they don't make the lists."

"The people Notre Dame goes after make these lists. And because we're recruiting them, naturally we're going to sign a lot of them."

Many blue-chip prospects, he said, don't turn into blue-chip players.

Kelly, who moved to Notre Dame in 1969 as a football assistant, said a lot of talented players don't make the list.

"At Nebraska, we used to sign some six-man and eight-man kids that nobody ever heard of," Kelly said. "Yet we did pretty well with them. Nebraska went on to win two national championships."

Kelly said the blue-chip lists can be useful as a reference.

"The trouble is there are too many of them," he said. "There are maybe 15 top-100 lists out there."

Osborne also said a lot of good players don't make top-100 lists.

"I don't think Dean Steinkuhler or Tom Rathman or Mark Traynowicz made any lists," Osborne said. "Yet, they all turned out pretty good. It's so hard to really separate it out as to whether these other places are getting better players initially or not."

Lists aren't reliable

Or does Nebraska, with its weight and training program under Boyd Epley, have a superior system of developing players? It's hard to say.

Steinkuhler, who swept the Outland and Lombardi Awards as the nation's top lineman in 1983; Traynowicz, an all-America center in 1984, and Rathman, an all-Big Eight fullback in 1985, are now successful pros.

Pederson, recruiting coordinator for four years at Nebraska before leaving in 1986, was in private business a year before joining new Ohio State coach John Cooper in January.

Pederson said most blue-chip lists aren't reliable.

"They're compiled by people who haven't seen the players," he said. "They go more by what they've heard and read than what they've seen. You never know the potential of a player until you get him on the field, and he does it or he doesn't do

Who needs all that abuse anyway?

Michael Kelly, sports editor
Omaha World-Herald

"Mamas, don't let your babies grow up to be zebras. 'Zebra' is the most polite name basketball officials are called. Fans and coaches wonder how some of them ever earned their stripes."

"Increasingly, or so it seems, referees are the objects of wrath. Anger at officials isn't new. But in public esteem, officiating basketball games now ranks somewhere between terrorist and bank robber."

"The scoring of a basketball game isn't as subjective as, for example, the scoring of figure skating or gymnastics. But it's not all a matter of shooting hoops. Officials' judgments sometimes determine the outcome."

"Officials get most calls right. The ones they miss, or are perceived to miss, often cause anger, bitterness and worse. Basketball needs more good officials, but where do they come from?"

"The job doesn't look like much fun."

Stan Parrish, head football coach
Kansas State University

CFA Sidelines

"I think it's a positive step (study of feasibility of a Division I-AAA in NCAA football), because schools with similar needs and goals need to be classified together and need to control their legislative matters."

"The more steps that are taken to move groups together like this, the better it will be for college football."

Dean Smith, head men's basketball coach
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Scripps Howard News Service

"I still can't call this place (Dean E. Smith Center) by name. I call it the 'student activities center.'"

"It's not false humility when I say all this is because of my players, not me. But the university told me they couldn't name the building after the players. They said they had to name it after me because I was the common denominator throughout the years."

Greg Stoda, columnist

Dallas Times Herald

"It's little wonder, considering the atmosphere created by some crowds, that the 1987-88 season has been marred by a series of on-court brawls."

"Adoption of simple rules would help reduce fight scenes that have become too familiar this year."

"Anyone who throws a punch or pushes and shoves in a confrontation—retaliatory or otherwise—is ejected from the game and suspended from the team's next game."

"The same penalty would apply to any player who leaves the bench during a fight."

"A player's second offense would mean dismissal from the team."

"Apply these rules nationally, and that would eliminate conference-by-conference applications of different standards."

Every person can help solve education woes

Houston Chronicle
An editorial

The news about education is bad. So what should be done? There is an answer to that question.

The U.S. Education Department said college entrance examination grades are in a dead stall, rather than improving, while graduation rates are down.

The Commission on National Challenges in Higher Education in a report prepared for the next President cited numerous national shortcomings and called for increased funding even while recognizing that there is a mounting budget and trade deficit.

What to do? Percy A. Pierre, president of Prairie View A&M University, has an answer that we recommend for serious consideration.

Pierre says that none of us can solve the entire problem, but each of us can make a difference.

He looks at education as a pipeline, with youngsters entering at kindergarten and some reaching the distant end of that pipeline with a college degree. All along that pipeline are barriers.

"An individual can make a difference at any juncture along that pipeline by removing barriers and preventing dropouts," Pierre said.

Emphasize excellence and high standards, but also stress motivation, aspiration, good teachers, scholarships, magnet programs, the need for strong courses in mathematics, science and literature.

An individual can do those things through his children or grandchildren, through teacher consultations, through parent-teacher groups, through district and state school boards, just by paying attention and participating.

Each person who becomes active will remove one barrier in that pipeline—his own apathy—and can then work to remove others.

No one has all the answers. But Pierre is right. Everyone can make a difference.

crazy. There's just too many good teams out there."

George Vecsey, columnist
The New York Times

"If players and coaches are perceived as highly competitive colleagues rather than bitter ideological or regional enemies, then fans just might be shamed into behaving better.

"But the problem is that big-time college sport forces bitterness on everybody and raises the question about where all this competitiveness is taking everybody.

"In playing for huge sums of television money, are colleges pandering to the lowest common denominator, the voices in the crowd?

"Sometimes, it looks that way.

"It might help if more college presidents, coaches and players turned around to the fans and said, 'Hey, cool it. We're just trying to have some fun.' But playing for television's millions, they aren't."

"That wouldn't be all bad (unionization of Division I basketball referees). I can see some merit there. There seems to be some preliminary movement along those lines.

"Hank Nichols (NCAA coordinator of men's basketball officiating) has been asked to try to formulate some ideas and strengthen uniformity of officiating across the country. To me, that seems like a logical first step toward using officials all over the country rather than just in a specific conference.

"I can see officials being able to unionize easier than coaches, because officials are removed, outside of state laws and guidelines that affect coaches.

"Officials are an independent body and could get a lot more done than coaches if officials really desired to do that."

Mike Holt, varsity ice hockey player
Fredonia State University College

The Associated Press

"An athlete is someone who never gives up, no matter how bad you lose, no matter how much you're out-talented. Like against Plattsburgh (which defeated Fredonia State, 25-0), not one person on that ice stopped skating. There's been a lot of games this year when we've been out-talented (team was 0-22 this season), but we didn't give up."

Nora Lynn Finch, chair
Division I Women's Basketball Committee
The Associated Press

"I haven't had time to get nostalgic about my term (as committee chair for the past seven years). But I have every confidence that this committee is going to be able to carry on and deal with the sport's growth over the next five years.

"We've seen tremendous improvement since the NCAA started these championships. The year before our first championship, the old AIAW field had 24 teams. Now, we have 40, and we're going to try for 48.

"It used to be that the good teams didn't really have to go to work in the NCAA tournament until the regional title games. Now, they'd better be ready the moment they take the floor."

Frank E. Forni, lobbyist
Pennsylvania State University

"We think it is a benefit to Penn State University to get on campus as many of the legislators as we can, not only the state level, but the Federal as well. We think football is a good way of attracting them to campus."

Bill Farney, assistant director

"The most important factor in preventing displays of poor sportsmanship is the coach.

"If coaches lose their tempers, fans and players often lose control. If coaches react to adverse calls in a professional way, players and fans will not have a negative example to follow. Having been a basketball coach, I understand the frustration with officiating.

"Having officiated, I understand the thankless role of the sports official in any sport—but particularly basketball."

Blue-chip

Neil Smith example

A prime example, Pederson said, is Nebraska's Neil Smith, an all-America defensive tackle last season who could go in the first round of the National Football League draft.

"Probably nobody in the country knew about Neil; yet, he went on to become a very good player. Neil was a good-sized kid, but he was so thin at the time. Yet, he could run like crazy."

Smith reported as a 6-foot-5, 208-pound freshman from New Orleans and finished his career weighing 260.

Osborne said he's never kept track of how many blue-chip recruits have become productive players. Some blue-chippers don't pan out, he said, but not necessarily because they don't have the athletic ability. Some just find adjustment to college life and discipline tough.

The Irish have signed plenty of blue-chippers, but more goes into building a winning team than just signing good athletes. Good coaching, team attitude and how the players from four or five recruiting classes blend together are other important factors.

Gillespie, Nebraska's recruiting coordinator, said the blue-chip lists are valuable "to the extent that they supply you with some names. But their value is limited. Yet, a lot of people put credence in them and rate your recruiting success by how many players from them you sign."

Nebraska, he said, never goes by somebody else's evaluation.

"We use our own evaluation tools," Gillespie said, "and we feel more comfortable with that."

It's a time-consuming job. Nebraska looks at more than 1,000 athletes each year, either in person or on tape or film, Gillespie said.

"We pare that list down to 100 to 150 kids whom we really actively pursue," he said.

Gillespie questions the validity of blue chip lists.

"There are probably 15 to 20 kids on each list who are very good," he said, "but after that many of them aren't any better than some kids who aren't on the lists. Some organizations even ask the prospects for a fee to include their names on the lists, and those are the ones that aren't very reliable."

In short, blue chips don't always determine success. It's also how you play your cards—or use your players.

Columbia men seek a 10th NCAA fencing crown

With the departure of the most dominant individual in the history of the National Collegiate Men's Fencing Championships, attention at the 1988 tournament will focus on Columbia's bid to repeat as team champion.

New York University's Michael Lofton, the only fencer to win four individual NCAA titles, has moved on to prepare for the Olympics. But Columbia will be in search of its first back-to-back championships since 1951 and 1952.

Columbia trails only New York University in team fencing crowns. A title this year would be the Lions' 10th, compared to 12 for the Violets.

Ivy Group rivals Princeton, Yale and Pennsylvania will be among Columbia's leading challengers. Notre Dame, Penn State and Wayne State also will be contenders.

Columbia has 44 straight dual-match victories spanning three seasons.

"Winning again is something that this team really wants," said coach George Kolombatovich. "Several of our fencers have set individual NCAA titles as personal goals this season."

Capable team

Columbia boasts capable performers in all three weapons. Senior William Mindel, 1987 champion in the foil, hopes to become the first fencer since Ernest Simon of Wayne State (Michigan) in 1980 to repeat in that weapon. Teammate Marc Kent, who lost to Mindel by one touch in last year's final bout, also is back on hand.

Columbia's Robert Cottingham and Christopher Roehr, second and third, respectively, in the sabre last season, will have the opportunity to move up in a competition dominated since 1984 by Lofton. Jon Normile, winner at a recent Olympic preparatory tournament, will try to improve on his fourth-place finish in the epee.

Notre Dame, which slipped to fourth last season after winning its third NCAA title in 1986, has replaced departed stars with promising

Championships profile

Event: Men's fencing.

Field: Each of the three events — sabre, foil and epee — will feature competition involving no more than 20 individuals. No school may enter more than two competitors in each event. Each school's highest finisher in an event contributes points to the school's team score.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: Columbia edged Pennsylvania by eight points in 1987 to win its ninth team title.

Schedule: Princeton University will host the 1988 championships, which are set for March 24-26.

The NCAA News coverage: Championships results will appear in the March 30 issue of the News.

Contenders: Columbia, Notre Dame, Penn State, Princeton.

Championship notes: Princeton will host the championships for the fifth time in the tournament's 44 years... Notre Dame was the last host institution to win the team championship (1977). The Fighting Irish needed a fence-off to break a tie with New York University... NYU has won more team (12) and individual (28) men's fencing titles than any other school... The sabre event will have its first new champion since 1984. Michael Lofton of NYU became the first four-time individual titlist in the championships' history with sabre victories in 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987.

younger talent.

Gone are perennial foil contender Charles Higgs-Coulthard and sabre all-America Kevin Stoutermire. Joining senior captain Yehuda Kovacs, himself all-America in the foil, will be freshman Leszek Nowosielski, sabre champion at the recent Great Lakes championships. Junior Todd Griffie won the epee at the same event.

Struggled early

Pennsylvania, second last season, struggled early in Ivy competition but has the talent and experience to again make an impact at the national tournament. Chris O'Loughlin, runner-up in the epee, is the Quakers' top performer and hopes to unseat conference rival James O'Neill of Harvard for the title. Sabre specialist Chris Owen also is likely to contribute.

Princeton, out of contention for several seasons, has an improved team and could challenge the leaders at home. The Tigers are led by Tim Thliveris in the foil.

Martin Yu, third in the foil in 1987, leads Yale.

Harvard's O'Neill, completing a superlative collegiate career, again will be the favorite in the epee.

Penn State provided Columbia with its only close match this season. The Nittany Lions lost epee veteran George Polusny but bring back junior Peter Cox, a likely sabre contender.

Utah skiers strike gold again

"I guess Utah has found the gold mine, and we've found the silver mine," said Vermont coach Chip LaCasse after the Utes won the school's third consecutive NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships team title and Vermont finished second for the third straight time.

Without winning a single individual championship, Utah athletes turned in solid performances in every event to hold off Vermont and capture the title, 651-614.

Colorado was third with 515.5 points, almost 100 points behind Utah and Vermont in the March 9-12 meet in Middlebury, Vermont. Wyoming (506) was fourth, and Dartmouth (495) was fifth.

Vermont won four individual championships, but Utah never made a major mistake to give the Cats an opening.

"I really have to hand it to them," LaCasse said. "Utah skied well in every event. They started out well and never let up."

Utah captured the lead at the end of the first day of skiing in the giant slalom. The two teams were even after the men's GS, but Utah beat Vermont by 21 points in the women's event.

"That probably is the only area in which I can say we didn't ski up to our potential," LaCasse said. "We have done better in the giant slalom. We had to play catch-up from that point on."

In fact, it got worse. Utah beat Vermont by another 19 points in the men's cross country. Down by 40 points by the middle of the second day, however, Vermont began to rally. The Cats' Brenda White won the women's cross country event, and teammate Selma Lie was second. The next day, Gabriella Hamberg won the women's slalom and Dean Keller won the men's slalom. Vermont had cut 17 points out of Utah's lead.

A fifth-place finish in the men's relay at the start of the fourth day was more than a first-place finish in the women's relay could overcome, however.

"I'm happy with the results," said Utah coach Pat Miller. "The first-day lead gave us a lot of momentum, and it is a lot easier to stay ahead than it is to catch up."

Utah has won six of the last eight championships, and the Cats have finished second seven of the last eight. All together, Vermont has finished second eight times, more than any other team in the championships.

"People kept asking me after the meet if it wasn't frustrating and disappointing to finish second again," LaCasse said. "I told them it is frustrating only when you blow an event and that costs you the national championship."

"We didn't blow an event. Our men's cross country team had some illness on it, but that is no excuse," he said. "We skied well; Utah skied better."

Mountaineer shooters on target

Led by the shooting of Web Wright and Bill Dodd, West Virginia won the school's fourth team title in the past six years at the 1988 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championships, held March 12 at Virginia Military Institute. The day before, Wright captured his second consecutive crown in smallbore competition, and Murray State's Deena Wigger claimed the individual air rifle title.

"Across the board, these were the most competitive championships we have ever held," said Thurston E. Banks, chair of the Men's and Women's Rifle Committee and faculty athletics representative at Tennessee Tech, whose team finished fourth overall. "There was not a bad score fired over the two days of competition."

'Four-timers' head rifle all-America selections

Three four-time selections to both teams, including two from 1988 NCAA team champion West Virginia, headed the list of smallbore and air rifle all-Americans announced by the National Rifle Association March 12 in Lexington, Virginia. The NRA's all-America awards ceremony and reception were held a few hours after West Virginia regained the NCAA team shooting title it lost in 1987 to Murray State with a 6,192-6,183 victory over the Racers on the Virginia Military Institute range.

Bill Dodd, whose 393 air-gun score was critical to the Mountaineer triumph, and Christian Heller were named to both all-America teams for the fourth straight year.

Army's Randy Powell joined them in this distinction.

Murray State's Marianne Wallace also was recognized as a four-year member of the air rifle all-America squad.

Guidry leads Texas women to indoor track crown

Texas, led by Carlette Guidry's individual heroics, reclaimed the team title it last won in 1986 at the Division I Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Guidry won the 55-meter dash and the long jump, placed second in the 200, and ran a leg on a victorious 1,600-meter relay team as Terry Crawford's Longhorns won their fourth crown in cross country and indoor and outdoor track over the last three seasons.

Angie Bradburn (high jump) and Karol Davidson (800-meter run) also captured individual titles for Texas.

Villanova, led by double-winner Vicki Huber, was second with 52 points to the Longhorns' 71. Huber won both the mile and the 3,000 meters, bringing to four her total of individual victories in indoor and outdoor track. Her time in the mile set a new meet record.

The Wildcats also won the 3,200-meter relay for the third time in four seasons.

Also claiming Division I championships records were Pauline Davis of Alabama in the 200 meters and Terri Dendy of George Mason in the 400.

Yvette Bates of Southern California won the triple jump for the second straight year.

Arkansas men win fifth straight

Arkansas has taken most of the suspense out of the Division I Men's Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Despite a valiant effort by Illinois, John McDonnell's Razorbacks captured their fifth straight indoor team crown. Arkansas also has won three cross country crowns and one outdoor track championship over the past five years.

The Razorbacks finished with 34 points to the Illini's 29. It was the narrowest margin of victory in Arkansas' run of titles. Florida and Louisiana State also were close with 26 and 24 points, respectively.

Joe Falcon added two more individual titles to his collection with victories in the mile and the 3,000-meter run. The junior previously had won one championship each in cross country, indoor track and outdoor track.

The Razorbacks also got a runner-up finish from Tyrus Jefferson in the long jump.

Illinois was led by pole vault champion Dean Starkey. The Illini had runners-up in 400-meter specialist Tim Simon and the 1,600-meter relay team.

Repeating as champions from 1987 were Falcon (3,000 meters), Lee McRae of Pittsburgh (55-meter dash) and Andre Easter of Northeast Louisiana (long jump).

Setting new meet records were Dennis Mitchell of Florida (200 meters) and Hollis Conway of Southwestern Louisiana (high jump).

Falcons, Wildcats battle to a draw

The old and the new met at the Division II Men's Indoor Track and Field Championships and battled to a draw.

Defending team champion St. Augustine's and indoor newcomer Abilene Christian each scored 62 points in the March 11-12 showdown at South Dakota.

Abilene Christian added the indoor title to a collection that includes the last six Division II outdoor team crowns. St. Augustine's coach George Williams picked up a second men's championship trophy to go with two in women's competition.

In the key head-to-head matchup, Xavier Donaldson of St. Augustine's and James Browne of Abilene Christian each sailed 7.48 meters (24-6½) in the long jump, but Donaldson claimed the title with a longer next-best jump. The victory ensured that the Mighty Falcons would at least tie for the title.

The only other winner for St. Augustine's was Derrick Knowles in the 55 meters. It was his second straight victory.

Abilene Christian's individual champions included Browne in the triple jump, Ian Morris in the 400 meters, Cameron Miller in the pole vault and the Wildcats' 1,600-meter relay team.

Other outstanding individual performers included Peter Rono of Mount St. Mary's (Maryland), who outdueled teammate Charles Cheruiyot to win the 1,500 meters in record time and added a victory in the 800. Cheruiyot did capture the 5,000 to help his team to third place.

Wisconsin-La Crosse men win second straight

Wisconsin-LaCrosse, despite a coaching change, made it two team titles in a row at the Division III Men's Indoor Track and Field Championships March 11-12 at Smith.

Under Mark Guthrie, who stepped in this season for Joe Thompson, the Indians became the first team to win two Division III indoor crowns. The margin over runner-up St. Lawrence was six points, 36-30.

Weight specialist Terry Strouf again was the leader for the Indians, breaking his own meet records in the shot put and the 35-pound weight throw.

Also breaking a pair of championships records was Greg Foster of Stockton State, who shattered the existing marks in the long jump and triple jump. Records also fell in the 400 meters, 800 meters, pole vault and 1,600-meter relay.

Strouf was the only competitor to repeat a championship performance from 1987, although Brian Crossman of Fitchburg State reclaimed the 400-meter crown he won in 1986. Strouf becomes the first man to win four individual titles at the meet. He previously had won the 1986 shot put crown.

Lady Captains sail past Beacons

There finally is a new team champion in Division III women's indoor track and field.

Christopher Newport, with a devastating performance March 11-12 in the fourth annual women's championships at Smith, snapped Massachusetts-Boston's three-year hold on the title.

The Lady Captains captured individual victories in the long jump, triple jump and 55 meters to score a record 66 points. Massachusetts-Boston was a distant second with 39.

Sheila Trice was a double winner for Christopher Newport, winning the triple jump and leading a one-two-three finish for the Lady Captains in the 55 meters. Tynesia Alston and Michelle Dickens followed Trice across the finish line. Sandy Shelton won the long jump for the champions.

Massachusetts-Boston saw Genesis Eddins win her third straight title in the 800-meter run and anchor the 1,600-meter relay team that also repeated.

Josepha Benzoni of Rochester set the only meet record in winning the 1,500 meters.

Cal State Bakersfield men keep Division II edge

The gap between defending champion Cal State Bakersfield and Oakland closed a bit at the Division II Men's Swimming and Diving Championships, but the Roadrunners remained on top as the teams finished one-two for the second year in a row. The win gave the Roadrunners their third title in as many years.

Cal State Bakersfield's team score fell 82.5 points from last year to 397.0, while Oakland upped its score 98.5 points to 344.5 during the March 9-12 championships at Buffalo.

Together, Cal State Bakersfield and Oakland accounted for five broken records and seven first-place finishes in the individual events. All three short-distance freestyle records were broken—by Oakland freshman Hilton Woods in the 50-yard event and Cal State Northridge's Ted Hollahan in the 100 and 200 events.

Also, Lenn Rosenberg of UC Davis broke the Division II record in the 200-yard butterfly by swimming 1:50.32 in the preliminaries.

The one- and three-meter diving events were claimed by Southern Connecticut State's Patrick Tully for the second consecutive year.

Record-setters spur Cal State Northridge women

Chalk up another Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships victory for Cal State Northridge. The win—the team's third in the seven-year history of the meet—came March 9-12 at Buffalo.

Coach Pete Accardy's Matadors easily claimed the title, outscoring second-place Tampa by 156 points. Northern Michigan, Clarion and North Dakota followed in the standings.

The Matadors swept the backstroke and breaststroke events with winning performances by Chris Breedy (57.34, 100 back; 2:03.38, 200 back) and Tina Schnare (1:05.30, 100 breast; 2:19.78, 200 breast). Breedy set records in both of her events and Schnare set a record in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Tampa's Laura Atteberry not only swept the sprint freestyles but set a record in the 100-yard race with a time of 50.33.

Perhaps the most diverse swimmer at the meet was Army's Ann Wycoff. The junior swam to titles in the 1,650-yard freestyle, 200-yard butterfly and both individual medley events. She defended her 1987 title in the 400 IM with a record-setting performance that shaved more than four seconds off the old mark.

Kenyon women win fifth straight, sweep relays

A repeat team victory by the Kenyon Ladies and eight broken records were among highlights of the Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 10-12 at Emory University.

Kenyon's victory gave coach Jim Steen's team its fifth consecutive title in the seven-year history of the championship. The Ladies finished with 581.5 points, 243 points ahead of second-place UC San Diego. Denison and Allegheny rounded out the top four, with host Emory finishing sixth.

It was no surprise that the Ladies once again swept the relay events, breaking the record they set last year in the 200-yard medley relay. Erin Finneran swept both backstroke events and Jeannine Gury defended her titles in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events. Gury also set records in both breaststroke races.

Consistency was vital to the UC San Diego team this year, lifting the Tritons from third to second place. Top-three performances were turned in by Tracy Mulvaney in the 500 and 1,650 freestyles and by Julie Hicks in three-meter diving. The Tritons' 800-yard freestyle relay squad swam to a second-place finish.

After a seventh-place finish in 1987, Denison reached third this year with assistance in the diving department led by one- and three-meter champion Natalie Gibbs. A first-place performance by Liz Cooper in the 200 individual medley and second-place finishes by Cooper (200-yard breaststroke) and Sara Spears (200-yard butterfly) gave the Big Red an additional boost.

He was 78. Among the honors received by the six-time Wanamaker Mile winner were the Sullivan Award as the nation's top amateur athlete and recognition as the best athlete in the 100-year history of Madison Square Garden. Cunningham also won NCAA titles in the 1,500-meter and mile

Insurance firm restructures; to continue NCAA coverage

The college division of American Sports Underwriters Inc., which administers the NCAA insurance program, now is a separate corporation.

National Sports Underwriters Inc., now owned by investors in the Kansas City area, retains the same address, telephone number and staff and will continue to serve the needs of NCAA member institutions through athletics-staff accident, basic athletics-injury and lifetime catastrophic-injury insurance programs.

The company also has made arrangements to provide comprehensive general- and participant-liability insurance for member institutions.

American Sports Underwriters Inc. will continue to specialize in professional sports disability insurance at its headquarters in Woburn, Massachusetts.

"In restructuring the business, our goal is to establish a one-stop center for college sports insurance," said Thomas F. Wilson, president of National Sports Underwriters. "We are working to develop more programs to meet the needs of our NCAA clients."

Wilson previously had overseen American Sports Underwriters' college division as executive vice-president.

National Sports Underwriters has established marketing and service offices in Raleigh, North Carolina, and Sacramento, California. Full details on the 1988-1989 NCAA insurance programs will be mailed to member institutions in early April. For more information, institutions may contact Wilson at National Sports Underwriters Inc., 9300 Metcalf, Suite 230, Overland Park, Kansas 66212. The national telephone number is 1-800/621-2116; in Kansas, the number is 913/383-3133.

St. Lawrence appeared to have little chance of winning title

The 1988 NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships were one Cinderella story in which the clock never struck midnight.

A group that St. Lawrence coach John Clark calls "wrestling misfits," with a tone of admiration in his voice, walked into the gymnasium at Wheaton College (Illinois) earlier this month ranked seventh in the tournament and hoping for a top-six finish. They walked out with the NCAA Division III team championship, five all-Americans and their eighth national individual titlist.

"It is impossible to explain," said Clark. "You had to be there to experience it; and even then, it would be hard to grasp. Here are five guys going up against teams with nine and 10 wrestlers in the tournament; and by the end of the tournament, they were absolutely unbeatable."

Clark, who was named national coach of the year, was as surprised as the rest of the field at the showing of his wrestlers.

"We hadn't been in the top five in any of the tournaments we entered this year. Our previous highest finish was fourth, and those were some of the great teams of the late 1970s and early 1980s that we planned and plotted for the national title with. We thought we had the best team in the country those years, but it never worked out... this year, we had to Band-Aid together a team, and they

Players react tongue-in-cheek to tobacco ban

Something that is synonymous with both baseball and West Virginia has been banned by West Virginia University's baseball coach: chewing tobacco.

Tobacco spitters on the squad say they don't like the decision but are trying to abide by it.

"I guess the game's boring. It (chewing tobacco) is something to do on the field," said catcher Jack Halloran, a native of Millville, New Jersey, who did not use smokeless tobacco until he transferred to West Virginia last season.

"I think it's a good rule," said relief pitcher Dean Glus. "I tried it once, and my stomach is still laying over at 7-Eleven."

Glus said his primary objection to tobacco use was the team's tradition of trying to hit players' shoes with the spit. Players received an extra spit for discoloring a sock.

Coach Dale Ramsburg said he banned smokeless tobacco for health reasons, following reports linking the substance with cancer.

"It makes common sense," he said.

Other college teams, even some conferences, have adopted the no-tobacco rule for their baseball teams. West Virginia high school players also are prohibited from using smokeless tobacco. But coaches at Marshall University and other state colleges say they don't intend to adopt a ban for their schools.

"I don't want to tell them they can't do it," said University of Charleston coach Tom Nozica, who said he is trying to kick the habit himself.

"I could chew 24 hours a day," said West Virginia State coach Cal Bailey. "Some people find it revolting, but I find some people revolting."

Bailey limits his players to chewing on the field or in the clubhouse.

WVU catcher Eric Betho, a non-user, said some college athletes chew and spit because that is the traditional image of a baseball player.

John Clark

turn around and win the national title."

As for the wrestling misfits, 118-pounder John Canty had never won a tournament, but finished second at 118 pounds; Pat Conners had to live in the shadow of his brother, Mike, a national champion in 1984; Dan Keating, 150-pounder, hadn't wrestled in the last two years; 134-pounder Kevin Bishop had never been to a high school state tournament, and 142-pounder Brian Read was a wild-card choice to get to the nationals, earning his spot when Clark convinced the regional committee that his comeback from a seven-point deficit to win was worth one of the three wild-card choices for the region. All five came away all-Americans, and Conners duplicated the feat of his brother in nearly identical style four years later.

"Pat won in typical Conners style; he scored in the last seven seconds to win, 3-2, over Kip Crandall of Millikin," Clark explained.

The championship match was one of four one-point victims Conners had en route to the title, one of them going into overtime; and had any one of them gone differently, the Saints would not have won the team title. "We won 19 matches and lost six in the tournament; and five of the 19 were one-pointers, two of them in overtime. Because of the placing points that go with them, if one of those one-point victories goes the other way, the title is gone," Clark explained.

St. Lawrence finished with 71 points, while Montclair had 66.75.

The only "down" note of the entire tournament for the Saints involved 150-pounder Keating, who might have been the Saints' second national champion. He was leading his semifinal match, 7-3, with two minutes to go but was disqualified when his opponent did not get up from a body slam. The opponent came back to win the 150-pound title easily. "Dan summed up the attitude that prevailed through the whole thing when he said he would gladly give up his individual title if we could win the team title," said Clark.

Keating finished third at 150, with a 21-2 record, while Canty was second at 118 after losing to reigning national champion Tim Jacoutot from Trenton State, 16-3, in the finals. Bishop finished third at 134 pounds to finish his year at 22-7, while Read pulled another comeback, trailing, 8-0, in one match and winning, 17-8, to finish sixth with a 26-9 record for the year. Conners finished his Division III competition with a 21-1-1 record in addition to the coveted national crown.

"It was really something special," said Clark. "And winning coach of the year is a great honor, but I yield to my assistant coach. We never could have done it without Mark Shortsleeve."

Statistically, three teams stand out in play-off

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Temple, Arizona and Loyola Marymount are three entrants with special statistical distinctions in the 50th NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Temple leads the field of 64 in won-lost percentage at .967. That is tied for the 18th best record among all 1,331 entrants in the first half-century, surpassed only by the 16 undefeated entrants and last year's Nevada-Las Vegas team, which came in 33-1 and reached the Final Four, ending up 37-2.

At 31-2, Arizona can tie the Division I record of 37 victories in a season set by Duke in 1986 and tied by Nevada-Las Vegas last season. Duke broke one of the oldest records in the book, the 36 victories by last season. They are 27-6 Southern Methodist, up nine games; 24-6 Richmond, 26-4 Bradley and 26-3 Xavier (Ohio), each up 8½ games; and 22-7 Eastern Michigan, up eight games. Others on the list are 21-8 Texas Southern, up 10 games; 19-10 Virginia Tech, 16-13 Appalachian State and 21-8 Florida A&M, each up 8½; and 13-15 St. Bonaventure, 17-11 Eastern Illinois and 17-13 Winthrop, each up eight games.

The professor

Paul Westhead, coach of Loyola Marymount, has a master's degree in English literature, is a lover of Shakespeare and is teaching a writing course at Loyola. Second-year freshman Marcus Slater, a member of the team and a student in his writing class, says that, in practice, Westhead "will quote something from Shakespeare. I've never had a coach like this before." Adds forward Hank Gathers: "He's a great teacher of other things than basketball." As a professional coach (he coached the Los Angeles Lakers to the 1980 National Basketball Association title), he often quoted Shakespeare and used literary references to spice up his postgame comments.

"I really enjoy it," Westhead says. "I guess it's because I've been doing it so long. I started out as a teacher." He landed his first teaching job in the English department at the University of Dayton and also served as an assistant basketball coach there at the suggestion of Jack Ramsay, his college coach at St. Joseph's in Philadelphia. Then, he moved to a high school in Philadelphia; from there, he became Ramsay's assistant before landing the head-coaching job at cross-town rival La Salle.

Because of his teaching, Westhead says, "I know when the guys have midterms, when papers are due. I know what it means. And it's an ever-present reminder that I need to be prepared."

Five first-time teams

Five teams are in the NCAA tournament for the first time in their history. They are 22-8 Texas-San Antonio, 22-7 UC Santa Barbara, 22-7 Eastern Michigan, 21-12 Seton Hall and 17-12 North Texas State.

Two from 1950s

Two teams are in the tournament for the first time since the 1950s. Longest away is Baylor, in for the first time since 1950 when Bill Henderson coached the Bears to fourth place.

First-timers who played

Fifteen coaches are in the NCAA tournament for the first time, including six who also played in the tournament. A pair of them played in the Final Four. Jeff Mullins, coach at North Carolina-Charlotte, played on two consecutive Final Four teams under Vic Bubas and ranks as one of the leading scorers in tournament history with an eight-game, 25-point scoring average. He shot 53.8 percent from the field. Duke lost to eventual champion Loyola (Illinois) in 1963 and then dropped the 1964 championship game in Kansas City to UCLA. Memphis State coach Larry Finch played in the 1973 Final Four for Memphis State, scoring 29 points in defeat in the title game at St. Louis (UCLA's Bill Walton shot 21-for-22 that night).

Finch shot 53.1 percent from the field and 88.6 at the line in averaging 24.3 points over four tournament games (97 points). His team beat South Carolina, Kansas State and Providence (coached by Frank

Basketball notes

Kentucky's 1948 national champions. Oklahoma, 30-3 entering the tournament, can reach 36 by winning the championship.

Loyola Marymount leads Division I at 14 games improvement over 1987, and only Arizona and Old Dominion have a mathematical chance to overtake the Lions. Paul Westhead's team enters the NCAA championship with a 27-3 record vs. 12-16 in 1987 (15 more victories and 13 fewer losses is 28, divide by two). The worst Loyola can finish is 13½ games, with a first-round loss, while Arizona would have to reach the championship game to tie that and win it all to beat it, with 37-2 and 14½ (Arizona was 18-12 a year ago). Old Dominion, 18-11 entering the National Invitation Tournament, to equal Arizona's 11½ would have to sweep the NIT (five games) to reach its maximum of 14 games.

Once-beaten unlucky

Temple is the 47th once-beaten entrant in history; and until Nevada-Las Vegas last year, this group was on a downhill slide. The other two 29-1 entrants in history were ousted in their first game—San Francisco by Nevada-Las Vegas and Arkansas by Wake Forest, both in 1977. Six once-beaten entrants have won the championship, three of them UCLA teams under John Wooden, but the last to win it all was North Carolina State in 1974. In the 1980s, three once-beaten entrants from DePaul lost their first game—to UCLA in 1980, St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) in 1981 and Boston College in 1982. Also, in 1981, once-beaten Oregon State lost its first game to Kansas State. So it had been an unhappy decade for once-beaten teams ranked No. 1 nationally, until Nevada-Las Vegas under Jerry Tarkanian last year.

Chaney can be first

Temple's John Chaney can be the first coach in history to win both the NCAA Division I and Division II championships. His 1978 Cheyney team (then called Cheyney State) won the 1978 Division II championship, defeating Wisconsin-Green Bay, 47-40, in the title game. Only one coach has come close to such a double: Everett Shelton coached Wyoming to the 1943 Division I crown and his 1962 Cal State Sacramento team finished second.

Other most-improved

Five other NCAA tournament entrants, in addition to Loyola Marymount and Arizona, are among 15 teams up at least eight games over McGuire, Jack Hartman and Dave Gavitt — three famous names — and Finch played for another — Gene Bartow — to reach the Final Four.

Bradley coach Stan Albeck played for a famous underdog Bradley team in the 1955 tournament, and the Braves stunned everyone by reaching the regional finals. Albeck scored 41 points in three games, for a 13.7 average. Lehigh coach Fran McCaffery played for Pennsylvania against St. John's (New York) in the 1982 play-off, scoring two points. Rhode Island's Tom Penders played two games for Connecticut, in 1965 and 1967, scoring 11 points. Seton Hall's Peter Carlesimo played in three games for Fordham in 1971 and did not score. McCaffery, by the way, is the youngest coach in this tournament at 28.

A coaching Who's Who

As always, the field includes most of the top coaches in the nation. North Carolina's Dean Smith and his fellow Kansas alumnus, Ralph Miller of Oregon State, top the list at 635 victories each, although Miller has 652, excluding forfeits and vacated games, to go with 361 losses on the court. He has head-coached an incredible 1,013 games. Florida's Norm Sloan is next at 605.

Smith also leads current coaches in Final Four trips at seven; and Denny Crum of Louisville is next with six, equaling Kentucky's Adolph Rupp. Indiana Coach Bob Knight is among five with four Final Fours, and his three titles are one fewer than Rupp's total.

Most-improved in field

Clemson, Stanford, Maryland and Wake Forest, all entrants in the seventh annual NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship tournament, are among the nation's most improved teams this season.

In his first season on the job, Jim Davis led Clemson to a 21-8 record, an improvement of 13½ games over last year's 7-21 finish (14 more victories and 13 fewer losses is 27, divide by two). That is second on the national list to the 14 games by North Carolina A&T (22-7 vs. 6-19) in coach Tim Abney's second year on the job.

Davis came to Clemson after a year at Middle Tennessee State (14-8). He has only two seasons at the four-year level but compiled a 127-35 record on the two-year level at Roane State Community College in Tennessee.

Stanford under veteran coach Tara Van Derveer is among the leaders, at 11 games (26-4 vs. 14-14). The former Ohio State coach has a 205-84 career record. Maryland under Chris Weller, a 261-game winner over 13 seasons, has enjoyed a nine-game jump (24-5 vs. 15-14). In his third year at Wake Forest, Joe Sanchez led his team to an 8½-game increase (22-7 vs. 13-15).

Nine other Division I teams are up at least eight games. They are 19-9 Tennessee-Chattanooga and 18-11 Cincinnati, both up 11½ games; 14-14 Lamar, 11 games; 22-6 Indiana State and 21-9 George Mason, both at 9½; 18-9 Sam Houston and 15-15 Loyola Marymount, both at nine, and 10-17 Cheyney and 21-5 Harvard, both up 8 games.

The first-timers

Davis and Sanchez are among 13 coaches in the NCAA tournament for the first time (see the chart for others). Six teams are in the NCAA for the first time. They are Colorado, Eastern Illinois, Fairfield, Houston, Nebraska and Wake Forest.

Seven teams now have been chosen to all seven women's championship tournaments under NCAA direction. They are Long Beach State, Georgia, Louisiana Tech, Mississippi, Penn State, Southern California and Tennessee.

A coaching Who's Who

A year ago, we wrote that one could write a history of the tournament by putting 14 coaches from the 1987 field in one room along with a tape recorder. That is true again this year, except it is 16. Two are not here this time, but Chris Weller and Tara Van Derveer are back, and Auburn's Joe Ciampi and Ohio State's Nancy Darsch have joined the group that either has been to the national semifinals and finals, or missed by one game with a regional second-place finish. This group of 16 has 39 of history's 48 top-eight finishes.

Pat Summitt, coach of Tennessee's defending national championship, has been to the national semifinals and final four times; Southern California's Linda Sharp and Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore three times each; 500-game winner Jody Conradt of Texas, Georgia's Andy Landers and Western Kentucky's Paul Sanderford twice each.

Ohio Northern athletes work against child abuse

Sheila Wallace, women's volleyball coach at Ohio Northern University, had some students in a physical education class develop an unusual class project two years ago.

"They put together a child-abuse-prevention program and took it to the nursery school where our athletics director's wife was working," she recalled.

HONK—Help Our Nation's Kids—exploded from there. "A group of interested students has continued the program," Wallace said. "Most of them are Ohio Northern student-athletes or trainers."

"The acronym HONK came for a similar program in California, and it relates to a sound the school children are taught. Something like the honk of a goose, it's a different kind of sound children can use to alert others that some kind of abuse is taking place. Screams and shouts are fairly common among children."

"The students use a puppet in the program to help teach the honk sounds," Wallace added. She said that Ohio Northern volunteers average eight to 10 programs per year.

"The program is targeted at children in preschool through third grade," she noted. "We've also done summer programs. There have been as many as 200 elementary students participate through a local summer recreation program."

Wallace may be contacted at the Ohio Northern athletics department (telephone 419/772-2446) for more information.

After 19 years as the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, the league is considering a name change to improve its image. The name is too cumbersome, some officials believe, and they are considering calling the association the Big West or the Wild West, according to United Press International.

Action is expected on the name change at the May meeting of the league.

A publication commemorating the 100th anniversary of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the country's oldest collegiate conference, is off the press. The publication was edited by Thomas L. Renner, publicist for the association, which was founded March 24, 1888.

In the preface to the book, Joe Falls, sports editor of The Detroit News, writes, "I have watched Hope play in the rain, Kalamazoo in the snow and Adrian when it was so hot I thought the grasshoppers would take over the game. The MIAA. Somehow, I feel proud of it. It has endured so long and represents so much. It represents sports for the joy of sports."

The official name of the women's sports team at Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania has been changed from Raiderettes to Lady Raiders.

For the first time, ESPN will provide exclusive coverage of the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships from Ames, Iowa, Saturday, March 19, at 8 p.m. Central time.

The two-hour telecast will be presented on a same-day, tape-delayed basis.

ESPN also will provide exclusive coverage of the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships from Oklahoma City Sunday, March 20.

During the 1987-88 athletics seasons, ESPN will televise

Ohio Northern's Char Smith, a volleyball and basketball player, and Joe Susi, a football player, present the HONK program to a group of preschool children. The program is designed to combat child abuse.

18 NCAA championships.

While Stetson University basketball coach Glenn Wilkes may have the record for the longest tenure at a Division I school, Colorado School of Mines head coach Jim Darden has been at his school for 34 seasons, the latest capped by the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference championship.

But what made coach Darden the happiest this past season was the grade-point average his team compiled for the fall semester. The Orediggers had a 3.120 cumulative GPA at the engineering and science school.

Darden says he plans on "hanging around a few more years" since there is only one senior on the team. Darden played and coached for the Denver Nuggets in the late 1940s and early 1950s. He went to Colorado Mines, intending to stay just a few seasons, in 1954.

Trivia time: According to the NBA News, only four players have been members of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship teams one year and members of the NBA title teams the following season. The first three were Bill Russell (University of San Francisco-Boston Celtics), Henry Bubby (University of California, Los Angeles-New York Knicks) and Magic Johnson (Michigan State University-Los Angeles Lakers). Who was the fourth? Answer later.

Sports lawyer Richard Horrow will lecture on violence in sports March 16 at 8 p.m. in Marsh Memorial at Springfield College. For the past five years, Horrow has been crusading for an end to sports violence.

Horrow, a Harvard Law School graduate, has written two bills now being considered by Congress that would deter and punish—through criminal penalties and prosecution—any episode of excessive violence.

Seven members will be added to the American Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame January 7 in Nashville, Tennessee.

Those selected for induction are Dick Bergquist, University of Massachusetts, Amherst; Ken Dugan, David Lipscomb College; Joe Hicks, Diamond Sports Company; Robert Hiebert, California State University, Northridge; Ben Hines, University of La Verne; Charles Kaiser Jr., Oak Park and River Forest, Illinois, High Schools, and David Keilitz, Central Michigan University.

An NCAA rules seminar will be included in the sessions of the spring convention of the Eastern College Athletic Conference in Philadelphia April 18-19, according to Commissioner Robert M. Whitelaw.

The seminar will include a general session for representatives of Divisions I, II and III and breakout sessions for more thorough review of Association rules.

Trivia answer: Billy Thompson of the University of Louisville, which won the 1986 NCAA men's basketball championship, was only the fourth title-team player to play for the NBA championship team the following year, as a member of the Los Angeles Lakers.

.500 season prompts a standing ovation at Johns Hopkins

By Bill Tanton
Baltimore Evening Sun

Jim Valvano remembers basketball at Johns Hopkins University even though it was nearly two decades ago when he coached there.

Even now, Valvano amuses his North Carolina State University players with tales of his days at Homewood.

"I'm 23 years old; it's my first coaching job, and we open with a win at Dickinson, 68-62," he says. "then we got to Swarthmore, and we win, 71-67. I still remember every score."

"Now, we're 2-0, and we have our home opener against Franklin and Marshall. I walk in the gym thinking the place will be packed—and there's nobody there."

"I walk in the locker room to give the pregame talk, and every one of my players is sitting there in uniform reading a textbook. I'm talking, and they're looking at books. Finally I holler at 'em: 'Will you guys put those books down and listen to me? We've got a game in 20 minutes!'"

Valvano's Hopkins routine goes on.

"A coaching buddy at a college in Jersey invited us to a Christmas tournament, but our athletics director told me we weren't allowed to do stuff like that. He and the dean conferred for three days, and the athletics director gave me his ruling: 'You can go, but you can't represent the school.' I was ready to go to Alonso's Bar to see if they'd buy us jerseys and sponsor us."

Don't be surprised if some day

"Basketball at lacrosse-mad, academically prestigious Hopkins has always been pretty much an afterthought"

you hear Valvano tell these stories on the Carson or Letterman shows. They're that funny when delivered by the man who coached State to the NCAA championship in 1983.

Basketball at lacrosse-mad, academically prestigious Hopkins has always been pretty much an afterthought.

In the university's history, only one coach has had a winning career record. That was Valvano. He coached one year. He was 10-9.

But things are changing. Basketball is beginning to create excitement.

That was obvious recently when the Blue Jays were hosts to perennially strong Washington College (Maryland), with the winner to go on to the Middle Atlantic Conference play-offs.

Instead of the empty seats that once greeted Valvano, the stands were crowded.

"This," said Hopkins athletics director Bob Scott, "is the first time in years we've even pulled out the stands at the end of the gym."

To the surprise of one and all, Hopkins had won seven of its previous nine games, and the students were turned on. For once, there was more noise in the Newton H. White Athletic Center than in the Eisenhower Library.

"I hope we don't get stage fright," said second-year coach Bill Nelson.

Nelson's young players—with 6-foot-1 freshman Andy Enfield leading all scorers with 23 points and another first-year man, 5-10 guard Dave Eikenberg from John Carroll High, sparking floor play—did not get stage fright.

Washington College led all the way and finished its regular season with a 19-6 record.

The Jays trailed by 14 points at times, but they kept coming back. They whittled it down to six with a couple minutes to go. With 58 seconds left, the Shoremen led by 12—only to have Hopkins rally again. Washington finally won, 84-76.

At the buzzer, there was a standing ovation for the losers. Incredible! A standing O at Hopkins for somebody besides a crease attackman or a Rhodes scholar!

The Jays wound up with a 12-12 record, which is an achievement at a school that hasn't had a winning season in 14 years.

"We're encouraged that we were able to win seven of our last 10 games," said Nelson, who was 65-17 in three seasons at Nazareth College (New York) before going to Johns Hopkins. "The losses were to very good teams—Washington College, Widener (which Hopkins also beat once) and Franklin and Marshall."

Winning basketball seasons are the norm at Washington College under coach Tom Finnegan. He wins 18 to 20 games every year, and he never has a player taller than 6-5.

"Any time you go on the road and beat a team that's winning," Finnegan said, "you've accomplished something."

A team that's winning in basketball. Johns Hopkins. Times do change.

"We had a good recruiting year this year," said Hopkins assistant coach Ed Richardson. "With two more good recruiting classes, we can be right up there in Division III."

"Johns Hopkins could be the Duke of Division III," said Nelson. "We have great academics. A beautiful campus. We're in a great city. We only lack one thing."

What's that?

"We don't have any basketball scholarships to offer anybody," he said.

Plansky wins Big East award

Villanova University senior forward Mark Plansky has been named the Big East Scholar-Athlete award winner.

Plansky, a dean's list student in electrical engineering, was a freshman on Villanova's 1985 national championship team.

The 6-foot-7 Plansky, a native of Wakefield, Massachusetts, averaged 13 points and six rebounds for the Wildcats this season and was selected as a first-team academic all-America by the nation's sports information directors.
