First three speakers selected for National Forum

The first three speakers have been named for the June 20-21 session of the Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz; Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, and President Kenneth J. Weller of Central College (Iowa) will address issues relating to the NCAA membership structure.

This is the first of the three topics on the agenda for the June program. The membership issues will be covered during the morning session June 20, after opening remarks by Presidents Commission Chair John B. Slaughter and a keynote address by a speaker yet to be announced.

Schultz, whose "State of the Association" address at the January Convention included support for increased "federation" in NCAA activities, will introduce the membership topic by presenting an overview of the questions involved.

He will be followed by Neinas, who is expected to urge changes in the membership structure that would assure greater autonomy for the major athletics programs in Division I.

Weller will present the case for caution in the movement toward greater federation, representing the views of those who are concerned that the movement could result in a weakening of the NCAA as an umbrella organization for college athletics governance.

After those three speakers, the Forum delegates will be assigned to seven separate "breakout" sessions to discuss the membership topic and the remarks of the three speakers. The smaller discussion groups are intended to provide more involvement by delegates in debating the issues than has occurred in the previous two National Forum programs.

The issues

Although the speakers may raise other issues, the basic aspects of the membership-structure topic revolve around two questions: Are the NCAA membership divisions and subdivisions properly constituted, and what is the appropriate level of autonomy for each division or subdivision?

"Federation," in NCAA terminology, has come to mean that the Association's membership divisions and subdivisions function as separate units in certain procedures, including action on some proposed legislation, while remaining joined for other purposes.

Among the opinions often expressed:

- Each institution should have an athletics program that is compatible with the philosophy and the available resources at that institution, and those with a given philosophy should not attempt to affect the programs at institutions with a different philosophy.

Kenneth J. Weller

- The lack of similarity among Division I programs is exacerbated by the ease with which Division I classification is achieved.

- The stability of Division II would be enhanced if institutions in Divisions I and III whose philosophies and resources are more in line with Division II were classified in that division.

- There is an apparent dichotomy

Tournament participants to share in $28.6 million

More than 88 percent of Division I basketball-playing institutions will share in the proceeds from the 50th annual Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 2 and 4 in Kansas City, Missouri, according to Association Controller Louis J. Spry.

According to available information, all but one of the automatic-qualifying conferences have sharing formulas for tournament receipts. Therefore, 256 of 290 (88.3 percent) Division I basketball-playing institutions will receive a portion of the proceeds. Total proceeds are $28,606,800, Spry said.

The Big Eight Conference, with two members in the Final Four, will receive the largest amount—$3,691,200. Next is the Atlantic Coast Conference, with one Final Four team, at $3,229,800. The Big East Conference will realize $2,999,100, and the Big Ten Conference will receive $2,768,400.

The 64-team tournament field represents 22.1 percent of Division I member institutions, which is a participation ratio of 1 to 4.5.

NCAA men's tournament of 1980s has been a decade of top coaches

When the book is closed on college basketball in the 1980s, it probably will be a decade sports historians will say was dominated by great coaches.

Dean Smith, Bob Knight, Denny Crum, John Thompson... the list is one of the most impressive in the long history of the championship tournament, which celebrates its 50th title game this year.

Of the first eight championship games in this decade, those four coaches have had teams in seven of them.

Because of the continued improvement in playing talent, more and more teams are becoming challengers for the 64 spots in the tournament. In the 1980s, only three teams have been selected for every tournament: Georgetown, Kentucky and North Carolina.

What the 1980s have shown us so far is that the good coaches will return to the Final Four frequently.

Henry P. Iba

Of the 32 teams that have made the semifinals in the 1980s, those four coaches have had 11 of the spots. It is a startling show of consistent excellence.

"The way the game of college basketball is today, you just can't judge a coach by the number of championships he wins," said Hall of Fame coach Henry Iba. "The game is so darn competitive. I think the better way is to judge a coach by how often his teams reach the tournament and how far they go. The day when a school and a coach like UCLA and John Wooden are going to win two or three championships in a row is just not going to happen."

UCLA was the last team to repeat as champion, winning in 1972 and 1973.

Since then, only two teams have been able to reach the championship game in consecutive years: Houston in 1983 and 1984 and Georgetown in 1984 and 1985. Thompson's Hoyas came within two points of repeating, winning the 1984 title

Tournament size seems set for now

Several college athletics administrators who have worked directly in the development of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship believe that the tournament as it now stands at 64 teams is probably as big as it will get for the time being.

"My feeling is it will stay at 64," says Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director and former chair of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee.

"The regular season has to count for something. It's already diluted somewhat. We have to protect against that. An all-comers tournament takes the pressure off if everybody is automatically in," he told Hal Bock of the Associated Press.

"I think 64 is a good number," says David R. Gavitt, Big East Conference commissioner and another former chair of the men's basketball committee. "It accommodates everybody with a legitimate chance to win. An all-comers tournament would hurt the regular season, which is already a little stretched. I don't see TV rights escalating as they have in the past two negotiations, because the programming format already is maximized."

The most likely change to come in the tournament is the setting.

After the 50th anniversary of the Final Four in Kansas City, Missouri, April 2 and 4, three of the next four Final Fours are in larger-sized domed arenas—Seattle's Kingdome in 1989, the Indiana Hoosier Dome in 1991 and the Hubert Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis in 1992.

"I think we will be going to bigger and bigger arenas at the regionals as well," says Victor A. Bubas, commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference and a former chair of the committee.

"I was on the committee when we started going to domes, and I withheld judgment at first. Now, I think

1988-89 NCAA Manual—corrections

Member institutions recently should have received in the mail copies of the 1988-89 NCAA Manual. Please correct the following errors in the new Manual:

[Note: In the following corrections, those letters and words that appear in italics are to be deleted and those letters and words that are in bold type are to be added.]

1. The provisions of NCAA Bylaw 1-9-(m) should read:

"A member institution may entertain high school, college preparatory school or junior college coaches only on its campus. Such entertainment shall be limited to providing a maximum of two complimentary tickets admissions to home athletics contests (which may be extended to include full-season passes or tickets for home contests at Division III member institutions) but shall not include food and refreshments, room expenses or the cost of transportation to and from the institution."

2. The provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j), for Division II member institutions only, should read:

"[Note: Division II—A qualifier as used herein is defined as one who is a high school graduate and who:

"(i) Presented an accumulative minimum grade-point average of 2.000 (based on a maximum of 4.000) in a successfully completed core curriculum of at least 11 academic courses, including at least three years in English, two years in mathematics, two years in social science and two years in natural or physical science (including at least one laboratory class, if offered by the high school) prior to initial enrollment at a collegiate institution as certified on the official transcript or by official correspondence, as well as a 700 combined score on the SAT verbal and math sections or a 15 composite score on the ACT. The minimum required SAT or ACT score must be achieved no later than the July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first enrollment in a collegiate institution."

3. The provisions of Bylaw 11-1-(h)-(1) [sports sponsorship] should read:

"(1) The institution shall sponsor a minimum of seven varsity intercollegiate sports, including football, involving all-male teams or mixed teams of males and females in Division I, with such sponsorship based on the provisions of Section 4 of this article. An institution shall sponsor a minimum of six seven varsity intercollegiate sports in Division I involving all-female teams, with such sponsorship based on the provisions of Section 4 and subject to the exception provisions of paragraph (c) of Section 1 of this article."

4. The provisions of Bylaw 11-2-(g) should read:

"(g) An institution desiring to be a member of Division II shall schedule and play at least 50 percent of its men's basketball games against members of Division II or Division I. (Adopted: 1/10/79) [Case Nos. 405, 404, 405]"

NCAA Bylaw 4-1-(d)—complimentary admissions

Division I member institutions are reminded of the application of Bylaw 4-1-(d) regarding complimentary admissions. All complimentary admissions shall be provided only by a pass list for individuals designated by the student-athlete. No more than one of the complimentary admissions may be provided to anyone other than family members, relatives or fellow students. "Hard tickets" shall not be issued.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

over Houston, 84-75, and then falling to Villanova the next year, 66-64.

The most consistent coach in the 1980s for Final Four appearances has been Crum. An assistant under Wooden at UCLA in 1969-70-71, Crum moved on to Louisville, and his team won the 1980 championship game, beating Larry Brown's UCLA team, 59-54, in Indianapolis. Darrell Griffith had 57 points in the two games of the Final Four that year, the best performance by a player in the 1980s.

Louisville won again in 1986 on the strength of freshman Pervis Ellison's effort, defeating Duke, 72-69, at Dallas. Ellison had 25 points and 11 rebounds in the title game and was only the second freshman to win the outstanding-player award. The other was Utah's Arnie Ferrin in 1944.

Louisville also reached the Final Four in 1982 and 1983, losing in the semifinals both times. Crum has a 27-12 tournament record in just 16 years as a head coach; Dean Smith won 16 NCAA tournament games, and John Wooden, the coach with the most tournament victories in history (47-10), won just three games in his first 16 years.

"There is no magic to winning in college basketball today," said Crum. "Look at the winning programs, and there is a consistency of purpose. The game changes, but those programs continue to do the right things. That's what we've tried to do at Louisville."

The only other coach to capture a pair of championships in the 1980s is Knight. His 1981 Indiana team, led by sophomore guard Isiah Thomas, beat North Carolina, 63-50, at Philadelphia. And last year, Hoosiers guard Keith Smart hit a basket with five seconds remaining to give Indiana a 74-73 victory over Syracuse at the New Orleans Superdome.

As a player at Kansas, Dean Smith had been on a championship team (1952) as a reserve and as a starter on a team that lost the championship game (1953).

After taking over the North Carolina program, he took his team to the Final Four seven times. But it wasn't until 1982 that his Tar Heels walked away with the championship. Led by Sam Perkins, James Worthy and Michael Jordan, North Carolina beat Georgetown, 63-62, in the Superdome. Jordan hit a winning jump shot with 15 seconds to play.

"People were always disappointed that we went to the Final Four and never won," said Smith. "But I wasn't. Just to reach that level in our sport means you are successful. Naturally, once you get there, everyone wants to win it. I've never considered the fact we did not win a championship until 1982 as a negative."

That loss to North Carolina was the first of three Final Four appearances the Hoyas made in four years. Thompson, who has won 21 of 31 tournament games, built that powerhouse team around center Patrick Ewing, who was the outstanding player in his team's 1984 triumph over Houston, 84-75, at Seattle's Kingdome. Ewing made the all-tournament team three times. The only others to do that were Bill Walton, Lewis Alcindor and Jerry Lucas.

But the Final Four in the 1980s may be remembered as much for the Cinderella teams that overcame tremendous odds to win the championship. Jim Valvano's North Carolina State team did it in 1983, beating a heavily favored Georgetown team, 63-62, when Lorenzo Charles grabbed a desperation shot by Dereck Whittenburg and slammed it through as time ran out. Going into the Atlantic Coast Conference postseason tournament that year, North Carolina State had a 17-10 record.

Villanova tied for third in the Big East Conference in 1985 and started the tournament with a 19-10 record. Yet, it then went on to win six games in the tournament and defeated Georgetown, 66-64, in Lexington, Kentucky, for the championship.

"By the time you accommodate the fans and the media, I think you have to do it. When I hear people who say, 'I don't care where I sit, I just want to be able to take my grandson to see it,' that's enough reason," Bubas said.

"When I was on the committee in 1983, people said it could not get any bigger," Schultz says. "I thought I could say, 'This is what it will be.' I can't do that now. It has continued to grow. I don't know how much bigger it can get. There is a limit to everything, I guess, but I am amazed by what has taken place."

Ten years ago, the tournament field was 32 teams playing over 18 dates, and television paid $4,690,684 to show the action. Now, it's 64 teams, 34 dates and nearly $57 million in television revenue.

Hiring practices to be discussed by black coaches' representatives

A group representing black coaches will hold a panel discussion during the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship in Kansas City to voice concerns about why more of them aren't picked for higher positions in intercollegiate athletics.

"Black coaches across the nation are still concerned about the treatment and consideration given to black coaches and administrators seeking upward mobility," said Rudy Washington, executive director of the Black Coaches Association.

Washington, a University of Iowa assistant basketball coach, said the association "is puzzled as to why qualified Blacks are continually denied opportunities in intercollegiate athletics.

"Ultimately, we are pursuing an improved quality of life for coaches, administrators, support-staff members and student-athletes," he told the Associated Press.

The association's executive board will hold the forum April 3 in Kansas City between semifinal games and the April 4 championship at Kemper Arena.

Members of the panel include the nation's winningest active coach, Clarence Gaines of Winston-Salem State University; former University of Tennessee, Knoxville, coach and current Converse representative John B. McClendon Jr.; Detroit Pistons scout and administrator Will Robinson, and former head basketball coach and University of Arizona associate athletics director Fred Snowden. CBS Sports television analyst Billy Packer will moderate.

The discussion will focus on the problems and concerns of black coaches and student-athletes in modern-day intercollegiate athletics, Washington said. It will be held during a period when many coaching changes and hirings are made.

"This panel discussion is a means toward voicing our concerns and further initiates policies to resolve these concerns," Washington said.

Washington, a former Clemson University and University of Southern California assistant, joined then head coach George Raveling at Iowa three years ago.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q Who may nominate individuals for NCAA postgraduate scholarships and what is the nominating process?

A The faculty athletics representative at each NCAA member institution (or director of athletics if the institution does not have a faculty representative) is responsible for nominating individuals for these awards. Nomination forms (with deadlines indicated) are sent to member institutions at the appropriate time for the sport involved. Nomination forms for football are sent in late September; basketball, early February, and other sports, mid-April. After completing the forms, the institutions send the nominations directly to the appropriate district selection committee chairs. Candidates then are screened by the district selection committees in each of the eight geographical NCAA districts and the finalists are submitted to the national committee for selection of the winners.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than April 20, 1988.

Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee: Replacement for Eugene D. Smith, Eastern Michigan University (representing men's track interests), resigned from the committee. Appointee must be a Division I administrator, preferably with extensive track background.

Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports: Replacement for Roy Kramer, Vanderbilt University. Kramer must be replaced because his institution is in the same conference as another member. Appointee must be a male director of athletics.

of philosophy among Division III members, reflected in the votes at the January Convention regarding athletics considerations in packaging financial aid.

• The move toward greater federation is hindered by the continuing opportunity for institutions to have one or more sports classified in a division other than their membership division.

Schultz

Schultz was selected in a nationwide search to replace Walter Byers as executive director of the NCAA. He joined the NCAA staff September 1, 1987, and assumed the executive director's duties a month later.

He served as director of athletics at the University of Virginia from 1981 until assuming the NCAA position, and he was director of athletics at Cornell University for five years before moving to Virginia. Prior to that, he was special assistant to the president at the University of Iowa for two years.

He joined the Iowa staff in 1960 as freshman basketball coach and assistant baseball coach, and he became head baseball coach and assistant basketball coach in 1964. From 1970 until 1974, he was head men's basketball coach for the Hawkeyes.

Schultz also has been a high school teacher, coach and athletics director; owner of a home-construction business, and a professional baseball player and manager. Before moving to the NCAA, he was active as a management consultant.

He received his bachelor's degree at Central College (Iowa), where he was an all-conference athlete in football, basketball and baseball. He earned his master's degree at the University of Iowa.

Neinas

A former member of the NCAA staff, Neinas has served as executive director of the College Football Association since April 1, 1980. He was the first full-time administrator of the organization, which was established to provide a forum for major football-playing institutions.

Before taking the CFA position, he was commissioner of the Big Eight Conference for nine years. During that time, he chaired the NCAA International Relations Committee and served on the NCAA Football Television Committee.

He was a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee board of directors for eight years and chaired the Basketball Games Committee for Men during the 1980 Olympiad.

From 1961 to 1971, he was an NCAA staff member and was an assistant executive director when he left to take the Big Eight commissioner's position.

Prior to joining the NCAA staff, he worked in radio and television production and management. Neinas is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Weller

President of Central College since 1969, Weller has been active in NCAA matters for the past 12 years and has been both an NCAA officer and an officer of the NCAA Presidents Commission.

He became active in the Association as a member of the Division III Steering Committee in 1977 and served a four-year term on the NCAA Council from 1980 to 1984. He was Division III vice-president of the NCAA in 1983.

Weller then was elected as a charter member of the Presidents Commission in 1984 and served as chair of the Commission's Division III subcommittee in 1984 and 1985. His service on the Commission ended in January of this year.

He also served six years on the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee and currently is a member of the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning and the Walter Byers Postgraduate Scholarship Committee.

A graduate of Hope College, he was a member of the economics faculty at that institution for 20 years, during which he also coached football and tennis. He earned his master's degree and his doctorate at the University of Michigan, specializing in economic theory, business economics, and banking and finance.

Stanford drug-testing trial ends

Final oral arguments were presented in Santa Clara County, California, Municipal Court March 28 in a suit brought by two Stanford University student-athletes against the NCAA's postseason drug-testing program.

"The evidentiary portion of the case was concluded March 10," said John J. Kitchin of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clarke and Kitchin, the Association's Kansas City, Missouri, legal counsel. "All parties currently are engaged in briefings, and the court asked for oral arguments March 28. A final decision is expected, since the trial has been completed."

Last December, Santa Clara County Municipal Court Judge Conrad Rushing granted an NCAA request for a full trial in the case, which centers on an injunction against the Association's drug-testing of Stanford student-athletes, two of whom claimed that their rights of privacy were violated by drug-testing procedures.

The Association's request followed a November 19 ruling by Rushing that involuntary testing by the NCAA violates the U.S. Constitution and the California constitution. Rushing ordered the NCAA to cease testing of Stanford student-athletes in all sports except football and men's basketball and to return in December with revised testing procedures for those two sports.

Shortly after the initial ruling, Rushing dropped the finding that the NCAA program violated the U.S. Constitution—precluding the Association from appealing his decisions to a Federal court. At that time, amphetamines also were added to the list of drugs that student-athletes could be screened for.

Wrestling cut

The University of Maine, Orono, will discontinue its intercollegiate wrestling program, effective immediately, it was announced March 23 by Kevin White, athletics director.

White noted that there had been no institutional commitment to make intercollegiate wrestling competitive and that the cost to do so would be excessive, given the resources currently available.

Wrestling was instituted as a collegiate sport at Maine in the 1969-70 season and over the years had compiled a dual-meet record of 121-106.

Comment

'The Road' was bumpy back then

Jimmy Hull, a Columbus, Ohio, dentist and a member of the Ohio State University team that played in the first NCAA men's basketball championship, will attend the 50th anniversary of the event April 2 and 4 in Kansas City.

The "Road to the Final Four" has changed considerably since that first tournament in 1939 when Hull, his teammates and one cheerleader piled into two Packards for the drive to Evanston, Illinois.

Hull, a 6-1 guard-forward, scored 59 points in three tournament games, but the Buckeyes lost the championship, 46-33, to Oregon.

Hull recalls that he and his teammates really didn't want to go to the tournament in the first place, even though coach Harold Olsen was one of the founders of the play-off.

"We didn't want to go there because we didn't want to miss the state high school tournament, which was the same week," Hull told Mike Kiley of the Chicago Tribune.

"Actually, when Olsen asked us, 'How about playing in the NCAA?' our response was, 'What's the NCAA?' It was nothing to us."

The first tournament drew 5,500 fans and lost $2,531.

"The tournament was run by the See 'The Road,' page 5

Bubas wants to change three rules

Sun Belt Conference Commissioner Victor A. Bubas will ask his league's basketball coaches to vote on three rules changes at the conference's meeting May 20-26.

Bubas told USA Today he wants the conference to take the lead in experimenting with the changes.

The proposals would cut the shot clock from 45 to 35 seconds, widen the lane from 12 to 16 feet and eliminate the five-second violation when a player is closely guarded in the forecourt.

The changes can be adopted on an experimental basis if approved by conference coaches, the conference and the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee.

Bubas said the 45-second clock infrequently comes into play. As for the lane change, he says today's players are too big to maneuver in the lane without pushing each other.

Bubas suggests eliminating the five-second violation because he thinks officials are inconsistent in the way they call it.

Fouls don't favor home team, survey shows

Although many coaches might not agree, the difference in fouls called against the home team and its opponents in Division I men's basketball this season are negligible, according to a survey of more than 100 schools by Gannett News Service.

"At nearly every school, there were fewer fouls on the home team than the road team in conference games. But that, presumably, is to be expected, since home teams win more often and are ahead late in most games, forcing the losing team to foul," Mike LoPresti reports in a Gannett News Service copyright article.

"What was surprising," LoPresti says, "was how small the difference was. At more than 70 percent of the schools, the home team averaged only three fewer fouls a game or less."

"In other words, officials do not make calls favoring the home team. Friendly crowds and familiar surroundings apparently have greater bearing on the outcome of a game."

Henry O. Nichols, NCAA national coordinator of men's basketball officiating, told LoPresti, "That doesn't surprise me a bit. I would expect it to be nearly even. Nobody I know referees differently on the road."

Here are examples of places believed to be the toughest for a visiting team:

Duke University: In Atlantic Coast Conference games, the Blue

Devils averaged only one fewer foul at home than their opponents.

University of Kentucky: The difference in Southeastern Conference games in Rupp Arena was three fouls per game.

University of Arkansas, Fayetteville: The Razorbacks were 7-1 at home in Southwest Athletic Conference games but had more fouls than their opponents.

Indiana University, Bloomington: The Hoosiers and their opponents were split down the middle.

Not that there aren't exceptions.

In going 7-0 in Missouri Valley Conference games, Wichita State averaged eight fewer fouls a game than its opponents.

In going 9-0 at home against Pacific-10 Conference teams, Arizona averaged seven fewer fouls a game, but the Wildcats are noted for not fouling much.

For Big Ten Conference home games this season, Purdue had 89 fewer fouls. But Purdue's driving style and ability to get the lead are factors that have to be considered, LoPresti says.

"Anytime you have a lead, you'll go to the line more," says Tom Davis, head men's coach at the University of Iowa. "It's really simple. Who has shot the most free throws in the league? Purdue. Who's the champion? Purdue. Better teams always will shoot more free throws."

Recruiting smarter players makes a better team

"Besides individual character, academic ability is the first priority we have when we are recruiting student-athletes."

"Sometimes, (the higher standards) hurt us; but usually, they help. We have to be pretty selective... smarter players make for a smarter team. They respond to pressure and criticism better, and they are much more coachable."

"What looked like a game (college athletics) and a way to teach sportsmanship has become something else. It's time somebody stood up and said that we're not a product, and we're not something to be merchandised."

"Television has a magnificent thing here. They don't have to train actors; they don't have to pay the athlete; they don't even have to play the music. They just turn on their cameras and there it is."

"And now, this whole thing has developed as a culture all its own, and it will do a lot of damage before it can be harnessed."

"I don't think the NCAA can handle it any longer, because they make too much money for themselves now. It's the power of the dollar that no college administration has yet devised a way of controlling."

"Why not bar from the NCAA tournament—I mean flat-out prohibit with barricades and billy clubs and an army of angry attack dogs—any team whose players have proved themselves to be safety hazards?"

"Why not keep an up-to-date report card on every Division I basketball team—a report card whose sole criterion is sportsmanship?"

"Try this idea on for a moment: Any team that engages in, say, more than one serious altercation during the season is non grata come tournament time."

"You want to throw punches? You want to swagger around like a big man on campus? Fine. Just don't expect to be invited into any reputable establishments where the floor is wooden and the sweat is earnest."

Letter to the Editor

Comment about soccer is criticized

To the Editor:

I was very surprised and disturbed to see such inflammatory and erroneous remarks attributed to the head coach of such a fine university (Dick MacPherson, Syracuse University, in the March 3 issue of The NCAA News).

Soccer is a game of intelligence, flair and instantaneous decision-making. It is second only to Nordic skiing in terms of cardiovascular demands. To say that soccer is "easy and less demanding" reflects a total lack of understanding of the game. As for the reference to mothers, I can only shake my head.

I hope someone alerts Mr. MacPherson that a certified idiot has stolen some of his stationery and is using it to send statements to your fine publication.

every town in the United States. By that, I mean, while not every team is in the tournament, every team theoretically has a chance to get in. You have great grass-roots support, which was created when it went to 64 teams. If we were still back at 16, no way it would work for television.

Manning, Brown pay dividends

By Doug Tucker

Just how valuable have Danny Manning and Larry Brown been to the University of Kansas? Impossible to say?

Yes. But Bob Frederick, athletics director, isn't afraid to venture a very educated guess.

About $6 million or $7 million. "Since Larry has been in the program, we've gone to five consecutive NCAA tournaments," Frederick noted. "And two years ago, we went to the Final Four. This has a tremendous impact on our contributions as well as our ticket sales."

"Without doing a lot of research, it's hard to isolate the presence of just Larry Brown and Danny Manning because other things have happened, too, during this time," Frederick said. "But contributions have gone from roughly $1.1 million (annually in the pre-Brown years) to $2.5 million per year."

In other words, in fan and alumni gifts alone, Larry Brown and Danny Manning have meant more than $6 million? Yes, Frederick says. Sort of.

"For accuracy's sake, you have to remember there are other things that make it hard to say basketball alone is responsible for that," he cautioned. "When Monte Johnson took over as athletics director, he asked people to double their contributions, and a lot of people did. There are other factors."

"Danny, and Larry's coaching, have raised the level of interest and level of consciousness of our program back to the level where at some point in the future, when we don't have one or both of those people, we're going to be able to attract somebody really good, somebody to carry on with that success," he said.

Tucker writes for the Associated Press.

coaches the first two or three years; and if you want a successful business, don't let it get run by any coaches," Hull told Kiley. "They don't know straight up."

Hull got the feeling things wouldn't go well on the car ride to Evanston. "Dick Boughner, Dick Baker and myself were seniors; and during the ride, Baker and I pointed out a sign in a field that reads 'Hamilton Township.'"

"Boughner said, 'How can you read that?' Now, he was a guard we were depending on to see everything on the floor, and he couldn't read this sign. Can you believe that? Boughner became an optometrist."

Hull freely admits he's from the old school. He doesn't like slam dunks. "I'm not sure that it's really the big deal people make of it," he said. "I don't like to see so many free throws, either. No action there. I'd like to see them get the ball out of bounds on every foul."

"Speaking of fouls, I can't believe the way the game is played today, how violent it is. The integrity of the game has changed. It is a much better game today in many respects; but when I played, the fouls were controlled. Today, it's too physical."

"It'll be fun," Hull said of his trip to the 50th championship. "The game's fantastic; always was, always will be."

Frank Luksa, columnist

"Today, a postseason tournament... makes competitive sense. It helps qualify extra teams for the NCAAs. The paybacks are huge—$690,000 for a third-round loser. Factor the differential. A two-time play-off winner nets nearly the same as a major football bowl entry."

"Postseason tourneys have multiplied like fleas. They satisfy an itch where everyone scratches for relief these days—on the bottom line. These things are finally worthwhile for reasons that make competitive cents."

"I bring with me to Tulane a complete understanding that there is a proper way to aspire to Division I intercollegiate prominence while remaining within the boundaries of institutional integrity."

"I am eager to provide administrative leadership that will assist in the process of this institution establishing a direction of national significance for the intercollegiate program, while appropriately complementing its impeccable educational mission."

The Daily Athenaeum

Excerpted from an editorial

"Often in the field of athletics endeavor, some outstanding achievements are lauded while others, just as stellar if not more so, are overlooked."

"Every year, the entire state follows hot after the Mountaineer football and basketball teams with great attention and an almost fanatical devotion."

"There is a Mountaineer athletics team, however, that often achieves the highest honor in collegiate competition—the national championship."

"This group of athletes labors away in near obscurity. This group of athletes is the best and the brightest in its event. This group of athletes is the Mountaineer rifle team. For the fourth time in six years, the rifle team won the NCAA team championship."

"...sadly, due to the fact that it is not a powerful revenue-generating sport, the most the rifle team members will garner from their paramount performance will be a feeling of personal satisfaction and, perhaps, a sense of having been snubbed."

"If no other homage is paid to their achievement than a humble editorial, then that is indeed a sad state of neglected affairs. But let it be known that there are those who are immensely proud of the rifle team's unparalleled achievement and who wish its tireless effort and exemplary deeds be known to all."

Two players' late heroics clinch Division II title for Lowell men

Center Leo Parent intercepted a pass and guard Bobby Licare made two free throws to give Lowell a 75-72 victory over Alaska-Anchorage in the Division II Men's Basketball Championship March 26 at Springfield, Massachusetts.

Lowell jumped out to a 6-0 lead and led by 11 points twice in the first half, trailing 27-16 at the 9:14 mark, Alaska-Anchorage ran off eight straight points to close within three with 5:17 remaining. Lowell got its lead back to seven but Alaska-Anchorage cut the margin to two with a basket by Averian Parrish and a three-point field goal by Michael Johnson.

In the second half, Lowell again increased its lead to 11 twice but Alaska-Anchorage fought back and tied the score at 62 with 6:33 remaining.

Lowell had a five-point lead with 2:48 remaining, but Johnson and Parrish each hit 15-footers to cut the margin to one. Dale Bartley intercepted a Lowell pass to give the Seawolves one more opportunity, but Parent made his interception and Licare finally iced the win.

Parent, the tournament's most outstanding player, was joined on the all-tournament team by teammate Licare, Parrish of Alaska-

Anchorage, Jerry Johnson of Florida Southern and Darryl Thomas of Troy State.

Hampton star leads teammates to II women's basketball crown

Hampton took a 5-0 lead and never looked back en route to a 65-48 victory over previously unbeaten West Texas State in the Division II Women's Basketball Championship March 26 at North Dakota State.

Jackie Dolberry, the championship's most outstanding player, scored 27 points for Hampton, including the first five. Venice Frazer had 12 rebounds.

West Texas State was paced by Teresa Tinner and Leona Gerber, who scored 13 points apiece. Gerber had 10 rebounds.

West Texas State tied the score at 16 with 8:16 remaining in the first half, but Dolberry made two free throws and hit a three-point field goal to put Hampton back in control. In the second half, Frazer scored six points in just under a minute and Paula McDole added a basket to increase Hampton's lead from five to 13 points.

Dolberry was joined on the all-tournament team by teammates Frazer and Karen Drewry, Tinner of West Texas State, and Kristi Kremer of North Dakota State.

Wisconsin-River Falls solves Elmira defense, claims title

Wisconsin-River Falls' knack for scoring late in the game boosted the Falcons to victory over host Elmira March 25-26 in the finals of the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

The Falcons split two regulation-length games with Elmira before shutting out the Soaring Eagles in a decisive 15-minute minigame, 3-0. Wisconsin-River Falls scored two goals in the final half minute of the minigame to clinch its first championship.

Seven Falcon players scored goals in Wisconsin-River Falls' 7-1 victory in the first game of the championship series, but the Falcons needed a four-goal burst in the final six minutes of the game to put it out of the Soaring Eagles' reach. Wisconsin-River Falls' balanced scoring continued through the team's 5-3 loss to Elmira in the second game, which saw the Falcons score two third-period goals and rally from a 4-1 deficit before the Soaring Eagles' Mike Haviland put the game out of reach with a goal at 13:12.

Tom Griffith's goal midway through the 15-minute minigame gave the Falcons all the scoring they needed to clinch the championship, but Arron Scott and Mike O'Hara nailed the victory down by scoring at 14:46 and 14:55, respectively.

Elmira's Hank Banas scored two goals in the second game to help the Soaring Eagles force the series into the minigame.

With its two victories, Wisconsin-River Falls finished the season with a 32-6-1 record. Elmira ended play with a 26-7 mark. Both teams were participating in only their second Division III tournament.

Women fencers take honors for Wayne State (Michigan)

After seven seasons, NCAA women's fencing has come full circle.

Wayne State (Michigan), which claimed the team title at the first National Collegiate Women's Fencing Championships in 1982, regained the crown during the eighth annual meet March 21-23 at Princeton.

The victory marked the fifth taste of NCAA championship glory for coach Gil Pezza, who also won men's individual titles in the epee in 1980 and 1981 and directed the Wayne State men to team victories in 1984 and 1985.

The Tartars wrapped up the team crown with a 9-6 victory in the finals over defending champion Notre Dame. Wayne State previously defeated Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck and Pennsylvania.

Notre Dame did claim the individual crown as Olympic hopeful Molly Sullivan won her second title in three years. The Tartars' Loredana Ranza finished second and Notre Dame's Ann Bareda was third.

Sullivan concluded her collegiate career tied with Caitlin Bilodeaux of Columbia-Barnard in individual titles won. Bilodeaux won in 1985 and 1987.

TEAM RESULTS

First round: Wayne St. (Mich.) def. FDU-Teaneck, 9-1; Notre Dame def. Harvard, 9-3; Pennsylvania def. Columbia-Barnard, 9-2; Temple def. Penn St., 9-3.

First-round consolation: Yale def. Stanford, 9-4; North Caro. def. Ohio St., 9-3.

Eleventh place: Ohio St. def. Stanford, 9-6.

Ninth place: Yale def. North Caro., 9-5.

Seventh place: FDU-Teaneck def. Harvard, 9-5.

Fifth place: Penn St. def. Columbia-Barnard, 9-6.

Semifinals: Wayne St. (Mich.) def. Pennsylvania, 9-7; Notre Dame def. Temple, 8-8 (fewer touches received).

Third place: Pennsylvania def. Temple, 9-0.

Championship: Wayne St. (Mich.) def. Notre Dame, 9-6.

INDIVIDUAL RESULTS

1. Molly Sullivan, Notre Dame, 4-0; 2. Loredana Ranza, Wayne St. (Mich.), 3-1; 3. Ann Bareda, Notre Dame, 3-1; 4. Yasmine Topcu, Wayne St. (Mich.), 3-1; 5. Gail Rossman, Pennsylvania, 2-2; 6. 21. Tami Slater, Long Beach St., 0-1; 22. (tie) Grace Bai, Wellesley, and Sara Kass, Hunter, 0-1; 24. Rosemary King, Air Force, 0-1.

Columbia sweeps weapons, wins fencing title

Columbia scored the maximum 90 points and convincingly defended its team title at the National Collegiate Men's Fencing Championships, held March 24-26 at Princeton.

The Lions swept the individual titles in all three weapons, becoming the first team to do so since New York University in 1961. Columbia fencers also claimed second in the sabre and third in the foil.

Notre Dame was second in the team standings with 83 points.

Columbia's Robert Cottingham captured the sabre crown on the first day of competition, beginning a new era in that weapon. New York University's Michael Lofton had won for four straight seasons. Cottingham was second last year. Teammate Chris Roehr, third in 1987, finished second.

Next, Columbia's Marc Kent won at foil. Teammate William Mindel, the defending champion, was third behind Penn State's Edward Mufel.

Jon Normile completed the Lions' sweep by claiming the epee title on the final day. Normile posted a perfect 16-0 record in the tournament.

ment. Defending champion James O'Neill of Harvard was third.

George Kolombatovich's Columbia team was second to Notre Dame in 1986 before taking the team championship last season on the Irish's home mat. The Lions now have won 10 team championships, trailing only New York University (12) in that department. Columbia's first title came in 1951.

NAIA sets initial-eligibility, academic-progress standards

Legislation that would require student-athletes to make progress toward their degrees to continue their eligibility was approved March 22 by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The legislation sets eligibility standards athletes must meet to play in their first year and the number of credit hours that the athlete must pass each year to remain eligible.

"This represents a giant stride and one that will allow us to say to all of our constituencies that we are placing athletics in a proper perspective as an important part of our institutions," said Jefferson Farris, executive director of the NAIA.

"This clearly places the NAIA on record as the athletics association that demonstrates... that only bona fide college students will represent our institutions in our athletics programs."

The NAIA is an association of about 500 small colleges and universities.

Some educators praised the legislation.

"This is really a pioneering effort by the NAIA to put emphasis on academic progress," said Richard Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

"Anything that improves the emphasis on academic enterprise is sorely needed. We must restore the idea that athletics is the secondary consideration or emphasis among the student-athletes," he told the Associated Press.

The legislation sets initial-eligibility requirements similar to the NCAA's Bylaw 5-1-(j). Students must meet two of three requirements that include a score of 15 on the ACT or 700 on the SAT, a high school grade-point average of 3.000 on a 4.000 scale, or ranking in the top 50 percent of their class.

Athletes not meeting the standards cannot play their freshman season but can practice with teams and will retain four years of eligibility.

The NAIA then will require an athlete to complete 24 credit hours to play the second season, 48 hours for a third season and 72 hours to play the fourth season.

The legislation takes effect in the fall semester of 1989, but athletes currently enrolled will be exempt.

In another part of the legislation, NAIA institutions must be accredited by one of six accrediting bodies. Current members not accredited have four years to meet the standard.

Farris said it was not known how many athletes would be affected.

"We have looked at about 10 institutions to ask them what would this requirement do to the freshmen they recruited this year," Farris said. "Some said two. Some said one. Some said none. Some said four or five."

One argument among NAIA schools to pass the new requirements is the feeling that they have fallen behind the NCAA in academic standards.

"The strangest thing I've found in the year I have been in this job with the NAIA is the perception that the academic standards of the NAIA somehow are lower than the academic standards of the NCAA," Farris said. "It's hard to generalize. The truth of the matter is the NCAA in Divisions I and II has very strict requirements on recruiting students and entering students."

"But I can show you that our rules for continuing to participate are more stringent than theirs. Once students get in, I think ours are a little tougher than theirs."

Schools at the convention in Kansas City, Missouri, also took the first step toward setting up divisions. The national executive committee was given the power to establish divisions.

The committee will publish guidelines for setting up divisions and is expected to create the divisions for some sports in a few years.

Tulsa files suit against former coach

An attorney for the University of Tulsa said March 23 that the school filed a $65,000 breach-of-contract lawsuit against former head football coach George Henshaw as a "last resort," because he failed to live up to his contract.

"Historically, whenever a university has fired a coach or teacher without sufficient cause, that individual has been able to sue for damages," said attorney Bradley Beasley.

"The reciprocal side of that has not been evident," he said. "The university has not had any recourse. It's been a one-way street," he told the Associated Press.

"The university asked for and received a commitment from George Henshaw for a reasonable period of time and did not get that. They are resorting to litigation only as a last resort," Beasley said.

Henshaw resigned March 8 and three days later became offensive line coach for the Denver Broncos of the National Football League.

The resignation came less than 13 months after Henshaw entered into a five-year contract with Tulsa, according to the suit filed in Tulsa County District Court.

Henshaw has said he has been advised not to discuss his resignation as Hurricane coach and has refused to comment about the matter. School officials referred questions to Beasley.

The university announced the promotion of assistant coach Dave Rader to the head coaching position when it announced Henshaw's resignation.

University officials made a demand in writing for $65,000 when Henshaw resigned, according to the suit. But Henshaw "failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to pay the sum due and owing the university," the suit states.

The damages sought in the lawsuit are for "liquidated damages... as provided in the contract," according to the lawsuit.

Tulsa officials denied requests by Denver head coach Dan Reeves for permission to negotiate with Henshaw a week before he resigned.

Henshaw, whose team had a 3-8 record, was the university's third head coach in three years. Henshaw replaced Don Morton, who resigned to become head football coach at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. The university asked for and received a settlement when Morton resigned, believed to be $25,000, according to the Tulsa World.

Morton replaced John Cooper, who resigned to accept a head coaching job at Arizona State University and who now is at Ohio State University.

Survey on drug programs mailed

A drug-education and drug-testing survey has been mailed to athletics directors at NCAA member institutions to determine how many schools have or are planning to implement drug-testing or drug-education programs for student-athletes and staff.

This is the fifth year of the survey conducted by the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The committee is offering assistance to any member that is trying to implement such programs.

The survey form contains space for members to list specific areas in which assistance from the NCAA would be helpful, and it is asking for suggestions on such programs that might be passed on to other members.

Clinic on volleyball set for June

The U.S. Volleyball Association will conduct its annual volleyball colloquium, a clinic for coaches, June 10-12 in Salt Lake City.

The clinic will focus on psychological and practical aspects of coaching at the scholastic, varsity and master levels.

Assisting with the clinic will be Bill Neville, volleyball association technical director; Doug Beal, USA men's coach; Sharon Peterson, women's coach at the University of Hawaii, Hilo, and Carl McGown, professor of motor learning at Brigham Young University.

The colloquium is scheduled on the weekend before the U.S. Open Volleyball Championships in Salt Lake City.

For more information, contact the USVBA national office at 1750 E. Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909, or telephone 303/632-5551.

Coaches honor Stringer, Edwards

C. Vivian Stringer and Michelle Edwards of the University of Iowa have been named coach and player of the year, respectively, by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

This season, Iowa became the first Big Ten team to attain a No. 1 ranking and held that spot for eight consecutive weeks.

The Hawkeyes also won their first outright Big Ten championship.

Stringer won national coach-of-the-year honors in 1982 when her Cheyney University of Pennsylvania team finished second in the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

She was a finalist for the award for three consecutive years beginning in 1978.

C. Vivian Stringer

Michelle Edwards

Stringer was the first Iowa coach to record 20 victories in a season and has reached that milestone four times.

She also is the only coach to take the Hawkeyes to the NCAA tournament and has done that three times.

Edwards, Iowa's first all-America, also is the 1988 Big Ten Conference player of the year.

The senior guard eclipsed the 1,000-point mark as a junior. A Naismith all-America, she is the Hawkeyes' career leader in steals and assists.

Official Motorcoach Carrier for NCAA Championships

Title will be a first for any of Final Four coaches

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs is the only coach making his first Final Four trip at this 50th NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Kansas' Larry Brown leads the group, making it for the third time, while Duke's Mike Krzyzewski and Arizona's Lute Olson each is in his second Final Four.

None of the four has won the championship. Brown's 1980 UCLA team finished second as did Krzyzewski's 1986 Duke team, after edging Brown and Kansas in the semifinals.

Olson joins Brown as the eighth coach in history to take two different teams to the Final Four; his 1980 Iowa team finished fourth.

Brown's three in the 1980s is tied with Georgetown's John Thompson and former Houston coach Guy Lewis for second behind Louisville's Denny Crum, with four. On an all-time basis, only 10 coaches have reached the Final Four more times than Brown's three.

UCLA's John Wooden is on top with 12, including an amazing 10 championships. North Carolina's Dean Smith has seven Final Fours; Crum and the late Adolph Rupp of Kentucky six each; Lewis five; and five are tied at four each, including Indiana's Bob Knight.

Arizona's record pace

With all the attention on high scoring and 100-point games, it must be noted that Arizona (35-2) is moving at an all-time record pace in scoring margin. The Wildcats have outscored their four opponents by an average margin of 26.75 points, winning by 40, 29, 20 and 18 in tournament play. The record scoring margin by an NCAA championship team is 23.75 by UCLA in 1967 (the first season for Kareem Abdul-Jabbar). The Bruins averaged 85.25 to 61.50 for opponents in four games (Arizona is averaging 85.75 and allowing exactly 59).

Arizona would need an average margin of 18 points in two Final Four games to surpass UCLA—a large order. Of course, this would mean a victory over Oklahoma (34-3) in the semifinals, and Oklahoma itself is enjoying a 19.25 average margin in this tournament. Oklahoma also leads the Final Four field in scoring at 96.75 per game—a pace that would be second in history to UCLA's 100 in 1965 if maintained.

In the other semifinal, Duke (28-

Two No. 1 seeds left

For the eighth consecutive year, there are two No. 1 seeds advancing to the Final Four. This time it is Arizona and Oklahoma. All four No. 1 seeds were knocked out before the Final Four in 1980, then the streak started in 1981. Temple is not the only wire service national champion to lose in the tournament in the 1980s; in fact, North Carolina in 1970, when there were 11 scores of at least 100 points, another record, in just 29 games played. This tourney has produced 10 scores of at least 100 so far (nine by winners, one by a loser). This compares to seven last year and just three in the first seven years of the 1980s combined. Scoring was 143 per game in the 1986 tournament, first with the clock, and just 127.4 in 1985. The three-point shot has opened up inside play—shooting accuracy from two-point range is up, with even more three-pointers being tried now.

Big Eight leads

This is not the first time a conference has had two teams in the Final Four, nor was Kansas vs. Kansas State for the regional title a first (Georgetown vs. Providence last year), but both are firsts for the Big Eight Conference.

The Big Eight's 11-3 record in tournament play this year leads the country; and actually, it is 10-2 against outside teams, subtracting that all-Big Eight Midwest final. That is an .833 percentage. The Pacific-10 Conference (4-1) has an .800 mark. The Atlantic Coast Conference, now 9-4, is the only one with a chance to move ahead of the Big Eight in victories. That would require a Duke championship sweep and semifinal losses for both Kansas and Oklahoma.

Starting his own legend

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski is free of the shadow of a legend after beating that legend, North Carolina coach Dean Smith, three times this season en route to his second Final Four trip in three years. He has five consecutive 20-victory seasons, with an NCAA trip each year. Indeed, the 41-year-old Chicago native is building his own legend. They stopped calling him a former Bob Knight assistant some time ago. Few people in the game any longer have trouble pronouncing his name (it is Sha-shef-ski; his program is spelled q-u-a-l-i-t-y).

"Good programs attain, great ones sustain," says Krzyzewski, who knows that the margin for error in recruiting is very thin at Duke, where the average SAT score of entering students is among the country's highest; and players are expected to graduate in four years. Just one slack recruiting year would mean problems. He experienced hard times his first three years at Duke (after five years as head coach at Army, his alma mater). "Vic Bubas (coach at Duke in the 1960s) told me, 'Building something that is really strong takes time.'" With this current 28-6 record, Krzyzewski is 247-142 for his career over 13 seasons, including 12-4 in the NCAA tournament.

Defense the key

Tough man-for-man defense is a major key to Duke's success, year after year; and the coach says he has never coached a better defender, one on one, than senior Billy King. In his last stop job, King held Tem-

6) and Kansas (25-11) are famous for their tough man-for-man defense.

Sixth seed makes it

Kansas is not the first No. 6 seed to make the Final Four nor the first 11-game loser, but no team with more than 10 losses has ever won the championship. North Carolina State, a sixth seed in its region in 1983, and Villanova, an eighth seed, are the only 10-game losers to win it (North Carolina State finished 26-10, Villanova 25-10). Three other 10-game losers made the Final Four, all before 1960. There have been two 12-game losers in the Final Four; and three came in with 11 losses, the most recent Louisiana State at 26-11 in 1986. Only one in this group to make the final was Bradley, which took a 19-12 record against La Salle and lost, back in 1982 is the only one to win the title in this decade.

Attendance No. 2 in history

Tournament attendance now stands at 508,095 paid for 32 sessions—already second on the all-time list, with two sessions left. It has surpassed the former second-best total of 499,704 in 1986; the record 654,744 set in 1987 will stand. The current per session average of 15,878 is outranked only by the two that ended up in New Orleans, in 1982 (16,433) and 1987 (19,257).

Tourney scoring up

Defense and tempo took over in the regionals, but tournament scoring is still up over last year at 154.9, both teams combined per game vs. 154.6 for the entire 1987 tournament. And 154.9 is the highest since 1977 (when it was 157.9). It will rank seventh in history if main-

Summitt, in fifth semifinal, seeks title repeat for Tennessee

Only Auburn coach Joe Ciampi in the current field is making his first trip to the national semifinals in this seventh annual NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship. Tennessee's Pat Summitt, coach of the defending champions, is making her fifth trip to lead all semifinal coaches—topping the all-time list.

Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore is making his fourth trip to the national semifinals—second only to Summitt—and Long Beach State's Joan Bonvicini her second.

In fact, Summitt, Barmore and Bonvicini and their teams all are repeaters from the 1987 semifinal group. Ciampi is the 14th head coach in history to compete in the tournament.

Of the current four, only Summitt has won the championship, and that was last year. Her 1984 team was second, and her 1982 and 1986 teams third. Barmore's 1983 and 1987 teams were second; his 1984 team was third. Bonvicini's 1987 team was third.

All four outstanding

All four have outstanding career records. Summitt is 350-104 and 21-5 in NCAA tournament play; Barmore, 177-19 and 18-6 in tournament play; Bonvicini, 246-83 and 14-6 in tournament play, and Ciampi, 260-69 and 8-5 in the tournament. Barmore's .903 career winning percentage is highest among all active coaches in his division with at least five seasons on the job.

Five active coaches with at least three trips to the national semifinals are missing from the current field—Southern California's Linda Sharp, Texas' Jody Conradt (a 502-game winner), Pennsylvania's Marianne Stanley (previously at Old Dominion), Georgia's Andy Landers and Western Kentucky's Paul Sanderford.

Attendance record likely

A record attendance figure for tournament history seems likely this time. In fact, an average of 3,641 spectators per session for the semifinals and finals in the Tacoma Dome is all that is needed to break the record 122,674 last year. The current total is 115,393 for 32 sessions, for an average of 3,606 per session; so only 7,282 more fans are needed over the last two sessions.

At this stage a year ago, the per-session average was 2,854; so the current pace is an impressive 27.2 percent ahead of 1987. The top crowd at the regionals was the 12,288 turnout at Texas—an NCAA women's regional record—where Louisiana Tech edged Texas in overtime in one of the best games to watch in tournament history.

Semifinalists lead scoring

Believe it or not, the four teams in the national semifinals rank 1-2-3-4 in scoring nationally, updating all figures to this point. Tennessee leads at 89.9, then Long Beach State 88, Auburn 85.5 and Louisiana Tech 84.9. Fifth place? Would you believe Texas at 84.5?

Other leaders

The teams in the national semifinals show up at the top in other categories. For instance, Tennessee at 22 and Long Beach State at 20 have the two longest current winning streaks in Division I. Louisiana Tech at 16.19 and Auburn at 16.12 rank 1-2 nationally in rebound margin on the updated list.

And the top five nationally in scoring margin, up to date, are Louisiana Tech at 29.25 per game, Auburn at 26.70, Long Beach State 23.39, Texas 22.74 and Tennessee 22.36. Does that look familiar?

What three-pointer?

The three-point shot has not been a major factor for the big winners in Tacoma. As a group, they have scored only 78 three-point goals all season. By contrast, the national individual champion, Gwen Davis of Bethune-Cookman, made 111 in 26 games.

Tennessee has made 25 of 61 attempts for 41 percent this season, Auburn is 23 of 59 for 39 percent, Long Beach State 17 of 57 for 29.8

and Louisiana Tech 13 of 51 for 25.5.

Individual leaders

The four semifinalists are so strong and balanced in scoring that only two players are averaging above 20 points in tournament play. They are Penny Toler at 26.7 for Long Beach State and Bridgette Gordon at 20.3 for Tennessee (all players mentioned have been in three tournament games).

Louisiana Tech's Teresa Weather- spoon leads in three categories—field-goal percentage (minimum 12 scored) at 64, total assists at 26 and steals at 12. In free throws, using a minimum of 10 made, two are perfect—Long Beach State's Shannon Smith (12-for-12) and teammate Traci Waites (10-for-10).

In rebounding, the leader is Auburn's Sharon Stewart at 11.3 per

He has been head coach at Delaware State, Hampton and Alabama A&M and served last season as an assistant at Cheney...Bill Maskill hired at Southeast Missouri State. He had been an assistant at Oregon...Rick Rhodes, who led Troy State to the 1987 Division II championship, named at Southern Illinois. He posted a three-year mark of 28-7-1 at Troy State.

Football assistants—Bob Harrison hired as wide receivers coach at Georgia. The former Atlanta Falcons assistant also has served on the staffs at North Carolina State, Cornell, Iowa, Kent State and Tennessee...Louisiana State assistant Marty Galbraith has been named to coach the offensive line at the school. He had worked with LSU tight ends...Larry Ireland resigned after seven years at South Dakota, including six years as secondary coach and recruiting coordinator.

Former Oklahoma nose tackle John Blake named tight ends coach at Tulsa. After graduating in 1983, Blake spent four years as a graduate assistant and volunteer assistant with the Sooners. In addition, new Tulsa head coach Dave Rader announced the retention of assistant coaches Mike Working, Bob Brush, Chris Thurmond, Mark Thomas, Pete McGinnis and Joe Dickinson. Working will be offensive coordinator and receivers coach; Brush, defensive coordinator and outside linebackers coach; Thurmond, defensive secondary coach and recruiting coordinator; Thomas, offensive line coach and assistant head coach; McGinnis, inside linebackers coach, and Dickinson, running backs coach.

Also, several changes have been announced at Wake Forest. Bob Pruett has been named defensive coordinator and will continue to coach the defensive secondary. Joining the defensive staff is Jim Webster, who will coach defensive ends; former ends coach Tom Throckmorton now will handle inside linebackers. Former Clemson and North Carolina assistant Lawson Holland has joined the staff to coach wide receivers, and Jerry McManus moves from receivers to quarterbacks coach.

Jim Chaney appointed offensive line coach at Western Michigan after four years on the staff at Cal State Fullerton...Former Lock Haven head coach Jack Fisher named to the staff at Lycoming, replacing quarterbacks and wide receivers coach Scott McClean, who resigned for personal reasons. McClean has served on the Warrior staff since 1977.

Men's golf—Vince Capraro named at Upsala...Wade Heintzelman appointed at American, where he was a player in the early 1980s...Conrad Rehling announced his retirement after 16 years at Alabama. His 40-year coaching tenure also includes stints at Florida and West Florida. The NCAA Golf Coaches' Hall of Fame member has coached such players as Jerry Pate, Tommy Aaron, Bob Murphy, Alan Pate and Steve Melnyk.

Men's soccer—Penn State assistant Barry Gorman promoted by the school...John Rootes hired at New Hampshire College to succeed the retiring Rob Grabill. Rootes has been an assistant at Clemson the past two seasons. He also will serve as the college's sports information director...David Fall appointed at Rollins, where he served last season as interim coach and led the team to an 8-7-3 record.

Men's tennis—Dennis Ralston resigned after eight seasons at Southern Methodist to join the U.S. Tennis Association's Player Development Program as a national coach. The former NCAA singles and doubles champion's Southern Methodist teams compiled a 172-37 record during his tenure...Richard Scheines appointed at Carnegie-Mellon, where he retains his position as a research scientist.

Women's tennis—Eloise Wiertel announced that she will resign at Ball State, effective June 30. She is in her 10th season at the school, where her teams have compiled a 58-111 record entering the current campaign. She also has been head coach at Illinois State.

Women's volleyball—Hugh Schintzius resigned at Mansfield.

STAFF

Fund-raising assistant—Greg Bistline appointed assistant director of the Titan Athletic Foundation at Cal State Fullerton. The former Loyola (Maryland) fund-raiser has worked corporate-sponsorship programs at Loyola Marymount during the past year. He also has served as an academics counselor and/or assistant football coach at Texas, New Mexico, Missouri and Indiana State.

Sports information director—Greg Yoko resigned at Loras, effective May 31, to enter private business...John Rootes named at New Hampshire College, where he also will serve as men's soccer coach.

Sports information assistants—Dean Diltz and Jim Young named at California. Diltz had been assistant SID at Florida and Young had been with the West Coast Athletic Conference.

ASSOCIATIONS

John V. Kasser has left the College Football Association to become vice-president of sales and marketing for Joe McPherson Enterprises, which is composed of five automobile dealerships in Southern California. A graduate of Pepperdine, Kasser joined the CFA in 1987 and served as the production coordinator of CFA football telecasts on CBS. Before joining the CFA, Kasser was director of athletics at Long Beach State and Houston.

NOTABLES

Oregon State men's basketball coach Ralph Miller has been named the National Invitation Tournament Man of the Year. Miller, who has compiled a career record of 652-362, was honored March 29 during the NIT semifinals in New York...Danny Manning of Kansas and Sue Wicks of Rutgers named recipients of the Naismith Trophy, which is awarded to the best men's and women's basketball players in the nation. Manning heads the Naismith men's all-America team, which also includes Sean Elliott of Arizona, Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, J. R. Reid of North Carolina and Gary Grant of Michigan. Joining Wicks on the women's all-America team were Michelle Edwards of Iowa, Vicki Orr of Auburn, Teresa Weatherspoon of Louisiana Tech and Bridgette Gordon of Tennessee.

DEATHS

Joseph T. Sternaman, a quarterback at Illinois who went on to become the first quarterback for the Chicago Bears, died March 10 in Chicago. He was 88. In 1980, Sternaman was credited by Chicago Tribune writer Jeff Lyon with originating the bootleg play, which was used to take advantage of defenses that gang-tackled Bears teammate Red Grange.

CORRECTION

Due to an editor's error, the name of the winner of the 1,500-meter run at the Division III Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships was misspelled in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News. Rochester's Josafa Benzoni won the event.

Two ice hockey teams are penalized

The NCAA Division III Men's Ice Hockey Subcommittee has issued public reprimands and sanctions [NCAA Executive Regulation 1-2-(o)] to student-athletes and institutional representatives from Babson College and Plattsburgh State University College.

The reprimand and sanctions were the results of misconduct incidents that occurred during a quarterfinal series between the two institutions during the NCAA Division III Ice Hockey Championship March 11 and 12 in Plattsburgh, New York.

According to reports from game officials, eyewitness accounts and administrative hearings conducted for the involved parties, it was the sense of the subcommittee that a well-officiated and competitive series (Babson College won the first game of the series, 5-2, and Plattsburgh State University College won the second game of the series, 3-2) was marred by fighting and unsportsmanlike conduct during the minigame, with Babson College winning,

The unsportsmanlike conduct and lack of discipline by certain individuals was so flagrant at the 14:59 mark of the minigame that it violated the principles of fair play, forcing the games committee to suspend play with one second remaining in the contest.

The subcommittee issued the following sanctions and public reprimands:

Babson College: 1. One student-athlete is banned from participating in the 1988 and 1989 NCAA men's ice hockey championships.

2. Head coach Steve Stirling is reprimanded for using abusive language and maligning of the game officials.

Plattsburgh State University College: 1. Fourteen student-athletes and head coach Steve Hoar are banned from participating in the 1989 and 1990 NCAA men's ice hockey championships. (The subcommittee will consider an appeal of the 1990 ban on a case-by-case basis, pending the submission of information warranting such by Plattsburgh State University College.)

3. Noting that Babson College and the game officials were showered with debris by partisan Plattsburgh State spectators following suspension of the minigame, the subcommittee will recommend to the NCAA Division III Championships and Executive Committees that Plattsburgh State not serve as host institution in the next NCAA men's ice hockey competition in which the institution is selected to participate.

In issuing the sanctions and reprimands, the subcommittee recognizes that student-athletes and institutional representatives may experience certain frustrations during competition. However, the subcommittee stated that it will not tolerate "unsportsmanlike conduct that undermines the principles of fair play or discredits the Division III ice hockey championship and intercollegiate athletics."

ple's sensational freshman, Mark Macon, to just six goals in 29 shots.

"He missed some really easy, open shots," King said after his team's 63-53 victory, "so I can't take all the credit." But he is not invincible. One evening in Tucson, Arizona's Sean Elliott, his good friend and teammate in the World University games, scored 31 points on him, and Arizona won, 91-85. "I happened to have a very good game," Elliott says. Says King: "I'd like a rematch, a lot."

All the Duke players have had some outstanding defensive games. King, Quin Snyder and Danny Ferry rank 1-2-3 for the season in steals. Robert Brickley, only 6-5, did a number on North Carolina's 6-9 J. R. Reid (just seven points) in the ACC tournament title game. Snyder's defense and scoring led a comeback victory over Kansas (74-70 in overtime; Danny Manning had 31 points and fouled out after giving his team a 65-60 lead). Then came a three-game losing streak. "We just went completely out of character after that Kansas game," Snyder says. "We stopped playing as a team. Once we realized it, we refocused and became a much better, tougher team."

Ferry does it all

Ferry plays all five positions in Krzyzewski's system, in which no one has a set, numbered position. "We don't have a center; we run a motion offense," the coach says. "Ferry is a perfect example, and so is Manning," he says. "I want him to do whatever he can to help the team. It would be a crime to have a player like Ferry or Manning playing with his back to the basket all day."

Another Krzyzewski credo is that "the game goes to the continuous thinker." Ferry never stops thinking. Even when tired at the end of the ACC title game, the coach points out, "Danny did not check out mentally." The 6-10, 230-pound junior thinks several moves ahead, in fact. Danny learned his lessons well from his father, Bob Ferry, former player and now an executive in pro basketball who played at St. Louis University.

Opposing coaches gripe about Danny's physical play, while licking their chops at the thought of having him on their side. And he has a relentless thirst to improve his skills. His dad, a hang-loose prankster, has made it fun from the beginning.

Brown's finest job

Kansas was written off after a 1-4 start in the Big Eight Conference, due to forward Archie Marshall's season-ending knee injury and 6-10 Marvin Branch's loss because of grades. The Jayhawks won 13 of their last 16.

Larry Brown watchers are calling it his finest coaching job, topping even his UCLA second-place team in the 1980 Final Four, after an 8-6 start. This is his third Final Four in just seven years of college coaching (he was back in the pro ranks the other two years in the decade). His teams are noted for their great man-to-man defense, and this one matched any Brown team in effort, ranking fourth nationally in field-goal percentage defense at 41.5.

"This is a wonderful thing, to think we're going (to the Final Four); and I've got Archie here right beside me," Brown said. "They just did the best they could after we lost some great players. I think they decided to just gut it out, and I think they did it for the seniors (Marshall, Danny Manning and Chris Piper, starting forward, down the stretch, although he played all season with an injury)." In the loss to Kansas State in the Big Eight tournament, Kansas was without Kevin Pritchard, point guard and outside shooter, who injured his knee the night before. He played with the knee heavily wrapped in the first- and second-round NCAA games.

Brown's love affair with basketball began as a child in Long Beach, New York, on Long Island, where an apartment over his grandfather's bakery was home for Larry, older brother Herb and their mother, a widow. He played at North Carolina under Frank McGuire and Kansas alumnus Dean Smith, was a member of the 1964 Olympic team, and an outstanding point guard in pro basketball, where he compiled a 446-265 coaching record. He is 133-44 at Kansas, after going 42-17 at UCLA (37-16 with the 5-1 1980 NCAA vacated). In 16 years of coaching, he has never had a losing team. His NCAA record is 17-6.

Manning and friends

Manning has been called one of the game's best all-around big men, and his figures are impressive. In the Midwest regional, he moved past first Larry Bird then Elvin Hayes in career total points, reaching seventh all time at 2,895. His more than 1,100 rebounds and close to 60 percent field-goal shooting put him in a select group. "I love to pass the ball more than anything else," he says. On the Kansas career lists, he ranks fourth all time in assists, second in steals and first in blocked shots.

But in his only Final Four game in 1986, he was in foul trouble from the start and made only four points.

Duke won it at the wire, 71-67, but the Jayhawks were on top late when Marshall shattered his right knee. He beat the odds after missing the 1987 season, but his left knee crumpled at Madison Square Garden in late December. Brown, his players and coaches were in tears that night. Marshall is Manning's closest friend, and the 6-10 senior dedicated the rest of his college career to his friend. So did Milt Newton, taking his place in the lineup. "When I saw Archie at the hospital, he told me: 'Don't worry, you can do the job,'" Newton recalls. Newton has improved greatly in all areas. Every player has come up with big games, most recently Scooter Barry, son of Famer Rick Barry, with 15 points, a season high, in the regional title victory.

The Manning family story is well known by now. His father Ed, a pro teammate of Brown's, taught him the game, and he played in high school in Greensboro, North Carolina, and Lawrence.

His mother, Darnelle, a kindergarten teacher in Lawrence, was a strong factor in his decision to not turn pro a year ago. He since has had a 3.000 grade-point average. His mother calls him Dan, because, "He is a man now."

First in 41 years

Billy Tubbs, the outspoken, controversial and witty head coach at Oklahoma, is in his first Final Four — Oklahoma's first in 41 years — and he is loving it, even more than he "loves all these records." He and his players love the run-and-gun game (or is it gun-and-gun?) that some say is the offense of the future; but the Sooners can be patient, as they proved in that 78-59 regional title victory over Villanova.

The score of that 1947 NCAA championship game was Holy Cross 58, Oklahoma 47—a total of 105 points. Oklahoma is averaging 104, and that is a distant second to Loyola Marymount. But here is one NCAA record for Oklahoma that even Tubbs probably does not know about yet—the Sooners have scored 3,847 total points, breaking the 3,612 by Nevada-Las Vegas last year (in 39 games; Oklahoma has played 37).

Why is Oklahoma having its biggest scoring year? The answer is defense, believe it or not, ball-stealing defense. "Last season, our philosophy was to give them two, and we'll shoot for three," said senior Ricky Grace. "This year, we want to stop you, strip you and get layups." The Sooner team also is much more unselfish, faster and quicker. It forces 24 turnovers per game, 10 fewer than it commits.

"It's probably a bad way to put it, but they have killer instinct," Tubbs says. "We try to put teams away, not play along with them." That inspires his critics, who accuse him of running up the score (but others say, at least he is honest about it). "That is not valid," Tubbs says. "Our team plays as hard as it can for 40 minutes. Holding the score down is illegal—that is point-shaving. Why not ask the other team why it didn't play any better?"

Tubbs shows his players a consistent hang-loose attitude. "I've been using this defense for 20 years, but this is the first time it has worked," he jokes. "We have no fancy plan, no numbers—we just go after the ball." Asked about Villanova's ever-changing defenses, he said: "It doesn't matter how many defenses they run, because we have only one offense. You can't trick us, because we don't pay attention. We don't look to see what you're doing, because we don't really care."

Including this team's 34-3 record, Tubbs has a 305-141 career record for 14 years, the last nine at Oklahoma; and he is 14-7 in NCAA play. His next victory will be his 200th at Oklahoma, with eight straight seasons of at least 22 victories, after going 9-18 his first year there.

Sky King and Mookie

In preseason, Oklahoma was picked third in the Big Eight; and the question was, how much help would Harvey "General" Grant get. As it turned out, plenty. Stacey "Sky" King, a talented 6-10 with speed, leads the team in scoring and is second to Grant in rebounding. They give Oklahoma a great 1-2 punch of more than 43 points and 17 rebounds per game. Grant, a senior, also is having a great season.

"I snuck up on people this year," King says. "As a reserve, you worry about making mistakes. This year, I knew the position was mine. I add a new dimension to this team with my quickness and running ability. Last year, we didn't have a center who could run. This year, we're beating people a lot more on fast breaks. I'm 6-10 and I'm outrunning 6-7 and 6-8 guys and going down and getting dunks."

Just as important to the Sooners this surprising season is Mookie Blaylock, their No. 3 scorer and third nationally in steals. And there is the cat-quick Grace, and a three-point bomber like Dave Sieger. Both are seniors.

Arizona's first ever

Olson inherited a 4-24 team at Arizona and in just five years has taken the university to its first Final Four in history. He took Iowa to the Final Four in 1980, and his success helped Iowa build a $24 million arena. Olson's first Arizona team improved by seven victories to 11-17; his second by 10 or more to 21-7, and he has not looked back. Now, he is 108-50 for five seasons.

"I felt that if we could come down here and put a good team on the court, we'd get support; and we have gotten that," Olson said. "This is a great basketball town. There are a lot of transplanted people from the Midwest here who enjoyed basketball there."

The 1988 Arizona team has not limited its success to the basketball court. In the fall semester, 13 players on scholarship had a cumulative grade-point average of 3.060 on a scale of 4.000. Nine of them were at least 3.000, and not one was under 2.000.

This team swept through November and December with an amazing run against strong opposition, beating the Soviet national team, Michigan, Syracuse, Iowa at Iowa City and Duke to attain No. 1 national ranking.

The only losses have been to New Mexico and Stanford on the road, and 20 victories were by at least 20 points. En route, the Wildcats have restored Pacific-10 Conference prestige. The conference had been losing in NCAA play during the 1980s and had not had a Final Four team since UCLA under Brown in 1980. "You get recognition in one simple way, and that's by winning NCAA tournament games," Olson says.

Olson's next victory will be his 300th in college coaching. He is 299-143 for 15 seasons at Long Beach State, Iowa and Arizona, with an 11-9 record in the NCAA tournament.

A blessing

Some say this Arizona team is like UCLA's past title teams—cool and confident. Key factors have been experience, togetherness and splendid point guard play by Steve Kerr. This is the Steve Kerr who wrecked his left knee playing for the U.S. national team during the summer of 1987 and now terms it "a blessing in disguise."

He explains that if he hadn't suffered such a severe injury, he never would have red-shirted last year. And he doesn't think he would have made enough of a difference to take that 18-12 team far in the NCAA.

But the five who started last year, including guard Kenny Lofton, who was bumped to the bench, had a year to improve. Tom Tolbert is dramatically better, Kerr says. Sean Elliott was sensational as a sophomore and is even better as a junior; and the same goes for Craig McMillan, now a senior, and Anthony Cook, a forward.

And don't forget that the emotional lift of Kerr's return helped Arizona people go bonkers over their team. They love him, because he has shown tremendous heart in the face of great adversity, including the murder of his father, Malcolm Kerr, president of American University in Beirut, by terrorists in 1984. Kerr was a UCLA faculty member for 20 years and a noted Middle East scholar.

Elliott stayed

When Arizona's silky-smooth Elliott decided to stay in school instead of turning pro after his sophomore year, the last piece fell in place for a great 1988 season. Elliott grew up only a few blocks from the palm tree-lined Arizona campus in Tucson.

He rises to the occasion against the best teams and wants the ball at crunch time, such as his jumper from the corner with two seconds left which broke UCLA hearts to send that one into overtime. He is a small player in a big person's body. He was 5-11 as a high school freshman and acquired a smaller player's skills.

Administrative Committee minutes

1. Acting for the Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Appointed Marjorie Mara, Carleton College, to the Division III Women's Volleyball Committee, replacing Tere K. Dail, University of North Carolina, Greensboro, resigned from the committee.

b. Agreed that the Council should review in its April meeting previous actions regarding the type of health problem that can qualify for a waiver under the provisions of Bylaw 5-3-(f), including consideration of a request for such a waiver on behalf of a student-athlete formerly enrolled at La Salle University.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Reappointed the following to serve as the Credentials Committee for the 1989 NCAA Convention: Fran Curci, University of Tampa; Diane Fairchild, Grinnell College, and Charles Prophet, Mississippi Valley State University, chair.

b. Reappointed the following to serve as the Memorial Resolutions Committee for the 1989 NCAA Convention: Joanne A. Fortunato, Keene State College; Bradford W. Hovious, University of Texas, El Paso, chair, and Reginald L. Price, California State University, San Bernardino.

c. Reappointed the following to serve as the Voting Committee for the 1989 NCAA Convention: Joseph Barresi, College of Staten Island; Prentice Gautt, Big Eight Conference; Leanne Grotke, California State University, Fullerton, chair; Richard J. Hazelton, Trinity College (Connecticut); Eric Hyman, Virginia Military Institute; John C. Martin, Delaware State College; Ery Mondt, Morningside College; Bradley L. Rothermel, University of Nevada, Las Vegas; John Semanik, Drexel University; Marnie W. Swift, University of Toledo; G. Ann Uhler, Texas Woman's University, and Patricia W. Wall, Southeastern Conference; appointed Kathy Noble, University of Montana, to that committee, replacing W. Harold Godwin, University of Idaho, no longer eligible.

d. Reviewed an August 1987 Executive Committee action specifying that dispersal of drug-testing results would be limited to the committee responsible for drug-testing, the Executive Committee and the conference of the institution involved, if approved by the institution; agreed that the policy should be modified to permit publication of drug-testing data, with appropriate analysis, in The NCAA News inasmuch as the data have become public information as a result of litigation involving the drug-testing program.

e. Approved the addition of one data-processing position on the NCAA staff, to be filled within the next 30 to 45 days; approved in principle, subject to review by the Staff Evaluation Subcommittee and the Budget Subcommittee during the coming summer, the concept of hiring another data processor on the staff and eventually diminishing the role of Data Systems International to a consulting-only basis.

f. Denied a request by the University of Texas, Austin, that the Association not conduct drug testing at events that involve participation by student-athletes who are exempt from the Association drug-testing program; i.e., that drug testing occur only in circumstances in which all participants are subject to such testing. The Administrative Committee directed that testing at NCAA championships proceed in accordance with NCAA policy.

3. Acting for the Council and the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

Postponed action on a request by the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association for funding for two meetings of committees of that new organization, pending review of the establishment of the organization by the Council in April, with the understanding that any subsequent consideration of the funding request would be by the Executive Committee in its May meeting.

4. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 5-1-(g). Acting for the Council:

a. Granted a waiver per Constitution 3-9-(b)-(4)-(iii) to permit a student-athlete from a member institution to participate in AAU/USA Junior Olympics competition.

b. Granted waivers per Constitution 3-9-(b)-(4)-(v) as follows:

(1) To permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in the 1988 Big Sky State Games (Montana).

Olympics gets a lift

Muhlenberg College football players and coaches raised $2,200 for the Special Olympics during a weight-lifting exhibition in February (The NCAA News, March 9).

The effort was part of the National Strength and Conditioning Association's national "Lift America" fund-raiser. Most of the pledges were one or two cents per pound lifted.

(2) To permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in the 1988 Prairie State Games (Illinois).

(3) To permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in the 1988 State Games of Oregon.

c. Granted waivers of the tryout rule per

Conference No. 6
March 24, 1988

Bylaw 1-6-(c)-(1) as follows:

(1) Eastern Kentucky University, developmental tennis clinics.

(2) College of St. Benedict, developmental softball clinic.

Silverdome as '93 Final Four host is objective of Detroit AD Kinsman

By Richard L. Shook

University of Detroit athletics director Bradford E. Kinsman will be at the NCAA Final Four looking for an invitation to make a presentation to host the 1993 finals.

Warm hospitality and two impressive crowds of more than 30,000 for the NCAA Midwest regional helped Kinsman and the university boost Detroit's chances of hosting the 1993 Final Four at the Silverdome.

"I think Pontiac deserves a Final Four," Kansas State University coach Lon Kruger said after his Wildcats had been beaten, 71-58, for the right to advance to the Final Four. "Everywhere we went was first class. They treated us very well."

Vanderbilt University coach C. M. Newton voiced similar sentiments after his Commodores lost to Kansas in the semifinals. "I'd love to come back," he said.

Kinsman will keep pressing his case before the organization's site-selection committee.

"We'll meet in Kansas City," he said, "where they will once again review our bid made last summer. If they approve, they'll invite us to make a final application when they meet in Colorado Springs July 3-7."

Kinsman said he got positive feedback from members of the NCAA selection committee, competing schools, fans and media members.

"We tried to meet their every need. That was something we came close to accomplishing," he said. "We got nothing but glowing accolades from everybody. There wasn't a weak link in our committee setup. I'm extremely satisfied about the way things turned out."

The 80,000-seat Silverdome meets the NCAA's minimum capacity requirement of 30,000 for a Final Four, but there is a major problem. The site falls short of the NCAA's requirement for 5,000 hotel rooms within 20 miles.

"That is a very legitimate concern," Kinsman said. "You need room for teams, personnel, fans, media and the basketball coaches association. They want them as close together as possible."

For its media and NCAA officials' headquarters, Detroit used the same hotel near the Silverdome that visiting NFL teams stay at for games against the Detroit Lions.

The four competing teams stayed at different hotels in the nearby suburb of Troy. But the Final Four brings in more coaches and officials.

"We've given them four or five different plans," Kinsman said. "For the Final Four, we'd have to utilize hotels in downtown Detroit and Dearborn (both 30 to 40 miles away) and shuttle people between them."

"We've tried to anticipate their every need, overcome any possible objection. We feel we've put our best dress on with this regional."

Shook writes for United Press International.

Basketball coaches to recognize players for academic feats

For the first time in its 61-year history, the National Association of Basketball Coaches will recognize players for academic excellence at its annual convention. Michael Smith of Brigham Young University and Brian Branson of Elon College will be recognized by the NABC April 3 in Kansas City as the first GTE academic all-Americans of the year.

While leading the Cougars to the Western Athletic Conference championship and a berth in the Division I men's play-offs, Smith maintained a 3.670 (4.000 scale) grade-point average in premedicine/pre dentistry.

Branson led Elon to a 20-10 record, shooting 59 percent from the field. His father, Jesse, is the school's career leader in scoring and rebounding.

A fifth-year senior who is enrolled in Elon's graduate school in business administration, Branson sports a perfect (4.000) GPA.

Trivia Time: Who holds the record for best three-point shooting percentage in the Final Four? Answer later.

developer. "We feel that there isn't a better way to create good citizens than through athletics."

The Hayes center is part of the Ohio State University Campaign, which is attempting to raise $350 million in private support for academic, research and student programs at the university. Through February, the campaign had received gifts and pledges in excess of $262 million.

Raycom Sports and Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions have extended their agreement with the Atlantic Coast Conference to produce and

Speaking of Raycom, one could argue that only NCAA Productions, which handles details for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship's preliminary-round telecasts, had a busier time this season.

Certainly, the latter's ability to produce telecasts of 32 first-round games in less than 48 hours is quite an accomplishment. But so is Raycom's production of 31 games in 54 hours (primarily conference post-season action) beginning March 11.

That day, 15 games were shown to audiences in five regions in only 14 hours. The weekend action required six mobile production trucks and satellite-uplink units, and access to seven transponders on three different orbiting satellites for signal transmission.

More than 1,500 Atlanta-area television viewers believe sports agents who deal with student-athletes should be regulated by a state agency, according to a viewer poll conducted by WXIA-TV, an NBC affiliate.

Michelle K. Russo, WXIA administrative news assistant, said viewers responded to the question, "Should sports agents who recruit college players be regulated by a state agency?"

Russo said the station received 2,695 calls—1,525 (56.6 percent) in support of state regulation. "We informed our viewers that we would forward these results to (Georgia) Lt. Governor Zell Miller and the NCAA," Russo said.

Much attention has been paid to the effects of the three-point shot in college basketball. Undoubtedly, Aurora University guard Brad Block like the three-pointer.

In a February 20 game at Rockford College, Block hit 10 three-pointers in a row to key an 82-77 Aurora victory. "It was an incredible performance," said Aurora coach Don Holler.

"I wasn't really aware that it was happening because Brad spread those 10 baskets out over the course of the game. Still, it was incredible, since he was playing away from our home baskets on a court that he had never played on before. It was one of the most awesome shooting displays I have ever seen."

Assistant A.D.

Assistant Athletics Director for Development. The State University of New York, at Buffalo, seeks an Assistant Athletics Director for Development with experience, organizational skills and proven record of fund-raising within a university athletics program. The Director of Development will be a staff member of the Division of Athletics and report directly to the Director of Athletics. The development office will assist the Director of Athletics in the areas of program development by coordinating fund-raising, establishing specific annual and long-range capital campaign, designing programs of interest to alumni, friends, corporations and others, in serving as liaison between athletics and the University Foundation. Recently, University at Buffalo was approved to compete at the NCAA Division II level in sixteen intercollegiate sports with football at Division III. The University's commitment to intercollegiate athletics rests on a desire to Steve Alford hit seven of 10 three-pointers (.700) to key the Hoosiers' 74-73 victory over Syracuse.

Calvin College student-athletes are lifting weights for charity. As was reported in an earlier Briefly column, the National Strength and Conditioning Association has enlisted the aid of student-athletes like those at Calvin for its "LiftAmerica" fund-raising program, which benefits Special Olympics.

Janna Ter Molen, professor of physical education at Calvin, is responsible for "LiftAmerica" coming to the Grand Rapids, Michigan, we got the chance to have the event here," she said in a school news release, "I thought it would be a good opportunity for all the people who use Calvin's weight room."

By collecting pledges on a per-pound-lifted basis, Molen said approximately 40 students hope to raise $2,000.

More Report Cards: Wake Forest University student-athlete Chip Rives is in the news again—this time as one of three recipients of postgraduate scholarships from the Atlantic Coast Conference. Rives was joined by Gavin Gaynor of North Carolina State University and Marlene Mainland of Georgia Institute of Technology. Rives gained national attention for his "Santa's Helper" charity program. He was named winner of the first Bob James Scholarship, given in honor of the late ACC commissioner. Gaynor received the Jim Weaver Scholarship, which is named in memory of the late Jim Weaver, ACC commissioner from 1954 through July 1970. Mainland picked up the Marie James Scholarship, which honors the memory of the late wife of former commissioner James.

Rives already is enrolled in Wake Forest's MBA program. Gaynor, an all-conference distance runner, maintained a 3.890 (4.000 scale) grade-point average in pulp and paper technology and chemical engineering. Mainland posted a 3.900 GPA in mechanical engineering while earning four letters as a member of the Georgia Tech women's basketball team.

Richard E. Szlasa, Drew University director of athletics, has announced that 52 student-athletes were named to the student-athlete honor roll for the fall 1987 semester. Each honoree maintained at least a 3.400 (4.000 scale) GPA during the fall—and five did so while playing two varsity sports.

Brad Tufts, Bucknell University sports information director, reports that five student-athletes from the school were elected to the East Coast Conference scholar-athlete team for winter sports in balloting by league-member SIDs. Included were basketball players Mike Butts and Jen Walz, wrestler Ed Curran, track athlete Ken Sevinsky, and swimmer Deb Thomas.

Six University of Delaware student-athletes posted perfect (4.000) GPAs during the fall 1987 semester, according to Edgar N. Johnson, Delaware athletics director. The perfect half-dozen were Laura LeRoy (women's tennis player/physical education major), Andrea Bradley (field hockey and lacrosse/physical education), Jim Ippolito (track/plant science), Bryan Lennon (track/arts and sciences), Brad Sample (track/history) and Missy Hukill (field hockey/physical education).

Johnson also noted that 158 Delaware student-athletes posted GPAs of 3.000 or better during the fall. "We believe strongly in the student-athlete concept," he said, "and the coaches emphasize to their teams that classwork comes first. The fact that nearly one-third of our (intercollegiate athletics) program's participants were able to earn a B-or-better average while juggling the extra time demands of intercollegiate athletics speaks well of the individual and of our program."

Positive drug tests at 1.7 percent at Clemson since '85

Thirty-seven of 2,171 Clemson University student-athletes have tested positive for drugs, some of them more than once, since the school began its testing program in 1985, university officials said March 29.

In all, there were 56 positive tests, but there was no explanation of how many athletes had tested positive for drugs more than once, other than a statement that no one had tested positive more than once in the same academic year.

The school said some athletes had been suspended, the Associated Press reported.

The report said Clemson had tested 2,171 athletes in all sports since the program began.

Byron Harder, a team doctor, said he was not impressed that only 1.7 percent of those tested had positive results.

"We would like it to be zero. We're not the least bit happy with it," he said.

10-year athletics development plan paying off at Troy State

By Paul Newberry

Troy State University is an undisputed power in NCAA Division II, but it wasn't that way when Robert E. Stewart arrived in 1974 as athletics director.

"A one-sport program—football," is how Stewart describes Troy State's athletics department 14 years ago.

Not anymore. With Stewart at the helm, the 12,000-student institution has filled its trophy case with nine NCAA championships in four sports.

The Trojans have made Division

Fans want more women's basketball

An NCAA poll conducted during the first round of the Division I men's basketball play-offs regarding women's basketball on television elicited more than 71,000 responses. Some 40,100 of those fans indicated they would like to see more women's basketball on television.

"We are pleasantly surprised by the level of interest generated by this poll," said NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz.

"While it was by no means a scientific exercise, the results show that 56 percent of what is probably a mostly male audience indicated that they would like to see more women's basketball on television.

"Those results are not surprising to us; the women's championship game on CBS has consistently won its time period.

"We think the poll justifies a continued effort to strive for more television exposure for women's athletics in general and women's basketball in particular," Schultz said. "The NCAA will continue to seek additional sources of revenue to fund this effort."

game. In blocked shots, Tennessee's Sheila Frost, Long Beach State's Shameil Coleman and her teammate Dana Wilkerson all have seven.

Also high in field-goal shooting are Long Beach State's Smith at 63.2 percent, Louisiana Tech's Venus

Teresa Wither-spoon

Lacy at 61.8 and Gordon at 60.5. Also high in free-throwing are Long Beach State's Cheryl Dowell at 94.1 percent and Tennessee's Lisa Webb at 92.9.

In rebounds, Louisiana Tech's Nora Lewis is averaging 10.0 and Tennessee's Sheila Frost and Lacy both 9.3. Auburn's Ruthie Bolton is second with 20 assists, followed by Tennessee's Dawn Marsh with 18. Marsh also is second in steals at 10; Lewis has eight.

Pairings

It is Tennessee (31-2) vs. Louisiana Tech (30-2) in one semifinal (a rematch of the 1987 final) and Auburn (31-2) vs. Long Beach State (28-5) in the other. The four semifinalists combined are 120-11.

Robert E. Stewart

II their personal kingdom over the past year. Last spring, they won their second straight baseball championship, followed in the fall by the national football crown.

"In 1974, the commitment was made to develop a total program, not just one sport," Stewart said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press.

"At that time, a 10-year plan was submitted to the president—and I know that's a long time—to develop a first-class program at Troy State."

The basketball team, in just its second appearance ever in the Division II national tournament, reached the semifinals before losing to runner-up University of Alaska, Anchorage.

"After many years of seeking to hire quality coaches, which doesn't come overnight, and the recruitment of quality young men and women, we now believe we're enjoying some of the fruits of that master plan that was discussed and put into action many, many years ago," Stewart said.

The men's golf team got the ball rolling with championships in 1976 and '77, but it wasn't until the '80s that Stewart's 10-year plan really began to pay off.

1984 was a banner year, with titles in men's golf, women's golf and football. The women golfers got back to the top in '86, the same year the baseball team won its first championship. The baseball squad repeated last year, and the football team won its second title in four years.

In addition, the Trojans have dominated the Gulf South Conference, winning championships 13 straight years in cross country, seven straight years in men's golf, and six straight years in men's track and field.

"There is no animosity between sports; there is no jealousy among sports," Stewart said. "Our coaches and athletes pull for each other in each sport.... Our football players are pulling for our basketball team as hard as they were pulling for themselves last fall."

That attitude apparently wears off on potential recruits, Stewart said. "When a prospect comes on campus, the best thing you can do is have one of your own athletes tell him how good it is to be at Troy State."

During Stewart's tenure, Troy State has built a running track, lighted football practice fields, a nine-hole championship golf course and tennis courts. The school also has renovated its 1,750-seat baseball field, 12,000-seat football stadium and 3,000-seat basketball arena.

However, there are no athletics dorms at Troy State.

"Our philosophy is the student-athlete should live just like any other student," Stewart said.

Newberry writes for the Associated Press.
