Financial aid presentations set for Orlando Forum

Two speakers and a panel will present financial aid issues at the June 20-21 Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando.

Announced as speakers for that topic—the last of three issues on the June program—are Peter Likins, president of Lehigh University, and Cecil Mackey, former president of Michigan State University and now a professor of economics at that institution.

The panel will be led by Marvin G. Carmichael, director of financial aid at Clemson University and chair of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism. Three other members of that committee will serve on the panel: Judith M. Brame, director of women's athletics, California State University, Northridge; Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive director, Ivy Group, and Diane Tsukamaki, director of financial aid, Lewis and Clark College.

Those four, along with Joseph A. Russo, director of financial aid at the University of Notre Dame, serve on a subcommittee of the financial aid committee that is studying approaches to financial aid based on need in athletics.

The financial aid presentations will take place in the morning session June 21.

Likins will begin the program with a call for basing aid to student-athletes on their demonstrated financial need. He will be followed by Mackey, who intends to make a case for "more realistic" aid limitations than are currently permitted under NCAA legislation. The panel then will present a status report on its study.

After those presentations, delegates at the Forum will discuss the aid issue in seven separate discussion sessions.

The issues

The proper basis for financial aid for student-athletes has been a topic in intercollegiate athletics for decades. The questions generally have included these:

- Should all aid for student-athletes be based on a showing of financial need?
- Should any talent or merit awards be permitted within such a need-based approach?
- Should athletics ability be considered in packaging financial aid within a need-based limitation?
- Should aid be based on need for some sports but not for others?
- At the other extreme, should

Peter Likins

Cecil Mackey

Marvin G. Carmichael

more aid be available for student-athletes, perhaps as a stipend or "laundry money"?

• Should student-athletes be paid?

The study by the subcommittee of the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism includes those questions. It is reviewing such matters as actual cost of attendance at institutions, methods of determining financial need, how aid is generally administered to students, the pressures placed on that system by athletics considerations, and consistent availability of aid from institution to institution.

At times in past years, the Association has voted on varying types of need-based aid proposals, including the concept of awarding tuition and fees based on athletics ability, with all other aid based on need. At the 1976 annual NCAA Convention, Division I narrowly defeated such a proposal, first on a 119-119 tie vote and then 120-112 in a roll-call vote.

The speakers

Likins

A charter member of the Presidents Commission, Likins represents the Division I-AA East region on that body. He has been president

Summer play can affect eligibility

Now that the 50th Final Four is history, summer basketball season has arrived.

Legislation regarding student-athletes' and athletics department staff members' involvement in summer leagues is pretty straightforward—if not well-known. Richard C. Perko, a legislative assistant at the NCAA national office, said that summer-league restrictions governed by Association legislation are easy to learn but important to remember.

"It would be unfortunate if a student-athlete lost any intercollegiate eligibility inadvertently," he noted. "There are only a few rules that athletes, their coaches and athletics department staff members should know about summer leagues and tournaments."

The first, according to Perko, is that legislation governing organized summer competition does not distinguish between a league and a tournament. "Student-athletes are permitted to play in one summer sanctioned league or one sanctioned summer tournament between June 15 and August 31," he explained. "A player cannot, for example, stay at school and play in a summer league but go home for a weekend to play in a tournament. He or she can participate in one league or one tournament, but not one of each."

And those dates are important. "Summer leagues or tournaments may begin before June 15 or end after August 31," Perko noted, "but student-athletes may not be involved outside of that period."

CEOs urged to attend June National Forum

Members of the NCAA Presidents Commission are encouraging chief executive officers at NCAA member institutions to attend the June 20-21 session of the Commission's National Forum in Orlando.

In its spring meeting April 6-7 in Atlanta, the Commission reviewed the plans for the June Forum and agreed to urge their colleagues across the nation to make a serious effort to attend the Forum or to assure that their institutions are appropriately represented.

President Bernard F. Sliger, Florida State University, chair of the Commission's Ad Hoc Committee on the National Forum, told the Commission that a turnout of 500 to 700 is anticipated in Orlando.

The Commission also agreed to review in its fall meeting possible legislation that it may consider sponsoring at the 1989 NCAA Convention, based on the discussions in the National Forum sessions to date. Chancellor John B. Slaughter, University of Maryland, College Park, chair of the Commission, said an agenda of such legislation will be prepared for the Commission's review after the Orlando program.

In addition to reviewing the Forum plans, the Commission's spring meeting covered a wide range of topics, including freshman eligibility, increased communication between the Commission and the NCAA Council, NCAA legislative procedures, implementation of the compliance and enforcement legislation adopted at the June 1985 "integrity" Convention, Division II's version of Bylaw 5-1-(j), current Division III financial aid legislation, and issues involving player agents and the Association's drug-education and drug-testing programs.

The Commission took the following actions in Atlanta:

• Agreed to continue to monitor membership discussions of freshman eligibility, noting that it will be a major topic in the final National Forum session in January 1989.

• Supported in concept the establishment of a seminar at each NCAA Convention for new chief executive officers or possibly for all CEOs attending the Convention. Chase N. Peterson, president of the University of Utah, was named to chair a subcommittee to develop such a program, for review by the Commission in June. Others on the subcommittee are Tyrone R. Richmond, North Carolina Central University; Stanley G. Rives, Eastern Illinois University, and Walter B. Waetjen, Cleveland State University.

• Approved a procedure by which the Commission members will nominate and vote by mail to select a replacement for Slaughter as Commission chair, effective after the June Forum. Slaughter, who holds the Atlantic Coast Conference position (Division I-A) on the Commission, will become president of Occidental College (Division III) August 1.

• Elected the following Commission members to serve as vice-chairs of their division subcommittees: Gail Fullerton, San Jose State University, Division I; Michael J. Adanti, Southern Connecticut State University, Division II, and the Rev. William J. Byron, Catholic University, Division III.

at Lehigh since 1982.

A native Californian, Likins received a bachelor's degree at Stanford University and a master's at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, both in civil engineering. He earned his Ph.D. in engineering mechanics at Stanford.

He has been a member of the faculties at the University of California, Los Angeles, and Columbia University and was a development engineer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of the California Institute of Technology.

Prior to becoming president at Lehigh, Likins was provost and served as dean of the school of engineering and applied science at Columbia.

Mackey

Mackey served as president of Michigan State University from 1979 to 1985 and has been a professor of economics there since 1979, emphasizing the areas of trade regulation and antitrust policy.

He was president and professor of law at Texas Tech University from 1976 to 1979 and served as president of the University of South Florida from 1971 to 1976. Prior to the South Florida position, he was vice-president for administration and then executive vice-president from 1969 to 1971 at Florida State University, where he also was a law professor.

Mackey also has served on the faculties at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa (law); the University of Illinois, Champaign (economics), and the U.S. Air Force Academy, where he was one of four U.S. Air Force officers who planned and organized the economics curriculum for the academy.

In addition to his experience in higher education, Mackey has been assistant counsel for the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly, director of the Office of

Judith
M.
Brame

Policy Development for the Federal Aviation Agency, director of the Office of Transportation Policy for the Commerce Department, and assistant secretary for policy development for the U.S. Department of Transportation.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in economics at Alabama and a Ph.D. at Illinois, concentrating on economic theory, government relation to business, history of economic thought, and finance. He then earned a law degree at Alabama and also studied at Harvard Law School.

Carmichael

Holder of bachelor's and master's degrees from Clemson University, Carmichael has been director of financial aid at the institution since 1975.

Prior to assuming that position, he was assistant director of financial aid for two years and agricultural science associate for two years. His bachelor's degree is in agricultural economics and his master's in educational administration and supervision.

In addition to chairing the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, he is a member of the national council of the College Scholarship Service, a past member of the national council of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and a past president of the Southern Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Diane
maki

Brame

A former member of the NCAA Council, Brame has been a member of the faculty at California State University, Northridge, since 1974 and director of women's athletics since 1978. She served as head women's basketball coach for 10 years.

She was the primary organizer of the Southern California Athletic Association, a six-member women's athletics conference, in 1976 and served as the first president of that conference. In 1981, she was instrumental in merging the men's and women's conferences of eight institutions into the California Collegiate Athletic Association, which she then served as copresident in 1986-87.

Brame holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of California, Berkeley, and a Ph.D. from the University of Southern California. She was on the faculties at the University of California, Davis, and California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, before joining the staff at Northridge.

Orleans

Orleans was announced last week as one of the Forum's primary speakers on the topic of NCAA procedures, and he will be doing double duty as a member of the financial aid panel.

Jeffrey
H.
Orleans

He has been executive director of the Council of Ivy Group Presidents since September 1984 and was special assistant to the president of the University of North Carolina system for seven years prior to that. He also has worked for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the civil-rights division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Orleans holds bachelor's and law degrees from Yale University.

Tsukamaki

A past president of the Western Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, Tsukamaki also is a former member of the national council of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and currently serves on that organization's Task Force on Athletics Issues.

She has been director of financial aid at Lewis and Clark College since 1981. Prior to that, she was financial aid coordinator at Linn-Benton Community College in Oregon. She also worked in the financial aid office at Oregon State University while a student there.

Tsukamaki earned two degrees at Oregon State, a bachelor's in English education and a master's in college student-services administration.

Earlier speakers

Named earlier as speakers for the June Forum:

• NCAA membership structure: NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz; Charles M. Neinas, executive director, College Football Association, and Kenneth J. Weller, president, Central College (Iowa).

• NCAA legislative and interpretative procedures: Orleans; Lattie F. Coor, president, University of Vermont, and NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn University.

Passage of stipend measure worries Huskers' Osborne

By Steve Sinclair
Omaha World-Herald

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, head football coach Tom Osborne said he is concerned about the legislature's approval of a bill to require payment of a stipend to Cornhusker football players.

"I think that a lot of people believe that since four other states have to join in the legislation, this would be totally harmless," Osborne said. "Yet, it is a bill, if it were passed, that would still make players ineligible to play under NCAA rules." NCAA rules prohibit schools from paying athletes.

The bill would not take effect until four other states with Big Eight Conference schools pass legislation that would classify football players as employees, compensated like other university employees and entitled to employee rights and benefits.

If the Nebraska measure took effect in its present form, Osborne said, Nebraska probably would be limited to a schedule of Big Eight opponents.

"We could not play in the Kickoff Classic," he said. "We could not play UCLA, Arizona State, Utah State or Nevada-Las Vegas. And we could not play in a bowl game. We could not play on TV as it's now structured."

Osborne said Federal legislation probably would force athletics departments to pay stipends to all athletes, not just football players.

Osborne said he called Chancellor Martin Massengale before calling senators.

"I let him know what my concerns were," he said. "I was not in any way trying to subvert him or the university. I'm very supportive of the chancellor's position, which is basically neutral."

Senators approved the bill, 26-23, April 8.

"I'm certainly philosophically behind the idea that something more should be done for the players. I don't really believe this is necessarily the best way to get it accomplished."

Osborne said he supports changing NCAA rules regarding the Pell Grant, a Federally funded program for college students. NCAA rules limit the amount of Pell Grant money athletes can receive.

The passage of a bill on an NCAA matter, Osborne said, sets bad precedent. "Who's to say that some legislature won't want to abolish scholarship limits and have unlimited coaching staffs?"

He also said that he and other coaches each year sign statements that they will uphold NCAA rules "and this bill, as written, is in violation of NCAA rules."

1988 Column No. 15

NCAA Bylaws 3-3(e) through (I)— contest exemptions

The following revises the information contained in 1987 Column No. 43.

Division I contest exemptions—basketball

Once every four years:

Not more than one contest (or four contests as scheduled on a single regular-season trip to Alaska or Hawaii) or one tournament (not to exceed three contests) against or sponsored by an active member institution located in Alaska or Hawaii.

Once every four years:

Either

1. Not more than one contest (or four contests as scheduled on a single regular-season trip) in Puerto Rico or one tournament (not to exceed four contests) conducted in Puerto Rico.

or

2. Preseason NIT. Once every four years:

Foreign tour (an institution shall not engage in such a foreign tour in any academic year or the summer thereafter in which it utilizes either the Alaska/Hawaii, the Puerto Rico or the preseason NIT exception).

Every year:

1. One contest against a foreign team in the United States.

and either

2. A contest against a "club" team of the ABAUSA.

or

3. Tip-off classic. Example of exemptions in combination:

In a particular year, a member institution may exempt from counting:

1. Alaska/Hawaii tournament (cannot exempt contests in Alaska/Hawaii for another four-year period).

2. A contest against a foreign team in the United States.

3. A contest against a "club" team of the ABAUSA.

Division I contest exemptions—all sports other than basketball

Every year:

1. Alumni game (except football).

2. Foreign team in the United States (except football).

3. Any game or games played in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, either against or under the sponsorship of an active member institution located in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico.

Division II contest exemptions—basketball

Every year:

One of these:

1. Not more than one contest or tournament (not to exceed four contests) against or sponsored by an active member institution located in Alaska, Hawaii or Puerto Rico.

or

2. A contest against a "club" team of the ABAUSA.

or

3. A contest against a foreign team in Canada.

or

4. Tip-off classic. (If an institution uses one of the four exemptions listed above, it cannot participate in an institutional foreign tour that year.)

Every year:

A contest against a foreign team in the United States.

Division II contest exemptions—all sports other than basketball

Every year:

1. Any game or games played in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, either against or sponsored by an active member institution located in Alaska, Hawaii or Puerto Rico.

2. A contest against a foreign team in the United States (except in football).

Division III contest exemptions—basketball

Every year:

One of these:

1. A contest against a "club" team of the ABAUSA.

or

2. Tip-off classic.

or

3. A contest against a foreign team in the United States.

Division III contest exemptions—all sports (including basketball)

Once every four years:

Either

1. Not more than one contest (or four contests if scheduled on a single regular-season trip to Alaska, Hawaii or Puerto Rico) or tournament (not to exceed four contests) against or sponsored by an active member institution located in Alaska, Hawaii or Puerto Rico.

or

2. Foreign tour.

Every year:

A contest against a foreign team in the United States (except football).

NCAA awards postgraduate scholarships in basketball

Postgraduate scholarships of $4,000 each—double the amount awarded last year—have been presented to 20 basketball players—10 each for men and women—at NCAA member institutions.

Beginning this academic year, the Association annually will award 100 such scholarships, an increase of 10 over last year. In addition to the basketball scholarships, 25 awards have been presented to student-athletes in football, and 55 awards will be given in other sports in which the Association conducts national-championship competition.

Including the 1988 basketball awards listed below, the NCAA postgraduate scholarship program has presented scholarships worth $2,844,000 to 1,849 student-athletes since 1964. To qualify, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum 3.000 grade-point average on a 4.000 scale—or the equivalent—and perform with distinction in a varsity sport.

Following are the accomplishments of the 1988 postgraduate scholarship winners in basketball.

Men's Division I

Keith Douglas Balderston (University of Oregon, 3.630 grade-point average in biology)—Among his activities, Balderston is a member of the big brother/little brother program, the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, the Friars Honor Society and the Mortar Board Honor Society. He also served as a student-athlete representative on the NCAA Recruiting Committee. He twice was an academic all-America candidate, received all-Pacific-10 honors for two consecutive years, and received the Carl Greve Academic Award in 1986 and 1987. Balderston owns a .534 field-goal percentage, ranking him in the top three all-time field-goal percentage leaders at Oregon. He plans to continue his studies at Oregon this fall in medicine.

Jeffrey Lee Harris (Illinois State University, 3.400 grade-point average in chemistry)—Harris is active in the Chemistry Club, the Medical Sciences Club, the Phi Eta Sigma Honor Society and the Alpha Chi Honor Society. He also participated in a local fund-raiser for the Multiple Sclerosis Society. A three-year starter for Illinois, Harris became the school's all-time leader in three-point field goals after leading the Missouri Valley Conference in those honors this year with 93 three-point field goals for a .489 percentage. He also led the conference with a .902 free-throw percentage and finished a top national leader in that category this season. Upon graduation, Harris will attend Indiana University School of Medicine with hopes of specializing in orthopedic surgery upon graduation.

Dave Bruce Sieger (University of Oklahoma, 3.080 grade-point average in electrical engineering)—Sieger was named to the Big Eight Conference all-academic team three times and was named to the national dean's list for the 1986-87 academic year. Also, he was named to the engineering dean's honor roll in 1985 and 1988. Much of his spare time has been spent speaking against drug abuse at area elementary schools. Sieger was instrumental in his team's performance in the 1988 Final Four after contributing an average 10.7 points per game during the regular season. His performance led him to be selected to the Final Four all-tournament team. He plans to continue studies in electrical engineering beginning in the spring of 1989.

Ray Willis Jr. (Montana State University, 3.450 grade-point average in speech communication)—In his junior year at Montana State, Willis was selected by a student/faculty committee to Septemviri, an honor society for the top seven senior students at the university. He recently was selected president of that organization. Willis is a Rhodes Scholar candidate and has been nominated by his academic department for the Mellon Fellowship in the Humanities. The team's most valuable defensive player the past four seasons, he received all-Big Sky Conference honors in his junior and senior years. He hopes to begin work toward a master of arts degree this summer and eventually enter the advertising/public relations field.

Men's Divisions II-III

John Paul Andrejko (University of Scranton, 3.370 grade-point average in marketing)—Andrejko served as one of two students selected to the athletics policy committee, an administrative/faculty group at the university. He also was active in the Marketing Club and served as a dormitory counselor. Among his 1988 accomplishments, Andrejko repeated as a third-team academic all-America choice. He will continue his education at Scranton this fall while working toward a master's of business administration.

John Arthur Carmello (Albany, State

Keith Balderston

University of New York, 3.920 grade-point average in business administration/finance)—As well as being named to the dean's list several times, Carmello was honored as a member of Beta Gamma Sigma national business honor society and Signum Laudis, Albany's honor society. He was named a District I all-America, was chosen to the Capital District all-tournament team in 1987, and was the leading scorer and most valuable player of the Dolphin Classic in 1987. The three-year letter-winner averaged 18.1 points per game in his senior season and ranks as a top guard in school history. Carmello has plans to further his education in the field of business administration beginning in the fall of 1988.

Kevin Daniel Locke (Denison University, 3.799 grade-point average in political science)—Locke's several activities include serving as the Mentor Program coordinator for the Mortar Board Honor Society and participating on the subcommittee for the Denison Lecture Series. He also was assistant sports information director in the school's athletics department. Honors he received include the Denison Presidential Scholarship, the Denison University Scholarship and the Alpha Tau Omega national true merit award. He recently was named to the academic all-America first team for the second consecutive year, making him the only repeater in the college division. A three-year starter, Locke accumulated 371 career field goals and 373 career rebounds, scored in double figures 38 times and ranked second in free throw percentage in the North Coast Athletic Conference. He hopes to enter law school and focus on criminal law.

John Michael Nilles [Regis College (Colorado), 3.706 grade-point average in mathematics/computer science)—The 6-7 team captain had the squad's highest field-goal percentage and led teammates in total rebounds in the 1986-87 season. He finished the 1988 season with a field-goal percentage of .615, after breaking the school's field-goal percentage record for one game after going 14 for 14 against Chadron State College. Outside activities include participation in Pride, a Denver community development project. He wishes to follow the graduate program in computer science with an emphasis in telecommunications at the University of Colorado this fall.

Men's at large

Brian William Coderre (Illinois Wesleyan University, 3.875 grade-point average in French and accounting)—Coderre's academic awards include membership in the Blue Key Junior and Senior Honorary for Men, the Alpha Mu Gamma Foreign Language society and Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He also served on the executive board of the Accounting Club and was active as a eucharistic minister at a local parish. Accomplishments on the court include 584 career rebounds (seventh in school history) and 1,132 career points. He achieved District 5 academic all-America status in 1986 and 1988, and was a first-team all-America choice in 1987. He will pursue finance, international business or organizational behavior at Northwestern University's J. L. Kellogg Graduate School of Management.

Stephen Douglas Kerr (University of Arizona, 3.026 grade-point average in general studies)—Kerr was named to the academic all-Pacific-10 in 1986 and was awarded the university's Golden Eagle award for maintaining a grade-point average above 3.000 for four consecutive years. A four-year letter-winner, Kerr is the conference leader in three-point field goals. He currently is enrolled in the sports administration program at Arizona.

Men's alternates

Edward William Hellman, Western Michigan University; Brian Ralph Quinnett, Washington State University; Scott Michael Nagy, Delta State University; and Curtis Daniel Reimer, Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Women's Division I

Tracy Lynne Cheek (Georgia State University, 3.910 grade-point average in comprehensive business education)—Cheek has been active in the Mortar Board Honor Society, the Golden Key National Honor Society and served as a senator in the College of Education and on the university's Athletic Association Board of Trustees. She was the recipient of various awards, including the Henry T. Malone Sophomore Award and the Leadership Performance Scholarship. A 1988 cocaptain, Cheek led teammates in scoring with an average of 19.5 points per game. She also led in turnovers (113) and steals (61). She was the recipient of the "Peach of an Athlete" award in 1988 and earned honorable mention all-conference in 1987. She hopes to begin working toward a master's degree in business education at Georgia State next winter.

Jane Winn Dalton (Appalachian State University, 3.880 grade-point average in management)—Honor society memberships for the three-year team cocaptain include Beta Gamma Sigma, Phi Kappa Phi, Alpha Chi and Gamma Beta Phi. Dalton also served as a student representative to the Athletic Council and represented women's basketball at the Appalachian State Director's Table. She holds the school record in career assists (636), most assists in a season (174) and the Southern Conference record for tournament assists (11). She will begin studies this fall in business administration with an emphasis in management.

Pamela Jean Gradoville (Creighton University, 3.500 grade-point average in nursing)—Not only a standout in basketball, Gradoville lettered four years in golf and was selected that team's most valuable player in 1987. She is a member of the National Honor Society of Nursing and donated time visiting high schools to recruit for the Creighton nursing school. She also assisted at several basketball camps at area high schools. Gradoville recently was selected as a 1988 regional academic all-America. In addition to leading teammates in scoring (21.3 points per game), she became the school's all-time leading scorer with 2,024 points in her career as a Lady Jay. She hopes to follow a graduate education in nursing to develop her interest in neonatal and pediatric nursing.

Jolynn Anna Schneider (University of Iowa, 3.150 grade-point average in communication studies)—Schneider served on several committees of the university's Board in Control of Athletics and on the Women's Intercollegiate Sports Committee. Other activities include involvement as a eucharistic minister/lecturer for the Newman Center and as national chair for Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Schneider was selected to and started for the Athletes in Action team that toured Europe in the summer of 1986. Among her career highlights, she achieved a .781 free-throw percentage for the past season, with 7.8 points and 6.3 rebounds per game. She plans to begin graduate studies next fall and still is considering several areas of study.

Women's Divisions II-III

Jessica Ann Beachy [Concordia College (Moorhead), 3.571 grade-point average in biology/physical education)—Among the many honors Beachy earned this past season, she was named to the Division III championship all-tournament team and to the first-team all-America selected by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. Activities off the court include serving on the Senior Activities Committee and membership in the Fellow of Christian Athletes. Beachy scored more than 2,000 points in her four-year career, making her Concordia's leading career scorer. She hopes to begin studies in biology with an emphasis in physiology at either the University of Minnesota or St. Cloud State University this fall.

Catherine Ann Christensen (Wellesley College, 3.914 grade-point average in mathematics/computer science)—A Rhodes Scholar candidate, Christensen earned the Freshman Distinction award and the Katharine Malone Scholarship, which is given to one outstanding Wellesley senior each year. Her athletic abilities extended to cross country, where she was elected captain for two years and went to the Division III championships in 1987. In the fall of 1989, Christensen will begin graduate studies in either mathematics or computer science.

Ann Lynnette Osborne (Ohio Wesleyan University, 3.860 grade-point average in economics management/accounting)—In addition to basketball, Osborne was captain of the university's tennis team for two years, playing both singles and doubles. She maintained memberships in the Omicron Delta Kappa leadership honor society and served as vice president of the Omicron Delta Epsilon economic honor society. She is a four-time all-North Coast Athletic Conference selection and was a district academic all-America choice. She is interested in furthering her education in accounting and economics management with an emphasis in finance.

Tara Vaughn Tessier (South Dakota State University, 3.910 grade-point average in English)—Tessier managed to find considerable time to devote to outside interests, including the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the Volunteers for Youth program. She was a big sister in the Volunteers For Youth (VFY) program for four years and served as an FCA camp counselor two summers. She was a member of the Phi Kappa Phi and Kappa Delta Pi honor societies. She was chosen North Central Conference player of the week in 1988 and named to the academic all-district and all-conference teams four times. She led teammates by scoring 361 points for the 1988 season. Tessier wishes to pursue a master's degree in English.

Women's at large

Amy L. Acker (Pace University, 3.890 grade-point average in management)—Acker is a member of the Alpha Chi national honor society, was selected to the Phi Eta Sigma national freshman honor society and served as treasurer of the Business and Management Society at Pace. In 1987, she was an Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference scholar-athlete and an academic all-America choice. She holds school records for most assists in a season (212) and most assists in a career (655). Also, she ranks second in all-time scoring at the university. She will begin studies in human resource management in September 1988.

Dawn Marie Roselli (Hamilton College, 3.400 grade-point average in biochemistry)—Roselli was active as a biology/physics tutor and was a teacher's assistant in biology laboratory and symbolic logic. She was chosen to receive academic all-America first-team honors this year, was an all-tournament selection twice in 1987 and was an East Coast Athletic Conference athlete of the week this past season. The 5-4 point guard holds Hamilton's record for career assists at 303. She also was captain of the women's softball team from 1985 to 1988, where she held down the position of shortstop. She will begin studies this August at the University of Virginia School of Medicine.

Women's alternates

Amy Suzette Cartner, Wake Forest University; Anne Elizabeth Cook, Southeast Missouri State University; Hilarie H. Cranmer, Hofstra University; Amy Kristine Torczon, California State University, Fullerton.

New weight-training building planned

The University of Northern Colorado will build a new athletics weight-training facility, athletics director Robert A. Oliver has announced. The new facility will be added to the southeast corner of Butler-Hancock Hall, which houses the school's athletics programs.

"We have made a commitment to success at the University of Northern Colorado. To compete in the conferences we are in, we need an improved weight-training facility," Oliver said.

A capital campaign, started last fall, has raised nearly $70,000 for the anticipated $120,000 project. The money for the facility, Oliver said, will be raised entirely from corporations, businesses and personal donations.

Plans call for a weight room of approximately 2,400 square feet, with modern equipment.

Construction is scheduled to begin later this year.

Bill advances

The Mississippi State Senate has approved financing for a $7 million football stadium at Alcorn State University.

There were only two dissenting votes, and the measure now heads to the House.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Lynn Posey of Union Church. It requires that the state issue $3.5 million in bonds in each of the next two fiscal years to fund the project.

If approved, the new stadium, which would include a track, would be ready in time for the 1989 season.

Williams calls for appeal process in fighting rule

Ohio State University coach Gary Williams welcomes new restrictions to curb fights in college basketball games, although he worries whether the rule is fair to players.

"I think what everybody wants is for a player to think a second before he takes a punch at somebody. (The rules committee) was forced to do something," he told the Associated Press.

The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee has authorized a series of penalties to be levied for fighting. Season-long suspensions without appeal could be levied in some cases.

Fights made headlines throughout the past season. There were none during the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship after NCAA Executive Director

Gary Williams

Richard D. Schultz warned that any player fighting would be suspended for the rest of the tournament.

Edward S. Steitz, secretary-editor of the committee, said the antifighting rules fall into the category of playing rules. "The bylaws of the NCAA Manual cover the fact that you shall abide by all official NCAA playing rules," he said, adding that those schools opposed to such no-appeal legislation have the option of leaving the organization.

"Members of the NCAA are voluntary members," Steitz said. "They are not pressured to be a part of that particular organization. . . . If they want to drop out from the NCAA, that's their choice, an institutional choice."

Williams called for an appeal process and gave an example.

"What happens if you get punched on the court and you've already been involved in a fight? What happens if somebody comes out on the court solely to start an altercation with you?" Williams said.

"To suspend somebody for a full year when there could possibly be some provocation, well, there should be an appeal."

"We're not talking about the outcome of a basketball game here. We're talking about the career of a young man. If a mistake was made, it should be possible to rectify it. I would like to see an appeal available."

The policy specified that a player involved in a fight will be ejected from the game and placed on probation. A second fight leads to ejection from that game and his team's next game. A third fight means suspension for the rest of the season.

Kansas State University coach Lon Kruger said there "would be a need to define what constitutes a fight so we can be consistent with enforcement. Does a shove one game get the same thing as an all-out fisticuff in the next?"

Steitz said that officials could, use television replays when available to identify those involved in a fight. But he said even if game films show that officials made an obvious error, a ruling—even a season-long suspension—would stand.

"We're saying to the officials, 'Make sure you have definite information. Don't come up with any I think-so-type rulings,'" Steitz said. "We'd rather have somebody get away with something than accuse somebody or have somebody go to the suspended list. But a playing rule in the NCAA is not appealable."

Strike up the band—on television

To the Editor:

Conspicuously absent from college football coverage on TV has been any semblance of coverage of the half-time shows. To see a marching band perform, one must travel to the games and, more than likely, view the performance from a less-than-desirable location in the stadium, unless you happen to have tickets between the 20-yard lines.

As I recall in the not too distant past, when the gun sounded to end the first half of play, the teams would run off the field, and the marching band representing the visiting team would perform its various drills and maneuvers that it had undoubtedly spend many hours practicing the previous week. When it had concluded its program, it would relinquish the field to the home-team band, and it gave a similar performance to the delight of the fans in the stadium.

These shows were artfully done and beautifully presented. Even the television audience could enjoy some of the half-time show. With the exception of a few interruptions for commercials and usually some interesting and informative shots of the campuses of the opposing teams, a large portion of the half-time was aired for the viewing audience.

I feel that the marching bands deserve a few minutes of coverage at half time as a reward for the many hours of practice (sometimes when the temperature exceeds 100 degrees in August and September) and for their dedication to the art. All of the bands probably have reason to complain about the lack of recognition of their efforts, but I feel a particular injustice was dealt the University of Texas Longhorn Marching Band at the preseason opening game between Texas and Auburn.

The football team traveled by plane from Austin, Texas, to Auburn, Alabama; but for economic reasons, the 375-member band had to make the 1,000 mile trip to and from the game by bus. This is a 20-hour ride each way; but in light of the fact that the game would be broadcast by ESPN, band members were eager to show the viewing audience why they were the 1985 recipients of the Sudler Trophy for being the top college marching band in America.

Unfortunately, this was not to be, as not one second of coverage was given to the band performance. In fact, the network did not even acknowledge that the band had made the trip.

Except for a brief interview with a guest analyst and several commercials, the entire half time was taken up by a sportscaster giving minute-by-minute updates on how the top 20 powerhouse teams were faring against their opponents. For example, No. 1 Oklahoma was "stomping" North Texas, 69-14; No. 2 Nebraska was "trouncing" Utah State, 56-12 and Western Carolina was being "crushed" by No. 9 Clemson, 43-0.

With the exception of the loyal supporters and alumni of the "Stompers," "Trouncers" and "Crushers," a large percentage of the viewing audience probably shares the opinion of this writer: Who cares.

At one time, being a coach was considered part-time job

By Lesley Visser
The Boston Globe
From a column

The nature of coaching college basketball has changed over the years. In the beginning, it wasn't even a full-time job. When James Naismith, who invented the game 97 years ago, taught physical education at Kansas, he coached on the side. One day, he talked to Forrest (Phog) Allen about Allen's plans.

Allen said, "Dr. Naismith, I'd like to be a coach," recalled Allen's son, See At one time, page 13

"Yes (I favor spring football practice). It affords the opportunity for the younger player to continue his maturation and development. It offers a time free of pressure when you can experiment."

many families—a dubious assumption many colleges encourage prospects to make.

"Year after year of steady, steep increases in tuition have just about exhausted the good excuses colleges have been using to justify their higher bills. 'Higher energy costs' doesn't work well anymore. 'Catch-up on faculty salaries to stay competitive' is getting worn out. 'Computer costs' has been heard before."

"What colleges are less candid about are increases in costs caused by soaring tuition itself. For example, recruiting expenses are up sharply as colleges turn to sophisticated marketing techniques to keep or expand their market share of students in these years of shrinking college-age cohorts."

Digger Phelps, head men's basketball coach

"I think what has happened (as a contributor to fighting in college basketball games) is that certain officials in certain conferences let the players play early; then, that gets out of hand and leads to fighting."

"I say if rough play starts early in the game, the officials ought to hit the players with a double foul and tell them the next time, they're out of the game. They have the right to do that as officials. The rules're there."

"But now, they let things go that lead to fighting."

New academic rule could put Nebraska athletes 'in a bind'

Omaha World-Herald

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, football coach Tom Osborne says Nebraska might be the only school in the country with a rule that keeps students from reinstating themselves in summer school if suspended for academic reasons.

The rule, adopted by the faculty senate, applies to athletes and non-athletes. Osborne said it has put athletes "in a little bit of a bind" and has led him to hold a few players out of spring drills as a precaution.

"We're the only school in the Big Eight that has a rule like that," Osborne said. "And, as far as I know, we're the only one in the country that doesn't allow summer school to get yourself squared away academically."

William J. Lewis, president of the faculty senate, said, "There shouldn't be a belief that it is OK to do poorly two semesters in a row and put off making up for it until the summer."

Lewis said he is willing to review the rule, or any other rules, "to see if they are accomplishing what we want them to establish."

Lewis, associate professor of mathematics, said the athletics department should be willing for students to pass up spring football to bring their grades up.

"In order for a student to have played football last fall," Lewis said, "I assume he was in good standing at the end of the summer."

"If he did very poorly in the fall semester to the extent that he was placed on probation, a solution is simply not to play spring football and concentrate on academics to reflect a belief that academics is a primary reason a student comes to the university.

"I don't think the athletics program should believe it has suffered a great loss if it has to tell one young man, 'We don't want you spending your time on athletics. We want you spending your time studying.'"

Some players missed the first day of spring practice because of academic problems, but their absence was because the coaches were being cautious, Osborne said. He didn't identify the players.

An NCAA rule states that an athlete must take 12 hours each semester to remain eligible. The athlete must pass 24 hours a year, and all must count toward a degree.

In the past, Nebraska athletes could use credits earned during the summer to fill the necessary 24 hours a year.

"A normal student who has a bad semester and is worried about getting bounced out of school the second semester can cut back to six hours, have a good grade-point average and get reinstated," Osborne said. "But our guys can't cut back. They have to take 12 hours."

Osborne said he didn't think anyone was out to victimize athletes when the rule prohibiting the use of summer credit hours to keep from being suspended was passed.

"It applies to all students," Osborne said. "I think when they passed it, they didn't realize what it did to athletes. I think there's a good deal of concern on the campus about what it does to nonathletes as well."

A student suspended for academic reasons must sit out at least one semester before he can apply for readmittance.

"The problem with athletes," Osborne said, "is that if you're not in school for consecutive semesters, you aren't eligible. For all practical purposes, your career is done."

"If you're out after this semester, you wouldn't be in school in the fall. When you come back, you wouldn't have been in school for two consecutive semesters, so you would be ineligible the following year, too, under the NCAA rule.

"There are very few kids who can afford to be out for two years and then come back and play. You just can't do it."

"We have an institutional rule, plus the NCAA rules, and we're trying to meet all of them."

"The question becomes," Lewis said, "when should the university change its rules or make special exceptions for the student who is being placed under a more difficult situation by some exterior body?"

"It's difficult if the NCAA establishes x, y or z that takes effect simply because you are carrying out your university rules."

"If we turn the situation around, who would support an idea that we should have one set of standards for students and an easier or more lenient set of standards for athletes? I doubt people would line up to support that idea."

The faculty senate passed the rules last spring, Lewis said, to clarify university standards for probation and suspension. The rules became effective in January.

"It may be the case that they are hard rules," he said. "Then, again, it may be that they are incredibly fair and reasonable rules."

Osborne said: "We're in a little bit of a quandary as to how it's going to work out. It's a tighter situation, academically, than we've ever had. That's why we're being especially cautious."

"If anybody looks like he has a problem, we're holding him out of spring ball. It isn't going to do us any good to have him for spring ball and then have him ineligible in the fall."

"So there might be a few more guys missing than normal," Osborne said. "But it's not because we're in worse shape as a team, academically. I think we're better off, academically, as a football team than we have been in several years."

Women's basketball needs more TV exposure

Although women's basketball needs more stars and wider exposure, it has managed to broaden its appeal, and more good teams are developing, Louisiana Tech University's women's coach Leon Barmore said, four days after winning his first Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

"We need about 10" outstanding college players, "but we get one or two, and they can't carry the whole sport," said Barmore, named Naismith women's college coach of the year by the Atlanta Tip-off Club.

However, Barmore said, the number of good college teams has increased to where any of the final eight were capable of winning the national title.

"In the next five years, there are going to be 20 or 30 teams that can play this game," he told the Associated Press.

Barmore joined the staff at Louisiana Tech 11 years ago as an assistant after 10 years as a boy's high school coach. He said he saw it as a steppingstone to a men's job there or elsewhere.

Now, it's different. "I know I can coach both levels, but my desire is not what it once was," he said. Since he joined the staff, the Lady Techsters have posted a 342-37 record, including three national championships.

Barmore was named head coach in 1982. His head-coaching record, including this year's 32-2 mark, stands at 179-19.

Barmore said the game would improve if more games were televised, giving young girls role models to emulate.

"I used to watch Red Auerbach and Bob Cousy... and then go out for hours and play," Barmore said. "I got wrapped up in something I could see."

"Somebody with some power has got to get something done," he said.

As an example, he said, a game between Tennessee and Texas last December drew 25,000 people in Knoxville, and Texas' Clarissa Davis scored 45 points, "but no television saw that."

Also, he said, the Lady Techsters' final three games, all televised by ESPN, "were exciting to me, and that's what basketball's about—exciting, good players on both sides."

Barmore suggested that five or six network-televised games a year between the nation's top teams would be an adequate opening for women's basketball.

Q Who is eligible for an NCAA postgraduate scholarship?

A Eligibility for the awards is restricted to student-athletes attending NCAA member institutions, and a student must be nominated in the academic year in which he or she completes his or her final season of eligibility for intercollegiate athletics under NCAA legislation. Candidates must have a minimum accumulative grade-point average of 3.000 (based on a maximum 4.000) or its equivalent. After the 3.000 is attained, athletic ability is considered equally with academic achievement.

"Television has brought games every day of the week.... That means more missed school. Television has brought about games being played almost every hour of the day. Television has taken over a lot of the play in the games by demanding and getting extra timeouts. That interrupts the flow of the game often-times."

"But there's always another side. Maybe television has been the best thing that's ever happened to the nonincome-producing sports. Maybe it's been the best thing that's ever happened to women's athletics. So it has served a good purpose in many ways, too."

"But I think television has hurt the team play in basketball. It has brought on more individual, fancy showmanship.... There are greater players today—individual players—than ever. And they're amazing in their individual ability. But I don't think you see nearly as good team play as you used to have."

"If the players today with the increased ability, if they still played the same type of team play, it would be out of this world. But now, there's so much emphasis on the fancy dunk, on the behind-the-back stuff, the dribbling and the passing, and the showmanship, that you have to lose some team play."

"I think that each ref (in the Final Four) should make two grand, with all expenses paid for him and his wife. I mean, here you have nine guys who epitomize an important part of the game, and they make $450. So a team gets a mill-one ($1.1 million), and the ref gets $450."

"If the problem really is the coaches' (shoe endorsement) contracts, why not just tackle it directly?"

"Pay the coaches what they ought to be paid so they are not dependent on the manufacturers for part of their income."

"That would create another problem, obviously, for the institutions, because they would be faced with making up the difference out of their own pockets. But if you want to clean it up, then legislate that it's no longer allowed."

"What I'm opposed to is state legislators trying to interfere in that way (proposing legislation to provide a stipend for varsity football players)."

"There are a lot of positive things state legislatures can do, such as helping to regulate sports agents. But when they start stepping into eligibility and rules, they're in an area they are really not very well qualified to deal with."

"I was very disappointed to see Dick MacPherson, head football coach at Syracuse, advocating football over soccer. I don't consider soccer an 'easy' game. It takes as much discipline and unselfishness as football, baseball, basketball or any other team sport."

"I would hope that coaches in all sports would be supportive of each other since there is benefit in all athletics."

Texas men sweep relays, win swimming crown

Texas claimed the team title at the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships April 7-9 in Indianapolis. The Longhorns' performances earned them the crown for the first time in seven years.

Texas finished with 424 points, 54.5 points ahead of runner-up Southern California. Stanford, team champion for the past three years, finished third with 276.5 points.

"We had lifetime bests all over the pool," said Texas coach Eddie Reese. "You have to give the individuals all the credit. The thing that surprises me is that they're tougher than the '81 team. They've worked harder as a group."

The Longhorns became the first team in 12 years to sweep the relay events, completing the feat with an American record in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Chris Jacobs, Shaun Jordan, Keith Anderson and Doug Gjertsen finished in 2:52.01, breaking the American record of 2:53.15 set in 1984 by UCLA. The time also broke the NCAA record of 2:53.02 set by California in 1986.

Southern California freshman David Wharton was the only individual to claim a record at the meet. His time of 3:42.23 in the 400-yard individual medley surpassed the NCAA and American records of 3:46.54 set by Stanford's Jeff Kostoff in 1985.

Wharton was named the nation's top collegiate swimmer by coaches at the meet. Ohio State's Patrick Jeffrey was chosen diver of the year after sweeping the one- and three-meter events.

Women's gymnastics contenders need 'Three Cs'

Consistency, confidence and concentration will play roles in deciding the titlists at the 1988 National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships.

"I would much rather be an observer than a participant because this is going to be one incredible meet," UCLA coach Jerry Tomlin-son said about the championships.

Plenty of attention will be focused on the Bruins, who have been the top-ranked team during the regular season. Kim Hamilton is the defending champion in floor exercise. Tanya Service and Jill Andrews finished third and fourth, respectively, in the vault. Service, who was hampered by a sprained ankle most of this season, also finished fifth in floor exercise. Those two events (vault and floor exercise) are UCLA's strongest.

Tomlinson also likes his team's confidence and ability to focus on its own performance rather than the scores of its competitors.

Georgia will bid for its second consecutive title. Coach Suzanne Yocalan's squad dominated the balance-beam competition a year ago to take the team crown. Lucy Wener is a two-time NCAA champion on the uneven bars. Corrinne Wright finished third all-around last year and was second to Hamilton in the doing. Georgia, Alabama and Utah all have strong teams."

"We have a very balanced squad," Patterson said about the Crimson Tide. "We are getting great leadership from the two upper classes and high scoring from the freshman and sophomore classes."

Sophomore Marie Robbins tied for third in floor exercise last year and tied for fifth on the uneven bars. Tina Rinker and Kim Masters are the top rookie performers.

"We have been consistent all year," Patterson said. "Our confidence level has to help at this point."

Oklahoma's Kelly Garrison-Steves, who took first in every individual event at this year's Big Eight Conference championships, will defend her all-around title. Washington's Yumi Mordre, runner-up last year to Garrison-Steves in the all-around, will attempt to repeat as titlist in both the vault and balance beam.

Championships profile

Event: National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics.

Field: Twelve teams will compete. The winning team from each of five regional meets advances automatically, and the remaining seven teams are selected at large on the basis of national qualifying scores. Also, 12 individual all-around competitors who are not on a qualifying team are invited on the basis of national qualifying scores. The top eight gymnasts in each of the other individual events—vault, uneven bars, balance beam and floor exercise—also will compete for titles.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: Georgia used an outstanding performance on the balance beam to end Utah's string of team titles at five. The Bulldogs defeated the Utes, 187.90-187.55.

Schedule: Utah will be host for the 1988 championships, April 22-23.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will appear in the April 27 issue of the News.

Contenders: Contenders for the team title include Alabama, Georgia, UCLA and Utah.

Championship notes: Until Georgia won the team title last year, Utah was the only school ever to claim the crown. Utah gymnasts also have captured the most individual titles, claiming nine. Arizona State trails with eight. Utah is serving as host for the championships for the fifth time in the meet's seven-year history.

floor exercise. Andrea Thomas was third on the balance beam.

"Georgia may not be as consistent as some teams, but when they put it together, they are as strong as any team in the country," Sarah Patterson, coach of Southeastern Conference rival Alabama, said.

Utah, winner of six straight team championships before finishing second a year ago, again will challenge for the title. Coach Greg Marsden has gotten "upper-class" performances from freshmen Jessica Smith and Patti Massoels. Sophomore Kris Takahashi and junior Hilarie Portell are other leading all-around gymnasts. Takahashi tied for sixth on the balance beam last year. Lynne Lederer finished in the top six in three individual events a year ago.

"Without question, UCLA is the favorite this year," Marsden said. "They will be very difficult to beat if they do what they are capable of

Manning adds Eastman and Wooden Awards to others

Kansas senior Danny Manning has added two player-of-the-year awards to consensus all-America acclaim and the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championship's outstanding-player honor.

Manning, who led his Jayhawk teammates to the 1988 title by scoring 31 points and grabbing 18 rebounds in a stunning 83-79 victory over Oklahoma April 4, has been named winner of the Eastman and John R. Wooden Awards. He also heads the Division I first-team all-America list announced by Kodak, which sponsors balloting by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"Danny Manning makes other players around him better players," said former Kansas State coach Jack Hartman in making the Eastman presentation. "In many ways, Danny probably has diminished his national reputation by playing like that (unselfish), with people who don't see him play and can't fully appreciate all the things he does in a game."

The Wooden award, named in honor of the former UCLA coaching great, is determined through media voting. Other finalists included Bradley's Hersey Hawkins, Duke's Danny Ferry, Arizona's Sean Elliott, Michigan's Gary Grant, Purdue's Troy Lewis, Temple's Mark Macon, Notre Dame's David Rivers, Syracuse's Rony Seikaly and Pittsburgh's Charles Smith.

Six named to academic hall of fame

Six former academic All-Americans—two each from the past three decades—have been elected to the newly established GTE Academic All-America Hall of Fame.

The inaugural class includes Pete Dawkins, U.S. Military Academy, 1959; Rev. Donn D. Moomaw, University of California, Los Angeles, 1954; Sen. Bill Bradley, Princeton University, 1965; Merlin Olsen, Utah State University, 1962; Rep. Tom McMillen, University of Maryland, College Park, 1974, and Pat Haden, University of Southern California, 1975.

The academic all-America program was established in 1952 by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) and has been sponsored by GTE since 1985. The program honors the nation's top collegiate athletes who also excel in the classroom.

College sports information directors nominated 50 former academic all-Americans, and the CoSIDA membership chose 25 finalists. A special committee made the final selections. Dick Enberg, NBC Sports commentator and spokesperson for the GTE academic all-America teams, was the committee chair.

"We were seeking athletes whose achievements and contributions beyond their academic years were at the highest level in their chosen fields," Enberg said. "The hall of fame will pay tribute to the best and brightest of the thousands of scholar-athletes who have been selected over the years."

Following are biographical sketches of the inductees:

1950s

Dawkins won the Heisman

Pete Dawkins

Trophy in 1958 as the nation's outstanding football player. A Rhodes Scholar, he became the youngest brigadier general in U.S. Army history. He is a candidate for the U.S. Senate from New Jersey.

Rev. Moomaw was UCLA's first two-time first-team all-America in football. He graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1957 and currently is senior minister of Bel Air Presbyterian Church in California. He performed the invocation at both of President Ronald Reagan's inaugurations.

1960s

Bradley was a three-time all-America in basketball and a Rhodes Scholar. He was a member of the 1964 U.S. Olympic basketball team that won a gold medal and on New York Knicks teams that won two National Basketball Association championships. He is in his second term as a U.S. Senator from New Jersey.

Olsen won the Outland Trophy, given to the top interior lineman in college football, in 1961. A member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, he works as an actor and football analyst.

1970s

McMillen was a three-time all-America in basketball and a Rhodes Scholar. He played in the NBA for 11 years. He first was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1986.

Haden, also a Rhodes Scholar, was the Most Valuable Player in the Rose Bowl. He played professional football with the Los Angeles Rams for seven years. He is an attorney and an analyst for CBS Sports' college-football telecasts.

Binders available

Readers of The NCAA News are reminded that binders, which provide permanent, convenient storage of back issues of the paper, are available from the publishing department.

Each of the rugged, vinyl-covered binders holds 23 issues of the News. They may be purchased for $7.50 each, or two for $14. Orders should be directed to the circulation department at the national office (913/831-8300).

Record $8.5 billion

College support grows

A surge in private support of U.S. colleges and universities helped set an $8.5 billion record last year, with alumni donations accounting for half of the estimated increase, an education advocacy group said April 12.

Alumni contributions reached a high of $2.3 billion, or 27.6 percent, of all higher education donations in school year 1986-87, Paul Miller, a spokesman for the Council for Aid to Education, told United Press International.

That amounted to half of the estimated $1.1 billion increase for the past year, or 28.5 percent of the total increase, he said.

That was "the largest year-to-year gain ever recorded" by the council, said Miller.

Alumni and nonalumni donor groups each gave more than $2 billion for the first time, said Miller. Donations from nonalumni individuals amounted to about $2.1 billion, or 24.3 percent of total contributions, he said.

The council, which conducts an annual survey, is known for its use of the promotional slogan, "Give to the college of your choice." The survey is cosponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

The survey, which was completed before the crash on Wall Street, represents support from 22.4 percent of U.S. alumni who are 25 years and older, said Miller. It is estimated to be about 80 to 85 percent of all private giving to the 1,174 colleges surveyed, he said.

The increase in alumni giving was attributed to an increased number of college graduates—up from 11 percent in 1970 to 19 percent of the U.S. population, adding nearly one million new graduates each year, he said.

"The range in average support extended from a high $44.4 million for private doctoral universities (up 10 percent on the year) to $327,000 for public two-year community colleges, a 32 percent increase," Miller said.

Stanford University, which took first place from Harvard University in 1985, maintained its top position with $198,534,823, the survey showed. Harvard gained $177,976,000 for second place, and Cornell University reported contributions of $149,702,435, showing a 51 percent rise in alumni giving.

I women's volleyball committee studies changes in play-off format

The Association's Division I Women's Volleyball Committee, at its April 4-7 meeting in Minneapolis, reviewed several proposals for a championship-format change but postponed any decisions until additional proposals are solicited and a survey is conducted.

Coaches will be asked for additional ideas before the survey is developed and mailed to all coaches and primary women administrators of athletics in September. A decision will be made based on the survey results.

Also, the committee discussed site selection for the 1989 championship. Bids will be accepted until April 15, and a decision will be made by the committee in early

May.

The following recommendations will be submitted to the NCAA Executive Committee for approval:

- An increase in the official traveling party from 17 to 19;
- An increase in officials' fees;
- An increase in minimum ticket prices, and

• That statistics compiled by the American Volleyball Coaches Association be published in The NCAA News.

Also submitted to the Executive Committee will be a request that expenses for incoming members of the volleyball committee be paid to permit attendance at the annual meeting. If this is defeated, the volleyball committee will request that the effective dates for members' terms change from September 1 to January 15.

Conferences selected to receive automatic qualification are as follows: Atlantic Coast Conference, Atlantic 10 Conference, Big Eight Conference, Big Ten Conference, Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, High Country Athletic Conference, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, Mid-American Athletic Conference, Mountain West Athletic Conference, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Pacific-10 Conference, Southeastern Conference, Southland Conference, Southwest Athletic Conference, West Coast Athletic Conference.

NOTABLES

Suzanne Eagye of Hawaii named to receive the Honda-Broderick Award for volleyball after leading the Rainbow Wahines to a national title in the 1987 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship. She becomes a finalist for the Honda-Broderick Cup, which is presented annually to the top collegiate woman athlete in the nation... Scotty Whitelaw, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, awarded the New England Hockey Writers' Shaeffer Pen Award for outstanding contributions to collegiate ice hockey. He has served as tournament director for the ECAC Division I Ice Hockey Championship since 1962.

DEATHS

Charlie Morrison, head men's ice hockey coach at Union (New York), died April 9 while on a recruiting trip in Ottawa, Canada. He was 51. Through an 18-year coaching career, including five years at Lake Forest and 10 years at Union, Morrison led his teams to 210 victories. His Union teams won 122 games and made three Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship appearances, finishing second in 1984... Willy Schaeffler, who coached Denver to 13 NCAA team championships in skiing and coached the 1972 U.S. Olympic ski team, died April 9 in Denver. He was 72. Schaeffler's Denver teams produced 24 all-Americans and 15 Olympic skiers. He also helped establish the Special Olympics and founded the Professional Ski Instructors of America.

Harvey Wade "Swede" Halbrook, an Oregon State basketball star in the 1950s who was considered to be the tallest player of his day, died of an apparent heart attack April 5 in Portland, Oregon. He was 55. The 7-3 center led Lincoln High School to an Oregon state title in 1952, then led Oregon State in a near-upset of eventual NCAA champion San Francisco in 1955... Nell C. Jackson, director of physical education and intercollegiate athletics at Binghamton since 1981, died April 1 in Binghamton, New York, after a brief illness. She was 58. The Tuskegee graduate was a member of the 1948 U.S. Olympic track team and served as assistant athletics director and head women's track and field coach at Michigan State before moving into the Binghamton post. Jackson also was an Olympic coach and is a member of the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

Gordon "Shorty" Carpenter, an all-Southwest Conference basketball player in the early 1940s who later was a six-time all-Amateur Athletic Union player and a member of the 1948 U.S. Olympic team, died March 8 while vacationing in Mesa, Arizona. He was 68... Frederick B. "Bucky" Conrad, an all-Big Ten Conference football player and basketball captain at Ohio State in the early 1930s, died March 3 in Topeka, Kansas. He was 76. Conrad later played several years for Goodyear Tire and Rubber's National Industrial Basketball League team and worked for the company itself from 1934 to 1975... Peter Joseph "Pete" Donohue, a Texas Christian baseball pitcher who went on to record three 20-win seasons with the Cincinnati Reds during the 1920s, died February 23 in Fort Worth, Texas. He was 87. Donohue generally is believed to be the first pitcher to perfect the change-up pitch.

CORRECTIONS

Due to an editor's error, the first name of this year's Hobey Baker Award winner was misspelled in a story and photo caption appearing in the April 6 issue of The NCAA News. Robb Stauber of the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, won the award as this year's outstanding player in college hockey.

A story about a panel discussion on the hiring of black coaches that appeared in the March 30 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly identified the school where panel member John B. McClendon Jr. once coached. McClendon was head coach at Tennessee State University.

The Record section of the March 30 issue of the News incorrectly reported that LeVon Balzer was named president at Seattle Pacific University. Balzer, who was dean of arts and sciences at Seattle Pacific, was named president at Tabor College.

Due to an editor's error, the last name of a Louisiana Tech women's basketball player was misspelled in a photo caption appearing in the March 30 issue of the News. The player's name is Teresa Weatherspoon.

Wade Trophy goes to Tech standout

Teresa Weatherspoon, who recently led Louisiana Tech to the school's second Division I women's basketball title, has won the Margaret Wade Trophy as the nation's outstanding player. She joins former Lady Techsters Pam Kelly (1982) and Janice Lawrence (1984) as a winner of the award.

"I know Margaret Wade and what she believes in when it comes to the game of basketball," said Leon Barmore, Louisiana Tech head coach, "and I have no doubt that Teresa Weatherspoon fits perfectly into the mold of what she would want for a Wade Trophy winner."

Weatherspoon produced school records for assists (958) and steals (414) while helping Louisiana Tech compile a 118-14 record over the past four years. She finished with 1,087 points, 14th on the school's career list.

"While her statistical accomplishments are outstanding," Barmore noted, "it is her ability to lift teammates to a higher level that sets her apart in my mind. The perfect examples came in our regional-title game against Texas, when she took over offensively and kept us going, and in the championship game against Auburn, when it was her defense that ignited our second-half comeback."

Ohio golf coach reluctantly ready for retirement at age 77

When the Mid-American Athletic Conference added golf to its championship sports, Ohio University's athletics director handed a golf ball to Kermit Blosser.

"But I don't even play the game," Blosser protested.

"You will," said AD Don Peden, who also gave Blosser a golf rules book.

That was in 1946. And in the 41 springs since, Blosser fashioned the Ohio golf program into the MAC's most successful. Its 18 league titles are the most in any MAC sport.

Blosser quickly learned the sport, becoming a near-scratch golfer, and he earned a spot in the first class of the NCAA Golf Coaches Hall of Fame in 1980.

Blosser's first golf championship came in 1951 when one of the team members was Dow Finsterwald, who seven years later won the PGA championship.

"For many years, I considered the job a hobby, and that's why I stuck around as long as I have," said Blosser. "But everything's got to come to an end."

His retirement will come after the Mid-American Conference golf championships at OU this spring.

He's 77, has been legally blind

Steroids cause mental problems, study concludes

Athletes may suffer severe depression, manic behavior and other serious mental problems when they take high doses of steroids to build their muscles, a study concludes.

The psychiatric hazards of anabolic steroids appear to be even greater than the widely publicized medical dangers of the drugs, said Harrison G. Pope Jr., M.D.

"This is a phenomenon that is probably common and has gone unrecognized for a long time," Pope said. "There is a far higher incidence of psychiatric symptoms attributable to anabolic steroids than any of us previously thought."

The research, based on interviews with athletes, found that one-third of those studied had delusions, hallucinations, manic episodes, depression and other ailments that probably resulted from steroid use.

Researchers interviewed 41 bodybuilders and football players who had used anabolic steroids. They found that nine displayed full-blown symptoms of mania or depression, while five others had less severe signs of mental problems.

Mississippi bill puts penalties on illegal contracts

The Mississippi House has approved legislation that would result in two years in jail and a $10,000 fine to sports agents who illegally contract with college and high school athletes.

Representatives voted 115-4 for the measure that arose from a growing number of national incidents in which sports agents have jeopardized student-athletes' amateur standings and their grants-in-aid negotiating lucrative contracts.

"We want the sports agents to know when they come into the state to do this, they're going to be committing a crime," said Rep. Ed Perry, D-Oxford. "I hope it doesn't happen in this state, but if it does, I don't want that individual to walk away from the streets of this state and go to another state and do the same thing," he told United Press International.

since 1977 and is unable to drive. He walks two miles to a downtown store each morning for breakfast with his buddies. Even though he needs a powerful magnifying glass to read, he still loves the game.

"I like to kid my golfing buddies and tell them I don't see as well as I used to," he said. "Don't bet on it," he told a United Press International reporter recently.

Blosser needs help in finding his shots and in estimating the distance to the greens and the pin locations. Then the old coach's radar system locks in, and the shot generally hits the mark.

Blosser guided the Bobcats to the school's first national championship—in wrestling in 1932. He's also served as an assistant in football and basketball.

He's been a meticulous record-keeper, which comes through in his annual alumni newsletter. It contains tidbits of news of former players that he gleans from his Christmas cards.

The newsletter generally has a "Blosserism or two," says Frank Morgan, sports information director, who edits the newsletters.

Examples of "Blosserisms" that Morgan strives to retain are: "It's really intramural (immaterial) to me what they do with the golf course," and, "It's better to play and win than never to have lost at all."

Blosser and his wife, Mildred, have been married 51 years and are the parents of two children. A grandson, David DeCaminada, who graduated from Ohio in 1986, played for the coach.

pretations regarding organized summer basketball participation is consistent for men and women. "There is nothing unique to men's competition or to women's competition," Perko pointed out.

Regardless of sex, for example, a student-athlete who intends to play in a summer league or tournament must obtain written permission from his or her institution's director of athletics. "That permission must be for a specific individual to play in a specific league or tournament," Perko added.

Student-athletes must live within 100 miles of the site of competition. "Their official residence or their campus must be within that 100-mile radius," Perko said. "In effect, this legislation permits them either

49 summer leagues approved

The first 49 summer basketball leagues and tournaments have been approved for participation by student-athletes.

Complete guidelines concerning student-athlete participation in a summer basketball league or tournament begin on page 1 of this issue of The NCAA News.

Any questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer basketball leagues should be referred to Richard C. Perko, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Following is a list of the first 32 men's and 17 women's approved leagues and tournaments. Additional leagues and tournaments will be reported in The NCAA News as they are approved.

to go home or to stay at school during the summer and have an opportunity for organized competition."

Regardless of where they play, student-athletes may compete only in a league or tournament that has been certified by the Association. "We ask for copies of their budgets and their schedules," Perko explained. "The certifying process essentially is used to help assure that leagues have been organized and will be conducted within the framework of NCAA legislation."

Possibly the most intricate of the restrictions involves the "one-to-a-team" concept, according to Perko. "Legislation stipulates that no (summer league or summer tournament) team may have more than one player from the same intercollegiate team on its roster," he explained.

Following are some other aspects of the "one-to-a-team" limitation:

- Only players who have reported for basketball practice at an institution are subject to the limit. "A football player from an institution could play on the same summer team as a basketball player from the same school," Perko explained, "until that football player decided to try out for the varsity basketball team and reported for practice."

- Prospective student-athletes even though they already may have signed a binding letter-of-intent, are not subject to the limit. "Once they report for varsity basketball practice at the school, the limit will apply to future organized summer competition."

- For the purposes of the limit, transfer students count toward the institution they are transferring to. "If Joe Smith transferred from Tech to State after the 1987-88 basketball season and had been accepted by State, he would count for State when you apply the one-to-a-team limit," Perko noted. "And, he would need written permission to play from State's athletics director."

- The one-to-a-team limit applies only to teams involved in organized summer competition. "Players from the same institution can play together in a pick-up situation any time," Perko added, "but when you speak of organized competition in a summer league or tournament, one to a team will apply."

- The restriction applies only to participation as a player. "Student-athletes from the same institution may officiate a game involving (varsity) teammates, or they may coach (varsity) teammates," said Perko. "However, they may not play together on the same organized summer team."

Other restrictions also apply—some of them potentially surprising to institutional staff members. "For one thing, no full-, part-time, or volunteer staff member of the institution—not just the athletics department—may play on the same team with a student-athlete or be associated in any capacity with the league," Perko noted.

If league competition or tournaments are held on campus facilities, the director of athletics must formally request a waiver of NCAA Bylaw 1-6-(d)-(5)—also known as the "tryout rule."

"Obviously," Perko said, "most summer leagues are going to involve high school players. By requesting a waiver of the tryout rule, athletics directors certify that no staff members will be involved with the conduct or promotion of the league or tournament."

Four years after being named mascot, Gorlok appears

Four years after being adopted as the school's official mascot, Webster University in St. Louis, Missouri, finally has a Gorlok to call its own.

Three-toed furry feet carried this 6-3, used-to-be imaginary creature to a February 9 Webster men's basketball game against St. Louis Christian College, where fans got their first glimpse of the stocky, horned, blue and yellow fellow.

According to "Here & Now," the school's bimonthly newsletter, taking the Gorlok from sketches to reality was accomplished by St. Louis-area costume designers Jana Parl-Rogers and Teri McConnell. Guidance was provided by Peggy Brockman, Webster's director of university relations.

Durability and faithful reproduction of Gorlok artwork used in school publications were primary concerns. Park-Rogers spent more than 80 hours on the costume, which resembles generously padded long johns.

McConnell, who constructed the head for St. Louis (baseball) Cardinal mascot Firebird, used a bicycle helmet as the foundation for what became a paper mache noggin. "It was really fun (creating Earth's first Gorlok)," Park-Rogers told John Arenberg, Webster sports information director. "There's a sense of pride looking at the Gorlok."

Arenberg said the school reinstated athletics in 1984 after a 15-year hiatus. "Webster's earlier sports teams were very informal," he added. "I understand it was an all-girls school at the time, and competition was club-level in nature."

With a varsity program came the need for a mascot. The name Gorlok was developed by a campus committee, which combined the names of Gore and Lockwood Avenues, local thoroughfares. A campus-wide contest was held to put a face (and body) with that name. The winning design was spruced up a little and has been used on Webster's athletics-publicity letterhead. That Gorlok, however, is seen sprinting along spraying something out of a hand-held pump sprayer.

"I guess you could call it some magical, mythical potion," said Arenberg in jest... or was it?

Webster's basketball Gorloks shot only 36 percent from the field against St. Louis Christian February 9, but they won the game by 15 points, 78-63. "I heard the Gorlok had mystical powers," said Webster coach Ken Baxter, "but to win a game while only shooting 36 percent..."

Hours before the men's basketball teams from the University of Kansas and the University of Oklahoma played for the 50th Division I Men's Basketball Championship, The

Briefly in the News

Kansas City Star carried a box score from the game. Say what?

And not only that, but Oklahoma won, 85-81.

Ken Blundell, director of the Design Productivity Center at the University of Missouri, Kansas City, had a computer play that championship contest 500 times. He projected the 85-81 verdict, complete with a box score, for the Star.

Blundell correctly predicted that the Jayhawks would attempt 55 field goals, although he said they would connect on 27 (Kansas actually hit 30). And Danny Manning finished the "microchip match-up" with 31 points, his real total from the 83-79 Jayhawk victory.

By using scores and other statistics, and weighting play-off performance to take into account what Blundell called the "momentum factor," his computer came within four points of predicting the total scored by both teams.

Trivia Time: How many institutions can claim at least one NCAA team or individual champion? Answer later.

Recent filing of a lawsuit by seven states' attorney generals, charging a conspiracy by insurance companies to limit commercial liability coverages while inflating the cost of the policies, has generated harsh but supportive comments by the executive director of "a grassroots coalition working to save amateur athletics threatened by the liability crisis."

"The true villain in the liability crisis is a tort system in need of immediate reform," said Richard J. Feldman, of Product Liability-Sports. "Billions of dollars go to insurance companies and attorneys because innocent parties—municipalities, youth leagues, (equipment) manufacturers and campground owners—can't afford the costly legal battles (needed) to prove their innocence. Insurers settle out of court (by) paying a form of legal extortion.

"They then pass their losses along to consumers and make a profit by increasing policy rates," he added. "That must stop, but (it) won't as long as the nation's insurance companies give lip service to, and trial lawyers oppose, tort reform."

Feldman's comments came as a result of the filing, in a San Francisco Federal court, of separate antitrust suits by the states of Alabama, California, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, West Virginia and Wisconsin. According to a report in The Wall Street Journal, the gist of the suits is that some of the nation's largest insurance firms pressured the rest of the industry to conform to policy-writing changes that affected the ability of public agencies, businesses and nonprofit organizations to obtain adequate liability coverage.

Defendants in the suits include Hartford Fire Insurance Co., part of ITT Corp.; Allstate Insurance, which is owned by Sears; Aetna Life & Casualty, and Cigna Corp. Also included was Insurance Services Office Inc., a trade organization, and several British reinsurance companies and their American brokers.

Fifteen European football game officials recently spent a week in Michigan "going to school and making calls." Big Ten Conference official Dick Honig, with help from coaches and American game officials, organized what is believed to be the first training session of its kind.

Classroom training was combined with actual officiating. Coaches Bo Schembechler (University of Michigan) and Jim Harkema (Eastern Michigan University) agreed to let the "students" call three scrimmages at each school. The visitors also were addressed by Michigan State University's George Perles.

Other American officials who helped Honig with the project included Bob Gordon of the Great Lakes Conference and Mid-American Athletic Conference officials Brian Balliet, Phil Barnes, Danny Kett, Dave Neal, Ed Peters, Bob Silber and Tom Workman.

Few basketball players get attention on teams that lose often, but Lincoln University's (Pennsylvania) athletics publicity office is attempting to change that for student-athlete Rudy Yuille. A junior from Philadelphia, Yuille was one of few bright spots in a season that produced a 1-25 record for the Lions.

"Losing was a nice experience, ironically, because we had a lot of young guys," said the 21-year-old. "(Coach Robert Byers) is a smart coach. He never gave up on us and was fighting to the last game. He never put us down for losing... he was there to the end."

Bob, who lives in Kansas City. "Dr. Naismith said, 'You don't coach basketball, you just play it.'"

Phog Allen told Naismith his theories about passing and running on an angle. Then Allen coached at Kansas for 39 years.

Today, the two are legends of the game, and both would be surprised at how the profession has changed. Where once coaching was a stable job, good for as long as a man wanted, now the turnover rate is alarmingly high.

Before the 1987-88 season, 67 Division I schools hired head coaches, an increase of 11 from the year before. That meant that of 290 Division I programs in the country, 123 either hired or fired a head coach in a two-year span. That's a turnover rate of 42 percent, which is higher than almost any industry in America.

"When I first got into this business, Adolph Rupp told me that coaching didn't pay much, but there was tremendous security," said Vanderbilt coach C. M. Newton. "Now it's the reverse."

"Because of television, coaches are under intense scrutiny," said Notre Dame's Digger Phelps. "The criticism is magnified. If one guy builds a powerhouse, the next guy is supposed to do the same."

There is tremendous pressure for a coach to make the NCAA tournament. A first-round loser brings home $260,000, while a strong conference showing can mean

In spite of a schedule that included several Division II teams and Division I squads from Morgan State University and Howard University, Yuille averaged 29.5 points a game. He hopes for a chance at professional basketball after completing his eligibility, but he said, "if not, I'm getting my master's in marketing."

Former University of California, Los Angeles, women's basketball star Ann Meyers will deliver the keynote address May 3 during enshrinement ceremonies at the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Massachusetts. Former keynote speakers for the annual event include Indiana University, Bloomington, coach Bob Knight and CBS Sports basketball analyst Billy Packer.

In other news from Springfield, officials announced March 29 that the 1988 Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic already is sold out. The November 19 game will feature 50th Final Four participant Duke University and the University of Kentucky. Officials noted that this is the earliest sell-out ever for a sporting event in Springfield. The game will be played in the 9,000-seat Springfield Civic Center.

Readers of The Cable Guide, a national television publication, have named ESPN the "best basic service" in national voting. ESPN's Chris Berman, one of several anchors for the network's "SportsCenter" news program, was voted best sports commentator.

Trivia Answer: Through the 1986-87 academic year, teams and individuals representing 676 institutions have earned NCAA championships.

Pan American University's baseball team has been a part of two significant road trips this season—neither of which directly involved the team.

Robert Shepherd road a bus more than 2,000 miles (from Susanville, California, to Edinburg, Texas) to watch his son, Bob, play first base for the Broncs. "I had an airplane ticket to fly here on my spring break," said the longtime teacher at Lassen College in California, "but I have a fear of flying. It was no emergency, so I took the bus."

Attempting to match Shepherd mile for mile were the Baileys—Jack and Louella—who drove 30 hours from their home in Urbana, Ohio, to attend Pan American's Jody Ramsey Baseball Tournament. Their son, Brian, plays left field for tourney participant Wright State University.

Former Wittenberg University football coach Dave Maurer, whose .842 career winning percentage is among the 10 best in college football history, has traded kicking tees for golf tees. He recently completed his third season as coach of the Tiger men's golf team.

"I like to compete, and I like to win," he said recently. "I can honestly say that out of all the sports I have ever been involved in as a player or coach, none is more demanding, both mentally and physically, than golf. When you're out there on the course, there is nothing but you, your golf ball, your swing and your score."

"There is an awful lot of pressure for a basketball player attempting a 15-foot foul shot in the guts of the game," added Maurer, "no question about that. But a golfer has that on every swing. I have gained a lot of respect for what it takes to win in golf, especially given the unpredictable weather conditions we deal with in the spring."

Apparently, Maurer was able to adapt his football coaching style to golf with little difficulty. His teams won the 1985 and 1986 Ohio Athletic Conference titles, losing the 1987 crown to Muskingum by only two strokes.

"It's not just the money," said Syracuse's Jim Boheim. "It's the perception of advancing to the next level. The Syracuse athletics department doesn't count on the tournament money for the budget, but they do expect a postseason appearance."

The pressure is on even in the lesser-known programs. Karl Fogel of Northeastern said, "Coaching gets in your blood and you have to do it, even when you know you might be fired any time."

Coaches have an opportunity to earn a great deal of money.

"I make more money than I ever dreamed possible," said Pittsburgh coach Paul Evans. "I also have far more headaches and far less security."

Jerry Tarkanian said he remembers when coaches would come to the Final Four "to drink and schedule games and relax, before everything was business." North Carolina State's Jim Valvano said he remembers when coaches actually socialized before and after games.

"When I first came to N.C. State, (former North Carolina coach) Frank McGuire told me stories about how he and (N.C. State) coach Everett Case would have dinner at each other's house after a game," said Valvano. "Can you imagine Dean Smith inviting me over for dinner after one of our games today?"

Illinois group seeks tax boost for higher education

Illinois is "draining the reservoir" of higher-education funding, which translates into less access to well-paying jobs for its residents and limited economic growth, according to a study released April 11 by the Illinois Public Action Council.

IPAC and three other organizations used results of the study to call for an increase in the state's income tax to pay for additional funding for higher education throughout Illinois, United Press International reported.

"By cutting off access to education—through raising tuitions (and) by defunding higher education at a rate that we are—we're closing the gates on opportunity for average people in Illinois," said Robert Creamer, executive director of IPAC, the state's largest public-interest organization. "It's critical that higher education get a substantial influx of dollars."

The IPAC study of job trends and state spending for education showed Illinois ranked 41st in increased support for higher education during the past decade.

In states that increased support for higher education the most, the number of businesses operating grew at a rate 33 percent faster than Illinois, according to the study. Nationally, the number of new businesses rose 27 percent faster than in Illinois.

"You've got to prime the pump," Creamer said, "and Illinois has been draining the reservoir when it comes to higher education.

"If we continue to allow the Illinois higher education infrastructure to deteriorate, we will be depriving our children of the opportunity to achieve an acceptable standard of living in the coming decades.

"It used to be that you could get a high-paying job in the blue-collar sector of the Illinois economy without higher education, but it just isn't so anymore," Creamer said.

"Skilled blue-collar jobs are disappearing; strong public support for a higher education is necessary to assure that the next generation has access to well-paying jobs," he said.

Creamer was joined at the news conference by Mary Ellen Barry, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters; Mitchell Vogel, president of the University Professionals of Illinois, and David Starrett, vice-president of the Illinois Student Association.

Vogel said some $400 million in new state funds is needed just to offset the deficit from last year's budget appropriations to higher education. Because of the lack of financial support given to higher education in Illinois, the state is losing many of its best students and faculty to other states, he said.

Barry said 40 other states have higher income taxes than Illinois, which is ranked ninth in per capita income.

$1 million insurance policy aimed at keeping coach happy

Marshall University boosters are hoping a $1 million insurance policy will keep football coach George Chaump in Huntington.

The Big Green Scholarship Foundation said as soon as money is available, a similar policy will be taken out for men's basketball coach Rick Huckabay, United Press International reported.

The insurance policies are but the first of three measures being taken to keep good coaches in Huntington, said Scott Moses, chair of the Big Green's coaches' compensation committee.

A cash-bonus system and deferral of a portion of the money for a retirement fund are the next two steps, Moses said.

Chaump's policy will cost the boosters a premium of about $2,600 a year. Huckabay's policy would cost about $1,000. Moses said the different costs are explained by the ages and family health histories.

In case of death, the coaches' beneficiaries would get $500,000, while the Big Green would get a similar amount. After a decade on the job, the beneficiaries would collect the full amount.

George Chaump

"I don't know much about it," said Chaump. "I can't say I'm not interested, though."

Moses said the insurance plan may be enlarged to include new athletics director Lee Moon.

The idea for the insurance came last November when the Thundering Herd football squad reached the NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship.

The funding for the plan would come from "those individuals concerned with retaining high-caliber coaches and administrators," Moses said.

Big Green Executive Director Dick Shreve said the program has $10,370 on hand. Donors may give money in four categories—football, basketball, other sports or no preference.

"We're looking for more than just the $1,000 contributors," Moses said. "We realize how important the $25 and $50 contributors are. There are a lot of people out there who want to help but just don't know how."

During the next month, Big Green hopes to raise $50,000, Shreve said.

"The problem is we're just about 20 years behind the times," he said.

Shreve said he does not believe a "Help the Herd" fund-raising campaign to ease the athletics department out of its $500,000 "shortfall" will hinder donations to the insurance policy.

"It's been my experience that people give money where their heart is," Shreve said. "There's a lot of heartfelt sentiment here for the coaches because of their accomplishments. It certainly rewards people for a job well done."

Brooklyn gets sportsmanship award

More than 600 college basketball officials recognized Brooklyn College as displaying the highest degree of sportsmanship among its players, coaches, administration and fans.

The award was presented to assistant athletics director Lenn Margolis, captain David Grady and senior guard Jeff Petway at a luncheon in New York City last month.

Brooklyn College's men's basketball team has received the Sam Schoenfeld Sportsmanship Award for the second time since 1984.

The award is presented to a college basketball program that exemplifies the true spirit of sportsmanship. The Collegiate Basketball Officials Association singled out Brooklyn College from more than 230 institutions in 15 states.

Ratings down

CBS-TV ratings for the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship basketball game between Kansas and Oklahoma drew an 18.8 Nielsen rating—the lowest since the game moved to prime time in 1973, the Associated Press reported.

Each rating point represents 888,600 households.

Montana State reprimands coach for ticket charge

A Montana State University assistant basketball coach arrested for allegedly scalping a ticket to an NCAA tournament basketball game received an official reprimand from the university April 7.

Ron Anderson was arrested at Kansas City, Missouri, for allegedly selling tickets to undercover police officers. Authorities have said that police officers agreed to pay between $300 and $700 for the $50 tickets.

"I am concerned with Ron's error in judgment," athletics director Douglas B. Fullerton said. "However, I feel this error should be weighed against the five years of solid performance Ron has given Montana State University," he told the Associated Press.

The reprimand was recommended by a panel that reviewed the allegations against Anderson. Fullerton said the university reserves the right to reopen its review of the matter "at any time new material might become available as a result of the ongoing court proceedings in Kansas City."

Arrested with Anderson was former MSU assistant coach Jerry Olson, now head coach at Iowa Wesleyan College. Olson was placed on probation for two years by his school.

Police Maj. William Frazier, commander of Kansas City's fraud and fugitive division, said 46 arrests were made in the four days leading up to the championship game, and 83 sets of tickets were confiscated.

Anderson, who was released on $500 bond, faces a jail sentence of up to 60 days and a fine of up to $500 if convicted.

Christmas Eve playing date set for Sun Bowl

The Sun Bowl will be moved up a day to Christmas Eve in an effort to lure top teams and better television ratings, officials said.

Sun Bowl Committee marketing executive Randy Lee said officials hope to attract a Big Ten Conference team this year, as well as a major East Coast team, by moving the traditional Christmas Day game one day earlier.

The tentative kickoff time for the Christmas Eve bowl game is 10 a.m. (Mountain daylight time).
