Anticipated attendance at the Presidents Commission National Forum June 20-21 in Orlando continued to rise in the past week, with a total of 615 Orlando-area hotel rooms taken by Forum attendees as of June 7.

In addition to 569 rooms at the Hyatt Orlando, site of the Forum session, for the night of Monday, June 20, another 46 rooms have been reserved for Forum delegates and news media at the Holiday Inn Westgate, approximately two miles away.

Arrangements also have been made with the Sheraton Lakeside Hotel, if additional rooms are needed. The Sheraton Lakeside is five miles from the Hyatt.

Transportation will be provided to and from Forum sessions and the "overflow" hotels at appropriate hours June 20 and June 21. Details regarding the transportation will be

Freshman eligibility receives strong support at CFA meeting

Members of the College Football Association, in hopes of heading off attempts to make freshmen ineligible for football, strongly endorsed freshman eligibility June 5 in the concluding session of their annual convention in Dallas.

CFA members also recommended NCAA adoption of additional recruiting and evaluation days for high school players and agreed to form a committee to work with NFL officials on the matter of pro scouting, United Press International reported.

Freshman eligibility will be one of the topics in the final session of the NCAA Presidents Commission National Forum next January in San Francisco.

The CFA went on record as favoring freshman eligibility because without it, there would be a dramatic reduction in squad size.

"You can go to your (school) presidents and point out to them that the current rule does not say you have to play freshmen," University of Kentucky coach Jerry Claiborne told the convention. "There is no rule that says a school must play freshmen."

The bid to retain freshman eligibility touched off considerable discussion.

"There were no great points of contention, if you will," said the outgoing CFA board chair, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Chancellor Martin A. Massengale.

"There were not as many issues as there have been in the past."

The CFA also passed a recommendation to alter the NCAA's Bylaw 5-1-(j) so that a high school student with a 2.200 grade-point average could become eligible with an SAT test score of 660 rather than 680.

"There might be some who would perceive this as an attempt to weaken Proposition 48," said Massengale, also a member of the NCAA's Presidents Commission. "I think I can speak from experience

Council will be asked to sponsor ban on coaches at all-star camps

So-called all-star camps, which mix top-name college coaches with highly sought prospective student-athletes for summertime weeks of instruction and competition, stand to lose half the recipe.

Meeting June 2-3 in Kansas City, the NCAA Recruiting Committee voted to seek sponsorship by the Association's Council of legislation at the 1989 Convention that would prevent coaches and other athletics department staff members from working for camps that are not institutionally sponsored.

Currently, coaches are permitted to staff what might best be called private-sector camps, which have traditionally showcased the nation's best prospective football and basketball players for college recruiters as much as they have served to improve camp attendees' skills.

Should the Council agree to sponsor appropriate legislation and should the Association's membership approve the proposal, coaches would not be forbidden from attending a camp to evaluate prospects during an appropriate evaluation or contact period. They could not, however, be employed by any such enterprise in any capacity.

In other summer-camp-related action, the Recruiting Committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Council that the latter group sponsor Convention legislation that would revise existing legislation governing certain aspects of camps.

Specifically, the committee will seek a change in NCAA Bylaw 1-7 that would apply it specifically to summer camps—those held during an institution's traditional summer vacation. Similar activities held during the rest of the year would be governed by Bylaw 1-6-(d)-(1) and would be treated as developmental clinics.

The Recruiting Committee also voted to request that the Council take the steps necessary to eliminate current restrictions that prohibit an institution from hiring its own student-athletes to staff summer camps that it sponsors.

As was noted during discussion by committee members, the limitation has fostered activities akin to player trades. School A will use School B's student-athletes to staff a camp, and School B will return the favor by hiring school A's players.

Common definition

As part of a move to reach a common definition of a student-athlete in NCAA legislation (i.e., Bylaw 1), the Recruiting Committee voted to ask the Council to sponsor legislation that would prohibit the provision of reduced-rate or free

Champs again

The University of California, Los Angeles, won its second straight NCAA Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships team title June 4 in Eugene, Oregon. It was the eighth team title for the Bruins in outdoor track. Kevin Young and Steve Lewis (with hat) celebrate the victory. Young and Lewis were members of the winning 1,600-meter relay team that set a meet record of 2:59.91, the first official under-three-minute time in the event in collegiate history. Story on page 6.

NACDA speaker puts agent problem on school's doorstep

College athletes will be plagued by unscrupulous agents until schools better educate their athletes about sports business, an agent told an athletics directors meeting June 6 in Marco Island, Florida.

David Falk, senior vice-president of ProServ Inc., a Washington firm, said recent scandals involving agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom have increased public awareness of the problems agents can cause college athletes.

College players are not allowed under NCAA rules to sign with an agent until their athletics eligibility has expired.

"There is an agent problem in college sports, and the buck must stop at the colleges," Falk said during a discussion at the convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics. "There is no panacea; there is no easy solution to the problem. I think the solution must come from within."

Falk proposed that colleges offer courses for athletes on the business aspect of professional sports, specifically how contracts work and the procedure for choosing an agent. He also said schools should assess the potential of their star athletes to play professionally and counselors should be assigned to help players choose agents, United Press International reported.

"I think it is totally inexcusable for a school, a coach or an athletics director to say, 'We don't want to get involved in agents,'" Falk said. "I think that attitude has helped contribute to an environment where the Norby Walters flourish."

The NCAA cannot issue rules on agents because the organization has no control over the representatives, said Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director of the NCAA. He said there are educational programs to help schools deal with agents, and he suggested more severe penalties for agents operating outside the rules.

Several states have passed laws governing how player agents must operate, but Falk opposes that approach for two reasons: lack of uniform regulations from state to state and a possible Constitutional conflict with the interstate commerce clause.

"Education and direction on their own don't seem to be getting the job done," Morgan said. "Without any consequence, there are no negatives to help the process."

Some schools may fear legal action if a player was unhappy with an agent recommended by the institution. Falk dismissed that by saying doing nothing was the worst possible option.

"They're afraid," he said of the colleges. "I think they've been paralyzed into inaction. I think the schools have an obligation to these kids."

More than 800 representatives of colleges attended the convention. However, about 100 people attended the discussion on agents.

"I think it's a commentary," Falk said of the small turnout. "I expected every major athletics director in the country to be here today. I think the sparsity of attendance is a commentary."

Men's gymnastics seeks a director of officials

Recommendations for a director of officials and the use of half-tenth scoring increments for scores over 9.5 in team scoring will be made to the Executive Committee by the Men's Gymnastics Committee.

The committee met in Kansas City, May 31 to June 3.

The committee will recommend that an individual other than one of the 12 judges be assigned to the championships as director of officials.

In the past, one of the judges has held this position. The committee also instituted a judges-evaluation form that will enable coaches and the membership to have input into the selection of judges for the championships.

This year, half-tenth scoring increments for scores over 9.5 were used during the individual competition. The committee is recommending that they be used during the team competition also.

The committee simplified the basis for weekly rankings. Rankings in the first three polls will be based on the highest single score. The next three weeks, rankings will be based on three scores, with at least one from an away meet. The final three weeks, the rankings will be determined by five scores, with at least three scores from away meets.

In other actions, the committee will recommend that Kent State University be moved from the Mideast region to the East region and that head coaches be required to submit lineups to the scoring table and head judge at least one-half hour before the start of a meet.

The committee also voted to re-draw the order of competition for the championships each year. That information will be published in the championships handbook.

In order to qualify for national competition, institutions must use the 1989 International Gymnastics Federation (FIG) Code of Points and Competition I.

American Athletic Inc. will be the main supplier of equipment at the 1989 championships, which will be held at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. The Nissen Corporation will supply vaulting boards.

The committee expressed concern over the number of institutions sponsoring men's gymnastics and will work with the National Association of Gymnastics Coaches (Men) to encourage the 39 institutions with club programs to sponsor men's gymnastics on the varsity levels.

The committee discussed the regional format for the championships but will not make any recommendation until further discussion with the coaches association. The committee also declared a moratorium on round-off entry vaults until the vaulting apparatus is changed or further study is completed.

Freshman

that the Presidents Commission will not be in favor of anything that would weaken Proposition 48.

"If we are going to survive as a nation, we must do it through education—starting with prekindergarten. We should never lose sight of the welfare of the athletes."

In the area of recruiting, the CFA urged the NCAA to allow coaches to attend high school football games on Fridays during the month of October to better evaluate talent.

And because of college coaches concerns about the proliferation of pro scouts on their campuses, a committee will be formed to work with the NFL's competition committee.

"There are a number of coaches in college with pro coaching experience," said the University of Georgia's Vincent J. Dooley. "Some of those people ought to be put on this committee."

Council

admissions to intercollegiate events to anyone who has entered his or her ninth-grade class. That cut-off (the beginning of student's ninth-grade academic year) previously had been recommended by the Recruiting Committee and approved by the Council (April 1988) to apply to all other NCAA legislation regarding prospective student-athletes in Bylaw 1.

Another request to the Council deals with legislation to eliminate the "recruiting" brochure from permissible printed items that may be sent annually to prospective student-athletes.

During the meeting, committee members noted that media guides—many of which contain much the same information as a recruiting brochure—are permitted and that a specialized recruiting publication did nothing more than duplicate efforts (and, consequently, increase recruiting costs) and should be eliminated.

Other actions

Other actions taken by the Recruiting Committee during the June 2-3 meeting include:

- Approval in concept of two proposals that would alter existing NCAA legislation governing the awarding of financial aid. One would revise Constitution 3-4(b)-(1) to permit provision of aid to prospective student-athletes prior to their initial enrollment (e.g., to permit incoming freshmen to begin their studies during summer sessions immediately following graduation from high school). Specific criteria to govern such awards are to be developed.

The other proposal suggests the addition of a "floating award," equivalent to a year of aid, to existing legislation that permits five years of aid over a six-year period. The floating year could be used, for example, to assist former student-athletes who exhaust eligibility before earning a degree and who decide at a later date to finish their degree requirements. Both proposals are expected to be considered by the Association's Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism.

- Support of proposals developed by coaching organizations that would rearrange recruiting-period calendars without extending them and that would eliminate the part-time coaching position in Division I basketball outlined in Bylaw 7-1(b), which will take effect August 1. Regarding the latter, the Recruiting Committee supported a coaching-staff limitation of a head coach, three full-time assistants and one graduate or student assistant.

Members of the Recruiting Committee noted that, in many instances, part-time coaches are performing the duties usually associated with a full-time staff position.

It was felt that the reclassification would more closely align the position title with the duties part-time coaches handle on many campuses. It also was noted that the reclassification in no way would mandate member institutions to alter existing financial arrangements with part-time coaches.

Member institutions would be left to handle the details of the third full-time position.

- Support of a proposal that would change the ending date of the Division II recruiting and contact period to the second Saturday following the initial day of letter-of-intent signings by prospective student-athletes in football and basketball.

Since signing periods usually begin in midweek, and since many Division II institutions actively recruit prospective student-athlete who also are recruited by Division I institutions, the calendar change would give Division II members more time to assess the availability of prospects after the closing of the Division I contact period.

Legislative Assistance

1988 Column No. 23

NCAA Case No. 286—collegiate competition

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee has reviewed the application of a previous NCAA Council-approved interpretation (reference: Item No. 1 of the committee's July 23, 1987, telephone conference) defining "collegiate competition" for purposes of Case No. 286 (pages 396-397, 1988-89 NCAA Manual). The committee reaffirmed that any competition that includes any athletics event that (a) is open only to collegiate competitors or (b) involves individuals or teams from collegiate institutions participating in competition to score points for the represented institutions constitutes "collegiate competition" in all sports. Further, the committee agreed that collegiate athletics competition involving high school and "open" competitors (e.g., Kansas Relays, Pennsylvania Relays) would be subject to the same provisions.

It is important to note that "collegiate competition" represents only one of the five criteria that independently determine whether a student-athlete has utilized a season of competition and an individual date of competition. Accordingly, if a student-athlete's participation in an athletics competition does not satisfy any criterion outlined in Case No. 286 (e.g., the student-athlete does not compete in the uniform of the institution, does not receive any type of equipment or clothing from the institution and does not participate in "collegiate competition"), the student-athlete shall not be charged with having utilized a season of intercollegiate competition or an individual date of competition.

NCAA Bylaw 5-1(d)—seasons of competition

The Division I subcommittee of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee considered the application of Bylaws 5-1(d) and 5-1(j)-(2) to a situation in which a nonqualifier or partial qualifier initially enrolls in a Division II, III or NAIA institution or a junior college and then transfers to a Division I member institution. The subcommittee concluded that regardless of whether a nonqualifier or partial qualifier participates in intercollegiate competition at a junior college or four-year institution during the first year of collegiate enrollment, the nonqualifier or partial qualifier would be entitled to a maximum of three seasons of competition at a Division I member institution following the initial year of collegiate attendance. Further, the subcommittee determined that the provisions of Bylaws 5-1(j)-(2) and (3) preclude a partial qualifier or nonqualifier from participating in any spring football practice sessions that occur during the initial year of residence or that occur immediately after the student-athlete's first academic year in residence.

The following examples illustrate the proper application of this interpretation.

1. During the 1987-88 academic year, a nonqualifier enrolls in an NAIA institution and participates in intercollegiate athletics. During the 1988-89 academic year, the nonqualifier transfers to a Division I institution. The nonqualifier, after serving a year of residence [unless a Bylaw 5-1(m) waiver applies], has three seasons of competition remaining at the Division I member institution.

2. During the 1987-88 academic year, a nonqualifier enrolls in a Division III member institution and does not participate in intercollegiate athletics. During the 1988-89 academic year, the nonqualifier transfers to a Division I member institution. The nonqualifier, after serving a year of residence [unless a Bylaw 5-1(m) waiver applies], has three seasons of competition remaining at the Division I member institution.

3. During the 1987-88 academic year, a qualifier enrolls in a junior college and participates in intercollegiate athletics. After completing the requirements set forth in Bylaw 5-1(j)-(8)-(ii), the qualifier transfers to a Division I member institution. The qualifier has three seasons of competition remaining at the Division I member institution.

4. During the 1987-88 academic year, a nonqualifier enrolls in a junior college and does not participate in intercollegiate athletics. During the 1988-89 academic year, the nonqualifier transfers to a Division I member institution. The nonqualifier, after serving a year of residence, has three seasons of competition remaining at the Division I member institution.

5. During the 1987-88 academic year, a nonqualifier enrolls in a junior college and does not participate in intercollegiate athletics. The nonqualifier returns to the junior college for the 1988-89 academic year and completes the requirements set forth in Bylaw 5-1(j)-(9). The nonqualifier does not participate in intercollegiate athletics at the junior college. During the 1989-90 academic year, the nonqualifier transfers to a Division I member institution. The nonqualifier is entitled to three seasons of competition at the Division I member institution.

Two Washington coaches file $4 million discrimination suit

The head women's volleyball coach at the University of Washington and her assistant have filed a $4 million lawsuit against the school, alleging that university officials discriminated against them.

Coach Lindy Vivas, who has been told her contract will not be renewed next year, and assistant JoEllen Vrazel, who resigned in March, are seeking $2 million each in damages in the suit filed June 1 in King County Superior Court.

The two coaches say they were denied equal pay during the past school year, and Vivas claims her discharge is retaliatory and violates her rights under equal protection and due process, United Press International reported.

The litigation involves a yearlong dispute between athletics director Milo R. Lude and the coaches, Vivas said, beginning when Lude criticized the coaches for briefly playing professional volleyball.

Vivas said she received a letter May 20 asking her to resign voluntarily in exchange for a letter of recommendation, time to seek another job and payment of three months' salary.

If accepted, Vivas would have been prohibited from suing or talking publicly about the circumstances of her departure. She formally rejected the offer.

Lude said he would not comment on the suit. He would not say whether the job was vacant and had "no plans for any announcements at this time," the wire service said.

Vivas, who has compiled a 72-60 record in her four years as Washington's head coach, said she had not been told she was fired and planned to continue her routine until her contract expires June 30.

Vrazel resigned March 10 and moved to New York to play pro volleyball, although the university has continued to pay her, contending the resignation must be accepted by Lude, not Vivas.

Vivas said Lude was upset that he was not informed ahead of time of the coaches' play in the pro league, and he contended that it violated an NCAA rule. Vivas said that claim later was rejected by the NCAA.

A member of the NCAA's legislative services staff said the situation is addressed by Case No. 152 in the NCAA Manual. The interpretation permits an athletics department staff member at a member institution to be employed by a professional sports organization so long as the member institution can document that the individual is in no way directly or indirectly involved in the scouting or contacting of athletics talent or the negotiation of a contract for such talent.

When Vivas' case was heard last July by the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee, such employment was permissible only for a limited time, but Case No. 152 subsequently was amended to delete the limit.

Vivas claims the disagreement with Lude was the basis for annual salary increases in August of 3.4 percent for her and Vrazel, "far below any other coach in the athletics department," according to the suit.

Vivas rejected the contract, and volleyball practice was delayed for 10 days last August until the dispute temporarily was resolved.

The two coaches then began a staff complaint procedure, ending with a committee report concluding that "salary levels had not been set for any arbitrary or capricious reasons," said Elsa Cole, assistant attorney general at the university.

Besides the school and Lude, four university administrators were named as defendants in the suit.

PCAA to become Big West

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association officially will change its name to the Big West Conference July 1, according to PCAA Commissioner James A. Haney. The name change was approved by the conference's council at its recent spring meeting in San Diego.

The new name is seen as a simpler, more accurate description of the league's 12 member institutions.

When the PCAA first was formed in 1969, the conference consisted of seven charter members—all situated in the state of California.

In its 19 years of existence, however, the league has expanded to include universities from Utah, Nevada and New Mexico. Because of this expansion, the new name will serve to better identify all of the conference's member institutions, a conference spokeswoman said.

The name change occurred as a result of a study conducted by the marketing firm of Parker-Holland.

The firm polled employees of PCAA institutions, as well as media, fans and university officials across the nation, asking their opinions regarding the conference's identity.

"Though the conference will have a new name, it does not intend to leave behind its 19 years of tradition and success," said Haney. "The past accomplishments and successes of the league's many administrators, coaches and student-athletes are part of a history that will serve as a springboard for the Big West Conference as it begins its 20th year."

Haney also indicated that the new name will not affect the conference's relationship with the Mid-American Athletic Conference, whose football champion annually faces the PCAA champion in the California Bowl.

Charges against athletics staff will be probed

The University of Illinois, Champaign, said June 6 that officials are investigating allegations that maintenance workers did personal work for athletics department personnel.

In addition, a member of the Illinois General Assembly said he would ask the Legislative Audit Commission to look into the charges.

"These are serious allegations," Donald Wendel, vice-chancellor for administrative affairs, said. "If they are true, they would represent substantial violations of university policy."

However, he emphasized that the university investigation is not complete and the charges "are only allegations."

Wendel issued the statement after the Champaign-Urbana News-Gazette reported that the maintenance workers said they performed a variety of tasks for athletics association officials on company time and with company material.

Letters to the Editor

Drug report overstates the case

To the Editor:

The lead article in the The NCAA News, May 11, 1988, concerning the results of NCAA drug testing is inaccurate in several respects, all of which overstate drug use. This is particularly distressing when these very errors were pointed out to the NCAA earlier this year in connection with the drug-testing litigation brought by Stanford students.

The numbers in the text of the article for the fall 1987 tests are generally accurate, but the accompanying charts are not. First, the article does not point out that the chart on Division I-A postseason bowl testing is merely a subset of the results already reported in the fall 1987-88 aggregate drug-testing data chart above it. These two charts were used by the NCAA at trial, and the judge found them to be confusing on this point and required clarification.

Second, the numbers of positives in the 1987-88 charts are for the number of drugs found in the samples, not the number of students found with drugs.

For instance, a student found to have two anabolic steroids in his urine is counted twice in the chart (that is why the chart shows 24 ineligible in the fall of 1987 when there are only 20).

The text said that percentages in the charts are based on the number of positive substances, not on the number of athletes testing positive. That is not true. The percentages in the charts are based on the number of positive substances per number of students tested, which results in a higher percentage of positives.

Again, this exact chart was criticized at the trial because of its misleading nature and corrected in the record, but not in The NCAA News.

The report of two field hockey players testing positive for anabolic steroids in the fall of 1987 is misleading. One student tested positive for birth-control pills and one for a prescription medication for an illness.

The data in the article on the 1986-87 drug testing is also different than what the NCAA witnesses testified to under oath. They testified that there were 3,511 athletes tested in 1986-87, not 3,360 as stated. There were not two students declared ineligible for "various psychomotor stimulants" in 1986-87 as stated, but one student declared ineligible for use of a Vicks inhaler, which contained two of the banned substances.

Nowhere does the article explain that the many eligible positives for "sympathomimetic amines" are merely athletes who were found to have taken normal amounts of over-the-counter cold medications such as Sudafed.

The most important statistics were not mentioned in the article. No woman NCAA athlete ever has been declared ineligible for use of a banned substance. There have been no ineligible in the vast majority of sports tested, including baseball, cross country, golf, gymnastics, indoor track, lacrosse, softball, soccer, swimming and diving, tennis, volleyball, water polo, and wrestling.

The NCAA should not be presenting inaccurate and misleading information that overstates drug use. It does not further the goals of the NCAA and is unfair to the 99 percent of the student-athletes who do not abuse drugs in connection with athletics competition.

Ferdinand A. Geiger
Director of Athletics
Physical Education and Recreation
Stanford University

Not so, says NCAA staff

The drug-testing article and accompanying tables that appeared in the May 11, 1988, issue of The NCAA News are accurate. The information contained in the article was derived from a final report of drug-testing results presented to the Executive Committee at its May meeting.

The article states clearly that "there were 1,452 football players tested; and, of that number, 1,392 were from Division I-A teams...." The accompanying tables support these data and have caused no confusion to the careful reader.

The article is clear in that it states that "percentages (in tables) are based on the number of positive substances found and not on the number of student-athletes testing positive." The tables were prepared to reflect number and type of substances detected. A sample that shows positive for cocaine metabolites and nandrolone metabolites is recorded as a positive for a street drug and a positive for an anabolic steroid. To do otherwise would fail to characterize the positive test report.

It is true that the tables show a percent positive that is higher than if the tables had merely shown number of student-athletes testing positive. Had the table of 1986-87 aggregate data shown number of student-athletes testing positive, the total percent positive would have been 2.2 instead of the 2.4, a difference of .2 percent. The same would be true if the table of fall 1987-88 data reflected number of student-athletes testing positive. The percent positive would be 3.6 instead of 3.8, again, a difference of only .2 percent.

Mr. Geiger implies that data were presented with intent to mislead the reader about the drug use of student-athletes. This shows a general misunderstanding of the purpose of a drug-testing program. The objective of the program is deterrence. A completely successful drug-testing program would show a zero percent positive, attesting to its complete effectiveness as a deterrent. No possible public-relations (or other) advantage accrues by the slightest overstatement of either numbers of positives found or numbers of student-athletes using banned substances.

The May 11 article is an accurate synopsis of the comprehensive drug-

ADs don't see courts forcing NFL to take underclassmen

By Bob Hurt
The Arizona Republic

It's a foregone conclusion in NFL inner sanctums that the league eventually will be forced to open doors to college underclassmen because of legal action or threat of same.

The NFL has staved off the inevitable by making special exceptions each year. This year's designated beneficiary was Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, Pittsburgh running back. Each year, 10 to 12 such exceptions are made, but most are no-names.

In preparation for the day of reckoning, when it has to open doors, the NFL has launched a subtle public relations campaign to convince colleges that it has no option; that courts will force the league to exploit colleges, which supply the best and cheapest farm system ever devised.

Is the NFL getting the word across?

Answer: To about half the college folks.

To find out, I surveyed 22 of the top coaches, athletics directors and commissioners who were in Phoenix recently. Eleven felt the NFL eventually will have to open the door; 11 felt it won't have to.

All felt, however, that allowing undergrads into the NFL would have minimal impact. Most feel only three or four a year would go up. Football requires more maturity and training, which can be offset by individual skills in baseball and basketball, which already send undergrads into pro ranks.

Wayne Duke

As first witness for colleges, let's call in Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten and a member of a committee of college administrators that met recently with top NFL brass.

Duke feels the courts won't force the NFL to take underclassmen and says he has a five-page opinion from the Big Ten's attorney to support his contention. He says NCAA lawyers feel the same way.

Most feel the Constitution gives players a right to earn a living.

"You want to talk Constitution," Wayne shot back. "What about the draft? Is that constitution? They tell you to go to work at this spot and at this salary."

Good point, Wayne. Let's now hear from another Big Ten representative, Doug Weaver, Michigan

State athletics director and a lawyer.

"I think those guys (the NFL) have showed amazing restraint," Weaver said. "I think they are sincere. I think it's just a matter of time, and it doesn't bother me."

"We lost Magic Johnson, and it was brutal. But no one ever worried when Jimmy Connors left UCLA, or when Arnold Palmer left Wake Forest. It's going to happen. You're going to lose superstars, but you have to recover."

Tom Hansen, Pac-10 commissioner and a liaison to the NFL when he worked for the NCAA, echoes the thought.

"We can't hold college students in college for football or basketball or any other reason," Hansen said. "We can't hold artists. We can't hold newspaper people. They're free to go. It's up to the coaches to create an atmosphere to make sure they

Golf play-off is top amateur event

Jim Murray, columnist
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

"The NCAA tournament (Division I Men's Golf Championships) has long since passed the U.S. Amateur in both importance and degree of difficulty to win.

"It has tomorrow's stars in it, not some yesterday's field of overage stockbrokers with nice putting strokes. These are crack players. Golf's future.

"Good golfers don't just fall into a university any more than good football players or good basketball players do. They are magnetized, and the magnet is usually a coach.

"Golf is the most ruggedly individualistic sport there is. Even tennis depends on what somebody else does with your serve. In golf, every man is an island."

Charles McClendon, executive director
American Football Coaches Association
CFA Sidelines

"I'm always open-minded about changes that will be good for all concerned, but it seems to me that the present (college football) system is working well enough.

"Adding another division may harm more schools in other divisions than it would help those schools interested in being classified Division I-AAA."

William Fitzsimmons, director of admissions
Harvard University
The New York Times

"I think you would find a consensus among top universities that things are starting to happen (in terms of minority applications).

"At Ivy League colleges and similar colleges, we are reaching an enormous percentage of top minority students through direct mail, receptions for minorities and a whole series of special events. There really aren't many being overlooked."

Baseball coaches want to boost stature of college game

By Mike Tully
United Press International

College baseball coaches have seen the fuss made over basketball's Final Four, and they can hardly disguise their envy.

Nor can you blame them. Right now, the College World Series hardly matches those Final Four games played in packed gymnasiums on national TV.

Why, the coaches reason, shouldn't baseball create similar interest? It's the national pastime. If the whole country pauses to watch the World Series each fall, shouldn't more attention go to the college championship?

Actually, the College World Series is growing in stature. People recall seeing the likes of Roger Clemens, Greg Swindell and Jack McDowell play in it. This year, ESPN will televise all games except the last one, which will go on CBS. That's progress.

But coaches want more. First of all, they love the sport and want to see it appreciated. Furthermore, more fans can mean more money. More money means more fans. That kind of cycle makes a program grow.

"I think we do have to move forward, and TV has got to be very, very helpful," Miami (Florida) coach Ron Fraser said, adding that colleges may discover baseball can generate revenue. He dreamed aloud of athletics directors saying, "There is a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow for baseball, and let's do more for baseball and our program. Help them more because there's a chance of bringing more back."

Ron Fraser

With exposure in mind, the NCAA has offered a new format this season, replacing a pure double-elimination process. The new system creates two pools, with a double-elimination format crowning a champ in each. The survivors then meet in one winner-take-all game.

"The alternative was to come in here with four teams; one plays four, two plays three, then you go home," said Fresno State coach Bob Bennett, "and I didn't think that would have been very interesting. I think the fact that we have two divisions will create a new wave of interest; it does keep the No. 1 seed away from the No. 2 seed early.

"No matter how you do this thing, everybody has to be involved a little bit with money. That's one of the reasons the format was changed in the first place."

Another idea to increase exposure comes from Wichita State coach

Gene Stephenson, who lobbies to play the college season later in the year.

"We feel very strongly it's something college baseball needs to do to continue to grow and showcase the sport for the entire nation," Stephenson said. "It's a great opportunity if we extend the college season to start later in the season when everybody has better weather.

"I think it would be a much better situation nationwide. You would see more teams with an opportunity perhaps to get to the College World Series and compete for a national championship. You'd also see more fan interest throughout the country at a time when baseball season is supposed to be played."

Stephenson perhaps has not spent a lot of time in Boston's Fenway Park, Detroit's Tiger Stadium or Chicago's Wrigley Field. He would understand that the weather in those cities gives no guarantee until mid-May. No one wants to start the college season that late.

Yet, he has a point about trying to compete with basketball's Final Four. He says many college baseball teams had played two-thirds of their games by early April.

"And yet, all the nation's attention was on basketball," Stephenson said.

During the current College World Series, we'll see how much attention goes to college baseball.

ESPN a victim of its own success in CWS

By Rick Warner

ESPN, which helped make the College World Series a big-time event, is now a victim of its own success.

College baseball attendance has doubled since the cable network began televising games in 1980, and the sport has become a breeding ground for major-league stars. Because of the tremendous growth, NCAA officials decided the championship game merited more money and more exposure.

So this year, for the first time this decade, ESPN will not televise the final game of the College World Series, an eight-team tournament in Omaha, Nebraska. ESPN will show all the games leading up to the championship, but CBS will televise the title game June 11.

"It's really kind of ironic," ESPN spokesman Mike Soltys said. "People used to laugh at us when we started showing college baseball. Now it's gotten so big, we lose the final game."

Money was one factor that led the NCAA to seek a television deal with one of the major networks. CBS is paying about $500,000 for the championship game, three times more than ESPN paid for the entire tournament last year.

But an even bigger reason is the potential audience on CBS. Although ESPN has grown a lot since 1980, it still only reaches 53 percent of the country's television households.

Warner writes for the Associated Press.

48-team format (Division I Baseball Championship) that went into effect last year, is that the (Division I baseball) committee is not so restricted in selecting teams. We have the ability to go deeper into conferences. In the 1987 championship, three conferences had four teams selected. I see this as being a flexible and changing type of thing each year.

"We are interested in quality baseball; and if that quality baseball exists in a few conferences, then that is where the majority of teams will come from."

stay. Some shouldn't be in college. Some should go on."

Many of those polled indicated that the best antidote was to emphasize academics both before and after recruiting to instill the desire to get an education.

Glen Mason, new football coach at Kansas, pointed to the irony of losing players to the pros at a time when coaches are judged more closely than ever on players they graduate.

"They talk about schools exploiting the athlete," Mason said. "What about the athlete exploiting the school? I wonder if we could ask the athlete to sign a contract that he will stay for four years in return for his education."

Joe Morrison, coach at South Carolina, thinks the answer is controlling the unscrupulous agent who lures a kid out of school before he's ready for the NFL.

Bob Devaney, Nebraska athletics director, rejects the theory that courts will force the change.

"There's no legal thing in the world that says you have to draft them," he said.

Not draft, perhaps. But permit a chance to play, at least. Indeed, the precedent might have been set when courts forced the USFL to allow an Arizona punter that opportunity.

Mike Lude, Washington athletics director, sides with Devaney.

"Can't they just have a gentleman's agreement not to draft them?" he asked.

Sounds like collusion.

"I don't mean to pass a rule," Lude said. "What if each club just said I'd like to see each kid get as much education as possible."

I doubt if that would fly. The NFL fights a good delaying battle, but it's a matter of time. And remember, guys, what's good for colleges and pros is not always in the best interest of the athlete.

And that's what we're talking about, individual rights.

Coaches, players urged to be role models

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz has challenged College World Series players and coaches to live up to the status given them by young players, adults and their fellow coaches.

Schultz was the keynote speaker at the kickoff luncheon in Omaha June 3 for the 42nd annual NCAA Division I Baseball Championship.

"You'd be surprised how many people out there want to walk the way you walk, talk the way you talk and want to do everything exactly the way you do it because you're their idol," Schultz said. "You don't know most of these people. Some of them aren't so young. Some of them might be older than you are. But because you are an athlete, you're looked up to and respected, and they want to be just like you are.

"You have an awesome responsibility in that," Schultz told the players and coaches, "because if you are a good example, you can take people to very high levels or you can bury them. It depends upon what you do."

Schultz said athletes and coaches live in a glass bowl. The public exposure makes it the responsibility of each coach and athlete to set a proper example.

"When we think of college baseball and college athletes and the great athletes who've played the game, we think of integrity," he said.

Americans are suspicious of everyone and everything, making it difficult for athletes and coaches to live up to the public's perception, he said.

When one coach or one athlete is found guilty of drug use, abuse of funds or violation of rules, Schultz said, the rest of the coaches and athletes become guilty by association, making it even more important for all those involved to follow a straight and narrow path.

Players' needs unmet, ex-college star says

By Denne H. Freeman

Nobody responds to the needs of players, former Baylor University offensive tackle Joel Porter told the nation's coaches and athletics directors during the 12th annual meeting of the College Football Association.

"So far, the only listener is the student-athlete. He's listening to all the rules," said Porter, an all-Southwest Athletic Conference performer who was drafted by the Chicago Bears in the 10th round of this year's NFL college draft.

Porter won agreement from participants on a CFA panel that student-athletes need more financial aid than they are getting.

"I believe the NCAA needs to make allowances," Porter said. "Student-athletes need money and help because they don't have the time to work like other students."

Athletes can't enjoy the same privileges of college life enjoyed by other students, he added.

He made it at Baylor because his parents gave him a car and spending money, Porter said.

"One of my roommates had to borrow everything to make it," Porter said. "He wasn't a moocher. His parents just couldn't help him. The NCAA should at least let players get paid for their ticket allotments. Believe me, you earn those tickets."

If a football player doesn't need his tickets, "give him the money for them. They need to be compensated for the work they perform," Porter said.

University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, coach Mack Brown agreed with Porter.

"There is a lot of resentment by some of the players because they know how much money they are making (for) the schools, yet there are so many restrictions, they really can't live like the other students on campus," Brown said.

Joseph L. Kearney, commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference, said athletes "are the most regulated students on campus. It's a panacea that they should be treated like the rest of the students on campus, but they really aren't like the other students."

He said a recent CFA survey showed that 47 percent of the athletes polled indicated they needed more than $100 monthly for incidentals above and beyond their scholarship stipend.

UCLA men breeze to second straight track crown

UCLA captured its second consecutive team title at the Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships. And for the second year in a row, the Californians piled up enough points to win by a comfortable margin over Texas.

The Bruins won their eighth outdoor title overall during the June 1-4 meet at Oregon. Aside from UTEP's five-year championship run beginning a decade ago, it is the first time a team has repeated as outdoor champion since UCLA won three straight from 1971 through 1973.

Texas chipped 12 points from UCLA's 1987 record victory margin but still lost by 41.

Coach Bob Larsen's Bruins won titles in the 400 meters, the 400-meter hurdles and the 1,600-meter relay. UCLA was led by Kevin Young, who set a meet record in winning the 400-meter hurdles for the second straight season. In addition, Danny Everett and Steve Lewis notched a one-two finish in the 400 meters and teamed up on the record-setting relay squad with Henry Thomas, who also finished third in the 200-meter dash, and Young.

Other records fell to Thomas Smith of Illinois State, who won the high jump for the second straight year; Lorenzo Daniel of Mississippi State in the 200, and Houston's Joe DeLoach, who tied the six-year-old 100-meter mark set by Cougar predecessor Stanley Floyd.

Arkansas' Joe Falcon won the 1,500-meter run to claim his fourth NCAA individual crown this year and the sixth of his career. He also was a winner this year in cross country and won twice in indoor track.

Ithaca rallies for III baseball title

Sophomore center fielder Vincent Roman drove in three runs and Ithaca took advantage of three walks to win the Division III Baseball Championship in a 7-5, come-from-behind victory over Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

Wisconsin-Oshkosh, which also finished second in 1987, scored two runs in the second inning and three in the seventh to take a 5-2 lead.

But Ithaca loaded the bases with two out in the bottom of the seventh, forcing Wisconsin-Oshkosh coach Russ Tiedemann to bring in reliever Mark Gullickson. Roman, the first batter, promptly laced a two-run single to close the gap to 5-4.

In the bottom of the eighth, Ithaca's Brian Parrotte singled, Tim Wilson walked and Lou Milano singled to load the bases. After Dan Burns flied out, Gullickson walked Fritz Hamburg to force in the tying run.

Gullickson was removed and replaced by Tim Kuehn, who walked sophomore outfielder Dan Eckert on four pitches to force in what proved to be the winning run. Roman then singled to drive in the final run.

Joe Sottolano, who pitched 2 1/3 innings on relief, won his second game of the tournament and was named the most outstanding player of the championship, held June 2-6 at Bristol, Connecticut.

The loss was Tiedemann's final game with the Titans, who finished 28-8. In 20 years at Wisconsin-Oshkosh, the coach amassed a 501-165-2 record and guided the Titans to a Division III title in 1985.

Ithaca, which previously won the Division III championship in 1980, finished the season at 36-11-1.

In addition to Sottolano and Roman, members of the all-tournament team were third baseman Pat McDonald, Wisconsin-Oshkosh; outfielder Steve Graham, Ithaca; outfielder Scott Lewis, Marietta; first baseman Tim Wilson, Ithaca; second baseman Mike Brooks, Wisconsin-Oshkosh; shortstop Darrin Spitzer, Marietta; designated hitter Jim Peerenboom, Wisconsin-Oshkosh; catcher Greg Wakefield, Cal State Stanislaus, and pitcher Danny

Oregon's Annette Hand (wearing No. 174) pulled away from the field to set a record in the 5,000 meters

Louisiana State women win again, by slightest margin in meet history

Louisiana State held off Gail Devers and UCLA to capture its second consecutive team title at the Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

In the narrowest finish in the history of the meet, coach Loren Seagrave's Tigers defeated the Bruins by a three-point margin. The championships were held June 1-4 at Oregon.

Schowanda Williams led Louisiana State, winning the 400-meter hurdles and finishing fifth in the 100-meter hurdles. Teammate Sylvia Brydson was second in the 800 meters, while Esther Jones and Cheryl Coker recorded third-place finishes in the 100-meter dash and the javelin, respectively.

Devers turned in a strong individual performance for UCLA, winning the 100, finishing second in the long jump and third in the 100-meter hurdles, and running on relay teams that claimed a championship and a runner-up finish.

It was a meet for records in the distance events, as championships marks fell at 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 meters. Villanova's Vicki Huber shaved a full eight seconds off her own 3,000-meter mark. Cross country standout Annette Hand of Oregon shattered the 5,000-meter record before her home fans, and Sylvia Mosqueda of Cal State Los Angeles broke the 10,000-meter mark held by Stephanie Herbst of Wisconsin, who finished second.

The other meet record belonged to Lynda Tolbert, who established a new mark in the 100-meter hurdles.

Repeating as champions along with Huber were Wisconsin's Suzy Favor in the 1,500 and Sheila Hudson of California in the triple jump.

Booster liability legislation fails

A Louisiana House committee has rejected legislation that would have let any state university file suit against boosters whose recruiting efforts result in expensive NCAA sanctions.

Members of the Civil Law and Procedure Committee complained that the bill by Rep. Raymond Jetson, D-Baton Rouge, was too broadly written and could result in lawsuits filed against boosters who unknowingly violate minor NCAA rules.

Jetson reluctantly allowed the committee to defer action on his bill when it became clear it was headed for defeat.

Extra-inning battle decides II title

Bob LeFebvre scored from second on Fernando Arguelles' 12th-inning single, lifting Florida Southern to a 5-4 victory over Cal State Sacramento May 31 for the 1988 Division II Baseball Championship. Florida Southern has claimed seven Division II baseball titles three in the 1980s.

"After the year I had, I knew the Lord was with me tonight," Arguelles said following the title contest in Birmingham, Alabama. As a senior, he hit .281—the lowest average of his college career. Arguelles was the only starter left from the Moccasins' last NCAA championship team (1985).

"I wanted this one not just for myself," he added. "I wanted it more for the guys who had never been here."

Following are complete results from the championship.

Santa Clara's Bliven named to academic team third time

Three-time selection Wesley Bliven of Santa Clara and straight-A premedicine student Brad Beanblossom of Oklahoma State head the university and college divisions academic all-America baseball teams announced by GTE Corporation and the College Sports Information Directors of America.

To be named academic all-America, a student-athlete must be a starter or key reserve on his varsity baseball squad and maintain at least a 3.200 cumulative grade-point average (on a 4.000 scale) throughout his collegiate career.

Bliven, a pitcher who finished with a 14-2 record and a 3.65 earned-run average for the Broncos, was named to the team for the third consecutive year. He also was named the university division GTE academic all-America of the year in baseball. The honor goes to the student-athlete who "best represents the qualities of an academic all-America."

A senior physics major, Bliven has a 3.860 GPA and has been accepted to graduate school at Cornell.

Beanblossom, a second baseman and one of only two sophomores on the university division first team, had a 4.000 grade-point average in premedicine this semester. A versatile player, Beanblossom played five positions during the season, hit higher than .300 and stole more than 30 bases.

Gregory Slappey of Georgia Southwestern was the college division GTE academic all-America of the year.

Duke to retire from Big Ten post

Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke announced June 7 that he will retire from the conference, effective December 31, 1989.

Duke will continue to serve as commissioner until the conference's board of directors appoints his successor. After December 1989, he will serve as a consultant to the Big Ten and others.

Duke was the youngest chief executive officer of a major athletics conference when he was appointed commissioner of the Big Eight Conference in 1963 at age 34. He now is senior in terms of service among commissioners, entering his 25th year overall and his 17th with the Big Ten.

Ron Bertovich given a one-year contract extension as commissioner of the Atlantic 10 Conference. His contract is in effect through June 1990. Brenda B. Gelston named supervisor of women's basketball officials for the Colonial Athletic Association. She has been commissioner of the Maryland Intercollegiate Board of Officials for Women's Sports for 11 years and a basketball official for 23 years. John Iamarino promoted from public relations director to assistant commissioner for the Sun Belt Conference. He came to the conference office in 1984 after serving as sports information director at Jacksonville and assistant SID at Georgetown.

NOTABLES

Former Ohio State athletics director Richard M. Bay accepted a job with Starbright Group Incorporated, a new communications, management and television production company. Bay has been executive vice-president of the New York Yankees since February. Richard Ray, head trainer at Hope, elected president of the Great Lakes Athletic Trainers Association, a 2,500-member division of the National Athletic Trainers Association.

Also, George MacDonald, athletics director at Grand Valley State, awarded the first Tom Donahue Award by the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference in recognition of the two-time GLIAC president's contributions to the advancement of athletics. Donahue was a GLIAC commissioner who died in December 1987. Steve Cedorchuk, assistant men's ice hockey coach at Boston College, named head coach of the 1989 U.S. national junior hockey team by the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States.

14 automatic qualifiers recommended

Action concerning automatic qualification and championship-selection criteria highlighted the Division II Women's Basketball Committee meeting in Kansas City May 31 to June 3.

The committee voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that the following 14 conferences receive automatic qualification to the 1989 championship: California Collegiate Athletic Association, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Continental Divide Conference, Empire State Conference, Great Lakes Valley Conference, Gulf South Conference, Lone Star Conference, Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, New England Collegiate Conference, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Northeast-Ten Conference, Thomas J. Frericks, vice-president and director of athletics at the University of Dayton and secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, was reported in good condition and preparing to leave Kettering Memorial Hospital in Dayton this week after undergoing double coronary bypass surgery May 31.

Frericks, 56, underwent the 2½-hour operation following a series of tests. He was released from the

DEATHS

Travis Roach Jr., a former Texas football player who is credited with writing a sports-agents law recently adopted by the Texas Legislature, died of a brain tumor May 30 in Austin, Texas. He was 38. Roach was a reserve defensive tackle on Texas' 1969 national-championship team. After playing professionally in the Canadian Football League and with the New York Jets, Roach earned a law degree and became a sports agent in Austin. Robert J. Townsend, retired Williams ski coach and a member of the National Ski Hall of Fame, died May 27 in North Adams, Massachusetts. He was 66. Williams represented the United States as a skier in the 1948 Winter Olympics and won U.S. Nordic championships in 1947 and 1949. He coached from 1950 to 1972 at Williams, where he also assisted with football and lacrosse.

Q How do the incidences of injury differ among intercollegiate sports?

A An injury rate, defined as the number of injuries divided by the number of athlete exposures (A-Es), is one way to compare injuries among sports. The NCAA Injury Surveillance System (ISS) monitors such rates, based on injuries and exposures in both practices and games, for 13 intercollegiate sports. The following table lists the average injury rate from the year indicated in parentheses through 1987 for each sport in the ISS.

Three to retire after long college sports careers

Three well-known figures in intercollegiate athletics are retiring. David M. "Boo" Ferriss, baseball coach at Delta State University; David B. Tuuk, long-time track coach and director of athletics at Calvin College, and Nick Vista, sports information director at Michigan State University, have stepped down from their positions.

Delta State will honor Ferriss in ceremonies on the school's baseball diamond June 18, with a reception to follow. He coached Delta State for 26 seasons and led the Statesmen to more than 600 victories.

With the exception of a few years in high school teaching and athletics administration, Tuuk spent his entire career at Calvin, his alma mater. His cross country and track teams claimed Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships 13 times and 11 times, respectively. As athletics director at the school, he spearheaded drives that led to Calvin's hosting seven consecutive Division III Men's Basketball Championships and several other NCAA national and regional events.

Vista has served Michigan State since 1954, when he was named full-time assistant to Sports Information Director Fred Stabley. Vista became SID when Stabley retired. Prominent in the field throughout his career, Vista was the first assistant SID named to the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) hall of fame.

Trivia Time: Including this issue of The NCAA News, how many editions have been published since the paper changed its format and production schedule in 1982? Answer later.

Steve Posner, men's gymnastics coach at Springfield College, left May 25 for a three-week visit to China as part of an international exchange program between Springfield and the Beijing Institute of Physical Education. "The Chinese gymnasts are among the best in the world," Posner said. "I'm interested in learning about their system of developmental and competitive gymnastics. I'm also eager to learn how they teach and develop their coaches and teachers."

SportsVision, a Chicago-area cable sports channel, has reached a new, two-year agreement with Northwestern University that will increase television coverage of Wildcat football and basketball. "We strongly believe in the direction Northwestern athletics is headed," said Jim Corno, SportsVision vice-president and general manager, "and we want to be a part of its future successes."

A minimum of 15 Northwestern events featuring the two sports will be carried by SportsVision during the 1988-89 and 1989-90 seasons.

Boosters and friends of the University of Iowa's athletics programs are hearing about academic achievers at the school's 1988 fund-raising banquets. Iowa has prepared a four-page booklet highlighting student-athletes who earned a grade-point average of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale) during the fall 1987 semester and spotlighting a former Hawkeye student-athlete "who took full advantage of the educational opportunities available" at the university. Former all-Big Ten Conference linebacker Leven Weiss, now a lawyer in the Detroit area, is featured in the first edition of "Academic Achievers."

School officials said the publications are used as handouts at fund-raising affairs and will be updated and published after each semester.

Trivia Answer: This issue of The NCAA News, the 276th since the format and production schedule changed in 1982, marks the end of the sixth year of the 46-issue cycle.

More Report Cards: Eleven Bucknell University student-athletes were named East Coast Conference scholar-athletes during the 1987-88 academic year. Since the ECC began the program in 1980-81, 58 Bucknell athletes have been recognized.

Heidelberg College student-athlete Laurie Krizovski has received the Ohio Athletic Conference's Clyde A. Lamb Award as the conference's outstanding female scholar-athlete. The senior from Barberton, Ohio, played women's volleyball and basketball while earning a 3.920 GPA (4.000 scale) in biology and math. Following graduation, she will attend medical school at the University of Cincinnati.

Fifty-seven Northeast Louisiana University student-athletes were named to the school's athletics department honor roll for spring 1988, including six with 4.000 GPAs. They were April Thompson (women's softball), Julie Moffitt (women's volleyball), Maria Cash (women's tennis), Nelda Freeman (women's track), John Russell (men's track) and Eric Rice (men's tennis).

Thirty-eight of the 120 students participating in intercollegiate athletics at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, earned at least a 3.000 GPA during the spring semester. That figure represents 32 percent of the total student-athletes and cheerleaders in the athletics program.

All 13 conference sports and every member institution are represented by the 158 student-athletes named to the Midwestern Collegiate Conference's academic honor roll for 1987-88. Named were 82 men and 76 women. Xavier University (Ohio) topped member schools with 28 student-athletes representing 12 conference sports.

Mike McGourty and Patricia Hunt have been named the first recipients of what will be annual outstanding-scholar-athlete awards at Trenton State College. At the May 17 luncheon where McGourty and Hunt received their awards, more than 30 Trenton State student-athletes were recognized for academic achievement. The group's cumulative GPA was 3.300.

University of Georgia all-America swimmer Linda Leith has been named female scholar-athlete of the year by the Southeastern Conference. She graduates this spring with a degree in chemistry after compiling a 3.970 GPA. She will attend medical school next fall.

Two-sport athlete Penny Wehrs has been awarded the 1988 Kenneth E. Mercer Scholarship at the University of Dubuque. The four-year starter in women's volleyball and basketball has a 3.600 GPA in physical education. The scholarship was established in honor of contributions to the athletics department and the university by Mercer, a coach, professor and counselor at Dubuque whose career spanned three decades.

More Report Cards: Villanova University track student-athletes Vicki Huber, Celeste Halliday and Michelle DiMuro have been named to the 1987-88 Big East Conference academic all-star team. Huber has a 3.520 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in psychology, and DiMuro carries a 3.400 GPA in marketing. Both juniors, they were named to the all-academic team for the second time. Halliday, also a junior, has a 3.520 GPA in accounting.

"This is one of the things our program is concerned with—excellence in academics," said Marty Stern, Villanova women's track coach.

Western Illinois University track athlete Teri Wiser, a senior, has been named recipient of the first Cathy Early State Farm Scholarship, which the school will give annually on the basis of academic and athletic excellence. Wiser, who has a 3.927 GPA in biology, is among the school's top five career performers at three miles, 3,000 meters and 5,000 meters. She completed undergraduate work this spring as a student teacher.

Western Illinois officials also announced that junior swimmer Amy Wood has been awarded the first Laurie Meyers Potter Scholarship, named in honor of a former Westerwinds student-athlete and coach who is battling bone cancer. Potter said the scholarship will be awarded annually to a student-athlete who "has demonstrated desire, perseverance and God-given talents to be a winner in the spirit of competition."

Seven University of Oklahoma student-athletes have been recognized by school officials for various scholastic achievements. Football players Anthony Phillips and Todd Thomsen were named to the GTE/CoSIDA academic all-America team. Gridder Chris Melson and women's softball player Emily Parr won the Jay Meyers Awards as top freshmen in the classroom.

Football player David Vickers won the Sooner Schooner Scholastic Award as the letter-winner who maintained the highest GPA while completing four years of eligibility. He posted a 3.020 in finance. Basketball player Dave Sieger and women's volleyball player Margaret Page received Big Eight Conference medals as the top Oklahoma student-athletes who have completed their athletics eligibility.

Scholarship Financial Reports: University of Rhode Island President Edward D. Eddy has announced that a quarter of the school's proceeds from participation in the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championships will be used to establish a scholarship endowment honoring Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Garrick, parents of Rhode Island senior guard and team cocaptain Tom "The Chief" Garrick. The endowment will be established through the URI Foundation to support educational opportunities for minority students at the school.

James Copeland, athletics director at the University of Virginia, has announced that the $100,000 received from the Russell Corporation as a result of the Virginia football team's appearance in the 1987 All American Bowl will be shared by the University of Virginia Minority Fellowship Program ($75,000) and the school's Jefferson Scholars Program ($25,000).

Settlement ends case against Walters

Criminal charges against sports agent Norby Walters were dropped June 2 after he agreed to repay the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, for NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship receipts it lost because of his dealings with two former Crimson Tide basketball players.

Contract extended

Turner Broadcasting Inc. and the Southeastern Conference have announced a two-year extension in their contract allowing SuperStation WTBS to telecast between 10 and 12 SEC college football games through 1990.

The previous agreement between the cable television station and the college athletics conference had been scheduled to expire at the end of the 1988 season. WTBS has televised SEC games since 1984.

The Alabama attorney general's office filed a motion in Tuscaloosa County Circuit Court dropping the misdemeanor charges of tampering with a sports event, commercial bribery and trade violations after Walters agreed to pay the school more than $200,000 and never again deal with a Southeastern Conference athlete, United Press International reported.

Alabama filed a $3 million lawsuit against Walters last month over his dealings with former Tide stars Derrick McKey and Terry Coners. The school was forced to forfeit $250,000 in 1987 NCAA tournament receipts after it was learned that McKey and Coners had signed with Walters before their eligibility expired.

Walters paid the university $50,000 June 1 and produced a letter of credit agreeing to pay another $163,000 over the next two years.

Under the agreement, charges also will be dropped against Walters' associate, Lloyd Bloom, who pleaded guilty last month and agreed to testify against Walters. Bloom had been sentenced to a week of washing state trooper cars.

Attorney General Don Siegelman said although the charges against Walters were dropped, the settlement with the university will show sports agents that they will be held accountable for their illegal dealings with athletes in Alabama.

Siegelman earlier this year successfully prosecuted former Alabama sports agent Jim Abernethy for his illegal dealings with former Auburn University defensive back Kevin Porter. Abernethy, who was sentenced to a year in jail, has appealed the conviction.

After '93, SEC will stop grants to freshman nonqualifiers

The Southeastern Conference has put high school athletes on notice that incoming academically unqualified freshmen will not be awarded grants-in-aid to SEC schools after 1993.

League presidents approved the rule June 2, the final day of their business meeting in Sandestin, Florida. Commissioner Harvey W. Schiller said the SEC will be the first to have such a regulation.

"We're setting higher standards than the NCAA," he said. "We're making a strong statement for our conference. We're telling high school athletes what they need to have academically to participate in the SEC."

The presidents also voted to start, beginning in 1989, gradually reducing over a five-year period leading to 1993 the number of partial academic qualifiers signing grants, United Press International reported.

"I think it's a good move," said Mississippi State University football coach Rocky Felker. "It's putting the importance in the academic side, where it needs to be. Certainly, it's going to make the young men realize they have to do well in the high school core and start learning at an early age what they have to pass to get into a Division I school."

MAC gets three-year TV contract

The Mid-American Athletic Conference has entered an agreement with Master Video Productions, a Cleveland area syndication company, to produce an MAC game of the week in football and in men's basketball for the next three years.

The MAC game of the week will be telecast by cable systems and independent stations throughout the Midwest and the country.

The television package will begin with 10 football games this fall and nine basketball games next winter. All of the games in both sports will be played on Saturdays.

Master Video Productions is completing the list of cable systems and stations that will carry the MAC package. The syndicators have commitments that will make the MAC game of the week available in almost 40 million homes, including every major market in Ohio and Michigan and most of Indiana.

In addition, the MAC game will be nationally cablecast to the 15 million subscribers of the Tempo Enterprise system.

This package will give the MAC its greatest television exposure ever for a game-of-the-week package. The MAC did not have a television package this past year.

MAC Commissioner James W. Lessig said, "The competitive nature of our conference provides exciting, closely contested games, and the television coverage will provide excellent exposure for the MAC and its nine institutions."

School joins conference

The College of Notre Dame (California) will become an associate member of the Northern California Athletic Conference in men's and women's basketball for the 1988-89 season.

Notre Dame (California) has competed as a Division III independent. Following its admission to the conference as an associate member, the school announced that it intends to continue to expand its athletics program and become a full member of the conference.

Harvey W. Schiller

University of Mississippi coach Billy Brewer echoed Felker's sentiments.

"I think it's fine," said Brewer. "It's a move throughout the country. We've had time to adjust. The high schools and the student-athletes are improving; they're more aware of the guidelines."

Partial qualifiers are those high school athletes who lack one of two NCAA requirements under Bylaw

5-1-(j), but who have a 2.000 overall high school grade-point average. One requirement is a 2.000 grade-point average in a core curriculum, while the other is a score of at least 15 on the ACT or 700 on the SAT.

Under the plan, SEC football coaches can sign three partial qualifiers in 1989 and thereafter.

Basketball coaches—men's and women's—can sign two each in 1989 and 1990, one each in 1991 and 1992, and none thereafter. Men's and women's track coaches will follow the same guidelines as basketball.

In all other sports combined, a university can only sign two partial qualifiers over the next four years.

The SEC presidents also voted:

- To allow SEC baseball teams to play a 60-game schedule, up from the current 55;

- To prohibit teams under NCAA sanctions and not eligible for NCAA postseason competition from taking part in postseason conference tournaments;

- To increase the cost of an SEC basketball tournament season ticket from $75 to $80.

Conference presidents also voted the University of Mississippi a $435,000 share of football television and bowl revenues for 1987-88.

League rules prohibit a school under NCAA sanctions from receiving bowl and TV money. Conference officials would not reveal a vote count but said it was unanimous, United Press International reported.

The $435,000 represents 50 percent of what Mississippi normally would have received.

The University of Florida also received a 50 percent share when it asked for similar leniency in 1986. Like Florida, Mississippi was under sanctions for football recruiting violations.

SEC Commissioner Schiller emphasized that a 50 percent share for schools on probation is not standard operating procedure. He said the conference's leniency was prompted by Mississippi's positive response and full cooperation with the NCAA.

Mississippi Chancellor R. Gerald Turner, who had sought a share of the revenue, said, "The response of the presidents is deeply appreciated, not only because of what it means to our programs financially, but because it means they realize that we have taken every action possible to correct the problems found in our program."

Mississippi was given a two-year NCAA probation with one year of sanctions for football recruiting violations. The year of sanctions is over, but the Rebels remain on probation until December 1.

Iowa hawking its football program with national advertising campaign

The University of Iowa, feeling in need of a glossier image to recruit top football players, has decided to promote three of its top players and coach Hayden Fry in some of the nation's premier sports journals.

The promotional campaign, believed to be the first of its kind to use paid advertising in national magazines, consists of a full-page spread publicizing the accomplishments of Fry, along with quarterback Chuck Hartlieb, tight end Marv Cook and nose guard Dave Haight.

"It's probably going to set a trend for other colleges in the future," Fry said. "In some cases, it may not be necessary; but for us here in Iowa, it is."

"Outside of Iowa, we still don't have the image we need from a recruiting standpoint," he said.

Readers of Street and Smith, Game Plan, Football News and The Sporting News will see the ad, which cost the school $11,000 to place.

The ad is part of an informational campaign that includes fliers and posters sent to media, coaches and businesses across the country. It lists the accomplishments of the players and Fry, but it does not, for example, explicitly push Hartlieb as a Heisman Trophy candidate.

Fry has stated in the past he doesn't believe in hyping players for that specific awards.

"Too much pressure," Fry said. "This is based on their accomplishments. That's the reason we didn't include (tackle) Bob Kratch or (full-back) David Hudson (who were hurt much of last year). The three players we're promoting have the credentials to qualify for recognition."

The campaign was designed by sports information director George Wine and athletics promotions director Rick Klatt.

"We're attacking two problems," Klatt said. "In our league, Ohio State and Michigan have tremendous reputations. But we're every bit as good as they are, and people don't realize it."

The reaction of at least one of the players can best be described as indifferent.

"I don't know what to think, to be honest with you," said Cook, who is from West Branch. "Me and Dave and Chuck have the same philosophy. We take care of our business on Saturdays and let the sports information people battle it out as to who gets all-Big Ten and things like that."

Cook led the nation in receptions by a tight end last year, handled the punting chores and was probably the best tackler on Iowa's special teams. But the all-America teams passed him by.

"Tim Brown," Cook said, speaking of the Notre Dame wingback. "Not to take anything away from Tim Brown, but there were better players in the country that deserved the Heisman more than he did, in my opinion. But that was one big campaign by Notre Dame to get him the award."

Is Iowa fighting fire with fire? "I don't believe that," Cook said. "That just makes a bigger fire, as far as I'm concerned."

Wine, who has been at Iowa since 1968, doesn't believe the ads will influence sportswriters and broadcasters.

"But by the same token, a little bit of advance notice is somewhat necessary."

The team is helped by the campaign, Fry said.

Hayden Fry

"It's an opportunity to get exposure for the entire team, also for those three individuals," he said. "It will help from a recruiting standpoint. A high school player sees it and says, 'If I'm good enough at Iowa, I'll get national publicity.'"

"Having the University of Iowa advertised in a positive manner in a national publication will be of benefit to the entire university," Wine said.

The campaign will not become an annual event, Fry said.

Wine already has fielded phone calls from papers around the country whose writers are seeking more information.

The magazines won't hit the newsstands until mid-summer.

"If Chuck Hartlieb wins the Heisman Trophy, 90 percent of the schools will be doing it next year," Wine said.

Scalping charge is dismissed

A charge of attempting to scalp Final Four basketball tickets that was filed against Iowa Wesleyan College coach Jerry Olson has been dismissed.

Olson and three other college basketball coaches were arrested in Kansas City, Missouri, as a result of an undercover investigation and charged with scalping their tickets to the championship. The charge against Olson was dismissed May 19 in a Kansas City municipal court.

Another of the coaches, former University of North Dakota assistant Don Rockstad, was acquitted earlier this month. Rockstad, who was relieved of his duties following his arrest, has said he refused an offer from prosecutors to dismiss the case if he would donate $200 to charity in the Kansas City area and pay $40 in court costs.

Iowa Wesleyan President Robert Prins said dismissal of the charge "indicates Olson is the type of person we need in our program and that he obviously was entrapped in an unfortunate incident."

At the time of the arrest, Prins placed Olson on two years' probation and directed him to write a letter of apology to the school's students and faculty. Prins said the probation will remain in effect even though the charge has been dropped.

24 additional summer leagues are approved

Twenty-four additional summer basketball leagues have been approved for student-athlete participation, bringing to 186 the number that have been certified by the NCAA Council.

Any questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer leagues should be directed to Richard C. Perko, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Following are the 15 men's and nine women's leagues recently approved for participation.

Osborne says alcohol poses biggest problem

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, football coach Tom Osborne has urged Republican Party leaders not to ignore problems with alcohol as they formulate policy to combat drug abuse.

"The thing I would really want to emphasize to you is that far and away the biggest problem we have is alcohol, and that is the thing I see on a daily basis in our high schools and colleges," Osborne said at a hearing of the Republican Party Platform Committee recently in Kansas City, Missouri.

"A lot of kids are making decisions about alcohol and subsequently marijuana and subsequently cocaine at age 9, 10 or 11," said Osborne, who was invited to testify by Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr, who is chair of the committee.

Osborne said he had become familiar with drug and alcohol problems in recruiting visits to 70 to 80 high schools a year and another 70 to 80 private homes.

"I know when I go into certain areas of the inner city, there are three or four deadbolts on the door, and they are all bolted behind you even though you are at home," Osborne said.

Osborne said the solution to the drug problem is continued efforts to eliminate the supply, as well as education programs aimed at children as early as grade school. He also recommended advertising using role models, noting that beer commercials using former athletes were successful in selling alcohol.

In response to a question, Osborne said he supported drug testing in some cases and that the NCAA drug-testing program had been successful.

"I think it's a good thing on a selective basis for people in the public eye," Osborne said.

Osborne testified at one of four hearings the GOP platform committee scheduled to develop a platform to be presented at the presidential convention later this year.

Major-league draft doesn't impair eligibility of players

A number of college baseball players were selected by Major League Baseball teams in the recent draft, but that does not necessarily endanger their eligibility to continue their college athletics careers.

The same is true of high school athletes who plan on college baseball careers.

So long as they do not enter into negotiations with the teams that have drafted them, their eligibility for college baseball is unaffected, according to Stephen A. Mallonee, NCAA legislative services staff member.

"In professional football and basketball, unlike baseball, a player attempting to turn professional early must put his name on the hardship draft list; and once that is done, college eligibility is lost. He has declared his intention to turn professional, and that is sufficient to render the individual ineligible for intercollegiate baseball competition," Mallonee said.

An individual is not eligible for the baseball draft in his first two years at an NCAA institution. After that period, when a college player is drafted, he may listen to an offer from a professional team, but so long as he does not enter into negotiations concerning a contract, his college eligibility remains intact.

The player and his parents are the only persons who can hear an offer from a professional team. Once a third party is included in the contract offer, professionalism begins, according to NCAA rules.

However, a college player may take a contract offer from a professional organization to a lawyer or a financial adviser. But neither is allowed to negotiate on a player's behalf. Such actions by the lawyer or adviser would constitute representation by an agent and thereby jeopardize the athlete's eligibility.

A player may inquire about his status in a scheduled draft by asking for an evaluation of his potential worth to the major leagues in order to protect himself from contract offers that do not reflect his true worth.

College players also may hear more than one contract offer from a professional team that might decide to increase its offer after earlier offers have been rejected. But the same regulations hold true on subsequent offers. A player cannot negotiate with the professional team in any way without loss of eligibility.

"Once negotiations start," Mallonee said, "the individual has rendered himself ineligible for competition."

League expects to add members

Wittenberg University and Earlham College are expected to join the North Coast Athletic Conference and to compete in the expanded nine-team league this fall, it was announced June 3.

Dennis Collins, executive director of the NCAC, said the presidents of Wittenberg and Earlham have indicated that they will recommend that their schools accept the invitations.

NFL executives oppose player's petition to play

Several NFL executives oppose former University of Pittsburgh running back Brian Davis' petition to enter the league because he has two years of college eligibility remaining, the Associated Press reported.

Davis played less than one full season at Pittsburgh and twice has been an academic casualty. After being declared academically ineligible last month, he petitioned the NFL to be included in a July supplemental draft.

"He's got two years of (college) eligibility remaining, and I think he should find some other place to play," said Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm.

"I don't want to get involved with him," said Cincinnati Bengals General Manager Paul Brown. "I don't think it would be a healthy thing for the league or the colleges."

National Football League rules

state that no player with college eligibility can play in the league. However, waivers have been granted the last two years for several players.

"This would be a great time to dig in our heels.... This is the one Pete (Rozelle, the NFL commissioner) has got to say, 'Next year, son,'" New Orleans Saints President Jim Finks said.

"I'd say no to the petition, but I'm not part of the decision-making process," said New York Giants General Manager George Young. "This is not the same situation as Heyward. Heyward was in school four years. This kid (Davis) has no experience, no training, no maturity."

Davis' agent, Ed Keating, said, "Brian, obviously, couldn't make it academically. He doesn't belong in school. You can't send him back there to fail again."

Study shows parents back girls in sports

By Rick Warner

Most parents believe sports are as important for their daughters as for their sons, according to a national study released June 7.

Eighty-seven percent of the parents surveyed said they agreed that "sports are equally important for boys and girls."

"It shows the word 'tomboy' no longer exists in the athletics dictionary," said Dorothy Harris, education director of the Women's Sports Foundation, which commissioned the study, along with Wilson Sporting Goods Co.

"Girls who participate in sports are no longer laughed at and ridiculed. In fact, it's popular for girls to play sports. It's the sexy thing to do."

However, the study indicates that girls tend to drop out of sports as they get older. While 87 percent of those in the 7-to-10 age group said they participate in sports, the figure dropped to 75 percent in the 15-to-18 group.

According to the study, the drop-off is primarily due to interest in other activities, lack of time or interest in boys. Many black girls cited additional reasons for quitting sports, including transportation problems and inadequate funds to pay for equipment and lessons.

Many girls stop participating in sports during their midteens, the study shows.

"The puberty barrier appears to exist," said Harris, a professor of exercise and sport science at Pennsylvania State University. "When girls become more interested in boys, they tend to become less interested in sports."

The survey was based on telephone interviews last November and December with 1,004 parents and 513 of their 7-to-18-year-old daughters.

Among the findings:

- Girls whose parents are involved are more likely to participate themselves.

- While most parents believe better health is the best reason for their daughters to play sports, girls say the biggest motivator is "fun."

- Girls participating in sports receive more encouragement from their mothers than from their fathers.

- Seventy-three percent of the fathers said they are involved in sports or fitness activities, compared to 64 percent of the mothers.

- Most mothers feel sports activity is more important to them today than when they were young.

Deborah Anderson, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation, said attitudes about female participation in sports began to change in 1972 when Congress passed a law guaranteeing women equal educational opportunity. The Title IX legislation sparked a dramatic increase in girls' high school teams and college scholarships for female athletes.

Donna de Varona, who won two gold medals in swimming at the 1964 Summer Olympics, said many of the "myths" about female athletes have been broken since then.

"They used to say that women weren't interested in sports, that they didn't want to be fit and that sports made you unattractive," said de Varona, chair of the Women's Sports Foundation. "Today, we know that none of that is true."

Warner writes for the Associated Press.

Southern Cal to celebrate athletics centennial

Football will serve as the centerpiece for a yearlong celebration as the University of Southern California commemorates its athletics centennial beginning in August.

Approximately 800 former Trojan football players will be invited to an August 27 banquet on the floor of the Los Angeles Coliseum that will kick off a schedule of events stretching into April 1989.

"USC has a tremendous athletics tradition in all of its men's and women's sports, and we view the upcoming centennial as a way to pay tribute to that great heritage," said Bill Shumard, a longtime Los Angeles Dodgers administrator who was hired earlier this year to serve as executive director for the athletics centennial.

"Besides the 'let's celebrate' focus of the centennial, this also will provide us with the opportunity to increase the exposure of our athletics programs and the academic accomplishments of our student-athletes, to aid in our recruiting efforts, and to take advantage of special fund-raising opportunities," Shumard said. "We truly want to make this the 'celebration of the century.'"

The kickoff banquet will feature Heisman Trophy winner O. J. Simpson and Outland Trophy recipient Ron Yary as masters of ceremonies and former Southern Cal President Norman Topping as chair. Members of the current Trojan football team also will be in attendance at the event, which will be televised by Prime Ticket Cable.

Other events planned through the football season:

- A September 22 campus rally, two days prior to the Southern Cal game against the University of Oklahoma.

- The October 8 homecoming celebration that will feature the theme "A Hundred Years, A Million Cheers." On October 7, members of Southern Cal's 1962-63 national-championship teams in football, baseball, men's tennis, men's swimming and men's track will gather for a 25-year reunion.

A concert by the Beach Boys immediately following the Trojans' November 5 game against California.

Through the remainder of the academic year, the schedule includes a Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce luncheon in early 1989 to honor former Trojan student-athletes who are active in the Southern California business community and a festival in April focusing on the school's spring sports and featuring the burial of an athletics time capsule.

Several souvenirs also are being produced, including apparel featuring a centennial logo that also will be displayed on Trojan teams' uniforms. Also in the works are an anthology of stories about Southern Cal football, a football poster, trading-card sets focusing on football all-Americans and Trojan standouts in other sports, and collectable lapel pins commemorating each of the school's men's and women's teams and centennial events.

Also planned are the selection of an all-time Trojan football team, a poll of fans to determine Southern Cal's greatest football moment and a speakers bureau to provide former outstanding Trojan athletes as guest speakers.

Fund-raising efforts will include a $3.5 million "Centennial Challenge" matching-gifts campaign and the solicitation of centennial corporate sponsorships.
