Repeat champions

Stanford players celebrate a second straight Division I Baseball Championship after defeating Arizona State in the final game of the College World Series in Omaha June 11. The title gives the Cardinal three NCAA team titles this year. Stanford men's and women's tennis teams won NCAA titles earlier this spring.

Third National Forum expected to attract about 500 delegates

A turnout of approximately 500 delegates and news media representatives is expected at the Presidents Commission National Forum June 20-21 in Orlando.

Based on preregistration figures through June 13, the turnout will include about 335 delegates from Division I institutions and conferences, about 135 from Divisions II and III combined, and 30 or more from the news media. Approximately 90 institutional chief executive officers are expected.

For those members not attending, the Association will make available at cost a videotape of the general sessions and of one of the seven smaller-group discussion sessions.

The videotapes will be available as soon after the Forum as possible and may be ordered at $25 per tape by writing James A. Marchiony, director of media services, at the NCAA national office.

Third of four

The session in Orlando will be the third of four national meetings in the Commission's 18-month National Forum. It is the only one that is not being held in conjunction with an NCAA Convention.

Introducing the Forum in June 1987, the first session was held at the special NCAA Convention in Dallas and provided an introduction to the basic topic of the Forum: the proper place of college athletics in higher education. Primary speakers were Ira Michael Heyman, chancellor, University of California, Berkeley.

Top Kentucky court overturns $1.1 million award to Hornung

Kentucky's Supreme Court has overturned a $1.1 million jury award to Paul Hornung in a suit brought against the Association almost six years ago.

Hornung filed the suit July 30, 1982, in Jefferson County Circuit Court after the Association failed to approve Hornung as an announcer on college football telecasts because of his past ties to organized gambling.

"Hornung or his counsel could file a motion for a rehearing with the state supreme court; but since the decision was unanimous (7-0), I believe the case has been disposed of," said George H. Gangwere of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clarke and Kitchin, the NCAA's

Kansas City legal counsel.

In the suit, Hornung alleged defamation and interference with present and prospective contractual relationships, and he sought $1 million in actual damages and $2 million in punitive damages from the Association. Hornung at the same time initiated similar litigation in Johnson County (Kansas) District Court (the Association's national office is located in Johnson County).

A ruling was made to defer any Kansas proceedings pending disposition of the Kentucky litigation, and Gangwere said he believes activation of the Kansas case is unlikely.

"Again, given the nature of the Kentucky Supreme Court ruling, that decision, in my opinion, disposes of this case."

After initiation of the litigation, a motion was filed in the Kentucky court on behalf of individually named defendants for dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction. The Association also filed a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the Association. The court denied that motion, as well as a later appeal by the NCAA.

Following a U.S. Supreme Court decision that ended the Association's involvement in regular-season college football telecasts, cross motions were filed in Kentucky — Hornung's sought a summary judgment on the basis of antitrust law, and the Association's sought summary judgments on the plaintiff's claims of tortious (wrongful) interference of contractual relationships of employment and tortious interference with prospective business and contractual relationships.

The circuit court denied Hornung's motion, granted the NCAA summary judgment on the allegations of interference of contractual relationships, and denied the Association's request for summary judgment on allegations of interference with prospective business and contractual relationships.

At that point, the court had agreed with NCAA arguments that

Study of class enrollment finds normal attrition rate

A study of the class enrollment status of student-athletes in all sports and all NCAA divisions apparently indicates that athletes' attrition rates are comparable to student enrollment in general.

The NCAA Committee on Review and Planning requested the study last year to address a concern that the squads in some sports were composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores.

Those expressing that concern cited several possible implications, including the effectiveness of the Association's satisfactory-progress legislation.

When the committee reviewed the results of the study in its spring meeting, however, it concluded that the class-enrollment status of student-athletes in most sports probably reflects college and university enrollments in general.

In the aggregate, the survey results showed approximately 60 percent of most squads to be freshmen and sophomores and 40 percent upperclass enrollees.

The survey reflects data submitted by 459 member institutions, approximately 58 percent of the active membership at the time of the study.

Among the survey's findings:

- Divisions II and III squads tend to be more underclass-dominated than those in Division I in most sports.

Examples: In football, 56 percent of the squads in Division I are freshmen and sophomores, compared to 61 percent in II and 66 percent in III. Men's basketball: 51 percent in I, 56 percent in II, 64 percent in III.

Academic data sought from schools

Two former college and professional basketball stars, now U.S. Congressmen, introduced legislation June 13 requiring colleges to give prospective student-athletes an idea of how they'll fare in the classroom as well as on the playing field.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey, and Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, former teammates on the New York Knicks professional basketball team, introduced the "Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act."

The law would require all colleges accepting Federal financial help to compile and report scholastic statistics regarding student-athletes.

The data would be collected by the secretary of education and made available to students and their parents for use in choosing a school, the Associated Press reported.

Bradley and McMillen said the act is aimed at encouraging high school students to weigh academic standards, not just athletics prospects, as they chart their futures.

All too often, the ex-basketball players said, students pick a college on the unrealistic hope that they're on their way to a career in professional sports.

But since very few students make it to the pros, picking a college by its academic credentials makes more sense, according to Bradley and McMillen.

"Most people don't get that ticket to the pros," said Bradley, who attended Princeton University.

He and McMillen acknowledged that the bill would do little to address abuses by college athletics recruiters, or to stop colleges from holding athletes to lower academic standards than other students.

But, McMillen said, the measure

NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3)—20-year rule (ice hockey student-athletes)

In accordance with the provisions of newly amended Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3), in the sport of men's ice hockey, a prospective student-athlete who becomes 20 years old during a season of organized noncollegiate competition is permitted to complete that season without being charged a season of competition. Member institutions are reminded that these provisions may be applied retroactively. Thus, a student-athlete who had been charged previously with the loss of a season per Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3) may regain that season of competition, provided he or she has eligibility remaining in accordance with Bylaw 4-1-(a) (five-year rule).

NCAA Bylaw 11-3—Division III financial aid

The NCAA Division III Steering Committee, during its April meeting, took the following actions regarding Division III financial aid:

1. The adoption of 1988 Convention Proposal No. 93, amending Bylaw 11-3-(a)-(6), does not preclude the opportunity for a financial aid officer to exercise professional judgment.
2. Transportation may be a consideration in determining need, provided the award does not exceed the limitations established by NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(1).
3. Division III member institutions will not be required to use the College Scholarship Services Business/Farm Supplement in calculating financial need for prospective student-athletes.
4. It shall not be necessary to mandate established percentages in dealing with the "self-help" component of a financial aid package.
5. Consideration of athletic ability in "talent" scholarships provided to student-athletes no longer shall be permissible.
6. Packaging of financial aid may not be decreased because a student-athlete does not participate in varsity athletics at a member institution.
7. If a staff member at a Division III institution serves as a financial aid officer and either volunteers or is employed as a part-time assistant or head coach in the athletics department, the individual no longer shall be eligible to serve in such a dual capacity.
8. The passage of Proposal No. 92, amending NCAA Case No. 415, does not impinge on the academic freedom of Division III tenured faculty members.
9. Student-athletes' rights are not being denied by prohibiting consideration of athletics talent in awarding financial aid.
10. Student-athletes admitted to Division III member institutions prior to September 1, 1988, are not affected by the provisions of Proposal No. 93.
11. The admissions process shall be considered separate and distinct from the institution's process for awarding financial aid.
12. In instances in which admissions officers work on a matrix rating system where, as part of the admissions process, factors other than academic ability are considered, once a decision is reached concerning admission and the student-athlete's application is reviewed by the financial aid officer, all consideration of athletic ability or participation shall be eliminated from any rating system utilized by the financial aid office.
13. The defeat of Proposal No. 95, amending Bylaw 11-3-(a)-(4), should be interpreted to mean that leadership awards cannot be awarded without consideration of need. An individual's opportunity to participate in intercollegiate athletics shall not otherwise be precluded, provided athletics participation or ability is not a factor in determining such an award.
14. Proposal No. 93 allows a student-athlete to receive an award for special talents outside of athletics (i.e., art, drama, music).

DiJulia takes AD post

Don J. DiJulia, a member of the NCAA Executive Committee, has resigned as commissioner of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference and returned to St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia as director of athletics and assistant vice-president. Elected to the Executive Committee last January, DiJulia will continue his term as the Division I-AAA representative on that committee.

Commissioner of the Metro Atlantic since 1984, DiJulia previously was director of athletics at St. Joseph's from 1976 to 1981.

"An organization has strengths when it can let a person go and watch him grow, then have the strength to welcome that person back," said the Rev. Nicholas Rashford, president of St. Joseph's. As assistant vice-president, DiJulia will participate in university cabinet meetings, Rashford said.

The appointment at St. Joseph's was effective immediately upon announcement June 8. DiJulia replaces Michael Schultz, who resigned in late February and left the position May 31.

DiJulia played basketball at St. Joseph's before graduating in 1968 with a degree in political science. He served as an assistant basketball coach at Fairfield University, George Washington University and American University before becoming AD

CFA votes to retain Bylaw 5-1-(j)

Part of the information contained in a United Press International story on the College Football Association's annual meeting was in error.

The story, published in the June 8 issue of The NCAA News, reported that the CFA had voted to recommend changing the NCAA's Bylaw 5-1-(j) so that a high school student with a 2.200 grade-point average could become eligible with an SAT score of 660, rather than the currently required 680.

A proposal to lower the SAT requirement was discussed briefly, but the CFA took no further action on the matter.

Instead, delegates voted for the retention of Bylaw 5-1-(j) in its present form until a current NCAA study is concluded and results evaluated.

ley; Frank E. Horton, president, University of Oklahoma; Anthony F. Ceddia, president, Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania, and Richard Warch, president, Lawrence University.

The second Forum session was held in January at the annual NCAA Convention in Nashville; it dealt with economic considerations in athletics.

The primary speakers then were Robert H. Atwell, president, American Council on Education; Christopher C. Fordham, then chancellor of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Thomas J. Frericks, vice-president, University of Dayton, and NCAA secretary-treasurer; Neal H. Pilson, president, CBS Sports, and Mitchell H. Raiborn, professor of accounting, Bradley University.

The Commission will end the Forum next January at the Association's Convention in San Francisco. The topic at that session will be the student-athlete's collegiate experience compared to that of the nonathlete student, a subject now being researched for the Commission by the American Institutes for Research.

In Orlando

The Orlando Forum deals with three topics: the NCAA membership structure, NCAA legislative and interpretative procedures, and the proper basis of financial aid for student-athletes.

Highlighting the program will be a keynote speech by Congressman Tom McMillen of Maryland, a former all-America, academic all-America and Rhodes Scholar. McMillen will address the delegates shortly after 8 a.m. June 20.

The rest of the morning session that day will deal with the NCAA membership structure, both in general session and in seven discussion sessions. Speakers on that issue are Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director; Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, and Kenneth J. Weller, president, Central College (Iowa).

In the June 20 afternoon session, after reports from the morning discussion sessions, the group will turn its attention to NCAA legislative and interpretative procedures. Speakers: Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive director, Ivy Group; Lattie F. Coor, president, University of Vermont, and Wilford S. Bailey, NCAA president, Auburn University.

There will be a reception that evening for everyone attending the Forum.

Reports from the discussion sessions on NCAA procedures will begin the morning session June 21, after which the delegates will focus on financial aid issues.

Speakers on the topic are Peter Likins, president, Lehigh University, and Cecil Mackey, former president of Michigan State University. A panel of members of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, led by Marvin G. Carmichael of Clemson University, also will present its views.

Other members of that panel are Orleans; Judith M. Brame, California State University, Northridge; Joseph A. Russo, University of Notre Dame, and Diane Tsukamaki, Lewis and Clark College.

The final general session includes reports from the smaller-group discussion sessions on financial aid and closing remarks by Presidents Commission Chair John B. Slaughter, who will preside over all general sessions.

Leading the seven discussion groups will be Merrily Dean Baker, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities; Harold H. Haak, California State University, Fresno; David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley; Bob Moorman, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association; John P. Reardon Jr., Harvard University; Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego, and Albert M. Witte, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Highlights of the Orlando program will be featured in the June 22 issue of the News, with detailed coverage in the July 6 issue. The News begins its every-other-week summer schedule after the June 22 issue.

Duke's career includes almost 40 years of NCAA service

Although it has been 25 years since retiring Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke left his position as an NCAA staff member, he has maintained a prominent role in Association activities.

In fact, Duke's stature in intercollegiate athletics grew in step with the growth of the NCAA itself.

Two years after earning a degree in journalism from the University of Iowa in 1950, Duke accepted newly installed NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers' invitation to join his fledgling staff as an assistant.

During the next 11 years, Duke was involved in nearly every phase of the expanding Association's activities.

As a staff member, he compiled the first administrative and management manuals for the men's basketball championship and the College World Series while serving as staff administrator and liaison for the events. Duke also promoted the growth of the NCAA's football television series as a liaison to the national television networks.

He also became the principal founder of the United States Basketball Writers Association, which recently remembered his role by making Duke a charter member of its hall of fame.

In 1963, the 34-year-old Duke was an experienced hand in intercollegiate athletics. The Big Eight Conference became the immediate beneficiary of his knowledge that year when it selected Duke as its would assist students trying to make well-rounded judgments about their educations.

"The idea here is to provide a snapshot... a balance sheet of the university's academic picture," said McMillen, a graduate of the University of Maryland, College Park.

The act would require schools to report graduation rates for all students with scholarships, listed by sport, sex and race. The education secretary would be required to publish the information.

The law also would require students to acknowledge reviewing a school's academic data before signing a letter of intent to enroll.

Rep. Ed Towns, D-New York, a cosponsor of the legislation, said, "If we can have reporting as to the on-time arrivals of airlines, surely we can let student-athletes know whether they are likely to receive a useful college degree."

disapproving of Hornung as a college football announcer had not interfered with other contracts Hornung had in effect at the time. It did not agree, however, that possible future contracts and business prospects had not been harmed. A jury trial on that contention was completed August 24, 1985.

The jury awarded no actual damages, but Hornung was awarded $160,000 in consequential damages and $1 million in punitive damages. An NCAA motion to set aside the verdict was denied, as was an appeal to the Kentucky Court of Appeals. A decision by that court affirming the jury award was made July 17, 1987.

On October 27, 1987, the state supreme court granted the Association's motion for discretionary review. Briefs were filed, and oral arguments were heard this spring.

The state's highest court issued its reversal earlier this month.

Wayne Duke

commissioner and made him the youngest chief executive of a major athletics conference.

Duke would serve with the Big Eight for seven years before moving on to the Big Ten in 1971. He retained his ties with the NCAA, however, remaining involved through extensive committee work.

He served on several special NCAA committees, beginning with his four years on the Special Committee for the Advancement of Intercollegiate Football (1967-1970) and extending through his 1978-1981 term on the Special Basketball Television Negotiating Committee. Duke also served on special panels dealing with the football centennial, enforcement, and licensing and merchandising, and chaired the Special Committee on Ineligible Statistics.

In 1968, he began a three-year term on the NCAA Legislative Committee and subsequently served terms on the Executive Committee, Television Committee and Long Range Planning Committee.

Duke's presence in the Association's governance structure has been credited with encouraging NCAA member institutions to adopt such Big Ten innovations as limitations on athletics grants-in-aid and the one-year grant.

He also is regarded as a key figure in the growth of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship and the Final Four. Building on his experiences as an administrator of the event while an NCAA staff member, Duke served from 1975 to 1981 on the Division I Men's Basketball Committee, including four years as chair.

During his tenure on the committee, the tournament bracket was expanded from 32 to 48 teams, at-large selection of teams was adopted, and a seeding and placement procedure was introduced to develop a balanced tournament bracket.

Also, he presided over the awarding of television rights for the tournament to CBS Sports—a move that led to the NCAA's receiving more than $57 million annually in rights fees today.

As Duke prepares to retire as Big Ten commissioner, he continues to be involved in NCAA affairs. He currently is serving his third term on the Professional Sports Liaison Committee, which he chaired for four years during the 1970s.

His service to intercollegiate athletics will not end with his retirement, which is effective December 31, 1989. Duke, who will be 61 then, plans to serve as a consultant to the Big Ten Conference and other organizations.

Football players need more money? It's just not true

By Al Dunning
Memphis Commercial Appeal

College football coaches are considering a new scam that would put more money in the pockets of students majoring in pre-NFL studies.

Some coaches want their schools to "repurchase" the four complimentary tickets each player receives for every game. Coaches say such an arrangement could provide players at major football schools with up to $600 apiece in additional spending money.

The idea surfaced at the College Football Association's meeting in Dallas.

CFA schools said they would evaluate the ticket repurchase scheme and maybe recommend it to the NCAA.

One coach excited about the potential pay raise for football players is Tom Osborne of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. He told newsmen: "Some of the players are beginning to feel exploited. They know coaches are making $100,000 to $200,000 per year, and they are working just for their scholarships. They don't have any extra money, and many of them do need help."

Coaches recycle the same arguments every time they try to invent new hustles for paying players. And what they are saying simply is not true.

College players do have extra money. If they can't get it from home, they can get it from the Federal government. And those who can tear themselves away from the beach between mid-May and mid-August are at liberty to get summer jobs and save a little cash. Many do.

There simply is no such thing as an American kid who is too poor to play football while receiving a free ride through college.

Certainly there are college athletes whose kinfolk cannot afford to dole out spending money. But help is available to those players, just as it is to other students from low-income families. Assistance comes from the U.S. government in the form of Pell Grants. Under NCAA rules, an athlete may receive up to $1,400 a year in Pell Grant money.

That cash is his to spend as he pleases. A Division I-A football scholarship covers tuition, room, books, fees and food. A scholarship football player thus does not have to use his Pell Grant dough for school expenses, because they're already paid.

NCAA rules do not permit a scholarship athlete to hold a job during the school year. Some coaches complain about the policy. Some fans also think it's dumb. But examine the reason for the rule, and it makes sense. Allow quarterbacks to work during the academic year, and some creative schools might arrange for them to make $1,000 a week waxing some sugar daddy's Ferrari.

On the other hand, NCAA rules do allow scholarship athletes to work during the summer. It's purely speculative, but my guess is that a starting cornerback at Nebraska might get a better-paying summer job in Lincoln than, say, some kid who plays the tuba in the marching band.

But let's say the cornerback has to labor for minimum wage, same as a bunch of other college kids in summertime America. Over a 12-week summer, even at minimum wage, a player can earn about $1,600.

Add $1,600 to the $1,400 he may receive in Pell Grant allowances, and even a kid from a destitute family has $3,000 a year to sprinkle through pizza parlors and discos. That's $250 a month—which is a lot more walking-around money than a lot of grown men with real jobs ever have.

Are football players exploited?

Get serious.

Institutions betray track athletes

To the Editor:

I am a volunteer track and field official in Northern California. This track season, I had personal contact with three of the most demoralized Division I track and field teams I have ever witnessed in over 25 years as an official.

This spring, Northwestern University, Oregon State University and San Jose State University all competed at one time or another at various locations in Northern California.

As was recently published in the local newspapers, each of the above-named institutions found it necessary to drop its track and field program, effective at the end of this spring semester.

The NCAA News, of which I have been a regular subscriber over the past several years, has been very conscious about pointing the finger at the SMUs that have violated the bylaws of the NCAA. Also, the penalties given to these institutions have been duly noted. All well and good.

My point is that not one word, to my knowledge, has been published in The NCAA News regarding the injustices committed by the above-named institutions against their student-athletes because they dropped track and field from their programs. These athletes were recruited to attend and represent the respective institutions. Now, they find themselves without a program to participate in. The young student-athletes on the above-mentioned teams when I worked with them were depressed, disappointed, bewildered and literally lost as to what happened to them and their expectations as athletics competitors, team members and students.

At San Jose State University, the decision to discontinue the program came late in the season and was a hard-and-fast decision. What alternatives were available to the student-athletes? The coaching staff? The community commitment to the program?

Where is there justice to be found for these young people?

The NCAA is good at punishing institutions for recruiting-code violations and other sins committed to gain competitive advantage. What about this situation where approximately 150 very talented student-athletes and 10 coaches are left with few if any alternatives. How about some NCAA help for a change?

Both Oregon State and San Jose State compete in the same relative competitive area. How much suffering will be inflicted on the schools that have traditionally competed against these teams? How much more travel and expense will be involved to find adequate competition?

It is my hope that somehow in the future as these student-athletes and coaches find new institutions that have an appreciation of their talents, the NCAA can minimize their hurts. Also, that the NCAA with its strong authority will be able in the near future to restore track and field as well as all of the other discontinued athletics programs at San Jose State, Oregon State and Northwestern.

Let's not kill minor-league system

To the Editor:

The republished excerpt of Ferdinand Geiger's comments about baseball in the June 1, 1988, issue of The NCAA News is simply too tempting to let pass without reply.

In it, he is quoted as saying that college is a good option for athletes with aspirations for a professional career in baseball because "college baseball is a free minor-league system for the athletes, with good equipment and good managers. The athletes are getting a pretty good deal without spending a dime."

It's wrong to make some sports dependent on football gate receipts

"I'm starting to be more selective. When I first got here, I was doing more than I should have done. We don't want to get into a position where we dilute the market."

Richard W. Kazmaier Jr.,

Excerpted from a speech to NACDA convention

"Sports revenues have snowballed over the past 25 years, or at least since the advent of television and the insatiable appetite for sponsors to use TV to convey their message—whether it be to sell a product or service or create a favorable impression for their business generally.

"A more recent phenomenon is corporate sponsorship of an event—whether a bowl game, an overseas contest or even a regular-season basketball game.

"As a result of this abundance, there is a strong temptation for a college athletics program, particularly football and basketball, to gear itself for a big piece of the pie. This often has been accompanied by an expectation that all of the athletics department's budget be covered by the income received.

"In most state-supported institutions, it is required by law. Thus, income becomes the primary mission, rather than the quality of the student experience. And it is a challenge indeed to make dollars and integrity compatible.

"The athlete is thrust into the midst of this bottom-line environment. How can we not be sensitive to the perspective of the blue-chip athlete who literally can touch the pot of gold that dangles before his eyes every day?

"Consider the stark contrast between life as a 21-year-old, NCAA-regulation-abiding student-athlete receiving a $1,400 Pell Grant and life as an average 24-year-old NBA player making $600,000.

"How can we be surprised that some student-athletes—sometimes encouraged by others—cannot resist the temptation to dip into that pot of gold?"

"I'm shocked. It should have happened a long time ago (Southeastern Conference presidents' decision to phase out awarding athletics grants-in-aid to academic nonqualifiers).

"The movement is in the right direction. I'm glad to know that positive steps are being taken.

"Sometimes it's painful, but it's not always bad to be a leader. A conference like ours sets an example others will follow. It could have happened a long time ago; but sometimes, reform doesn't come as quickly as you'd like."

Conference executives praise SEC move on nonqualifiers

By Tony Barnhart
The Atlanta Constitution

The Southeastern Conference's unprecedented decision to phase out the awarding of grants-in-aid to academic nonqualifiers by 1993 drew praise from other conferences, and some commissioners said their leagues would consider similar measures.

Thomas C. Hansen of the Pacific-10 Conference hailed the SEC's move as "a very positive step. I think it will provoke each conference in the country to look at a very similar position."

Hansen said he expects the issue to be added to the agenda when the Pac-10 holds its annual meetings this month.

"You can certainly say we're going to talk about it a great deal," said Hansen. "This is a very interesting development."

Under the SEC plan for football, schools can sign only three nonqualifiers—students who do not have a

2,000 grade-point average on a 4,000 scale in a core curriculum and a 700 Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) score or 15 on the ACT—in 1989. The number of such admissions will be reduced to two in '89 and '90, one in '92, and none in '93. The numbers vary for basketball and other sports.

"I think it's a remarkable and courageous step."

No commissioner interviewed was willing to say the action would pressure other conferences to follow suit. They did say, however, the move would at least prompt discussion at the annual athletics meetings.

"I think it is a remarkable and courageous step," said Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference. "It will be interesting to see how it evolves. But we'll have to study the matter very carefully before we do something like this unilaterally."

Duke said he was surprised at the SEC's move to strengthen academics, given its opposition to a Big Ten proposal at the last NCAA Convention calling for a strengthened national satisfactory-progress rule. That rule would have called for higher grade-point averages for athletes during each succeeding year in order to remain eligible.

"I guess they have different ways of looking at a problem in different parts of the country," said Duke.

Eugene F. Corrigan, the Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner, said he didn't think his league would adopt such a rule "because most of our schools already have made that decision on an individual basis." Of eight ACC schools, only Clemson, Maryland and Georgia Tech accept academic nonqualifiers.

"But I think it's a good statement coming from them (the SEC schools)," said Corrigan. "It will be interesting to see what the reaction to this will be in the coming weeks."

Commissioner Carl C. James predicted that the Big Eight Conference would take a long look at the SEC's rule at its next league meeting in September.

"We have felt comfortable with the NCAA rules (which allow nonqualifiers to enroll but sit out a year), but we want to be in step with what the other major conferences are doing," said James. "If a majority of our members feel this is an appropriate step, then we'll do it."

One commissioner, who asked that his name not be used, speculated that the SEC has put itself at a competitive disadvantage.

"I don't think there is any question about it," he said. "They are going to have to work very hard to make this pan out."

One college administrator who has been critical of the SAT provision under NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j) applauded the SEC's move.

"I don't see the action on the part of the SEC as at all inappropriate," said John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, and the chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission. "We've reduced the number of nonqualifiers we can accept at Maryland to one, so I can understand why they would want to go in that direction."

Another reason Slaughter says he doesn't have a problem with the SEC's decision is his belief that many of the academic ills 5-1-(j) was designed to correct will be resolved by the time the impact of the SEC legislation is felt.

"My belief continues to be that by 1991 high school athletes will have gotten the message so strongly, there will be few students who fall into this problem," said Slaughter. "By 1993, it will all be a moot point."

Complaints could lead to change in tennis play-off format

By Ivan Aronin
and
Steven Colquitt
Athens (Georgia) Daily News

Seven singles players and one doubles team representing national champion Stanford University and runner-up Louisiana State University were eliminated during opening rounds of the individual competition of the NCAA Division I Men's Tennis Championships.

Does that significant total indicate that the two schools weren't worthy of berths in the championships? More likely, it indicates that the players buckled under the physical and emotional strains associated with the rigorous tournament format.

Sharp criticism

And, as usual, sharp criticism from both players and coaches has arisen, denouncing the format, which has been in inception since 1977.

Clemson University coach Chuck Kriese received a public reprimand from the NCAA tennis committee for his postmatch comments, including referring to the tournament as "a circus," after the Tigers were eliminated by the University of Kentucky. Stanford's Jeff Tarango, beaten in the first round, called it "the worst-run tournament in the world."

The criticisms have been tempered by an informal proposal by University of Texas, Austin, coach Dave Snyder. Snyder has proposed that the NCAA sponsor separate tournaments—one to include the singles and doubles fields and one to decide the team championship. Under this proposed format, the two tournaments would be held at different times of the tennis season.

"The concept is that most of our competition in the fall is an open-tournament format. We should follow that up with a singles and doubles tournament, maybe in late February. Then, in the spring, we could come back and emphasize the dual-match system with a team tournament," Snyder said. "Everybody seems to be excited about it, which is encouraging. As long as the coaches like the concept, then we will work it out through channels. I think that it is just an opportunity to streamline the tournament."

Gives an advantage

The advantage of a format under Snyder's proposal would be that the players would not have to play such a demanding tournament. Under the current system, the team tournament is held—taking a minimum of five days for the finalists—followed by the individuals. A player may be involved in two singles matches and one doubles match on the day after the team final.

"We understand that this is tough on the kids," said Jeff Frank, a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee. "They are successful all year, and then they have to play a demanding tournament. When they get here, there are no easy matches."

Frank, also the tennis coach at Davidson College, said Snyder's proposal would be considered by the committee at meetings July 17-20 in Kansas City, Missouri. Any recommendations would be made to the NCAA Executive Committee during meetings in August, he said.

Frank said that the two biggest logistical problems that he sees with the change are whether the two tournaments will be held at the same site and whether the NCAA will pay the players' expenses for both tournaments.

Frank added that Snyder's proposal would not be the only one considered by the committee. Prior to this year, there was an off day between the team-championship match and the start of the individual competition. That off day was withdrawn last year when the field was expanded from 16 to 20 teams.

"We checked with all of the coaches who were here two years ago and they unanimously agreed to give up the extra day to expand the field," said Frank. "The idea (of splitting the tournament) has a lot of merit, and we will definitely discuss it at our next committee meeting. I think that we have plenty of validity to prove to the NCAA (Executive Committee) that this format is tough on the players."

Frank said a consideration would be to implement an additional day. Under the current format, the individual championships are held on Saturday. Adding the extra day, Frank said, would move the finals to either Sunday or Monday, which would be Memorial Day.

He emphasized that any changes possibly could be three years away. The NCAA championships will be moving from Athens (where they have been held since 1977) to Indian Wells, California, next season. They will return to Athens in 1990.

"They (both cities) have been told that they will host this tournament (featuring individual and team play)," Frank said. "That's what they placed their bids on."

Steroids can breed violence, Olympic physician contends

Athletes who take anabolic steroids may become prone to violence, according to a report in the June 9 issue of Medical Tribune.

Robert Voy, M.D., director of sports medicine and science for the U.S. Olympic Committee, told the Medical Tribune that athletes suspected of using the muscle-building hormones should be approached with caution, according to United Press International.

"Anabolic madness is something we're going to hear more about," Voy said. "As far as diminished capacity is concerned, there are cases before the courts today involving athletes and violent behavior. In fact, there have been some murders committed by people who took anabolic steroids."

Speaking at a recent meeting in New York, Voy quoted Houston Oilers player Dean Steinkuhler as saying, "It (steroids) made me feel real moody, violent. I wanted to kill somebody."

Voy told the magazine, "What is so dangerous about this aggressive side-effect is that it creates a psychological and physiological addiction."

Some harmful effects of steroids, according to Voy, include variations in sexual drive, excessive hair growth, dizziness and testicular pain.

and I believe you will be closer to the truth. Perhaps Mr. Geiger doesn't have this problem at Stanford, but what I see in greater numbers each year are young men with talent and interests in baseball (and football and basketball) but no interest in the intellectual world of higher education.

I lament the rise of college baseball as the preferred path to the majors, because it probably spells the death of one of the only nonacademic minor leagues in sports.

We need nonacademic minor leagues in all of the major sports as an alternative to the college route. Give the kid with no interest in college another way to develop his (her) talent in athletics and help end this sham of professional athletics in colleges and universities.

top-shelf universities are being exposed to educations that might cost a regular kid $15,000 or more a year. Those players often get the best rooms and almost always the best food on campus. If they lag in class, they get free tutors. Their medical care usually is first-rate. Plus a football player's status within the social structure on many Division I-A campuses is such that he gets good dates.

Any coach's contention that America's finest institutions of higher learning are taking advantage of football players simply does not wash.

What most of those players are receiving are opportunities beyond the dreams of skinnier, slower kids. Enough money already is available to assure scholarship athletes of a good education. Isn't that what colleges and universities are supposed to be about?

Stanford defies history, defends its CWS crown

Stanford defied history in its championship-game victory over Arizona State at the College World Series.

With its network-televised 9-4 victory over the Sun Devils June 11 in Omaha, Nebraska, the Cardinal became the first team to win consecutive Division I Baseball Championship titles since 1974, when Southern California won the last of its five straight championships.

Texas is the only other Division I school to repeat as baseball champions, accomplishing the feat in 1949-50.

"No way did I think we could repeat," said Cardinal coach Mark Marquess. "Not just our team, but any team. With the scholarship limitations the way they are, it is unbelievable that we were able to repeat."

"I still can't believe it, and I won't believe it six months from now. I'd be surprised if anyone does this again in a real hurry."

If Marquess had a Cardinal rule for the 1988 College World Series, it was to establish an early lead so that his two freshman starting pitchers could relax and throw strikes. That formula worked, as Stanford jumped out to early leads in four of its five victories.

In the championship game, Stanford posted five first-inning runs for freshman hurler Stan Spencer.

Frank Carey led off the Cardinal first inning with a sharp single on an 0-2 pitch from Rusty Kilgo, who had won two series games. One out later, Ed Sprague drilled a home run over the left-center wall and put Stanford on top, 2-0.

Kilgo then gave up a first-pitch single to Paul Carey, walked Doug Robbins on four pitches and gave up an 0-2 single to Ron Witmeyer that made the score 3-0. Kilgo's afternoon in the sun was finished after 18 pitches and only one-third of an inning.

Blas Minor relieved Kilgo and was greeted by a two-run double by Brian Johnson, giving Stanford a 5-0 lead.

"They had a plan of attack," said Kilgo, who had faced Pacific-10 Conference rival Stanford three times this year and had a 1-1 record. "I didn't get in the game long enough to see what it was. No pitcher can ask his hitters to come back from a five-run deficit."

Stanford scored another run in

After this animated victory celebration, Stanford coach Mark Marquess (No. 9) told reporters he was surprised the Cardinals defended the 1987 crown. "No way did I think we would repeat," Marquess said. "Not just our team, but any team."

the second and two more in the third before Arizona State got on the board with a run in the fourth inning. The Sun Devils mounted a mild threat in the eighth inning, trailing 9-1.

John Finn walked and advanced to third on a single to right by Kevin Higgins. Steve Willis then hit a three-run home run to cut the Stanford lead to 9-4.

Said Arizona State coach Jim Brock, "I feel badly — not for myself as much as for this particular group. I'm not sure if there is much difference whether I've won two or three championships. But for a lot of the kids, this was their only shot. I've said this several times during the year and I believe it totally — this is the best team I've ever had as far as responding to coaching and really wanting to win. They have been an absolute joy to be around."

Stanford pitcher Lee Plemel, one of only two senior starters for the Cardinal, was named the tournament's most outstanding player after winning two games during the championship.

Joining Plemel on the all-tournament squad were Cardinal teammates Doug Robbins (catcher) and first baseman Ron Witmeyer; shortstop Pat Listach, third baseman Finn, outfielders Dan Rumsey and Ricky Candelari, designated hitter Martin Peralta, and pitcher Rusty Kilgo of Arizona State; second baseman Mark Standiford of Wichita State, and outfielder Jim Osborn of Cal State Fullerton.

The tournament drew a record 132,698 fans to Rosenblatt Municipal Stadium, breaking the mark of 130,659 set last year.

Cunningham new NACDA president

Gary Cunningham, director of athletics at California State University, Fresno, has been elected president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

Also elected were the following: first vice-president, Jack Lengyel, director of athletics at the University of Missouri, Columbia; second vice-president, Fred A. Schaus, director of athletics, West Virginia University; third vice-president, Sam Janovich, director of athletics, the University of Miami (Florida), and secretary, Vincent Cullen, director of athletics, Community College of Rhode Island.

In addition to the new slate of officers elected during NACDA's recent convention, five appointments were made to the 32-person executive committee of NACDA. Named to four-year terms were Donnie Duncan, University of Oklahoma; Ronald Perry, Holy Cross College, and Helen Smiley, Western Illinois University, all University Division; Ralph Barkey, Sonoma State University, College Division, and Harvey W. Schiller, Southeastern Conference, at-large representative.

Sports information directors plan workshop meeting in Kansas City

Members of the College Sports Information Directors of America will gather July 1 to 6 in Kansas City, Missouri, for the annual CoSIDA Workshop.

Speakers and panel discussions are scheduled to address topics proposed by CoSIDA members following last year's workshop in Portland.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will speak at the workshop's kickoff luncheon at noon July 2. Also, workshop participants will be offered an opportunity to tour the NCAA national office on the evening of July 1.

Among topics to be discussed by panels are "Taking Care of Business—Professionalism as an SID," "Working Women in CoSIDA, Part II" and "Marketing and Promotions—The New Side of the Business." Also planned are presentations by former sports information personnel who now work in such areas as network television and athletics administration; panel discussions on how to work effectively with major media outlets; a session on stress and time management, and programs on writing, graphics, photography and publications.

Various social functions also are planned for CoSIDA members during the workshop, ranging from receptions and parties to softball and basketball tournaments.

In addition, CoSIDA again will offer a job-placement service during the workshop. At last year's workshop, 114 job seekers registered with the service and 40 positions were posted; CoSIDA representatives expect even greater participation in Kansas City.

People who have paid the workshop fee can register to participate in the job-placement service. Interview sessions will begin the morning of July 3 and continue through the next day.

Job seekers are being asked to send three copies of their resumes in advance to Fred Stabley, P.O. Box 6411, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan 48826. Descriptions of available jobs also can be sent to Stabley; people who cannot attend the workshop also may send resumes and job descriptions.

Broyles to chair I-A ADs' group

J. Frank Broyles, director of athletics at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, has been elected chair of the Division I-A Athletics Directors Association.

The directors association, beginning its third year, is administered by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

Broyles succeeds Donald B. Canham, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, who served as chair the past year. Canham is retiring this month from Michigan, following 20 years as its director of athletics.

Elected as first vice-chair was Milo R. Lude, director of athletics, University of Washington. Sam Janovich, director of athletics, University of Miami (Florida), was elected second vice-chair.

Carl F. Ullrich, director of athletics at the United States Military Academy, was reelected secretary, and Michael B. McGee, director of athletics at the University of Southern California, was elected to the newly established position of treasurer.

Organized in August 1986, the Division I-A group represents directors of the NCAA's 105 Division I-A institutions. All the major issues of college athletics constitute their agenda.

Sooner coaches receive bonuses

Two University of Oklahoma coaches whose teams played for national championships this year have been awarded bonuses of $12,500 each, athletics director Donnie Duncan said June 7.

Duncan said the bonuses, for football coach Barry Switzer and basketball coach Billy Tubbs, were approved last month by university regents, United Press International reported.

NBA hires five top college officials

By Keith Drum

Joe Forte is among five top college officials who will work for the National Basketball Association next season.

Forte, who has officiated in two NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship games, is considered one of the best college officials. He mostly worked in the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Southeastern and Atlantic 10 Conferences in recent seasons.

Forte and Patty Broderick, supervisor of women's officials in the Big Ten Conference and Midwestern Collegiate Conference, will be U.S. representatives at the Seoul Olympics.

In addition to Forte, others moving to the NBA are Nolan Fine, Luis Grillo, Jimmy Clark and Woody Mayfield. Fine and Grillo worked in Eastern and Southern conferences, Mayfield in the Southwest, and Clark in the Rockies.

"It has been an unbelievable year for me," said Forte, who lives in Smyrna, Georgia. "I'm so happy about the Olympics. It's quite an honor to represent your country and be one of the 12 at the Olympics."

Forte won't be allowed to work games involving the U.S. team.

"I don't think I can even work games of the teams in our half of the draw," he said. "They want you to be as neutral as possible."

Forte recently was honored by the Atlanta Tipoff Club with its first Official-of-the-Year Award.

"College is great and I enjoyed it," he said. "But now is the time to go on to other challenges. It's excellent timing for the NBA and in my life."

The NBA is adding up to 16 officials to go to three-man crews for games next season.

Drum writes for United Press International.

Men's sport added

The University of New Orleans has announced that it will add a Division I men's swimming and diving team next season, giving the school seven men's and eight women's sports in 1988-89.

Aquatics director Ray Woods, coach of the women's swimmers and divers since that program began in 1984-85, also will coach the men.

Limits put on OVC members for games outside Division I

Ohio Valley Conference football teams will be limited to one non-Division I opponent, while league basketball teams are limited to two non-Division I opponents, according to legislation approved at the conference's 40th anniversary-week meeting in Nashville, Tennessee.

The conference's 40th anniversary banquet was attended by 400 current and former coaches, athletes, officials and administrators. The banquet was one of several events scheduled during the week of May 31 to June 4.

Other activities included a clinic for officials conducted by Henry O. Nichols, NCAA national coordinator of men's basketball officiating, and Ralph Stout, the conference's supervisor of officials. Also participating were Dale Kelly, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference supervisor of officials, and Burrell Crowell, supervisor of officials for the American South Athletic Conference.

A symposium on sportsmanship preceded a seminar on compliance for all conference head coaches and assistants. The discussion on NCAA rules was led by Stephen A. Mallonee of the NCAA legislative services staff; Jamie McCloskey, assistant commissioner of the Mid-American Athletic Conference, and Michael M. Gilleran, commissioner of the West Coast Athletic Conference.

percent in III. Women's basketball: 55 percent in I, 61 percent in II, 64 percent in III.

• Women's sports have higher percentages of freshmen and sophomores than men's sports in all divisions, and especially in Divisions I and III. One notable exception is women's volleyball in Divisions I and II.

• The highest percentage of underclassmen in any sport, any division, is 70 percent of the women golfers in Division III. For the membership as a whole, women's gymnastics, women's soccer and wrestling have the highest underclass percentages overall.

• The lowest percentage of underclassmen in any division is women's fencing in Division II, at 43 percent; however, the numbers involved are very small. Overall, men's and women's fencing and men's golf have the lowest incidence of underclassmen.

• The sport with the highest percentage of freshmen on the squad is rifle in Division III, at 48 percent. Again, the numbers involved are small. Overall, wrestling, women's gymnastics and women's skiing are the most freshman-dominated sports.

• The lowest percentages of freshmen through all divisions are in men's and women's fencing, again with small numbers of participants.

Results of the study—which also shows numbers receiving athletically related financial aid—appear on pages 8 and 9 of this issue of the News.

Q How are sites selected for NCAA championships?

A At its May 2-3 meeting, the NCAA Executive Committee revised Executive Regulation 1-14(b) regarding site-selection criteria to provide sports committees additional guidance as to how the criteria should be compared and evaluated relative to one another. The revised regulation is as follows:

"(b) Governing sports committees shall evaluate the following factors in determining sites for all competition in NCAA meets and tournaments: quality and availability of the facility and other necessary accommodations; revenue potential (e.g., a financial guarantee or guideline that ensures fiscal responsibility and is appropriate for the particular event, as recommended by the governing sports committee and approved by the Executive Committee); attendance history and potential, and geographical location. The division championships committees may assign specific priorities to these criteria for their respective championships and shall specify any such priorities in the appropriate championships handbooks. In the case of nonpredetermined sites, the governing sports committee may award the site to the higher-ranked team if these criteria, and any priorities established by the respective division championships committees, are met. A governing sports committee that desires to utilize additional criteria shall obtain Executive Committee approval before doing so.

"(1) The criteria in paragraph (b) shall be applied when evaluating both on-campus and off-campus sites. Preference shall be given to conducting competition on the grounds or in the buildings of educational institutions unless there are compelling reasons, based on evaluation of the criteria in paragraph (b), to conduct the competition in an off-campus facility.

"(2) In those instances when it is advisable to conduct such competition at off-campus sites, the host institution(s) shall have complete control, supervision and management of the facility being used.

"(3) The governing sports committee shall receive approval in advance from the Executive Committee in order to conduct a game or tournament at a site other than on the campus of one of the competing institutions. The NCAA executive director is authorized to administer this provision."

The Executive Committee purposely did not prioritize the criteria in any specific order to be followed by all sports committees; however, it stipulated that the Divisions I, II and/or III Championships Committees may assign specific priorities to them and outline those priorities in the appropriate championships handbooks. Accordingly, the Divisions I and II Championships Committees did not prioritize the criteria; the Division III Championships Committee specified that they be prioritized as follows for Division III championships: (1) quality and availability of the facility and other necessary accommodations; (2) geographical location (including such factors as rotation of sites, weather, accessibility and transportation costs), and (3) revenue history and attendance potential.

Tax-free bond program aimed at keeping college affordable

Low- and moderate-income families would receive tax-free interest on savings bonds used to pay for college under a bill proposed June 9 by the Reagan administration.

The College Savings Bond Act of 1988 was sent to Capitol Hill by Education Secretary William J. Bennett and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III.

For families with adjusted gross incomes under $60,000, interest earned on the bonds would be tax-exempt if the proceeds were used to pay for college tuition or related expenses by the bondholder, spouse, child or dependent.

The tax benefit would be reduced for families earning between $60,000 and $80,000 and eliminated entirely for households with incomes above $80,000, the Associated Press reported.

The Treasury Department estimated lost Federal revenues would total $11 million in fiscal year 1989 and gradually rise to $284 million by fiscal year 1994. The bonds would be available starting January 1.

Bennett said college savings bonds would be "a safe and convenient higher education investment for millions of Americans and for their children."

An Education Department spokeswoman said the administration bill would be formally introduced soon by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kansas, and Rep. John Duncan, R-Tennessee, the senior Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee. Some 50 cosponsors are expected on the House side, said department spokeswoman Jane Glickman.

The administration proposal is similar to a more generous bill introduced last fall by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Massachusetts; Claiborne Pell, D-Rhode Island, and Robert Stafford, R-Vermont.

Under their plan, no taxes would be due on interest earnings used for educational purposes if the taxpayer's income was below $75,000. The tax benefit would decline gradually to zero at the $150,000 income level.

Kennedy said it had been estimated that if one million families each bought $500 in bonds and held them for 15 years, under his bill, the tax revenue lost when the bonds were redeemed would be $845 million.

Lawmakers and others have been seeking ways to help families cope with rising higher education costs, citing a 75 percent increase since 1980 and a major Federal shift from grants to loans in the student-aid area.

Vice-President George Bush, when he launched his campaign for the GOP presidential nomination last year, said he wanted to be known as "the education president" and suggested the college savings-bonds approach.

ECAC North Atlantic adds four play-offs

The Eastern College Athletic Conference North Atlantic athletics directors have voted to add four men's championships to their schedules during the 1988-89 season and agreed unanimously to include women's basketball for 1989-90.

The four men's sports are golf, tennis, indoor track and soccer. They join men's basketball and cross country as league sports.

Golf, tennis and track champions will be crowned at tournaments hosted by one of the NAC schools. The soccer title in 1988 will be decided by round-robin play among six schools. All teams will be eligible for that title in 1989.

"This is just a first step," said Commissioner Stuart Haskell. "Baseball and other women's championships are in the planning stages."

The women's basketball championship will involve all 10 schools playing an 18-game league schedule.

The conference includes Boston University; Canisius College; Colgate University; the University of Hartford; the University of Maine, Orono; the University of New Hampshire; Niagara University; Northeastern University; Siena College, and the University of Vermont.

Wittenberg to join NCAC, end long OAC association

Wittenberg University's board of directors has accepted an invitation to join the North Coast Athletic Conference, President William A. Kinnison has announced, which will end a 72-year association with the Ohio Athletic Conference at the end of the 1988-89 athletics season.

Wittenberg likely will begin championships competition in the NCAC during the 1989-90 academic year, but several Tiger teams already have NCAC opponents on their schedules.

Wittenberg will join Allegheny College, Case Western Reserve University, Denison University, Kenyon College, Oberlin College, Ohio Wesleyan University and the College of Wooster in the new affiliation.

Earlham College's board of trustees also is expected to accept an NCAC invitation to join the league.

Wittenberg joined the seven-year-old OAC in 1909 and has been a member since, except for 1928-1934, when it joined the Buckeye Athletic Association.

Tiger teams won a total of 60 OAC championships, most notably in football and men's basketball, with 16 each. Wittenberg has won the men's all-sports title three of the last four years and eight times overall since 1966.

Wittenberg's athletics heritage includes two NCAA Division III Football Championship titles (1973 and 1975), one Division III Men's Basketball Championship crown (1977) and 33 consecutive winning seasons in football.

The NCAC's 21 championship sports—11 for men and 10 for women—lead all conferences in NCAA Division III. The new affiliation will give Wittenberg's field hockey, men's and women's swimming, and men's and women's lacrosse teams greater opportunity for league competition, the school said in a news release.

The NCAC was formed in 1984 by seven schools as a means to provide a broad-based athletics program with equity for men's and women's teams.

Wittenberg's board of directors also gave the green light for the Bill Edwards Drive Plan, which calls for renovation of some of Wittenberg's older athletics facilities.

Refurbishment of the 65-year-old Wittenberg Stadium, addition of a 400-meter outdoor track, renovation of Wittenberg Field House, new tennis court and enhancement of athletics fields are among the projects planned.

Kinnison said, "As you might imagine, we face this important time in our athletics history with mixed feelings. There is a sense of real excitement about a new association with the North Coast Athletic Conference and a real regret about leaving the Ohio Athletic Conference.... We sincerely hope that we will be able to schedule games in all sports with OAC schools."

"We like very much the NCAC ideals of equity for men's and women's sports, and the idea that there are no minor sports and that emphasis is placed on every sport, men's or women's, regardless of the presence or absence of fan support."

Kinnison, a member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, said he has been impressed with the role the presidents play in the NCAC. "For a long time, I have believed that presidents must take a strong role in the operation of athletics conferences."

Hall expecting one-millionth visitor

Between July 1 and Labor Day, when the Basketball Hall of Fame will observe summer hours—9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Eastern time—the one-millionth visitor is expected to visit the museum and shrine dedicated to "The American Game's" inventor, James Naismith.

Since the Basketball Hall of Fame opened February 17, 1968, on the Springfield College campus, through May 31, 1988, a total of 975,959 visitors have come to this city, where Naismith invented the sport in December 1891.

Based on attendance figures for July and August during the past three years, the one-millionth visitor is expected in early August, according to Executive Director Joe O'Brien.

The July-August attendance figures since 1985, when the new Basketball Hall of Fame opened in Springfield Center, have surpassed the annual figure at the college location. About 40,000 vacationers will visit the hall of fame in July and August. The average annual attendance at the original site was 37,069.

Temple, Trenton State lead women's lacrosse all-Americans

National Collegiate women's lacrosse champion Temple and Division III champion Trenton State have two first-team repeat selections each on the Brine all-America teams selected by the Women's Lacrosse Coaches Association.

Temple's Gail Cummings and Amanda Moore are the only repeaters on the coaches' Division I first team. Cummings and Moore were the outstanding attack and midfield players, respectively, in this year's championship.

Penny Kempf and Sandy Stockl of Trenton State are repeat selections in Division III, as are Maria Gaydos of Franklin and Marshall, Sandy Stevens of Western Maryland, Heather Klink of Johns Hopkins, and Karen Salemo of William Smith.

Kempf was the outstanding player on defense in the Division III championship. Anne Jachney of William Smith, the outstanding mid-field player, also was selected for the first team this year.

He remained at Southern Connecticut State as a counselor after stepping down from the basketball post.

Champion UCLA leads softball all-America selections

Five players representing teams that won NCAA women's softball championships this season, including three from Division I champion UCLA, have been named all-America by the National Softball Coaches Association.

After helping lift their team to its fourth women's softball title, Bruins Lisa Longaker, Janice Parks and Lorraine Maynez achieved further recognition by being named first-team selections.

Longaker pitched five complete games in the May 25-29 series, allowing only three earned runs in 35 innings for a 0.60 earned-run average. Also, she tallied 20 strikeouts.

Parks' major contribution to the team's championship came in the fourth inning of the final game against Fresno State. With two runners on, the third baseman doubled to center, scoring Maynez and Stacy Sunny.

Maynez was credited with the game-winning RBI early in game 11 of the series. A single to right field in the first inning against Arizona scored Shanna Flynn. Maynez was credited with another RBI in the next inning when a sacrifice fly brought in Lisa Hankerd.

Making repeat appearances on the Division I first-team were Longaker and Parks, UCLA; Karen Sanchelli, South Carolina; Liz Mizera, Texas A&M, and Jill Justin, Northern Illinois.

Division II champion Cal State Bakersfield had one representative on the first team, Terri Reifel. The catcher's tournament contributions included five hits in 19 at-bats for a .263 average.

Cal State Northridge's Debbie Dickman and Florida Southern's Dori Stankewitz were the only repeaters from last year's Division II all-America team.

Central (Iowa) pitcher Laurie Suttin was the only player from the Division III championship team to achieve all-America honors. She allowed only three runs in 28 innings for a 0.75 ERA in the championship.

Appearing on the Division III first-team for the second consecutive year was pitching ace Dina DeAquino of Montclair State. Allegheny's Gia Celularo was chosen for the third straight year.

Baptist College	B 4-1(a)-(3)	S-A initially enrolled in fall 1983; during fall 1984, S-A suffered back injury and was unable to attend institution during hospitalization, rehabilitation and recovery.	Extension granted for period equal to exact number of days in which S-A was unable to attend collegiate institution (approximately four months).
Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville	B 5-1(c), 5-5-(b)	S-A (basketball) participated in last game of season while enrolled in less than 12 hours.	Eligibility restored after S-A withheld from first intercollegiate game of 1988-89 basketball season.
Columbia University	C 3-3(a)-(1), B 5-5-(b)	Transfer S-A (soccer) enrolled full time but was not regularly matriculated; participated in three junior varsity competitions.	Eligibility restored. [Season of competition used per B 5-1(d)-(1).]

CORRECTION: In the Eligibility Committee summary published in the May 18, 1988, issue of The NCAA News, the University of Rhode Island incorrectly was identified as having processed an eligibility appeal concerning a violation of Bylaw 5-1(c). The correct institution is Rhode Island College.

Some doubt utility of linking bonuses to graduation rate

By Ivan Maisel
The Dallas Morning News

The drive to force more football players into the classroom is paying dividends, according to the latest figures of the College Football Association. For the first time this decade, more than half of the CFA's football players are graduating.

Now, one school is paying a dividend to its coaches to force its players into the classroom.

The University of Pittsburgh recently signed coach Mike Gottfried to a "lifetime" contract that included incentive bonuses based upon how many players graduate.

Several participants at the CFA meeting in Dallas question the wisdom of paying a coach a bonus for what he is supposed to do in the first place.

"The biggest statement of the contract is the stability factor in a profession that has been less than stable," Gottfried said.

Pittsburgh athletics director Edward E. Bozik said he understood the concerns of the skeptics. But he felt the bonuses—which will also be paid to the assistants—were a way to emphasize the importance of academic progress.

"A student-athlete's attitude is the coach's problem," Bozik said. "Not many kids will miss a practice. If they miss a class, I expect the coach to do something about it."

"I don't think that's a good plan," Florida State University athletics director Cecil W. Ingram said. "It's the administration's responsibility. The coach's No. 1 goal is to encourage academics. But I want the work done by the academic advisers."

Southeastern Conference Commissioner Harvey W. Schiller doesn't favor incentives, in part because the bottom line shouldn't apply merely to the coach. "Some of the responsibility has to fall back on the student," Schiller said.

The student-athlete is responding well. For the first time this decade, the graduation rate of football players climbed over the 50 percent mark, according to the eighth annual CFA survey released last month.

Of some 1,300 student-athletes who received scholarships in the fall of 1982, 50.7 percent graduated by the end of the 1986-87 year. Of the 56 CFA schools that participated, 13 achieved rates higher than 70 percent.

"The percentages are going up and up," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said. "Athletes should be 10 percent higher than the average of the rest of the students. It's a challenge we all ought to be willing to accept."

Student-athletes now are doing as well as male college students as a whole. A government study over a six-year period (the CFA allowed only five years) showed 47 percent of males at public universities and 52.9 percent at private schools graduated.

"People have started spending more money on academics as opposed to building weight rooms," Oklahoma State University coach Pat Jones said.

The bottom line, reminds University of Texas, El Paso, coach Bob Stull, is still the same.

"You can recruit a bunch of guys who'll graduate; but if you don't win, you're not going to be there to watch them graduate," Stull said. "Incentives bring into focus what priorities all of us would like to have happen. It's a great ideal; but again, unfortunately, the bottom line still is if you don't win, you're fired."

Shippensburg starts drug-education program

The Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania department of athletics has instituted a drug- and alcohol-education program, it has been announced by James Pribula, director of athletics. The policy was adopted unanimously by the university's athletics committee and the president's cabinet.

The program applies to the 19 intercollegiate athletics teams at Shippensburg and will go into effect with the beginning of the 1988-89 academic year.

A program for Shippensburg was tailored to the needs of the university and its athletes, and the final form was approved this spring. Pribula said, "Much of the investigative work and research was done by Steve Heckler, director of athletics training, evaluation and rehabilitation."

The purpose of the education program is to help athletes understand the debilitating effects of drugs and alcohol abuse on their performances as students and athletes.

Pribula said, "It is our ambition, through the educational process, to assist all students, in this case the intercollegiate athlete, in creating a wholesome and healthful lifestyle that will be devoid of the abuse of drugs, alcohol and tobacco. We feel that we can best serve this purpose with an educational program that can assist the student to make the right choice."

A series of drug- and alcohol-education seminars and meetings will be mandatory for the athletes.

In addition, a code of conduct will be established that includes various sanctions. Depending on the nature of the violation, counseling, suspension or expulsion from the team could be imposed on an athlete for breaking the code of conduct. No urinalysis or drug testing is planned.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than July 13.

Division II Women's Basketball Committee: Replacement for Kathy Richey-Walton, resigned from Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania. Appointee must be from Division II and should be a representative from the East Division II women's basketball region.

Arch Ward award goes to Homan

Marv Homan, who retired last December after 39 years as sports information director at Ohio State University, has been selected to receive the Arch Ward Award.

It is presented annually by the College Sports Information Directors of America to a member "who has made an outstanding contribution to the field of college sports information, or who by his or her activities outside the field has brought dignity or prestige to the profession."

Homan graduated from Ohio State in 1948; and 14 months later, he was back on campus in the sports information office. His "off-campus" activities included stints as a sports announcer for WKBN radio in Youngstown and WONE radio in Dayton.

Named director of sports information in 1973, Homan was in charge of publicizing 30 intercollegiate sports, covering men's and women's programs that include 800 to 850 athletes. Additionally, Homan did play-by-play broadcasts of Ohio State football for 30 years and Buckeye basketball for 20 years. He also broadcast four Rose Bowl games, including three for NBC radio.

Under Homan's guidance, the football press box was considered one of the best in the nation, winning honors for "outstanding facilities" and four "outstanding special services."

During Homan's career at Ohio State, the Buckeyes' football record was 299-91-13. They won 18 Big Ten Conference championships, played in 19 bowl games, had 71 first team all-Americans and four

Lone Star adds Texas Woman's U. to membership

The Lone Star Conference has voted unanimously to accept Texas Woman's University as its ninth member, with the Pioneers officially beginning conference play in the fall of 1989.

Current members of the Lone Star Conference include Abilene Christian University, Angelo State University, East Texas State University, Texas A&I University, West Texas State University, Cameron University, Central State University (Oklahoma) and Eastern New Mexico University.

Texas Woman's University is in Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas.

To admit TWU, the council had to waive a league bylaw that requires all member schools to sponsor football and men's basketball programs.

The waiver was based on the equal-opportunity provisions of Title IX, but should the school ever become completely coeducational, the Pioneers would have to add football and men's basketball to keep their conference membership.

Athletics director Jo Kuhn said her school asked to start conference participation in the fall of 1989, rather than trying to step into the league during the next school year.

"That gives us the time to find out all the procedures and rules of the conference," she added. "We felt that would be lead-in time we would need to get ready."

Marv Homan

Heisman Trophy winners.

The Big Ten power also won three mythical national championships in football, plus NCAA team titles in basketball, swimming, golf, gymnastics and baseball, as well as numerous individual NCAA titles.

Homan will receive the award July 6 in Kansas City, Missouri.

CoSIDA honors Tennessean editor

John Bibb, sports editor of the Nashville Tennessean since 1970, has been selected as the 1988 recipient of the Jake Wade Award, presented annually by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

The award is given to an individual "who has made an outstanding contribution in the communications media to the field of collegiate athletics."

Bibb, a 1951 graduate of Vanderbilt University, has spent almost a half century filing deadline stories and columns from sports arenas throughout the nation. In addition to his daily stories and columns in the Tennessean, Bibb has contributed to publications throughout the United States, and his bylines have appeared in publications on all seven continents.

He has been honored with numerous writing awards, including the National Headliners Award in Atlantic City for "The Best Daily Sports Columns."

He has been a finalist for sports-writer of the year in Tennessee 14 times. He has won 11 United Press International awards for his work, and twice his stories of NCAA basketball competition brought him national writing recognition.

In 1987, Bibb was inducted into the Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame.

Bibb has served two terms as president of the Golf Writers Association of America. He has been a director of the basketball writers, the football writers, and the National Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association.

He was active in the formation of the Associated Press Sports Editors group and currently is one of a seven-member panel of international golf writers who select the recipient of the Memorial Journalism Award presented annually at Jack Nicklaus' Memorial Golf Tournament in Dublin, Ohio.

After serving with the 20th Air Force in the South Pacific in World War II, he returned to a full-time job in the sports department of the Tennessean while earning his degree in English at Vanderbilt. His primary assignments were Vanderbilt; the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and the Southeastern Conference.

WHAT QUENCHES A FULL COURT THIRST?

Copyright royalty payments mailed

Member institutions and conferences have been mailed payments totaling $599,238 for 1983 television royalties as distributed by the Copyright Royalty Tribunal to various sports interests. The NCAA annually files claims on behalf of members to recover these payments.

It is believed that this settlement, the second covering 1983, represents final payments to be made for that year. However, if the CRT rules that additional moneys are to be paid, funds will be forwarded when they become available.

Distribution to appropriate member institutions and conferences was made in unit amounts of $398.70. Check amounts were based on that unit amount multiplied by the number of 1983 events reported by institutions and conferences.

These statutory royalty fees are based upon the number of broadcast stations' signals that a cable television system retransmits outside the community or "local service area" that those broadcasting stations serve. The exact amount of the royalty payment is determined by Federal statute, which consists of a specific percentage of the cable system's gross receipts for each distant signal equivalent.

Royalty payments are made for retransmission of nonnetwork, over-the-air broadcast programming beyond the local service area of the broadcast station.

The underlying rationale for the CRT system is the belief that the copyright owner should be compensated when cable television systems carry a telecast beyond the geographical area for which the sale of broadcast rights was negotiated.

Royalties are not payable on cable retransmissions of national network programming.

More summer basketball leagues approved

Additional summer basketball leagues have been approved for student-athlete participation, bringing the total of 245 that have been certified by the NCAA Council.

Lists of other approved summer leagues appeared in the April 13, April 27, May 4, May 11, May 18, May 25, June 1 and June 8 issues of the News.

Any questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer leagues should be directed to Richard C. Perko, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Lacrosse committee acts to improve game's 'flow'

The NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee approved extension of the slow-whistle technique to the entire field and creation of a play-on call for loose-ball technical fouls.

The committee met in Williamsburg, Virginia, June 5-9.

James A. Grube, secretary-treasurer, said these changes would encourage a flowing, full-field game and would decrease the number of whistles in a game. In addition, the changes are intended to eliminate situations where the offending team may gain an advantage by committing a foul.

Team possession was redefined to include a ball in flight between two teammates, and substitution on the fly was prohibited in slow-whistle and play-on situations.

Concerning equipment, the committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that shoulder pads be mandatory and that cutting the palms out of gloves be prohibited.

The committee also will submit a rewrite of rules dealing with the specifications of the crosse, including dimension, attachment of stringing, circumference of the handle and weight. If these recommendations are approved by the Executive Committee in August, they will take effect in three years.

Other rules changes are:

- The prohibition on body-checking was extended to anywhere below the waist.
- Substitution was limited to the injured player in an injured-player situation.
- A player must serve his own penalty time.
- Flagrant misconduct can result in expulsion.
- Five cumulative minutes of penalty time can result in expulsion.

• Taunting or baiting was added to unsportsmanlike conduct.

• Sounding of the horn from the table area was restricted to dead-ball situations.

• A second sudden-death overtime period will begin with the ball faced at center if the first overtime period ended with a loose-ball situation.

The committee also will recommend to the Executive Committee that officials' fees for all rounds of the lacrosse championships be $150 per person. That has been the fee for the championship games.

The committee mandated that officials must be on-site during pregame meetings for Division I regional and quarterfinal games and Division III first-round games. For semifinal and championship games in both divisions, officials must be on-site the night prior to those contests.

For Division I regional and quarterfinal games and all games of the Division III championship, the committee will use a benchmark figure to evaluate revenue potential for purposes of site determination. That figure will be the two-year average of gross ticket income.

The committee also commended the administrative staff of Syracuse University for its conduct of the Division I finals and semifinals.

Named to the rules subcommittee were Michael Waldvogel of Yale University, David J. Urlick of Hobart College, Donald Leet of St. Lawrence University and Donald J. Zimmerman of Johns Hopkins University. The subcommittee is chaired by Grube.

Alabama trying to overcome misconception about finances

Eighteen months after athletics director and head football coach Ray Perkins left the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the school's athletics program is $39 million in debt, to the surprise of many.

"Some people have the perception that we're a wealthy department," said current athletics director Steve Sloan. "That's not totally accurate. We have wonderful facilities, and we are in good shape financially; but we're not Chase Manhattan. We have a very significant debt that has to be retired, and it will cost money."

The school's athletics budget is going up at least 40 percent this year, or $4 million, because of the interest due on the loans. Of the $39 million debt, the principal is $24 million, and the interest over the years will amount to $15 million, said athletics business manager Taze Fulford.

One of the first actions by Perkins was to start an expansion of Bryant-Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa, adding 12,000 seats, but first, he called Fulford to find out about finances, how much money the department had in the bank.

"It took me several days to find out, and I called him back and told him $16 million," Fulford told United Press International.

Several days after that conversation three years ago, Perkins publicly mentioned the department had $16 million in the bank, and he wanted to upgrade the athletics facilities.

So began the great misconception that persists.

"The figure was correct, on that particular day," Fulford told the Birmingham Post-Herald. "It was early in the fiscal year, when we had collected most of our revenues but still had eight or 10 months of salaries, scholarships and other bills to pay."

"Yet, people took that to mean that we had $16 million in savings, which simply wasn't true, then or now. But it's like you or me. At the first of the month, I have so much in the bank; and on the fifth of the month, I'm hurting."

Perkins' statement is unsettling even after three years because many long-time financial supporters at Alabama can't believe the school needs money.

Alabama is trying to sell a program called "Tide Pride," which is designed to raise $6 million a year through its special ticket sales for 20,000 seats in both Tuscaloosa and Legion Field to retire the debt.

"So many fans think we've got that $16 million in the bank," Sloan said. "That's a common misconception, and it's really caused us problems. When we started Tide Pride, they would call us and say, 'But Perkins said you had this much money in the bank. What happened to it? Did the university take it away?' The truth is, of course, that money never existed."

The Bryant-Denny expansion is costing $14.5 million; a new football office building completed in 1985 cost $5 million; an indoor facility used by all sports and completed two years ago cost $4 million, and an eight-seat jet purchased in 1983 cost $1.5 million.

"I'm not faulting Ray on this," Fulford said. "The things were needed."

"We need a new baseball stadium, and that should be the last major building project we do around here for a long time," Sloan said.

Alabama's revenues last year totaled $10.4 million.

Football ate up $3 million of the $10.4 million athletics department budget last year. Debt service was another $1.4 million, and the cost to operate the school's sports programs came to $2.4 million. Building maintenance was $3 million. Other sports took in the rest.

The sports department has about 100 employees who are paid a total of $2 million in salaries.

The department expects to spend $14.5 million this year, with nearly a four-fold increase in the cost of women's sports leading the expense column. Debt service will be $3 million.

In the fiscal year that ends June 30, Alabama had to borrow more than $2 million from its savings to pay its expenses.

Sloan is concerned.

"When I look at the budget and see $2 million in scholarships and $3 million in debt service taken off the top—before we sell a ticket—it's pretty scary."

CCHA extends TV pact

The Central Collegiate Hockey Association and Pro Am Sports System have announced the continuation of their television package for two more years.

The agreement includes a game of the week, the CCHA play-offs, a weekly show featuring highlights from member teams and interviews, and a video cassette featuring the season in review.

"The television package has helped the CCHA become the acknowledged premier Division I college hockey conference in the country," said Commissioner Bill Beagan.

Schultz appointed

Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director, has been named to the board of directors of TARGET, a program of the National Federation of State High School Associations to help the nation's youth avoid alcohol and drug problems.

First Lady Nancy Reagan is honorary chair of the organization, and William E. Simon, former secretary of the treasury, is chair. Former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn is president.

"Pro Am was the first network to express an interest in a collegiate hockey series and will continue to promote and expand the program. We anticipate a great future with continued growth for the league and Pro Am," said Bill Wischman, the sports system's general manager.

CCHA teams have won three of the past five NCAA Division I Ice Hockey Championships.

Judge says Kirk must stand trial

Rejecting a claim of grand jury bias, a Federal judge ruled June 10 that former Memphis State University head men's basketball coach Dana Kirk must stand trial on charges of income tax evasion and obstruction of justice.

Kirk, who was fired by Memphis State shortly before his indictment in November 1986, said he expected a more favorable review of his claim that prosecutors poisoned the grand jury against him.

His lawyers vowed to appeal the ruling, but U.S. Attorney Hickman Ewing Jr. said the trial probably will begin in September or October.

Settlement reached in suit over women's athletics funding

A women's group and Temple University agreed June 13 to settle an eight-year legal dispute over funding for women's athletics programs.

Under the consent decree submitted to U.S. District Judge Joseph Lord III, Temple would be required to spend athletics funds proportionally based on the number of women participating in athletics programs.

Lawyers estimated that 65 percent of Temple's athletes are male and 35 percent female.

Lawyers said the settlement also would give female athletes the same proportion of scholarships as male athletes.

The school also has to spend a proportional amount to promote female athletics programs and must hire a new sports information director by February 1989, United Press International reported.

Arthur Bryant, lead counsel for the National Women's Law Center, predicted the agreement would break new ground for female athletes at Temple and could affect funding for female athletes at colleges nationwide.

However, Temple counsel Robert Reinstein said the consent decree does not require the school to do much more than it has done in the past for women's athletics programs.

"You have to look at what the plaintiffs were looking for, and they were looking for 50 percent," Reinstein said. "Obviously, there was a major compromise on their part, and we also compromised. We view this as a win-win situation."

The lawsuit was filed in 1980 by former student Rollin Haffer and a group of other female athletes.

"Myself and the other plaintiffs view this settlement as an outstanding win, not only for the female athletes at Temple, but for female athletes everywhere," said Haffer, a 1981 Temple graduate.

The lawsuit was viewed as a test case on whether spending more money for male sports programs is a violation of Federal discrimination laws.

Temple contended the charges were false and unfair because it spends only the amount needed to make each team competitive.

University lawyers argued that more money was needed to make men's football and basketball teams competitive.

Court documents listed Temple's 1986-87 per capita operating expenditures for men's teams at $7,426 compared to $3,817 for women.

Criteria set for selection of play-off sites

Site-selection criteria and automatic-qualification recommendations were formulated during the Division III Men's Basketball Committee meeting June 7-10 in Kansas City.

The committee accepted a recommendation from the Division III Championships Committee that site-selection criteria for championship competition be prioritized as follows: (1) quality and availability of the facility and other necessary accommodations, (2) geographical location, and (3) revenue history and attendance potential.

Should the main criteria be judged as comparable, consideration also will be given to rotating sites or awarding the site to an institution that has not had a recent opportunity to host. Seeding will not necessarily be a factor in site selection. The committee voted that more specific facility requirements will be considered when selecting sites.

The committee voted to recommend to the Association's Executive Committee that automatic qualification for the 1988-89 championship be granted to the following conferences:

College Athletic Conference, College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Little East Conference, Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference (two berths), Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, New Jersey State Athletic Conference, North Coast Athletic Conference, Ohio Athletic Conference, Old Dominion Athletic Conference, Southern California

Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and State University of New York Athletic Conference.

In related action, the committee voted that, beginning with the 1989-90 season, the North and South divisions of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference will be required to file separate applications for automatic qualification.

The committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that institutions competing in the championship semifinals and finals be permitted to purchase a maximum of three additional championship individual team awards (19 total).

The committee also voted that, upon the compilation and review of information from Division III basketball conferences and institutions, regional realignment may be sought prior to the 1989-90 season.

Illinois athletics board to consider allegations

The athletics board of the University of Illinois, Champaign, likely will meet in emergency session to consider allegations of wrongdoing within the athletics association, according to the board chair.

Bruce Larson said the earliest board members could meet to discuss the charges against athletics director Neale R. Stoner and his top aides would be late in the week of June 13.

Athletics association officials have been accused, among other things, of ordering maintenance employees to perform personal work on their homes and their automobiles.

University administrators announced an internal audit and investigation of Stoner's department, and campus police began interviewing employees.

Stoner issued a statement conceding that his employees occasionally did some things for him and members of his family. Associate director Vance Redfern issued a statement saying the allegations were true. Neither man provided any details about the incidents.

Larson canceled a planned vacation to Canada and began notifying members of his board about the likely meeting, the Associated Press reported.

The latest problems of the athletics association surfaced last month when head strength coach Bill Kroll discussed his concern over the hiring of Redfern's brother-in-law as assistant strength coach.

Kroll said Leo Ward was not certified by National Strength and Conditioning Association, and Kroll was required to conduct interviews with other candidates even though the decision to hire Ward had been made.

Kroll later was notified by Stoner that he was being released. He is seeking a hearing before the athletics board.

Former athlete, now a sculptor, creates new Outland Trophy

James A. Ridlon, chair of Syracuse University's College of Visual and Performing Arts, has created a bronze-sculpture Outland Trophy for the Football Writers Association of America. It will replace the original award, a plaque, that has been missing for 20 years.

Ridlon, a nationally known sculptor, lent more than artistic talent to the endeavor. He created the new Outland Trophy, in part, from his experience as a Syracuse backfield mate to the legendary Jim Brown in the 1950s. He also played professional football for eight seasons with San Francisco and Dallas, earning all-pro honors as a defensive back in 1964.

A former Syracuse assistant coach under Ben Schwartzwalder, Ridlon became chair of the College of Visual and Performing Arts four years ago. Among his other artistic creations is the 9-foot-by-12-foot, three-dimensional wall produced for the 25th anniversary of ABC's Wide World of Sports.

Illinois-based Leisure Press has announced the publication of two athletics books, "Conquering Athletic Injuries" and "Strategies for Competitive Volleyball."

The former was prepared and edited by members of the American Running and Fitness Association. The latter was written by Canadian Stephen D. Fraser, who has coached volleyball at the junior high, high school and college levels in Canada and has been a developmental coordinator with Sports Nova Scotia.

Information on either publication may be obtained from Leisure Press, Box 5076, Champaign, Illinois 61820.

Almost three decades have passed since NBC Sports tennis announcer Bud Collins was the new coach at Brandeis University, but he still remembers that 1959 season vividly. His team went 6-0, thanks in large part to the efforts of Abbie Hoffman.

In a recent feature distributed by the network, Collins recalled the coach-player relationship he had with Hoffman, the 1960s political activist who gained worldwide notoriety as a defendant in the 1969 "Chicago Seven" conspiracy trial.

"Abbie was a very difficult person," Collins recalled. "He didn't like authority figures. He didn't like me. I was a very strict coach — coats and ties on road trips, cleanly shaven. He thought I was a real right-wing conservative. Brandeis in those days was a particularly radical place, but I didn't care. I didn't know any better."

Collins noted that Hoffman's on-the-court style provided an interesting contrast. "He was a very competitive player. On the court, he was everything a coach could have asked for. But, unlike his reputation as a radical, he was an extremely right-wing tennis player."

"He was very conservative," Collins added. "He never came to the net. He was strictly a baseliner, a retriever. He was a very good athlete, a stalwart in doubles as well as singles. And he didn't complain about wearing all-white costumes for tennis. In fact, it was the one thing he didn't complain about."

Collins said Hoffman won five of his six singles matches during that undefeated 1959 season. Coach and player had no contact for more than two decades after that.

"Of course," Collins noted, "he went underground for a while. He turned himself in during the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows in 1980, and he called me up. I hadn't talked to him since 1959, although I followed his career with interest. He called me in the pressbox at Flushing and asked if I could get him two tickets to the final. I did, and saw him that day. It was quite stunning, and we had a very pleasant reunion. I've seen him once or twice since."

The clay mold for the new Outland Trophy of the Football Writers Association of America has been completed by Professor James A. Ridlon of Syracuse University. The finished product will be presented by the FWA December 7 in New York City to the nation's outstanding interior lineman in college football.

Division I Track Notes: The University of California, Los Angeles, men's 4 x 400-meter relay, in claiming the 1988 Division I championship, became the first college team to break three minutes in the event. "When I handed off, I knew we were close to the record," said Bruin Danny Everett. He ran the third leg, following teammates Steve Lewis and Kevin Young. Anchoring the effort was Henry Thomas. "And," Everett added, "I also knew Henry had to run an outstanding leg (for UCLA to claim a record). Then, Henry ran an excellent leg." The fleet foursome combined for a time of 2:59.91.

Sheila Hudson of the University of California, Berkeley, turned in the longest triple jump ever by an American woman under any conditions. She posted a wind-aided 45-8.

Joe DeLoach became the University of Houston's third 100-meter national champion of the 1980s. Carl Lewis took the crown in 1981, and Cougar Stanley Floyd won in 1982.

Trivia Time: How long has it been since a team east of the Mississippi River won the Division I men's track and field team title? Answer later.

American strength and conditioning coaches will be joined by their counterparts from Canada, Japan, Australia and several other countries at the convention of the National Strength and Conditioning Association June 24-26 in Orlando, Florida.

Headquartered in Lincoln, Nebraska, the NSCA provides educational publications, seminars and other services to over 11,500 members in 34 countries. The convention will feature more than 40 seminars.

More Report Cards: Big Ten Conference officials have announced that 278 student-athletes who played spring sports in the conference have been honored as academic all-Big Ten. Including at-large selections (defined as those who compete in sports in which the conference does not sponsor a championship), 135 women and 143 men were honored.

Arkansas State University's Felicia Adams has been named the first recipient of the American South Conference's Postgraduate Scholarship Award. The Junction City, Kansas, native earned a 3.100 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in business administration and will use the American South's $2,000 scholarship to pursue a graduate degree in finance at Arkansas State.

Fifteen student-athletes were honored during Bucknell University's May 28-29 commencement weekend. Among them were summa cum laude graduates Paul Hunt (soccer), Deborah Thomas (swimming) and Tona Williams (track). They, along with wrestler and cum laude graduate Dave Goldberg (wrestling), were recognized as members of Phi Beta Kappa.

University of Cincinnati officials have announced that 29 percent of the school's student-athletes (97 of 329) completed the fall and winter quarters with cumulative GPAs of at least 3.000. The men's and women's cross country and tennis teams and the women's swimming and volleyball teams posted cumulative GPAs above 3.000.

Almost half of Barry University's student-athletes (61 of 130) completed the spring semester with at least a 3.000 GPA. Recipients of the school's 1988 scholar-athlete awards were women's tennis player Joanne Varcoe (3.800 GPA for the semester, 3.995 overall) and baseball player Bill Reifsnider (4.000).

To be named to the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference academic honor roll, 37 student-athletes at Western Illinois University earned GPAs of at least 3.200 for the 1987-88 year. Among them was senior Teri Wiser, one of only eight student-athletes in the conference who received the Presidents' Academic Excellence Award for compiling a cumulative GPA of at least 3.800 for their careers.

Four Rollins College student-athletes posted 4.000 GPAs for the spring semester, including women's basketball player Kirsten Dellinger, men's soccer player John Pfaff, distance runner Norma Coto and nonvarsity athlete Helena Kjellander (water-skiing). In all, Rollins officials announced that 128 of 281 student-athletes posted GPAs of 3.000 or higher during the spring.

Four U.S. Military Academy student-athletes have been honored for the numbers they piled up in the classroom. Golfers Tim Johnson (77.7-stroke average, 3.100 GPA) and Rob Kewley (3.900 GPA) were named to the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference's all-academic team. Johnson also was named academic all-America by the Golf Coaches Association of America. Army women's softball players Laura Slattery (3.500 GPA) and Lori Klinger (3.200 GPA) were named to the MAAC academic all-conference softball team.

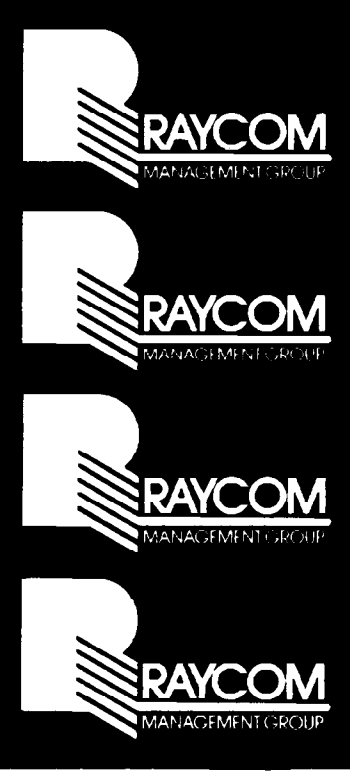

Eight Ohio Northern University student-athletes were named to the Ohio Athletic Conference's first-ever at-large all-academic team. Upperclassmen with a GPA of at least 3.000 who earned varsity letters in cross country, golf, tennis, track and field, or wrestling were eligible.

University of Notre Dame diver Andrea Bonny and University of Detroit runner Ken Dubois have been selected by Midwest Collegiate Conference faculty athletics representatives to receive the 1987-88 Cecil N. Coleman Medal of Honor awards. A Rhodes Scholar candidate, Bonny posted a 3.840 GPA in microbiology at Notre Dame. Dubois compiled a 3.890 GPA in mechanical engineering and earned Detroit's President's Award this spring.

Trivia Answer: The 1973-74 University of Tennessee, Knoxville, men's track team was the last representing a school east of the Mississippi River to claim the Division I men's track and field team crown.
