Revised Forum format stimulates vigorous debate

By Jack L. Copeland
Assistant Editor, The NCAA News

Spurred by a format that encouraged greater participation by delegates than in the past, approximately 510 representatives of NCAA member institutions vigorously debated three Association issues—membership structure, NCAA legislative procedures and financial aid—during the third session of the Presidents Commission National Forum.

The Forum, staged June 20-21 in Orlando, Florida, featured speakers who addressed aspects of the issues, as well as discussion sessions during which delegates debated the speaker's proposals.

"One of the criticisms that came out of the early Forums was that we did not provide the participants enough opportunity to engage in the debate sessions, and that's why it was recommended that we use the format we've used the last couple of days," said John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, and Presidents Commission chair, at the conclusion of the Forum.

"Therefore, we adopted it and I'm very pleased that we did. The response we have received from most of those people who participated is that they did have more opportunity to express themselves and to learn from one another, and to discuss pros and cons of some of the suggestions that came out."

The spirited debate that greeted several of those ideas was termed

"healthy" by NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, who said it is "important to get those issues out and talk about them" in order to head off suspicions about the motives of various NCAA constituencies.

Although the Forum was Slaughter's last activity before he becomes president at Occidental College and steps down as Presidents Commission chair, he offered a preview of what the Commission's plans are between now and the 1989 Convention.

He said a committee of Commission members has been formed to consider ideas generated by the first three Forums. The committee is expected to outline legislation during the Commission's September meeting that the chief executive officers could propose for the 1989 Convention.

Highlights of the discussions in Orlando:

Membership structure

The Forum's first topic was introduced by Schultz, who focused on the process of obtaining greater federation within the Association.

"Federation in its purest form would allow each division and subdivision to set its own rules," he said. "We don't have complete federation in the NCAA; but over the past number of years, we have moved closer and closer to what we would consider a full form of federation."

Drawing from a document that was submitted to the Council in April and that soon will be sent to the membership, Schultz posed five questions that must be dealt with in a move to greater federation:

- Are current membership divisions and subdivisions properly constituted?
- What is the appropriate level of subdivisions?
- What would be the impact of greater Division I autonomy for Divisions II and III?
- Can the NCAA have greater federation without making changes in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship structure?
- Can greater federation be achieved without destroying the umbrella structure of the Association?

If those concerns are addressed, movement can be made toward greater federation through legislation and such steps as making Division II a more attractive membership option. A lack of trust among elements of the NCAA membership also must be eliminated, Schultz said.

"We're never going to improve the structure of this organization—we're never going to generate the reform that is necessary to keep us in the modern world—unless we develop a greater trust in each other."

Next, College Football Association Executive Director Charles M. Neinas offered a review of the Association's past, noting that it moved from becoming a viable governance organization in the 1950s to a decade of growth in the 1960s, an organization that responded to economic issues in the 1970s and one that focused on such issues as academics in the 1980s.

Looking ahead, Neinas suggested that the next decade likely will be one of change and that the NCAA will have to adapt again as it has in the past. He believes the diversity of Division I programs poses a major challenge to the Association.

Neinas told Forum delegates that the Association can (1) maintain the status quo and endure the resulting frustrations as change occurs, (2) create more stringent criteria for Delegates to the Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando line up for registration in preparation for the general session, which began June 20. The session was led by John B. Slaughter, Presidents Commission chair, who is stepping down from the position. Slaughter has resigned as chancellor at the University of Maryland, College Park, to become president of Occidental College August 1.

McMillen warns of intervention by Congress in college athletics

If the NCAA membership does not take the steps needed to obtain more balance between athletics and academics, Congress likely will force its hand, Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, told delegates in his keynote address at the Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando June 20.

Calling upon the NCAA to become a leader in the movement to change the "misplaced priorities" and "skewed values" of the nation's education system, McMillen told the gathering that its "first duty is to balance the academic and athletics missions. If you do not accept that mission, others will, in fact, require that it be done."

McMillen said that an overemphasis on athletics is perceived throughout the nation, "and Congress is beginning to respond...."

"Colleges are beginning to be viewed as big business, not pillars of academic excellence. A few more Lenny Bias stories, and you open up a Pandora's box that would force Congress to begin micromanaging the affairs of the NCAA."

"No one wants to see that

happen," he continued. "Congress wants to see the NCAA presidents build on themselves and police themselves on these issues."

But he advised those who believe that Congress will stay out of intercollegiate athletics to consider Title IX as proof that "the Federal government does get involved in these issues at times."

He referred to legislation he is cosponsoring with Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey, to require colleges to compile and report information about graduation rates and other scholastic statistics regarding student-athletes, calling it "a step forward, trying to prod the system along so we can get back to our original mission (in education)."

The NCAA and its leadership can change the system by demonstrating its preference for schools that "are graduating their student-athletes," he said.

McMillen reminded delegates that sports have not grown too big to restore the balance between academics and athletics.

"The most important challenges we face in this country are not being played on the fields and courts of our colleges and universities; they're being played out in the global arena, where there's a race going on for technological superiority, for trade balances and for standards of living. That is the race that cannot be slighted."

Three tie for most NCAA team titles

Stanford University's Division I Baseball Championship this month gave the Cardinal its third NCAA team title in 1987-88, matching the University of Texas, Austin, and the University of California, Los Angeles, for the most championships among Division I schools.

Cardinal men's and women's tennis teams also were winners in the 1987-88 season; Texas' men's and women's swimming teams scored a double, and the women's indoor track team won, and UCLA earned titles in softball, men's outdoor track and men's golf.

Stanford's and UCLA's titles helped Pacific-10 Conference members amass 10 NCAA team championships. The Southwest Athletic Conference had the second highest total in Division I with five.

In Division II, Abilene Christian University won three team titles and tied for a fourth.

The Wildcats picked up a double in men's and women's outdoor track; and the women won the indoor track title, while the men tied with St. Augustine's College for first place.

California Collegiate Athletic Association members accounted for six championships, the highest among Division II conferences. California State University, Northridge, and California State University, Bakersfield, each won two championships for the CCAA.

Kenyon College and Hobart College continue to dominate swimming and lacrosse, respectively, in Division III.

Kenyon men earned their ninth consecutive swimming title, and Kenyon women won their fifth straight team championship in that sport.

Hobart now has won every men's lacrosse title in the nine years it has been a Division III championship sport.

Missing from the Division III list of champions for the first time since 1983 is Augustana College (Illinois). The Vikings gave up their football championship to Wagner College, a first-time football champion.

In addition to Kenyon's double, the University of Wisconsin, Lacrosse, won men's indoor and outdoor track, and Christopher Newport College captured women's indoor and outdoor track championships.

The two conferences that represent men's and women's programs at 10 Wisconsin state universities—the Wisconsin State University Conference (men) and the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference—accounted for a total of four championships.

The North Coast Athletic Conference, of which Kenyon is a member, gained three titles, as did the Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference—to which Christopher Newport belongs—and the Independent College Athletic Conference.

Division I membership, (3) create a "Division IV" that would provide a more homogenous grouping, or (4) turn to an "auxiliary organization" that would be affiliated with the NCAA but would control its own programs. Neinas said he prefers a solution "somewhere between" more stringent Division I criteria and the creation of a Division IV.

A cautious approach to federation was urged by the session's third speaker, President Kenneth J. Weller of Central College (Iowa).

He noted a "worry, bordering on paranoia" in a segment of the membership that schools will be "federated right out of" the Division I basketball tournament.

The concern was echoed later in the session by Sun Belt Conference Commissioner Victor A. Bubas, who urged that schools with concerns be guaranteed a voice in the federation process.

Weller was left alone, saying "it can be argued persuasively that the tournament doesn't belong to any group of schools, but to the public."

Keeping in mind an obligation to "the greater good," a movement toward federation should fit several criteria, Weller said. Schools should be grouped on the basis of academic as well as athletics interests, differing approaches to financial aid should be minimized by reducing expenditures in a coordinated way. Division II should be made more attractive to members of Divisions I and III, task forces or committees should be employed to develop legislative proposals that grow from a consensus within the Association, and multidivision classification should be eliminated.

Procedures

A critique of the Association's legislative procedures opened the Forum's second session.

Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive direc-

Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics at the University of California, San Diego, convenes one of the seven discussion sessions following addresses by the major speakers during the Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando.

tor of the Ivy Group, noted that the NCAA's legislative method is direct — with the entire membership voting — rather than elective, and that the process is collegial with decisions made by a group — rather than an executive administration. He said the procedure is unworkable, because too many groups are involved in the process, too little time is provided to understand interpretations of proposed legislation and many proposals fail to address substantial questions.

Orleans said there is a need to determine the underlying reason for a rule, then guide the membership to consensus.

He listed four criteria to be considered in rule making:

- How do proposals foster an attitude of self-discipline?
- How well do they serve the interests of student-athletes, rather than institutional interests?
- How will they allocate the responsibility for determining principles, translating those principles into policy and implementing the policies on a day-to-day basis?

• How will a proposal provide an opportunity for full, informed debate?

Orleans urged the Association to commit itself to enacting substantive change in the legislative process by the 1990 Convention, and he recommended that an outside consultant be retained to develop alternative approaches for consideration by the membership.

President Lattie F. Coor of the University of Vermont told delegates that an opportunity exists to make "bold changes" in the process.

He offered a specific proposal, summarizing it as follows:

• Major policy issues should be separated from those related to implementation.

• Major policy issues would reach the Convention floor only with the approval of an elected "Policy Committee."

• Such issues would be refined and adopted in two distinct steps, each on the floor of an NCAA Convention.

• Major policy issues would be amended and adopted by a roll-call vote limited to presidents and chancellors or their specially designated representatives for that purpose, functioning as a "Convention Senate."

• Once adopted, major policies would be assured a life of between three and seven years, changeable only by a two-thirds vote of a Convention Senate.

• All issues not designated as major policy issues would be treated as implementation matters and would continue to be treated by the NCAA Convention as they are now.

NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey offered another approach that emphasized providing more time for consideration of legislation and better communication in the membership of legislative proposals and their rationale.

He proposed a schedule for amending NCAA legislation that would allow time for consultation with sponsors to refine the amendments, place the amendments before the membership for its response, allow consideration of the response, and permit further revision and reevaluation by the membership — all before the amendment reaches the Convention floor.

Bailey proposed a series of deadlines for the amendment process, beginning with an April 15 deadline for the submission of amendments by the membership.

He suggested that the proposals be published in The NCAA News in mid-May, the membership respond by mid-June, the amendments be revised by mid-August (with "emergency" amendments from the Presidents Commission or Council also due then), revised amendments be published in mid-September and a mid-October deadline be set for amendments to amendments. The Convention Program would be published by mid-November.

Financial aid

The Forum's final session featured proposals for changes in financial aid legislation, as well as a call for rules designed to favor student-athletes and treat them comparably with other college students.

One of the proposals came from Lehigh University President Peter Likins, who first cited four current problems:

• Current grant-in-aid limitations are too low to cover the full cost of attending college.

• The cost of full grants-in-aid in a full complement of sports is prohibitive for many institutions, leading to cuts in sports sponsorship.

• The expansion of women's athletics is inhibited by an inability to provide financial aid that is proportionate to that in men's athletics.

• Some schools philosophically oppose "free-ride" scholarships for those who can afford an education while the least well-off students with other talents are obliged to work their way through college.

Likins proposed changes in the NCAA constitution that substantially would retain current financial aid options for member institution but offer the additional alternatives of providing grants-in-aid covering tuition and fees without regard to need, along with additional aid on a need basis, or providing a grant entirely on a need basis.

Once the additional alternatives were in place, each division and subdivision would select one for its members.

Former Michigan State University President Cecil Mackey, now an economics professor at the school, followed Likins' proposal with a call for the NCAA membership "to confront reality in our planning for the future of intercollegiate athletics."

He said reality dictates that member institutions begin treating student-athletes the same as other students, and in fact compensating them in the same manner. Reality also calls for the NCAA membership to adjust its definition of amateurism to be more in line with definitions employed by the U.S. Olympic Committee or The Athletics Congress, he said.

Mackey believes that student-athletes should be eligible for the full Pell Grant; institutions should be able to provide them with occasional transportation home, clothing for road trips and cash for personal expenses (he suggested $100 a month); two family members should be provided transportation to major post-season events involving a student-athlete; student-athletes should be compensated for loss of summer employment in return for accepting developmental or remedial assistance and they should receive aid beginning the summer following graduation from high school, and the time period for a grant-in-aid should be extended where a lighter academic load will help the student-athlete succeed in college.

He also said student-athletes should have the same freedom as other students to transfer to another school and to receive the same opportunities to prepare for a career, even to the extent of "trying out" for a professional sport to determine if that is a realizable option; and finally, they should be able to employ trust funds and solicit sponsorships in the same manner as track and field athletes.

Legislative Assistance

1988 Column No. 25

NCAA Bylaw 6-4-(d) and O.I. 601 — financial aid

According to O.I. 601, a recruited player receiving financial aid set forth in O.I. 600, granted without regard in any degree to athletic ability, does not have to be counted until the player engages in varsity intercollegiate competition in that sport. Because Bylaw 6-4-(d) applies to all sports other than football and basketball in Division I and all sports in Division II, and because it is less restrictive than O.I. 601 in its application of countable financial aid, O.I. 601 would be applicable for the sports of Division I football and basketball only.

It is important to remember that Bylaw 6-4 deals only with exempted players. If a player is countable as determined under the provisions of Bylaws 6-3 and 6-4, all O.I. 600 financial aid [and, if recruited, NCAA Constitution 3-4-(a)-(4) aid] must be included in the equivalency computation, even though a portion of the player's O.I. 600 aid might not be athletically related. For example, if the student-athlete receives a $500 athletics grant, $1,000 work-study assistance given without regard to athletic ability and a $500 out-of-state tuition waiver, all $2,000 must be calculated in the student-athlete's equivalency computation.

Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that income earned through employment in an institution's athletics department or an athletics facility is countable financial aid per Bylaw 6-3 and O.I. 600, and that Bylaw 6-4-(d) cannot be used to exempt a recruited student-athlete who is receiving such aid from counting toward the financial aid limitations. This is the case regardless of the source of funds (e.g., work-study program), inasmuch as such arrangements, regardless of the involvement of the institution's athletics department personnel, cannot be considered unrelated to the student-athlete's involvement or ability in athletics.

NCAA Bylaw 1-7-(c) — institutional summer camps

Member institutions are reminded of the provisions of Bylaw 1-7-(c), which state that an institution's sports camp, coaching school or clinic shall involve activities (i.e., instruction and competition) designed to improve overall skills and general knowledge in the sport. Member institutions are precluded from operating a camp or clinic designed to evaluate a prospective student-athlete's athletic ability.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

CWS rating pleases CBS

Officials at CBS Sports were delighted with the rating of the College World Series championship game June 11 between Stanford and Arizona State.

The game, which Stanford won, 9-4, drew a 3.4 national rating and a 13 share of the audience.

Overall, slightly more than three million households, which represented 13 percent of all the television viewers that afternoon, were tuned to the championship contest.

"We were thrilled with the numbers," said Theresa Ross, a program services manager at CBS Sports.

"The College World Series won the time period between 2 to 3 p.m. Central time. And from a ratings standpoint, it was the third most-watched program of the afternoon."

The competition was Major League Baseball's game-of-the-week, which had an overall rating of 4.2, and the Belmont Stakes, which drew a 5.4.

ESPN televised the 14 games preceding the championship and reported an overall national rating of 1.1, or an average of 517,000 households tuned to each game.

194,000 tickets requested

A total of 57,370 applications requesting 194,434 tickets for the 1989 Final Four were received by the NCAA. The number of applications is the third largest in Final Four history.

Host state Washington submitted 7,968 applications, 14 percent of the total received.

The 1989 Final Four will be held at the Kingdome in Seattle.

Californians sent in 4,564 applications, the second largest number, followed by Oregon, 3,028; Illinois, 2,617, and Texas, 2,398.

Data Systems International of Kansas City, Missouri, utilized an IBM System 36 computer to select the ticket recipients.

Refund checks and game tickets will be mailed June 24-27 by first-class mail.

Two Byers scholarships to be awarded in 1989

The first Walter Byers Postgraduate Scholarships will be awarded to one male and one female student-athlete for the 1989-90 academic year, under procedures established June 19 during the first meeting of the Walter Byers Postgraduate Scholarship Committee.

During their meeting in Orlando, Florida, committee members created an application form for use in nominating scholarship candidates and established a schedule for the selection of recipients.

The $7,500 scholarships were established earlier this year to recognize the contributions of the NCAA executive director emeritus by encouraging excellence in academic performance by student-athletes.

Recipients, who will be known as Byers Scholars, will present at least a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale), show evidence of superior character and leadership, and demonstrate that participation in athletics has been a positive influence on personal and intellectual development, among other qualifications.

Candidates will be nominated by faculty athletics representatives at NCAA member institutions.

Applications for the first scholarships will be due February 1, 1989.

The committee will select five men and five women from the pool of nominees for further evaluation, then invite no more than three men and three women for interviews with the committee during April 1989.

Publicizing the availability of the scholarships also was discussed by the committee during its meeting. Committee members recommended that brochures and posters be produced for distribution to faculty athletics representatives and that a news release be made available for distribution to campus newspapers.

Three to enter CoSIDA hall of fame

Three veteran sports information directors, one of them deceased, have been announced as the 1988 inductees into the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) hall of fame. Induction will take place July 6 as part of CoSIDA's 1988 workshop, which will be held in Kansas City.

Named to the hall of fame were the late Bennie Thomas, former sports information director at Southern University, Baton Rouge, and Alcorn State University; Bill Cable, SID at Northeast Missouri State University, and George Ellis, North Dakota State University's SID.

These selections bring to 95 the total of current and former SIDs named to the CoSIDA hall.

Thomas

Thomas graduated from Southern-Baton Rouge and became his alma mater's first sports information director in 1957 after spending a year as sports editor of the Baton Rouge News Leader. He became the school's director of public relations in 1968 and held that position until leaving to enter private business in 1972.

He returned to the profession in 1976 as SID at Alcorn State and returned to his alma mater as SID in 1977. Thomas was named to CoSIDA's board of directors in 1983 and served until he left Southern in 1985. He died several months later in Baton Rouge.

Cable

Except for a two-year hitch with the U.S. Army, Cable has been associated with Northeast Missouri State since 1956, when he graduated from the University of Missouri, Colombia, with a journalism degree.

After returning from the service, the Hannibal, Missouri, native directed the institutional publications office; helped with the workload in the university's new bureau, and organized a sports information operation. He also spent a year as adviser to the school newspaper.

Cable was named Northeast Missouri State's first full-time SID in 1972. Twenty-three of his publications have received CoSIDA awards.

Ellis

A native of Sioux City, Iowa, Ellis is a 1971 graduate of Morningside College and is in his 20th year as an SID. He began as SID at Morningside while an undergraduate and served a year at the University of Northern Iowa before moving to North Dakota State.

In the past 14 years, Ellis' publications have received 81 national awards including 14 "Best in the Nation" awards from CoSIDA in the past nine years.

Ellis also served five years as baseball coach at North Dakota State (the 1980 through 1984 seasons). His teams won a school-record 62 games during that period.

Ellis currently serves on the CoSIDA board of directors and is director of the North Central Intercollegiate Athletics Conference's information bureau.

Clune to chair CFA board

Col. John J. Clune, director of athletics at the U.S. Air Force Academy, has been elected chair of the board of directors of the College Football Association, and the Rev. E. William Beauchamp, executive vice-president of the University of Notre Dame, will serve as secretary-treasurer for 1988-89.

Named to serve on the board of directors at the CFA annual meeting in Dallas was William H. Cunningham, president of the University of Texas, Austin.

The remaining members of the board for 1988-89 are Marshall M. Criser, president, University of Florida; Vincent J. Dooley, director of athletics and head football coach, University of Georgia; Fred Jacoby, commissioner, Southwest Athletic Conference; James I. Robertson, faculty athletics representative, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; R. W. Robinson, director of athletics, Clemson University; Fred A. Schaus, director of athletics, West Virginia University, and Frank Winedegger, director of athletics, Texas Christian University.

Col. John J. Clune

CFA legislation will seek full Pell award for athletes

The College Football Association says it will submit legislation to the 1989 NCAA Convention that would allow qualified student-athletes to receive the maximum of $2,100 under the Pell Grant instead of the current NCAA limit of $1,400.

During its annual meeting in Dallas earlier this month, the CFA also voted to submit legislation to the 1989 Convention that would allow schools to provide financial aid to incoming freshman student-athletes during summer school prior to their freshman year.

Delegates authorized the CFA to submit legislation that would reinstate the 30 initial grants-in-aid in Division I-A football (scheduled to go to 25 in 1989-90) and alternative legislation that would provide an initial grant limit of 25 a year beginning in the 1991-92 academic year, but with no overall grant limit (currently 95).

Legislation was authorized that would allow a head football coach to visit a prospective student-athlete one day per calendar week at the prospect's school and retain the requirement that a coach can visit a prospect's home only once. Delegates supported a legislative proposal to allow football coaches to attend high school games on Friday nights in October.

As reported earlier (The NCAA News, June 8), the CFA reaffirmed freshman eligibility until current NCAA studies respond to problems that freshman ineligibility might cause, such as its effect on academic standards [NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j)], costs to remain competitive in athletics and extent of allowed freshman participation in athletically related activities.

School seeking Division I status

Portland State University has applied for Division I membership in the NCAA, following the recommendation of a university committee composed of students, faculty and community leaders.

The move also was endorsed by the state board of higher education.

Approval for Division I membership would mean that the school would reinstate men's basketball, which it dropped following the 1980-81 season. Currently, the school offers 12 sports—six for men and six for women.

Ohio's Morgan to be honored

Frank Morgan, Ohio University's sports information director, will be recognized for a 25-year service to his profession during the 1988 College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) workshop, which will be held July 1-6 in Kansas City.

A native of Willoughby, Ohio, Morgan is a 1955 graduate of Miami University (Ohio). Following two years of military service, he spent two years working for his father before becoming a copy boy at the Cleveland Press.

Less than six months later, he was hired by United Press International's Cleveland bureau.

Morgan later spent three years away from journalism before returning to newspaper work in Middletown, Ohio. Three years later, he was named SID at Ohio University and has been there since.

Morgan's publications have won CoSIDA awards on five occasions, and he has served on several of the organization's standing committees. He also has served as a correspondent and columnist for two national sporting publications.

Bohnet to receive Warren Berg Award

Lee Bohnet, retiring sports information director at the University of North Dakota, has been selected to receive the College Sports Information Directors of America's Warren Berg Award. He will be recognized July 6 during CoSIDA's 1988 workshop in Kansas City.

Given annually, the award goes to a college-division member "who has made an outstanding contribution to the field of college sports information and who, by his or her activities outside the field, has brought dignity and prestige to the profession."

Bohnet will step down June 30 after 30 years on the North Dakota athletics staff.

He served with the U.S. Navy during World War II. Following graduation from North Dakota in 1951, he went to work as a sportswriter for the Fargo (North Dakota) Forum.

Bohnet became editor of the Hillsboro (North Dakota) Banner, a weekly, in June 1952. He returned to Grand Forks, North Dakota, in July 1953 and worked briefly for the Holt Printing Co. before being named SID at his alma mater.

He has served on numerous CoSIDA committees and won several awards from the group for his publications.

Beginning in 1963, Bohnet served five years as secretary-treasurer of the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, performing duties now handled by the league's commissioner.

Bohnet was inducted into North Central Conference's hall of fame in 1974, into CoSIDA's in 1978 and into his alma mater's athletics hall of fame in 1981.

Sometime this year, Bohnet is expected to complete work on an athletics history of his alma mater.

Series sends refreshing breeze through college athletics

By Michael Kelly
Omaha World-Herald

On national television, the College World Series put its best foot forward to shake it all about.

It did the hokey-pokey and it turned itself around, and that's what it's all about. No joke.

On a glorious 75-degree day, with 32 percent humidity and near 100 percent humidity, seventh-seeded Stanford upset Arizona State, 9-4, to win the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship.

The game was intense, but so lacking in pretense that before the eighth inning, all six umpires gathered near home plate and danced the hokey-pokey with the CWS mascot, the "Baseball Maniac." The crowd roared its approval.

The day made sports history in Omaha. The 16,071 attending put the series total at a record 132,698. And the CBS telecast marked the first time the championship game was shown live on one of the three major networks.

On top of that, Stanford, like Kansas in basketball two months earlier, won a national title with the worst overall record for a champion in the sport's NCAA history.

Coach Mark Marquess of Stanford was effusive and not just about winning.

"What can you say about the people of Omaha?" Marquess said at his press conference. "You don't know all the work that goes on... It's amazing. The fans don't have a home-town favorite they support college baseball. It's a noon game, it's on TV and they still fill that stadium."

"Did you see those darn umpires doing the hokey-pokey? It's unbelievable. It's special. It's a special place, whether you win or lose, to come here."

The 1988 CWS was special, and that moment with the umpires was very much so. So warm, so silly—so hokey. And on national TV yet.

In an era of some cynicism in sports, that simple act of six grown men in positions of authority—umpires so self-secure that they could do a child's dance in the macho world of big-time sports—sent a refreshing breeze through Rosenblatt Stadium and college athletics.

Can you imagine that American Association ump, the one who ejected the organist at an Omaha Royals game two weeks ago, putting his right elbow in, his right elbow out, his right elbow in, and shake it all about?

Can you imagine Pete Rose giving a forearm shiver to an umpire who had smiled and danced in front of a packed house? That's not to say that umpires and referees should resort to child's play at every turn.

But the lesson, perhaps unintended, is so clear as to stop you in your tracks: All of us could benefit from taking ourselves a little less seriously.

Oh, yes, there was a baseball game out there, and Stanford jumped all over it.

The Cardinal had won one of six games this year against Arizona State but scored eight runs in the first three innings. The first ASU pitcher went a third of an inning, the second went two-thirds and Stanford lead-off man Frank Carey batted in each of the first three innings.

By then, Brent Musburger of CBS was asking his broadcast partner, former major-leaguer Rick Monday, to reminisce about his 1965 appearance in the CWS. The only thing that could have made the day better was a close game, but so what?

Omaha and the NCAA Baseball Committee had worried about the weather, because a rainout would have meant CBS left with its $500,000 check and maybe some folks would have suggested moving the game indoors to a domed stadium in future years.

You couldn't have asked for a better day. Well, you could have asked. But you wouldn't have gotten it.

Lack of interest forces Penn State to cancel seminar on sports agents

By Ron Bracken
Centre (Pennsylvania) Daily Times

You would have thought, given the current climate, that a conference to discuss the sports agent-college athlete situation would have had people stampeding to sign up.

That's what Penn State's John Bove was thinking when he set out to put together a conference on the subject.

He lined up an outstanding group of speakers that included head football coaches Joe Paterno (Penn State); Bo Schembechler (Michigan); Vince Dooley (Georgia); Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Cris Carter, who lost his final year of eligibility at Ohio State because he signed with an agent; ex-Penn State and Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Kenny Jackson, and Pittsburgh Steelers president Dan Rooney.

Others who agreed to speak included two agents; a member of the NCAA enforcement staff; ex-Nittany Lion Doug Allen, who is now the assistant director of the National Football League Players Association; and two professors.

It was a group that would have provided input from every perspective. It could have been a great conference.

But this idea was either ahead of its time or at the wrong time, because out of 1,300 people who received the flyer announcing the conference, fewer than 20 said they would attend, and the conference was canceled.

Bove, who serves as an administrative assistant and recruiting coordinator for Penn State's football program, was mystified by the minuscule response.

"There just weren't enough registrants to feel comfortable asking the panel to come in," he said. "I can't understand it. I felt we had an outstanding panel. I was surprised that we had fewer than 20 registrants, because the agent issue is being heavily discussed, especially since (Cris) Carter and a couple of other young athletes have been involved."

I thought a lot of universities we got in touch with would be represented. Every time you turn around, someone is discussing it. We thought that if we could put our heads together, we could come up with a number of ideas."

In fact, if all those schools who profess to be so concerned with the problem of agents signing athletes before their eligibility expires were serious, you would have thought they would have made attendance at the conference mandatory. Instead, they treated it as an invitation to an all-night dentist's open house.

"We sent notices to the head football coach, the head men's and women's basketball coaches, and the athletics director of every Division I-A and I-AA school," Bove said. "You would think there would have been someone who could have come."

"Or, if a university had a three-man panel (to advise athletes on dealing with agents) in force, it could have sent someone from the panel. But I'm not sure if there are enough of those panels in force."

Bove did receive several responses that indicated that College Football Association meetings being held in Dallas at the same time the conference was scheduled presented a conflict. But that's hardly a valid reason.

"Coaches Paterno, Schembechler and Dooley were all ready to fly in here from the CFA meetings," Bove said. "They were concerned that we do the right thing for the student-athlete. They all thought it was a great idea."

"In fact, lining up the speakers was the easiest part of the whole conference. Everyone accepted when initially invited."

Bove still believes the idea has some merit, however, and a poll will be conducted to see how many would attend a similar conference if one is scheduled next year.

"If we get enough response, we'll give it another shot," he said. "But not without that poll."

Lawmaker seeks injunction to end Pell Grant limitation

Nebraska state Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said he will ask the Nebraska attorney general to seek a Federal injunction against NCAA limitations on the amount of Federal financial aid athletes may receive.

NCAA rules limit Pell Grants for financially needy athletes to $1,400. Nonathletes may receive $2,100 a year under the Federal program.

"Since the Pell Grant was created by Federal law, and there is no provision in it to discriminate against athletes, the NCAA rule denies to the athlete equal protection of the law that is guaranteed by the Constitution," Chambers said.

Robert S. Devaney, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, athletics director, said the university favors lifting the ceiling on Pell aid to athletes.

"We are trying to get the NCAA to let the university have the full Pell Grant paid to student-athletes if they are financially deserving. We will be discussing this in the NCAA Convention next January," Devaney told United Press International.

Chambers said he will write state Attorney General Robert Spire that the university, by complying with the NCAA rule, is engaging in action that violates athletes' rights.

"The only reason the university complies with the NCAA is that they would face sanctions at the hands of the NCAA if they didn't," Chambers said.

"To prevent those sanctions, such as loss of eligibility for the athletes, the attorney general should simultaneously seek an injunction in Federal court to prohibit the NCAA from imposing sanctions upon the university for failure to comply with the discriminatory rule," he said.

Chambers said any student qualifying for the full Pell amount should seek an injunction against the student's university.

No organization should have the right to insist an individual waive a constitutional right to participate in sports, Chambers said.

"This move may put additional pressure on the universities and the NCAA to do something," he said.

"I could drop off 10 sports and save $400,000, but I'm not sure that would be wise. We have a large university, and I think its intercollegiate program should reflect the diversity of the university.

"Integrity cannot be legislated, no more than morality can. It's something that each institution has to deal with itself and be committed to. You need a three-way compliance program involving the institution, conference and the NCAA."

18-year-old pitcher, Stan Spencer of Vancouver, Washington. His parents cheered in the stands, and he baffled Arizona State with a mixture of off-speed stuff and fastballs until tiring in the eighth.

He walked only one batter; and when the Sun Devils connected, it was usually an atom ball—right at 'em, for an out.

Stanford, meanwhile, did all the "little things" that coaches love stealing bases, moving runners along, playing good defense, cutting off balls in the outfield.

Entering the game, Stanford was batting only .223 in the CWS.

"I can't believe it," coach Marquess kept saying. "I just can't believe it."

The day ended with the teams shaking hands and Marquess, the U.S. Olympic coach, making good on his promise to get his seniors home for graduation today.

And that's what it's all about.

The session closed with a presentation of two more financial-aid proposals by the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, represented by Marvin G. Carmichael, Clemson University director of financial aid and committee chair; the Ivy Group's Orleans; Diane Tsukamaki, director of financial aid at Lewis and Clark College; Judith M. Brame, director of women's athletics at California State University, Northridge, and Joseph A. Russo, director of financial aid at the University of Notre Dame.

The committee's preferred proposal—which will be presented with the other proposal to the Council—is to provide all student-athletes with tuition and fee, plus additional aid based on need for room and board, books, personal expenses and transportation. Brame explained that the proposal fosters equal treatment of all student-athletes while providing cost savings to the athletics department and using university financial aid resources more effectively.

As an alternative, the committee proposed providing a full grant-in-aid—including tuition and fees, room and board, and books—plus aid on a need basis for personal expenses and transportation.

Both proposals would rely on Federally mandated formulas for determining how much the families of student-athletes can contribute to the cost of attending college and would use that amount to determine need.

Association awards 55 postgraduate scholarships

Postgraduate scholarships of $4,000 each—double the amount awarded last year—have been presented to 55 student-athletes in sports other than football and basketball in which the NCAA conducts championships.

Beginning with this academic year, the Association annually will award 100 such scholarships, an increase of 10 over last year. In addition to the scholarships given in "other" sports, 25 awards were presented earlier to student-athletes in football and 20 were awarded to basketball student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

Including the awards listed below, the NCAA postgraduate scholarship program has presented scholarships worth $3,064,000 to 1,904 student-athletes since 1964. To qualify, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum 3.000 grade-point average on a 4.000 scale—or the equivalent—and perform with distinction in a varsity sport.

Following are the accomplishments of the 1988 postgraduate-scholarship winners in sports other than football and basketball:

Men's Division I

Tyler Ward Eldred (baseball, U.S. Air Force Academy, 3.900 grade-point average in aeronautical engineering)—As a three-year letterman, Eldred was named to the Western Athletic Conference all-academic team in 1987 as an outfielder. This year, he is a nominee for the annual Air Force Academy Scholar-Athlete Award. His 12 doubles this season were just four short of the school's record. He was among team leaders this year in stolen bases, runs scored and walks. A Rhodes Scholar finalist, Eldred participated in the school's summer research program, where he did work at the Armament Test Laboratory validating a computational fluid-dynamics computer model simulating weapons-system separation. He has received a Guggenheim Fellowship to Columbia University, where he will pursue a master's degree in flight structures.

John Phillip Bayne Jr. (soccer, Cornell University, 4.000 grade-point average in mechanical engineering)—Activities for Bayne include membership in Tau Beta Pi engineering honor society; the Sphinxhead, a senior male honor society; and the Red Key Society, Cornell's athletics honor society. He also was a Presidential Scholar and received an RCA Excellence in Engineering award in 1986. As a four-year starter at midfield, Bayne led the Ivy League in scoring in his sophomore and junior years and led the team in goals scored the past three years. His career scoring record of 21 goals and six assists ranks him 10th among the all-time scorers at the university. Among several academic honors is his selection for the GTE academic all-America team in 1986 and 1987. After serving as team captain his senior year, Bayne was awarded the school's Nick Bawlf Award, given to the senior who has contributed most to Cornell soccer throughout his career. He also has been an outstanding performer on the school's track team, setting several school records. He hopes to enter the master of engineering program at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in 1990, after working two years at IBM.

Guy Marshall Farrow (swimming, University of Hawaii, 3.820 grade-point average in international business)—Farrow's many activities included participation in the Associated Students of the University of Hawaii, where he was elected a senator representing the college of business administration. He received the athletics department's Jack Bonham Award, presented annually to the senior varsity athlete who best exemplifies athletics excellence, academic achievement, public service, leadership and character. He holds the school record in the 200-yard individual medley and had eight wins in 12 events in dual meets during 1987-88. Nationally ranked in the 100-yard breaststroke this past season, Farrow qualified in that event for the Division I championships; he also was a 1986 qualifier as part of the 400-yard medley relay team. Following graduation in December, he hopes to gain employment in the business field before entering a master of business administration program.

Gavin Lee Gaynor (track/cross country, North Carolina State University, 3.896 grade-point average in pulp and paper science and technology)—Gaynor served as coordinating secretary of the student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and also was a member of the student chapter of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry. He received the DuPont Ph.D. Fellowship in chemical engineering and held an Endowed Scholarship from the Pulp and Paper Foundation for four years. During his summers, Gaynor served as the college outreach director at a local church. Captain of this year's cross country and track and field teams, Gaynor received the 1985 and 1987 Coaches Award in cross country and was named the most valuable athlete in that sport in 1984. Also, he holds the school record in the steeplechase with a time of 8:42.30. Gaynor was the 1988 recipient of the Atlantic Coast Conference's James Weaver Award, given to the conference's outstanding student-athlete. He plans to continue his studies this fall at either North Carolina State, Princeton University or Stanford University.

Robert Ralph Kempainen (track/cross country, Dartmouth College, 3.770 grade-point average in biochemistry)—Elected to Phi Beta Kappa in 1987, Kempainen is a member of the Green Key Society and the Fire and Skool Senior Society. On the track, he received the 1985-86 Herbert E. Chase Award, given to the Dartmouth track athlete who has made the greatest improvement through hard work, self-discipline and enthusiasm. He has been named all-Ivy Group and all-America several times during his career and was a GTE academic all-America second-team selection in 1987. He has qualified for the NCAA championships the past three years, finishing as high as fourth in the 1986 cross country championships. He plans to begin work toward a medical degree this fall.

James Anthony Niederberger (track, University of Tulsa, 3.930 grade-point average in applied mathematics)—Niederberger's activities include membership in Omicron Delta Kappa leadership society, Phi Eta Sigma honor society, Phi Gamma Kappa honor society and the Scroll Honor Society. Among his awards, he has received the National Merit Award, the University Scholar Award and the Ralph W. Veatch Math Award, given to the top student in the mathematics/computer science department. Niederberger holds several school track records, including two set this season. He gained recognition in cross country as well as track, as he was named Tulsa's most outstanding track runner in 1987 and 1988 and the most outstanding cross country runner in 1985 and 1986. His performances in both sports helped him become the first four-year cross country and track letterman in school history. He will begin studies this fall at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, with hopes of eventually entering the operations-research field.

Men's Divisions II-III

Eric Robert Willis (baseball, Cornell College, 3.803 grade-point average in economics/business and health/physical education)—A State of Iowa scholar, Willis was the recipient of several additional scholarships, including the William Fletcher King Memorial Scholarship and the Bowman Scholarship. He also received the Charles N. Cochran Award. His abilities on the field earned him the Russell Landis Award, given to Cornell College's outstanding student-athlete. Twice named to share his team's most-valuable-player award, Willis also was all-Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference for three consecutive years. As an infielder, he has 149 career putouts and only 22 career errors; at the plate, Willis averaged .379 in four seasons, including a .419 average this season. He will pursue a master of physical education degree this fall at the University of Northern Iowa.

School's investigation finds evidence of abuse of power

The University of Illinois, Champaign, said June 15 its own investigation has confirmed reported abuses of power by top athletics association officials. The school said it has turned over its evidence to the state's attorney office.

But Illinois Chancellor Morton Weir said no immediate sanctions would be taken against any individual, including athletics director Neale R. Stoner.

"So far, we have discovered some long-standing practices that I believe are improper, including the personal use of gifts in-kind and, as has been widely reported, the use of athletics association personnel to perform personal work of various kinds," Weir said at a news conference. "Such favors were bestowed upon a variety of athletics association employees, and they predate the tenure of... Stoner."

The school's 10-day probe, conducted by two police detectives and six auditors, uncovered the following:

- 18 incidents over the past five years in which administrators in the athletics association had personal work performed by athletics associ-

Weir said the evidence, most of which was fully documented, has been turned over to the state's attorney's office. United Press International reported.

New event in skiing proposed

A new cross country event with a freestyle skiing technique for the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships is among the recommendations prepared for the Executive Committee by the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Committee at its June 13-15 meeting in Kansas City.

The committee will recommend that the cross country relay, which has been a part of the championships format since 1981, be replaced by an additional individual, mass-start race. The distance would be 15 kilometers for women and 20 kilometers for men, and the competitors could use a freestyle technique.

The distances in the other individual, interval-start cross country race would be changed to 10 kilometers for men and five for women (from 15 and 10, respectively), and competitors would use a "classical" or diagonal skiing technique.

"The committee has studied this format for a couple of years," said Denis E. Lambert, chair of the committee and athletics director at the University of Vermont. "There has been a shift to this type of format in international competition, and the change has the support of both the coaches and competitors."

Recommendations for the number of individual positions to be allocated for the new event in each region in the country also were adjusted to accommodate both the new format and the place-finish formula used by the committee.

The allocation for women's slalom was changed to 18 for both the East and West (from 17 and 19, respectively, last year) and to 16 and 20 (from 15 and 21) for the individual cross country events.

In rules-making action, the committee made significant changes in the cross country rules, primarily Rule 9, to accommodate the new cross country event and skiing technique. Although the relay will be dropped from the championships format, if approved by the Executive Committee, it was not deleted from the collegiate event format and may be used in regular-season competition.

The NCAA committee also will request Executive Committee support in asking the NCAA Council to sponsor three pieces of legislation.

The first would exempt skiing from the 100-mile, out-of-state restriction on practice sites [Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1)] if there is no snow available closer to the institution's campus.

The second request would be to amend Bylaw 12-5-(a)-(4) to include the committee among those sports committees that may elect the secretary-rules editor without restrictions.

Also, the committee will request sponsorship of legislation to include skiing in the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3) that allow prospective student-athletes in the sport of ice hockey to finish a season of organized noncollegiate competition in which the student's 20th birthday occurs without losing a season of eligibility.

enforcement procedures adopted in June 1985.

Secondary violations are those that provide only a limited recruiting or competitive advantage and that are determined to be isolated or inadvertent in nature.

The assistant executive director for enforcement is empowered to determine whether a violation should be considered secondary, and penalties may be imposed (or actions by institutions and conferences may be accepted) after consultation with a designated member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Sixty cases during the second quarter of 1988 were self-reported by the involved institutions or their conferences, and they appeared, for the most part, to involve technical or inadvertent violations.

Fourteen institutions discovered that one or more student-athletes participated while ineligible for a period of time under NCAA satisfactory-progress regulations. Five student-athletes participated for a period of time while enrolled in less than 12 semester or quarter hours. Four institutions misinterpreted exceptions to the NCAA transfer rule. Seven institutions printed recruiting brochures that included more than one color within the covers.

Ten additional institutions were involved in minor recruiting violations that occurred in conjunction with official paid visits by a prospect. These violations involved entertainment outside a 30-mile radius from the campus, exceeding the 48-hour limitation for such a visit and improperly publicizing visits or the acceptance of financial aid by prospects.

Fifteen institutions were involved in violations of the "dead" period prior to signing National Letters of Intent. Twelve institutions violated the NCAA extra-benefit legislation due to receipt of prohibited benefits by enrolled student-athletes.

Penalties imposed by institutions and conferences in these cases (which were accepted as sufficient by the NCAA) included forfeiting games that involved ineligible student-athletes, declaring the prospect ineligible when the violation appeared to result in an advantage to the offending institution, reprimands and other sanctions against coaching staff members who were involved in violations.

In this regard, it should be emphasized that violations of recruiting contact legislation that provided any recruiting advantage (e.g., violations of the "dead" period associated with the National Letter of Intent signing date) resulted in action to prohibit the involved institutions from certifying such prospects eligible for intercollegiate competition, NCAA enforcement officials said.

Southern University, Baton Rouge, appealed proposed NCAA action in one case, and penalties imposed by the Southwestern Athletic Conference in the case for using two ineligible football players in 1987 were accepted by the NCAA. The action taken against the university included reducing initial grants-in-aid in football from 30 to 27 for the 1989-90 academic year, forfeiture of television receipts (approximately $4,000) for the 1987 football season and a requirement that the university report new measures to correct deficiencies in the eligibility certification process to the conference office.

Q What is the value of an NCAA postgraduate scholarship, and for what purposes may the funds be used?

A Beginning with the 1987-88 academic year, the awards are one-time grants of $4,000 each. These funds may be used to pay the expenses of the recipient's postgraduate education. These expenses are defined as tuition, fees, room, board, required course-related supplies and books, plus a monthly stipend not to exceed $15 for incidental expenses. This does not include transportation to and from the site of the institution.

Iowa sports give school a funding boost

The success of the University of Iowa's football and basketball teams is providing a financial shot in the arm to the university's efforts to lure minority students and faculty to the campus and bolster library programs, school officials said.

University officials said June 17 that the athletics department has pledged $500,000 over the next three years to Iowa Endowment 2000, a fund that provides scholarships to nonathlete minorities and finances the purchase of equipment for university libraries.

Athletics director Chalmers Elliott said the gift is funded by unbudgeted windfalls from NCAA basketball tournament appearances, football bowl games, and sales of Iowa Hawkeye souvenirs and will not involve any private contributions to men's athletics or income from ticket sales and TV rights, United Press International reported.

"We have determined that unbudgeted surplus funds will make this gift possible during the next three years," Elliott said.

He said men's basketball teams have competed in the NCAA tournament in nine of the past 10 years, the football teams have been invited to seven consecutive bowl games and Iowa Hawk Shop revenues have exceeded projections.

He said $200,000 of the gift has been designated for libraries, with the remaining $300,000 to go toward programs to attract minority students and professors.

Philip G. Hubbard, vice-president for student services, said the gift "could hardly be more timely or more appreciated."

"While we would prefer to use the gift to build an endowment, the need for minority student aid is so critical that we will need to use these funds as they are received," said Hubbard.

The gift from men's athletics brings the total amount pledged to the endowment drive to more than $70 million, said Darrell D. Wyrick, president of the University of Iowa Foundation and director of the endowment fund drive.

"The university is fortunate that the high quality of the athletics program is producing enough revenue from all sources so that it is not only self-supporting but also able to provide continuing assistance to other university needs," Wyrick said.

Drug lab monitoring recommended

The drug-education and drug-testing subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports will recommend to the Executive Committee that a special committee be formed to oversee certification and quality control of NCAA drug-testing laboratories.

The competitive safeguards committee's meeting at Bar Harbor, Maine, June 14-16 was its first since taking over responsibilities for the Association's drug education and drug testing.

While expressing satisfaction with the NCAA's three certified laboratories, the subcommittee reiterated the need for close scrutiny of every aspect of the Association's testing program.

Laboratories now certified for processing specimens in NCAA testing of student-athletes are the University of Quebec's National Institute for Scientific Research-Health (INRS-Sante); the Paul Ziffren Olympic Analytical Laboratory at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the Sports Medicine Identification Laboratory at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis.

In other action related to drug testing, the subcommittee approved the modification of testing protocol to increase the minimum specific gravity of a specimen from 1.005 to 1.010, affirmed its position on the need for strict monitoring of specimen delivery and supported the development of legislation that would render a student-athlete who tests positive at an NCAA championship or a bowl game ineligible for an NCAA-certified all-star football or basketball game.

The full committee approved modifications in the forms used for the Association's annual Injury Surveillance System and developed forms for use in men's and women's basketball, which will be surveyed as part of the system for the first time in 1988-89.

In other action, the committee approved a recommendation from the Men's Ice Hockey Committee that officials be required to wear helmets. The committee denied a request from the same body that a half-shield face mask replace the full shield now in use.

Championships sites proposed

The NCAA Women's Gymnastics Committee will recommend to the Executive Committee the following sites for 1989 regional competitions: Central—University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Midwest—University of Utah; Northeast—Pennsylvania State University; Southeast—University of Florida; and West—California State University, Fullerton. The committee also will recommend Oregon State University as the site for the 1990 national championships, April 20-21.

The committee met June 13-16 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The committee will recommend that judges for regional competitions and team and all-around competitions at the national championships receive a fee of $90, and judges for the individual competition at the national championships receive $45. The fees had been $80 and $40, respectively.

The committee voted to eliminate base scoring at regional competitions and national championships and to use open scoring in place of modified-open scoring. The committee also voted that an event winner at a regional competition must score at least a 9.5 to advance to the national championships.

Regarding regular-season score sheets, the committee voted that no changes may be made once the score sheet is signed by the participating coaches and judges.

Equipment used at regional and national championships must meet United States Gymnastics Federation specifications and must be available for purchase by member institutions by July 1 preceding the championships.

Equipment used in the championships must be approved by the Women's Gymnastics Committee by July 1; however, a change may be made subsequent to July 1 if the competitors' safety is enhanced.

Illinois has a golf champion who wasn't crowned

University of Illinois, Champaign, golfer Mike Small's actions during the 1988 Division I Men's Golf Championships so moved writer Ron Balicki that he devoted substantial space to Small in a column published in the June 2, 1988, issue of Golfweek. Here, in excerpts from Balicki's column, is what happened:

"During the championships at North Ranch Country Club near Los Angeles, the game's reputation was again tested. And, it graded out A.

"When the scores were turned in following round 2, Illinois appeared to have made the cut with a 605 total. One of the four scores counted for the team was an 81 shot by senior Mike Small.

"A short time after the round, Small, who had opened with a 72 and was disgusted and angry with himself when he completed second-day play, was going over his scores with Illinois coach Ed Beard. It was then that he discovered an error.

"Beard and Small went to the pressroom, where scores were posted hole-by-hole. Again they checked. Small then realized he had signed for a 4 on the 15th hole, a par-5, when he really had a 5.

"We got with the team, and Mike told them what had happened," said Beard. "Then we told the tournament officials. Mike wanted to let them hear it from him and not through the grapevine. That's the kind of young man he is, though... a first-class individual."

"The result—Small's score was disqualified and Illinois had to count an 85, giving (the team) a 609 total and knocking (the Illini) out of the tournament. Even if Small had signed correctly for an 82, the Fighting Illini would have been playing the third round.

"The Illinois team aside, Small's decision to speak up clearly showed that these young collegians are not a bunch of renegades who think only of themselves. They care about the game and what it stands for. Small is one case, and more than likely any one of the 183 young men in this year's starting NCAA field would have done the same.

"As Beard so aptly put it, 'If you don't do it, we don't have a great game.'

"It is a great sport and will continue to be a great sport as long as it continues to have people like Mike Small."

David M. "Boo" Ferriss, Delta State University's retiring baseball coach (see Briefly in the News, page 12, in the June 8, 1988, issue of The NCAA News) got a great "going-away present" from his team—the school's most successful season ever.

The Statesmen set a school record with 44 victories and claimed the team's fourth Gulf South Conference title under Ferriss' guidance. Most notable is the fact that Delta State had lost three pitchers who combined to produce 22 of the team's 29 victories in 1987.

"This team is a special one to me because it was my last," Ferriss said, "but mainly because it went far beyond what I thought it would do. This was the hardest-working bunch that ever played for me."

Delta State named its baseball facility Ferris Field in ceremonies June 18.

Trivia Time: When Georgia Southern College golfer Fred Benton finished ninth at the Division I championships, earning all-America honors, he also became only the second golfer to be named academic all-America and all-America in the same year. Who was the other? Answer later.

Mike Small

Ed Beard

Patty Broderick, supervisor of women's officials for the Midwest Collegiate Conference, and Joe Forte, long-time men's college basketball official who recently was hired by the NBA, have been selected to officiate basketball competition during the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. Each will work only games on the side of the respective brackets opposite the American teams.

More Report Cards: Fifty-eight Idaho State University student-athletes (30.1 percent of the student-athlete population) earned grade-point averages of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale) during the spring semester. Four—Mark Byrne, Brent Caudill, Andrea Gallagher and Rene Sepulveda—earned 4.000s.

At Grambling State University, 23 student-athletes were named to the Southwestern Athletic Conference all-academic team for the fall semester. The SWAC honor roll is composed of student-athletes who earned a B average or higher while taking at least 12 credit hours.

In a June 6 announcement, the Association of Mid-Continent Universities honored 46 student-athletes from member schools as recipients of the league's all-academic award. In all, 82 student-athletes were recognized during 1987-88. Western Illinois University and Northern Iowa University led all AMCU members with 20 and 19 selections, respectively.

Five California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, student-athletes have received academic awards from the school. Texas' probation cut by one year; NCAA penalizes McNeese State

The NCAA has announced that a two-year probationary period imposed upon the University of Texas, Austin, in June 1987 for violations in football has been reduced to one year.

The original NCAA penalties included a provision for the university to submit a report after one year indicating the status of 13 corrective actions ordered in the intercollegiate athletics program by university President William H. Cunningham.

Gymnastics cut

California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, has announced the discontinuance of the women's gymnastics program, effective immediately.

According to university officials, the decision to discontinue the program was based on the lack of interest in the local high schools; the lack of interest in the California Collegiate Athletic Association, of which Cal Poly is a member, and the lack of regional and national support by NCAA Division II.

The university's report was reviewed by the NCAA Committee on Infractions in May 1988, and the committee determined that the university's president should be commended for his efforts and that the probationary period be permitted to expire, effective June 17, 1988.

Other sanctions imposed by the NCAA in the case related to recruiting and grants-in-aid in football were not affected by today's action.

McNeese State University

The Committee on Infractions also adopted actions taken in 1987 against McNeese State University by the Southland Conference for violations found from 1981 to 1985 in the men's basketball program.

The conference penalties included placing the university on probation until February 5, 1989; requiring the university to forfeit rights to all revenue generated by conference members in men's basketball during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years; reducing the number of grants-in-aid in men's basketball to 13 (rather than the normal 15) for the 1987-88 and 1988-89 academic years; terminating the university's association with six representatives of the university's athletics interests who were involved in the violations, and recruiting restrictions imposed upon basketball and coaching staff members who since have left the university.

The violations found in the case involved improper assistance to two student-athletes in the purchase of automobiles, monthly cash payments to certain student-athletes, and an offer of cash to a prospective student-athlete and his mother.

After a review of the case by the NCAA enforcement staff, the Committee on Infractions determined that the penalties imposed by the Southland Conference were representative of and consistent with NCAA enforcement procedures and that the conference penalties should be adopted as the NCAA penalties in the case.
