Forum reflects mood for change, but how much?

The NCAA News

Observers of the third session of the Presidents Commission National Forum came away from the event convinced that the NCAA membership is in a mood for change but were left guessing how extensive that change may be.

The proposals offered on three Forum topics—membership structure, NCAA legislative procedures and financial aid—were labeled by Presidents Commission chair John B. Slaughter as “radical and certainly controversial, in some cases.”

However, delegates to the Forum oftentimes stopped very short of embracing those ideas during the small-group discussion sessions that followed the featured speakers’ addresses.

“There’s a real interest in change and there’s a real interest in reform,” NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said following the Forum,

“but when you talk to (the membership) about what that change or reform will be, you have about as many ideas and concepts as people you have talked to, and those go all the way from structure to procedure to financial aid.”

A speaker who presented a shopping list of financial aid proposals, and really understand it’s time to change,” said former Michigan State University President Cecil Mackey, who is now an economics professor at the school. “... It also seems clear that small, incremental changes are not likely to solve the problems that have been with us for so long....

“I think there’s substantial aware-during his keynote address that a failure to act could prompt Congress to step in and “begin micromanaging the affairs of the NCAA.”

Schultz, among others, noted that McMillen’s message “is not new,” but he added that the NCAA membership is better equipped than Congress or any other body to solve the problems facing the Association.

“If people in the (Forum) audience can’t deal with these problems, then no one can, because they’re the experts,” Schultz said.

Although the direction of change remains to be seen, Slaughter believes the Forum’s spirited debates will result almost immediately in legislative proposals.

“There were enough ideas formulated that certainly should have triggered some thinking by some parts of the NCAA membership,” he said.

Building consensus?

However, a major purpose of the Forum is to produce a consensus from which legislative proposals enjoying widespread support can emerge. The success of the Forum’s third session in achieving that goal may be mixed; for instance, Schultz saw more of a consensus emerging from discussion of the NCAA legislative procedure than from debate over membership structure.

The process of building a consensus, however, may be helped by the Forum’s contributions toward helping the membership become better informed about the issues, several observers said.

“We needed to engage in this series of Forums to better engage the debate,” Slaughter said. “Even though some believe (the series has) been too long, I think the NCAA membership is better informed.”

Similar sentiments were expressed by Bernard F. Sliger, president of Florida State University and chair of the Presidents Commission’s Ad Hoc Committee on the National Forum.

“We will—some people, any-including paying a $100-per-month stipend to student-athletes, encountered considerable opposition to some of his ideas, but he came away still hopeful that some kind of change is in the wind.

Time to change?

“I think that most of the people who are familiar with the NCAA generally concede there is a problem ness of the problem, but there are strong, vested interests in the system—very diverse interests whose financial and political interests, they feel, are served by the status quo or as little change as possible. I don’t think they’ll prevail.”

Maryland Congressman Tom McMillen helped fuel talk about a need for change with a warning

Hawthorne on Executive Committee

Martha Hawthorne, assistant athletics director for women’s sports at Rice University, has been appointed to replace Merrily Dean Baker as a member of the NCAA Executive Committee.

Baker is leaving the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, to join the NCAA staff as an assistant executive director. Hawthorne’s appointment, made by the NCAA Administrative Committee, is effective immediately.

Hawthorne joined the staff at Rice in 1979 as coordinator of women’s athletics and was named assistant athletics director in 1981. She currently serves as the District 6 representative on the NCAA Women’s Committee on Committees.

Conferences to receive assistance in developing compliance programs

Administrators at NCAA member conferences that will receive conference-grant funds have been mailed information concerning a seminar on compliance issues scheduled for July 19-20 at the Embassy Suites Plaza Hotel in Kansas City. Included was a tentative timetable and list of discussion topics for the Conference Compliance Seminar.

“We have been receiving calls from conference administrators for some time... particularly since the conference-grant funds were approved (by the NCAA Executive Committee),” said John H. Leavens, the Association’s director of compliance services. “A good number of conferences will be offering comprehensive compliance programs for the first time.

“For that reason, we believe that the seminar will present an opportunity for them to get together, discuss ideas, share concerns and hear about other conferences’ plans—before the initial year of conference compliance programs begins.”

Increased funds generated by the NCAA Division I Men’s Basketball Championship have been earmarked for a number of membership-services programs. Among them are programs intended to enhance employment opportunities in intercollegiate athletics for women and ethnic minorities and the provision of grants to member conferences for use in officiating-improvement, drug-education and rules-compliance programs.

The latter has, in many cases, generated conference office staffing changes—including either the addition of new personnel or substantial realignment of existing administrative duties to provide for a staff member to handle compliance issues.

This two-day seminar might best be called a crash course in compliance, since its program has been developed to offer at least a brief introduction to so many areas:

• The initial program will deal with institutional compliance responsibilities (e.g., certification of eligibility, monitoring financial aid awards). “We anticipate a number of questions being raised,” Leavens noted, “and we hope that we can provide insight on the process of institutional review that will con-

Hearn named to Presidents Commission

Thomas K. Hearn Jr., president of Wake Forest University, has been selected by the Atlantic Coast Conference to replace John B. Slaughter as the conference’s representative on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

The appointment is effective upon Slaughter’s departure from the University of Maryland, College Park, to become president of Occidental College August 1.

Members of the Commission currently are voting by mail to select Slaughter’s replacement as chair of the Commission. Slaughter has served on the Commission since it was formed in 1984 and has been its chair for the past year and a half.

Hearn has been president of Wake Forest since October 1983. He will

Opinions of membership requested on application of NCAA regulations

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee is offering member institutions the opportunity for direct input in determining the appropriate application of the NCAA regulations governing playing seasons and outside sports competition.

In question is NCAA Bylaw 3-1(a) and its official interpretations.

The legislative services staff has received complaints from some institutional representatives that certain schools are circumventing the legislation that limits the number of contests allowed in soccer and other team sports with dual seasons.

Apparently, several institutions are playing a 22-contest regular soccer season in the fall and playing their six off-season or nontraditional segment dates of competition within the first few days or weeks of that segment. Then, for the remainder of the nontraditional season, the whole team is playing on an outside team in an unlimited number of contests, thereby avoiding the normal limitation on dates of competition.

In the situation cited above, the outside team is not part of the institution’s program (i.e., the institution provides no uniforms or equipment and pays no expenses for the outside team). Therefore, the institution’s players arguably are not subject to any limitation on the number of contests in which the outside team may participate, provided the competition occurs during the remainder of the institution’s nontraditional segment. Such outside teams would be limited during the nonplaying and practice season.

It also has been reported to the national office that many coaches are coaching outside teams at the same time they are coaching the institution’s team, and they are allowing redshirts and transfer student-athletes, who are required by NCAA legislation to sit out one year of practice and competition, to play on the outside teams.

Although complaints thus far have been limited to soccer, there is the potential for similar abuse in other team sports with dual seasons, according to Stephen A. Mallonee of the legislative services staff.

“Basically, what we want to determine,” Mallonee said, “is how member institutions are interpreting the bylaw, and we want to get a consensus on how the membership way — still be discussing these problems 50 years from now," he said. "But this is an opportunity to discuss issues that are on people's minds, and we will get legislation that is a little better thought out than some we've had in the past."

Discussion groups

While the group discussions revealed concerns about, if not opposition to, many specific proposals offered at the Forum, they also revealed areas of general agreement.

Membership structure

On the topic of membership structure, participants in the groups agreed on the following:

- Federation requires further study by a task force that represents all divisions.
- The purposes and expectations of federation must be identified, along with the issues involved.
- A lack of trust among elements of the NCAA membership, which Schultz mentioned during his remarks to the Forum, must be addressed.
- The distribution of NCAA revenues deserves further study.

However, participants in the discussion sessions also generally agreed that substantial progress already has been made toward federation — perhaps as much progress as is needed.

The greatest disagreement arose over the issue of multidivision classification.

In his remarks to the Forum, Central College (Iowa) President Kenneth J. Weller urged the elimination of multidivision classification as one of several criteria for a move toward greater federation. But participants in the discussion groups seemed to be evenly split on whether they agreed with that view.

The groups also considered the suggestion that Division II be made more attractive to members of Divisions I and III, thus helping to reduce the number of schools in Division I while addressing concerns in Division III about shared philosophies and equality of competition.

Some participants pointed out that giving up the prestige of being a Division I institution is the biggest roadblock to encouraging schools to move to Division II. For instance, an athletics director from a school that recently moved from Division II to Division I said the switch was made more for the purpose of enhancing the school's image than to pursue the relatively small chance the school has to profit from participation in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Procedures

On the topic of NCAA legislative procedures, the discussion groups seemed to agree that steps can be taken to improve the process but expressed doubts about specific proposals toward that end — especially several ideas suggested by University of Vermont President Lattie F. Coor.

In response to Coor's proposal that a distinction be made between legislation dealing with "major policy issues" and mere implementation of policies, the groups expressed concern over the ability to successfully distinguish the two. Coor's suggestion that a policy committee be established to designate major policy issues and that a "Convention Senate" be formed to vote on those issues drew little support.

However, a suggestion by NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey to set an earlier deadline for legislative proposals, thus extending the legislation calendar, generally was supported on the theory that such a move would contribute to improved communication. Participants also showed support for increasing the number of sponsors required for a proposal.

Although the Coor and Bailey proposals presented different approaches to improving the process, Bailey observed that their ideas sought the same goal.

"We were saying that we've got to do a better job of developing legislation," he said. "We've got to do a better job of communication, so that people are informed in their debate."

Participants in the groups also

Bob Moorman, commissioner of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, leads a "breakout" discussion session at the Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando agreed with several other proposals, in addition to offering a few of their own. There was support for:

- Alternating legislative sessions with discussion forums from year to year.
- Seeking more input from student-athletes.
- Granting the Council more interpretations authority between Conventions.
- Establishing task forces that would study specific topics of legislation. Such task forces would operate under clearly established policies.

However, the groups showed a strong preference for keeping efforts to improve the legislative process "in the family" when it opposed recommendations by Coor and Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive director of the Ivy Group, to seek the advice of an outside consultant. Participants in the groups said they prefer that a task force of individuals within the NCAA be formed to study and make detailed recommendations on the legislative process.

Financial aid

After hearing a pair of proposals from speakers who recommended approaching the problem of financial aid by providing some form of need-based aid for student-athletes, much of the discussion in the "breakout" groups centered on understanding how need is determined.

"Most of the discussion was really educational in nature, because a lot of the athletics administrators were really finding some things out about need-based aid that they really didn't understand before," Schultz observed after sitting in on several of the discussions.

Those lessons resulted in the groups generally supporting need-based financial aid that, when necessary, would provide funds for student-athletes' personal and transportation expenses — so long as attention also is paid to coming up with a program that helps contain costs.

Questions were raised over who would determine amounts of aid to be awarded and how those amounts would be determined. The creation of a national financial aid clearinghouse or an NCAA agency was proposed as a way of dealing with those problems. Participants in the discussions also urged that amounts provided to cover student-athletes' personal expenses be standardized.

Concerns also were expressed over whether women's athletics would receive comparable treatment in situations where football and basketball are treated differently from other sports.

The groups also considered the list of proposals put forth by Michigan State's Mackey. Although they disagreed with Mackey's argument in favor of awarding student-athletes a stipend, they agreed with his general proposition that student-athletes should be treated in the same manner as other students.

Among specific proposals by Mackey that drew support was his suggestion that student-athletes should be eligible to receive aid for summer-school attendance.

IRS proposes regulations on tax treatment of scholarships

The Internal Revenue Service June 8 proposed regulations regarding changes made by the 1986 Tax Reform Act to the Federal income tax treatment of scholarship grants.

Under prior law, any amount received by a degree candidate as a scholarship to an educational organization was excludable from gross income and thus tax-free.

The 1986 Tax Reform Act modified the Internal Revenue Code to limit this exclusion to amounts received for tuition and required fees, books, supplies, and equipment.

As a result, funds used for room and board or incidental living expenses now are includable in gross income and thus subject to taxation.

The proposed regulations define certain terms in connection with the new rules and provide guidance with respect to the specific types of assistance that are not subject to taxation.

Regarding the situation in which a scholarship grant represents a payment for services, the proposed regulations state that a requirement the recipient pursue studies, research or other activities primarily for the benefit of the grantor will be treated as a requirement to perform services, and, therefore, such grants will be subject to taxation. This does not represent a substantive change from prior law, according to Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C.

Generally, the new rules are effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987; however, prior law continues to apply to grants received in future years if a firm commitment was made before August 17, 1986, and the initial grant is for a fixed cash amount or readily determinable amount.

Significantly, the proposed regulations also confirm a previous IRS announcement that unless a scholarship grant represents a payment for services by the recipient, institutions awarding scholarship grants will not have to comply with Federal withholding or reporting requirements, even with respect to portions of such grants used for purposes now includable in gross income (i.e. room and board or incidental living expenses).

Written comments and requests for a public hearing on the proposed regulation must be delivered or mailed by August 8, 1988, to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attn: CC:LR:T (LR-3-87), Washington, D.C. 20224.

Women candidates sought for Silver Anniversary awards

The Committee on Women's Athletics is seeking assistance from NCAA member institutions in identifying potential women candidates for Silver Anniversary awards, and it has suggested that consideration also be given to honoring women who have passed the 25-year mark since completing their college athletics careers.

Names of possible candidates can be sent to Phyllis Howlett, committee chair at the Big Ten Conference office.

The only woman who has received a Silver Anniversary award is Wilma Rudolph, who was honored at the 1987 Convention in San Diego.

The committee met June 15-17 at Aspen, Colorado.

The committee recommended the Starbright Group of Westport, Connecticut, to produce a documentary on women's athletics. Funding for the documentary is on the July 20-21 meeting agenda for the Special Budget Subcommittee of the Executive Committee.

Expansion of the NCAA's Youth Education Through Sports (YES) Clinics to include field hockey and women's lacrosse was suggested. It was also suggested that a women's coach be included in the Final Four clinic and that a men's coach be invited to the clinic held in conjunction with the Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Regarding the women's enhancement program, which was approved by the Executive Committee in May, the committee recommends that each national-office intern selected through the enhancement program be familiarized with the operations of each department in the national office and that the interns' subsequent career progress be monitored.

It was agreed that the committee would offer suggestions concerning the selection of interns but would not ask to be directly involved in the selection process.

Regarding the postgraduate scholarship program for students in sports administration, the committee agreed that preference should be given to those applicants initially entering a program but that consideration also should be given to those already enrolled or those who had delayed enrollment to gain outside experience.

The committee requested permission to conduct a one-day meeting to select scholarship recipients and agreed that each committee member would rank the candidates, after which the full committee would select the recipients.

Concerning student-athlete representation on the Committee on Women's Athletics, it was noted that the arrangement had not proved workable, but the committee agreed that student-athlete representation could be sought on specific issues. The Council will be asked to sponsor an amendment to Bylaw 12-3(r) to delete the provision that one member of the committee must be an undergraduate letter-winner.

The committee also will request that the Council sponsor an amendment to Constitution 5-2-(a)-(5) to permit a conference's primary woman administrator to be eligible to serve on the Executive Committee. A similar request concerning membership on the Council will be reviewed by the Council in its August meeting.

In line with its charge to make recommendations regarding opportunities in women's athletics, the committee discussed lesbianism in women's athletics in the context of professional ethics, and it was the sense of the committee that it is a major factor affecting opportunities for women in athletics.

Legislative Assistance

1988 Column No. 26

NCAA Constitution 3-9-(b)-(4)-(vi) and Bylaws 1-6-(d)-(5) and (6)—state games waivers

In accordance with the provisions of Constitution 3-9-(b)-(4)-(vi) and Bylaw 1-6-(d)-(6), the following states have received NCAA Administrative Committee approval to permit the participation of a member institution's athletics department staff members and student-athletes with eligibility remaining in the sport of basketball. In accordance with the provisions of Bylaw 1-6-(d)-(5), the sanctioned games may use a member institution's facilities.

Badger State Games (Wisconsin)	North Carolina State Games
Bay State Games (Massachusetts)	Ocean State Games (Rhode Island)
Big Sky State Games (Montana)	Prairie State Games (Illinois)
California State Games	Show-Me State Games (Missouri)
Cornhusker State Games (Nebraska)	Star of the North State Games (Minnesota)
Cowboy State Games (Wyoming)	State Games of Oregon
Empire State Games (New York)	Sunshine State Games (Florida)
Garden State Games (New Jersey)	Utah State Games
Great Lake State Games (Michigan)	White River Park State Games (Indiana)
Maryland State Games

A student-athlete with eligibility remaining or a staff member who wishes to participate in state games competition not listed above should contact the institution with which they are affiliated or the state games organization to request that it submit the necessary waiver requests to the NCAA legislative services department. Further, a member institution scheduled to host state games competition on its campus in a state not listed should request a waiver for the use of its facilities through the legislative services department.

NCAA Bylaws 3-1-(g) and 3-1-(k)—date for issuing equipment and taking squad pictures

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee has reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 3-1-(g) and 3-1-(k) and agreed that since August 14, 1988 (the day prior to the beginning of the traditional segment on which an institution is permitted to issue equipment and take squad pictures), falls on a Sunday, it would be permissible to designate Saturday, August 13, 1988, as the day in which these activities may occur.

NCAA legislative services department's interpretations request policy

Member institutions are reminded of the existing NCAA Council policy that only the chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative, director of athletics and the primary woman administrator of athletics programs at each member institution are authorized to request interpretations from the Association's legislative services department. Please note, however, that this policy would permit the director of athletics and the chief executive officer of a member institution to designate specific individuals (e.g., an admissions or financial aid officer) as substitutes for them to call the national office and request interpretations. Such an appointment or designation must be reported to the national office in writing in order for the designated individual to be properly authorized. The substitution will be permanent (unless the national office subsequently is advised in writing of an authorized change), and each institution (regardless of such substitutions) will remain limited to a total of four individuals authorized to request interpretations from the national office.

Individuals serving as chairs of all NCAA committees and current presidents of the various coaches associations also are permitted to contact the legislative services staff to request interpretations relating to their work with the committee or association.

tribute to its success."

• Another session will be devoted to outlining services provided by the Association's compliance staff. "We are committed to providing support to conference administrators who are implementing programs," Leavens said, "and we will use this session to outline specific services that will be offered to augment conference efforts."

"This session will be followed up later this summer by discussions with representatives of each conference (implementing compliance programs) concerning specific services the Association will provide during the 1988-89 academic year."

• Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and data processing, will lead a session devoted to computer applications relating to the development of conference-level compliance programs. Specifically, she will present information on a proposed computer program that would be developed jointly by conferences for use in reporting basic information concerning eligibility, athletics participation and financial aid.

• The seminar's final session will feature comments for conference compliance administrators from conference compliance administrators already involved in implementing programs. Speakers will include Don Landry, Southland Conference commissioner; Kevin Lennon, Southwest Athletic Conference; Jamie McCloskey, Mid-American Athletic Conference, and David Price, Pacific-10 Conference.

"This session," Leavens explained, "will provide a forum for conference administrators to hear about programs already in place. We also anticipate an exchange of thoughts concerning fledgling programs... in terms of both desirable components and potential pitfalls."

There will be no fee charged for the seminar. "Simply put, the Association is more a facilitator in this process than anything else," Leavens added. "We hope to answer many of the questions that we believe new conference compliance administrators have and at the same time give them an opportunity to share their thoughts, ideas and plans with each other."

Although information concerning the seminar was directed to conferences that will receive grants Leavens said other conference administrators who believe the seminar would be beneficial should feel free to attend. Questions concerning the seminar should be directed to Leavens at the national office.

wants the legislation interpreted."

Mallonee listed three possible solutions to the problem:

1. Preclude any participation on outside teams during the traditional or nontraditional segments.

2. Permit participation on outside soccer teams during the traditional or nontraditional segments, provided not more than six student-athletes from an institution's team play on an outside team (with or without the institution's coach).

3. Permit unlimited participation on such outside teams.

Richard J. Evrard, director of legislative services, said, "We want opinions on the situation from the membership so we can take that information to the Legislation and Interpretations Committee for its consideration."

Members may send their recommendations to the legislative services department at the national office.

education in 1964.

She then joined the staff at the University of Houston, serving as a physical education instructor and as women's volleyball and tennis coach over the next 11 years. Several of her squads in both sports were nationally ranked during that period.

In 1975, she became assistant professor of physical education and women's tennis coach at Northeast Louisiana University, where she spent four years before moving to Rice.

She is a past president of the Texas Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Hawthorne also will replace Baker on the Division I Championships Committee and on the Executive Committee's Special Marketing Subcommittee.

In related appointments, the Administrative Committee named Eugene F. Corrigan, Atlantic Coast Conference, to replace Baker as chair of the marketing subcommittee and Leanne Grotke, California State University, Fullerton, to replace her as a member and as chair of the Ad Hoc Committee to Administer the Conference Grant Program. It also named Corrigan to serve as a member of the conference-grant group.

Tournament revenue exceeds estimate

More than $29 million in proceeds from the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championship will be distributed to 256 basketball-playing institutions—approximately $1.1 million more than was estimated in March.

A total of $29,714,704 will be distributed to the Division I institutions, according to Association Controller Louis J. Spry. In March, Spry estimated that $28.6 million would be distributed (see The NCAA News, March 30).

According to available information, all but one of the automatic-qualifying conferences have sharing formulas for tournament receipts. Therefore, 88.3 percent of 290 Division I basketball-playing institutions will receive a portion of the proceeds.

The Big Eight Conference, which earned the largest amount after placing two members in the Final Four, now will receive $3,834,155, compared to the $3,691,200 estimated in March. Revised distributions for all of the participating conferences and independent institutions are listed below.

Report of lawsuit settlement erred

To the Editor:

Your June 15 report of the settlement of the Temple University intercollegiate athletics lawsuit contains a serious error.

Temple did not agree, as you report, that funding for women's athletics would be proportional to the percentage of women in the program. Instead, the settlement agreement provides that excluding salaries and benefits, home-game expenses and other specified categories, the percentage of money spent on Temple's women's teams must be within 10 percentage points of the percentage of women in the program.

Temple already is in compliance with this requirement. In 1986-87, 35 percent of the university's student-athletes were women, and 25 percent of the money in the categories covered by the requirement was spent on the women's teams.

The agreement also provides that Temple will award athletics scholarships substantially in proportion to the participation rate of men and women student-athletes. Temple has been following this policy for the past five years.

Most of the provisions of the settlement, including those on expenditures and scholarships, simply require Temple to continue its current practices. Some modest changes are required that are consistent with the program's direction (the addition of a women's swimming team and the hiring of an additional weight-training coach and of an employee to promote women's athletics).

Because the agreement confirms that Temple has been operating a fair and equitable athletics program, and because the modest changes will improve the program further, the settlement clearly is in the best interests of both the university and our women student-athletes.

Pleas for paying athletes are boring

To the Editor:

I am getting tired of the broken record entitled "Athletes Are Being Used and Should Be Paid." An interesting observation is that 99 percent of the time, it refers to football players. Even more interesting is that no one ever talks about paying women. Their time is as valuable, they work just as hard and long; and if they win a national championship, it wasn't any easier than it was for their male counterparts.

Stanford is winning and doing it right way

By Glenn Dickey
San Francisco Chronicle
Excerpted for a column

The important thing is not only that Stanford is winning, but that the school is doing it right.

The second straight NCAA baseball title is the headliner, but Stanford has been sweeping the boards in the spring sports — and also doing very well overall.

With the men's and women's NCAA tennis titles, Stanford tied with Texas and UCLA for the most NCAA championships, and that represents something of a slump. The previous two years, Stanford won four titles, more than anybody.

Stanford athletics director Andy Geiger also is pleased at the breadth of the university's athletics accomplishments.

"The championships get everybody's attention, but I'm equally proud of our second place in the NCAA in women's volleyball and the fact that the men and women both took third place in swimming," he said. "We got fourth place in gymnastics, a sport that was almost extinct on this campus a few years ago, and went to the NIT in men's basketball and the NCAA in women's basketball."

The success has come because Stanford has been able to turn a negative into a positive. Coaches from other schools always talk about how tough Stanford is academically, but Geiger thinks that has worked to the Cardinal's benefit.

"When our coaches are recruiting," he said, "there are a lot of parents who are very excited about the possibility of their kids going to Stanford. That gets us past the first hurdle. Our academics are a real positive."

Geiger also cites the positive attitude on the Stanford campus toward sports. University President Donald Kennedy, a champion swimmer in his youth, sets the tone, and Geiger believes that the intercollegiate athletics program also gets strong support from the admissions office and most of the faculty.

Repeating as NCAA baseball champion was especially important, Geiger thinks, "because this is not a country club sport."

Stanford long has had the reputation of being a school that could succeed in sports like tennis, which has been dominated by players coming from wealthy families, but that failed in the sports where minorities played an important role.

It is still true that football and basketball will always be the hardest sports for Stanford to excel in. Basketball is especially tough because so many of the best high school players come out of the inner-city ghettos, whose schools simply are not good enough to prepare youngsters for a school like Stan-

"Some way, somehow, we have to relieve that pressure (to win). Maybe it's coaching tenure, if you think it's important. When you talk about tenure, you have to talk about honoring contracts. You can't talk out of one side of your mouth about tenure and then leave for a better offer. You have to be talking about the whole picture.

Fights, disruption by fans threaten college basketball future

By Tom Hammill

The recent college basketball season was punctuated by a series of regrettable incidents.

Coaches pulled their teams off courts and heavily criticized officials in complete defiance of conference regulations, and players engaged in numerous fisticuffs.

As if all that was not tough enough on officials, some conference commissioners came down hard on referees who were perceived to have committed errors, both on the court and off. Then, there were coaches who were ejected due to three technical fouls, almost unprecedented in recent seasons.

The 1987-88 campaign was one in which basketball quickly turned into basketball.

In fact, things got so bad that interim steps were taken by some conferences to attempt to curb fighting. The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee waited until the season was over before implementing unprecedented measures to do so.

Referee Mac Chauvin has noted a potential dilemma faced by officials when a fight erupts. "There could be a legal problem if we put our hands on the players in an effort to prevent a fight," said Chauvin.

"For example, let's say I grab a kid; and while I'm holding him, that kid gets punched in the face by someone. I could be held liable for the player's injuries. What if that ends his career? It's tough to decide how to handle things like that."

That points out another problem with fighting: Even the best-prepared referees are ill-equipped to prevent fights from occurring; if players have a mind to duke it out, duke it out they will. Yet, there are things that can and should be done to reduce the likelihood of fights.

Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, said the cure involves both coaches and officials.

"The coaches can't condone players punching," said Steitz. "The players have to recognize that it's not going to be tolerated, and the coaches have to let the players know that.... A lot of what a player does is a result of his coach's attitude."

But the officials also play a major role in catharsis.

Said Steitz: "The officials have to be mindful to make sure they catch the cheap shots and clean it up right away. If (the officials) hear players taunting each other or using filthy language to each other, it should be penalized without warning."

While a number of suggestions have been made on how to eliminate fighting from college basketball, the men's rules committee at its April meeting took the bull by the horns and passed a set of rules designed to curb fighting, effective with the 1988-89 season. Under the new edicts:

1. A player who is involved in a fight will be ejected from the game and placed on probation. The second time during the season that same player is involved in a fight, he will be ejected from the game and also barred from his team's next game. If the same player is involved in a third offense, he will be suspended for the remainder of the season.

2. A player who leaves the bench during a fight will be ejected from that contest.

In addition, if necessary, the officials may consult video replays to determine the offenders, a suggestion made by Chauvin to the tournament committee during the NCAA tournament.

"I told them that we referees

ought to be allowed to view replays to determine all the guilty parties so each can be penalized," said Chauvin. "If we have to shoot 10 free throws, then that's what we'll do."

An intriguing aside: There was a noticeable lack of any scuffling during the NCAA tournament. The reason may be simple: The NCAA has the power to impose penalties as it sees fit, including expulsion from the tourney, to any team involved in a fight. During the regular season, however, league rules prevail.

While the many instances of fighting ripped at the very core of college basketball, last season also will be remembered as the Year of Garbage, as fans from coast to coast got involved in their teams' games by tossing debris onto courts.

While at first a laughable practice, the joke got stale. Finally, in February the NCAA rules committee was forced to step in and enact a rule to deal with the refuse-tossing issue. Until that happened, officials were not always sure how to penalize such acts.

Under the new rule, which applies to both men's and women's contests, if the garbage-tossers can be identified as followers of a particular team, that club will be charged with an intentional technical foul, which also is assessed to the team's head coach.

"Something that started as fun became more varied," said Steitz.

"It's dangerous and delays the game," noted Marcy Weston, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

Despite all the negative comments directed at referees, they do have some supporters from within the coaching ranks.

Kansas State University coach Lon Kruger said coaches who publicly criticize officials should be censured and the gag rule enforced.

"Officials are human," noted Kruger. "If we start thinking they're not, we're off base. The bottom line is to create an atmosphere for officiating to get better. To make that atmosphere, we've got to stay off their backs. That hurts the quality of officiating."

Similarly, Louisiana State University coach Dale Brown offers a pat on the back to those who wear striped shirts.

In an interview published in Basketball Weekly, Brown said: "When I'm watching a game on television or scouting a team. I'm amazed at how good the officiating is."

"When I watch our own game films the day after a game, I realize that the game was far better officiated than I thought it was during the heat of battle. It is, first of all, almost an impossible job, and I personally feel that overall they do an outstanding job."

Continued Brown: "I don't know how they tolerate what they tolerate... the abuse they get from the fans, the coaches, me included. We really do the officials a disservice. I would not accept the abuse they get.

"I think we need to pay them more. I admire the job they do; and I believe to continue to upgrade the officiating, we must develop a professional pool of officials where it is no longer an avocation."

Summing up the overall quality of refereeing for the season, Steitz offered positive reinforcement.

Said he: "The officiating was very good. The fights and other (disruptive behavior) occur as a result of the intense competition for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow: They feel like they're fighting for their lives to get into the NCAA tournament."

Ah, at last, an explanation of why all hell broke loose last season. And, perhaps equally important, why the officials were such convenient scapegoats.

Steitz said that striving to reach the tourney and all the money, power and prestige that go with it is at the crux of many of the problems facing college basketball, including all the fighting, which Steitz said "is highlighted by the increasing number of games on TV, which calls it to our attention."

Steitz added: "There's no doubt that (last) year there was an increase in the number of fights that occurred and also in the number of times debris was tossed on the court delaying games.... For the first time ever, this year the rules committee addressed suspending people for fighting. We are also asking conferences (to implement) more clout on suspensions for poor decorum and the like."

Then, there's the issue of coaches publicly blasting officials in the media, which some feel has gotten way out of hand, mostly because there's little power given to conferences to deal with such outlandish conduct. Steitz has definite views about that topic as well.

"It is most unethical for coaches to criticize officials," said Steitz. "Most conferences have a strong mandate that that should not be done.... That is (an area) where conference commissioners should use more clout.... The commissioners must have more authority, including the ability to suspend a player or coach or to fine an institution."

The inability of conferences to impose sanctions greater than just a simple reprimand is no better illustrated than in the Ohio Valley Conference, where commissioner James E. Delany last season took an active role by trying to right some wrongs. Yet, even there, officials seemed to get the short end of the stick.

On February 26, Delany announced that officials Rip Hatfield and Bob McGrath each were given a one-month suspension, to take effect in December of 1988 for sending the wrong player to the free-throw line. The oversights occurred in separate games and could cost each referee up to $800 in lost game fees, not to mention the price exacted for embarrassment and the like.

Delany feels that those types of errors are indefensible. "I expect (our officials to have) 100 percent rules knowledge and 100 percent proper execution of mechanics," noted Delany. On the other hand, "we will not second-guess their judgment calls."

Delany during the course of the season came down hard on players guilty of fighting. He dealt quickly and severely with garbage-throwing incidents and also has been among the nationwide leaders in trying to stamp out misconduct by coaches.

Several times, Delany issued public reprimands to coaches who, in violation of conference policy, publicly criticized officials.

In essence, that's about all he could do with coaches, because he does not have the power to fine or suspend them; that power rests with the individual schools involved.

On the other hand, since the league controls the officials, Delany has direct rule over referees, which includes the right to fine them, hand out suspensions, etc.

The overwhelming majority of Division I conferences have the same disciplinary restrictions as the Ohio Valley Conference.

Unless that changes, or unless the schools get tougher with their coaches, things are likely to get worse before they get better.

And officials will continue to be the scapegoats for frustrated coaches who, knowing little can and will be done to them, will continue to take verbal potshots at referees whenever they damn well please.

ford.

But it is also true that great progress has been made in both sports.

It is no secret that many of the schools that are most successful in intercollegiate sports do it by recruiting athletes who are poor students. Stanford has shown that it doesn't have to be that way.

"You're just fooling yourself when you bring in people who don't belong," said Geiger. "It says something about the value of the degree that other people are getting. At Stanford, we believe that the academics are what's important."

note that six court cases have been brought against either the NCAA or its member institutions in the past 1½ years in an attempt to resolve this issue. The cases have yet to resolve the issue satisfactorily.

"If one appreciates the notion that drug testing is, in fact, a deterrent to drug use and its sole purpose is to prevent athletes from using banned substances altogether, one can certainly dismiss the notion of presumptive guilt; it is the explicit intent of drug-testing programs to find no positive samples, if indeed the program is successful."

Allen L. Sack, Honors Program chair

University of New Haven

The New York Times

"My argument is simple. The vast, vast majority of college athletes are good, decent, dedicated and drug-free. If the NCAA had respected these athletes as students and as sensitive human beings, random drug testing would have been instituted only as a last resort and, even then, only after encouraging athletes to consider the constitutional issues involved.

"Efforts to fight substance abuse in college sports must be concerned with more than keeping athletes drug-free in the short term. The goal should be to help athletes understand the role that drugs play in our society and to prepare them to fight drug abuse throughout their lives.

"The NCAA should take the hundreds of thousands of dollars that are going into random drug testing and undertake a massive program in drug education.

"Drug education and drug testing based on probable cause probably will not be as effective in deterring short-term substance abuse as having random drug-testing programs at every university in the country. It should be noted, however, that a democratic society has to be concerned with more than deterrence. There is no doubt in my mind that certain types of crime could be substantially reduced if the police could ignore large segments of the Constitution.

"But the price that is exacted is a wholesale assault on human dignity and personal freedom. Such measures have little place in a democracy, and they clearly cannot be justified in college sport."

CoSIDA names at-large academic all-Americans

James Martin of Penn State, the 1988 Division I wrestling champion at 126 pounds, and two student-athletes whose teams won National Collegiate and Division I championships this year, respectively, head the list of GTE at-large academic all-Americans selected by members of the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Joining Martin on the academic all-America/NCAA champion roster are Tom Schlesinger of the National Collegiate Champion Nebraska men's gymnastics team and James Rootes, a member of the Division I champion Clemson soccer team.

Martin was named university division academic all-America of the year. Baldwin-Wallace soccer player John Waters received that honor for the college division.

No institution had more two student-athletes selected to either division's teams, although five schools each had a pair named to the squads. They included Western Illinois (Kenneth Dugan and Mark Parmenter) and Nebraska (Schlesinger and James Blackledge) in the university division, and Augustana (South Dakota) (Allan Severude and Douglas Anderson), Baldwin-Wallace (Waters and Tom Scholato) and Rochester (Joachim Hammer and Scott Richardson) in the college division.

Both divisions' cumulative grade-point averages were impressive. University-division selections combined to produce a 3.856 GPA (4.000 scale), and college-division selections produced a cumulative GPA of 3.801. Eight of the student-athletes named to the teams had 4.000s.

Sweats move to Norfolk State staff

A husband and wife coaching combination that has been acclaimed as one of the more prominent such pairs in NCAA history will ply its trade in new surroundings during the 1988-89 collegiate basketball and track campaigns.

James Sweat, who coached Hampton University's women's basketball team to the 1988 NCAA Division II title, and his wife, LaVerne, who developed the Lady Pirates into a national contender in women's track, have joined the faculty and athletics staff at Norfolk State University.

In addition to coaching women's track, LaVerne will serve as head coach of volleyball, coordinate the women's sports program and teach in the department of physical education. Jim will coach women's basketball and serve in the area of student affairs.

"We are pleased to have the Sweats join the NSU family," said Mal Nicholson, assistant to the president.

"We all know they are very fine people who enjoy teaching and coaching. Their records speak for themselves. This is another effort on our part to improve our athletics programs by bringing in the best people to do the job," Nicholson added.

The Sweats, natives of Norfolk, Virginia, and graduates of Virginia State University, bring impressive coaching credentials to their new assignments.

This past season, Jim's Lady Pirates compiled a 27-0 regular-season record, averaged 105.3 points per game, set a record of 63 consecutive home victories and closed out the outstanding season with an overall 33-1 record.

LaVerne and James Sweat

In seven years as coach of the Lady Pirates, Jim has a 183-44 record that includes four Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association Northern Division titles, two CIAA tournament championships, four NCAA Division II Eastern regional titles and two Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) crowns.

In 1985, Hampton finished 30-4 and advanced to the NCAA semifinals. In 1987, Hampton's 30-2 squad just missed a berth in the NCAA championship play-off.

LaVerne's Hampton women's track team captured the 1987 and 1988 CIAA track championships, finished second in the NCAA indoor championships in 1987 and 1988, and placed third in the NCAA outdoor championships this year while winning two relay events. Her teams have won four CIAA titles.

In 1981, LaVerne, the CIAA's first woman president, was named the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics women's track coach of the year and coached the U.S. World University Games track and field team in Bucharest, Romania. She is a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. She also served on the NCAA Council from 1981 to 1983.

Jim, commenting on the decision to move to Norfolk State, said: "We feel it is a good career move. It is a challenge as well as a chance to come back home."

Q How many at-bats are required to qualify for the national batting championship in baseball?

A The national batting championship in baseball is based on a minimum of 2.5 times at-bat per game played by a team, and a minimum total number of official at-bats is established annually by the NCAA national office based on current conditions and the NCAA division involved. However, if there is a player with fewer than the required number of plate appearances whose average would be the highest if the player were charged with the required number of plate appearances with zero hits, that player shall be declared champion.

Kent State authorizes plans for $7 million field house

The Kent State University board of trustees has authorized preliminary planning for a proposed $7 million athletics field house, the university said June 22.

The field house, to be built near Dix Stadium east of campus, is part of a two-phase plan that includes the continued renovation of Memorial Gym, which serves as home to the university basketball team and various events.

Contracts for the improvements, estimated to cost $8.6 million, will not be awarded until after contracts for the construction of the field house are approved, the university said.

The field house will serve as an indoor practice facility for students

Judge dismisses disclosure suit

A Federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit seeking disclosure of NCAA allegations of violations in the football program at Oklahoma State University.

The lawsuit was filed by Oklahoma City television station KOCO-TV, the Gannett News Service and USA Today.

"The plaintiff has not stated a cause of action that can be granted by this court," U.S. District Court Judge Luther Bohanon said June 22 in dismissing the lawsuit.

Roy Davis, attorney for the plaintiffs, said he was disappointed but not surprised by the ruling.

"I'll have to talk to Gannett, but I anticipate they will appeal," Davis said.

Pac-10 penalizes football program at Cal-Berkeley

The University of California, Berkeley, has been penalized two grants-in-aid by the Pacific-10 Conference as a result of four rules violations involving one student-athlete in the institution's intercollegiate football program, Commissioner Thomas C. Hansen has announced.

The penalty will limit the institution to 28 initial and 93 total financial aid awards in football for the 1988-89 academic year.

The penalties, approved by the conference's presidents and chancellors at their meetings of June 25-26, were imposed because a student-athlete was provided unearned academic credit from a community college with the aid of a former assistant football coach, who was found to have engaged in unethical conduct, and a faculty member at the community college who was a representative of California's athletics interests.

"Although the conference was especially concerned that this case involved academic fraud," said Hansen, "it recognized that the institution was diligent in uncovering the violation and, upon discovery of it, acted promptly to prevent the student-athlete from competing, self-reported the violation and suspended the assistant football coach. It also disassociated itself from the representative of its athletics interests who had participated in the arrangement of the unearned credits."

The student-athlete involved no longer is enrolled at the university, and the assistant football coach subsequently resigned.

Peach Bowl foresees pay-out increase

The Peach Bowl may be on its way towards becoming a more prestigious bowl, following an announcement that an agreement in principle has been reached for ABC-TV to televise the game from 1989 through 1991.

Ira Hefter, chair of the board of the Peach Bowl, said June 22 that the contract with ABC is "99 percent done. We expect to sign it within the next two weeks."

Hefter said he hoped the 1991 game would be shown on prime time and would seek teams that might play for the national title.

Hefter said a network contract would allow the Peach Bowl to pay participating teams $1 million each in 1989, up from the $800,000 each that Tennessee and Indiana received last year.

"Our objective is to drive that pay-out even higher," Hefter told the Associated Press.

He said ABC honored the Peach's wish to play on the Saturday nearest January 1. He said games December 30, 1989, and December 29, 1990, will start at 2:30 p.m. Eastern time.

Robert Dale Morgan, the bowl's executive director, said that under the proposed ABC contract, the bowl would not be responsible for marketing any of the advertising.

"We've made ourselves attractive enough for ABC that they are willing to assume the risk of selling out bowl on a profitable basis for them and us," Morgan said.

The Mizlou independent network is scheduled to televise this year's game.

The Peach Bowl is run by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which took over management of the bowl two years ago.

CBS lists September college games

CBS-TV has completed its schedule of September college football telecasts, announcing it will show Florida State at Clemson September 17 and Tennessee at Auburn September 24.

Both telecasts will begin at 2:30 p.m. Eastern time.

All four teams finished in the Associated Press top 20 last season. Florida State was second, Auburn seventh, Clemson 12th and Tennessee 14th.

CBS previously announced that it will show Florida State at defending national champion Miami (Florida) at 9 p.m. September 3 and Michigan at Notre Dame September 10, also at 9 p.m.

After September, the network will announce its games 12 days in advance.

Administrative Committee minutes

1. Acting for the Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Denied an appeal by Menlo College of that institution's placement in "restricted membership" status for 1988-89 per Bylaw 10-1-(f)-(2), noting that there is no provision permitting a Council or Administrative Committee waiver of the two-team-sport requirement of Bylaw 11-3(b), with which the institution failed to comply in 1987-88.

b. Denied a waiver of the three-year reclassification provision of Bylaw 10-3-(c)-(1), per Bylaw 10-5, to permit Samford University to reclassify its football program from Division III to Division II for only one year (1988-89) before moving the program to Division I-AA for 1989-90; agreed to approve a petition for the institution's football program to be reclassified in Division II with the understanding that it would remain so classified for at least the minimum three-year period; noted that the institution is not eligible for Division I-AA classification in 1988-89 because it does not meet that subdivision's scheduling criteria and that it cannot remain classified in Division III without knowingly violating that division's criteria inasmuch as the institution has awarded grants-in-aid in football for 1988-89.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Denied an appeal by the University of Oregon to permit the institution to apply and retain a surcharge on each ticket sold for the 1988 Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track Championships to assist in retiring a bond used to fund a facility renovation, noting that while the committee understood the circumstances involved, sustaining the appeal would be contrary to the provisions of Executive Regulations 1-9-(d)-(1) and 1-9-(c)-(1).

b. Acting for the Executive Committee:

Approved a recommendation by the Men's Water Polo Committee that the Pacific Coast Athletic Association (effective July 1, the Big West Conference) be granted automatic qualification for the 1988 championship, noting that the conference's application at the May Executive Committee meeting was grouped inadvertently with two conferences that did not meet all qualifications, which the PCAA did.

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

Summer camps

1. Employment of or reduced-admission privileges to a prospect. Considered the application of a previous committee interpretation of NCAA Bylaw 1-7-(d) [reference: Item No. 2 of the committee's September 17, 1987, conference] and Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(2) to a situation in which a member institution wishes to employ at its ice hockey camp a prospective student-athlete who participates on a major junior B ice hockey team but never has lettered at his high school; agreed that to resolve the difference in the application of the provisions of Bylaw 1-7-(d) and Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(2), the provisions of Bylaw 1-7-(d) should be considered to apply to high school or junior college awards winners or any other individual being recruited per O.I. 100.

Extra benefit—videotapes

2. Head coach supplying highlight videotapes of individual players. Reviewed Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) (extra benefit) and agreed that coaches are not precluded from supplying professional teams with a highlight videotape of selected graduating senior student-athletes; noted that the provisions of Constitution 3-6-(g) would preclude the coach from receiving compensation or gratuities of any kind, directly or indirectly, for such services.

Playing season

3. Date for issuing equipment and taking squad pictures. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 3-1-(g) and 3-1-(k) and agreed that since August 14, 1988 (the day prior to the beginning of the traditional segment, on which an institution is permitted to issue equipment and take squad pictures), falls on a Sunday, it would be permissible to designate Saturday, August 13, 1988, as the day on which these activities may occur; recommended that the Council review this issue and consider sponsoring legislation that would clarify the application of this rule.

Playing seasons—all-star games

4. Conference or divisional all-star games. Reviewed the application of NCAA Case No. 286 and the provisions of Bylaw 3 and agreed that when a student-athlete participates in a conference all-star game, it is not necessary that the institution include the all-star contest within its permissible playing season; further, the individual student-athletes, as well as the member institutions, would not be charged with a date of competition; finally, the provisions of Case No. 286 would not be initiated when a student-athlete receives expenses from his or her conference and/or competes in the uniform of the conference in such all-star competition.

Playing seasons (outside competition)

5. Coaches' involvement with enrolled student-athletes on outside teams. Reviewed the involvement of an institution's coach with an outside team that includes his or her own student-athletes and that participates during the institution's permissible playing season, noting the provisions of Situation No.

651 (practice limitations—outside teams); recommended that an article be published in The NCAA News concerning this issue and requesting feedback from member institutions; further, the Division I subcommittee recommended that the Council extend the principle outlined in Situation No. 651 to include an outside team that participates during an institution's playing and practice season.

Outside basketball competition

6. Coaches in the Superior Basketball League of Puerto Rico. Recommended that a previous Council-approved interpretation (April 1987) prohibiting the participation of a member institution's coach in the Superior Basketball League of Puerto Rico be reversed, inasmuch as further review has indicated that the Superior Basketball League is more similar to a national training program than a summer basketball league; further, requested that the revised interpretation include a stipulation that individuals participating as coaches in the Superior Basketball League of Puerto Rico be required to receive approval per Bylaw 1-6-(d)-(6).

Waivers

7. Transfer student ("4-2-4") and the application of Bylaw 5-1-(n)-(3) (Divisions II and III). Reviewed the application of the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(n)-(3) and O.I. 100 to a situation in which a football student-athlete first enrolled as a full-time student in a four-year institution, then transferred to a junior college and did not participate in intercollegiate athletics, and now seeks to transfer to a Division II institution and participate in the sport of baseball; determined that the student-athlete would not be immediately eligible to participate in the sport of intercollegiate baseball, inasmuch as he had practiced and competed in an intercollegiate sport (football) prior to his transfer to the certifying institution; referred

Nine automatic qualifications sought

The Division III Women's Basketball Committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that nine conferences receive automatic qualification for the 1989 championship.

The committee met June 20-23 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Conferences to be recommended are the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Little East Conference, New Jersey Athletic Conference, Massachusetts State College Athletic Conference, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, and Ohio Athletic Conference.

The committee also will recommend that a benchmark figure be used in assessing revenue potential for site determination. This figure would be the three-year average of gross ticket sales for a particular round of the tournament. The host institution would be responsible for this issue to the Divisions II and III Steering Committees for further study in conjunction with each committee's general review of the transfer issue.

guaranteeing the benchmark figure rather than 75 percent of the event's projected receipts as submitted in the proposed budget.

In other action, the committee established a list of essential requirements for a quality facility. This list will be sent to all prospective host institutions.

The committee also decided that weekly polls will begin Tuesday, January 17, 1989. There will be a total of six polls for the 1988-89 season.

Estes honored

Bob Estes of the University of Texas, Austin, was chosen June 21 as the first recipient of The Nicklaus Trophy as the best male collegiate golfer of the year.

The Nicklaus Trophy, named after Jack Nicklaus, who was named Player of the Century June 20, was established by the Golf Coaches Association of America and MacGregor Golf Company.

Pac-10 places Arizona State track program on probation

Arizona State University's track program was placed on two years' probation by the Pacific-10 Conference June 28 for 11 rules violations under coach Clyde Duncan, who was dismissed this spring.

Athletics director Charles S. Harris said the sanctions, announced by conference Commissioner Thomas C. Hansen, mean that the Sun Devils can compete in track and field in 1988-89, although they cannot compete off-campus.

"We will extend our home-meet schedule next season to include more competition than we normally have," Harris said. "We certainly intend to give every student-athlete the broadest range of competition within our new limits."

The violations included allegations that Duncan gave money to athletes for personal travel, falsified qualifying times for the 1987 NCAA Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field championships, and illegally provided transportation for athletes, United Press International reported.

The conference originally prohibited the institution from recruiting off campus and from providing expenses for recruiting trips. It also ordered the elimination of all new grants-in-aid for two years.

However, the conference suspended the second year of the recruiting prohibitions and reduced the grants-in-aid restriction during the second year.

"The conference considered this a most serious case, particularly in light of the fact that this was the third time since 1981 violations have been found in the Arizona State track and field program," Hansen said. "The severity of the penalties reflects the conference's concerns over the history of violations in the conduct of the program."

Duncan was suspended in January during the investigation and later was advised that his contract would not be renewed. Harris said the probation will affect who is hired as the new coach. The deadline for applications has passed.

"The severity of the probation was significantly reduced during the past few months because of the fact that we cooperated with all facets of the investigation and because the conference recognized that this particular case was one that was limited to the actions of one person and by their nature were largely undiscoverable," Harris said.

He said, "Every coach at Arizona State knows and understands clearly what the rules are. We cannot afford to operate the program under a cloud of impropriety. The conference certainly took into consideration how the institution responded to the allegations."

Harris said parents of track and field athletes had been contacted by mail and "they are aware of the status of the program."

Athletics Congress role in championships sought

Next winter's Division I Men's and Women's Indoor Track and Field Championships may be staged as a historic cooperative effort involving the NCAA and the United States' governing body for track and field.

The Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee, meeting June 21-24 in Kansas City, recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that the Division I indoor championships be held at the the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis in 1989, 1990 and 1991. The Athletics Congress (TAC) would coordinate the event and the Midwestern Collegiate Conference would serve as the official host.

The meet, if approved for Indianapolis, would be the first NCAA championship to be managed by another national sports governing body.

"This recommendation is another step in the development of collegiate track and field," said David E. Walker, head track coach at East Tennessee State University and committee chair. "TAC's involvement will enhance the championships under NCAA administration."

The Division I indoor championships have been conducted in Oklahoma City the past three seasons.

In recent years, Indianapolis has been the site of such major track events as the Pan American Games and the World Indoor Track and Field Championships. The city also will host the U.S. Olympic Trials in track and field later this month.

Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, also was pleased with the recommendation.

"This arrangement will provide a unique and historic relationship between the NCAA, TAC and the MCC to further the promotion of track and field in the United States," said Helmick.

In other action, the track and field committee recommended a change in Executive Regulation 1-4(e) to allow individual competitors at NCAA championships to move up in the final standings after a place-winner has been declared ineligible subsequent to the competition. The committee expressed the view that student-athletes in individual-team championships should not be penalized as the result of the participation of an ineligible competitor.

Executive Regulation 1-4(e) currently allows adjustment of team points and standings after such a declaration of ineligibility but declares that placement of other individual competitors shall not be altered.

In actions related to the sport's rules, the committee:

- Restored the recommendation for a foul indicator in the horizontal jumps. The use of plasticine or other suitable material for verifying foot faults would allow athletes to qualify for international competition.

- Required that similar visible undergarments worn by more than one member of a relay team or cross country team be of the same color.

- Clarified the grounds for disqualification of competitors leaving their lanes in races run on a curve.

- Approved new safety guidelines for throwing areas and recommended that an official monitor all warm-up throws in those areas. A panel also will be appointed to develop new specifications and safety requirements for hammer and discus cages.

- Allowed the trailing foot to touch the ground in the triple jump, thus accommodating a similar allowance in International Amateur Athletic Foundation rules for that event.

final games and May 21—championship games. The suggested times for the semifinal games are 10 a.m. and noon for the Division III games and 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. for the National Collegiate Championship games.

The committee also will recommend that the number of regions in Division III be increased from four to five. The state of New York would be taken out of the Northeast region and would become the fifth region. At least one team would be selected from each region and the remaining three teams would be selected at large.

Tennis coaches award scholarships

The Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association (ITCA) has announced its 1988 postgraduate scholarship winners.

The ITCA awards $1,000 scholarships, based on academic and athletics achievements, to a senior man and woman in each of three divisions. The ITCA did not award a scholarship to a Division II woman this season but named women co-winners in Division I.

Larry Pascal of the University of Kansas is the 1988 men's scholarship recipient in Division I. Pascal was a Big Eight Conference doubles champion as a freshman and received the Martha Clarke Scholarship for outstanding academic achievement.

One of the Division I women's co-winners also comes from the University of Kansas. Marie Hibbard, one of the Jayhawks' top doubles performers, has been honored as the school's top woman student-athlete and has received the coaches' award for team play and dedication.

The other Division I winner is Dabney Langhorne of Trinity University (Texas). The former Florida junior player of the year has been listed in the top 100 in ITCA singles rankings. The mathematics major is a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta honorary society.

James O'Sullivan of the New York Institute of Technology is the men's scholarship recipient in Division II. O'Sullivan, a four-year fixture in the Bears' lineup, suffered only a handful of singles losses at New York Tech.

The men's winner in Division III is Eric Ellefson of Central College (Iowa), a two-time singles and doubles champion in the Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. Ellefson, who sat out his senior season with a knee injury, has served as the student representative on the college's board of trustees.

Betsy Weingarten of Goucher College is the women's scholarship recipient in Division III. She has been noted for leadership and consistency throughout her four-year tennis career and has received numerous campus honors for academic achievement.

All six ITCA scholarship winners also were members of the Volvo academic all-America teams in their respective divisions.

Membership in CAC totals eight

Trinity University (Texas) and Millsaps College have accepted invitations to join the College Athletic Conference, according to Rhodes College Provost Tom Kepple, head of the CAC expansion committee.

The CAC, an NCAA Division III member, has been planning to expand for the past two years. Its current members are Centre College, Earlham College, Fisk University, Rhodes, Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology and the University of the South.

Trinity and Millsaps will begin conference play in selected sports in September and become full members in 1989-90. Rose-Hulman and Earlham will be leaving the CAC after the 1988-89 season for geographical reasons.

"The CAC was originally conceived as a conference in which high-quality academic institutions would compete against each other in athletics," Kepple said. "Trinity and Millsaps are fine academic institutions, and we welcome the opportunity to have them join us in wholesome and spirited athletics competition."

Trinity athletics director Gene Norris said, "We are real excited about the opportunity to join the conference. We have worked toward this goal for a long time. The coaches and athletes see this as a very positive step for Trinity athletics."

The CAC, founded in 1962, sponsors eight men's championships.

University of Southern California, my monthly check was less than half the stipend athletes received if they lived off campus. I had to have better grades to get in and maintain a higher grade-point average, and I had no guarantees of renewal. If I got hurt teaching, my tuition wouldn't be paid and I wouldn't receive a monthly stipend for the period I was allowed to complete my degree. Besides, I had to pay taxes.

The common complaint is that they need money for incidentals, to go to a movie, to buy clothes, etc., etc., etc. Who paid for those things when they were in high school?

A classmate made an interesting observation—why do I see all the football players wearing designer jeans, Izods and gold chains? My observation is, how many of them would be going to college if they weren't in sports? How many of them would go to school for the sake of an education?

Yes, schools make money from gate receipts. However, at USC, scholarships alone for 95 football players total $1.425 million. I wish I could have eaten at a training table, had tutors at my every demand, had all my classes scheduled for me, and been able to turn in my fee bill and have someone else take care of it for me.

No one is holding a gun to the heads of these athletes and making them go to school. A football player from Baylor said he was luckier than some of his teammates because he had a car. I submit to him that he was luckier than a lot of students who also didn't have a car.

There are complaints that scholarship athletes can't work during the school year. In the article I read about this, the writer went on to say many of them couldn't work during the summer since that time was taken up making up deficiencies to meet the requirement of having passed 24 credits the year prior to their season.

It is totally unrealistic to think they could compete, attend classes and work. For those not in summer school, there is work to be found. It may not be glamorous, but maybe we should be teaching them that sacrifices have to be made and it's time to take some responsibility for themselves.

Metro Conference approves first revenue-sharing plan

Athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives in the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference recently approved the first revenue-sharing program in the conference's 13-year history.

The revenue-sharing plan will not extend to those revenues earned by members in NCAA championships.

The Metro Conference's joint committee voted during the league's spring meetings to distribute $70,000 among the seven member institutions. The money, which will be taken from an account in which surpluses totaling approximately $500,000 have accumulated in recent years, was derived from the conference's basketball revenues and television agreements.

Ralph McFillen

More distributions will be made in future years, according to Commissioner Ralph McFillen, so long as revenues surpass the conference's yearly operating budget.

Other topics discussed during the meetings included expansion of the conference, the possibility of adding football as a league sport and the selection of future sites for the post-season men's basketball tournament.

Discussions of expansion centered on the possibility that Tulane University will return to the conference when it reinstates its basketball program in 1990. Tulane left the league following the 1984-85 season, when it discontinued basketball.

Conference officials said there have been informal discussions with Tulane about the school rejoining the conference but added that no official action has been taken.

"Right now, Tulane is the most viable candidate for membership in the Metro," McFillen said.

No action was taken during the meetings on adding football as a conference sport. The presidents of Metro Conference institutions also discussed the subject during a mid-June meeting in Orlando, Florida, but made no announcement of their views.

The conference's joint committee approved a schedule under which each member institution will have an opportunity to host the men's basketball tournament on a rotating basis.

The University of South Carolina will serve as host for the 1989 tournament. Other conference schools will be allowed to serve as host if they meet requirements outlined in the conference's administrative manual. Next in line to accept or pass on the opportunity to host the tournament is the University of Southern Mississippi. The conference plans to determine tournament sites two years in advance.

A conference championship in women's track and field also will be contested beginning with the 1988-89 season. The inaugural meet will be held May 11-13, 1989, in conjunction with the men's meet at South Carolina.

In another action, the conference doubled the number of $2,000 post-graduate scholarships it awards. In the future, one male and one female student-athlete will receive scholarships annually; previously, only one scholarship was awarded.

Rose Bowl's nine-year pact with ABC to begin in 1989

After 36 years of televising the Rose Bowl, NBC wanted to renegotiate the rights. Instead, the sponsors of the New Year's Day game turned to ABC.

The Pasadena, California, game, which pits the Big Ten Conference and Pacific-10 Conference champions, will be televised by ABC for the next nine years. NBC, which began telecasting the Rose Bowl in 1952, had the rights for the next two years at a total price of $23.7 million.

Industry sources told the Associated Press that NBC was willing to drop the rights to the game because the Tournament of Roses Association would not reduce the network's payments for the 1989 and '90 contests. On June 30, the association announced the switch to ABC.

The sources said ABC will pay almost $100 million for the nine-game package. ABC also will assume the $23.7 million payments for the next two games.

"We're pleased with the agreement," Jim Muldoon, assistant commissioner of the Pac-10, said. "We enjoyed a long-term relationship with NBC. We anticipate a similarly successful arrangement with ABC. It's a nice package, considering that ABC carries the Pac-10 and Big Ten during the regular season. It's a logical culmination in the Rose Bowl."

"There have been discussions with NBC, sporadic discussions, for a number of months. The latest development came down very quickly, within the last week or so."

It came down so quickly that Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl, had no idea that ABC would have his game and the Rose Bowl next January 2.

"We knew they were going to talk to the Rose Bowl," Holmes said. "We knew they were negotiating, but what we understood was that the negotiations were going to be for 1991. The thing that's sudden is that it's effective January of '89."

ABC now has the Citrus, Rose and Sugar Bowls on New Year's Day or Monday, January 2, 1989, because the new year begins on a Sunday. NBC is left with the Fiesta, which likely will move into the late-afternoon slot traditionally held by the Rose Bowl, and the Orange Bowl. That game, from Miami, Florida, is played in prime time.

The Sugar Bowl, which has alternated between days and nights, went to a daytime start in 1987 under a contract with ABC that runs through 1991.

Holmes wasn't sure what impact the ABC-Rose Bowl arrangement would have on the Sugar Bowl but said "what would appear to be the plan is to move us into prime time."

In a statement read by NBC spokesman Doug Kelly, the network said, "NBC has enjoyed a long and positive relationship with the Rose Bowl. But given the adverse conditions of the sports marketplace, NBC initiated discussions with the Rose Bowl committee about an extension and restructuring of our current contract. When it became apparent that such adjustments could not be agreed to, NBC agreed to the committee's request to talk to other broadcasters."

NBC, which began radio coverage of the Rose Bowl in 1927, will continue radio coverage through 1990, according to Bill Flinn, assistant executive director of the Tournament of Roses.

The Rose Bowl is the oldest bowl game and is seen by an estimated 265 million people in more than 30 countries. The game drew the second-highest TV rating of the six bowl games played last New Year's Day, but it has not had national-championship implications since 1980.

Citrus Bowl to discuss giving ACC champ automatic berth

The Florida Citrus Bowl Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference have agreed to discuss the idea of giving the conference an automatic berth.

After meeting in Orlando July 5 and consulting by telephone with ACC Commissioner Eugene F. Corrigan, the bowl's executive committee issued a statement discussing the possible association.

The ACC reportedly has offered to commit its annual champion but give the Citrus Bowl the option of turning elsewhere for a host team in alternate years, the Associated Press reported.

Neither side has confirmed details of the suggestion, but ABC, which has broadcast past games, also has been consulted.

"They indicated the matter was entirely up to us (the bowl committee) but made a few observations about the matter—really pointing out both advantages and disadvantages," said Chuck Rohe, executive director of the Citrus Bowl Association.

Paul Roddy, president of the Florida Citrus Sports Association, has been authorized by the executive committee to establish a joint committee "to explore the possible mutual benefits of an association between the two organizations," the association statement read.

Roddy named Don Dizney, Bob Moore and Jack Prevost of the executive committee to represent the Citrus Bowl.

The ACC will be represented by athletics directors John D. Swofford of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Bobby Robinson, Clemson University, and James Copeland of the University of Virginia, Roddy said.

The primary advantage of an automatic berth would be a potential national-championship game with powerhouse Clemson. Five ACC teams in the past 10 years have made appearances in the Citrus Bowl, which include Clemson's 35-10 victory over Penn State January 1.

Clemson coach Danny Ford has voiced opposition to any tie-in, saying he preferred to remain free to accept one of the more lucrative New Year's Day bowls if his Tigers merited it.

"Why limit yourself to a Buick when you might have a chance to drive a Cadillac one year?" Ford asked.

In its early history as the Tangerine Bowl, the game had automatic tie-ins with the Southern Conference and then the Mid-American Athletic Conference. The latter arrangement expired with the 1975 game.

Division II men's basketball seeks enlarged play-off field

The Division II Men's Basketball Committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that the championship finals be expanded from the current four-team, two-day format to an eight-team, three-day format. Quarterfinal games at campus sites would be eliminated.

If this format is approved, the committee is recommending that the finals be held in Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1989, 1990 and 1991. The new format has the endorsement of the City of Springfield, tournament host. The schedule for the 1989 championship would include regional games at campus sites March 17 and 18 and the championship finals at Springfield March 23, 24 and 25.

The committee also will recommend the following regional realignment: the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference from the South to the South Atlantic; Eastern Montana College; the University of Alaska, Anchorage, and the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, from the West to the North Central; Delta State University and Mississippi College from the South Central to the South; Armstrong State College from the South to the South Atlantic, and Wayne State University (Michigan), Oakland University, Grand Valley State University and Ferris State College from the North Central to the Great Lakes. New members Emporia State University, Fort Hays Kansas State University, Missouri Southern State College, Missouri Western State College, Washburn University and Pittsburg State University were placed in the South Central region, and Wayne State College (Nebraska) and Kearney State College were placed in the North Central region.

The committee will recommend the following 15 conferences for automatic qualification for 1989: California Collegiate Athletic Association, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Great Lakes Valley Conference, Great Northwest Conference, Gulf South Conference, Lone Star Conference, Midwest Collegiate Conference, Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, New England Collegiate Conference, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Northeast-Ten Conference, Northern California Athletic Conference, Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and Sunshine State Conference.

Regarding site selection, the committee will place a strong emphasis on regional representation with the intent of having four teams from the same region competing in a regional. However, the committee reserves the right to ensure that the best teams available are selected, which might necessitate selecting more than four teams per region. Therefore, a team from one region may be assigned to a regional outside of its own area to complete the bracket.

Regarding site determination, the committee concluded that revenue potential is a significant factor when determining championship play-off sites. The committee will give consideration to the best financial proposal; however, other factors such as rotation of sites, seeding of teams and experience in administering tournament competition will be considered.

The committee also is recommending that three-person officiating crews be used in championship competition. Considerable discussion was devoted to increasing the visibility and financial status of the championship.

The committee met June 27-30 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Three receive CCA awards

Stan Bates, J. William Davis and Frank McIntyre have received the Collegiate Commissioners Association Award of Merit.

The CCA awards honor long-standing service, dedication and leadership in collegiate athletics.

Bates served as Western Athletic Conference commissioner from 1971 to 1980, following 17 years as director of athletics at Washington State University.

McIntyre has served 17 years as supervisor of men's basketball officials for the Pacific-10 Conference.

Prior to that, he spent 19 years as an active basketball official.

Davis, a retired professor of government and faculty athletics representative at Texas Tech University, conceived the National Letter of Intent program for prospective collegiate student-athletes. The letter-of-intent program is administered by the CCA.

The awards were presented June 29 at the CCA awards banquet at Silverado Country Club and Resort in Napa, California.

Two bills aimed at illegal contracts

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives June 21 approved a package of bills designed to crack down on unscrupulous sports agents who illegally entice college athletes with promises of multimillion-dollar contract deals.

The two bills, which passed overwhelmingly and now move to the Senate, would prohibit professional sports agents from approaching college athletes in Pennsylvania before their athletics eligibility has expired.

One bill would establish a nine-member state board of athlete agents to license and regulate sports agents. Under the bill an agent would have to put up $25,000 in bonds to receive a license. The board would have the power to revoke, suspend, limit or restrict an agent's license.

Before the end of a student's eligibility, agents would be forbidden from entering into an oral or written contract with the athletes, giving or promising them or their families anything of value and giving anything of value to a college official or employee to influence a student-athlete's decision.

If the bills become law, agents who do not follow the regulations would be fined up to $10,000 or imprisoned for up to a year, or both, the Associated Press reported.

UCLA men's and women's programs rank No. 1

According to The Knoxville Journal, which has rated college athletics programs since 1971, UCLA men's and women's programs were the best in the country in 1987-88.

It was the ninth all-sports title for UCLA men and the first time any school has won three consecutive titles.

The women's rankings began in 1985, when UCLA won. The Bruins were second in 1986 and 1987 to Texas.

Texas women finished second (99 points), and Stanford was third with 80 points this year.

UCLA men earned 88 points to outdistance Texas with 69. Longhorn men were second for the second straight year.

Among other men's programs, Oklahoma took third place with 68 points. Louisiana State was fourth with 66½ and Arizona State fifth with 65.

Rounding out the top 10 were Arizona (63½), Michigan (60½), Clemson (59½), Stanford (58) and Oklahoma State (57).

The Journal bases its rankings on the NCAA's 10 leading sports, based on participation. Teams are ranked one through 20 in each sport, with 20 points awarded for a national title, 19 for second place and so on.

Rankings in cross country, wrestling, swimming, track and golf are based on NCAA meet results.

Football rankings are based on the Associated Press final poll.

In basketball, the top four teams are ranked according to the outcome of Final Four play, with semifinal losers each getting 17½ points. The next four teams are the regional runners-up, and the final 12 are taken from the final AP poll.

In soccer and tennis, the top four teams are ranked according to NCAA tournament play, with the remaining 16 teams taken from the Intercollegiate Soccer Coaches' poll and the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' poll.

The top eight teams in baseball are ranked according to the results of the College World Series, with the remaining 12 teams taken from the Collegiate Baseball poll.

In addition to its two national titles, UCLA placed seventh in swimming, ninth in football, ninth in tennis and 11th in soccer.

Texas won the national title in swimming and was runner-up in track. The Longhorns also got 11 points in baseball, 10 in golf, six in tennis and three in cross country.

Oklahoma did not win a national title but had four top-10 finishes—second in basketball, third in football, a tie for second in golf and eighth in wrestling.

LSU got 19 points in tennis, 16 in football, 15½ in track and 15 in swimming.

Arizona State won the national title in wrestling and placed second in baseball and added a total of 22 points in tennis and golf.

Arizona got most of its points for making the basketball Final Four and finished sixth in both golf and cross country.

Michigan earned 17½ points in tennis, 16 in swimming, 15 in wrestling and placed in three other sports.

Clemson was the national champion in soccer and got a total of 30 points in football, tennis and cross country.

Stanford got points in just three sports but won national titles in tennis and baseball and finished third in swimming.

Oklahoma State was third in golf, fourth in wrestling, ninth in baseball and 11th in football.

Florida and Southern California each earned 55½ points to head the second 10, which also includes cross country champion Arkansas (50), California (50), South Carolina (47½), North Carolina State (46½), North Carolina (38), Texas A&M (38), football champion Miami (Florida) (35½) and Indiana (35).

Nebraska ranks 21st with 34 points, followed by Georgia (33½), Iowa (33), Kentucky (32), Duke (30½), Wisconsin (28), Georgia Tech (26), Syracuse (26), Florida State (25), Penn State (25), Pepperdine (25) and Southern Methodist (25).

The only school to win a national championship but miss the list of the top 30 schools was Kansas, which won the Division I basketball title.

Rounding out the women's top 10 are Arizona State (76½), Florida (71), Georgia (59½), Arizona (55½), Nebraska (53½), Southern California (50½) and Alabama (50).

The Journal uses NCAA Division I's top 10 sports, based on participation—cross country, volleyball, field hockey, basketball, gymnastics, swimming, track, tennis, golf and softball—to determine the country's top women's athletics programs.

UCLA earned points in eight of the 10 sports, including a national championship in softball. The Bruins also placed second in track, third in gymnastics, tied for third in tennis, seventh in volleyball, ninth in swimming, 13th in golf and 17th in cross country.

Texas won the national title in swimming and also got 17½ points in volleyball and 17 in cross country. Texas scored in basketball, golf, track and tennis.

Stanford won the national title in tennis, was second in volleyball and placed third in swimming. The Cardinal also scored in track, basketball and golf.

Arizona State tied for second in golf and had top-10 finishes in track, swimming, gymnastics and tennis.

A pair of runner-up finishes in swimming and tennis helped Florida. The Lady Gators also earned points in tennis, gymnastics and volleyball.

A national title in gymnastics helped put Alabama in the top 10.

California heads the second 10 with 49½ points, followed by Virginia (41½), Oregon (40), Kentucky (38½), Louisiana State (38), Maryland (34½), Iowa (32½), San Jose State (32), Louisiana Tech (31) and Oklahoma State (30).

The third 10 includes Ohio State (28), Washington (28), Long Beach State (27½), Tennessee (27½), Penn State (27), Auburn (25), Miami (Florida) (25), Clemson (24), Brigham Young (22) and Duke (22).
