Schultz announces staff restructuring

A restructuring of the NCAA national office staff was announced September 16 by Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, with four long-time staff members being named associate executive directors.

Named to the new positions were:

- Thomas W. Jernstedt, currently assistant executive director for championships, who will oversee the championships and communications departments, as well as the Final Four Foundation;

- Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director for compliance and enforcement, who will supervise compliance services and enforcement as separate departments, as well as the legislative services department;

- Louis J. Spry, controller, who will continue to direct the Association's business affairs, and

- Ted C. Tow, assistant executive director for publishing, who will be responsible for the administration and publishing departments.

"Since becoming executive director, I have spent considerable time away from the office to meet with chief executive officers, boards of trustees, directors of athletics, education associations and numerous other groups," said Schultz. "It is my belief, and one that is shared by the senior staff, the NCAA Executive Committee, Council and Presidents Commission, that I should continue these efforts.

"I believe these management changes are necessary to ensure the efficiency of our efforts on behalf of the NCAA membership, as well as to recognize the changes that have occurred in the role of the executive director."

The staff changes also will result

Conferences will observe NCAA operations

Early next year, representatives of member conferences will begin visiting the Association's national office as part of the Conference Exchange Program being organized by the legislative services department. "We believe this approach will enhance the national office staff's working relationship with conference offices," said Maureen Devlin, legislative assistant.

"The whole point of the program is to improve the membership's understanding of the day-to-day operation of the national office not just legislative services, but every department," Devlin added. "These visits will give people a chance to put names with faces... it will humanize the whole process of dealing with the NCAA."

National office visits

Devlin said plans currently being developed call for the exchange program to include 1½-day visits to

Proposals on financial aid at top of Commission agenda

Financial aid issues will be featured on the agenda for the fall meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission September 27-28 in Kansas City.

The Commission will use the meeting to determine what legislation, if any, it wishes to sponsor for consideration at the annual NCAA Convention in January.

A legislative subcommittee of the Commission met August 31 in Atlanta to review all of the suggestions made by speakers, respondents and attendees at the first three sessions in the Commission's National Forum. All of those suggestions will be reviewed by the Commission in the fall meeting.

But the financial aid topic is likely to receive the most attention. The group will consider a modification of the proposal by President Peter Likins of Lehigh University, a member of the Commission, that he presented at the June 1988 Forum session in Orlando. His subsequent modifications have incorporated several of the suggestions presented in that Forum by the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism.

Likins' proposal

In essence, Likins' proposal would permit each division and subdivision of the Association to have greater autonomy in determining their own financial aid policies. It also would adjust the maximum financial aid a student-athlete can receive under NCAA legislation to assure that the most needy student-athletes could receive somewhat larger awards than are currently permitted.

The Likins proposal then would allow each division and subdivision to determine, on a sport-by-sport basis, the financial aid policy that would govern the sports in that division or subdivision.

Three basic policies would be available: (1) full athletics grants-in-aid as currently permitted, but with additional aid available for full need students; (2) tuition, fees and books based on athletics ability, with any other aid (including room and board) based on need; (3) all aid based on need. In the third option, the divisions and subdivisions could decide if athletics ability could or could not be considered as a criterion in formulating the financial aid package.

Also in its consideration of financial aid issues, the Commission will review a national office staff report on various financial aid questions, including Pell Grant matters, and a report from the Association's legal counsel on the Title IX impact of possible adjustments in the Association's financial aid legislation.

Other Forum proposals

Another Commission topic stemming from the National Forum will be a review of the governance proposal offered at the June Forum by President Lattie F. Coor of the University of Vermont, a member of the Commission.

Coor's proposal would separate major policy issues from those related to implementation of policy. Major policy issues would be voted upon by roll-call vote of chief executive officers (or their designated representatives specifically for that purpose) in a separate voting session at an NCAA Convention. Such matters then would be approved only after consideration at a second Convention, and they would remain in place for a period of at least three and perhaps as long as seven years, unless reversed by the CEOs or their special representatives at a subsequent Convention.

Implementation issues would be voted upon by the Convention as they are now.

Other proposals from the first three Forums fall in the areas of academics, coaches, length of season, the NCAA membership structure, other NCAA procedures issues, revenues/budget and miscellaneous suggestions.

Other topics

Also on the Commission's fall agenda are the following:

- Planning for the January 1989 concluding session in the National Forum and a status report on the related research being conducted by the American Institutes for Research.

- The "Student-Athletes Right-to-Know Act" introduced in Congress by Sen. Bill Bradley and Congressmen Tom McMillen and Edolphus Towns.

- A revised version of a proposed statement of the general beliefs of the Presidents Commission regarding college athletics.

- A review of the Commission's accomplishments in its first four years of existence.

- A discussion of the role of the institution's governing board in athletics matters.

- A report on the NCAA's minority-opportunities program, presented by President Raymond M. Burse of Kentucky State University, chair of the Special NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics.

The meeting will be the first full Commission session to be conducted by its new chair, Martin A. Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Commission subcommittee sessions will be chaired by President Michael Schwartz, Kent State University, Division I and Division I-A; President Thomas A. Bond, Clarion University of Pennsylvania, Division II, and President George A. Drake, Grinnell College, Division III.

The Commission's nominating committee, chaired by Coor, also will meet during the September gathering.

national office," she offered. "By attending one of our regular departmental staff meetings, we hope visitors will get a better understanding of how interpretations are developed and of how issues raised by the membership are addressed."

Devlin said plans call for scheduling visits by different conference representatives every six to eight weeks, with review of the program occurring regularly. "We want flexibility to be a major part of the exchange program," she offered. "As it progresses and visits take place, we want to be able to modify plans to make the time spent in the national office as beneficial as possible."

"You might call (the visits) get-acquainted sessions," Devlin added. "Many of the people who will be visiting the national office have attended larger NCAA meetings or have met (NCAA) staff members at conference meetings or discussed issues through the Association's conference contact program.

"But these visits, we hope, will be a little more personal. They certainly will give the membership a chance to learn about the day-to-day business of the national office."

Return the favor

It is hoped that conferences will "return the favor," Devlin added. "We hope that conferences will invite staff members to visit their offices in similar fashion. We believe it is important for NCAA staff members to learn more about the day-to-day operations of our member conferences."

Representatives of member conferences who are interested in scheduling a visit to the Association's national office or who would like more information on the conference exchange program should contact Devlin.

Day-to-day operation

"A key to the exchange program, we believe, is the opportunity it will afford conference staff members to see the day-to-day operation of the

Ad hoc committee develops basketball recruiting proposals

The Committee on Basketball Issues has developed proposed legislation for consideration at the 1989 NCAA Convention and is taking steps to increase communication with the membership.

This group is an ad hoc committee that was created in 1987 by the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee and the Board of Directors of the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) to address the needs and concerns of those involved in Division I men's basketball, particularly as they relate to NCAA legislation.

The committee is composed of athletics directors, conference commissioners, Division I head men's basketball coaches, and representatives of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee and NABC board of directors. Committee members pay their own expenses to attend meetings.

The NCAA Council has agreed to sponsor the committee's proposals regarding a revised recruiting calendar and an increase in the total number of paid visits a Division I member institution can provide to a prospective student athlete as 1989 Convention proposed legislation.

The Council also will sponsor a revision of Bylaw 1-7 (summer camps and clinics), which contains many of the committee's proposals. The Committee on Basketball Issues worked with the NCAA Recruiting Committee in obtaining Council sponsorship of these proposals.

The committee approved plans for expansion in an effort to improve its communications capacity. The committee also recommended establishing a newsletter that would be sent to Division I head men's basketball coaches, directors of athletics and conference commissioners.

Committee members will staff the 1988 men's basketball regional officiating clinics, describing the scope and purpose of the committee. A similar presentation will be given at the next meeting of the Division I director of athletics.

The committee met September 13 in Dallas. Those in attendance were Victor A. Bubas, Sun Belt Conference, chair; Gary Cunningham, California State University, Fresno; Wayne Duke, Big 10 Conference; Bob Frederick, University of Kansas; Kenneth A. Free, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference; David R. Gavitt, Big East Conference; Michael M. Gilleran, West Coast Athletic Conference; Jud Heathcote, Michigan State University; Mike Krzyzewski, Duke University; James W. Lessig, Mid-American Athletic Conference; C.M. Newton, Vanderbilt University; Eddie Sutton, University of Kentucky; Joseph R. Vancisin, National Association of Basketball coaches;

Frank Windegger, Texas Christian University; Cedric W. Dempsey, University of Arizona; John R. Gerdy, NCAA, recording secretary, and Thomas W. Jernstedt, NCAA.

The committee's next meeting is scheduled for April 1989 in Chicago.

Michigan expects athletics deficit

A University of Michigan sports official says the Wolverines' traditionally lucrative athletics department could finish the coming fiscal year with a $2.5 million deficit.

The deficit could reach nearly $5.2 million in the 1993 fiscal year despite a proposed $4-per-seat increase in the price of football tickets, said Bob DeCarolis, assistant athletics director and the department's business manager.

The proposed football ticket boost, from $18 to $22 a seat, was part of a five-year budget projection DeCarolis presented September 8 to the school's Board of Control of Intercollegiate Athletics, the Associated Press reported.

"Something has to be done here," DeCarolis told the board, a group of faculty, alumni and students that determines university athletics policy.

The deficit for the fiscal year ending in June 1989 can be covered by transferring money in a special scholarship fund, DeCarolis said. But he said expenses are likely to increase by almost 25 percent while revenues increase at only about 15 percent over the following five years.

Iowa markets women's games

Three University of Iowa women's basketball games will be carried live on statewide television next season, marking the first time the women's athletics department has signed a television contract independent of the men's television package. Iowa will receive a rights fee of $3,000 a game, also a first for the women's program.

Duchossois Communications of Iowa is the syndicator for the contests with Iowa State, Minnesota and Northwestern. The telecasts are expected to reach 1.3 million homes.

Christine H. B. Grant, women's athletics director, said, "This is a very significant first step forward, not just for women's basketball, but for all women's sports. I really think this is a historic moment. It's the logical time for women's athletics to play a more prominent role in Iowa commercial television, and the University of Iowa women's basketball program is the logical place to start."

Iowa also will be the site of both women's games to be telecast by the Big Ten Conference Network.

Two Division II conferences considering a football league

Representatives from the 11 football-playing schools of the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and the Heartland Collegiate Conference have agreed in principle to form a new intercollegiate football league beginning in 1990.

The schools' representatives agreed during a September 7 meeting at Ashland College that participants in the Great Lakes Collegiate Football Conference will play a round-robin schedule, said Vern Norris, commissioner of the six-member GLIAC. An agreement on financial aid also was reached, he said.

Discussions about formation of the new league began informally about two years ago. A desire to simplify scheduling and cut travel and expenses prompted the schools' representatives to meet formally for the first time last April, Norris said.

"The points the schools really had to work out were travel and what kind of schedule they want, and they also had to come to some kind of common ground on aid," he said.

The schools have until November 17 to indicate on an informal basis whether they will join the league. Formal formation of the league is scheduled for February 1, 1989.

Norris said it remains "questionable" whether a couple of the schools will join the league, but added, "If the right people say the right things, I think they'll come in."

Regardless of how many of the 11 schools ultimately join the league, members are committed to playing a round-robin schedule. In other words, if all 11 schools join, members will play 10 conference games.

Only a minority of the schools currently play more than 10 games in a season.

Each of the schools also will offer the same number of grants-in-aid for football. Because cost considerations are a major reason that the league is being formed, its members hope the Division II membership will consider reducing the maximum number of grants from 40 to 35.

"We already have submitted a letter to the NCAA for a legislative change to reduce aid to 35 for Division II," Norris said. "The schools believe that is somewhat workable financially."

Members of the HCC are Ashland, Butler University, the University of Indianapolis, St. Joseph's College (Indiana) and Valparaiso University. GLIAC members are Ferris State University, Grand Valley State University, Hillsdale College, Northern Michigan University, Saginaw Valley State University and Wayne State University (Michigan).

in five new assistant executive director positions, joining three unchanged positions at that level, and eventual opportunities for promotion at other staff levels as the assistant executive directors are selected.

"One of the major purposes of this staff restructuring is to create some opportunities for deserving staff members below the current department-head level," Schultz said. "Any vibrant organization must provide such opportunities or risk losing its best young staff members."

He emphasized that the staff changes all will involve internal promotions. "There will be no additions to the staff in this restructuring, which is intended to improve our management procedures but not to expand the staff at this time," he said.

Decisions regarding new assistant executive directors for business affairs, championships, compliance, enforcement and publishing are expected by October 1. There is no change in the assistant executive director positions in the administration, communications and legislative services departments.

Jernstedt joined the staff in September 1972 as director of events and has been responsible for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship since that time. He was promoted to assistant executive director for championships in May 1974. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Oregon, where he played football as an undergraduate. Jernstedt served on Oregon's athletics staff for three years before joining the NCAA, the last two as business manager for athletics.

Morgan was hired in October 1977 as an enforcement representative and was named executive assistant in enforcement in 1978. He became director of legislative services in 1981 and was promoted to assistant executive director for legislative services in the fall of 1984. A year later, he became assistant executive director for compliance and enforcement. Morgan earned his bachelor's degree and a law degree at the University of Kansas and was a member of a suburban Kansas City law firm for three years before joining the staff.

Spry, the senior department head at the national office, joined the staff August 1, 1966, as a publications editor. He also was director of research and then director of publications before being named assistant to the executive director in October 1971. Five months later, he was promoted to assistant executive director for championships. In May 1974, he was named controller. Spry attended Pacific Lutheran University and the University of Puget Sound. He was a statistician for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics and then was sports information director at West Texas State University before coming to the NCAA staff.

Tow joined the staff in February 1972 as director of publishing and was named assistant executive director in May 1973. He also has handled general administrative assignments since January 1974 and serves as primary staff liaison to the NCAA Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission. Tow received his bachelor's degree at Wayne State College (Nebraska) and did graduate work at Fort Hays State University, the University of Wyoming and the University of Iowa. Before joining the NCAA, he taught for 10 years at the high school, junior college and college levels; served as sports information director and then director of information services at Fort Hays State, and owned a weekly newspaper and a public relations firm.

Legislative Assistance

1988 Column No. 32

Procedures for amending NCAA legislation

Amendments to the NCAA constitution, bylaws or other NCAA legislation may be submitted by six or more active members in accordance with the provisions of NCAA Constitution 7-1, Bylaw 13-1 and Case No. 176. For consideration at the 83rd annual NCAA Convention, amendments must be submitted either by written or wired transmission received at the NCAA national office (as distinguished from the post office or a fast-mail delivery center, for example) by November 1, 1988, or by certified or registered mail postmarked not later than October 25, 1988.

Any six active members may propose amendments to the constitution and to the "common" bylaws (Bylaws 9, 10, 12 and 13). In proposing amendments to the "divided" bylaws (Bylaws 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 11), the six or more sponsoring members must be members of the division (or subdivision) to which the amendment is to be offered. The amendment must be submitted in the name of the institution by the chief executive officer or the chief executive officer's designated representative. (Note: The chief executive officer must provide written notification to the NCAA national office of any other individual designated to indicate sponsorship of a legislative proposal on behalf of the institution.) When an amendment is submitted by the chief elected or executive officer of a member conference and only members of that conference are listed as sponsors, that submission shall be considered sufficient verification of sponsorship and further verification from the individual institutions is not required. The sponsors must indicate in submitting the amendment the division(s) for which it is intended. The NCAA Council has determined that only the first six sponsors from whom verification is received at the national office will be listed in the Official Notice of the Convention.

In addition, the following procedures should be observed:

1. The form, or a copy or facsimile thereof, provided to the chief executive officers of NCAA member institutions in a September 16, 1988, NCAA memorandum should be used. One separate form or copy should be used for each amendment submitted. Additional forms may be obtained by contacting the NCAA legislative services department.

2. Please indicate the specific article, section paragraph and/or subparagraph to be amended, based on the 1988-89 NCAA Manual.

3. If the amendment is to be applicable only to a certain division, please indicate the division.

4. Proposed changes in the present language of the legislation should be indicated by underlining the wording to be added and typing hyphens through the wording to be deleted.

5. A clear and concise intent should be provided, stating what the proposed amendment is designed to accomplish. The intent is not to be used to argue the merits of the proposal.

6. The desired effective date should be stated: immediately, or August 1 following the Convention, or a later specific date. The legislative proposals in the Official Notice or Convention Program from recent NCAA Conventions will provide members with examples of the desired format.

In the interest of being of assistance, the NCAA staff may edit legislative proposals and will communicate with legislative sponsors as may be needed. Any questions regarding legislative procedures should be referred to the legislative coordinator (William B. Hunt) at the NCAA national office.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Enhancement programs award scholarships to 20

The first postgraduate scholarships have been awarded through the NCAA's ethnic-minority enhancement and women's enhancement programs.

The programs were established in 1987 to address the issue of providing opportunities for ethnic minorities and women at all levels of intercollegiate athletics.

The Special Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics was formed by the NCAA Council to focus specifically on opportunities in coaching, athletics administration, officiating, the NCAA committee structure and conference governance structures.

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics was established by the NCAA Convention to study and make recommendations regarding opportunities for women in intercollegiate athletics at the institutional, conference and national levels, as well as other issues directly affecting women's athletics.

Postgraduate scholarships are available to ethnic-minority and female college graduates who have been accepted into an approved sports administration program (or a related program) at an accredited NCAA member institution.

Recipients must express an interest in preparing for a professional career in the administration of intercollegiate athletics. Postgraduate scholarships will be valued at $6,000 for each year of postgraduate study. Renewal of the scholarships for a second year will depend on the nominee's maintaining satisfactory academic progress and on the recommendation of each student's department head.

Ethnic minority enhancement program

Following are the individuals (with institution awarding undergraduate degree and institution where postgraduate scholarship will be utilized) who have been approved to receive postgraduate scholarships through the ethnic-minority enhancement program:

Jacqueline G. Campbell (University of Virginia; University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—Campbell received a field hockey scholarship to Virginia, where she also was a three-year varsity basketball squad member. She graduated from the school of commerce with an emphasis in marketing and since has been employed by the Public Broadcasting Service as tape-library coordinator. She completed internships with Dow Chemical Corporation in 1982 and with Radio Corporation of America (RCA) in 1979 and 1981.

Michael L. Gatto (Widener University; Ohio University)—A three-year starter and letterman on Widener's varsity football team, Gatto also is interested in golf, racquetball and skiing. He achieved a 3.200 grade-point average and earned a degree in business management last May with a concentration in marketing. He received an honorable discharge from the U.S. Military Academy, where he received academic honors. Gatto was elected to Omicron Delta Epsilon economics honor society.

Eric Cromwell Howard (Howard University; Temple University)—Howard received his undergraduate degree in physical education and received a master's degree from Indiana University, Bloomington, in physical education/athletics training. A certified member of the National Athletic Trainers Association, Howard was director of Howard's athletics training internship program and was assistant athletics trainer and head swimming coach.

Ben C. Jay (Ohio State University; Ohio State)—Jay received a business administration degree with an emphasis in accounting in 1981 and currently is working on a master of arts degree in sports management/college athletics administration. He is a graduate assistant in Ohio State's athletics department, where he assists the marketing director with advertising and promoting the institution's 31-sport program. He also has helped develop and prepare marketing plans for nonrevenue sports. He previously served as director of operations for the Cleveland Indians. Jay is a member of the National Association of Asian-American Professionals.

Ann D. Koger (Morgan State University; Temple University)—Koger received undergraduate and graduate degrees from Morgan State and is enrolled in Temple's doctoral program in sports administration. Active in the National Youth Sports Program, Koger was administrative assistant to the NYSP director of activities and served on the NYSP advisory board. In 1974, she became the second black member of the Virginia Slims Professional Women's Tennis Circuit. Koger has an extensive coaching history that includes a 76-22 record in tennis and an 89-39 volleyball record at Haverford College.

Samuel Y. Lee (Indiana University, Bloomington; University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—Lee, whose parents emigrated from China via Hong Kong, received a B.S. degree with a major in health education and athletics training. Lee's career interests lie in a combination of teaching and administrative work in an education setting. He enjoys recreational basketball and volleyball.

Wayne B. Moss (Howard University; Ohio University)—After receiving a degree in broadcast journalism in 1982, Moss began graduate studies at Ohio in sports administration. This past summer, he worked in operations/public relations with the Cleveland Browns. He previously was an account executive with the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services. He hopes eventually to become involved with marketing and sales for a professional football franchise.

Gregory K. P. Smith (Tennessee State University; Temple University)—Smith graduated magna cum laude with a B.S. degree in health and physical education and is working toward a master's of education degree in sports administration at Temple. He was an administrative assistant to the director of intercollegiate athletics at Tennessee State and most recently served in the same capacity for the deputy commissioner/stadium manager of Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia. A member of the National Organization for Athletic Development, Smith is a professional staff member of the NYSP program at Temple.

Tina Tsiang (University of Massachusetts, Amherst; Massachusetts)—Tsiang received teacher certification in physical education and mathematics and has been employed since 1982 at the Montrose School in Massachusetts. At Montrose, she is physical education/athletics director, coach and math teacher. She has coached basketball at several summer camps and is a rated by the National Association of Girls and Women in Sport as a volleyball official.

Cozette R. Wallace (Southern Illinois University, Carbondale; Southern Illinois)—Wallace is serving an internship with the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference as part of the university's M.S. program in sports management. She has helped establish a drug-education library and clearinghouse that conference members may use to supplement their respective drug-education programs. She is a certified member of the National Athletic Trainers Association and is a member of the Council of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators.

Keith L. Gilmore (Michigan State University) and Laurie A. Governor (University of Richmond) were selected as alternates.

Women's enhancement program

Following are the individuals (with institution awarding undergraduate degree and institution where postgraduate scholarship will be utilized) who have been approved to receive postgraduate scholarships through the women's enhancement program:

Jennifer Mary Arneson (University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire; University of Iowa)—Arneson graduated cum laude with a B.A. degree in journalism education and a coaching minor in 1984 and since has been employed as assistant sports information director in Wisconsin-Eau Claire's athletics department. She also is the school's head women's cross country coach and assistant women's track and field coach. As administrative assistant to the director of women's athletics, Arneson assists with the budget, promotions/marketing and alumni relations.

Susanne P. Bair (Indiana State University; Indiana University, Bloomington)—Bair earned a master's degree from Indiana State in physical education with an emphasis in athletics administration and currently is working on a doctorate in athletics administration with a higher education minor. While working on her undergraduate degree, Bair was a four-year volleyball scholarship recipient. She is a member of the National Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association, the Indiana Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association and the Indiana Coaches of Girls' Sports Association.

Anne Elizabeth Flannery (Manhattan College; University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—A second-year master's student in the sports management program at Massachusetts, Flannery received a full basketball scholarship from Manhattan. She earned a degree in political science and served as a legal assistant with a Washington, D.C., law firm. She spent two years playing professional basketball in Europe and was a high school coach and referee upon her return to the United States. She is a graduate student in the women's basketball program at Massachusetts.

Christine Ruth Lottes (Valparaiso University; West Virginia University)—Through nine years as Frostburg State University's head field hockey coach, Lottes compiled a 105-43-6 record that included six Division III play-off appearances. She received her undergraduate degree in physical education and health and earned a master's in physical education from West Chester University of Pennsylvania. She currently is working toward a doctorate, which she began at the University of Maryland, College Park. She was a faculty sponsor for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and received Frostburg State's outstanding teacher award in 1983.

Maureen G. McPartland (Lehigh University; Adelphi University)—McPartland plans to pursue a mas-

While at Lehigh, she was captain of the varsity volleyball squad and served as vice-president of the Marketing Club. She also was active in the Women Involved in Student Education big/little-sister program.

Christa L. Peeters (Ithaca College; University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—Peeters received a B.S. degree in physical education with a concentration in athletics training before entering the sports management program at Massachusetts. She holds membership in the National Athletic Trainers Association and is graduate assistant athletics trainer at the university. She interned in athletics training at Otsego Orthopedics and has served on the medical support staff at several NCAA championships. While at Ithaca, Peeters was chair of the school's Student Athletic Trainers Association.

Cheryl A. Reeve (La Salle University; La Salle)—Reeve attended La Salle on a basketball scholarship and obtained a B.A. degree in computer science and management-information systems. She received various honors as a starter and holds several school records. This past summer, Reeve was a counselor at the Germantown Friends Basketball and Reading Clinic, where she assisted 10- to 18-year-olds in basketball and reading fundamentals. She hopes eventually to obtain an assistant coaching position in women's collegiate basketball.

Patricia Ann Sabo (University of Texas, Austin; University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—As an undergraduate, Sabo helped her Longhorn team to four NCAA Division I swimming titles and won the 400-yard individual medley in 1986. In 1985, she represented the United States at the World University Games, where she won a gold medal in the 400-meter freestyle. Sabo earned a journalism degree with an emphasis in public relations. She will serve as graduate assistant for the women's swimming team while at Massachusetts.

Karen Joan Sowada (Rice University; University of Florida)—Sowada received a bachelor of arts degree in managerial studies and sports management last May and will pursue graduate studies in sports management with hopes of a teaching/research career at the collegiate level. She recently completed internships in Rice's intramurals and athletics programs, where she assisted in the administration and organization of each. The four-year athletics scholarship recipient received several honors and was captain of Rice's women's basketball team her senior season. She is a member of the North American Society for Sport Management.

Claire E. Townsend (University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; University of Georgia)—Townsend is finishing work on a master of education degree at Georgia and is a sports administration intern with the Southeastern Conference. She graduated from Alabama's college of commerce and business administration with a degree in corporate finance. A four-year scholarship winner in cross country and indoor and outdoor track, Townsend is graduate assistant track and field coach at Georgia. She also is involved with recruiting and meet management/promotion.

Irish determined to survive without redshirting

By Herschel Nissenson

"Redshirting" is a dirty word at Notre Dame.

The Notre Dame roster for 1988 includes only three redshirts—fifth-year seniors Flash Gordon, Wes Pritchett and Frank Stams, all line-backers.

Gordon was granted an extra year of eligibility after a series of injuries prevented him from playing in 1984. Pritchett was not in school during the spring of 1986 and needs this semester to complete his degree requirements. A nagging thigh problem limited Stams to 16 seconds of action in 1986—ergo, an extra year.

Coach Lou Holtz may not be thrilled with the Notre Dame athletics board's policy of granting a fifth year only for medical or personal reasons—many coaches automatically redshirt as many true freshmen as possible to build depth for the future—but says he agrees with it.

"Eleven times a year—12 times, hopefully—I wish we redshirted," Holtz says. "But it doesn't blend in with Notre Dame's philosophy or with its purpose."

"We're the only school in America that doesn't redshirt, and I don't think there's any doubt that that has hurt us drastically on a Saturday afternoon."

"But I concur with Notre Dame's philosophy and belief. You have to understand why Notre Dame doesn't redshirt."

"Notre Dame says you come in here as a freshman and your schedule's set for you. You're going to take 'X' amount of hours. You have your choice what language you want to take or what science you want to take."

"At the end of your freshman year, if you're not even with your class for graduation—athletes, non-athletes—you go to summer school and you start out your sophomore year even with your class. Same thing at the end of your sophomore and junior years. So you start your senior year, you're in line for graduation."

"Now, the NCAA says to be eligible you basically have to be pursuing a worthwhile degree. But you've already graduated. Do we give somebody a position in graduate school and deny a worthy candidate a position just so he can play one semester of football? Or do we start playing games and stretching out their careers and change everything about Notre Dame?"

How important is redshirting?

Holtz says it has "changed the game more than any other thing in the past 25 years."

Like most schools, Notre Dame lacks depth.

"People have five classes, and they mature and grow and develop," Holtz said. "We have four classes. You need three classes to win; and when people redshirt, they have five classes to draw three."

Over the years, even the Gerry Faust years, Notre Dame generally was ranked near the top in recruiting

Drug testing based on suspicion is defensible

The Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
Excerpted from an editorial

The courts are not having much truck with mandatory random drug tests—in the workplace or on the playing field. Therefore, it was only prudent for the University of Oregon to retreat from the broadscale testing program for athletes it introduced in the fall of 1986.

The essence of the new program is that an athlete will be asked to submit a urine sample for drug testing only if and when something has happened that provides a basis for suspicion that he or she is taking drugs. That should meet the general requirements of the probable cause and individualized suspicion that relate to the Fourth Amendment's prohibitions against unreasonable search and seizure.

A state judge in San Jose recently issued a permanent injunction forbidding the NCAA from forcing Stanford University athletes to take drug tests.

The Stanford decision was based on a provision of the California constitution that makes more explicit mention of the right of privacy than the U.S. Constitution or the constitutions of many other states. Nonetheless, a right to privacy is implicit in most such documents and similar results are likely in lawsuits elsewhere.

There is no doubt that drug testing invades personal privacy and represents a form of search. We had hoped that the original Oregon program and similar programs set up around the country at the urging of the NCAA might survive legal challenge because of the obvious difference between a search for evidence to be used in criminal prosecution and a "search" in which the ultimate negative consequence would be merely loss of the right to play on a college team.

A defense based on that difference still might succeed; the definitive ruling on drug testing of athletes has not yet been issued. But in the meantime, it's clearly safest for Oregon institutions to assume otherwise.

It's hard to see how anyone could object to drug testing triggered only by tangible suspicion of a particular individual. Such a program should satisfy legal standards based on either a general right of privacy or the Fourth Amendment. Yet, it will retain a role for the university in discouraging the use of illicit drugs by student-athletes.

Those who are disappointed that a stronger testing program can't be employed should remember that the war against drugs won't be won by testing, broad or limited.

Ultimately, in the general population as well as within such highly specialized groups as college athletes, success will depend on enlightened voluntary rejection of drugs.

"The analogy I like to use (in describing women's athletics programs) is that we're adolescents in the world of sports. We're not children anymore, but we're not really adults. When you're an adolescent, you have to try all kinds of new things."

"But we've got to keep in perspective that we are in education as well as business. To really sell a program, you have to be competitive and you have to be seen as an honest program that has honest academic standards. The public is backing up and taking a look at us right now to see what we're all about, and people are looking for programs that really stand for something."

Sen. Bradley's bill on graduation rates misses the mark

By Robert H. Atwell
President, American Council on Education
Excerpted from a column

Concern over the well-being of student-athletes recently led Sen. Bill Bradley and two congressmen to introduce a bill they call the "Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act."

The bill would require colleges to gather statistics on the academic performance of athletes and non-athletes and provide them to recruits. The figures would be reported to the U.S. Department of Education, which would publish them for every institution and athletics conference that awards aid to student-athletes irrespective of financial need.

Let me outline several problems with this approach.

First, colleges, not the Federal government, should regulate athletics—individually and through their athletics conferences and national associations, the NCAA and NAIA. This bill ignores reform efforts now under way.

New rules require freshman athletes to meet minimum standards before they are allowed to compete, and colleges must report to the NCAA on the graduation rates of their athletes.

Individual conferences and institutions are raising their own requirements, and many are investing heavily in additional academic advising for athletes.

Second, the legislation is too broad and too expensive.

The graduation-rate problem is concentrated in the 200 or so colleges that play football and basketball at the highest levels of competition. Yet, the bill would make more than 1,000 institutions jump through a lot of bureaucratic hoops to solve a problem most of them simply don't have.

America's colleges and universities enroll more than 11 million undergraduates each year. Only a relative few receive grants-in-aid based on athletics ability.

However, this bill specifies that colleges make public the graduation rates of all students, as well as their fields of study, types of degrees and the average number of years required to graduate. Meeting these requirements would be an expensive proposition.

The problems of intercollegiate athletics are deep and systemic. They include an overemphasis on winning, an overconcern with spectator sports and facilities, a tolerance for academic compromise, the corrupting influence of money, and a tendency to link athletics accomplishments with institutional quality or prestige.

The Bradley bill deals with only one of the symptoms, not at all with the underlying pathology. In the long run, the cure will have to come from colleges themselves.

Entering its 12th year, CFA gaining influence, respect

By Tom Shatel
The Kansas City Star
Excerpted from an article

The CFA is here to stay and finally earning respect as it enters its 12th year.

"The CFA is in the strongest position ever," says NCAA Presidents Commission Chair Martin A. Massengale. Massengale is University of Nebraska, Lincoln, chancellor and former president of the CFA.

"The CFA has been in existence long enough to show it is an organization working for the best interests of college football. A lot of people thought it wanted football to predominate and have all kinds of new scholarships and rules and what have you. That's not the case. It's shown it has been a responsible organization," Massengale says.

The Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences still decline to join the 66-member group made up of major football conferences and independents; but they, along with the rest of Division I, have adopted and lived by legislation that originated at CFA conventions. Cases in point: "Proposition 48" (1982 meeting), satisfactory-progress rule (1980) and the coaches' recruiting calendar all came out of CFA committees.

And while the CFA was formed in 1976 to allow Division I-A football coaches to have a voice in forming NCAA legislation, CFA conventions are now attended by most athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives and chief executive officers.

"Both Wilford Bailey and Al Witte (NCAA president and Division I vice-president, respectively) told me that proposals emanating from the CFA are now being judged on merit and not origin," said Charles M. Neinas, who has been CFA executive director since leaving as Big Eight Conference commissioner in 1980. "I think there is recognition and acknowledgement that the CFA is not an anachronistic organization trying to eliminate rules. We take a more practical approach in the development of rules that can be enforceable and can meet the desired objectives."

That the CFA has had so much effect on NCAA rules is surprising to more than a few college officials.

"There's a general feeling within (the CFA) that what has been accomplished through the NCAA in the last 10 years may not have been accomplished by this time or not at all if the CFA were not here," Neinas said.

Future legislation already is in the works. At the last CFA convention, coaches and athletics directors discussed using players' complimentary tickets as a financial supplement to players. Freshman eligibility and refining "Proposition 48" also are constant topics.

There was another breakthrough at the CFA convention in June: Three Pac-10 athletics director and a UCLA assistant coach attended the meeting. All Big Ten directors reportedly have expressed interest in going to the convention.

Stanford athletics director Ferdinand A. Geiger, who attended the 1988 convention, said that there is more than a split between the CFA and the two conferences. A feeling of antagonism is developing between the Division I-A football schools and the rest of Division I. Perhaps the issue of forming a Division IV, with all the major football schools governing themselves (see The NCAA News, September 12, page 4), may bring the CFA and Pac-10 and Big Ten together.

Neinas is hoping so. The CFA has not stopped tooting the horn for its own division. In fact, Neinas raised the blood pressure of many officials from basketball conferences and schools that are non-Division I-A in football. At the June Presidents Commission National Forum in Orlando, he hinted that a Division I-A should extend to basketball. Consider a I-A basketball tournament in which Georgetown and Villanova couldn't play unless they added big-time football.

"I know the fact that I represented some major-college interests during the National Forum was not universally applauded," Neinas said. "There are certainly those skeptical of the CFA and its intentions. But as Dick Schultz said to me and the membership: The CFA is an organization to be copied, not feared."

Control over athletics programs is goal of SWC chief executives

By Terrence Stutz
The Dallas Morning News
Excerpted from an article

The presidents of several Southwest Athletic Conference schools, determined to end the football scandals that have scarred the conference, have been steadily increasing their control over athletics programs in recent months.

The presidents of Southern Methodist University; the University of Texas, Austin, and Texas Christian University all have instituted tough new policies and procedures to guard against further wrongdoing in their sports programs.

And the new president of Texas A&M University, William Mobley, appeared to be following in their footsteps even before NCAA sanctions against his school were announced.

Mobley has hired a compliance officer to monitor the athletics department and sent out a stern letter to staff members and A&M boosters warning them of the new emphasis on rules. He also has set up new auditing requirements and has revoked privileges of several boosters.

"Because of the degree of success of programs in the SWC, it has made their schools more noteworthy than other universities that have been guilty of the same infractions," said Richard Lapchick, director of the Northeastern University Center for the Study of Sport in Society.

"The Southwest Conference has an opportunity to take a leadership role in this area, to show other institutions how athletics programs should be operated," he said.

Lapchick said he has been particularly impressed by the actions of SMU president A. Kenneth Pye and athletics director Doug Single.

Single recently proposed the use of polygraph tests to ensure that staff members are adhering to the requirements of SMU and the NCAA—an idea that surely would have been ridiculed in the early 1980s.

"What SMU is doing is definitely improving the image of the Southwest Conference," Lapchick said.

TCU is another SWC school that has been given good marks for taking a troubled football program and cleaning it up.

Chancellor William E. Tucker said he feels confident that the changes made at TCU will head off problems similar to those that got his school in hot water with the NCAA a few years ago.

"My sense is there is a determination among presidents in the Southwest Conference to assure integrity in athletics, and I think that message is getting across to others—that the Southwest Conference means business and is seeking to get its house in order," Tucker said.

The president of the NCAA, Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn, said that in the last three years he has seen a trend of "more and more presidents assuming responsibility and making courageous decisions."

"And I say courageous," he added, "because it takes courage for a chief executive officer to make decisions that are not popular with the supporters of an institution.

"I think we are turning the corner to make control of athletics preventive rather than punitive," Bailey said.

At Texas, President William Cunningham initiated several policy changes last year and so impressed the NCAA that it dropped the second year of a two-year probation against the Longhorns' football program in June.

Among his actions was a directive calling for the immediate firing of any employee who knowingly violates an NCAA rule or covers it up. Another policy would make any athlete who knowingly violates a rule ineligible for sports at the university.

Pye credits both Cunningham and Tucker for helping to improve the tarnished image of the SWC through their actions.

And the SMU chief said all college presidents would do well to remember that no athletics program, no matter how successful, is really worthwhile "unless it is run on an honorable basis."

Let's accept professionalism in big-time collegiate sports

By Allen Guttman
The Chronicle of Higher Education
Excerpted from a column

Appeals to coaches and administrators to clean up intercollegiate athletics fell on deaf ears in the 1880s (when college athletics began developing characteristics of professionalism) and do so still.

Institutions unable to field amateur teams when "commercialism" meant 50-cent admission tickets are hardly likely to risk defeat on the gridiron or basketball court today, when the NCAA has a multiyear television contract worth nearly $300 million to divvy up among the winners.

Institutions that went "professional" when that meant paying a coach are hardly prepared to go amateur now, when a postseason bowl appearance can bring in $2 million and generate much more publicity than a flock of Nobel laureates on the faculty.

Calling for reform may be quixotic, but a practical alternative does exist. Although there are many reasons to prefer the European system of club-based sports, which provides an opportunity to participate to people of all ages, Americans seem to be hooked on interscholastic and intercollegiate sports.

In a society that views scholarly and scientific achievements as arcane and mysterious, athletes serve as visible symbols of alma mater with which everyone can identify. Most seem to agree with James Michener when he says (in "Sports in America") that institutions of higher learning have a sacred obligation to provide mass entertainment.

The answer, then, is to move in the direction taken by the International Olympic Committee. The IOC has amended its rules so that athletes can now earn millions of dollars without losing their eligibility to compete in the Olympic Games.

Would it not be equally reasonable to admit that most basketball and football players in the NCAA's top division are in fact professionals and pay them accordingly? The reasonable response to the apparently inevitable professionalization of big-time college sports clearly is by the so-called experts. Where have all those great players gone?

"Number one, I don't believe who had the best recruiting year in the country," Holtz says. "That goes according to who had great high school years. It's never based on who's going to get better, who's going to mature and the reasons why."

"But I do think if you will go check the recruiting list three and four years ago, you will not find Notre Dame in the top 10. And consequently, our junior-senior class from top to bottom is not real strong."

"When I first came here (1986), we were predominantly a freshman-junior-senior football team. Last year, we were predominantly a freshman-sophomore-senior football team. This year, we're predominantly a freshman-sophomore-junior football team without very many seniors on the first two teams."

But if any school in the country can survive the rigors of major-college football without redshirting, it would have to be Notre Dame. It won't be easy, though.

"We've got to," Holtz says. "We can and we will."

Since '70, Huskers' winning percentage is tops

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Many familiar names show up in the list of the nation's top winning teams in Division I-A football for the 1980s.

Nebraska, the decade's top winner by a comfortable margin, and five more top winners all won more than 80 percent of their games in the 1970s. Oklahoma enjoyed .877 success (102-13-3) in the 1970s, Alabama .863, Michigan .848, Nebraska .820, Penn State .814 and Ohio State .811.

Only Nebraska is above .800 for both decades a remarkable achievement. It is no wonder that the Cornhuskers are going for a 27th straight winning season. That would be a modern (since 1937) national record (Alabama and Penn State both had 26 in a row) going back through 1962, or Bob Devaney's first year as coach.

Georgia, Arizona State and Arkansas also were among the top winners of the 1970s. Three more teams on the 1980s list were above .600 and four more above .500 in the 1970s.

All that would suggest that major movement is quite difficult in the current era. Here are all the current I-A teams that have won at least 66 percent of their games in the 1980s, bowls included:

Division I-A:	W	L	T	'80s *Pct.	'70s *Pct.
1 Nebraska	82	16	0	.837	.820

It can be done

That means two teams did rise from the losing depths and what a pair. Iowa won at a miserable .275 pace (29-78-2) in the 1970s; but under Hayden Fry, the Hawkeyes are 17th at .686 in this decade. That is a jump of an amazing 411 percentage points. Miami (Florida) under Howard Schnellenberger and Jimmy Johnson has jumped 426 points from only .385 in the 1970s to .811 this decade.

A study of the decade's top winners in Divisions I-AA, II and III shows no other teams in NCAA football have shown 400 points improvement.

This means it can be done with the right people and right circumstances, but it is indeed tough to do. Undoubtedly, the gap is growing wider in some I-A conferences, as some lopsided scores show.

'Gap wider'

"My opinion is the gap between the haves and have-nots is getting wider," Arkansas athletics director Frank Broyles told Rick Bozich of the Louisville Courier-Journal. "I used to believe that parity was setting in (with the scholarship limits in effect), but now in leagues like the Big Eight, I see a situation that is not as competitive today as it was 10 or 15 years ago. If a team does not have a national reputation, it's harder to make a splash to get on national television."

Broyles wants his fellow ADs to study Iowa State coach Jim Walden's radical suggestion to lift the one-year scholarship limit so struggling teams could sign as many

Division I-A's leading rusher and all-purpose runner is Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders

Virginia Military's Mark Stock is No. 2 in I-AA all-purpose yards

Ernest Thompson, Georgia Southern, ranks second in I-AA scoring players as necessary to fill their 95-man rosters.

Parity or balance?

But Bozich argues that some parity does exist, or at least movement is possible. As an example, he cites Iowa, Miami (Florida) and Florida State, which was a lowly 4-29 in the three years before Bobby Bowden signed on in 1976. And he wonders how parity can be a myth when Nebraska, Southern California, Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Pittsburgh and Alabama, the six teams that won national championships in the 1970s, have combined for just one in this decade.

"And after a reasonable man all of national championships the Huskers just missed those in the 1980s and have not finished No. 1 since 1971 and 1970.

"I guess it's human nature to want something you haven't had," Osborne told Lee Barfknecht of the Omaha World-Herald, "and to accept as commonplace that which has occurred."

I-AA leaders

In Division I-AA, five top winners of the 1980s also were among the leaders in the 1970s. They are Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee State, Jackson State, Grambling and Delaware. Two more were above .600, two above .500. Here are all I-AA teams ers in the 1970s. They are UC Davis, North Dakota State, Minnesota-Duluth, Virginia Union, Puget Sound, Fort Valley State, Clarion, Millersville, Troy State and Angelo State. Seven more were above .500 but did not reach .600. Jim Sochor has led UC Davis over this entire span and recently got his 150th victory. Don Morton led North Dakota State the first five years of the 1980s, then came Earle Solomon for two and now Rocky Hager. Here are all Division II teams above 64 percent for the decade, play-offs included:

21 Indianapolis	50	27	5	.640	.559

* Ties computed as half won, half lost.

That leaves four leaders which were under .500 in the 1970s—North Alabama, Missouri-Rolla, Hampton and Mississippi College. Hampton shows the biggest jump, up 338 percentage points from just .327 in the 1970s. First, Ed Wyche turned things around and now Fred Freeman has kept it up.

Division III leaders

Augustana (Illinois), coached by Bob Reade since 1979, dominates Division III this decade and leads all NCAA teams with a remarkable .929 percentage for an 85-6-1 record that included four straight national titles, a feat that was unprecedented in college football history. Dayton broke the unbeaten streak at 60 games in the play-offs last year. Augustana won at a .600 pace in the 1970s.

Here are all the Division III teams above .700 for the decade, play-offs included:

Football notes

wrestles with that one," Bozich writes, "he'll have to explain this: How come Georgia, Clemson, Penn State, Miami, Brigham Young and Oklahoma, the national champs of the '80s, produced only nine top-five finishes—seven by Oklahoma—in the 1970s. If that's not parity, it at least stands as proof that movement is possible."

Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl, told Bozich: "It depends on how you define parity. If you're asking if there's across-the-board parity in college football, I'd have to say, 'No, there's not.' But if the question is, 'Is there greater balance today?' I'd have to argue that there is more in a number of examples. And you can start with the Southeastern Conference. The SEC is carnivorous."

Stability and tradition

The top-winners list shows the importance of coaching stability and a winning tradition. Most have had the same head coach during the decade and most are among the top winners of the last half-century. For instance, Penn State's Joe Paterno, Nebraska's Tom Osborne, Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, Georgia's Vince Dooley along with BYU's LaVell Edwards, UCLA's Terry Donahue, Clemson's Danny Ford, Washington's Don James, Michigan's Bo Schembechler, Florida State's Bowden, Auburn's Pat Dye, Iowa's Fry and Tennessee's Johnny Majors. Some like Bowden, Edwards and Fry started the tradition themselves. But we're not saying tradition alone made the others winners. Now we're back to the old chicken-and-egg argument.

Is there a breathless countdown at Nebraska to a record 27th straight winning season? Not at all. Nine or 10 victories is expected. The talk is

Participation in 1981, 1982 Division I-AA play-offs vacated; 1-2 record deleted.

In the 1970s, Tennessee State (.827) under the late John Merritt and Grambling under Eddie Robinson (.816) exceeded 80 percent but not in this decade, even though both rank high. Nebraska remains the only team in NCAA football—all four divisions—to top .800 in both decades. Roy Kidd at Eastern Kentucky, W.C. Gorden at Jackson State and Harold "Tubby" Raymond at Delaware are the long-time leaders at those schools.

Again proving it can be done, five colleges have risen from the losing depths to be among the 1980s leaders in I-AA—Eastern Illinois, Holy Cross, Northern Iowa, Middle Tennessee State and Northeast Louisiana.

A sixth, Georgia Southern, did not even have a football team in the 1970s, yet won two national I-AA championships this decade. Erk Russell led that success story. Interestingly, Darrell Mudra, the game's latest 200-game winner and now retired, helped revive both Eastern Illinois and Northern Iowa.

Division II leaders

In Division II, 10 top leaders of the 1980s also were among the lead-

Exact tie in percentage.

As the table shows, nine leaders of the 1980s also were 1970s leaders. They are Central (Iowa), Widener, Ithaca, Baldwin-Wallace, Wisconsin-LaCrosse, Wittenberg, Hope, Franklin and Marshall and St. John's (Minnesota). Fifteen more had winning records in the 1970s, seven of those above .600.

That leaves only six leaders that have losing marks in the 1970s—Wagner, Adrian, DePauw, Gettysburg, Hofstra and Union (New York). DePauw made the biggest jump at 391 points, led by Nick Mourouzis the last seven years.

More reports of defensive two-pointers scored on conversion attempts under the new rule have arrived in the mail, all in Divisions II and III. None has been scored so far in I-A and I-AA, with only two attempts in each division.

Springfield SID Ken Cerino reports sophomore defensive back Herman Rice scored one against Worcester Tech September 9, the night before the one by St. John's (New York), reported in the Notes in The NCAA News September 12. Rice picked up a kick blocked by Francis Papasadero.

Duquesne's Andrew Gonzales scored one on a blocked kick September 10 against Grove City. On the same day, Ohio Wesleyan's Randy Ross ran 100 yards with an interception of an Otterbein two-point pass, but the play was nullified by an official's inadvertent whistle.

Quotes of the week

The game September 17 at Clemson was tied at 21 with 1:31 left and it was fourth down and four for Florida State at its own 21-yard line when coach Bobby Bowden, who makes a riverboat gambler look cautious, called a trick play he calls "punt ruskie." If it doesn't work, Clemson has an easy game-winning field goal in the bag. The snap goes to Dayne Williams, one of two "up men," who puts the ball on the ground between LeRoy Butler's legs and takes off to the right. After waiting one second (it was supposed

Women's softball assistants Dori Stankewitz, a two-time Division II all-America and an academic all-America at Florida Southern, named at Barry. Jim Beitia selected at Oklahoma after four years on the staff at Cal State Sacramento.

Men's and women's swimming and diving Doug Backlund appointed men's and women's coach and aquatics director at American. The former Springfield all-America previously was head women's coach at Marist. Backlund succeeds Joe Rogers, who retired after 23 years. Peter Linn named men's coach at Eastern Michigan after leading Upper Arlington (Ohio) High School to three consecutive state championships. He replaces 21-year coach Mike Jones, who retired after leading the Hurons to 10 of the last 11 Mid-American Athletic Conference titles. Doug Hagen appointed men's and women's coach at Connecticut College, where he coached the men's team when it competed as a club entry from 1985 to 1987. Hagen succeeds Cliff Larrabee, who retired as head swim coach and assistant track coach after seven years at the school.

Women's swimming and diving assistant Jack Romine selected at Salem State, where he has been assistant professor in charge of aquatics since 1986.

Men's and women's tennis Brian Brown named men's coach at New England College, where he previously has coached cross country and Nordic skiing. Ken Kortbas appointed at Salem State. He previously has coached women's basketball and soccer at North Shore Community College in Massachusetts. Kortbas replaces Colleen Honahan, who resigned to pursue other interests. Jeff Wilson selected for the men's and women's teams at East Stroudsburg, where he will continue to serve as assistant men's basketball coach. Susan Norris appointed women's coach at Potsdam State. The former Norwich player coached at Endicott College during the 1985-86 season and currently is a student-life coordinator at Potsdam State. She replaces Cathy Klein, who stepped down to accept a counseling position with the Watertown, New York, school system. Larry Powell selected for the women's team at St. Anselm. He previously was an instructor at a health and fitness club in Milford, New Hampshire. Alex Sasvary named men's and women's coach at Stony Brook.

Men's and women's track and field

Anthony "Tony" Perrone appointed acting women's cross country and track coach at Columbia-Barnard. He is a former women's track coach at New York Tech, where he tutored 14 Division II all-Americans, and he also coached for 11 years at Archbishop Molloy High School in Queens, New York. Perrone fills in for Kate Moore, who is on leave as a Fulbright scholar in Finland, and he replaces interim coach Bill Hodge, who was named assistant men's and women's track and field coach at Bucknell.

Men's and women's track and field assistants Bob Schanbacher and Ken Sevinsky joined the Bucknell staff as part-time assistants for the men's and women's teams. Schanbacher is a teacher in the Lewisburg (Pennsylvania) Area School District, where he has been head track and field coach since 1973 and also has coached cross country. Sevinsky is a recent graduate of Bucknell, where he won four individual East Coast Conference titles. Mike Williams appointed at Michigan Tech, where he also will assist with women's basketball. Cliff Larrabee retired at Connecticut College, where he also stepped down as head men's and women's swimming coach.

Women's volleyball Maureen O'Flaherty named at West Chester, where she completed a three-year playing career in 1987. She served last season as an assistant at Wilmington College. Tod Cochran promoted from assistant at Connecticut College, where he has been on the staff for three seasons.

Wrestling Thomas C. Linder appointed at Ashland, where he also will coach men's soccer. He was a graduate assistant coach under Mark Osgood, his predecessor.

Wrestling assistant Gary Weisenstein selected to be graduate assistant coach at Ashland. He has coached at Watkins Memorial High School in Ohio.

STAFF

Academic support coordinator Margaret M. Zillioux named Maine's first full-time coordinator. Her 10 years of counseling experience include a stint as a counselor in the men's athletics program at Iowa.

Activities director Ann McCarron hired at St. Anselm. She was an assistant women's basketball coach at Plymouth State last season and also served as recreation and program coordinator at New England College.

Eligibility coordinator Linda Koch selected at New Mexico State after 15 years as assistant women's basketball coach at the school.

Equipment managers Pat Marcucillo appointed at Columbia, where he will replace Wyatt Webb as head manager at Baker Field Athletic Complex. Marcucillo was an equipment manager for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Houston Gamblers and New Jersey Generals before becoming general manager of a sporting goods franchise in Houston.

Equipment assistant Bill McGonegal named assistant equipment manager for Columbia's Marcellus Hartly Dodge Physical Fitness Center, succeeding Harvey Hutcherson. McGonegal previously was head men's basketball coach for two seasons at Long Island-Southampton.

Facilities coordinator Jim Murray appointed at New England College, where he also was promoted from assistant to head coach of baseball and men's basketball.

Sports information directors Lisa Markley named at New England College. She is a former assistant women's SID at New Hampshire who worked most recently as a communications assistant for the USA Amateur Boxing Federation. Robert Wilson selected at Drexel after serving as a public relations intern with the Big East Conference. Fitchburg State's Jay Young appointed assistant men's basketball coach at Salem State.

Sports information assistants Lisa Franson, associate SID at Florida State for the past eight years, selected to serve as an assistant in the Orange Bowl communications office. Will Wiberg appointed at Stony Brook, where he also will assist with women's soccer.

CWS set for Omaha next two years

The home of the College World Series for the past 39 years, Omaha, Nebraska, is assured of hosting the championship until at least 1990, said Dennis L. Poppe, NCAA director of men's championships and staff liaison to the NCAA Baseball Committee.

The 1989 College World Series, scheduled for June 2-10, already was designated for Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. However, the agreement between the NCAA and the corporation that sponsors the CWS automatically was extended for another year September 1, thus guaranteeing that Omaha also will be the site for the 1990 College World Series.

"The 1988 championship was the most successful ever," said Poppe. "I think it was indicative of the support of the Omaha community. We look forward to continuing with the agreement."

Next September 1, if both parties continue to agree, the contract again will be extended for one year, through 1991.

Jack Diesing, chairman of the Omaha sponsoring corporation, said there was a time when nobody doubted that Omaha would host the College World Series.

"We have always had a year-to-year contract with the NCAA; but in the past, I don't think much thought was given to the idea that the College World Series might not be played in Omaha," said Diesing. "Every September 1, the contract just automatically renewed."

After $3.4 million recently was spent on improvements and increased seating at Rosenblatt Stadium, the Omaha community sold approximately $640,000 worth of tickets.

"The College World Series has taken years to develop, and we are at a point now where it runs very smoothly," said Diesing.

"But as long as the enthusiasm remains the same for both the NCAA and the Omaha sponsoring corporation, we feel the College World Series will remain in Omaha for a long time."

The 1988 College World Series set a record with 132,698 fans attending the championship.

Dodd fund established

A scholarship fund honoring the late Georgia Institute of Technology football coach Bobby Dodd has been established, and Dodd's name will be added to Grant Field, athletics director Homer C. Rice has announced.

Dodd, who died June 21, was connected with Georgia Tech athletics program for 57 years and was head football coach from 1945 to 1966.

More funds available for antidrug programs

With a new infusion of funds, increased participation in the NCAA's Drug Education Speakers Bureau is likely in the coming year.

The drug-education budget approved by the Executive Committee will include additional funding for the speakers program, which began last year.

During the 1987-88 academic year, 12 member institutions' athletics departments were granted funds to pay honorariums for speakers at drug-education programs.

Already granted similar funding for September are Arizona State University, Fitchburg State College, La Salle University, Plymouth State College, San Jose State University and Wake Forest University.

Funding is available to member institutions or allied conferences for speaker honorariums not to exceed $1,500 per academic year. The funds may be used for a drug-education or wellness program for student-athletes or athletics personnel.

Speakers chosen by the institution or conference must be well-qualified to speak on drug-education or wellness topics. The national office also can assist in developing one-day or multiday training sessions by experts in drug education.

A drug-education grant request form must be submitted and approved prior to the event for which funding is requested, along with a resume or biography of each speaker. An evaluation form also must be completed by event participants and submitted to the national office before grant funds are released.

For grant request forms and other information about the Drug Education Speakers Bureau, contact Frank D. Uryasz, director of sports sciences, at the national office.

Colonial League will expand

The U.S. Military Academy and Fordham University will join the six-member Colonial League in 1990 when the league expands to include competition in other intercollegiate sports, league officials have announced.

The Colonial League, entering its third season of football competition, requires that its members award financial aid on a need basis and does not permit athletics grants-in-aid except under special circumstances, said league spokesman Todd Newcomb.

The founding members of the league are Bucknell University, Colgate University, Davidson College, Holy Cross College, Lafayette College and Lehigh University, all NCAA Division I-AA football schools.

Newcomb said only Holy Cross is permitted to award football scholarships, but that practice will end in 1991.

Army will remain in Division I-A football and continue to play baseball in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, Newcomb said.

Fordham will move up from Division III in football. The school will continue to award basketball grants for men and women until the class of 1992 enrolls, he said.

In two years, the Colonial League will expand its sports competition to include track, cross country, golf, lacrosse, soccer, tennis, baseball, basketball, swimming and diving, softball, field hockey, and volleyball.

Newcomb said Davidson would compete solely in football because of its distance from other league members.

Rules book contains error

Wrestling coaches are being made aware of an error in the illustrations section of the 1989 NCAA Wrestling Rules, which recently was mailed to member institutions sponsoring the sport.

The explanation for illustration No. 31 on page WR-68 should now read as follows:

"Takedown. As long as the offensive wrestler keeps his toes in bounds and on the mat, a takedown is awarded."

The new explanation reflects the definition of a takedown that was revised for 1989 and listed among the major rules changes on page WR-4. Rule 2-15 now allows the awarding of takedown points at the edge of the mat when control is established while at least the toes of the scoring contestant remain down on the mat in bounds. Previously, the rule did not specify the toes or feet as points of support for the awarding of takedown points.

Coaches, scorers and officials are being asked to make note of the change.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q How does the Legislation and Interpretations Committee function within the NCAA committee structure?

A As explained in NCAA Bylaw 12-3(j) (page 172, 1988-89 NCAA Manual), the Legislation and Interpretations Committee is composed of 10 members—four from Division I and three each from Divisions II and III. Three positions are reserved for men and three for women. Four positions may be filled by a man or a woman. At least three Council members always are included on the committee. It acts jointly to determine interpretations of NCAA legislation applicable to all divisions. In reviewing such matters, only two members each from Divisions II and III participate. When reviewing a "federated" matter (i.e., an issue that relates only to one NCAA membership division), all committee members for a given division participate in the determination of an interpretation that applies only to that division. The committee also classifies all legislation enacted by the membership that amends the constitution and bylaws and accurately incorporates such legislation therein. The committee does not have the authority to alter an existing Council interpretation, and its decisions are binding unless overturned upon appeal to the Council at its next regularly scheduled meeting or to the annual Convention.

The Atlantic Coast Conference has begun construction on a $900,000 headquarters building in Greensboro, North Carolina, with completion scheduled for March. The 7,300-square-foot building will be on a 2.5-acre lakeside site.

New ACC offices under construction

The Atlantic Coast Conference has started construction on a one-story, 7,300-square-foot headquarters building near the intersection of I-40 and Wendover Avenue in Greensboro, North Carolina. Ground-breaking was held September 2, and construction was started four days later.

The $900,000 structure will be in the Landmark Center Park. Commissioner Eugene F. Corrigan said the building should be completed by next March.

The building will be the first stand-alone structure to house ACC headquarters since the conference was founded in May 1953. The late James H. Weaver, the first ACC commissioner, set up offices in the King Cotton Hotel, now demolished, July 1, 1954. The offices were moved July 1, 1966, to 338 North Elm Street and then to the present location at 2100-N West Cornwallis Drive in April 1980.

The ACC employs a full-time staff of 12. "We simply outgrew our present quarters, and the new building will give us the room we need to operate much more efficiently," Corrigan said. "We will have the space to conduct conference meetings on the premises and do a lot of other things we haven't been able to do in the past."

The new building has a 2.5-acre lakeside site. J. Hyatt Hammon Associates Inc. is the architect, and W. H. Weaver Construction Co. is the contractor. Both are Greensboro firms.

CoSIDA honors Penn State wrestler

Pennsylvania State University wrestler James Martin has been named the first GTE Academic All-America of the Year. Martin was selected in voting by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Martin won the 1988 Division I wrestling title at 126 pounds. Entering his final season, the premedicine major has a 112-8-1 career record and a grade-point average of 3.960 (4.000) scale.

During the 1987-88 academic year, a finalist for Academic All-America of the Year was selected from each of the 16 academic all-America teams named by CoSIDA and GTE (eight each in the university and college divisions). Martin was selected from that group after being named to the university division men's at-large squad.

Following are the other finalists for the award.

University division

Baseball—Wesley Bliven, Santa

James Martin

Clara University, 3.860 GPA in physics; men's basketball—Michael Smith, Brigham Young University, 3.670 in Spanish; women's basketball—Michelle Flamoe, Oregon State University, 4.000 in science education; football—Kip Corrington, Texas A&M University, 3.980 in philosophy; women's softball—Lori Sippel, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 3.750 in special education; women's volleyball—Teri McGrath, University of the Pacific, 3.670 in computer engineering; women's at large—Jacque Struckhoff (cross country), Kansas State University, 4.000 in nutrition science.

College division

Baseball—Greg Slappey, Georgia Southwestern College, 3.880 in biology; men's basketball—Brian Branson, Elon College, 4.000 in business; women's basketball—Lisa Walters, Mankato State University, 3.980 in elementary education; football—Grant Jones, Denison University, 3.990 in premedicine; women's softball—Marinka Biscaglia, St. Thomas University (Florida), 3.700 in business; women's volleyball—Dawn Dunlop, U.S. Air Force Academy, 3.780 in engineering sciences; men's at large—John Waters (soccer), Baldwin-Wallace College, 3.970 in chemistry; women's at large—Marcy Erickson (tennis), College of St. Benedict, 4.000 in mathematics/liberal studies.

Hornung denied request for rehearing

Kentucky's Supreme Court has denied Paul Hornung's request for a rehearing in a suit brought against the Association more than six years ago.

Hornung filed the request after a unanimous (7-0) June 9 decision by the state court overturned a $1.1 million jury award to him. He originally filed suit July 20, 1982, in Jefferson County Circuit Court after the NCAA failed to approve him as an announcer on college football telecasts because of his past ties to organized gambling.

Hornung claimed defamation and interference with present and prospective contractual relationships, and he sought $1 million in actual damages and $2 million in punitive damages from the Association. Hornung at the same time initiated similar litigation in Johnson County (Kansas) District Court (the Association's national office is located in Johnson County).

A ruling was made to defer any Kansas proceedings pending disposition of the Kentucky litigation, which still could be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

After initiation of the litigation, a motion was filed in the Kentucky court on behalf of individually named defendants for dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction. The Association also filed a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the Association. The court denied that motion, as well as a later appeal by the NCAA.

Following a U.S. Supreme Court decision that ended the Association's involvement in regular-season college football telecasts, cross motions were filed in Kentucky. Hornung's sought a summary judgment on the basis of antitrust law, and the Association's sought summary judgments on the plaintiff's claims of tortious (wrongful) interference of contractual relationships of employment and tortious interference with prospective business and contractual relationships.

The circuit court denied Hornung's motion, granted the NCAA summary judgment on the allegations of interference of contractual relationships, and denied the Association's request for summary judgment on allegations of interference with prospective business and contractual relationships.

At that point, the court had agreed with NCAA arguments that disapproving of Hornung as a college football announcer had not interfered with other contracts Hornung had in effect at the time. It did not agree, however, that possible future contracts and business prospects had not been harmed.

The jury awarded no actual damages, but Hornung was awarded $160,000 in consequential damages and $1 million in punitive damages. An NCAA motion to set aside the verdict was denied, as was an appeal to the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Last October 27, the state supreme court granted the Association's motion for discretionary review. Briefs were filed, and oral argument were heard this spring.

Program dropped

Michigan Technological University's women's cross country program has been suspended, it has been announced by Huskies athletics director Ted Kearly.

The program, which was started just last season, was suspended because of a lack of participants, according to Kearly.

Kearly said some of the women involved with the program last year will compete on a club basis.

Michigan Tech will continue to sponsor men's cross country.

Arizona State starting fullback Kirk Wendorf has an unusual double major, English and biomedical engineering, offering him endless employment opportunities. "Oddly enough," he says, "knee surgery my freshman year made me refocus my goals from athletic to academic. Discipline is very important to academic success. New Kansas coach Glen Mason, with freshmen comprising more than half of his traveling squad (34 of 60): "I told the trainer to stock up on dramamine — many of these kids have never been on an airplane before."

The Mare's Shoe

Both Murray State and Tennessee-Martin have women chief executive officers. Kala Stroup is president of Murray State, and Margaret Perry is chancellor of Tennessee-Martin. That prompted the creation two years ago of a unique traveling trophy, the Mare's Shoe. Both have equestrian-related nicknames—the Murray State Racers (evolving from Thoroughbreds and the UTM Pacers (as in trotting race horses). (Craig Bohnert, Murray State SID)

Carter pleads guilty to mail fraud, obstruction of justice

Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Cris Carter pleaded guilty September 16 to charges of mail fraud and obstruction of justice after agreeing to cooperate with prosecutors investigating illegal payments from sports agents to college athletes.

Carter, 22, a second-year pro from Ohio State University entered the plea during his arraignment before U.S. District Judge Brian Duff, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Howard Pearl.

"As Cris told the court, he pleaded guilty because he was in fact guilty," said Carter's defense attorney, David Bohan.

"He regrets his involvement and wants to put this matter behind him," Bohan said. "He has agreed to cooperate with the government investigation... in any way in which he's called upon."

Bohan said he had advised Carter to refuse comment on his case until it has been settled.

Carter was released on a personal recognizance bond, and the judge agreed to let him travel as necessary for Eagles games, the Associated Press reported.

The Eagles player was indicted in August along with New York-based agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, who were charged with mail fraud, racketeering, extortion and perjury.

Agent Dave Lueddeke of Sherman Oaks, California, also was indicted.

Walters and Bloom, scheduled to go on trial February 27, are accused of offering college athletes cash, cars, clothing and trips in exchange for signed—in some cases post-dated—agreements allowing the two agents to represent them in professional contract negotiations. They are accused of resorting to threats when inducements of cash or goods failed.

Carter's sentencing was tentatively set for March 27, Pearl said.

"As part of the plea arrangement, the government has agreed to inform the judge of the nature and the extent of his (Carter's) cooperation" before sentencing, he said.

The charges against him carry a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine, Pearl said.

Bohan said the government is to recommend some period of imprisonment for Carter under terms of the plea agreement.

Carter could also be made to refund about $4,500 that he received from Ohio State for tuition, room and board, Pearl said.

At his arraignment, Carter pleaded guilty to charges that he defrauded the university by falsely certifying that he was eligible to compete on the football team and receive an athletics grants-in-aid during the 1986 season, Pearl said. He also admitted taking $5,000 from Bloom and Walters for signing a representation agreement with them, and accepting additional monthly payments.

Carter also pleaded guilty to charges that he obstructed justice by concealing from the FBI, Federal prosecutors and a grand jury a $5,000 payment for Lueddeke, Pearl said.

Lueddeke, who was indicted in August on perjury and obstruction of justice charges, will be arraigned September 23, the prosecutor said.

Forty-three college athletes who signed with Walters and Bloom avoided prosecution with pretrial agreements to perform community service, reimburse a portion of their grants and testify if needed.

Track dedicated

The University of North Carolina, Wilmington, dedicated the Harold Greene Track and Field Complex September 17 in conjunction with the annual Seahawk Invitational Cross Country meet.

The complex features a synthetic-surfaced, all-weather track with eight lanes. A second phase of construction will add seating. Initial construction on the $750,000 facility was started one year ago.

Director of Intercollegiate Athletics

Miami University is seeking a new Director of Intercollegiate Athletics. After more than 25 years of superior leadership, the current Director has announced his retirement effective December 31, 1988.

The Director of Intercollegiate Athletics reports directly to the President of the University, is responsible for supervision of 11 men's and 8 women's varsity sports and administers a successful Division I program within the rules, regulations and policies established by Miami University, the Mid-American Conference, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and, in the case of ice hockey, the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

Miami is looking for someone with a Master's degree or equivalent, experienced in coaching at the collegiate level, and a personal commitment to absolute integrity in the operation and administration of the University's athletic programs. It is vital that candidates be committed to the philosophies of the Mid-American Conference and to the maintenance of Division I status for its members.

Candidates must be able to demonstrate the ability to provide leadership and direction for coaches and other athletic staff members and should possess the skills and personality to succeed in such areas as alumni relations, fund raising and public speaking. Candidates also must be able to communicate effectively with faculty, staff, students, alumni and others among the University's varied constituencies. Knowledge of Miami, its traditions and its heritage is desired.

Nominations and applications should be postmarked no later than October 1, 1988, and sent to Dr. Paul G. Pearson, President, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio 45056. Candidates should be prepared to provide the names of at least 3 references from whom letters of recommendations may be sought. The search will remain open until a well-qualified appointee is identified. The appointment will be effective January 1, 1989, or as soon thereafter as possible.

Hart shows fund-raising skills in first days as AD

Jim Hart, recently appointed athletics director at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, raised $86,000 for the school's athletics program during his first 50 days on the job—$36,000 more than he said he would.

Hart announced his "First Fifty Club" even before his appointment was ratified by the school's board of trustees, stating intentions of generating $50,000 in donations to Saluki athletics during his first 50 days as AD. Hart officially was named July 5, and his first 50 days ended August 31—with $86,100 in donations.

SIU Foundation President Rex Ball urged Hart to continue his efforts due to the "obvious popularity of the drive and the manner in which contributors have responded to associating with a Jim Hart-led campaign." Thus was born the "Jim Hart First Year Club," which will be open to membership through next June 30.

"We still have a challenge ahead of us," Hart said. "We've only won the first battle... the war is still on." Hart alluded to the fact that although the $86,100 exceeds the total donated to athletics a year ago, it falls considerably short of the $200,000 needed for Saluki teams to fulfill their existing schedules.

Yale University graduate Joel E. Smilow has donated $1 million to endow his alma mater's head football coaching position—creating the first endowed position in Yale's athletics department. Carmen Cozza, in his 24th season at the school, now will be known as the Joel E. Smilow Coach of Football.

"Excellence in football is not a core objective of Yale or any other great institution of higher education," said Smilow, a 1954 graduate who is president, chairman and chief executive officer of Playtex, Inc. "However, it is my belief that football is an integral part of the very broad objective of attracting, educating and motivating persons with the potential to become tomorrow's leaders, irrespective of the field of endeavor they choose to pursue."

As an undergraduate, Smilow broadcast Yale football games as sports director for WYBC, the college radio station.

According to an Associated Press report, endowed coaching positions are rare but not unique. Cornell University's head football coaching position has been endowed since 1982, and the University of Rochester received a gift to endow an assistant football coach position about a year ago.

California State University, Sacramento, may have the only coach in the country who commutes daily by air.

Men's basketball assistant Dave Holmgren, a former U.S. Navy pilot (he flew F-4 Phantom jets), flies a private plane to the Sacramento campus every day from his home in Yuba City (about 40 miles).

After logging the flight hours necessary for an FAA license, Holmgren plans to use it in his recruiting efforts for the school.

Jim Hart, athletics director at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, displays some of the contributions to the athletics department during a fund-raising drive he initiated as he assumed his position.

A 100-inning softball game featuring the women's teams from the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University was played September 18 in Norman. Dubbed a softball-a-thon, the event was staged to raise funds for the Sooner women's softball program.

Michelle Thomas, Oklahoma's head coach, uses funds generated by the marathon to purchase items not covered by Stadium, and youngsters had a chance to "mine" the area, recover the treasure and win prizes.

A new 10-speed bicycle went to the lucky kid who found the black "shooter," and a $50 cash prize was awarded to the finder of an orange marble hidden in the sand.

More than 300 youngsters took part, and attendance at the game exceeded 4,500. UWS student John Wicklein and other members of the Superior Skydivers parachuted into the stadium, in game jerseys and carrying the game ball, landing on the 50-yard line.

More Report Cards: Ohio Valley Conference Commissioner James E. Delany announced earlier this month that 308 student-athletes from member institutions were named to the OVC commissioner's honor roll by earning a grade-point average of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale) during 1987-88. Eleven earned 4.000s. Delany also named Morehead State University winner of the OVC academic achievement banner for 1987-88.

Trivia Answer: The University of Georgia is the only institution that has sent student-athletes to the 1984 and 1988 Olympics as members of the U.S. basketball teams. The men are Vern Fleming (1984) and Willie Anderson (1988), and the women are Teresa Edwards (1984 and 1988) and Katrina McClain (1988).

the athletics department's budget. "We began this game three years ago as a fun way to raise additional funds for the program," she explained.

Money raised last year was used to buy new uniforms and other equipment. Proceeds from the 1988 event will go toward batting cages.

Deb Krieg, sports information director at the University of Wisconsin, Superior, came up with a unique children's promotion for the school's September 3, season-opening football game against the University of Minnesota, Duluth. More than 1,000 "collector" marbles bearing a UWS logo were buried in five yards of sand just inside Ole Haugrud

'Elite eight' play-off format set in Division II men's basketball

The Division II Men's Basketball Championship in 1989 will feature an "elite eight" play-off format designed to enhance the championship atmosphere of the tournament and increase attendance.

The championship is scheduled March 23 to 25 in Springfield, Massachusetts. The team payout will be increased through a $100,000 outlay from the Division II block grant fund.

The format, which was approved by the NCAA Executive Committee upon recommendation by the Division II Men's Basketball Committee, is expected to cut transportation costs by several thousand dollars.

Previously, regional champions played at on-campus quarterfinal sites. Had the regional champions played at the championship site last season, a transportation savings of $13,500 would have been realized, according to Dennis L. Poppe, NCAA director of men's championships.

Additionally, moving the quarterfinal games to the championship site responds to critics who claim that an unfair competitive advantage is provided the host team at on-campus play-off sites, Poppe said.

Poppe said that the Division II Men's Basketball Committee and the NCAA championships staff believe that an eight-team championship in Springfield also will increase attendance significantly, primarily because the larger tournament now will have broader appeal to basketball fans. Regional or "home-team" representation also is guaranteed with the new format.

The revised format will provide more student-athletes with a championship experience, Poppe said, and it will eliminate one weekend from the play-off schedule with quarterfinals being played at the championship site.

An increase in travel squad size from 16 to 19 has been approved.

The Executive Committee also has approved the Springfield Civic Center as the site for the 1990 and 1991 championships, with Springfield College and American International College serving as host institutions.

The quarterfinals, semifinals, third-place and championship games will now be conducted on a Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Executive Committee authorized the Division II men's committee to place strong emphasis on regional representation when considering at-large teams in the championship-selection process, with the intent of selecting four teams from each of the eight regions. If conclusive data are available, however, the committee will be allowed to select the best team available, which could affect the number of teams selected from each region.

The following conferences and associations have been awarded automatic qualification for the 1989 tournament: California Collegiate Athletic, Central Intercollegiate Athletic, Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic, Great Lakes Valley, Great Northwest, Gulf South, Lone Star, Midwest Collegiate, New England Collegiate, North Central Intercollegiate, Northern California Athletic, Northeast-10, Pennsylvania State Athletic, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic and Sunshine.

Stadium will be opened in 1991

Southeastern Conference member Mississippi State University will provide the opening-day opposition in 1991 when the California State University, Fullerton, football program begins playing in its new on-campus facility.

Mississippi State will launch an inaugural five-game home schedule September 7 in the 10,000-seat structure, which has a February 1989, construction starting date.

"We are excited to schedule a team from a league the calibre of the Southeastern Conference for the stadium's inaugural game," said Fullerton athletics director Edward O. Carroll. "This is just another value of an on-campus facility—the ability to attract name opponents and play a full-fledged home schedule."

Fullerton will bracket Mississippi State's visit with a pair of games against the Bulldogs in Starkville. The Titans play in 41,000-seat Scott Field September 15, 1990, and Oc-
