U.S. Supreme Court backs NCAA in Tarkanian case

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that the NCAA cannot violate a person's constitutional rights because it is a private organization and not subject to due-process requirements of the U.S. Constitution.

In a ruling announced December 12, the Supreme Court held that the NCAA did not violate University of Nevada, Las Vegas, head men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian's constitutional rights when it recommended that his school suspend him for two years for NCAA rules violations.

The Supreme Court said the NCAA is not a state agent and therefore is not subject to due-process requirements in its investigations of rules violations and subsequent penalties imposed.

"We are pleased that the U.S. Supreme Court decided that the NCAA did not act as a state agent in this case," said Richard D. Schultz, Association executive director. "The court reaffirmed that the membership of the NCAA has the right to enact and enforce legislation that is binding upon each member.

"This decision will, we hope, discourage lawsuits regarding alleged violations of Federal constitutional rights," Schultz said. "We always have believed that the enforcement procedures set in place by the membership provide ample due process."

NCAA counsel John J. Kitchin of Kansas City, Missouri, said the decision also could prove helpful in other Association activities.

"As far as being sued for claimed violations of the Federal Constitution, this decision should be helpful because most of those cases (particularly concerning the NCAA drug-testing program) deal with search and seizure under the Fourth Amendment, or the due-process amendment."

The Supreme Court laid to rest the question of whether the NCAA can be enjoined for some "perceived violations of U.S. Constitutional rights," the NCAA counsel said.

However, he noted that some state constitutions, including the California constitution, do provide

NCAA Today's Top Six award winners announced

Student-athletes representing five different sports make up this year's Today's Top Six.

They are Dylann Duncan, Brigham Young University; Suzanne McConnell, Pennsylvania State University; Faith Elizabeth "Betsy" Mitchell, University of Texas, Austin; Anthony Phillips, University of Oklahoma; Thomas Schlesinger, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and Mark Stepnoski, University of Pittsburgh.

These six individuals and six Silver Anniversary award winners make up this year's College Athletics Top XII. The group will be recognized January 9 at the 24th annual honors luncheon in San Francisco.

Following are biographical sketches of the Today's Top Six:

Dylann Duncan

Duncan broke the American Volleyball Coaches Association career kill record in 1988. She has been a four-year starter at Brigham Young and has earned High Country Athletic Conference honors, and she holds numerous school records. An all-America, Duncan trained and competed with the USA "B" team in June 1988.

She has maintained a 3.3150 grade-point average while earning a degree in electrical engineering. An academic all-America, she helped organize Special Olympics half-time entertainment for Brigham Young's 1988 homecoming. She was an organizer of the 1988 Utah Summer Special Olympics.

Suzanne McConnell

A member of the gold-medal winning 1988 U.S. Olympic women's basketball team, McConnell is the NCAA's all-time assists leader. She is an all-America and won the 1988 Frances Pomeroy Naismith Hall of Fame award as the nation's top female player who is under 5 feet 6 inches. She holds 22 records at Penn State.

McConnell earned a degree in elementary education and maintained a 3.020 grade-point average. She was a popular speaker/presenter in the community and was the subject of a roast that raised $1,000 for Pennsylvania Special Olympics.

Faith Elizabeth Mitchell

A three-time NCAA champion in both the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events, Mitchell was a member of three NCAA championship teams. She has been captain of the U.S. national team since 1985 and won two medals at the 1984 Olympics. Mitchell finished fourth in the 100-meter backstroke in 1988. She set a world record in the 200-

Commission advisory panel named

An 11-member advisory committee has been appointed by the NCAA Presidents Commission to review the Association's governance process, including the changes in that process that were proposed by University of Vermont President Lattie F. Coor at the June National Forum session.

John W. Ryan, president emeritus of Indiana University, has agreed to chair the committee, which will attempt to schedule its first meeting soon after the NCAA Convention in January.

Named to serve with Ryan were:

- Wilford S. Bailey, who will complete his two-year term as president of the NCAA next month and also will retire as a professor and faculty athletics representative at Auburn University at that time.

- Stan Bates, retired commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference.

- Alan J. Chapman, professor of engineering at Rice University, a former NCAA president and the Association's parliamentarian since 1975.

- William E. "Bud" Davis, former chancellor of the Oregon higher education system and a former president of the University of New Mexico and Idaho State University.

- Stephen Horn, former president of California State University, Long Beach.

- Gwendolyn Norrell, former faculty athletics representative at Michigan State University and the first woman to serve as an elected NCAA officer (Division I vice-president in 1983 and 1984).

- Otis A. Singletary, retired president of the University of Kentucky

Manual adoption, selection criteria for faculty reps among proposals

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of six articles presenting the legislative proposals to be considered at the Association's 1989 Convention. This article reviews the "general" and recruiting groupings.)

The grouping may be called "general," but major changes will occur if several of the proposals under that heading are adopted at the January Convention.

For example:

- The first item in the group has received considerable coverage already—the resolution calling for approval of the revised NCAA Manual, as developed by the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification. It represents the most massive overhaul of the Association's legislation in history.

- Another proposal—submitted by institutions whose faculty athletics representatives are members of the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association—would impact on the selection of future faculty reps at a number of institutions. It would require appointment of a faculty representative at every member institution, and anyone designated as a new faculty representative after the January Convention would have to hold faculty rank, could not hold any position in the athletics department and would be required to certify student-athlete eligibility.

- Still another major change is envisioned by the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, which would permit the Council to grant a waiver of anything in the NCAA bylaws if it felt such action was warranted "by equitable circumstances that are consistent with the intent" of the bylaws.

Committee structures also are treated in the general grouping, and if all of them meet with the voters' approval, the Association will have:

- Its first-ever Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, a 16-member group that would review and react

See Manual, page 8

Members' opinions sought in NCAA structure review

The Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure has begun its work by emphasizing its intention to receive and consider the opinions of all of the membership constituencies.

Meeting for the first time November 30 and December 1 in Chicago, the committee pledged to:

- Encourage the membership to contact members of the committee with opinions and suggestions regarding the membership structure;

- Distribute a brief questionnaire at the January NCAA Convention as another means of obtaining membership views;

- Invite individuals representing various viewpoints to appear before the committee in a February 1989 meeting; and

- Conduct research into the characteristics of institutions in the various membership divisions and subdivisions.

The committee agreed to outline for the membership the general topics that it is discussing but to emphasize that it will brainstorm

Automatic-qualification process is approved in principle

Meeting December 5 in Kansas City, the NCAA Executive Committee took the first steps toward implementation of an automatic-qualifier selection process for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Approved in principle, effective with the 1991 championship, was a policy that permits the Division I Men's Basketball Committee to select 30 automatic-qualifying conferences solely on the basis of basketball criteria evaluated for the season just completed (i.e., automatic-qualifying conferences for the 1991 championship will be selected on the basis of their performance during the 1990-91 season).

Readers of The NCAA News will find a detailed explanation of the proposed criteria in the December 21 issue. Members of the Executive Committee have requested that administrators at Division I conferences submit, by March 15, 1989, suggestions and comments regarding the criteria to the Association's national office (to the attention of Edward E. Bozik, chair of the Division I Championships Committee).

Policy would become effective with the 1991 Division I Men's Basketball Championship

Final action on the selection process and criteria will take place during the May 1989 meetings of the Division I Championships Committee and the Executive Committee.

Recommendations concerning the selection of automatic-qualifying conferences were made by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee as a result of action taken by the Executive Committee last August. At that time, the latter panel voted to extend (through the 1998 chamthat institutions not be assigned to their home courts (i.e., courts on which they play more than half of their regular-season games) for any session of the tournament effective with the 1989 play-offs.

In its August meeting, the Executive Committee had approved a similar recommendation for implementation in 1991 and urged the basketball committee to consider applying the policy beginning with the 1989 tournament.

The Executive Committee also affirmed that an institution or conference may serve as host to the Division I men's Final Four no more than once every four years.

Honorariums to increase

The Executive Committee endorsed in concept a proposal to increase the amounts of honorariums paid to institutions that host NCAA championships competition. Before taking final action, however, the panel will review in its May 1989 meeting the possibility of establishing different levels of honorarium payments.

Championships honorariums have not been adjusted since 1981-82.

The Executive Committee also approved proposed plans for implementation of a regional qualifying system for use in determining the field for the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships.

Effective in 1990, the current East and Midwest regions will combine to form the East region, the current Midwest and West regions will combine to form the West region, and qualifying tournaments will be held in each region.

Ten teams will compete in each regional, along with all-around and individual-event performers who have not qualified as a team or, in the case of individual-event performers, as all-arounders.

Four teams, 12 all-arounders and 12 individual-event performers in each event will advance to the championships from each regional.

The Executive Committee also approved a recommendation that regional competition in Division I men's baseball return to a four-day format. 1988 regionals had been conducted under a five-day format.

Numerous championships dates and sites were reviewed and approved by the Executive Committee, which also received several reports—among them a recap of the to-date progress on development of the National Collegiate Foundation.

A complete summary of all Executive Committee actions will appear in the December 21 issue of the News.

Women's athletics committee opposes financial aid plan

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics has gone on record as opposing Convention Proposal No. 39, which would establish need-based financial aid restrictions in Divisions I and II, because it believes the proposal has not been given sufficient study to determine if it would have any disproportionate effect on women's athletics programs.

Phyllis L. Howlett, committee chair and associate commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, said her committee had not had time to study the proposal in detail before it was placed on the Convention agenda by the Presidents Commission.

The measure has come to be known as the Likins proposal after its developer, Peter Likins, president of Lehigh University and a Presidents Commission member.

Howlett also said her committee believes the proposal has not had enough study throughout the Association membership proportionate to the significant effect it could have on financial aid.

In a December 12 telephone conference, the Committee on Women's Athletics also voted to oppose Proposal No. 122, which would permit a one-year probationary period for institutions failing to meet minimum sports sponsorship criteria for their respective divisions once in every 10-year period.

Howlett said the committee viewed the proposal as a potential loophole for allowing institutions not to sponsor the required number of women's sports. Howlett said the committee obviously would oppose any measure that could jeopardize or weaken women's athletics programs.

The committee selected eight proposals as particularly worthy of support—Proposal Nos. 3, 9, 24, 30, 34, 77, 80 and 89.

Of that group, Proposal No. 3, which would permit member institutions to provide student-athletes counseling expenses related to the treatment of eating disorders, has been a high priority of the Committee on Women's Athletics since its inception two years ago.

Proposal No. 9 would permit a member conference's full-time senior woman administrator and a member conference's or member institution's full-time athletics administrator who is a member of an ethnic minority to serve on the NCAA Council and the Executive Committee.

Proposal No. 24 concerns the designation by the Council of non-

NCAA sports as counting toward meeting sports sponsorship criteria. Proposal No. 30, which was proposed by the women's committee, would delete a requirement that a member of that committee be an undergraduate student. Proposal No. 34 would increase the size of the Women's Soccer Committee from six to 12 members. Proposal No. 77 would establish an NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

Proposal No. 80 would establish a joint NCAA Men's and Women's Soccer Rules Committee, and Proposal No. 89 concerns adjustments in contact and evaluation periods in Division I women's basketball.

Program to honor student-athletes

A program honoring the academic achievements of its student-athletes has been instituted at Boston University.

The formation of a student-athlete honor roll has been announced by Charles F. Taylor, athletics director.

Certificates will be presented at the end of each semester to those student-athletes who have earned a B (at least a 3.000 grade-point average) in a full course load of four academic courses.

pionship) the moratorium placed on the tournament's field (64 teams) in August 1984, with the understanding that the bracket would comprise not more than 30 automatic qualifiers and not fewer than 34 at-large teams.

In recommending the adoption of a process to determine annually the 30 automatic-qualifying conferences, the Division I Men's Basketball Committee noted that in 1991, more than 30 conferences may be eligible for consideration.

No more home court

In other action relating to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the Executive Committee approved a recommendation

Rule to deter fighting, abuse of umpires adopted for NCAA baseball

The NCAA Administrative Committee, acting on behalf of the Association's Executive Committee, has approved a new rule for baseball designed to curb physical abuse of umpires and fighting among opposing players.

The rule, which was recommended to the Executive Committee by the NCAA Baseball Committee, states that if a player, coach or team representative is ejected from a contest because of physically abusing an official or fighting an opposing player, the following penalties will be enforced:

1. For the first offense by an individual, ejection plus suspension from the team's next contest.
2. For a second offense by an individual in the same season, ejection plus suspension from the team's next two games.

3. For a third offense by an individual in the same season, ejection and suspension for the remainder of the season, including postseason competition.

Certain stipulations of the rule include:

- After ejection, the offending individual must leave the field and dugout area immediately and is not allowed to communicate with his team or the umpires. Failure to abide by this ruling will result in forfeiture of the game.
- Suspended personnel shall not be in uniform, be allowed in any team area or perform any team duty.
- It is the responsibility of the institution's head coach and director of athletics to administer and enforce the suspension penalty. If a suspended player or coach is found to have participated in a game for which he was suspended, the game will be forfeited by the offending team.

• If the penalty occurs during the team's last game of the season, a one-game penalty will be assessed at the beginning of the next official NCAA spring season.

The physical abuse/fighting penalty will not be in effect for an ejection involving arguing or verbal abuse. However, umpires will have jurisdiction to impose penalties for fighting from the beginning of the game until the players have left the playing area (stadium) following the final game of the day.

NCAA Bylaw 2-3—college all-star football and basketball contests

NCAA member institutions are reminded that under the provisions of Bylaw 2-3, no member institution shall permit its student-athletes (i.e., those who were members of its intercollegiate team in the sport in question) to compete in or allow its facilities to be utilized for any college all-star basketball or football contest unless the contest is approved by the NCAA Special Events Committee and certified by the NCAA Council. Further, Bylaw 2-3(a) limits participation in a certified all-star game to enrolled or graduated student-athletes who have exhausted their seasons of eligibility in the sport in question but who were eligible to participate on their institution's intercollegiate team in that sport during that season. Finally, Bylaw 2-3(d) requires that the management of a certified all-star game shall obtain permission from an institution's director of athletics before inviting a student-athlete from that institution to compete in the all-star game.

The following all-star football games have received NCAA certification for the current academic year:

Blue/Gray All-Star Football Classic, December 25, 1988, Montgomery Alabama; East/West Football Classic, January 15, 1989, Palo Alto, California; Hula Bowl, January 7, 1989, Honolulu, Hawaii; Ricoh Japan Bowl, January 16, 1989, Yokohama, Japan.

NCAA Case No. 352—financial aid adjustment—professional income

Case No. 352 (page 419, 1988-89 NCAA Manual) describes a situation in which an institution awards athletically related financial aid to a student-athlete who also receives compensation during the same academic year from participation in an athletics event (e.g., all-star football contest). In this situation, the institution shall adjust its grant-in-aid so that the total amount received for participation in the athletics event when coupled with institutional financial aid does not exceed commonly accepted educational expenses for the balance of the academic year. If it appears that a student-athlete's income from participation in the athletics event will equal or exceed commonly accepted educational expenses, the institution shall terminate all institutional aid. Payments credited to a student-athlete's account that are not refundable need not become the student's obligation.

NCAA Constitution 3-1(c)—signing with agents

NCAA member institutions are reminded that according to the provisions of Constitution 3-1(c), any individual who contracts or who has ever contracted orally or in writing to be represented by an agent in the marketing of the individual's athletics ability or reputation in a sport no longer shall be eligible for intercollegiate athletics in that sport. Additionally, Bylaw 2-2(f) indicates that the eligibility rules governing individual participation in postseason football contests shall be as demanding as those governing participation in NCAA-sponsored meets and tournaments. Bylaw 2-3(i) requires that the management of a college all-star football or basketball contest shall conduct the game in accordance with the Association's principles for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics as set forth in Article 3 of the constitution and interpretations relating thereto. Accordingly, a student-athlete who signs with an agent prior to his member institution's participation in a postseason bowl contest or his individual participation in an NCAA-certified college all-star football or basketball contest shall be ineligible to participate in that contest.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. due-process protection from private organizations and institutions as well as state agencies.

When the NCAA imposed a two-year probation on the Nevada-Las Vegas basketball program in 1977, it recommended that the school suspend Tarkanian or face the possibility of additional penalties.

The school complied, but Tarkanian obtained a court order blocking the suspension.

Later, the Nevada Supreme Court ruled that the NCAA had violated Tarkanian's constitutional rights by failing to afford him due process during the investigation of rules

Minnix promoted by NCAA

Two staff changes have been announced by the Association's enforcement department.

Robert J. Minnix has been promoted to the position of director of enforcement, and Joseph W. Buffington has resigned as an enforcement representative to return to private law practice.

Minnix has been an enforcement representative since joining the national office staff in September 1975.

He is a graduate of the University of Washington law school and played intercollegiate football as an undergraduate at the University of Notre Dame.

Robert J. Minnix

Minnix led the Fighting Irish in rushing for the 1971 season.

Buffington is a 1978 graduate of Auburn University. He received his law degree from the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, in 1983. He joined the NCAA enforcement staff in September 1986.

those issues and will reach no conclusions until views of the membership are received and considered.

Topics being reviewed by the committee include the following:

- The current structure, criteria and size of Division I and its subdivisions, including any possible ramifications of structural change on the Division I Men's Basketball Championship and the Division I-A football classification.

- The feasibility of a Division I-AAA football classification.

- Possible greater federation in Association procedures and activities.

infractions.

The Supreme Court last February agreed to review the Nevada decision.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens, writing for the majority, said the university does have governmental power because it is a state-operated school, but the NCAA, in seeking to discipline Tarkanian, was acting independently from the institution.

"The NCAA and UNLV acted much more like adversaries than like partners engaged in a dispassionate search for the truth" in investigating Tarkanian, Stevens wrote.

The NCAA "is more correctly characterized as an agent of its remaining members, which, as competitors of UNLV, had an interest in the effective and even-handed enforcement of the NCAA's recruitment standards," Stevens said.

"The NCAA is properly viewed as a private actor at odds with the state when it represents the interest of its entire membership in an investigation of one public university," Justice Stevens continued.

Stevens was joined in the majority decision by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy. Dissenting were Justices Byron R. White, William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Sandra Day O'Connor.

The Supreme Court returned the case to Nevada courts, where Tarkanian was awarded reimbursement for legal expenses, for further deliberation.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions will review the decision by the Supreme Court during its February 3-5 meeting in San Diego.

D. Alan Williams, committee chair and faculty athletics representative at the University of Virginia, said he expected it would take some time before legal teams on all sides had digested the ruling.

"I would think we still face a substantial amount of legal scrutiny before it comes to our full attention again," Williams said.

in 1986 and 1987.

"There has been increasing concern in recent years, especially among presidents and chancellors of NCAA member institutions, regarding the NCAA's governance process," Martin A. Massengale, chancellor, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and chair of the Presidents Commission, said in announcing the appointments.

Among those concerns, he cited the belief of some chief executive officers that their role in legislative procedures at NCAA Conventions is not as effective as it might be, the format and atmosphere off the Convention itself, and the tendency of the legislative procedures to "emphasize minutiae at the expense of reasoned decisions on major policy issues."

The Commission discussed those matters in its fall meeting, when it also reviewed Coor's proposal from the June National Forum program. It then authorized the Commission officers to appoint an advisory committee to study the matter and report to the Commission in 1989. The advisory committee also is authorized to recommend the use of outside counsel in its study, if it wishes.

Coor's proposal would differentiate between policy issues and implementation issues in NCAA legislation, with chief executive officers or their specifically designated representatives voting on the former and with the Convention handling the latter as it does now.

"Our executive committee discussed the matter with the NCAA Administrative Committee," Massengale said, "and it was agreed that the advisory committee should include, insofar as possible, former chief executive officers, former Commission members, former athletics administrators and faculty athletics representatives, and former NCAA officers.

"The intent was to select individuals who, for the most part, are not immediately involved in the NCAA process but who have extensive experience with that process."

It is anticipated that the advisory committee will submit a preliminary report to the Commission by April and a detailed report by October.

He maintained a 3.995 grade-point average and earned a degree in chemistry. An academic all-America, he was a member of the Gold Key Scholastic Society. He also earned Big Eight all-academic honors.

Mark Stepnoski

A finalist for the Outland Trophy and a Lombardi Award candidate as an offensive lineman, Stepnoski was a team captain. He was named to the 1988 Kodak Coaches All-America team.

He has maintained a 3.400 grade-point average while earning a degree in communications. A National Football Foundation and College Football Hall of Fame scholar-athlete, he works with Special Olympics and the Veterans Administration Hospital visitation program and is a Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh volunteer.

Study reflects new interest in athletes

USA Today
Excerpted from an editorial

The results (of the NCAA Presidents Commission study of student-athletes) certainly are no surprise. The real — and promising — news is that the presidents of the NCAA's member universities were willing to spend $1.75 million to study student-athletes' problems.

It suggests a sincere interest in educating student-athletes — an interest rarely seen just a few years ago.

Since the university presidents started focusing on the NCAA, reform has been a watchword.

Student-athletes must now meet tougher academic standards, and colleges that break the rules face severe penalties.

That's real, meaningful progress.

Now, with this report and others that are to follow, colleges can address the basic issue: helping athletes learn.

Contradicting stereotypes, the report found that athletes want that help. They are not just an apathetic mob of physical education majors.

More than 93 percent of athletes say a degree is important.

And they need the help they seek.

Athletes' grades are lower than those of other students. They are on probation more often. They are more likely to feel isolated and mentally abused. They have wildly inaccurate ideas about their chances of succeeding in pro sports.

Those are problems colleges must address....

Better counseling is one answer; increased tutoring is another. Colleges also must reduce the burden of participating in sports, particularly for freshmen. Ending out-of-season practices is one way.

Answers are available. And, at last, colleges are seeking them. That's good news for the athletes from (Oklahoma State University Heisman Trophy winner) Barry Sanders to the lowliest freshman scrub. It's good news for anyone who believes educating students is what college is about.

Meaningful changes not likely to occur

By Furman Bisher
The Atlanta Journal
Excerpted from a column

The Atlanta Journal headlined a story (November 30) that said college football and basketball players spend more time on their sport than they do in the classroom, that they make lower grades and fewer graduate (in comparison to the rest of the student body). Big news. That's like saying roosters crow, pigs oink and babies cry.

It cost the Presidents Commission $1.75 million to find this out. The Presidents Commission, the guys who are supposed to be in command on campus.

"This is truly a landmark study," one of them said.

It will become one if something is done about it, beginning with those 94 (of 104 Division I-A) ADs who would turn college athletics departments into high-powered corporations doing fast-track business on the television level (by recommending a 12th regular-season football game and supporting the development of a marketing and promotions program for football).

The root of all evil in college athletics is the pursuit of money, the infiltration of television, which has, in truth, become the real Director of College Athletics. "When do you want us to kick off, master?"

Campaigners cry out that the athletes should be getting some of the gravy. That's what it comes down to, paying the player 100 bucks or so a month. A pittance. Merely an invitation to bigger crimes. It is a forever self-propelling system of sin that no one has shown the guts to tackle seriously. They only nibble at it.

Don't look for any change until the college prime-time athletes form their own union and tell the would-be corporations they work for, "Listen, Mr. Prez or Mr. AD, it's time we got a piece of the action."

That's when the colleges may finally walk to the mirror and take a good look at themselves. Maybe.

Student-athletes need more time for study

The Kansas City Star
Excerpted from an editorial

The secret is out! Athletes who are involved in the two biggest money-making sports for universities spend more time on the playing field or court than they do trying to complete a degree.

Football and basketball players are majoring in their sports, not academics, according to a new study done for the NCAA Presidents Commission. That fact won't surprise many people who think today's universities emphasize win-at-all-costs sports programs.

So what happens now? The NCAA says its member institutions will have to digest the information, then possibly act in Giving incoming freshmen funding for summer school is the right move

Larry Fitzmorris, director of academic center
Louisiana State University
The Associated Press

"A... piece of (NCAA) legislation that is going to affect athletics a great deal is a move to allow us to have the freshmen come to summer school that first summer right out of high school and let us give them a scholarship to pay for it.

"It has long been my feeling that we have been remiss in not doing that because it is a summer that is relatively free from any pressures of football or basketball, and it gives the academicians a chance to perhaps deal with some of the deficiencies that we see in their academics.

"We are going to be pushing very hard for legislation to allow the universities to accept these young people in their first summers. I feel that would go a long way toward helping us in our graduation rates."

"Athletics is the most visible part of today's university. That is most unfortunate, in my view.

"A school's worth never should be measured by how well kids in short pants toss balls through hoops. But that is our sad reality, given our mesmerization by TV money.

"The best thing would be to tell the networks to save the zillions for another inane sitcom and return to some form of sanity.

"But if our universities can't bring themselves to do that, then a chancellor had best be looking down both "Everything reeks of money — from coaches' salaries, to money made by teams, to television revenues. And then, we tell the kids, 'Hey, guys, you're really in this for the education.'

YES clinic draws praise

To the Editor:

As chair of the Men's International/Olympic Committee of United States Water Polo Inc. and as water polo coach of the University of California, Berkeley, I want to thank the NCAA for its outstanding program, Youth Education through Sports.

To say that the (water polo) clinic was well-received would be an understatement. The quality of the organization and the theme of the clinic were outstanding and upbeat. The coaches who participated in the clinic were very impressed. Comments such as: "This is great," "The NCAA does it right," "The kids and coaches are having a ball," and "We ought to do more of this kind of thing," reflected the enthusiasm for the event. These positive reactions reaffirm the crucial role that sport can play in youth development.

We in the sport of water polo thank you.

Sanders represents a celebration of right moral choices

The Wichita Eagle-Beacon
Excerpted from an editorial

In more than a century of collegiate football, no player has accomplished on the field what Wichitan Barry Sanders did this year at Oklahoma State University.

Yet, he will be among the least immediately recognizable of winners of the coveted Heisman Trophy, a testament to his remarkable skills and a condemnation of the value system of intercollegiate football.

Oklahoma State didn't spend big dollars hyping him, and Sanders did as little as possible to draw attention to himself.

Barry Sanders simply had the best single season of any collegian in history.

The 917 voters couldn't ignore his feat, despite the shrill efforts of drum-beaters for other contenders who performed in more prominent venues in programs that attract national television broadcasts and persuade or allow their athletes to look and act like rock stars.

That's not the most satisfying thing about the selection, however. The best part is Barry Sanders, the man. The product of a large, cohesive family, he is as solid as his gridiron records. The feet beneath those powerful legs are set firmly in the Midwestern ethic, and the mind atop those muscular shoulders has its priorities straight.

The Heisman wasn't his goal; getting a degree is. Where does he want to go after college? "To heaven." What does he think about playing his final game of the year in Japan? He'll miss a week of classes.

Barry Sanders isn't a "good interview" in the current parlance. He's serious and self-effacing. He doesn't wear gold or diamond earrings. He doesn't perform a gloating victory dance in the end zone that he has entered more times than any other football player in one season; he simply hands the ball to the referee. He knows that he didn't arrive in the end zone by himself, and he makes that clear.

Barry Sanders didn't arrive where he is in life alone, and he knows that, too. His success on the field and his grace off it emerge from a background of parental nurturing, solid personal and family values, and bedrock effort and determination.

Not only collegiate sports but American society at large should celebrate that such values still can be recognized.

Student-athletes

two or three years.

Several steps are possible. Eliminating spring football is the best. It's a ridiculous exercise that primarily exists at many universities simply because "the other guy" does it. It should be ended.

The practice of allowing freshmen to play basketball and football also has to be reevaluated. Colleges already have tried it both ways, keeping freshmen from playing as well as allowing them to do so, which is the current practice.

But the NCAA study indicates there might be a lot of good reasons to let freshmen get their feet on the ground academically before plunging into football or basketball full-time.

There is no need to do away with college basketball or football. But there are plenty of reasons to place a little less emphasis on the games and a little more on studying.

NCAA study commended

Omaha World-Herald
Excerpted from an editorial

How commendable of the NCAA to commission a study of how college athletes balance the demands of the classroom and the playing field.

With that information now available, the next step might be to determine what is a proper balance between academics and athletics.

Averages can be deceiving. For some students, devoting 30 hours or more each week to athletics might not be excessive—considering that in addition to physical fitness and recreation, sports is the equivalent of a part-time job for scholarship athletes.

For other students, particularly those who have trouble keeping up in the classroom, 30 hours a week might be too much.

Academics and athletics need not be mutually exclusive.

When it comes to a choice, however, students who don't have time for both Shakespeare and sports would do best to remember that college is primarily for learning.

Study suggests the inevitable

By Ken Denlinger
The Washington Post
Excerpted from a column

In total, the NCAA report (on the survey of student-athletes) is much more sad than hopeful—and also slightly scary in one area.

It allows most of us to still wonder how long the schools will keep throwing out so much money to reel in the obvious and devote so little to reform.

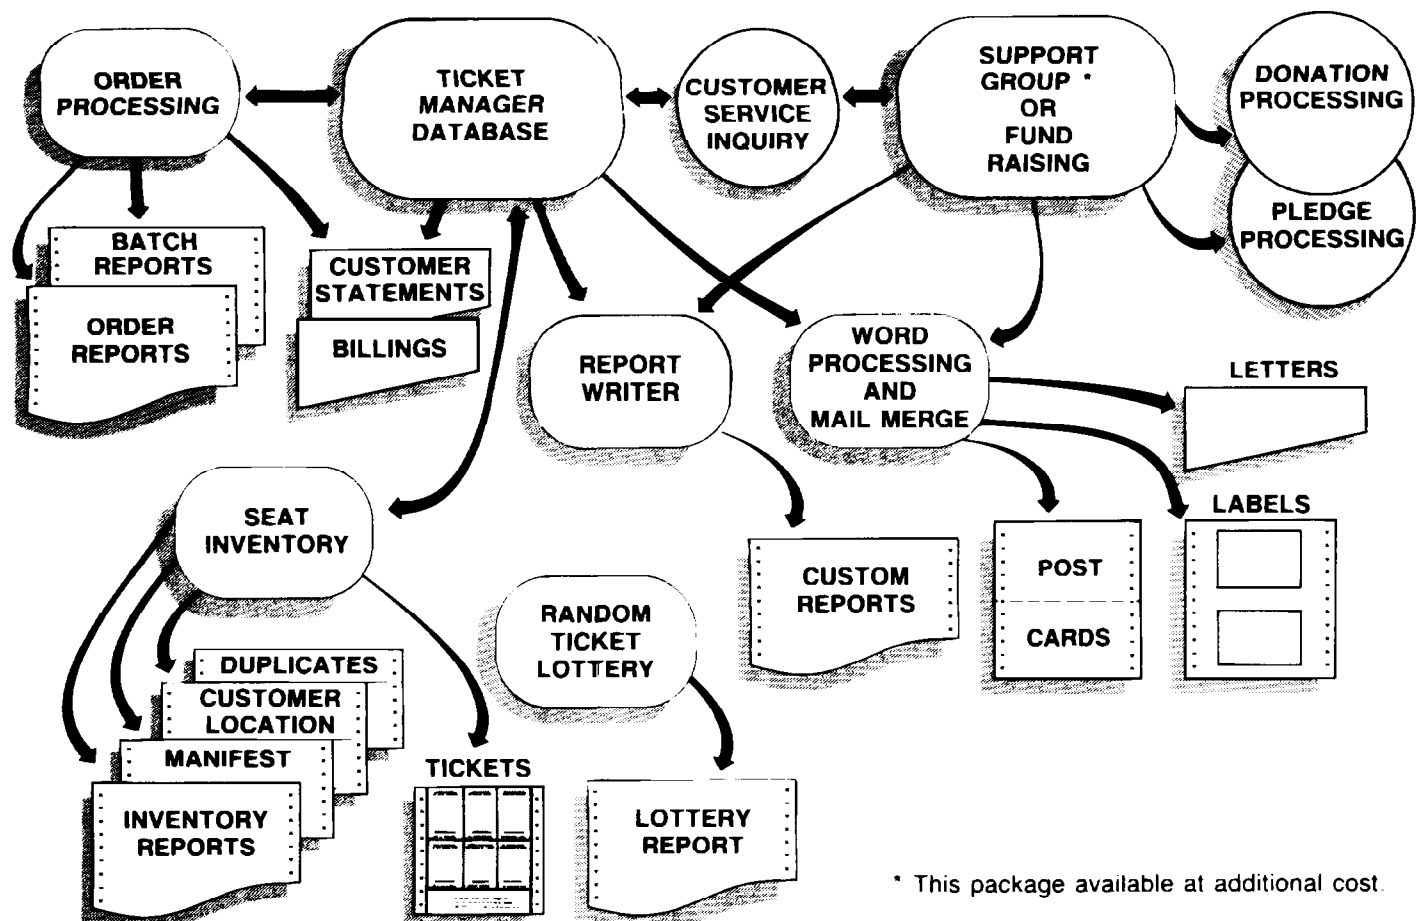

The most intriguing numbers were the least explored. They were the ones that showed 20 percent of football and basketball players reported at least one incident of physical abuse, and nearly 50 percent reported at least one incident of mental abuse.

Also, slightly more than eight percent of those in nonathletics activities reported at least one incident of physical abuse, and slightly less than 39 percent reported at least one incident of mental abuse.

So, maybe we have some band directors and drama coaches also more stern than they need be.

This uncertainty does suggest the inevitable: at least one more study.

Bison stampede to fourth crown behind Satter, Simdorn

Tony Satter rushed for 151 yards and Chris Simdorn scored twice to lead North Dakota State to a 35-21 victory over Portland State and the school's fourth NCAA Division II Football Championship title in six years.

The victory capped a 14-0 season for the Bison, who won the championship in 1983, 1985 and 1986 and finished second in the 1981 and 1984 championships.

"This feels awfully good, especially when you have a team with 18 seniors on it," North Dakota State coach Rocky Hager said. "We've been a family."

North Dakota State's rushing attack offset a 333-yard passing performance by Portland State quarterback Chris Crawford, who was runner-up to Texas A&I running back Johnny Bailey in balloting for the Harlon Hill Award, which honors the division's outstanding player. Portland State, 11-3-1, also finished second in last year's championship.

"We played seven straight great games," Portland State coach Pokey Allen said. "It's a little disappointing that we didn't win, but I'm very proud of these guys."

North Dakota State's powerful ground game hit on all cylinders from the start of the 16th annual championship, which fielded 16 teams for the first time.

On the Bison's first possession in the title game, Simdorn, a 6-0, 181-pound quarterback, capped a 67-yard, 15-play drive that consumed 8:40 of the first quarter with a one-yard touchdown run. All 15 plays were running plays.

Portland State started the second period with a 13-play drive to North Dakota State's goal line but failed to score on four straight running attempts.

Crawford got the Vikings into the end zone on their next possession with a 45-yard touchdown pass to Greg Evers for a short-lived 7-7 tie.

North Dakota State quarterback Chris Simdorn spent more time running the football than he did throwing it. He gained 65 yards and scored twice on the ground, while completing the only pass he attempted for 17 yards.

Satter capped the Bison's ensuing five-play drive with a 70-yard run against the grain with 3:08 left in the first half that put North Dakota State on top, 14-7.

Portland State again evened the score with a 16-yard touchdown pass from Crawford to Tim Corrigan just before the half, but North Dakota State's relentless ground game, which at times was operated by senior quarterback Brian Owen, was too much for Portland State to handle in the second half.

Satter covered the last 10 yards of a nine-play, 63-yard drive on North Dakota State's first possession of the second half to extend the Bison's lead to 21-14.

North Dakota State increased its lead to 28-14 after cornerback Todd Zabell intercepted a pass with 2:37 left in the quarter. Simdorn promptly led the Bison 37 yards and scored on the drive's fourth play on a one-yard plunge.

Reserve running back Blaine Toshner put the game out of reach with an 11-yard touchdown run that put the Bison ahead 35-14 with 2:13 left in the game.

Portland State rounded out the game's scoring with an 11-yard touchdown pass from Crawford to Barry Naone with 1:01 left in the game.

A crowd of 6,763 attended the game, which was played in Florence, Alabama.

After 14 years, Ithaca gets gridiron revenge

It took 14 years, but Ithaca finally got even with Central (Iowa).

Ithaca avenged a 10-8 defeat by Central in the 1974 NCAA Division III Football Championship with a 39-24 victory over the Flying Dutchmen December 10 at the 16th annual Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl in Phenix City, Alabama.

Ithaca, winner of the 1979 championship and a play-off finalist in five other championships, completed the season with a 13-1 record.

"The last one was a great thing for us because it was the first one," Ithaca coach Jim Butterfield said of Ithaca's 1979 title. "But this one is just as sweet."

"To think these kids can win a championship is really amazing. I didn't have any idea at the first of the season, but I knew they would be good. They accomplished many things because of leadership and togetherness."

Bomber running backs Paul Parker and Mike Scott accomplished a few feats in the championship game.

Parker rushed for 208 yards and three touchdowns, and Scott ran for 92 yards and returned a kickoff 84 yards for a touchdown.

Parker, who was voted the game's most outstanding player, scored on runs of 23, 26 and four yards.

"That's as fine a pair of running backs that I have seen in my experience in Division III," long-time Central coach Ron Schipper said.

The Bombers never trailed in the game. They jumped to a 15-0 lead in the second quarter on Parker's 23-yard run and a subsequent two-point conversion and a five-yard run by Todd Wilkowski.

Ithaca's Matt Sullivan added a 42-yard field goal in the third quarter to round out the Bombers' scoring.

Lance Kooiker, converted from tight end to quarterback after the Flying Dutchmen lost their top two quarterbacks to injury, completed 14 of 35 passes for 233 yards and two touchdowns; however, he suffered three interceptions.

Central, 11-2, also got a 41-yard field goal from Rob Phipps and a six-yard run from John Barten to complete its scoring.

An estimated crowd of 4,000 attended the game.

Quarterback dilemma unique for Schipper

Ron Schipper admits he has never experienced anything like it in 37 years of coaching football.

Midway through this season, his Central (Iowa) team was rolling along behind one of the most potent offenses in Division III. Quarterback Steve Flynn led the division in passing efficiency, and the undefeated Flying Dutchmen were one of the highest scoring teams in the nation.

Then, during Central's victory over Dubuque in the eighth game of the season, Flynn complained of a sore neck. Following the game, it was discovered that the junior had suffered a hairline fracture of a vertebra. Flynn's season was over.

Flynn's backup, Craig Thomas, took over and led Central into its last game of the regular season, against regionally ranked Simpson. Central lost not only the game, but another quarterback. Thomas finished the game with some loose teeth; when he had them checked, he discovered that his jaw was broken in two places.

Suddenly, the quarterbacks at Central were falling like dominos.

With an 8-1 record, Central still qualified for the play-offs. Rich Schulte, considered primarily a running quarterback, stepped into the signal-calling breach for the first-round game against Concordia-Moorhead, but he had trouble moving the team through the air. The Flying Dutchmen, who also have enjoyed a strong defense all season, managed to run back a punt to win the game, 7-0, but the team's offense clearly had lost much of its punch.

In the second round, Schulte and Central fell behind Wisconsin-Whitewater, 10-0. After managing only two first downs in the first half, coach Schipper needed a quarterback to come off the bench and stir things up a bit.

Unfortunately, Central didn't have a fourth-string quarterback.

The Dutchmen, however, did have a backup tight end who had played a little quarterback in high school and who had practiced a little as Schulte's backup.

As Central's luck (or lack of it) would have it, sophomore Lance Kooiker was making his first start at tight end that day, replacing yet another injured player. Before the day was over, Kooiker also would make his collegiate debut at quarterback.

Replacing Schulte in the third quarter, Kooiker rallied Central to a 13-10 lead in the fourth quarter, throwing for a touchdown in the process. Wisconsin-Whitewater tied the game with a field goal with 1:16 to go, but Kooiker again drove the team down the field, and Central won on a field goal to advance to the Division III semifinals.

Unlike Central's three "real" quarterbacks, who are sprint-out, option-type runners, Kooiker is strictly a drop-back passer at 6-foot-4, 230 pounds. Apparently, that was just what the Dutchmen needed for their

Portland State women claim volleyball crown

Jenny Norlin's 18 kills led Portland State past defending champion Cal State Northridge in straight games for the Vikings' third Division II Women's Volleyball Championship title in the past five years.

Shelley Rumberger added 14 kills and Cathy Kuntz had 19 digs for the Vikings, who won all nine of the games they played during the December 9-11 tournament hosted by North Dakota State.

Portland State, registering a .331 hitting percentage for the tournament, downed Cal State Northridge, 15-6, 15-8, 15-6.

On its way to the final match-up, Portland State downed New Haven and went on to a 15-13, 15-1, 15-9 semifinal win over Regis (Colorado).

Meanwhile, Cal State Northridge beat Central Missouri State before defeating North Dakota State, 15-8, 12-15, 15-9, 15-7, in the other semifinal match. Central Missouri State was last year's second-place finisher.

North Dakota State defeated Regis (Colorado), 15-11, 13-15, 9-15, 16-14, 15-11, for third-place honors.

Named to the all-tournament team were Kuntz, Norlin and Andy Thompson, Portland State; Karen Langston, Cal State Northridge; Brenda Schultz, North Dakota State, and Karen Solis, Tampa.

double-overtime victory in the semis over Augustana (Illinois). Kooiker completed 19 of 36 passes for 279 yards—surpassing even Flynn's best game of the season—as Central won, 23-17, and advanced to last weekend's Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl showdown against Ithaca.

Even as he continued to learn the team's offense—he occasionally called plays that aren't in the team's playbook while checking off at the line of scrimmage—Kooiker displayed the confidence of a veteran, says Central sports information director Larry Happel.

"He's never afraid," Happel said. "He comes out throwing."

As Central prepared for the title game against Ithaca, Schipper was as pleased as he could be with his team. He was saying, with considerable emotion for a veteran coach, that he was proud of his Flying Dutchmen—no matter how the season ends.

to intercollegiate athletics topics referred to it by the Council and other Association entities;

- A new Legislative Review Committee, which would work in the proposed new legislative calendars to review and refine legislative proposals. It also would incorporate legislation and interpretations in the new NCAA Manual, except that the Special Committee on De-regulation and Rules Simplification would handle that task for the 1989-90 Manual because the new committee could not be formed that quickly.

- Separate playing-rules committees in baseball, ice hockey and soccer. Currently, basketball and football are the only sports in which the playing-rules function is separated from the championships-administration function.

Recruiting

The recruiting grouping is a melange of 22 suggested adjustments, with the majority emanating from the Recruiting Committee or NCAA division steering committees. Only nine come from groups of member institutions.

The lead item in the grouping would define a "prospective student-athlete" as any individual who has started classes for the ninth grade.

Several of the proposals sponsored by institutions represent attempts to expand the contact and evaluation periods in Division II basketball and football.

There also is a recommendation by the Recruiting Committee that the three permissible paid campus visits for Division I basketball prospects that were eliminated in 1987 be restored.

Following are summaries of the 13 proposals in the "general" grouping and 22 under the recruiting title, as they appear in the Official Notice of the Convention:

General

No. 69: Resolution to adopt the revised NCAA Manual, effective upon adjournment of the 1989 Convention.

No. 70: Resolution authorizing the NCAA Council to interpret, revise and publish in The NCAA News any necessary changes in language in the revised Manual if evidence clearly indicates that the meaning of the legislation was changed during the revision.

No. 71: Require that each member institution appoint a faculty athletics representative and specify that those designated after January 12, 1989, to serve in the capacity must hold faculty rank, shall not hold any position in the athletics department and must be responsible for certification of athletics eligibility.

No. 72: Permit the NCAA Council, between annual Conventions, to grant waivers of any of the Association's bylaws, if it thinks the circumstance involved is consistent with the intent of the bylaw involved.

No. 73: Require each member institution to file promptly with the NCAA enforcement department and its conference office, if any, a written report regarding all violations of NCAA legislation in which it is involved.

No. 74: Permit the Association to include in its voluntary, off-season steroid testing program student-athletes in sports other than football.

No. 75: Increase from one to five members the minimum sponsorship requirement for an amendment to an amendment.

No. 76: Establish a five-member Legislative Review Committee.

No. 77: Establish a 16-member Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

No. 78: Separate the playing-rules and championships functions in baseball by appointing a new Baseball Rules Committee and Divisions I, II and III Baseball Committees, comparable to the current committee structure in basketball.

No. 79: Separate the playing-rules and championships functions in men's ice hockey by appointing a new Men's Ice Hockey Rules Committee and Divisions I and III Men's Ice Hockey Committees.

Faculty reps to discuss legislation

Faculty athletics representatives from NCAA member institutions will have an opportunity to discuss NCAA legislative proposals of interest during the 1989 Faculty Athletics Representatives Association Forum, which will be held January 7 in San Francisco.

Moderating those discussion sessions, which have been organized by Association membership divisions, will be the following faculty reps:

Division I—Charles W. Ehrhardt, Florida State University; Division II—Iris G. Brown, Norfolk State University, and Division III—George Andrews, Oberlin College.

New faculty reps will be the focus of a workshop that will kick off the forum. Chaired by Ann Uhler, Texas Woman's University, the session on the role of FARs will include panelists Jerry L. Kingston, Arizona State University; Bonnie Slatton, University of Iowa; John A. Hogan, Colorado School of Mines, and Steve Kenton, Eastern Connecticut State University.

Following a question-and-answer session that will wrap up the workshop, the association's business meeting will be held.

After a lunch break, the forum will reconvene for a keynote address by Donna A. Lopiano, director of women's athletics at the University of Texas, Austin. Her remarks will be followed immediately by the division legislative review sessions.

Those sessions' moderators will report to the full forum when it reconvenes. John W. Stoepler, interim president and faculty rep at the University of Toledo, then will present the report of the association's nominating committee and conduct the election of officers and an executive committee for the coming year.

Current officers of the group include Hogan, chair; Frederick L. Hemke, Northwestern University, secretary-treasurer; Francis W.

Bonner, Furman University, and George W. Schubert, University of North Dakota, executive committee member.

Information on the forum may be obtained by contacting any of the group's elected officials.

10 schools sought by Rocky Mountain league

The presidents of schools in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference have invited 10 schools to join the seven-member conference.

William Hamilton, president of Western State College in Colorado and chair of the RMAC Presidents Committee, has invited presidents of the 10 schools to a meeting January 5 that could fundamentally change the 79-year-old league.

The 10 schools have expressed varying degrees of interest, according to the Associated Press.

They are Metropolitan State College, the University of Denver, Regis College (Colorado), University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, Emporia State University, Fort Hays State University, Chadron State College, Wayne State College (Nebraska), Kearney State College and Panhandle State University.

"We are taking this meeting very seriously," Hamilton said. "We have a great desire to broaden our horizons. I would be surprised if all 10 schools join, but I would also be surprised if we don't come out of it a larger conference."

Considered likely candidates to join the RMAC are Fort Hays, Kearney State, Wayne State and Emporia State. They are members of the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, which is disbanding.

Hamilton acknowledged there are obstacles to expansion, including scholarships, the different levels of play in various sports and the distance between schools.

The RMAC currently allows only partial scholarships, but some of the schools offer full grants-in-aid.

"We have discussed allowing a particular number of full-ride scholarships," Hamilton said. "The number 10 has been thrown out, but by no means has there been a commitment to that yet."

Another problem is that although Metropolitan State has no football team, it does not want to change its basketball program from its current classification in NCAA Division II. Currently, the RMAC allows its members to hold dual NCAA/NAIA membership for certain sports, but its football and basketball teams play in the NAIA.

Hamilton termed the physical distance between schools an "awesome" problem. The distance between Wayne State and current RMAC member Western New Mexico is about 1,500 miles.

Recruiting

No. 82: Define a "prospective student-athlete" for Bylaw 1 purposes as any individual who has started classes for the ninth grade; also, specify that a member institution's recruitment of an individual who has not started classes for the ninth grade shall be governed by the principle that the institution may not provide such an individual (or the individual's relatives or friends) with any financial aid or other benefits unless it provides them to prospective students generally.

No. 83: Apply the Bylaw 1-2(g) contact restrictions to any athletics competition in which a prospective student-athlete is a participant, regardless of the site of the competition.

No. 84: Prohibit in-person contact with and evaluation of prospective student-athletes by a Division I member institution's coaching staff, on or off campus, in conjunction with any athletics event involving prospective student-athletes in the sports of basketball and football, unless such contact or evaluation occurs within the permissible contact or evaluation periods for those sports.

No. 85: Revise and simplify the sports camps and clinic legislation by defining a member institution's sports camp or clinic; limit the conduct of regular institutional sports camps and clinics to the institution's summer vacation period, with other institutional camps and clinics to meet the provisions of Bylaw 1-6(d)-(1); prohibit the employment of any athletics department staff member at a camp or clinic established, sponsored or conducted by an individual or organization that provides recruiting or scouting services regarding prospects; preclude Division I athletics department staff members from being employed by or lecturing at noninstitutional summer camps or summer clinics in basketball and football, and other adjustments in the camp and clinic regulations.

No. 86: Specify that participants in developmental clinics shall not receive recruiting presentations and must reside in the state in which the host institution is located or within 100 miles of that institution.

No. 87: Permit the head football coach at a Division I-A institution to visit a prospect one day per calendar week at the prospect's educational institution during the applicable contact period, while continuing to limit the head coach to one visit to the prospect's home during that period.

No. 88: Revise the Division I men's basketball contact and evaluation periods to permit such activities during adjusted dates without expanding the total number of days during which such activities may occur.

No. 89: Adjust the Division I women's basketball contact and evaluation periods by establishing April 16 as the end of the spring contact period, reducing by seven days the evaluation calendar, beginning the December evaluation period one week earlier, providing evaluation opportunities during official tryouts for the ABAUSA Olympic Festival, and adjusting the evaluation dates for those states that play high school basketball in the fall or spring.

No. 90: Extend the Division II football contact period by 30 days.

No. 91: Move the Division II football contact period one week later, without extending the period.

No. 92: Extend the Division II basketball contact period by 30 days.

No. 93: Move the Division II basketball contact period one week later, without extending the period.

No. 94: Exempt from the current "quiet periods" in recruiting those member institutions that are not subscribers to the National Letter of Intent program and that have established their own institutional "quiet periods."

No. 95: Permit Division II football evaluation opportunities throughout the prospect's football season and during any high school all-star game in the institution's state.

No. 96: Permit Division II football evaluation opportunities throughout the prospect's football season.

No. 97: Extend the Division II football evaluation period by including the month of October.

No. 98: Permit football evaluation opportunities on Fridays during the month of October in Divisions I-A, I-AA and II.

No. 99: Specify that a Division I institution may provide either an annual athletics press guide or an annual athletics recruiting brochure, but not both, to a prospect; eliminate game programs as permissible printed recruiting aids, and permit a student-athlete handbook as a permissible printed recruiting aid.

No. 100: Specify that a Division II institution may provide a student-athlete handbook as a permissible printed recruiting aid.

No. 101: Restore the three paid recruiting visits in Division I basketball that were eliminated in 1987 (15 to 18).

No. 102: Confirm that an institution is permitted to transport a prospective student-athlete during a self-financed visit to view off-campus practice and competition sites and other institutional facilities located within a 30-mile radius of the institution's campus.

No. 103: Permit an athletics department staff member to transport a prospective student-athlete from any permissible site to the campus or the nearest transportation center on the occasion of the prospect's expense-paid visit in football.

Courts dedicated

Virginia Commonwealth University's men's and women's tennis teams will be able to play all of their home matches on the Richmond campus following the recent dedication of the school's new Harry and Charles Thalhimer Tennis Center.

The facility, which was funded through a $200,000 gift from Rhoda and Charles Thalhimer, features six courts and seating for as many as 100 fans.

"It means so much to have just one home court," said Richard L. Sander, VCU athletics director. "In the past, our tennis teams have had to play at several sites throughout the city."

Turnover rate levels off for Division I men's coaches

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Men's Division I basketball coaching changes have leveled off this season after some wild gyrations in recent years. The coaching turnover rate for the 1980s is high but below that of the 1970s—highest on record.

A total of 42 colleges have a different head coach at this writing than they did at the start of last season (including two who were hired as interim coaches at midseason last year). That is a turnover rate of 14.3 percent (for 293 teams in Division I), virtually the same as the 13.4 a year ago.

The rate hit a record 23.1 percent with 67 changes before the 1987 season; but just two years earlier, it had fallen to a record-low 9.2 percent for the 1985 season. The 1980s decade, ending this season, produced a rate of about 15.6 percent compared to 16.8 for the 1970s, highest since compilation of coaching changes began before the 1950 season.

In the first two decades, the rate was well below the last two decades, with 12.4 percent in the 1960s and 11.9 in the 1950s. The average rate for all 40 years is 14.2 percent.

Why the increase? There seems little doubt the main factor is that basketball now is seen as a means of raising money for other sports. An arena-building boom in the 1970s and 1980s brings a need to fill seats, hence more pressure to win and more coaching changes. A winning season, like 16-13, is not enough if there were expectations of 20 victories and an NCAA tournament bid. Tournament expansion helps coaches at colleges that seldom make the party but not those where it is taken for granted.

Tournament influence

Remember that the list includes all changes for whatever reason, including promotions to schools with higher budgets and more seating (in fact, every time a coach moves up, it is two changes).

The entire NCAA tournament in recent years has had major national television exposure. No longer does a coach have to make the regional finals or Final Four for this kind of exposure. Three games will do it. Add an upset or two, and the coach suddenly becomes a hot prospect for promotion, even though he may have been doing an excellent job for many years.

A prime example of TV influence is Tom Penders, who moved from Rhode Island to Texas (with 16,000 seats) after his 26-6 Rams, in the shadow of then top-ranked Temple, upset Missouri and Syracuse before a one-point loss to Duke. Viewers saw the touching story of Tom Garriek's blind father and admired the easy way that Penders handled the media and his up-tempo team. In three weeks, his face became nationally recognized.

Texas' opening practice session, the October 15 midnight madness, drew 3,200 spectators—a bigger crowd than for many Texas home games last season (1,800 short of capacity at Rhode Island's campus facility and the exact capacity at Fordham, where Penders coached before moving to Rhode Island). Penders is a popular figure in Texas.

20 new-job coaches

Penders is one of 20 new-job coaches this year—that is, coaches with at least some head-coaching experience at the four-year level. His record was 270-209 for 17 seasons entering this one. The top

Texas' Tom Penders was aided by his NCAA tournament success at Rhode Island

Butch van Breda Kolff, a 403-game winner, moved from Lafayette to Hofstra

Kansas' Roy Williams previously was an assistant to North Carolina's Dean Smith winner is James Madison's Charles "Lefty" Driesell, 524-224 for 26 seasons. He last head-coached at Maryland in 1986.

Now, JMU season tickets are sold out for the first time, donations have doubled and media interest is at a record high. For Driesell, who will be 57 Christmas Day, being wanted is the best gift of all: "People are all excited and treating me real nice. Coaching is what I'm good at. I felt I was too young to quit."

The other 18 new-job coaches, with career records entering the 1989 season and last head-coaching job (1988 unless otherwise indicated) are Delaware State's Jeff Jones (14-36, Fayetteville State), Drake's Tom Abatemarco (34-26, Lamar), Hofstra's Butch van Breda Kolff (403-181, Lafayette), New Mexico's Dave Bliss (219-163, Southern Method-they are off to a 7-1 start through December 12 and seem to be on a mission. "This is a remarkably fine group of young men," says Williams.

All but two of the first-year coaches came from assistant jobs at Division I colleges. Nine moved up at the same college. They are Cal State Fullerton's John Sneed, Hardin-Simmons' Dennis Harp, Idaho's Kermit Davis Jr., Lafayette's John Leone, Lamar's Tony Branch, Lehigh's Dave Duke, Pepperdine's Tom Asbury, Rhode Island's Al Skinner and Utah State's Kohn Smith.

Ten more besides Williams were assistants elsewhere in Division I. They are Augusta's Clint Bryant [from Miami (Florida)], Central Connecticut State's Mike Brown (Seton Hall), Detroit's Ricky Byrdson (Arizona), George Mason's

The seven-year winning percentages for the other teams with at least seven tournament victories are Cheyney, .567, and Old Dominion, .729.

Consistency

Fourteen teams in the top 20 above had the same coach throughout the seven years, and in many cases, long before 1982. Jody Conradt at Texas has averaged about 32-3 in this span. Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore is not among the 14; but he has been there throughout, first as an assistant, then as cohead coach with Sonja Hogg and now as head coach. Joan Bonvicini has been at Long Beach State throughout, as have Robin Selvig at Montana, Andy Landers at Georgia, Linda Sharp at Southern Cal, Joe Ciampi at Auburn, Van Chancellor at Mississippi, Mike Granelli at St. Peter's, Theresa Grentz at Rutgers, Linda Harper at Northeast Louisiana, Pat Summitt at Tennessee, Harry Perretta at Villanova, Rene Portland at Penn State and Cindy Scott at Southern Illinois.

Quotes of the week

In Ball State's 63-57 victory at Minnesota November 26 (first victory in Ball State men's history over a Big Ten Conference team on the road), the Cardinals went scoreless for eight minutes. Cardinal coach Rick Majerus, known for his large appetite and just-as-large physique, quipped: "That was like two chili dinners." After the game, Majerus mistakenly thought someone had stolen his sweater: "You could house 20 homeless families in my sweater." (John Ginter, Ball State SID)

Indiana State's women's team, in

New York for a holiday tournament, returned to its rental vans after a Thanksgiving Day of touring the Big Apple to find a window broken out of one of the vans and everything gone, from game shoes and equipment of six players to luggage, to class notes—in all, an estimated $3,000 in valuables. When asked by one of the New York newspaper reporters what her first thoughts were when she discovered the theft, head coach Andrea Myers replied, "I thought we'd been robbed!" By the way, the Lady Sycamores downed Iona in the championship game. (Karen Griess, Indiana State associate SID)

UC Davis sophomore forward Lisa Jo Kellogg has hit it big this year both on the basketball court and in Hollywood. She won $2,100 on the "Win, Lose or Draw" television game show on the same night that she was leading the UC Davis women's team to a 63-60 victory over Fresno Pacific. The show, taped last summer, was broadcast just as Kellogg's squad was capturing the Sunbird Invitational tournament championship. (Kevin Duggan, UC Davis sports information assistant)

If fans were confused recently when Bentley faced Keene State, it was quite understandable. It was the second meeting between identical twins Lori and Renee Bender. Lori entered the game as Bentley's leading scorer, while Renee was the top scorer for Keene State. What's more, the two sisters spent most of the night covering each other. Renee had the edge statistically, with 18 points, nine rebounds and nine assists. Lori had 16 points, five rebounds, three assists and, most importantly, the victory (86-60). (Dick Lipe, Bentley SID)

Darryl Owens, a guard on Nevada-Reno's men's team, was benched the first four minutes of the Washington game for violating a team rule that all players must wear a tie on team plane trips. Said Owens: "At least I was wearing a $90 sweater." (Owens came off the bench with 26 points, seven rebounds, six assists and three steals in a road upset victory, 92-90.) (Paul Stuart, Nevada-Reno SID)

No breathers here

Slippery Rock men's coach Bob Bartlett may find it hard to schedule Division I teams. A year ago, his team won at Navy. This time, the Rock knocked off Cleveland State, 80-79, on Myron Brown's three-pointer with two seconds left. That may be the biggest victory in school history—the Vikings had won 20 in a row at home and 58 of 61 under Kevin Mackey. (John Carpenter, Slippery Rock SID) ist), New Orleans' Tim Floyd (35-25, Idaho), North Carolina-Asheville's Donald Doucette (107-69, Lowell), Pacific's Bob Thomason (52-27, Cal State Stanislaus), Providence's Rick Barnes (20-10, George Mason), Rutgers' Bob Wenzel (88-86, Jacksonville 1987), Southeastern Louisiana's Lee McClure (4-12, interim 1988 same college), Southern Methodist's John Shumate (58-33, Grand Canyon 1986), Stephen F. Austin State's Mike Martin (207-176, Abilene Christian), Tennessee Tech's Frank Harrell (13-49, Clinch Valley), Texas-Arlington's Mark Nixon (5-13, interim 1988 same college), UCLA's Jim Harrick (167-97, Pepperdine), Valparaiso's Homer Drew (269-122, Indiana-South Bend), Weber State's Denny Huston (14-11, Western Washington 1982) and Western Carolina's Dave Possinger (339-81, St. Thomas Aquinas).

Basketball notes

22 first-year coaches

Completing the list of changes are 22 first-year men; that is, no previous men's head-coaching experience at the four-year level. Kansas' Roy Williams is getting the most media attention because Kansas won the 1988 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship but is on probation. Kansas is barred from this season's tournament for violations under Larry Brown, all involving a player who never played for Kansas.

Williams, former assistant to North Carolina's Dean Smith, is going with just nine players, but Ernie Nestor (California), Maine's Rudy Keeling (Marquette), Manhattan's Steve Lappas (Villanova), Massachusetts' John Caliperi (Pittsburgh), Northwestern Louisiana's Dan Bell (East Carolina), Radford's Oliver Purnell (Maryland) and St. Francis' (New York) Rich Zvosec [Loyola (Maryland)].

Northern Arizona's Pat Rafferty came from Casper Junior College in Wyoming, and Earl Hawkins of Maryland-Baltimore County head-coached in the high-school ranks over the past 10 years.

Three more coaches lead teams now in their first season in Division I. They are Mount St. Mary's (Maryland) Jim Phelan, with 651 victories ninth on the all-time, all-divisions list—and 282 losses entering this season; Liberty's Jeff Meyer, 125-79, and Southern Utah State's Neil Roberts, 16-11.

Women since 1982

Five different colleges have won the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship in the seven years of its existence. Southern California (1983 and 1984) and Louisiana Tech (1982 and 1988) are the only double winners. Other winners were Old Dominion in 1985, Texas in 1986 and Tennessee in 1987.

Ten teams have won at least seven tournament games, or one per year. This group also has harvested 24 of the 28 spots in the semifinals and finals.

NCAA Record

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

Paul R. Givens announced his retirement as chancellor at Pembroke State, effective July 1, 1989. F. Sheldon Wet-tack selected for the presidency at Wabash. He previously was dean of the faculty of arts and sciences at Richmond. Father Hugh F. Hines resigned as president at Siena, effective June 30, 1989. Geoffrey Bannister elected to the presidency at Butler, effective January 1. He is the school's executive vice-president. Bannister succeeds John G. Johnson, who will become chancellor of the school after 10 years as its CEO. Nils Hasselmo named president at Minnesota. He is vice-president for academic affairs and provost at Arizona. William B. Spong Jr., a former U.S. senator from Virginia, appointed interim president at Old Dominion. James H. Wharton resigned as chancellor at Louisiana State. Raymond M. Burse announced he will resign as president at Kentucky State sometime before the 1990 expiration of his contract. Burse is a member of the NCAA Council and chairs its Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics.

DIRECTORS OF ATHLETICS

Richard M. Bay selected at Minnesota. The former Ohio State AD has served since June as chief operating officer of the StarBright Group. Jackie Sherrill resigned as AD and head football coach at Texas A&M.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS OF ATHLETICS

Dave Currey announced he will step down January 3 at Cincinnati, where he also announced his resignation as head football coach. Penn State's L. Budd Thalman given additional duties at the school, where he now will serve as associate AD for communications, external relations and development.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Jack Writer selected at Cornell, where he will step down as head men's soccer coach.

COACHES

Men's basketball — Rich Prospero appointed interim coach at Chapman, replacing Kevin Wilson, who was relieved of his duties at the school after the first game of the season. Wilson leaves with a 52-59 record at the school. Prospero has been an assistant at the school for the past two seasons. Frank Harrell promoted from associate coach at Tennessee Tech, replacing Tom Deaton, who resigned after nine years. Deaton's teams compiled a 106-120 record and his 1985 squad won an Ohio Valley Conference title.

Men's basketball assistants Marty Gross promoted from assistant to associate coach at Jacksonville, where he played in the mid-1970s and has been on the staff since 1985. Lindsay Strothers given additional duties at Chapman, where he will continue to assist with women's basketball. Dave Kipfer, a member of Providence's 1987 Final Four team, appointed at Quinnipiac.

Women's basketball Neil Woodson named at York (New York), his alma mater. Gerry Moseley selected at Staten Island. A former assistant coach at the school, Moseley replaces Noreen Begley, who was named head boys' coach at Murray Bergtraum High School.

Women's basketball assistant Wilhelmina Lesane appointed at CCNY. Kimberley Foss named at Quinnipiac. She is a recent graduate of Western Connecticut State, where she holds game, season and career assists records.

Field hockey Gwen Cheeseman Alexander resigned after nine seasons at Temple, where she also stepped down as assistant women's lacrosse coach.

Football Jackie Sherrill resigned as athletics director and football coach at Texas A&M, where his football teams were 53-27-1 through seven seasons. Bill Lewis selected at East Carolina after serving as secondary coach since 1980 and as defensive coordinator since 1981 at Georgia. He earlier served for three seasons as head coach at Wyoming. Rick Daniels appointed interim coach at West Chester, where he has been an assistant since 1983. He replaces Danny Hale, who school officials said had submitted a letter of resignation in September but was given until late November to reconsider his action. Jack Elway dismissed after five seasons at Stanford,

Grove City named Cathy Jacobs for softball, swimming where his teams compiled a 25-29-2 record. Elway, who earlier coached at Cal State Northridge and San Jose State, led his 1986 Cardinal squad to the Gator Bowl.

In addition, Eddie Williamson resigned after four years at Virginia Military despite an invitation from the school to serve the fifth year of his contract. His teams were 10-33-1 during his tenure. Dave Currey resigned at Cincinnati, where his teams recorded a 19-36 mark through five seasons. Currey, who also has coached at Long Beach State, will continue to serve as associate athletics director at Cincinnati until January 3. Lynn Graves promoted from assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at Stephen F. Austin State, where he has been on the staff since 1976. He succeeds Jim Hess, who announced his retirement from coaching to devote full time to his duties as athletics director at the school. Hess coached the Lumberjacks to a 47-30-2 record through seven seasons, including a 10-3 mark and an appearance in the Division I-AA Football Championship this season.

Also, Marino H. Casem stepped down after two seasons as head coach at Southern-Baton Rouge, where he will continue to serve as athletics director. Casem, who also has coached at Alcorn State and is a member of the NCAA Executive, Communications and Football Rules Committees, coached the Jaguars to a 13-9 record. Ron Murphy resigned after five years at Wittenberg, where he will continue to coach men's tennis and serve on the school's health and physical education faculty. Murphy compiled a 34-17 record during his tenure and extended Wittenberg's NCAA-leading streak of winning seasons to 34. Wittenberg appeared in this year's Division III Football Championship. Ball State's Paul Schudel signed a three-year contract at the school. Jon Lantz selected at Missouri Southern State. He previously served at Southeastern Oklahoma State, where his teams were 21-9-2 through three seasons and this year's team was ranked among the top five squads in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Division I poll. Lantz replaces interim coach Bill Cook, who led the Lions to a 3-7 record after taking over shortly before the beginning of the season.

Football assistants Jim Carmody named defensive coordinator at Mississippi State. He was head coach at Southern Mississippi from 1982 to 1987. Idaho assistants Barry Lamb, Curtis Johnson and Bret Ingalls accepted posts at San Diego State, effective at the conclusion of Idaho's season. Lamb will serve as defensive coordinator, Johnson as wide receivers coach and Ingalls as running backs coach. Also joining the Aztec staff are Dave Lay, a head coach at Orange Glen High School in the San Diego area who will serve as offensive coordinator, and Al Tanara, a former Nevada-Las Vegas assistant who will be tight ends coach. Jeff Carpenter resigned after three years as defensive ends coach and strength and conditioning coordinator at Ball State, which also announced that secondary coach Dennis Hunt stepped down after four seasons at the school.

In addition, Arizona's Ben Griffith appointed offensive coordinator at Texas Christian. He has served as offensive coordinator at Georgia Southern, New Mexico and, for the past two seasons, Arizona. Griffith replaces Bill Thornton, who resigned to enter private business in Fort Worth, Texas. Dale Strahm named defensive coordinator at Georgia, where he previously coached linebackers and has been on the staff since 1981. He is a former defensive coordinator at Bowling Green and Navy.

Men's ice hockey assistants Tim Whitehead appointed at Middlebury. The former Hamilton player also has played professionally in Europe and has coached at various clinics. John McDonough and George Hines named at Quinnipiac. McDonough previously was an assistant at high schools in the New Haven, Connecticut, area and Hines recently completed his playing career at Quinnipiac.

Women's lacrosse assistant — Gwen Cheeseman Alexander resigned at Temple, where she also stepped down as head field hockey coach.

Men's soccer — Cornell's Jack Writer stepped down to become assistant athletics director at the school.

Women's softball Cathy Jacobs named at Grove City, where she also will coach women's swimming and diving.

Women's swimming and diving — Cathy Jacobs selected for the new women's program at Grove City, where she also will coach women's softball.

Men's and women's track and field — Dave Michelsen promoted from assistant to head indoor track coach at Brockport State, where he also is head cross country coach and assistant outdoor track and field coach. He succeeds Kathy Goodwin, who led the men's indoor team to a State University of New York Athletic Conference title last winter. Gregory Mitchell appointed women's coach at York (New York). He heads the Equis Track and Field Club in Queens, New York.

Women's volleyball — Yasmine Young appointed at John Jay. The former Bernard Baruch player is a psychologist in the New York City schools.

Wrestling assistant — Kurt Rahner selected at CCNY. He is a certified wrestling official and has coached at the high school level.

STAFF

Development director — David Colton named director of the Penn State Athletics Development Fund and coordinator of athletics support groups at the school. He has served on Penn State's athletics staff since 1980.

Fund-raising director Kay F. Kustanbauer appointed executive director of the Nittany Lion Club at Penn State. She has been involved in Nittany Lion Club activities for much of the time since she joined the school's athletics staff in 1972.

Promotions director Northern Illinois' Guy Price named director of alumni relations at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Assistant trainer Lon Pinhey appointed at Coast Guard.

ASSOCIATIONS

Leah Little, head women's gymnastics coach at Kentucky, elected president of the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches (Women). She has coached at Kentucky since 1974.

NOTABLES

William Moultrie of Howard and Gary Winckler of Illinois selected by The Athletics Congress to coach the U.S. men's and women's track and field teams, respectively, at the 1989 World Indoor Championships in Budapest, Hungary. Also, Penn State's Harry Groves was named men's coach and Morgan State's Leonard Braxton was appointed women's coach for the 1989 U.S. World Cup team; Washington State's John Chaplin and Indiana's Carol Stevenson were named U.S. men's and women's coaches, respectively, for the 1989 World University Games, and Ron Bazil of Army was appointed U.S. men's coach for a quadrangular meet in June 1989 that also will involve the Soviet Union, Great Britain and West Germany.

Also, William F. Stier Jr., athletics director at Brockport State, named New York researcher of the year by the New York State Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. Howard Schnellenberger of Louisville and Erk Russell of Georgia Southern named to coach the South team in the Blue-Gray All-Star Football Classic, set for Christmas Day in Montgomery, Alabama. Coaches of the North team will be Jack Bicknell of Boston College and John Cooper of Ohio State. Also selected for the staffs were assistants Jack Burns, Louisville offensive coordinator; Tom Spangler, Georgia Southern defensive coordinator; Mike Maser, Boston College offensive line coach, and Bill Young, Ohio State defensive coordinator. Joe King named vice-president and general manager of the Texas-based Home Sports Entertainment network.

DEATHS

Joseph L. Reichler, a former Associated Press sports writer and longtime editor of The Baseball Encyclopedia, died December 12 in Roslyn Heights, New York, after a long illness. He was 73. Lou Boda, a radio and television journalist who worked most recently with all-sports radio station WFAN in New York, died of heart failure December 10 in Flagler Beach, Florida. He was 60. Boda also worked for NBC and ABC in New York City. The Indiana graduate was the brother of Steve Boda Jr., NCAA associate director of statistics. Stephen Harrick, former baseball and wrestling coach at West Virginia, died of natural causes December 7 in Morgantown, West Virginia. He was 91. Harrick coached the school's baseball teams to a 334-160-1 record from 1948 to 1967 and also coached wrestling for 20 years, compiling a 155-99-4 mark. George Shaw, NCAA triple jump champion for Columbia in 1952 and a two-time Olympian, died December 5 of a heart attack while jogging near his home in New York. He was 57. Shaw set Columbia records in the indoor long jump and the outdoor triple jump. He competed in the 1952 and 1956 Olympic Games. Armand Niccolai, a Duquesne football player in the early 1930s who later was a standout with the Pittsburgh Steelers, died December 2 of heart failure in Pittsburgh. He was 77. Niccolai also coached high school football. Jo Ann Williams, who coached her 1985 St. Andrews teams to an appearance in the 1985 Division III Women's Volleyball Championship, died December 1 in Laurinburg, North Carolina, after a long illness. She was 56. An associate professor of physical education at the school, Williams coached her teams at St. Andrews to a career 239-181 record.

In her second game, Utah's Alcorn doesn't miss, scores 32

University of Utah women's basketball player Karen Alcorn, a 5-7 freshman from Oregon City, Oregon, enjoyed a "perfect night" when her team hosted Idaho State University November 29.

Certainly, Alcorn is not the only basketball player ever to hit every shot he or she took in a game... but she hit 20, scoring 32 points in 29 minutes.

In only her second college game, Alcorn was 11-11 from the field (all two-pointers) and 9-9 from the foul line. She set school and arena records (men and women) for most points scored on a perfect night.

Wendy Webb apparently spent so much time being treated for sports-related injuries, she has decided to become a trainer.

The 18-year-old freshman at Pan American University, where she is a student trainer, already has suffered 14 broken bones.

"A lot of the breaks came when I was at Lamar Junior High (in Texas)," Webb recalled. "I broke my ankle and my foot playing basketball. I broke my wrist in gymnastics. A softball broke my ribs once. I've had five toes broken at different times."

"I was saving somebody when I was a lifeguard... and they hit me and broke my finger," she added. "I also broke a bone jumping on a trampoline. But I was in a car wreck once, and all I got was a concussion."

"The only reason I played basketball was to keep me out of trouble and keep me occupied," recalls Brian Oliver, now a 6-4 guard at Georgia Institute of Technology. "I wasn't really into it."

What he was into were keyboards. "It was a part of me," Oliver said. "I could play the piano at any time of the day. It was something I had a knack for. Some parents make their kids play the piano, but my mother never forced me into anything."

"I was really good," he added. "I played everything from ballads to fast-tempo things. I could make up little things. When I was sad or depressed, I could go to the piano. It was an outlet."

And Oliver was 10 years old, growing up in Chicago. Then came a move to Smyrna, Georgia, an Atlanta suburb, during which the piano was left behind.

"I hated it," he said of his introduction to basketball in his new home. Of course, having his mother pry him out of bed at 6 a.m. for shooting practice probably had a little to do with that.

"I owe my parents a lot," he offered. "They saw the talent I had and made me work at it. My father showed me what to do, and my mother made sure I did it."

As a result, Oliver became Georgia's "Mr. Basketball" as a prep player while earning a 3.800 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in an advanced college preparatory curriculum.

Trivia Time: The University of Notre Dame and West Virginia University finished the regular season as the nation's only undefeated major-college football teams. Can you name the four schools whose football teams each have produced two undefeated regular seasons in the past 10 years (hint: two of the four recorded back-to-back perfect campaigns)? Answer later.

Creighton increases sports budget, grants

Creighton University has reaffirmed its intention to compete in NCAA Division I athletics by increasing its athletics budget by 19.4 percent and reinstating men's and women's soccer as varsity sports.

The total new cash infusion into the athletics program amounts to $371,000, bringing the total athletics budget to about $2.25 million for 1989-90.

"Without question, our individual sports situation has been improved significantly," said Don Leahy, athletics director. "I'm looking forward to an ever-improving individual sports program at Creighton. We are on the right track," he told the Omaha World-Herald.

"A solid Division I philosophy means exceeding NCAA minimums, and that is one reason we're reinstating soccer," Leahy said.

Because Creighton's men's and women's golf teams and its women's swimming team fell short of minimum-participation requirements last year, the NCAA placed Creighton in a restricted category, and all of its sports teams are not eligible for NCAA championships in 1988-89.

The Rev. Michael G. Morrison, school president, announced plans to funnel more money into nonrevenue sports grants and operating budgets.

Under the plan, an additional $79,000 will be added for nonrevenue sports grants and for three additional women's basketball grants, taking the team to the NCAA limit of 15 full grants.

That will be in addition to the $86,000 currently allocated for nonrevenue sports grants, Morrison said. The nonrevenue sports operating budget also will get $82,000 in addition to its current $77,000 allocation.

The men's and women's soccer program will have an annual operating budget of $110,000 and a grant-in-aid budget of $100,000.

Morrison said he expects about 20 men and 20 women soccer athletes eventually will be on grants. Currently, 70 student-athletes participate on grants in nonrevenue sports.

Greg Carlson

Lightning has struck twice in the University of Indianapolis athletics department.

Gus Hutchins was a 22-year-old member of the school's men's basketball team in November 1986 when he was selected at random to participate in a half-time promotion at an Indiana Pacers pro basketball game. Hutchins hit a "three-pointer" from the NBA line and picked up $5,000. He kept the money, opting to forfeit his remaining eligibility at the school.

Last November 30, Indianapolis freshman Tami Peters, participating in another Pacers promotion, knocked down a shot from the foul line and won a pair of round-trip plane tickets to Florida. Since she is not a student-athlete, Peters' decision appeared simple, and it was. She refused the prize.

Because Peters wants to be a student-athlete. She was a pretty good high school player before suffering a knee injury that has required two operations. Still in rehab, Peters did not try out for the Indianapolis team this year.

"I love basketball, and I miss it," she told Indianapolis Star writer John Shaughnessy. "I still want to have the chance to play."

According to a news release from the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, sports economist Edward B. Shils estimated that the 1988 Army-Navy game, the annual football clash between the U.S. Military Academy and the U.S. Naval Academy that was played December 3 in Veterans Stadium, added more than $9.75 million to the local economy.

Wabash College football coach Greg Carlson has been named a Sagamore of the Wabash by Indiana Governor Robert D. Orr. Dan Heiser, clerk of state courts, presented Carlson with the honor at the Wabash football awards banquet December 4.

The Sagamore of the Wabash is the highest honor the governor can bestow on a private citizen. The award is presented to persons who serve Indiana in an unusual manner, usually in a sustained effort that brings attention to the state.

Carlson recently completed his sixth season as Wabash head coach, and his 1988 Little Giants finished 7-2. His overall record at the school is 41-15-1.

Officials of Sedgwick County, Kansas, and the city of Wichita are making plans for Barry Sanders Day, which will honor the local resident and Oklahoma State University student-athlete who capped a record-breaking 1988 season by winning the Heisman Trophy.

During its December 20 meeting, the Wichita City Council will adopt a proclamation declaring January 6, 1989, Barry Sanders Day. Among the events planned for that day are a reception, luncheon and special assembly for Sanders at North High School, his prep alma mater.

Local and county officials will be on hand as Sanders' jersey and that worn by his brother, Byron, will be retired—the first such retirements in school history. Sheldon Kamen, mayor of Wichita, will present Sanders with the key to the city.

Washington College (Maryland) has established an athletics honor roll to recognize student-athletes who maintain a cumulative grade-point average of 3.500 (4.000 scale) or higher.

Director of Athletics Geoff Miller recently announced that 13 student-athletes were named to the first honor roll for the 1987-88 school year.

They include Peter Maller, April Baugher, Stephanie Gannon, Erin Hodge-Williams, Jennifer Mauser, Adrienne De Angelo, Wendy Kerr, Sandra Coulter, Donna White, Laura Bilyeu, Judy Bowles, Kristine Winschel, Sharon Orser, Heather Donovan and Ann Urban.

Did you know that Syracuse University place kickers have not missed an extra-point attempt since 1978? Orangeman Dave Jacobs started the string by converting the final PAT of the 1978 season. Since then, Syracuse kickers Gary Anderson (72 PATs from 1979 through 1981), Russ Carpentieri (17 PATs in 1982), Don McAulay (62 PATs from 1983 through 1985), Tim Vesling (71 PATs in 1986 and 1987) and Kevin Greene (37 PATs in 1988) have combined to run the string to an NCAA record 260.

Some Dartmouth College coaches are attempting to sell more than their programs and the school to prospective student-athletes—they also are talking about the value of a liberal arts education.

Those coaches are using "The Value of a Liberal Arts Education," a pamphlet that was written by E. R. "Skip" Sturman, Dartmouth's director of career and employment services. The 12-page booklet was published last year by New Jersey-based Peterson's Guides.

"Some of our coaches—women's basketball, in particular—have found (the booklet) useful in their recruiting ventures," Sturman wrote.

Copies are available from Peterson's Guides (1-800/338-3282).

Trivia Answer: In the past 10 years, the only major-college football teams to record two undefeated regular seasons are Brigham Young University, 1979 and 1984; the University of Georgia, 1980 and 1982; the University of Miami (Florida) 1986 and 1987, and Pennsylvania State University, 1985 and 1986.

SAT use criticized in report

Massachusetts officials said December 6 that they are working to revamp the method used in awarding academic scholarships—a system that overemphasizes standardized tests and discriminates against women and minorities, according to a recent report.

FairTest, an national organization that tries to ensure fairness in testing methods, said in a report that the Scholastic Aptitude Test—a standardized exam administered to high school students and used as a criterion for college admission—is biased against both female and minority students, United Press International reported.

Massachusetts uses SAT scores to award honors scholarships, which foot the bill for one year's college tuition. The reliance solely on SAT scores prevents more women and minority students from receiving academic scholarships, the Cambridge-based group charged.

"The commonwealth is relying on a test that consistently underpredicts girls' performance," said Sarah Stockwell, an admission-test coordinator with FairTest. Stockwell said boys have consistently outscored girls on the SAT, yet young women earn higher grades in high school and college.

Stockwell said recent studies show that boys do better on questions about sports and other "male-oriented" subjects, while girls tend to score high in the humanities.

"There are two problems," she said. "One is the misuse of the test as a basis to award scholarships, and the other is the test itself, which must be completely overhauled or discarded."

Nationally, girls score an average of 56 points lower than boys on the SAT, 43 points lower in mathematics and 13 points lower in verbal sections, FairTest said.

"But freshman college grades, which the SAT claims to predict, are higher for girls," Stockwell said.

Rebels' field

The new $3 million Swayze Field baseball stadium at the University of Mississippi is regarded as one of the best around by Warner Alford, athletics director. The stadium seats 3,000 with facilities for television and a VIP box. A batting/pitching tunnel and weight room are situated under the grandstand. The field of artificial turf has drainage irrigation systems. The field is fully lighted. The stadium was a project of Cooke, Douglass and Farr, Ltd., Jackson, Mississippi.

Changes made in I-A final statistics

A study of the game film by Texas Tech, home team for a game with Oklahoma State in Tokyo December 3, shows that two plays involving Barry Sanders were rushing plays, not passing plays. As a result, the Heisman Trophy winner picks up 75 more rushing yards for a season-high 332, resulting in several other changes in various categories in the final NCAA Division I-A figures.

The game was played in a baseball stadium and the statistics were kept by the sports information directors of both schools, who had to sit on the top row in right field. It was very difficult from that distance and angle to determine whether a pass was forward or backward, making it a rushing play. Joe Hornaday, Texas Tech SID, said the film showed both plays started as screen passes, but the quarterback was rushed and had to throw backward to Sanders.

Sanders' season rushing total goes to 2,628 yards, or 286 more than the old record of 2,342 in 1981 by Southern California's Marcus Allen, who carried the ball 59 more times than Sanders' 344.

Sanders' average per carry becomes a record 7.64 yards, to 5.81 by Allen. And that makes four 300-plus rushing games for the season by Sanders. No other I-A back had more than one 300-yarder in an entire career. If you deleted two of the 300-yarders against the two weakest teams on his schedule—Kansas State and Kansas—he still would have a 221.8 average to 212.9 for Allen (Sanders' final average was 238.9). Against the two strongest teams faced by the 9-2 Cowboys, Nebraska and Oklahoma, Sanders averaged 202.

His all-purpose totals, game and season, of course, remain the same, with his receiving figure reduced by 75 (his 3,250 yards and 295.5 per game both broke the records). And his record scoring (39 TDs, 234 points) is unchanged.

But quarterback Mike Gundy's passing yardage drops to 2,163 (with two fewer attempts and two fewer completions) and his passing-efficiency rating falls 2.2 points to 158.2—still second nationally. His yards-per-attempt figure falls to 9.37—still No. 1. He drops to 36th in total offense at 192.8 per game.

Oklahoma State's rushing average increases to 317.5 per game—still No. 5. Texas Tech's defensive figures also change, but it was not highly ranked. The figures for the Big Eight Conference and Southwest Athletic Conference show minor changes (the Big Eight is first nationally in rushing by a wide margin).

The national trends figures change the rushing vs. passing equation to a small degree. National rushing yardage increases to 349.1 and passing drops to 371.5 per game. Total offense remains a record 720.6.

Joint marketing plan aimed at assisting member schools

Merchandise stamped with a brand that pairs trademarks of the NCAA and specific member institutions could appear during the early 1990s under a marketing program proposed by the Association.

The "NCAA Authentic" program, which was approved by the Marketing Subcommittee of the NCAA Executive Committee, could produce considerable revenue for participating member institutions, according to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director for communications.

Although a few details of the program have not been completed, the proposal calls for an institution to receive 75 percent of the royalties produced by a product bearing the brand. The remaining royalties would go to the NCAA.

The NCAA is seeking permission to use participating schools' marks, Cawood said.

The three-year program involving NCAA licensee Winning Ways, Inc., is not expected to begin before 1990, he said.

Q How much revenue does the NCAA receive from postseason football bowl games?

A Not a cent. While the Association establishes standards for certification of such games and then certifies those meeting the standards, it receives no revenue of any kind from bowl games.

Florida State's Sanders named an AP all-America again

Florida State cornerback Deion Sanders was named to the Associated Press 1988 all-America college football team for the second year in a row, along with Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State. They are not related.

Despite missing two games in October, Deion Sanders intercepted five passes and returned two for touchdowns. He also led the nation in punt returns with a 15.24-yard average—33 returns for 503 yards and a touchdown.

Barry Sanders, a 5-8, 197-pound junior tailback, capped his record-smashing season with his top effort—332 yards against Texas Tech. It was his fourth 300-yard game of the season.

The all-America team also includes defensive tackle Tracy Rucker of Auburn, winner of the Outland Trophy as the nation's best interior lineman and the Lombardi Trophy as the best lineman, and Derrick Thomas of Alabama, who won the Butkus Award as the top linebacker.

Sanders is joined in the backfield by junior quarterback Steve Walsh of Miami (Florida) and Texas A&M sophomore running back Darren Lewis.

The wide receivers are two more record-breakers—Jason Phillips of Houston and Hart Lee Dykes of Oklahoma State.

Top-ranked Notre Dame placed three players on the all-America team—offensive tackle Andy Heck, defensive end Frank Stams and linebacker Mike Stonebreaker, a junior.

Oklahoma State, Nebraska and Arkansas were represented by two players each. Nebraska placed junior center Jake Young and defensive end Broderick Thomas on the squad, while Arkansas had place-kicker Kendall Trainor and defensive lineman Wayne Martin.

The rest of the offensive unit consists of tight end Wesley Walls of Mississippi, tackle Tony Mandarich of Michigan State, and guards Anthony Phillips of Oklahoma and Mike Utley of Washington State.

Rounding out the defense are down lineman Mark Messner of Michigan, linebacker Keith DeLong of Tennessee, defensive backs Louis Oliver of Florida and Markus Paul of Syracuse, and punter Keith English of Colorado. The return specialist is Texas Tech's 5-foot-3, 130-pound Tyrone Thurman.

The all-America team was selected by AP's sports editor, college football editor and regional sports editors, from the various all-conference and all-regional teams.

The AP all-America team will be featured on Bob Hope's annual Christmas special, entitled "Bob Hope's Jolly Christmas Show With the All-American Champs" (Monday, December 19, NBC, 8-9 p.m., Eastern time).

Walsh completed 233 of 390 passes for 3,115 yards and a school record 29 touchdowns, breaking the mark of 26 by Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde in 1986. Miami is 21-1 with Walsh as its quarterback and won the 1987 mythical I-A national championship.

Lewis finished second nationally in rushing to Sanders with 1,692 yards.

Each of the wide receivers scored 15 touchdowns. Phillips caught 108 passes for 1,444 yards and led the nation in receiving for the second year in a row. He became the fifth receiver in NCAA history to catch 100 passes in a season and the fourth to lead the nation two years in a row.

Dykes' 1,278 yards were second

Deion Sanders

After missing three of his first four field-goal attempts. Trainor connected on 23 in a row, including a 59-yarder against Miami (Florida). English, in his first season as Colorado's punter after sitting on the bench behind all-America Barry Helton, led the nation with a 45.04 average on 51 kicks. He had two punts of more than 70 yards, six of 60 yards or more and 19 that went more than 50 yards.

Thurman returned 27 punts for 280 yards and 23 kickoffs for 535 yards. He also played wide receiver for the Red Raiders.

Heck, a tight end until this season, is the anchor for a new offensive line that enabled Notre Dame to rush for 258 yards a game. Stonebreaker played a major role on a defense that held opponents to 112.4 yards a game on the ground, while the hard-hitting Stams was the leader of Notre Dame's pass rush. The 6-6, 315-pound Mandarich is a combination of size and speed. Purdue coach Fred Akers called him "the best offensive lineman I've ever seen."

Oklahoma's Phillips is the first

Oklahoma's Phillips first named to AP Big Eight Conference team four years in row player ever selected to the AP's all-Big Eight Conference team four years in a row, while Utley helped Washington State to an 8-3 record. His blocking was a major factor as quarterback Timm Rosenbach led the nation in passing efficiency.

Young is another in Nebraska's long list of outstanding offensive linemen, while Broderick Thomas broke his own school record for tackles in a season by a defensive lineman with 98, including 10 sacks.

Martin was the defensive player of the year in the Southwest Conference. Messner made AP's all-Big Ten Conference team for the fourth year in a row.

Tennessee coach Johnny Majors calls DeLong one of the three or four best players he has ever coached. Derrick Thomas is one of the nation's top pass-rushers and he set a school record for sacks.

Oliver is 6-2, 222, and runs a 4.35 40-yard dash. He has been rated the nation's top free safety. Paul, a four-year starter for Syracuse, was one of two junior finalists for the Jim Thorpe Award last year as the nation's top defensive back and is a finalist again this season.

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

Contest exemptions

1. Foreign tour travel prior to completion of final-examination period. Determined that there is no authority to waive the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 3-6(b)-(1) to permit an institution to participate on a foreign tour that involves travel prior to the conclusion of the institution's examination period, even when the institution has received approval from the appropriate institutional academic authorities to make arrangements for conducting final examinations for the involved student-athletes prior to the last three days of the examination period.

Amateurism/professionalism

2. Snowboarding. Considered an action taken by the Council in its October meeting to refer to the committee a previous interpretation (reference: Item No. 8 of the minutes of the committee's June 30, 1988, conference) for further review to determine whether an individual who accepts pay for participation in a snowboarding event would jeopardize eligibility for participation in intercollegiate skiing, directed the legislative services staff to request a recommendation from the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Committee regarding this issue.

Professional contests

3. Use of funds from professional contests. Reviewed a previous committee decision (reference: Item No. 4 of the minutes of the committee's September 1, 1988, conference) and recommended that the Council revise NCAA Case No. 29 to permit member institutions to receive money from a professional sports organization and place the funds in the institution's general fund to be credited to the athletics department, provided no funds are allocated directly to student-athletes.

Satisfactory progress—remedial course work

4. Use of remedial course work during student's fourth quarter of enrollment (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the application of Case No. 321 (Question No. 2) to a member institution's request to permit a student-athlete to continue taking and utilizing remedial courses during the student-athlete's fourth quarter of attendance for purposes of fulfilling the satisfactory-progress requirements of Bylaw 5-1(j)-(6)-(ii), noting that the student-athlete withdrew from the member institution for medical reasons during his first quarter of collegiate enrollment and earned no academic credit for that term; approved the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee's recommendation that the student-athlete in this situation be permitted to enroll in (and utilize for purposes of this rule) remedial courses during the fourth quarter, provided the individual receives the medical absence exception to the satisfactory-progress rule set forth in Case No. 325.

Conference No. 19
November 15, 1988

Partial qualifier/transfer

5. Transfer of partial qualifier prior to completion of first academic year (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 5-1(j)-(5) and a previous committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 14 of the minutes of the committee's July 9, 1987, conference); reaffirmed per Item No. 15-a of the minutes of the committee's March 23, 1987, conference that a partial qualifier receiving financial assistance during his or her first year of attendance at a Division I member institution would be permitted to transfer to a second Division I or II four-year institution and receive athletically related financial assistance (but not practice or compete) while serving the one-year residence requirement as a transfer student.

All N.C. State coaches to get contracts

Contracts soon will be given to each of the varsity coaches at North Carolina State University, athletics director and men's basketball coach James T. Valvano says.

Valvano told The News and Observer of Raleigh that the contracts will emphasize graduation rates and adherence to the rules over won-lost records, thus lessening the pressure placed on the coaches. He said the contracts would be awarded on a three-year basis to the varsity coaches, but that assistant coaches also would be given contracts.

Women's head basketball coach Kay Yow will be offered a long-term contract, Valvano said.

Valvano said the decision to begin formulating contracts had come with the approval of Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton.

"I think that as we cry out for integrity in academics and talk about how a coach should treat a player, we should also talk about how a university should treat its coaches," Valvano said.

"I am very troubled by the constant change of coaches based on a three- or four-year deal and wins and losses, on the pressure on coaches to win. It's the exact opposite signal that, theoretically, we're

Olympic Games—promotions

6. Student-athletes promoting sale of Olympic coins. Determined that a previous committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 1-d of the minutes of the committee's December 2, 1987, conference), NCAA Constitution 3-1(e)-(4) and Case No. 93 would permit student-athletes with eligibility remaining to promote directly (and receive from the sponsoring organization actual and necessary expenses to the site of the promotion) the sale of Olympic coins produced by the U.S. Mint at the direction of the U.S. Congress, provided: (a) All funds generated by the use of the student-athletes' names, pictures or appearances are distributed directly to the U.S. Olympic Committee; (b) member institutions are responsible for monitoring and approving the involvement of their student-athletes in such a promotion, and (c) the student-athletes do not miss classes as a result of their participation in the promotion. Also noted that the

"cosponsor interpretations" (reference: Item No. 4 of the minutes of the committee's February 5, 1987, conference) apply to any commercial establishments at which such promotions are conducted; referred to a future agenda consideration of extending Constitution 3-1(e)-(4) to all not-for-profit organizations; recommended to the Council the removal of the aforementioned cosponsor restrictions.

Postseason bowl games

7. Corporate sponsor's identification on uniforms (Division I). Reaffirmed that Constitution 3-1(e) and Case No. 42 do not place a restriction on a corporate sponsor's identification on the uniform of student-athletes participating in postseason football bowl contests, provided the corporate sponsor is the sole title sponsor of the event and only the bowl logo (which may include a reference to the sponsor) is utilized for this purpose.

Rocker gets Outland Trophy

Auburn University defensive tackle Tracy Rocker has been named the winner of the 43rd annual Outland Trophy as the top interior lineman in college football.

"It means a lot to me because I can sit here and think about the times when I made some sacrifices and gave up some things because I wanted to have something special. I think it paid off," Rocker said.

Auburn led the nation this season in Division I-A scoring defense, total defense and rushing defense. Rocker made 101 tackles, including 13 behind the line of scrimmage, and had five quarterback sacks. His 354 career tackles are the most by any lineman in Auburn history.

Coach Pat Dye said, "I think he's probably the best (lineman) who has ever played at Auburn—period."

Rocker, a 6-3, 278-pound senior, is Auburn's second Outland winner. Guard Zeke Smith won the trophy in 1958.

supposed to be sending to our kids—that academics are more important than athletics," he said.

Valvano said it is time that a school "stood up and supported that proposition; either that or quit saying it. This will enable us to focus on the issue of academics."

Valvano said the contracts, which probably will go into effect in the 1989-90 school year, will contain clearly stated requirements and priorities for coaches.

Detailed reports on survey of student-athletes available

Copies of detailed reports regarding the methodology and the results of the 1987-88 National Study of Intercollegiate Athletes are now available on request from the NCAA national office.

The executive summary of the study appeared in its entirety in the December 5 issue of The NCAA News. That summary also is part of the more detailed reports.

The detailed reports are in two volumes. Report No. 1 presents the summary results in the study, including the executive summary. The report is 124 pages in length.

Report No. 2 presents the methodology used in the study. It totals 192 pages.

Both reports are available by writing AIR Study, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. No telephone requests will be accepted.

The study, commissioned by the NCAA Presidents Commission, funded by the NCAA and conducted by the American Institutes for Research, represents the most extensive research effort ever undertaken in intercollegiate athletics.

East Germans says they'll join effort to ban drugs in sports

By Larry Siddons

East German Olympic officials said December 8 that their country will join the United States and the Soviet Union in a crackdown on doping, completing a "Big Three" partnership against drugs in sports.

The second-leading nation in medals at the Seoul Olympics, East Germany said uniting the world's three top athletics nations was the best way to fight drugs.

"We are in favor of strict controls and against doping," said Manfred Ewald, president of the East German Olympic Committee. "In our opinion, having the three nations that finished in the first three places in the Olympic Games should set a good example for the rest of the world."

The Soviet Union won 132 medals in Seoul, while East Germany won 102 and the United States 94. None of the three nations had any athletes among the 10 who were punished for drug use at the games.

The International Olympic Committee also has been asked to add marijuana to the list of banned substances.

The Association of National Olympic Committees (ANOC), meeting in Vienna, said marijuana was a danger to health and "leads to the use of other, harder drugs."

The IOC found marijuana use among a small number of athletes tested at the Seoul Games but did not punish them. It was the first time the IOC tested for marijuana use.

U.S. officials said some procedural questions had to be answered before the East Germans could become partners in the new drug agreement, which will allow each nation to test the others' athletes on a random, out-of-season basis.

But they and leaders of the IOC welcomed the East German move.

"We're delighted," Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said. "If they really want to take part in a full exchange of information and cross-testing, we are delighted."

Helmick said he had discussed the East German initiative with Marat Gramov, his Soviet counterpart, and that Gramov also expressed pleasure with the action.

Ewald, who announced the move at ANOC's annual meeting, said East Germany had only a small drug problem and was dealing with both athletes and "others responsible" when positive tests are returned.

"What is really happening in the Soviet Union and the United States, we don't know," he said in an interview. "We read articles, but we don't consider that official information. The best way to prevent those rumors is to form a three-member commission for mutual controls."

In the wake of drug scandals in Seoul—including steroid use by 100-meter winner Ben Johnson, and five weight-lifters flunking dope tests—Helmick and Gramov announced that the two superpowers had agreed to join forces in the antidrug fight.

In a tentative agreement last month in Moscow, the U.S. and Soviet Olympic committees said they would set up ways of randomly testing each other's athletes and exchanging research and information about doping.

Siddons writes for the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK HEAD FOOTBALL COACH

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: In complete charge of the entire football program (Division I-AA), which includes the varsity squad, freshman squad and an informal junior varsity program. Under Ivy League coaching staff limitations, you will have a staff of six (6) full-time assistants and additional part-time assistants. Besides the actual coaching responsibilities, an intensive recruiting effort is expected within the rules and regulations of the NCAA, ECAC and Ivy League. Alumni relations in the areas of recruiting, summer job opportunities, career counseling and fund-raising is also a part of the job responsibilities. We are looking for an individual who has an understanding of the Ivy League philosophies and one who is very concerned and involved with his players in non-football related areas.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY DESCRIPTION: Columbia is a member of the Ivy League. Admission to the college is based primarily on academic achievement and financial aid is awarded on the basis of need. The University is located in New York City and has a total undergraduate enrollment of 5,600 students. All students must pursue a degree within a four-year period and their athletic experience must be completed within four years of their initial enrollment (with limited and extenuating exceptions). The Ivy League does not permit freshmen to compete on the varsity level in the sport of football. The League is made up of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Harvard, Yale, Brown, Princeton, Dartmouth; all are classified in Division I and Division I-AA in football. The Ivy League does not permit spring football practice and we are permitted to schedule 10 contests.

GENERAL QUALIFICATIONS: Master's or Bachelor's Degree; successful background in coaching football on the college level as either head or assistant coach; successful experience in the recruitment of student-athletes with high academic standards; ability to work within the framework of Ivy League regulations and restrictions. Salary: Commensurate with experience; Application Date: Immediately. Appointment Date: As soon as possible.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY COMMITTED TO AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AND EQUAL OPPORTUNITY PROGRAMS

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

1984

The Colonial League is accepting applications for the position of league executive director. Beginning with the 1990-91 season, The Colonial League will expand competition to include 21 sports for men and women, among eight member institutions. These are Bucknell University, Colgate University, The College of the Holy Cross, Davidson College, Fordham University, Lafayette College, Lehigh University, and the United States Military Academy. The individual offered the appointment will be expected to begin on 1 July 1989. The executive director's first responsibilities will be to establish a permanent league office, hire league staff, finalize league competition schedules and tournaments and to develop close contacts with league institutions.

The governance of the league is primarily the responsibility of the Council of Presidents, with the Policy Committee and the Committee on Athletic Administration serving as additional legislative and administrative bodies. The executive director should feel comfortable in working with those groups as well as with the other individuals within the league to include coaches, sports information directors, alumni directors and development officers. Familiarity with the National Collegiate Athletic Association and a commitment to work with that organization is important. The ideal candidate for this position will have experience with intercollegiate athletics, teaching or administration in higher education, institutional development to include media relations and corporate sponsorship, along with administrative and financial management experience. Advanced academic degree is desirable. Superior communications skills, both oral and written, are vital.

Individuals interested in being considered for this position should forward a letter of interest, a complete resume, and the names of at least three individuals who could be contacted for a letter of reference to: Executive Director Search Committee, The Colonial League, Lafayette College, Easton, PA 18042.

Deadline for applications is 31 January 1989.

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Lehigh University invites applications for the position of Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, Recreation and Intramural Sports.

The Director reports to the Vice-President for Student Affairs and serves a vital role on the management team in the Division of Student Affairs which directs student life, student services, athletics, recreation and enrollment for Lehigh's 4500 undergraduate and 2000 graduate students.

The Director administers a successful intercollegiate program consisting of 10 varsity sports for women and 12 varsity sports for men, all competing on the Division I level (football is 1-AA) within the rules, regulation and policies established by Lehigh University, The Colonial League and the NCAA. Additional responsibilities include business management of intercollegiate athletics, scheduling (subject to university policy), departmental facility management and athletic staff assignment, development and evaluation.

Candidates must demonstrate the ability to provide leadership and direction for department staff and coaches and should possess the skills, experience and personality necessary to work and communicate effectively with other Directors in the Division, other administrative offices, university faculty and staff, students, alumni and parents. Knowledge of and appreciation for Lehigh University, its heritage as a private co-educational, highly selective institution, its athletic traditions and its current mission is desirable.

Lehigh is seeking candidates who are committed to the ideal of the student-athlete, who have demonstrated such commitment in their personal and professional lives and who will recognize, appreciate, develop and promote the educational contributions of a distinctive athletic program.

Letters of application with resume should be mailed to:

Publication's goal is to interpret financial aid legislation

Final revisions currently are being made in a survey form that will be mailed in early January to financial aid directors and athletics administrators at selected NCAA member institutions.

The survey, which is expected to be completed next February, will provide data that will assist in developing the content and format of a supplementary publication on the Association's financial aid legislation that is expected to be published late next fall.

"Plans call for the survey to be mailed the first week of January," said Michael S. McNeely, NCAA compliance representative. "Forms will be mailed to 100 institutional financial aid directors and 100 athletics administrators who have been identified as playing integral roles in the administration of athletically related financial aid on their campuses."

The survey is being conducted by the Association, with assistance from the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and the American Institutes for Research. "All three membership divisions will be included in the mailing," McNeely noted, "although the survey will concentrate more on Divisions I and II financial aid issues."

The project has grown out of work by the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism to make the application of the Association's financial aid legislation easier for on-campus administrators.

As indicated in documents supplied last July to the Association's Executive Committee, the financial aid panel, at its inaugural meeting in July 1987, assigned the highest priority to the publication of explanatory narratives and illustrations designed to aid in the proper application and administration of NCAA financial aid rules.

Shortly after that inaugural meeting, the NCAA Council approved (in August 1987) in concept the committee's recommendation to publish materials that would assist in compliance with financial aid regulations. A year later, the Executive Committee (during its August 1988 meeting) authorized the necessary funding for the project.

"As has been noted by the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, there is no intention to produce a volume that will replace undertaken to provide those involved in the day-to-day application of the Association's financial aid rules with an opportunity to indicate the legislative areas that prove most the NCAA Manual in terms of financial aid legislation," McNeely explained. "It is the committee's hope that this publication will serve as a guide that makes the legislation easier to understand and apply."

McNeely said the survey is being difficult. "We also are asking for comments and suggestions concerning the format of the publication," he added.

Following completion of the survey, work will begin on the document itself. "We anticipate having the survey completed sometime in early February," noted McNeely, "and we expect to begin work on the publication soon thereafter."

"We are hopeful of getting a high response rate (from the January mailing)," he continued. "As noted in the materials that were reviewed by the Executive Committee in August, the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism is committed to producing a document that will prove truly useful to those in the membership who are responsible for financial aid administration for student-athletes."

"The only predetermined element of the publication is the desire to achieve that goal. And to accomplish that, it is important that those who receive the survey next month take the time to complete and return it."

New publications can be ordered from Association

The Association's Annual Reports for 1987-88 and two new editions of the NCAA rules series are among the publications available from the NCAA in December.

The Annual Reports includes reports of the Executive Committee and the treasurer; a statistical review of the past fiscal year; financial summaries of all 1987-88 NCAA championships; reports from each of the Association's standing committees, and the abridged minutes of the NCAA Council, Executive Committee and Presidents Commission.

The book is available to the membership for $6 and to nonmembers for $12.

The 1989 Baseball Rules and the 1989 Men's and Women's Cross Country and Track and Field Rules are the two new rules books available. Each publication sells for $3.

First-class postage for all NCAA publications is an additional $2 per book.

To receive an order form for any of the Association's more than 50 publications or The NCAA News, write or call: NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201; 913/831-8300.

Pepsi to sponsor Atlantic 10 event

The Atlantic 10 Conference men's basketball tournament will be exclusively sponsored by Pepsi for the next two years, league Commissioner Ron Bertovich said December 13.

The tournament will be called the Pepsi-Atlantic 10 Tournament.

The agreement encompasses title sponsorship, selection of a player of the game and a contest to allow fans in Atlantic 10 Conference markets to choose a player of the year, according to the Associated Press.

"It has always been one of our objectives to obtain title sponsorship for the tournament," Bertovich said in a statement released by the conference.
