Top coaches will preview 1989 football season

Ten outstanding NCAA football coaches, including two who rank among the all-time leaders in coaching victories, and approximately 60 of the nation's top sportswriters will gather February 19-21 at the Hyatt Regency Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri, to participate in the Association-sponsored College Football '89 Preview.

Among the coaches scheduled to attend the 13th annual preview are the University of Michigan's Glenn "Bo" Schembechler and the University of Georgia's Vince Dooley, both of whom rank among the top 10 coaches in all-time coaching victories.

Other coaches attending the preview are Bill Curry, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Dennis Erickson, Washington State University; Rocky Hager, North Dakota State University; Ken Hatfield, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Don Nehlen, West Virginia University; Tom Osborne, University of Nebraska, Lincoln; Paul Roach, University of Wyoming, and Steve Spurrier, Duke University.

Roger O. Valdiserri, University of Notre Dame associate athletics director and chair of the NCAA Communications Committee, will serve as moderator of the preview.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also will be in attendance.

Two panels of three coaches each will meet with sportswriters on the first morning of the preview to discuss pertinent topics in college athletics and to give their views about their teams' and conferences' outlooks.

After lunch, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will address the gathering; and then, coaches will be available for individual interviews. The day will be capped with a reception and dinner.

A panel of four coaches will meet the sportswriters the following morning. At noon, a telephone press conference with NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee chair and University of Arizona athletics director Cedric W. Dempsey will be held to discuss the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Bill Millsaps, sports editor of the Richmond Times Dispatch, will serve as moderator of the press conference.

Following are brief biographical sketches of the coaches selected for the 1989 preview.

Curry

Curry and his squad overcame numerous obstacles to post a 9-3 record in 1988 and continue Alabama's record number of bowl appearances. Alabama now has appeared in 41 bowl games going back to 1926, including a 29-28 victory over Army in this year's Sun Bowl.

Curry lost three starters to injury in a 10-day span early in the season but held the Crimson Tide together and never lowered the team's goals.

He improvised and compensated and still talked to his team about winning the Southeastern Conference championship. A one-point loss to Louisiana State burst the Crimson Tide's bubble, but late-season victories over Texas A&M and Army brought the team a measure of respect.

After playing in the National Football League for 10 years, Curry's coaching career began at Georgia Tech in 1976 as an assistant coach. For the next three seasons, he was offensive line coach for Bart Starr at Green Bay. He accepted the Georgia Tech head football job in 1980 and brought the program back to respectability.

The team was 2-19-1 his first two years but he rebuilt the program and finished with a 29-24-3 record. The Yellow Jackets posted an impressive 9-2-1 record in 1985 and ended the season with a stunning 17-14 victory over Michigan State in the All-American Bowl.

Other highlights of Curry's tenure at Tech included his 1984 team snapping Clemson's 20-game Atlantic Coast Conference win streak.

That same team defeated Alabama, Georgia and Clemson, the first Tech team to do so in the same season in 22 years.

Dooley

One of only a handful of Division I-A coaches with 200 or more victories, Dooley announced his retirement December 14 after 25 years as Georgia's head coach. He retired

Commission committee seeks suggestions on three topics

The NCAA Presidents Commission's Advisory Committee to Review the Governance Process has identified three major topics in its assignment and is inviting the NCAA membership to submit suggestions in those areas.

In the committee's first meeting, February 1 in Atlanta, it decided to approach its assignment by forming three task forces, each dealing with one of the identified topics.

The topics and the chair and members of each task force:

- The Association's legislative process and desirable hearing procedures regarding proposed legislation.

Chair: Stephen Horn, former president of California State University, Long Beach, and now trustee professor of political science at that institution.

Members: Wilford S. Bailey, immediate past president of the NCAA; Stan Bates, retired commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference, and Joe L. Singleton, former director of athletics at the University of California, Davis, now a physical education professor at that institution.

- The role of chief executive officers in the governance process.

Chair: Otis A. Singletary, president emeritus, University of Kentucky.

Members: William E. "Bud" Davis, former chancellor of the Oregon Higher Education System, now a professor in the department of post-secondary education at Oregon State University, and James J. Whalen, president, Ithaca College.

- The nature and "atmosphere" of NCAA Conventions.

Chair: John L. Toner, retired director of athletics at the University of Connecticut and a former NCAA president.

Members: Alan J. Chapman, professor of mechanical engineering at Rice University and the Association's parliamentarian; Gwendolyn Norrell, retired faculty athletics representative at Michigan State University and former NCAA Division

I vice-president, and John W. Ryan, president emeritus of Indiana University and chair of the Commission's advisory committee.

Included among the documents and suggestions that will be reviewed in detail by the task forces is the governance proposal presented at the Presidents Commission National Forum last June in Orlando by President Latic F. Coor of the University of Vermont.

The task forces will develop proposals for consideration by the full committee in its next meeting, scheduled March 15-16 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Member institutions and conferences are invited to send comments and suggestions to the task force chairs, using these addresses:

Stephen Horn, 3944 Pine Avenue, Long Beach, California 90807.

Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, 104 King Library North, Lexington, Kentucky 40506-0039.

John L. Toner, Golden Arms, Apt. 807, New Smyrna Beach, Florida 32069.

The advisory committee was formed by the Presidents Commission last fall, after consultation with the NCAA Administrative Committee.

Ice hockey play-offs have first sellout

For the first time in the 41-year history of the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, tickets for the semifinals and third-place and championship contests are sold out.

The championship will be played March 30 to April 1 at the 15,600-seat Civic Center in St. Paul, Minnesota.

"That is a real credit to the Twin Cities area and its support of ice hockey and, in this case, intercollegiate ice hockey," said Daniel B. "Tucker" DiEdwardo, NCAA director of championships and staff liaison to the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Committee.

"This is the first time all four sessions have sold out.

"The people who came before the committee representing St. Paul said they could sell out the Civic Center because this is a great hockey area. And this is probably beyond their expectations.

"They thought they would sell out sometime in late February instead of two months in advance."

The St. Paul Area Chamber of Commerce is the sponsoring agency for the championship.

Acting as cohosts are the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, and the University of Minnesota, Duluth.

Additional funds sought to expand project aimed at eating disorders

An expansion of a project to combat eating disorders among student-athletes, particularly women, is being sought by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that funds be made available to produce three 15-minute videotapes on eating disorders, which would be available to the Association's membership. Related printed materials also would be made available.

The committee's action, which took place during its January 17-19 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, follows approval of legislation by the NCAA Convention in January to permit member institutions to provide to student athletes counseling expenses related to eating disorders.

The Council sponsored the legislation following a recommendation by the committee. The proposal also was endorsed by the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics.

Assisting the NCAA sports science staff in production of the material is Ann C. Grandjean of the International Center for Sports Nutrition at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

Originally, only one videotape was planned, but committee members agreed that more information should be made available.

Some equate the problem of eating disorders in athletics with that of steroids.

An Oregon psychologist and sports consultant says eating disorders, particularly among women athletes, are of epidemic proportions, just like "there is an epidemic for males with steroids."

The psychologist, Scott Pengally, takes the problem a step further.

"The problem isn't steroids, and it isn't eating disorders," he told the Boston Globe. "It's the thinking that 'whatever it is, it's not going to hurt me, and I can do it and win.'"

"Anorexia, bulimia, steroid abuse—it all works in the short run, for 18 months, until the wheels fall off," Pengally said.

A coach of about 50 runners in Massachusetts, Bob Sevens, said the problem is not of epidemic proportions, "but it is a serious problem.

"This is as big a problem as steroids; it does the same thing," Sevens said, referring to the physical damage caused by eating disorders.

A University of Texas, Austin, psychologist said he sees a problem with eating disorders in sports other

Legislative Assistance

1989 Column No. 6

Initial eligibility—NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1.1-(b) (1989 Convention Proposal No. 49)

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed Convention Proposal No. 49 amending 14.3.1.1-(b) [formerly Bylaw 5-1-(j)], which permits Division I prospective student-athletes to achieve the minimum required SAT or ACT score not later than the end of the student's final term of secondary education or the July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first enrollment in a collegiate institution, and allows a Division II prospective student-athlete to fulfill the standardized-test requirement at any time prior to initial collegiate enrollment. The committee confirmed that for both Divisions I and II member institutions, this legislation may be applied retroactively to student-athletes who did not meet the earlier deadline (i.e., the July 1 immediately preceding the individual's first collegiate enrollment) for completing their tests under the previous legislation but who did comply with the new requirements of Proposal No. 49. The committee clarified that for Division I member institutions, this legislation is intended to extend the opportunity to complete the standardized-test requirement only through the last term in which the student completes his or her high school graduation requirements.

Recruiting contacts—NCAA Bylaw 13.1.4 (1989 Convention Proposal No. 143)

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Convention Proposal No. 143 amending 13.1.4 [formerly Bylaw 1-2-(a)], which establish one limitation on the maximum number of recruiting contacts for all Divisions I and II sports. The committee made determinations regarding the application of this regulation as follows:

1. During the permissible contact periods, institutional representatives in a particular sport are permitted to visit a high school or junior college one time per week (subject to 2, 4 and 5 below).
2. Each member institution is permitted to make a total of three contacts with a particular prospect at the prospect's educational institution during the permissible contact periods.
3. Each member institution is permitted to make a total of three contacts with a particular prospect at sites other than the prospect's educational institution during the permissible contact periods.
4. If a prospective student-athlete is a multisport athlete, all institutional representatives are permitted only one visit per week on the same day to the prospect's educational institution.
5. If a high school, college preparatory school or two-year college has two prospective student-athletes being recruited by the same member institution in two different sports, then it would be permissible for the institutional representatives to visit the high school, college preparatory school or two-year college on two days during the same week, it being understood that only one of the two prospects is contacted on each occasion.

Promotional activities—NCAA Bylaw 12.5 (1989 Convention Proposal No. 144)

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Convention Proposal No. 144 amending 12.5 [formerly NCAA Constitution 3-1-(e)], which allow member institutions and charitable organizations to utilize a student-athlete's name, picture or appearance to support their charitable or educational activities, or to support activities considered incidental to the student-athlete's participation in intercollegiate athletics. The committee confirmed that a member institution now may provide or sell autographed game balls for this purpose. Further, the committee agreed that a student-athlete should be permitted to receive actual and necessary travel and meal expenses only within a 100-mile radius of the institution's campus when the student-athlete participates in any charitable or educational activities.

Rawlings, NCAA extend contract

Rawlings Sporting Goods and the NCAA have announced a three-year extension for Rawlings to serve as the official and exclusive supplier of basketballs for the NCAA Men's and Women's Divisions I, II and III Basketball Championships.

This agreement also names Rawlings as an official NCAA corporate sponsor.

Each corporate sponsor of the NCAA confirms its commitment to the furtherance of intercollegiate athletics with contributions to NCAA youth and sports development programs, which support drug education, the National Youth Sports Program (NYSPP) and Youth Education through Sports (YES).

The contract became effective August 1, 1986. It now will extend through the 1992 championships.

Rawlings' RLO-NCAA (men's) and RLL-NCAA (women's) full-grain leather basketballs will continue to be used exclusively during all NCAA championships.

Rawlings maintains exclusive rights to distribute a complete line of NCAA basketballs and accessories at the retail level nationwide.

"We are extremely delighted and proud of our association with the NCAA," said Howard Keene, president of Rawlings. "We are committed to intercollegiate athletics and dedicated to promoting the NCAA."

Rawlings also is the official supplier of footballs for NCAA Divisions I-AA, II and III Football Championships.

Rawlings manufactures baseball, football, soccer and volleyball products and is a major supplier of sports equipment and uniforms to professional, college, high school, youth and other sports organizations.

Rawlings is a division of Figgie International, Inc., a major diversified Fortune 500 company with more than 40 principal divisions and subsidiaries serving consumer, industrial, technical and service markets worldwide.

Four cities to bid for '94, '95 Final Fours

Four cities have been invited to make bids to host the 1994 and 1995 NCAA Final Fours, according to Cedric W. Dempsey, chair of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee and athletics director at the University of Arizona.

The sites are the Charlotte Coliseum, Charlotte, North Carolina; the Brendan Byrne Arena, East

Rutherford, New Jersey; the Hoosier Dome, Indianapolis, Indiana; and the Kingdome, Seattle, Washington.

Representatives of the four sites will make presentations to the committee during its summer meeting July 2-6 in Grand Traverse, Michigan. The committee then will make its recommendations to the NCAA Executive Committee.

The four were selected from more than a dozen proposals received. "The committee was extremely pleased with the outstanding quality of all the proposals," Dempsey said. "We had an extremely difficult time narrowing the list to four. We feel, though, that the four remaining sites best suited the needs of this extremely popular event."

Keith Martin joins staff

Keith E. Martin has been named director of accounting in the Association's business department.

A certified public accountant, Martin joins the national office staff from the accounting firm of Deloitte, Haskins & Sells, where he has worked for several years. He holds an undergraduate degree in accounting and a master's degree in business administration, both from the University of Kentucky.

As an undergraduate, Martin was a defensive lineman on the Wildcat football team and was named to the Southeastern Conference's all-academic first team three times. Martin was named Kentucky's athlete of the year as a senior and earned an NCAA postgraduate scholarship.

As director of accounting, Martin will be responsible for payroll processing, general accounting, financial reporting, championships accounting and reporting, administration of the Association's transportation programs, and special projects.

Rudd is researcher/curator

Will Rudd has been named researcher/curator of the visitors center that will be housed in the Association's new headquarters building, which currently is under construction in Overland Park, Kansas.

A graduate of the University of Tulsa, Rudd served seven years with the Kansas City Royals baseball club. With the Royals, he worked as a public relations assistant and then as traveling secretary.

Rudd also has served as sales manager for Kansas City's Adams Mark Hotel. While enrolled as a student at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, he served as a student assistant in the school's sports information office.

Raycom's Big Ten ratings up

Raycom Sports' Big Ten football television network had a 10.8 percent ratings increase in 1988, delivering a record 1,314,000 households in Raycom's first year of association with the Big Ten Conference.

Raycom obtained rights to Big Ten football from Rasmussen Communications Management before the start of the 1988 season.

Meanwhile, on Raycom's five-year-old Southwest Athletic Conference network, the numbers remained steady with a 7 rating.

gymnastics.

"I've told people that what we're doing to women athletes as far as eating disorders is just the same as men and steroids. For many, it can become an addictive type of behavior."

Steven C. Rueckert

Rueckert joins enforcement staff

Steven C. "Randy" Rueckert has joined the national office staff as an enforcement representative.

Rueckert is a graduate of Monmouth College (Illinois), where he participated in football and baseball for four years and earned a bachelor's degree in political science.

After earning a law degree from Loyola University (Illinois), Rueckert served six years as a prosecuting attorney for Cook County, Illinois. For the past year, he has been in private practice in Chicago.

with an overall 201-77-10 record from the job he took as a 31-year-old in 1963.

Dooley tied for ninth in all-time coaching victories (201) and ranks among the all-time leaders with a .715 winning percentage. He led the Bulldogs to the No. 1 ranking in 1980 and six Southeastern Conference titles (1966, 1968, 1976, 1980, 1981, 1982) in addition to guiding Georgia to 21 postseason bowl games. He was named coach of the year in 1980 and was voted Southeastern Conference coach of the year seven times.

In 10 of Dooley's 25 seasons, one of his student-athletes earned first-team academic all-America honors and 73 of his players were named to the academic all-Southeastern Conference team.

Although Dooley, 56, is best known for his coaching accomplishments, he has developed the overall men's and women's athletics program into one of the best in the nation since being named athletics director in 1979.

During Dooley's tenure as athletics director, Georgia has won 22 Southeastern Conference championships, four national championships (football, 1980; men's tennis, 1985 and 1987; women's gymnastics, 1987), and numerous individual national titles in both men's and women's sports.

Dooley was honored in 1984 as sports administrator of the year by the Georgia sports hall of fame. He also was inducted into the Georgia sports hall of fame in 1978.

Erickson

Success has followed Erickson through his career. In only his second year, Washington State posted a 9-3 record, the best Cougar mark since 1930, and capped the season with a 24-22 victory over high-powered Houston in the Aloha Bowl. It was the Cougars' first bowl appearance since they met Brigham Young in the 1981 Holiday Bowl.

Erickson, who helped turn Wyoming's program around before arriving at Washington State in 1987, is a former quarterback and helped develop the Cougars' Timm Rosenbach into one of the nation's best signal callers.

Under Erickson's wide-open offensive attack, Rosenbach led the nation in passing efficiency and finished third in total offense with an average of 286 yards a game. The Cougars finished third in total offense and averaged 35 points a game.

At Wyoming, Erickson scrapped the wishbone in favor of his "Air Express" offense, which was second in the nation in passing offense and broke every school passing record during the course of the season.

Before his stint at Wyoming, Erickson enjoyed the most success of any Idaho coach, tallying a 32-15 record in four seasons. His teams earned a berth in the Division I-AA play-offs in both his first (1982) and his last (1985) seasons. In 1985, the Vandals were 9-3 and captured the school's first Big Sky Conference title since 1971.

Hager

Hager guided North Dakota State back to where the Bison have roamed more than any other school—the NCAA Division II Football Championship—in only his second season. The Bison stomped over Portland State in typical fashion en route to their 35-21 victory. They stifled the Vikings' high-powered offense and executed their option running attack to near-perfection, gaining 339 yards.

By North Dakota State standards, Hager got off to a rocky start in his first season. The Bison finished with a 6-4 record and did not receive a play-off bid for the first time since 1980.

But Hager's team rebounded last fall to lead the division in rushing (373.1 yards per game) and to a second-place finish in total offense (478.9), en route to a 14-0 record and the school's fourth Division II championship in the last six years.

Hager, the first North Dakota native to guide the Bison since Ev Kjelbertson served as coach from 1973 through 1975, is the most recent in a long line of outstanding North Dakota State coaches.

He was a graduate assistant at North Dakota State in 1979 under former Bison head coach Don Morton. In 1985, he became defensive coordinator under Earle Solomonson, who guided the Bison to back-to-back Division II titles, and succeeded him as head coach in 1987.

Morton now is Wisconsin's coach and Solomonson is rebuilding Montana State's program. Other former North Dakota State coaches who helped build the tradition Hager is maintaining include Ron Erhardt, who is coaching in the National Football League, and Darrell Mudra, who recently retired after a 26-year career with a 200-81-4 record.

Hatfield

Arkansas has compiled a 45-15-1 record in the five years Hatfield has led the Razorbacks and his .746 winning percentage ranks as best in school history.

The Razorbacks are coming off a season highlighted by a 10-2 record, including a 7-0 finish in the Southwest Athletic Conference and a trip to the Cotton Bowl for the first time since 1975. Although the Razorbacks lost, 17-3, to UCLA, the 1988 season proved that Hatfield is one of the nation's top coaches.

Arkansas was picked in preseason polls to finish third in the conference, but Hatfield guided the Razorbacks to the SWC's first undefeated conference record since 1983. He subsequently was named conference coach of the year by the Associated Press and United Press International.

The Razorbacks averaged nearly 32 points and 400 yards per game in total offense out of their flexbone offense, and the defense led the nation in turnover margin.

Hatfield's teams have won nine or more games four years in a row and he has led Arkansas to spots in the Cotton, Orange, Holiday and Liberty Bowls.

Hatfield led the nation in punt returns and was a standout defensive back on Arkansas' 1964 11-0 team that defeated Nebraska in the Cotton Bowl.

Nehlen

Nehlen has a 69-36-1 record in nine seasons at West Virginia and a 122-71-5 mark in 18 years as a head coach. He has led the Mountaineers to nine-victory seasons three times, but West Virginia's 1988 team will be remembered as Nehlen's best yet.

Although West Virginia's bid for the No. 1 ranking came up short against Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl, the Mountaineers made national headlines by cruising to an 11-0 regular-season record.

Nehlen, who played quarterback at Bowling Green in the late 1950s, served as defensive coordinator at his alma mater from 1965 to 1968. He subsequently accepted the head coaching position and compiled a 53-35-4 record in nine seasons.

His 1974 team finished 8-3, Bowling Green's best record in a decade. During his stay at Bowling Green, Nehlen earned the title of "Master of the Upset." He coached the Falcons to victories over Syracuse, Purdue and Brigham Young.

Nehlen resigned in 1977 and joined Bo Schembechler's coaching staff at Michigan, where he served as quarterbacks and receivers coach and oversaw the Wolverines' recruiting program until arriving at West Virginia in 1980. The Wolverines played in the Rose Bowl twice and made a Gator Bowl appearance during his career at Michigan.

Osborne

In 16 years at Nebraska, Osborne has led the Cornhuskers to top-10 finishes in at least one wire-service poll 15 times and to bowl-game appearances every year since taking over for the legendary Bob Devaney, who picked him to take over the program in 1973.

Seven of Osborne's teams, including the 1988 squad, have won or shared the Big Eight Conference title. The Cornhuskers, who compiled an 11-2 record this season, lead Division I-A in consecutive winning seasons with 27, a streak that stretches back to Devaney's arrival in 1962.

Nebraska won its fifth NCAA rushing title of the 1980s, averaging more than 382 yards a game, but the Cornhusker defense was equally impressive. Osborne's defensive unit came together after early season adversity to shut out Colorado, 7-0, and deny Oklahoma a touchdown for the first time in 46 years in a 7-3 win to end the regular season and earn a trip to the Orange Bowl.

Colleges should reaffirm their primary mission

By Francis W. Bonner
Furman University

John Thompson, basketball coach at Georgetown University, has engendered much publicity by his reaction to a measure passed at the recent NCAA Convention in San Francisco. He does not label "Proposition 42" as being racist, but he claims that it discriminates against a certain category of student-athletes.

Believing that few in the public fully understand Proposition 42 and how it is related to "Proposition 48," now in force, I shall try to clarify the issue.

We must first understand Proposition 48, properly called Bylaw 5-1-(j) (14.3.1 and 2 in the revised NCAA Manual). That rule prescribes that to practice, play and receive athletically related financial aid during the student-athlete's first year in college, three requirements must be met: graduation from high school, an average grade of C or better on a core of 11 academic courses in high school and achievement of a score of 700 or better on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 or better on the American College Test. Such a student can play on a team four years.

Francis W. Bonner

The student who satisfies these three requirements is classified as a qualifier. If a student is a high school graduate but fails to meet the core-curriculum requirement and has not made 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT, that student becomes a nonqualifier and may not practice, play or receive athletically related financial aid during his or her first year in college. Further, a nonqualifier can practice and play for only three years.

A student who fails to satisfy the core-curriculum requirement and/or the test-score minimum of 700 but has a 2.000 overall GPA in high school is a partial qualifier. He or she may not practice or play during the first collegiate year and can play only the three years thereafter, but such a student may receive athletically related financial aid. Proposition 42, however, eliminates the category of partial qualifier, thus ruling out athletically related financial aid for such a student. That change is scheduled to become effective August 1, 1990. This is the change to which Thompson objects.

Does it create an unjust hardship for the "deprived" student for whom the coach expresses concern? The culprit seems really to be Bylaw 5-1-(j) rather than Proposition 42. Specifically, the required SAT score of 700 is the villain.

When Bylaw 5-1-(j) was first proposed in 1983, some educators (mostly those in predominantly black institutions) complained bitterly that the test score was unfair because black students could not be expected to equal the scores of other students. But the rule was enacted, and many of those early critics are admitting that during its four years in force, it has had a salutary effect on students of all categories—particularly those who aspire to be college athletes.

"Any high school senior who has paid more than token attention to his academic courses should be able to make satisfactory grades on the core curriculum and at least 700 on the SAT."

The fact is that Bylaw 5-1-(j) is not being basically changed by Proposition 42. And, rightly considered, this rule is composed of minimum requirements. Any high school senior who has paid more than token attention to his academic courses should be able to make satisfactory grades on the core curriculum and at least 700 on the SAT. (The average score for Furman's freshmen is just below 1200.) In short, a student who is only minimally prepared for college can be a qualifier for athletics participation.

But what about the student who has grown up in deprived circumstances and suddenly exhibits an intense desire to obtain a college degree?

This student probably has paid little attention to his books in high school, and he is graduated after having let slip the opportunity to prepare himself for college. Should he be given a chance to show that he can be successful in college? Coach Thompson and some other educa-

Bottom line is students' welfare

To the Editor:

On January 2, the worst possible fear that ever enters the mind of a coach or athletics director became a reality at Virginia Commonwealth University when Mike Brown, a men's varsity basketball player, collapsed and died in practice.

Brown, a senior with no history of cardiovascular problems, went into mild convulsions and fell to the floor. Immediate resuscitation by a trainer and later by paramedics and university medical center emergency-room personnel proved futile. Brown was pronounced dead approximately one hour after his collapse.

Death is difficult to deal with at any time. But death of an apparently healthy athlete, who is conditioned to compete at a top level of competition in the prime of his life, make it even more of a tragedy.

Fortunately, VCU is blessed with professionals in many different areas. They were eager to lend their expertise at a most difficult time. The administrators, physicians and nurses at the Medical College of Virginia (VCU's health science division) were extremely supportive. The VCU counseling center not only assisted me in forming a strategic plan to help our players deal with the trauma, but spent untold hours with the players and coaches helping them work through the tragedy. The VCU police worked diligently behind the scenes in many of the areas that are never noticed. Many other university officials provided numerous resources and moral support to help us through this difficult time.

While I had extreme confidence that the VCU family would rally to support us, consequences out of our control had to be considered. After consultation with university psychologists and counselors who had been in contact with our team and coaches, it became apparent that we could not play two regularly scheduled Sun Belt Conference basketball games.

Upon notifying Commissioner Vic Bubas of the death of Brown and the need to reschedule, his response was that we needed to do what was in the best interest of our student-athletes. There was no hesitation on the part of Commissioner Bubas, just concern over the well-being of student-athletes.

After communicating with Commissioner Bubas, I contacted Don Jacobs, athletics director at Jacksonville University, and Paul Griffin, athletics director at the University of South Florida, to discuss our situation. The cooperation exhibited by both Jacksonville and South Florida was unbelievable. Within three hours, both had made arrangements to reschedule the games.

Any athletics director or coach whose university plays its games in a municipal coliseum is aware of the difficulties in scheduling. Yet, both Jacobs and Griffin were eager to face this hassle to assist the student-athletes of an opponent. Promotions, advertising, local television and other financial considerations were never a factor in Jacksonville's and South Florida's decisions. The bottom line was not the $25,000 loss from television revenues but the needs of student-athlete.

All too often, college athletics programs are portrayed as revenue-grabbing, financially oriented organizations that display little or no regard for the best interest of student-athletes. Unfortunately, stories such as these that indicate real concern for student-athletes are not commonly reported.

Sacrificing revenue, television exposure and game attractions, while creating major additional workloads, demonstrate that student-athletes are important to many college athletics programs and particularly to the Sun Belt Conference and its members. Bubas, Griffin and Jacobs gave us all a

"Despite lucrative television deals resulting in big payoffs in the postseason football bowl games and basketball tournament, nearly half the athletics departments of schools in Division I are operating in the red, a result of having to support as many as 30 varsity men's and women's scholarship sports, most of which do not produce revenue.

"Invariably, this puts more pressure on football and basketball programs to maintain winning teams.

High schools need to change rule

To the Editor:

The rule change requiring college place kickers to kick field goals and PATs off the ground is very positive. For years, they have been trained to kick off a tee; and for some, when their biggest career opportunity comes, they fail to make the transition to kicking off the ground at the NFL level.

The number of missed field goals in 1990 will increase, as will blocked PATs due to low ball trajectory off the ground. However, as college place kickers master the proper "off-the-ground mechanics," accuracy will rise for the better kickers, just as good as the best in the NFL.

The final rule adjustment now must come at the high school level. For a solid kicking game at both the high school and college levels, the rule must be consistent.

It makes no sense to have a high school kicker kick off a tee for four years and be totally unprepared for movement up to the college level. Both the player and the quality of kicking at the college level will suffer.

It's time to reward good students

To the Editor:

With all of the controversy surrounding Proposition 42 and the general concern about the graduation rates of the student-athletes, isn't it time to reward the good students?

I strongly urge the (NCAA) members to consider legislation that would allow those student-athletes who graduate in four years to have another year of eligibility.

Think about it. All the pressures put on winning would now apply to the graduation of our student-athletes. Graduation rates would soar.

Hold the line on academic standards

To the Editor:

I want to express briefly my opinion relative to Proposal 42 as a former college athlete in a small but academically challenging college and as a public schools educator for the past 31 years, including many years as a coach and high school administrator.

I want to express my appreciation to those who approved the proposal and extend congratulations to them.

I think the simple question to be asked of detractors of the proposal is this: What is the purpose of higher education? It seems to me that intercollegiate athletics is a part of higher education and not the other way around.

I always held Georgetown University to be an outstanding academic institution. Was I wrong, or is John Thompson the new president who runs the school? And the same goes for so many others. Let's keep our priorities straight, set standards and then let individual athletes stretch to meet those standards.

It seems to me that there is a community college system in this country that could serve as a means for those not meeting initial standards, or perhaps the NBA or other professional organizations need to finance and underwrite "minor league" franchises instead of the colleges serving that function.

Hang in there.

Scholarship policies could face legal tests

By Patricia McCormack

Scholarship policies of the NCAA and hundreds of colleges may be vulnerable to legal action since a judge ruled New York scholarships based on SATs alone are unfair to girls, an advocate of test reform said February 6.

A similar opinion was expressed by the head of the Princeton Review, a college admission's test coaching service operating in 40 cities.

But experts at the College Board and Educational Testing Service, the agencies behind the Scholastic Aptitude Test, denied that the tests favor boys.

Sarah Stockwell, admissions test coordinator of the National Center for Fair and Open Testing (Fair-Test), a test-reform advocacy group in Cambridge, Massachusetts, said, "The ruling indicates to me that institutions that set arbitrary cutoff scores and rely on the test scores exclusively or heavily need to review their procedures or risk similar legal action."

"That includes the NCAA, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation and hundreds of colleges. Massachusetts also uses the scores alone."

Plaintiffs in the New York State case included the Girl's Clubs of America, 10 female high school seniors and the National Organization for Women of New York State.

Ex-player seeking athletics career says SEC internship a good start

By Ketra Armstrong

Athletics has been an integral part of my life. Now that my career as a collegiate basketball player has ended, my greatest aspiration is to become a successful basketball coach and athletics administrator.

Therefore, being an intern in the Southeastern Conference is most definitely a golden opportunity for me. This internship has allowed me to work with the best in the country in athletics administration and communication, both throughout the conference and in the conference office.

Simply making the acquaintance of the commissioner and associate commissioners is an honor in itself, but working with them is indeed a privilege. It is interesting to me to listen to the "big shots" wheel and deal with negotiations in scheduling, marketing and promotional ventures. It is also very informative listening to the legislative and enforcement concerns. The SEC office is a very busy, but awfully exciting, place to be.

My intern program is rather flexible. For the most part, it allows me to choose my course by branching off into areas that are of special interest to me. Basically, I am under the supervision of Patricia W. Wall, associate commissioner.

My specific assignments include working with the eligibility and certification of athletes (completion and accuracy of squad lists), gathering statistics and information for conference publications, assisting with the conference tournaments and championships, performing various computer operations, and mailing out weekly news releases and other forms of correspondence. Often, I am involved in special projects as needed by the conference and staff members. Each task I perform provides a new learning experience.

I have had the good fortune, on several occasions, of visiting the SEC institutions, meeting the coaches and watching the athletics teams in competition.

This is largely due to the commissioner's effort to provide maximum exposure to the major events and some of the most prominent leaders in athletics business and administration.

The statistics on the number of minority and women athletics administrators are often very discouraging. Women's sports have progressed and drastically increased in popularity. However, only a small percentage of the athletics teams and programs are under the leadership and administration of females. This trend will continue unless there are programs specifically designed to filter women into athletically related fields.

This internship experience is priceless. It offers ample diversities and a wide array of encounters. Although the work gets tough, I really enjoy what I am doing. Life as an SEC intern is truly an adventure.

Armstrong's internship was provided by the SEC under the NCAA conference grant program to enhance the involvement of women and minorities in athletics administration. She holds a master's degree from Mississippi State University.

Colleges

tors (chiefly coaches) say yes.

But it appears that Mr. Thompson has a very special kind of student in mind. That student may or may not have the desire for a college education, but he does have something else—outstanding athletics ability. While he has been neglecting his academic courses in high school, he has been developing an unstoppable jump shot, or he has reached a height of seven feet. During his high school years, he probably believed that acceptable academic performance is irrelevant—that the key to a college degree is athletics ability alone.

I do not question Mr. Thompson's altruism—his concern for the student who has been reared in deprived circumstances. I share his concern. Therefore, I have a suggestion for him and those educators who feel as he does. I suggest that they persuade their colleges and universities to provide funds sufficient to enable significant numbers of such students to prove that they are willing to do their best to become college graduates.

The fact that they might have no athletics skills or ambitions should not be a consideration.

There are many colleges and universities, however, that have admissions and academic standards that would limit the acceptance of large numbers of such students—students, that is, who show scant preparation or aptitude for higher education.

Too many institutions appear to assume that an athletics program

"Too many institutions appear to assume that an athletics program devoid of nonqualifiers or partial qualifiers cannot produce winning teams. That is a false assumption."

devoid of nonqualifiers or partial qualifiers cannot produce winning teams. That is a false assumption. Winning teams can be composed of good students. Furman University has produced winning teams on which there are no nonqualifiers or partial qualifiers.

Is Proposition 42 discriminatory? Yes, in that it may create a financial problem for a student-athlete who obviously is not academically prepared for college. But it does not discriminate per se against students of a particular color or from deprived domestic circumstances.

Finally, if Mr. Thompson believes he can bring about a change in Proposition 42 in the near future, he is deluding himself. The rule will be in the book at least until the NCAA Convention in January 1990, and I hope it will not be revoked then.

It is time for some colleges and universities to determine where their primary mission lies—in athletics or academics. Richard D. Schultz, executive director of the NCAA, put it this way: "We are in a state of change and we should not fear positive change. Our real purpose is to prepare people to be major contributors in society, not to produce winning teams."

Maryland grads lead Division I coaching ranks

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

Looking at the current field of 293 Division I men's head coaches, the college with the most graduates in the active ranks is Maryland with seven. Next are four schools with four coaches each: Duke, Indiana, Louisiana Tech and North Carolina. Several have three each.

Five of the Maryland graduates played at least part of their careers under Bud Millikan, who in turn was a pupil of Henry "Hank" Iba at Oklahoma A&M (now Oklahoma State). The five are Long Beach State's Joe Harrington (1967), Old Dominion's Tom Young (1958), Ohio State's Gary Williams (1968), Towson State's Terry Truax (1968) and Monmouth's (New Jersey) Wayne Szoke (1963). The other two Maryland graduates—Ohio's Billy Hahn (1975) and Southwestern Louisiana's Marty Fletcher (1973), played under Charles "Lefty" Driesell.

The Indiana graduates are Western Michigan's Vern Payne, Evansville's Jim Crews, William and Mary's Chuck Swenson and Georgia State's Bob Reinhart. Louisiana Tech's alumni are Louisiana Tech's Tommy Joe Eagles, New Orleans' Tim Floyd, Marshall's Rick Huckaby and Centenary's Tommy Canterbury.

In total victories by alumni, Kansas graduates Dean Smith of North Carolina and Ralph Miller of Oregon State, both Naismith Hall of Fame inductees, lead with 1,322 through February 8. Smith, now in his 28th year at Carolina, had 656 career victories and Miller, who retires this year after 38 seasons, had 666 through February 8 (649 with forfeited and vacated games). Both played for the legendary Forrest C. "Phog" Allen.

500 and .750

Only eight coaches in history in all divisions, NCAA and NAIA, have combined a .750 career winning percentage with at least 500 career victories. Only two are active.

The eight are Adolph Rupp, .822 and 875 at Kentucky; Allen, .768 and 770, mostly at Kansas; John Wooden, .806 and 667, mostly at UCLA; Smith, .779 and 656 through February 8; John McLendon Jr., .760 and 523 at North Carolina Central, Hampton, Tennessee State, Kentucky State and Cleveland State; Ed Adams, .808 and 645 at North Carolina Central, Tuskegee and Texas Southern; Dean Nicholson, .756 and 567 at Central Washington and Jerry Tarkanian, .823 and 516 through February 8 at Long Beach State and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Four of the eight are Kansas graduates—Rupp (1923), Allen (1906), Smith (1953) and McLendon (1936). Wooden is a 1932 Purdue graduate, Adams a 1933 Tuskegee graduate, Nicholson a 1950 Central Washington graduate and Tarkanian a 1956 Fresno State graduate.

Divisions II and III

Cortland State and Bowling Green currently have the most graduates—three each—coaching actively at Division II schools, while 23 other schools have two each. The Cortland State alumni are Adelphi's Jim O'Connor (1983), Long Island-

Trenton State's Greg Grant leads Division III men in scoring at 33.8 per game

Jackie Motycka, Bowling Green, is eighth in Division I women's free-throw percentage

C. W. Post's Tom Galeazzi (1961) and Quinnipiac's Burt Kahn (1952). Bowling Green's three are Oakland's Greg Kempe (1978), Tennessee-Martin's Tom Hancock (1967) and Wayne State's (Michigan) Ron Hammye (1978).

Brockport State and Springfield each have eight graduates coaching in Division III. For Brockport State, they are Rochester Institute of Technology's Bob McVean (1969), Clarkson's Jay Murphy (1981), Bethany's (West Virginia) Jim Zalacca (1979), Geneseo State's Tom Pope (1960), Elmira's Kevin Moore (1983), Utica's Ed Jones (1973), Colorado College's Al Walker (1981) and Johns Hopkins' Bill Nelson (1965).

The Springfield alumni are Stevens Tech's Wally Whitaker (1962), New York Maritime's John Dwinell (1981), Whittier's David Jacobs (1965), Hamilton's Tom Murphy (1962), Union's (New York) Bill Scanlon (1966), Gustavus Adolphus' Charlie Brock (1976), Ramapo's Todd Meyer (1981) and Sewanee's

II Bloomsburg at 20-0 and Division III Clark (Massachusetts) at 19-0—through February 6. Texas' 34-0 national-championship team in 1986 posted the only perfect women's record in all divisions since 1982.

Quotes of the week

Things have not been the same at UC Riverside since the Highlanders upset then-undefeated and fourth-ranked Iowa, 110-92, on Christmas night in Honolulu. The team sank an NCAA collegiate (all-divisions) record 21 three-point field goals (in 36 attempts) that dreamy night.

"People have written to me from all across the country and sent me clippings on the game," coach John Masi told Chuck Schoffner of the Associated Press. "I even got a letter from a guy in Tonga in the South Pacific. He sent me the AP story that appeared in the Singapore edition of the International Herald Tribune."

Masi has spent his entire playing and coaching career (18 years) at UC Riverside. He keeps the Iowa

Graceland Mansion, and some of the kids asked what the 'TCB' on the side of one of his airplanes meant. I told them it was his motto for 'Taking Care of Business,' and that's exactly what we did tonight." (David Myers, Louisiana Tech women's SID)

Delaware women's coach Joyce Perry, in her 16th year of coaching, picked up her 200th career victory January 14 as the Blue Hens defeated Lafayette, 55-46. Her team leads the East Coast Conference, and Perry is anxious about the ECC play-offs but even more anxious about the late-April arrival of her second child. She and husband Greg, the offensive line coach for the Delaware football team, already have one son, Rhett, who turned 1 October 1.

When Delaware played Lehigh, the Lehigh public address introduced the coaches this way: "Coaching Delaware, in her 16th year and sixth month, Joyce Perry, and coaching Lehigh, in her second season and seventh month, Anne Skutches." Skutches is expecting twins this spring. (Scott Selheimer, Delaware assistant SID)

Loras coach Brad Soderberg is usually nervous before a game, but before the Duhawks' January 28 game at Central (Iowa), he was more nervous than normal. After all, Loras had just upset highly ranked Wartburg two nights before, and he did not want his team to suffer a letdown. Another thing—he and wife Linda are expecting their first child later this month. Soderberg also showed up without the sport coat he had coached in all season. All of his coats were at the cleaners, so he donned a blue cardigan sweater. His Duhawks lost, 67-60. Said Soderberg: "I guess that will teach me to save more money for cleaning each month." (The status of the sweater is unknown.) (Jim Seavey, Loras SID)

Can you top these?

Talk about snatching victory from the jaws of defeat. The Lawrence men pulled out perhaps the wildest victory in school history January 28 against Coe. When Coe's Pat Woodburn hit a 20-foot baseline jumper with one second to play, it looked like Coe had a 92-91 victory.

Lawrence took a timeout to set up a court-length inbounds play. Then, Peter Murchie's long inbounds pass hit a ceiling light, giving Coe the ball under its own basket, and things really looked bleak for Lawrence. But Coe called a timeout to set up its inbounds play—a timeout it did not have. A two-shot technical foul was assessed, and Lawrence's Matt Miota made both free throws to give Lawrence a 93-92 victory. (Rick Peterson, Lawrence

SID)

Louisiana Tech had a 40-game home-court winning streak through February 6, longest in women's Division I basketball. Auburn was next at 37, then Iowa and New Mexico State, 36 each; James Madison, 34; Maryland, 23; Tennessee, 20; Stephen F. Austin State, 15, and Connecticut and Youngstown State, 14 each.

Though there is no official Division I women's record for overtimes, Indiana State put in its bid with a four-overtime, 107-101 victory at Southwest Missouri State January 28. Last year, the Sycamores won a 77-75 single-overtime game at Springfield over Southwest Missouri State. (Karen Griess, Indiana State associate SID)

California (Pennsylvania) and Kutztown played a five-overtime game (two short of the Division II record) on February 4. California won, 128-122. A total of 76 fouls were called, breaking the Division II record by two, and 10 players fouled out, two short of the II mark. California center Joe Miller played 63 of the 65 minutes and enjoyed career highs of 42 points and 19 rebounds. (Pete Katsafanas, Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference basketball SID)

After losing three games in January on last-second shots, Nebraska Wesleyan's men finally got their reward with a last-second winner against Doane January 28. Wesleyan won, 71-69, on a 15-foot jumper by Bill Weed with two seconds remaining. The Plainsmen had lost to Brigham Young-Hawaii, Chaminade and Bellevue (Nebraska), all in the final seconds. (Chuck Reed, Nebraska Wesleyan SID)

Table incorrect in rules book

Division II member institutions that sponsor indoor and/or outdoor track should note that, due to changes in qualifying standards, the Division II portions of the altitude-adjustment tables that were published in the 1989 NCAA Track and Field/Cross Country Rules are incorrect.

Regular qualifying standards, which were published in The NCAA News, are accurate. The 1988-89 indoor standards appeared in the October 10, 1983, issue, and outdoor standards were published in the December 21, 1988, issue.

For a corrected list of Division II qualifying standards for competition at altitude, contact Donna J. Noonan, assistant director of championships, at the NCAA national office.

Basketball notes

Tony Wingen (1982).

St. Bonaventure and Cortland State, one of the leading producers of Division II coaches, are next with four graduates each.

Perfect seasons?

Many basketball experts say that Division I may never see another undefeated men's team. That prediction has been validated for the 13th straight season.

There are no perfect teams this season in Division II and only three in Division III through February 6—Merchant Marine (18-0), Wisconsin-Whitewater (19-0), and Wittenberg (21-0).

Indiana's outstanding 1976 national championship team (32-0) was the last full-season (including NCAA tournament games) unbeaten squad. It is the last of 12 Division I teams since the elimination of the center jump (1938) to go a full season (tournament play included) with a perfect record. Twelve others since 1938 were perfect in regular season, then lost in postseason play.

The last undefeated men's teams in Division II history were Central State (Ohio) (30-0) (NAIA titlist) and Evansville (29-0) (Division II champion), both in 1965. The only Division III unbeaten team was Potsdam State (32-0), the 1986 champion.

In women's basketball, there presently are three undefeated teams—Division I Auburn at 21-0, Division

It never would have happened if New Mexico State had not withdrawn from the tournament—the Highlanders were a last-minute replacement. "We had never before played a high-ranked Division I team," Masi said. "And to be fortunate enough to play the perfect game at that moment—that's what sports is all about."

Rice students, in a play on the school's strong academic reputation, are calling Autry Court the "House of Brain." (Bill Cousins, Rice SID)

In Pace's 66-43 victory over New York Tech, Tech head coach Faith Colter was assessed three technical fouls. As Pace guard Becky Miller was busy making good on free throws and Pace was preparing to take the ball out of bounds, Colter received her third technical. Always looking for an advantage, Pace head coach John Lauro said: "Since she (Colter) got two technical fouls in a row, does that mean we can take the ball out twice?" (John Balkam, Pace SID)

Scholarship

They contested a New York State Department of Education proposal to use SAT scores alone in awarding state scholarships worth from $1,250 to $10,000 over four or five years.

In his ruling February 3, U.S. District Judge John M. Walker said use of the test scores alone to determine eligibility for Regents and Empire Scholarships in New York State is a violation of the Constitution's equal protection clause.

"After a careful review of the evidence, this court concludes that SAT scores capture a student's academic achievement no more than a student's yearbook photograph captures the full range of her experiences in high school," he said.

College Board officials said a gap of 60 points between SAT median scores of males and females has been showing up for a few years and that no one knows why boys do better than girls.

Robert Seaver, College Board vice-president, said: "Every question that goes into the SAT is examined for bias. We have the standard that we want to create the fairest test possible in terms of gender, race, ethnicity.

"The overwhelming opinion is that the test is not biased."

The New York Public Interest Research Group recently reported what appeared to be evidence that supports an allegation of bias. Boys got 57 percent of the awards although they were only 47 percent of those competing in 1987.

"There is nothing surprising about this ruling," he said. "I predict it is just the first in a string of rulings about this issue.

"It's not just the scholarships, by the way. Scholarships based on the scores alone also damages our education system by denying women and minorities access to college and scholarships."

Stockwell said: "The decision is a major victory for advocates of test fairness in New York and around the nation. By recognizing that reliance on test scores results in sex bias in scholarship awards, the decision opens the door to challenges to other programs that similarly misuse test scores."

Scores on the SATs taken by over one million high school students annually are used in college admission's process. Many schools use the scores with other information, such as grades, activities in high school, service to the community. But hundreds, as FairTest's Stockwell noted, use scores alone.

Publication focuses on championship

Doug Iler of Creco Publishing in Louisville, Kentucky, provided the directors of athletics at institutions that sponsor Division I men's basketball with a unique Christmas present.

Last December, Iler mailed complimentary copies of a new publication, the "1989 NCAA Basketball Championship Guide," to this group. The mailing also included an order form and a marketing kit with various suggestions for distributing the guide.

The guide, Iler's creation, contains information about all 13 cities that will host tournament games this year. Included is a map of the area surrounding the arena; an arena seating chart, and hotels, restaurants and entertainment available in the area.

Information such as average weather in March, arena seating capacity, smoking areas and distances within the building are included. The address and telephone number of the chamber of commerce or visitor's bureau also is provided.

A mileage chart shows the distance from numerous cities to all of the host cities. Iler has created a checklist for travelers that includes things to do before leaving home (with separate lists for those traveling by automobile and airplane), items to pack and items that are not allowed in the arena.

For those who will not be traveling this year, the publication includes a tournament bracket (to be filled out on selection Sunday), feature stories, conference tournament dates and sites, and future Division I basketball championship dates and sites.

Iler worked with the NCAA communications department in receiving permission to print the guide, and the contents were approved by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee. Creco Publishing has received approval to publish a guide for 1990.

Nominations for basketball awards being accepted

Nominations are being accepted for the annual Shawmut Frances Pomcroy Naismith-Basketball Hall of Fame awards, which honor the nation's outstanding male and female senior collegians under 5-6.

The awards will be presented at a special luncheon May 9 as part of the Basketball Hall of Fame's enshrinement ceremonies.

The recipients are selected by a blue-ribbon panel from the Women's Basketball Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

League reprimands basketball coach

Big West Conference Commissioner James Haney has reprimanded Utah State University head men's basketball coach Kohn Smith as a result of derogatory comments Smith made regarding the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, men's basketball program.

The remarks made by Smith were in direct violation of a section of the Big West constitution, which prohibits such unsportsmanlike conduct as "being critical publicly of any game official, conference personnel, another university or its personnel," the conference said in a statement.

"As we as a conference do not condone violations of NCAA rules and regulations, we also legislate against unduly critical public comments," Haney said. "One of the strengths of our conference has been the ability of its institutions to work together for the good of the league."

In response to the reprimand, Smith, in his first year as Utah State's head coach, expressed regrets concerning his remarks.

"What I said was totally out of line and came out of anger and frustration," Smith said. "I want to apologize to UNLV. I'm really sorry and embarrassed... I've learned a lot."

Council summary

Following is a listing of all actions taken by the Council in its pre-Convention meeting January 6-9 (1988 Council) in San Francisco. Actions dealing with the legislative proposals at the 1989 Convention are excluded inasmuch as they are part of the record of that Convention.

Committee reports

Bylaw 5-1(j) Exceptions: The Council received the subcommittee's report and formally expressed its appreciation for the subcommittee's "industry and sensitivity to the welfare of student-athletes."

Deregulation and Rules Simplification: The Council approved the special committee's recommendation that the revised Manual be made available to the membership on computer diskettes. It also noted that Constitution 3-9(c)-(1) had been omitted as a citation for 17.1.1 in the new Manual, which will change the voting requirement for that bylaw from federated to dominant.

Executive: The Council received the report of the committee's December 5 meeting, as reported in previous issues of the News.

Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics: The Council:

Approved the subcommittee's recommendation that Charles Whitcomb, San Jose State University, succeed Raymond Burse, Kentucky State University, as chair of the subcommittee inasmuch as Mr. Burse's term on the Council ended with this meeting.

Recognized Mr. Burse's work as chair and expressed appreciation for the subcommittee's "substantial progress in a short period of time."

Professional Sports Liaison: The Council received those portions of the report falling in its jurisdiction (some items are subject to Executive Committee approval). It also supported preliminary study of a proposal that would permit a student-athlete with eligibility remaining to negotiate terms of a contract with a professional team in order to determine the individual's market value, while retaining the option of returning to the member institution to complete any remaining eligibility. The committee was asked to communicate with the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues regarding this topic.

Recruiting: The Council:

Affirmed the current application of Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5), specifying that it is not permissible for a representative of a member institution to provide cash or other gifts to a student-athlete subsequent to exhaustion of his or her eligibility, although it is permissible for such a representative to employ a former student-athlete after graduation or to be involved in legitimate business arrangements with the student-athlete.

Asked the staff to consider the feasibility of proposing legislation that would allow athletics representatives to provide benefits of nominal value (e.g., a meal) to student-athletes who have exhausted eligibility.

Asked the Recruiting Committee to consider the desirability of using a single consent to permit both a second institution to contact an enrolled student-athlete for recruiting purposes and the student-athlete's receipt of financial aid at the second institution for one year.

Referred to the Recruiting Committee for additional study a question of whether the provisions of Bylaw 1-10-(a) should be interpreted as being applicable to providing funds only for prospective student-athletes, or whether the regulation also would relate to high schools generally or to their athletics departments.

Affirmed the current interpretation relating to the five expense-paid visits permitted under the provisions of Bylaw 1-9-(c).

Compliance services

The Council:

Approved the certification-of-compliance forms for 1989-90, including informational items recommended by the Special Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics.

Made several revisions in Forms 89-4 and 89-9, including combining them, and authorized the Administrative Committee to give final approval to those forms.

Agreed that additional wording should be included in the Buckley Amendment Consent to enhance the enforcement department's ability to obtain complete test-score records.

Approved the proposed 1989-90 Squad List form.

Approved a revision of the Financial Audit Guidelines.

Waiver opportunities

The Council agreed to review legislation in 1989 to clarify that the parenthetical phrase in Bylaw 11-4-(b)-(5) does not constitute an exclusive list of circumstances under which the Council may approve exceptions to the minimum numbers of participants and/or contests. In the interim, the Council agreed that it has the authority to consider requests for exceptions to that legislation based upon circumstances other than those specifically set forth therein.

Membership

The Council approved affiliated membership for the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, Washington, D.C.

It also granted a waiver of the September 1 reclassification deadline to permit Fordham University to be reclassified from Division III to Division I-AA in football in time to conduct spring practice in 1989, noting, however, that the institution must have met all Division I-AA scheduling criteria prior to conducting such practice and that it must notify its 1989 Division III opponents, if any, of its plans to conduct spring practice in order that the opponents may have an opportunity to evaluate the terms of the game contracts.

The Division I Steering Committee postponed until its post-Convention meeting an appeal by St. Louis University under the provisions of Bylaw 11-4-(b)-(5). It also reviewed four requests for Bylaw 10-1-(g) waivers that would go before the Division I business session and agreed to support the requests from Grambling State University and St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania) but to oppose those by Alabama State University and Hardin-Simmons University.

The Division II Steering Committee approved a request by Michigan Technological University for a waiver of the football scheduling requirement per Case No. 404 for 1988 and 1989 but denied a geographical waiver to the institution for the 1990 football season and beyond.

That committee also denied requests by California Lutheran University and Regis College (Colorado) for Bylaw 11-2-(h) waivers.

It also supported Bylaw 10-1-(g) waivers for Lenoir-Rhyne College, Hickory, North Carolina; Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago; and the University of South Carolina, Spartanburg, which would be acted upon in the Division II business session, but did not support a waiver of the "restricted membership" classification for Paine College.

The Division III Steering Committee:

Approved a Constitution 4-2-(h)-(2) waiver for Keuka College, Keuka Park, New York.

Approved active membership (effective September 1, 1989) for Keuka College and Daniel Webster College, Nashua, New Hampshire.

Supported a "restricted membership" waiver request by Menlo College, which would be acted upon in the Division III business session.

Council representation

The Council agreed that no change is necessary in the current application of Constitution 5-1-(a)-(7) as it relates to representatives of the Eastern College Athletic Conference serving on the Council.

Administrative Committee

The Council approved all actions by the Administrative Committee in five conferences conducted since the October 1988 Council meeting.

Convention

In agreeing to withdraw Proposal No. 21, the Council agreed that the issue treated in the proposal should be reviewed further in 1989.

While voting to oppose Proposal No. 55, the Council agreed that the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics should be encouraged to continue its involvement in intercollegiate athletics matters.

The Council agreed that 1989 Convention interpretations should be incorporated in the revised Manual as appropriate, with or without the use of footnotes during the first year to clarify sources.

It agreed to consider in a future Council meeting proposed legislation that would permit the Council to adopt between annual Conventions noncontroversial legislative amendments, in the same manner as the new administrative regulations, subject to review by the membership at the next Convention.

Interpretations

All new or revised interpretations approved by the Council will appear in issues of The NCAA News (either the Interpretations column or the Legislative Assistance column, or in minutes of the Legislation or Interpretations Committee), and such publication constitutes official notice to the membership.

In addition to those, the Council:

Referred Case No. 29 (Situation 130) to the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues, especially as it would relate to permitting member institutions to receive money from a professional sports organization and place the funds in the institution's general fund to be credited to the athletics department.

Referred to the Recruiting Committee issues related to the circumstances under which an institution's coaching staff member could speak at a high school fund-raiser.

Referred to the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues an interpretation to permit student-athletes with eligibility remaining to promote the sale of Olympic coins under certain circumstances.

Referred to the Recruiting Committee an interpretation prohibiting high school teams from receiving awards provided in the name of a member institution.

Approved all other actions of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee in its six telephone conferences since the October 1988 Council meeting.

Noted that, as Council policy, if an institution seeks to alter an interpretation of proposed legislation acted upon by the Council in its post-Convention meeting, the Council could take under advisement such a request either in its evening Convention meeting (January 9 in this instance) or in its post-Convention meeting.

Steering committee

In addition to its other actions, the Division I Steering Committee:

Approved the 1989 Division I Academic Reporting Form.

Reviewed a study of Division I conference representation on standing committees and agreed that the information should be considered by all appropriate appointing bodies in making future committee appointments.

Granted an appeal by the University of Texas, El Paso, to restore the eligibility of a foreign student-athlete who had been determined by the Legislation and Interpretations Committee to be ineligible under the provisions of Bylaw 4-1-(a) and Case No. 268.

Asked the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee to consider whether the criteria regarding minimum participants and minimum contests in indoor and outdoor track are obsolete in light of current scheduling practices in those sports.

In addition to its other actions, the Division III Steering Committee:

Approved awards of circumstance per Bylaw 11-3-(a)-(4)-(ii) for Wartburg College and Calvin College.

Opposed the Professional Sports Liaison Committee's recommendation that student-athletes who qualify for participation in NCAA championships in certain specified sports be requested to certify amateur standing per Bylaw 5-1-(o) prior to participating in the championships in those sports.

Following are the actions taken by the 1989 Council in its post-Convention meeting in San Francisco January 12:

Convention review

Agreed to review all unsuccessful Council-sponsored legislation at the 1989 Convention in the April Council meeting; also, agreed to submit a number of Convention-related suggestions to the Executive Committee for its review in May.

Agreed to place the following Convention-related topics on the April agenda:

The desirability of limiting all reconsideration motions to a specific time period at the end of the general business session.

The possible development of statements of rationale for each item in the consent packages.

Whether a two-thirds majority vote of the Council should be required for any Council action to support or oppose a Convention proposal.

Means of more effectively advancing Council positions on the Convention floor.

The possibility of assuring that voting results in the morning portions of the division business sessions be duplicated and distributed in advance of the afternoon portions of those sessions.

Committee appointments

Appointed the following to the new Basketball Officiating Committee: C. M. Newton, Vanderbilt University; Dean Smith, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; David R. Gavitt, Big East Conference, chair; Gene Bartow, University of Alabama, Birmingham; Gary Cunningham, California State University, Fresno; Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference; C. Vivian Stringer, University of Iowa; Chris Gobrecht, University of Washington; Patricia Viverito, Gateway Collegiate Conference; Marcy Weston, Central Michigan University; Margie McDonald, High Country Athletic Conference, and Michael Clayton, Florida A&M University.

Appointed Max Williams, University of Mississippi, to the Eligibility Committee per Convention Proposal No. 28.

Reappointed Eugene F. Corrigan, Atlantic Coast Conference, to the Executive Committee.

Appointed Donna A. Lopiano, University of Texas, Austin, chair; David Price, Pacific-10 Conference; Jamie McCloskey, Mid-American Athletic Conference; G. F. Moran, Gulf South Conference, and William A. Marshall, Franklin and Marshall College, to serve as the new Legislative Review Committee.

Appointed Sarah F. J. Yates, Florida A&M University, and Jenefer P. Shillingford, Bryn Mawr College, as two of the three ex officio Council members to serve on the new Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, noting that a Division II Council member and a chair for the committee would be appointed in April. Student-athlete appointments will be made after member institutions and conferences are asked to submit nominations.

Interpretations

The Council:

Asked the Legislation and Interpretations Committee to define the term "athletics competition" as it is used in Proposal No. 83.

Agreed to consider in April the application of Proposal No. 42 to individuals who graduate from high school but who do not enroll in a collegiate institution prior to August 1, 1990.

Concluded that the phrase "final term of secondary education" as used in Proposal No. 49 means the term during which one completes the requirements for graduation.

Affirmed that the adoption of Proposal No. 99 does not preclude distribution of regular game programs to prospective student-athletes during any visits they make to a member institution's campus.

Concluded that the limited Division II preseason tryouts provided in Proposal No. 119 may be held during a period up to the initial squad cut or the first contest (game or scrimmage), whichever is earlier.

Agreed that a conference would be permitted to fund a ceremonial exchange of hats and T-shirts between members of opposing teams at all conference basketball contests during the 1988-89 season inasmuch as the gifts are of nominal value and are not intended for promotional purposes.

Membership

Elected Lenoir-Rhyne College, North-eastern Illinois University, and the University of South Carolina, Spartanburg, to Division II active membership, effective September 1, 1989.

Noted that the Division I Steering Committee had granted a waiver of the Division I minimum sports sponsorship criteria per Bylaw 11-4-(b)-(5) to St. Louis University.

NCAC increases membership to nine

Earlham College and Wittenberg University have accepted invitations to join the North Coast Athletic Conference and will compete for all 21 men's and women's conference championships beginning with the 1989-90 academic year.

Both institutions became voting members of the NCAC July 1, 1988, and their administrators and staff are helping to plan championship play for next season. The addition of the two new schools boosts the conference to nine members.

"We are delighted to welcome both Earlham and Wittenberg into the NCAC," said David Warren, president of the conference and of Ohio Wesleyan University. "These institutions are among the finest nationwide in academic and athletics quality, and we are proud to have them share in the success of our conference. They endorse the important ideals the conference represents, and they will enrich the NCAC through their own unique contributions."

A special scheduling committee chaired by Alvin J. Van Wic, athletics director at the College of Wooster, proposed championship formats and schedules involving the new members in all 21 NCAC sports. Recommendations for the committee were approved by the NCAC presidents at a meeting December 15.

"The fact that the NCAC will have the new members fully involved in all sports, including football, is a tribute to the work of the special scheduling committee," said Warren. "An NCAA Division III conference that spans three large states (Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania) is unique, and the presidents felt that we must address the question of excessive travel and its impact on our student-athletes. The presidents of the conference were quite pleased with the fine work the committee performed in so short a time."

Dennis Collins, executive director of the NCAC, said, "The committee considered many schedule formats and had to deal with preserving as many existing contracts as possible. None of us really envisioned that we would be playing football in 1989; that was hoped for two or three years down the road. However, with other membership changes in neighboring conferences and cooperation with those groups, we were able to achieve full championship scheduling in all sports for next season."

Wittenberg's 22 varsity sports (12 for men and 10 for women) will match several NCAC members for the most sponsored. Earlham sponsors 19 varsity sports—nine for men and 10 for women.

Wittenberg's men's and women's programs previously competed in the Ohio Athletic Conference, while Earlham competed in the College Athletic Conference and the Hoosier Conference for Women.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q If a member institution is interested in hosting an NCAA championship, what kinds of insurance coverage will be necessary?

A As indicated in the revised NCAA Manual (31.7.4, page 326), "Host institutions and sponsoring agencies of NCAA championships shall provide primary comprehensive general public liability insurance coverage listing the NCAA as an additional insured, with combined single limits of at least $1 million per occurrence for bodily injury and property damage, and shall provide the national office with the appropriate insurance certificates.

"The Association maintains excess liability insurance coverage for the conduct of NCAA championships. The coverage includes bodily injury and property damage resulting from accidents.

"Basic athletics injury, catastrophic injury, and accidental death and dismemberment insurance for participants in NCAA championships shall be provided by the Association."

Wrestler develops techniques to offset loss of leg

Call La Salle University wrestler Thad Nowakowski unusual. Because even though the freshman from Lewes, Delaware, lost his right leg at age four in a shooting accident, he keeps proving that the terms disabled and handicapped do not apply.

"I think it brings my opponents down and takes them out of their own element if they have to adjust to my style," Nowakowski said recently. "It is an advantage for me because most wrestlers are used to using their opponent's two legs. They go to grab for mine, and (the right leg) is just not there."

Nowakowski begins each match on his hands and knee. From that position, he recorded eight takedowns in his first seven collegiate matches. "I have a move I call an opposite dump," he explained. "I've never seen anybody else use it. It puts the guy right on his back."

In addition to using exercises and workout routines, he's developed on his own, Nowakowski takes part in all team activities. "Thad has never skipped an exercise or not done a drill that we made the other wrestlers do," said his coach, Tom Murt.

"When the team runs every day on the track, Thad runs too. When the team has to run stairs, he runs or hops with us. He has never looked for, expected or received any type of easy treatment because of his injury. His determination to not take the easy road when he probably could have is one of the reasons he has had so much success," Murt added, "both in wrestling and in the classroom."

At Cape Henlopen High School in Delaware, Nowakowski carried a 93 average (100 scale). He also played golf and wrestled. In junior high, he participated in lacrosse and baseball.

"I gave up lacrosse in high school because the other guys were getting bigger and faster," he explained. "I always wanted to play basketball, but that was kind of out of the question.... I'm too short anyway."

A crowd of 13,434 believed to be the largest ever to attend a regular-season women's gymnastics contest cheered the University of Utah to victory January 30 over the defending Division I champions from the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa. The final score was 191.55-187.55.

Alabama defeated Utah, 190.05-189.50, last April for the Division I team title.

Oklahoma State University's wrestling team marked the 50th anniversary of its first dual meet February 3 by hosting Indiana University, Bloomington—its opponent in that first match.

Georgia Institute of Technology basketball player David Whitmore has earned the nickname "L.A. Leaper," thanks to his 42-inch-plus vertical leap. The nickname carries some irony, however, since the Georgia Tech sports information office reports that Whitmore is afraid of heights.

One University of Detroit men's basketball fan became "a millionaire for a night" February 4 as the result of a drawing held during Detroit's home game against Butler University. The fan received cash equal to a day's interest earned on $1 million, use of a limousine, dinner and lodging from a local hotel.

Several athletics events and recognition ceremonies were held February 3-4 at Pennsylvania State University to mark the 25th anniversary of the school's women's intercollegiate sports programs.

"Marking the silver anniversary of the Penn State women's program enables us to appropriately spotlight the outstanding accomplishments of athletes, coaches and administrators who have made such significant contributions to the rich tradition of women's athletics at Penn State," said James I. Tarman, director of athletics. "This is a program that has a proud past, a marvelous present and a significant future."

Among the athletes, coaches and administrators who were honored was Della Durant, assistant athletics director and associate professor of physical education, who has been active in NCAA affairs and serves on the NCAA Council.

President George H. W. Bush has been named the first recipient of the U.S. Sports Academy's Dwight D. Eisenhower Fitness Award, which will be presented annually to an individual who has shown outstanding individual or cumulative achievement in fitness and has contributed to the growth and development of sport fitness through outstanding leadership activity.

Thad Nowakowski

Bush will accept the award February 25 during the academy's annual Awards of Sport in Daphne, Alabama. A former baseball team captain at Yale University, Bush received the NCAA's Theodore Roosevelt Award in 1986.

Legendary basketball coach John Wooden, whose University of California, Los Angeles, men's teams captured seven straight Division I titles (10 in all), returned to his home town of Martinsville, Indiana, January 28, when the Martinsville High School gymnasium was officially renamed the John R. Wooden Gymnasium.

Wooden led Martinsville High to the 1927 state championship as a player. He returned to the court the morning of the dedication and conducted a basketball clinic.

Trivia Time: In what year did Wooden win his first NCAA title at UCLA? Answer later.

Golf Digest's annual collegiate invitational tournament has attracted Rolex Watch USA, Inc., as a presenting sponsor. The 1989 event, set for March 9-11 at the TPC course at the Woodlands, near Houston, Texas, will be hosted by Oklahoma State University. At the completion of the 54-hole tournament, Rolex will present The President's Cup to the winning team, and Golf Digest will present a Rolex watch to that squad's coach.

Briefly in the News

Another invitational, the Taylor Made/Doral Park National Collegiate Invitational, has attracted nine of the nation's top 20 men's golf teams and a host of outstanding individuals. Set for February 17-19, the tournament will be hosted by the University of Miami (Florida).

Among those expected to compete is Ohio State University sophomore Gary Nicklaus, son of the Golden Bear.

More Milestones: Veteran Elizabethtown College wrestling coach D. Kenneth Ober collected his 250th career victory January 24, when his Blue Jays defeated California University of Pennsylvania, 31-20. Ober is in his 25th season at the school, which started wrestling in 1954. Notably, he is responsible for all but 39 of the school's all-time wrestling triumphs.

During the University of New Mexico's January 26 home men's basketball game against Colorado State University, the six millionth regular-season fan entered The Pit—the Lobos' home court.

Lafayette College officials recently began the countdown to the school's 1,000th college football contest with the mailing of bumper stickers announcing the event. Holy Cross College will be the opponent in that September 16 home contest, and NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will be the featured speaker at a special awards dinner being planned for the night before.

Knox College men's basketball coach Tim Heimann recently invited Northwestern University and the University of Illinois, Champaign, to compete in a unique, informal tournament.

Initiated this spring was the Phi Beta Kappa Trophy basketball series, which highlights regular-season games involving Illinois colleges and universities with chapters of the prestigious national academic honor society. Knox, the University of Chicago, Lake Forest College, Rockford College, Illinois College and Augustana College (Illinois) made up the charter field, but Heimann noted that Illinois and Northwestern also have Phi Beta Kappa chapters.

"The Phi Beta Kappa tourney features the best institutions of higher learning in Illinois, and I just don't think it's right that Northwestern and U of I were excluded from this series," he said. "I realize that it won't be easy for us to take on Northwestern or the U of I, but I'm confident that our team of scholar-athletes is second to none."

Proof? How about sophomore forward Mark Junk? He leads the Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference in scoring (26 points a game) and is a Presidential Scholar at Knox. Teammate Steve Brandon, a senior point guard, is a physics and computer science major who is conducting an advanced physics project under a Ford Foundation Fellowship for undergraduate research.

Jud Heathcote, men's basketball coach at Michigan State University and president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, is among a group of hoop celebrities who will take part in Norwegian Cruise Line's SuperSport Basketball Hall of Fame Cruise June 25 through July 2.

More Report Cards: William D. McHenry, athletics director at Washington and Lee University, reports that 56 student-athletes were named to the academic-athletics honor roll for the fall 1988 term after posting grade-point averages of 3.500 (4.000 scale) or higher.

According to figures compiled by Darlene Bailey, associate athletics director at Eastern Washington University, student-athletes had a cumulative GPA of 2.890 for the fall 1988 quarter, compared to a cumulative 2.720 for the entire student body. Forty-five athletes earned GPAs of 3.500 or higher.

University of Nebraska, Omaha, football coach Sandy Buda has announced that 46 team members carried cumulative GPAs of 2.500 or better through the fall 1988 semester—while they were playing and practicing regularly. "Over half of our football team has a cumulative GPA of 2.500 or better, which is the equivalent of a C or better," Buda noted. "And when you figure that over a quarter of our players have a 3.000 GPA or better, combining athletics with a full-time academic load—and the fact that many of our student-athletes work part-time—that's outstanding. I don't think there are too many teams that can match that."

Forty-nine individuals, including student-athletes, cheerleaders, student trainers and student sports information assistants, were honored January 28 as members of the first Austin Peay State University athletics director's honor roll. Among them were women's volleyball player Beth Tidwell and women's tennis player Cindy Seymour, who earned perfect (4.000) GPAs.

Seventeen of the 22 student-athletes on Muhlenberg University's field hockey team, including nine of 11 starters, earned GPAs of 3.000 or higher during the fall 1988 semester. The starting unit's cumulative GPA was 3.367.

Western Carolina University's baseball teams practiced hitting the books last fall, when 12 of the 28 current team members earned GPAs of 3.000 or higher. And according to a news release from the school, the residence hall floor housing the baseball team produced a cumulative GPA of 2.780 for the semester—highest of any dorm floor on campus, with the exception of Western Carolina's two honors hallways.

Kent State University officials have announced that student-athletes posted the highest semester and cumulative grade-point averages in school history during the fall 1988 semester. An all-time-high 148 individuals representing 17 varsity teams and the cheerleading squads posted GPAs of 3.000 or higher.

State legislation relating to athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect or is otherwise of interest to the athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 77 bills from 27 states that have been introduced this session or that were enacted since the last report (see November 21, 1988, issue of The NCAA News). Previously reported bills that died in the last session are not included.

With the exception of the Kentucky legislature, which is scheduled to be in special session only, all state legislatures will be in regular session this year. Most of them already have convened. The legislatures in Alabama, Florida and Louisiana will convene February 7, April 4 and April 17, respectively.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of February 1, 1989. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia Council and the legislatures in the U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in this report by subject.

In football, better players carry better grades, survey shows

By Alan Robinson

At a time when college leaders are trying to balance big-time athletics and academics, an Associated Press survey shows that, in football at least, they mix well: Good players and good grades go together.

Most of the 1988 all-America football players will graduate from college, some with honors, and nearly one-third have B averages or better in fields ranging from engineering to computer sciences, and, yes, physical education.

Interviews with all 36 members of the AP and Kodak all-America teams indicated that average all-America had a grade-point average of 2.670, or C-plus, and was on course to graduate within five years — the average for most student-athletes.

Every player attended at least one summer-school session — most said they went every summer — to make up for lighter course loads during the season.

"A lot of students look down on you, think you don't have to go to class and are given grades and money," Tyrone Thurman of Texas Tech University said. "You can't convince them it's not that way, that you're a student as much as they are."

The grade-point average for those interviewed ranged from 1.900 to 3.500 of a possible 4.000. The 3.500 belonged to Wesley Walls of the University of Mississippi, one of 11 national football scholar-athletes last season. He had a 4.000 GPA last semester.

The survey, taken in December while the all-America teams were assembled in Miami and Atlanta, comes at a time of renewed debate over the merits of Proposition 48, the NCAA academic requirements for initial eligibility.

According to the AP interviews:

- Keith English of the University of Colorado and Bill Hawkins of the University of Miami (Florida) graduated on time in four years last spring with finance degrees and played this season as fifth-year red-shirt seniors. Both are in graduate school.

- Louis Oliver of the University of Florida graduated December 17, in 4½ years, with a 3.000 GPA and a degree in criminal law.

- Darryl Henley of the University of California, Los Angeles, and Mark Messner of the University of Michigan need only to complete one more class and will graduate in March.

- Thirteen players will graduate in May; all but one — Steve Wisniewski of Pennsylvania State University — in five years. Wisniewski will graduate in four years without a redshirt year. The other spring graduates: Walls; Markus Paul, Syracuse University; Wayne Martin, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Keith DeLong, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Frank Stams, University of Notre Dame; Andy Heck, Notre Dame; Mark Stepnoski, University of Pittsburgh; Jerry Olsavsky, Pittsburgh; Tony Phillips, University of Oklahoma; Erik Affholter, University of Southern California; Rodney Peete, Southern Cal, and Marv Cook, University of Iowa.

- Three will graduate this summer: Derrick Thomas, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Broderick Thomas, University of Nebraska, Lincoln; Britt Hager, University of Texas, Austin.

- Two will graduate in December: Kendall Trainor, Arkansas; Donnell Woolford, Clemson University.

- Six are underclassmen and can't graduate in 1989: Jake Young, Nebraska; Steve Walsh, Miami (Florida); Darrin Lewis, Texas A&M University; Barry Sanders, Oklahoma State University; Mike Stonebreaker, Notre Dame; Tim Orley, University of Georgia.

- Seven have completed their eligibility and most of them need nearly 20 hours to graduate — more than one semester: Tracy Rocker, Auburn University; Pat Thompson, Brigham Young University; Thurman; Hart Lee Dykes, Oklahoma State; Mike Utley, Washington State University; Deion Sanders, Florida State University; Jason Phillips, University of Houston.

"On the average, I think most of your better football players are the more intelligent ones," Oklahoma's Phillips said. "Sometimes, you can make up for a lack of talent with intelligence."

"It's not easy being a student-athlete, because I've always had to work my schedule around football," Walls, an engineering major, said. "But I've always tried to combine my education and football the best I could."

"It's very important to me and my family to get my degree," said Southern Cal's Affholter, a communications major. "I didn't want to leave school with nothing but memories of football."

Only three of the 36 all-Americas majored in recreation or physical education, the stereotypical course of the college jock. One-third were majoring in a business-related field, and other majors included counseling, advertising, retailing, social sciences, history, computer sciences, industrial management and information sciences.

"At Arkansas, you really are a student-athlete, not just an athlete," Trainor said. "Coach (Ken) Hatfield knows if you don't go to class. . . . Sometimes, I think he has people following us around. And if you miss a class, you have to do a series of 300-yard runs at 6:30 a.m. called the 'Razorback Reminder.'"

Every Notre Dame senior has earned a degree the last four years, Andy Heck said. "They hound you to go to class; they get you tutors. . . . Football is a full-time job at Notre Dame, but so are academics. If a player can't do both, if a player can't handle it, athletics has to go."

"We can't rely on football all our lives," Lewis, of Texas A&M, said. "We're talented and gifted, but that can be taken away."

Several players said they probably

Osborne improved his career record to a 158-36-2 for an .814 winning percentage that ranks him second among active Division I-A coaches.

Roach

Roach, who also serves as Wyoming's athletics director, led the Cowboys to a 10-3 record, a Western Athletic Conference title and a trip to the Holiday Bowl in 1987, his rookie season. He followed that impressive debut with an 11-2 record, another WAC title (with another 8-0 conference record) and another appearance in the Holiday Bowl.

The 61-year-old Roach was the first first-year coach to earn WAC coach-of-the-year honors. He led Wyoming to its first conference title since 1976 and has a 21-5 overall record that includes a 16-0 mark in conference play.

He has been named Western Athletic Conference and Kodak Region V coach of the year.

Roach has the Cowboy football program on solid ground and, as athletics director, has helped Wyoming establish attendance records in both football and basketball.

He served as the Cowboys' offensive backfield coach under Lloyd Eaton from 1962 to 1970. During his tenure, Wyoming won three Western Athletic Conference championships (1966-67-68) and played in the 1966 Sun Bowl and the 1968 Sugar Bowl.

Roach left Wyoming to coach Wisconsin in 1970 and later coached in the National Football League before retiring to enter private business after the 1980 season. He returned to Wyoming in 1985 to run the Cowboy Joe Club and was selected as athletics director less than a year later.

Schembechler

After 19 years as Michigan's coach, Schembechler agreed to take on the added responsibility of athletics director, making him one of only a handful of head football coaches to handle both jobs.

The dean of Big Ten Conference coaches has led Michigan to 10-victory seasons 10 times and the conference title 12 times. Schembechler recorded his 224th career victory with a 22-14 victory over Southern California in this year's Rose Bowl.

Schembechler ranks fifth on the all-time Division I-A career victory list, trailing only his former mentor Woody Hayes (238), Glen "Pop" Warner (313), Amos Alonzo Stagg (314) and Paul "Bear" Bryant (323). Schembechler and Penn State's Joe Paterno (212) are the only active Division I-A coaches with more than 200 career victories (Vince Dooley of Georgia retired this year with 201).

During the 1970s, Schembechler's teams were ranked eighth or higher in seven national statistical categories, including first in won-lost record (96-10-3), first in rushing defense (106.6) and first in scoring defense (8.0).

He was appointed head football coach at his alma mater—Miami (Ohio)—in 1963, a position he held until taking over the Michigan program in 1969.

Spurrier

Spurrier, who starred collegiately and in the professional leagues as a quarterback, has rebuilt the Duke program behind a high-powered offense. The Blue Devils finished the season ranked third in passing offense (351.6 yards a game) and eighth in total offense (464.6) and quarterback Anthony Dilweg had the seventh best single-season passing yardage figure in NCAA history.

Duke finished the season with a 7-3-1 record and Spurrier earned Atlantic Coast Conference coach-of-the-year honors. It marked the first time since 1962 that Duke, which was picked by preseason pollsters to finish last in conference play, won at least seven games in one season.

Spurrier, an all-America selection and 1966 Heisman Trophy winner at Florida, was named Duke's coach after three seasons as head coach of the Tampa Bay Bandits of the United States Football League.

He previously served three years as offensive coordinator at Duke. His 1982 Blue Devil offense averaged 453.6 yards a game to establish the Atlantic Coast Conference record for total offense. Before his first stint at Duke, Spurrier served one year as quarterback coach at Georgia Tech and another season at his alma mater.

Duke posted winning records in two of Spurrier's three years as an assistant coach. He developed an innovative offense and molded the career of all-America quarterback Ben Bennett, who became the all-time leading passer in college football history during his senior season.

Spurrier, who was inducted into the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1986, guided Florida to the 1966 Sugar Bowl, where he was chosen the game's most valuable player, and the 1967 Orange Bowl.

wouldn't have attended college if it weren't for football, and some said they wouldn't have graduated if they hadn't been so concerned about maintaining their eligibility.

"If you want to do one, play football, you've got to do the other, be a student, and it's something we readily accept," Mike Utley of Washington State said. "I probably would have been a manual laborer if it hadn't been for football; but now, I'll get a degree."

"I will graduate, and football was my ticket," Alabama's Thomas said.

Nearly every all-America said they tried to take the easiest courses during the season because of the time demanded by football. Most take only 12 hours of classes, the minimum number to remain full-time students, then take a full class load during spring and summer sessions.

"You may be a student-athlete; but during the season, you are always an athlete first," Hager of Texas, said.

"I'm proud that I've got a good, solid education," Florida's Oliver said. "A lot of guys have nothing but football to fall back on; and when that fails, life gets serious. You can play pro ball... but you can lose your job any day. I have education to fall back on."

"I made all-America and I could be a first-round draft pick. But I'm sure my mother will be as proud of me getting a degree as anything else. There's always life after football."

Dangers seen in decline of black males in higher education

A continuing decline in the number of black men enrolled in higher education poses several dangers, according to educators and social scientists interviewed by The New York Times.

In January, the American Council on Education reported that the number of black male undergraduates had slipped from 470,000 in 1976 to 436,000 in 1986, or 7.2 percent. The decrease occurred even as enrollments were increasing for whites, black women and members of other minority groups.

The total number of black students enrolled as undergraduates and graduate students in U.S. universities and colleges has fallen 30,000 from a high of 1.1 million in 1980. Meanwhile, total enrollment has increased from 11.8 million in 1980 to 12.5 million in 1986.

One result is that significantly more black women than men (60 percent vs. 40 percent) are enrolled in higher education, giving rise to fears that there is a widening social and economic gap between black men and women. In turn, that gender gap is one of several problems for black males that, according to William Julius Wilson, a professor of sociology and social policy at the University of Chicago, "could very seriously undermine black institutions right across the board."

As black women pull ahead of men, Wilson said, "the social distance and hostility between men and women" is likely to increase, seriously harming "social integration within the black community as a whole."

Noting that enrollment also has dropped at a less dramatic rate for white males, Wilson told the Times that a major reason is the steady rise in tuition costs combined with a shift in Federal aid emphasis from scholarships to loans. At the same time, more women are starting college at a later age than traditional students, he said.

The decline in black male enrollment is prompting private groups and public schools to start programs designed to improve the academic performance of black men, according to the Times. For example, the New Orleans school district created a set of programs aimed at bolstering the self-esteem and boosting the academic achievement of black male students.

Also, institutions ranging from such predominantly black schools as Hampton University and Xavier University (Louisiana) to predominantly white schools as Grinnell College and Middlebury College are making special efforts to enroll and retain black men.

Smokeless tobacco effects studied

By Paul Raeburn

Nearly half of a group of professional baseball players who used snuff or chewing tobacco regularly had lesions in their mouths, researchers have reported.

Samples of tissue taken from some of the lesions showed they were not cancerous, but some are likely to develop into cancer, said Virginia Ernster of San Francisco.

Ernster was part of a 16-member University of California dental team that examined 1,109 ballplayers in locker rooms, on the field and in a stadium canteen during spring training in Arizona last year.

The team, assembled by Dr. John Greene of the university's dental school, found that 39 percent of the players from major and minor league teams had used snuff or chewing tobacco in the week before they were examined.

An additional four percent had used smokeless tobacco during the previous month and 13 percent were former users.

Of those who used smokeless tobacco at least weekly, 46 percent had oral lesions. Less than two percent of nontobacco users had such lesions, Ernster said.

Most of the lesions were of lesser severity, and those that were sampled were found to be noncancerous, but "some of them were quite ugly," said Ernster in describing her findings at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Neal Benowitz, a physician on the team, said that long-term use of smokeless tobacco, which increases the risk of cancer of the mouth, also increases the likelihood of high blood pressure, heart disease, ulcers and cancer of the digestive system.

Smokeless tobacco users absorb more than twice as much nicotine as cigarette smokers, Benowitz found.

Nicotine causes blood vessels to shrink, raising blood pressure and also contributing to delayed wound healing and reproductive problems, he said.

Ernster said the ballplayers were chosen for the studies because so many of them use smokeless tobacco and because they serve as role models for young people.

Most of the tobacco-using ballplayers preferred snuff to chewing tobacco, and snuff produced more lesions than did chewing tobacco, Ernster said.

She said makers of smokeless tobacco traditionally have provided free samples of their products to ballplayers, and that may explain why so many of them are users.

"The factor of addiction has to be taken into account," she said.

During the study, "some of the players stopped using smokeless tobacco because they were scared," said Ernster. Lesions disappeared in some of those who quit.

The researchers plan to continue their studies this year and next, she said.

Basketball program endowed

Southwest Missouri State University's men's basketball program has its first permanently endowed fund, thanks to a $400,000 gift from Novella and John Whittington of Springfield. It is the largest endowment received to date by the school.

The Whittingtons already have donated more than $200,000; the remainder will be contributed over the next three years. The $400,000 will be placed in an endowed fund that will benefit the men's basketball program.

"It is our pleasure and privilege to help Southwest Missouri State University and the Bears basketball program," John Whittington said. "It has been our goal for a long time to see moneys put away and invested so the program can forever have the necessary resources that would allow it to be competitive with other major colleges across the country."

John Whittington graduated from Southwest Missouri State in 1960. He has 20 years of experience in leisure-time marketing and promotions. A marketing consultant for the past 10 years, Whittington has provided services to Busch Entertainment Corporation, the 1982 World's Fair, the 1984 World's Fair, the International Association of Fairs and Expositions, and numerous other companies and projects.

In 1984, John Whittington was appointed to the university foundation board of directors; and in 1987-88, Whittington served as president of the foundation.

Pitt will get $100,000 from senior lineman

Defensive end Burt Grossman, a likely first-round NFL draft choice, said he will donate $100,000 to the University of Pittsburgh and $5,000 to his suburban Philadelphia high school.

"I just wanted to show my appreciation for the great opportunity that has been afforded me in high school and college," Grossman said.

Grossman, rated by pro scouts as a potential early first-round pick, said the gifts aren't contingent on his being a No. 1 selection in the April draft.

"What makes this even more special is that Burt Grossman made this commitment without knowing what is going to happen in the draft," Pitt coach Mike Gottfried said.

The gift is expected to be used for scholarships.

Grossman will donate $5,000 to Archbishop Carroll High School in Bala Cynwyd, where he was a three-year regular and an all-state defensive lineman, the Associated Press reported.

"This is a terrific display of generosity on Burt Grossman's part," Gottfried said. "It is a great example for athletes everywhere who may have the opportunity to give something back to their schools."

Gottfried made a substantial contribution to Pitt's general scholarship fund last year after being given a new, multiyear contract.

The 6-6, 270-pound Grossman was named first team all-East and second team all-America last season after making 71 tackles and seven quarterback sacks, despite a nagging ankle injury.

Grossman, 21, had 167 tackles and 22½ quarterback sacks in three seasons as a Pitt defensive regular. He played in the East-West Shrine game and the Hula Bowl and was the defensive MVP in the Blue-Gray game.

Utah State adjusts sports offerings

Utah State University will discontinue its wrestling program at the end of the current season and will reinstate men's cross country next fall.

Athletics director Rod Tueller said it would be more cost-effective to have cross country because other Utah schools conduct the sport, which will help reduce travel costs.

The number of schools west of the Mississippi that have dropped wrestling programs has increased significantly, Tueller said.

The school has been considering the discontinuation of wrestling since 1986, and a decision was made after the athletics council made the recommendation January 23.

Purdue planning two projects

Purdue University's board of trustees has awarded contracts for two athletics department projects estimated to cost about $9.5 million.

The projects are for an indoor practice facility for football and baseball and other university organizations and for relighting of Mackey Arena. Work on Mackey Arena will begin after the basketball season.

The estimated cost for the indoor facility is $9.3 million. The arena project is budgeted at $268,000, which will be paid from athletics department funds and donor contributions.

Management institute outlines first program

An "Executive Program" focusing on management skills of importance to current or aspiring directors of college and professional sports programs will be the first program offered by the new Sports Management Institute.

The institute recently was founded by three universities: the University of Notre Dame; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; and University of Southern California.

College directors of athletics who want to improve their management skills and others who aspire to become ADs or general managers of professional sports teams are being invited to apply for admission to the program, which features a two-week seminar at Southern California, a four-month job-related project and a week long "wrap-up" session at Notre Dame.

Applicants to the program must be recommended or sponsored by their employers, and the size of the first class will be limited. Tuition is $4,000.

The Executive Program is designed to strengthen participants' administrative and leadership skills, enhance professionalism in sports administration and create a pool of qualified successors to current administrators. It features four general content areas:

- Business management, including cash management, budgeting and investment decisions.

- Management of personal development, focusing on leadership qualities, motivational techniques and counseling.

- Organizational skills, including problem solving, decision making, and staff organization and function.

- External focus, including product marketing, media management, fund-raising and relations with the public, alumni and the campus community.

Specifically, the program will address these major duties of a sports administrator: managing markets and financial, physical and human resources; behaving ethically and legally; management of information resources, and strategic management.

The topics will be covered through a "team-teaching" approach featuring business school faculty members, athletics administrators and professional sports executives. The approach offers program participants an opportunity to consider theoretical and practical aspects of managing sports as a business.

Participants will gather July 9-21 at Southern California for the opening seminar. During that session individual projects will be assigned for completion by November.

The project, which is to be conceived and completed in cooperation with the participant's employer, is intended to enhance that participant's skills while benefitting the employer.

Projects will be evaluated during the final session, set for January 14-19, 1990, at Notre Dame. A ceremony where participants will receive certification of their completion of the program also is planned.

An application form can be obtained from Management Development Programs, Graduate School of Business Administration, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California 90089-0871; telephone 213/743-2441.
