Veteran coaches face challenges by two newcomers in Final Four

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The four coaches in the 1989 men's Division I basketball semifinals offer a study in contrasts.

Final Four veterans Mike Krzyzewski (only repeater from 1988) and Lou Henson are facing newcomer P. J. Carlesimo and the first interim coach in Final Four history, Steve Fisher, whose entire head-coaching career at the four-year level amazingly includes only the four Michigan games in this tournament.

On March 15 at 7:45 a.m., athletics director Bo Schembechler called him into his office and said: "Fisher, you are going to coach." Bill Frieder had just taken the Arizona State job. The coaching legend never made a quicker, more forceful and productive move in his athletics life. Ten days and seven hours (or 247 hours) later, Michigan was in its first Final Four since 1976 (runner-up).

"I pinch myself to make certain that I am in the land of the living and it is real," Fisher said. Before facing North Carolina and Dean Smith, Fisher said: "I can remember when I was a high school coach, sneaking in to try to get his autograph (he got it.)" Fisher turned 44 the day before the Virginia game. The Illinois State graduate (M.S. 1968) helped Les Wothke turn Western Michigan around in 1981. All his head-coaching experience came at Rich East High School (Park Forest, Illinois, 141-70 over eight seasons, best in school history).

Carlesimo, who played for Digger Phelps' 1971 Fordham NCAA team, has increased his victory total every season at Seton Hall—six, nine, 10, 14, 15, 22 and now 30. His 1988 team was the school's first-ever NCAA tournament team. His parents were on hand for hugs and kisses after the big victory in Denver. "The best thing you can do is make your parents happy," said P. J., oldest of 10 children. A year ago, his father retired as executive director of the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Association, which conducts

Commission's agenda includes graduation rates, Proposal 42

Possible legislation to require institutional disclosure of graduation rates and a review of the adoption of Proposal No. 42 by the 1989 NCAA Convention are among the major items on the agenda for the NCAA Presidents Commission's April 5-6 meeting in Chicago.

In its pre-Convention meeting January 8 in San Francisco, the Commission adopted a statement urging member institutions that currently collect graduation-rate data to make that information available in the recruiting process. It also pledged to prepare legislation for the 1990 NCAA Convention to make such disclosure mandatory, and that will be before the Commission in Chicago.

The review of Proposal No. 42 was placed on the Commission's agenda (as well as that of the NCAA Council's April 17-19 meeting) when Commission Chair Martin A. Massengale and NCAA President Albert M. Witte met with representatives of the Southeastern Conference and of Georgetown University earlier this year. Massengale and Witte agreed that both the Commission and the Council would review the issues involved.

Proposal No. 42 would eliminate the partial-qualifier category in NCAA Bylaws 14.3.1 and 14.3.2 as they apply to Division I institutions. It will become effective August 1, 1990, unless the 1990 Convention rescinds or modifies it in some way.

Another major issue on the April 5-6 agenda is the Commission's review of the discussions in the 18-month National Forum that it sponsored, as well as the American Institutes for Research studies related to that Forum.

It is anticipated that the next report in that research effort—data relating to the black student-athlete—will be available for review by the Commission in Chicago. If so, it also will be released publicly from the NCAA national office at that time.

Other topics

Among the other topics to be discussed by the Commission in the meeting:

- A progress report by the Commission's Advisory Committee to Review the NCAA Governance Process.

- A review of the approach used by the Commission in grouping certain legislative proposals at NCAA Conventions.

- A status report on special NCAA committees dealing with current major issues, including the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues, the Special Committee on Cost Reduction and the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure.

- A review of issues involving sports agents.

- Consideration of the concept of some type of certification or external-review process in intercollegiate athletics.

- Means by which the Commission might support or assist chief executive officers in athletics matters.

Subcommittees

The Commission's division subcommittees also have topics to discuss in their separate sessions in Chicago:

- Division I—The Proposal No. 42 issue, including the annual NCAA study of partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers.

- Division II—A review of current Division II academic requirements, including the first study of Division II partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers.

- Division III—A review of current Division III financial aid legislation, a study of the undergraduate enrollments of successful institutions in Division III championships and consideration of replacing national championships with regional cham-

Tournament participants to share in $31 million

More than 90 percent of Division I basketball-playing institutions will share in the proceeds from the 51st Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 1 and 3 in Seattle, Washington, according to NCAA Associate Executive Director Louis J. Spry.

This year, every automatic-qualifying conference has in place a revenue-sharing formula for tournament receipts. Therefore, 266 of 293 (90.8 percent) Division I basketball-playing institutions will receive a portion of the proceeds. Spry, the Association's controller, reported that the total proceeds will be $31,024,800.

The Atlantic Coast and Big Ten Conferences will receive the largest amounts—$4,503,600 each. The Big East Conference is next, at $3,753,000. As noted in the table below, 10 conferences will receive tournament proceeds in excess of $1 million—up from eight in 1988.

The 64-team tournament field represents 21.8 percent of Division I member institutions, which is a participation ratio of 1 to 4.5.

Shaffer leaving MCC post

James W. Shaffer, the Midwestern Collegiate Conference's first full-time commissioner, announced his resignation March 28 to accept a position as vice-president of public affairs at Butler University.

As vice-president of public affairs, Shaffer will report directly to the president and have primary responsibility for all public relations and public affairs matters concerning the university.

That will include all press and mission session, while the division subcommittees will be chaired by Lattie F. Coor, University of Vermont, Division I; Thomas A. Bond, Clarion University of Pennsylvania, Division II, and the Rev. William J. Byron, Catholic University, Division III.

media relations; government relations, and responsibility for internal communications with faculty members, students, alumni and trustees.

Shaffer will have oversight of the university's athletics and publications departments.

Shaffer assumed his position as MCC commissioner in September 1984.

During his tenure, the conference expanded to nine members.

The MCC has broadened its base as a Division I conference by adding women's athletics. It has increased its sports championships to 15.

Prior to becoming MCC commissioner, Shaffer spent nearly nine years in the communications department of the NCAA. He currently is a member of the NCAA Council.

Scholarship named for late ski coach

A foreign exchange scholarship for disabled student-athletes, preferably competitive skiers, has been established at the University of Denver to honor the late Wilhelm Josef (Willy) Schaeffler, whose teams won 13 NCAA championships in skiing during his 24-year career at the school.

The scholarship was established to honor Schaeffler's contributions to worldwide skiing and athletics in general.

Don H. Catlin, M.D., has been appointed to the International Olympic Committee Medical Commission, becoming the first U.S. representative on that commission since 1980.

Catlin was appointed by IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch to serve on the commission indefinitely. He will be one of six members of the Doping Subcommittee.

Catlin is director of the Paul Ziffren Olympic Analytical Laboratory at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center.

He was a consultant to the now-defunct NCAA Special Drug-Testing Committee in 1984-85.

NACDA convention agenda includes discussions of top athletics issues

Several of the most pressing issues in intercollegiate athletics today will be among topics discussed at the 24th annual convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics June 4-7 in Anaheim, California.

Sessions on cost containment and financing of athletics, freshman eligibility, and sports law are scheduled at the meeting, which is expected to attract approximately 800 athletics directors, assistant ADs and conference officials.

Also planned are sessions on colleges' involvement in the Olympic movement and on NCAA governance and membership structure.

The convention officially will open on the morning of June 5 with a keynote address by Frank Wells, president of Walt Disney Company. NACDA is the official sponsor of the Disneyland Pigskin Classic football game that will be played annually in Anaheim Stadium.

Among the discussion sessions and their moderators are the following:

- "Propositions 42 and 43: Pros and Cons," with Bill Byrne, director of athletics, University of Oregon, and Joan C. Cronan, director of women's athletics, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

- "NCAA Governance and Restructuring," Thomas C. Hansen, commissioner, Pacific-10 Conference, and Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics, University of California, San Diego, and NCAA secretary-treasurer.

- "Olympic Sports and Colleges: A Better Marriage," Harvey W. Schiller, commissioner, Southeastern Conference, and Patricia H. Meiser-McKnett, associate director of athletics, University of Connecticut.

- "Challenge of the '90s: Cost Containment and Financing of Intercollegiate Athletics," Sam Jankovich, director of athletics, University of Miami (Florida).

- "Sports on Trial," Kenneth A. Free, commissioner, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Presiding over many of the convention's sessions will be NACDA President Gary Cunningham, director of athletics at California State University, Fresno.

Also planned are programs that will appeal to representatives of schools in all NCAA membership divisions, as well as National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics member schools and junior colleges.

Among those attending the convention will be many of the athletics directors from NCAA Division I-A institutions, who also will participate in a meeting of the Division I-A Directors Association. The group is chaired by J. Frank Broyles, director of athletics at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Also, about 200 to 250 convention registrants are expected to remain in Anaheim June 8-10 for NACDA's annual management institute. The institute is part of a NACDA continuing-education program designed to offer athletics administrators an opportunity to study various topics pertinent to the profession.

The convention and the management institute will be held at the Anaheim Hilton, which also will be the site of separate luncheons saluting collegiate Olympians and winners of NACDA's annual awards.

Didion to return to national office

David A. Didion will rejoin the national office staff April 3 as an enforcement representative. He fills a vacancy created by the departure of Joseph W. Buffington last January.

A 1973 graduate of Ohio State University, Didion first joined the NCAA as an enforcement representative in 1978. He served in that position until 1985 when he was named an administrative assistant on the University of Kansas football staff.

Didion moved to the University of Pittsburgh when former Kansas football coach Gottfried was named head coach at Pitt after the 1985 season. He rejoined the national office staff as an enforcement representative in July 1986.

David A. Didion

Didion moved to Knoxville, Tennessee, in January 1988 to enter private business. For the past several months, he has served as a part-time investigator for the enforcement department.

NCAA Bylaw 16.1.6—institutional awards banquets

As plans are being made for institutional awards banquets, member institutions are reminded to review Bylaw 16.1.6. The NCAA Council has agreed that an institution is limited to providing not more than three banquets per year in a sport: a postseason team award or recognition meeting to honor one of its intercollegiate athletics teams (Bylaw 16.1.6.1); an annual all-sports banquet or meeting to honor all of its intercollegiate athletics teams (Bylaw 16.1.6.2), and a recognition banquet that occurs prior to or during the season, for which an institution's athletics booster club may finance the team's transportation expenses (Bylaw 16.1.6.3). The Council noted that the application of Bylaw 16.1.6.3 requires that no tangible awards be presented to student-athletes in the conduct of such a recognition banquet.

The Council also confirmed a previous interpretation precluding the provision of transportation for student-athletes who are being provided an occasional family home meal per Bylaw 16.12.1.4, noting the distinction between that type of situation and the provision of transportation (which is permissible) for student-athletes to attend the institution's banquets permitted per Bylaws 16.1.6.1 and 16.1.6.2. Further, the provisions of Bylaws 16.6.2.1 and 16.6.2.3 would not permit a member institution to provide the parents or legal guardians or friends of student-athletes with free admissions and meals in conjunction with the institution's awards banquets permitted per Bylaw 16.1.6.

NCAA Bylaw 16.1.2—permissible awards

Bylaw 16.1.2 and Figure 16-1 set forth the summary of awards that a student-athlete may receive without jeopardizing eligibility for intercollegiate athletics. All awards except those received prior to enrollment (see Bylaw 16.1.1.1) and when the student-athlete is not regularly enrolled (see Bylaw 16.1.1.3) must include an appropriate institutional insignia or letter, event specification, or comparable identification. Merchandise or appliance items may not be utilized as awards unless they are specifically authorized and properly personalized. Further, according to Bylaw 16.1.2.2, student-athletes may receive the following or similar awards (with institutional insignia or proper personalization as required by Bylaw 16.1.2.1) without jeopardizing intercollegiate athletics eligibility: binoculars, blankets, blazers, cameras, clock radios, jackets, luggage, pen and pencil sets, photographs, plaques, rings, scrolls, sweaters, trophies, and watches. These awards must be properly personalized (i.e., the event for which the recipient is receiving the award and/or the identity of the recipient is inscribed on the award). Further, awards presented by a member institution, conference or other approved agency must be uniform for all team members receiving the award.

Merchandise items that cannot be properly personalized (e.g., gift certificates, appliances, television sets, golf clubs, tennis racquets and sporting goods) are prohibited. For example, it would not be permissible for a participant in a tournament to receive as an award a merchandise item, a gift certificate from a pro shop or a certificate that may be redeemed for a sporting goods item.

NCAA Bylaw 14.1.2—validity of academic credentials

NCAA member institutions are reminded of the provisions of Bylaw 14.1.2, which state that as a condition and obligation of membership, it is the responsibility of a member institution to determine the validity of the information on which the eligibility of a student-athlete is based. Therefore, it is the responsibility of a member institution to determine whether a transcript is valid for purposes of applying appropriate NCAA legislation to the eligibility of a student-athlete when the institution receives notification, or otherwise has cause to believe, that a student-athlete's high school, preparatory school or two-year college transcript is not valid.

The Council has reviewed situations in which student-athletes who appeared to meet the requirements of Bylaw 14.3.1 subsequently were notified that their test scores had been invalidated by the applicable testing service and has concluded that no institutional responsibility would be involved in such a case until notification is received from the testing service (assuming that no coaching staff member or other representative is involved in an arrangement for a fraudulent test). At the point of such notification, the institution must declare the student-athlete ineligible under Bylaw 14.3.1, and the matter then should be referred to the NCAA Eligibility Committee for a determination (on a case-by-case basis) in accordance with Bylaw 14.13.4.3 as to any appropriate loss of eligibility beyond the remainder of the freshman year for a student-athlete who practices or competes in intercollegiate athletics and/or receives institutional financial assistance while ineligible for such aid, practice or competition.

NCAA Bylaw 13.1.3.2—evaluation periods/ Division I women's basketball

According to 1989 Convention Proposal No. 89, Division I women's basketball coaching staff members may engage in evaluation activities during official tryouts for the ABAUSA Olympic Festival; however, because the effective date of this legislation is August 1, 1989, it would not be permissible for coaching staff member to engage in such evaluation activities outside the appropriate evaluation periods during the spring of 1989. This is a clarification of Bylaw 13.1.3.2-(w) as it appears in the 1989-90 NCAA Manual.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Committee recommends Proposal No. 42 be delayed until '92.

Actions related to NCAA initial-eligibility legislation highlighted the March 22-23 meeting in Kansas City of the Association's Academic Requirements Committee. Approved were the following recommendations, which will be forwarded to the Council:

- That implementation of Proposal No. 42, which alters existing initial-eligibility legislation, be delayed until August 1992.

- That the Council sponsor a resolution at the 1990 Convention that, if approved by the membership, would authorize a feasibility study of the establishment of a national clearinghouse for initial eligibility.

NCAA President Albert M. Witte attended the meeting and encouraged the committee to take a position on Proposal No. 42. After the proposal was adopted at the 1989 Convention, Witte and NCAA Presidents Commission Chair Martin A. Massengale met with representatives of the Southeastern Conference and Georgetown University and agreed to place the issue on the agendas for the Council and Commission in April. The Academic Requirements Committee's recommendation also will be reported at those meetings.

"Committee members were sharply divided on No. 42," said Douglas S. Hobbs, faculty athletics representative at the University of California, Los Angeles, and chair of the Academic Requirements Committee.

"The committee always has favored the strengthening of academic standards. Nevertheless, and predictably, there was a great deal of disagreement over whether No. 42 would, in fact, do that."

As Hobbs noted, the committee reaffirmed its support of any measures designed to strengthen academic standards. However, approved by a divided vote was a recommendation that the Council take the necessary steps to delay implementation of changes to what is now Bylaw 14.3 that were approved by the membership when No. 42 passed in San Francisco.

"What would happen, for example, if the NCAA study shows little correlation between (college entrance) test scores and academic performance of student-athletes, however the latter is defined? This was the committee's principal concern in voting to recommend the delay in implementation of the legislation," explained Hobbs.

The study he referred to is the Association's 10-year study of student-athletes' academic performance, currently under way. "I believe the sentiment on the prevailing side was that existing legislation should not be substantially altered, especially in what may be a very punitive way, until the available data have been gathered and analyzed," Hobbs added.

He also noted that the vote reflected the committee's previous views on changes in Bylaw 14.3 [formerly Bylaw 5-1-(j), commonly referred to as Proposition 48].

The committee's other major action related to a proposal that was defeated by the 1989 Convention—a resolution from Big Ten Conference members that, as originally submitted, called for development of a plan to set up a national clearinghouse for certification of initial eligibility.

That proposal, No. 51, was amended in San Francisco to limit the resolution to a call for a feasibility study of the possible establishment of such a clearinghouse. It, too, was defeated.

"A number of persistent and prickly problems that have been brought to this committee's attention apparently could be avoided by a clearinghouse," Hobbs offered. "The committee's view is that there is much to be said for a clearinghouse."

"However, before establishment, the NCAA membership should understand exactly what a clearinghouse would be responsible for. This suggests, at minimum, a feasibility study."

Hobbs added that committee members hope a resolution can be presented to the 1990 Convention, which would:

- Call for a study to determine if the concept of a national clearinghouse is realistic and desirable, and,

- If so, determine who should be responsible for the establishment and administration of the clearinghouse; estimate how much money would be required to set up and maintain the operation, and suggest how it would be funded.

Tournament revenue should be spread out more

By Bill Millsaps
Richmond Times-Dispatch

In a snit because they had to go someplace they didn't want to play in the first round of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, Dean Smith and Bob Knight vented their displeasure.

Smith, the daddy of basketball at North Carolina, said he thought it foolish that there are 293 colleges in Division I and suggested that the little boys should have a little tournament of their own.

Knight, builder of character at Indiana, slammed the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee and said that a machine, not a group of nine men, should choose the NCAA field. Knight's idea is to reduce the field from 64 to 32 teams, picked by computer, untouched by human hands or, presumably, human judgment.

Smith obviously is in the minority that didn't enjoy St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) over DePaul in 1981, or Richmond over Indiana in 1988, or Middle Tennessee State over Florida State in 1989.

Knight spoke before complete results were in from the first and second rounds. The NCAA committee must have done a pretty decent job, because 13 of its top 16 seeds were still alive in the chase for the national championship.

Given that Smith and Knight offered their opinions on the NCAA tournament, University of Virginia coach Terry Holland was asked to speak his own mind.

"I like it as it is," he said. "Don't fool with it. But if you're going to do anything to it, add to it. I could listen to that argument more than I could the argument to cut back."

Holland doesn't like the amount of money available to schools just for getting into the tournament. This year, the figure is $250,200; next year, it is projected to be $270,000.

"That creates a lot of pressure to get into the NCAA field and gives administrators a reason to fire coaches," said Holland. "I'd like to see the money spread out over a much broader base than just the 64 teams in the field."

But don't most conferences have tournament revenue-sharing arrangements?

"There are still some leagues that don't," said Holland, "and there are an awful lot of teams to which $250,000 to $300,000 means an awful lot, enough to fire a coach and hope that the next guy can get them in the tournament the next year. We're going after the lottery in some programs."

The problem is that there is now a mountain of money in the NCAA tournament. Ten years ago, gross receipts were $7,909,534. This year, the gross is expected to be $66.3 million.

The NCAA has already adjusted downward the percentage of those receipts earned by Final Four teams. In 1979, Final Four schools received $235,103. If the 1979 formula were still being followed, 1989 Final Four participants would each receive $1.97 million; instead, they will receive "only" $1.25 million.

Holland said he would prefer that "every team in Division I gets a certain amount of money from the NCAA tournament." He would give "a much smaller amount for the teams that actually get into the

Freshman eligibility rules say a lot

To the Editor:

Not allowing freshmen who are academically unqualified to participate in athletics during their freshman year has gone a long way toward expressing the sincerity most of us have when we say that the primary purpose one should have in attending an institution is to receive an education and earn a degree. If a sport is the vehicle for obtaining this objective, that is super.

The comment is made from time to time that "so and so" would be a much better performer in his sophomore year if he had been allowed to practice during his period of ineligibility as a freshman. That may well be true and logical enough. But I believe we should consider the following before giving too much credence to that, if we are committed to increased graduation rates for our athletes.

On the average day of practice, considering the time spent going to the gym, taping, dressing, practice time on the floor, showering and dressing, I would estimate that, conservatively, you are looking at a 3-to-3½-hour period. This is actually the minimum time, because I assume the ineligible athlete will not be required to attend squad meetings and film sessions and meetings with coaches.

Schools that are truly concerned about the academic programs of their ineligible athletes should be utilizing this time for counseling and tutoring these athletes so that they will become eligible and, in the process, become more adjusted to college life and come to believe that we are not giving lip service to their graduating.

It would be most interesting to compare data on the graduation rate of athletes who were ineligible their freshman year with the athletes who played their freshman year.

I guess, in the final analysis, my response to the athlete becoming eligible in his sophomore year and not being as sharp in his athletics ability is "so what!"

He may not be on his way to becoming an all-America or pro, but he is certainly well under way toward graduation and a degree.

Degree programs needed for sports

To the Editor:

How much do college athletes know about the professional organizations that they aspire to become a part of in the future?

Do they have an idea of how a team's organization functions on a daily basis?

What do they know about administration, psychology, nutrition, insurance needs, player negotiations and kinesiology?

College athletes at NCAA member institutions can earn degrees in accounting, engineering and business administration, but few are offered an opportunity for a baccalaureate degree that prepares an athlete for a career in professional sports.

Why not give an athletics application of academics?

I'm not talking about offering courses that teach the rules of badminton or the theory of jogging and push-ups. I'm saying offer a degree program that will prepare an athlete to understand all aspects of his chosen sport. Educate him in sports nutrition, exercise, physiology, kinetics and sports psychology, as they apply to his chosen sport.

Few athletes would fail to show an interest in a degree program that prepares them for what they wish to become in the future. The gap between athletics and academics that we so often hear about might just disappear.

A well-structured degree program, as mentioned, also would give the athlete something to "fall back on" should his plans for professional competition fail.

All of the above could apply to the major amateur/trust-fund sports as well, such as track and field.

"I've learned self-discipline, to manage my time. It (college athletics) has helped me to learn to work with other people; and when you interview for a job, that's one thing they want to know if you can do. "...I would submit that a state tournament is the natural boundary for high school sports. Let's pass a rule. If a team can get there comfortably by bus, it's tolerable. But sending high school teams winging around the country is an abuse.

"There are already so many abuses: intense competition among private schools for 'disadvantaged' youth, who usually turn out to be very tall and very fast; recruiting for eighth graders, robbing them of their youth.

"The colleges have long become a feeder system for the professional leagues, at great cost to integrity. We have coaches accused of sending $100 bills in air-express envelopes to parents of prospects. We have agents lurking on campus, signing up athletes, who are exploited by taking a pressure job with low pay and few legal rights.

"Now, this national plague is spreading to the high schools. Athletes are learning it is acceptable to cut corners to stay eligible. And other children are learning that playing the flute or writing a poem is not nearly as valuable to their elders as 'going to the glass.'"

"In the final analysis, we knew that if we wanted to really follow our goal of athletics excellence with academic integrity, then there was really no other choice but to accept the Colonial League's invitation (for membership).

"Is it our aim to become a national powerhouse in football? No, not necessarily. We want to keep our priorities in place. We want our athletes to totally fit into the rest of the student body, with no differences in their attitude toward gaining an education."

"Bill Bradley, the senator from New Jersey who was a Rhodes scholar and an all-America basketball player at Princeton University, has introduced Federal legislation that would force colleges and universities to disclose their graduation rates of student-athletes so that incoming student-athletes would have what Bradley described as an 'informed choice.'"

For now, colleges may or may not disclose that graduation rate. But those that waffle tell a real student all that student needs to know.

Panelists to discuss black-athlete issues

Issues facing black athletes will be the focus of a forum April 7 at the University of the District of Columbia. "The Black Athletes in America Forum: Implications for the 21st Century" is being organized by Sports Perspectives International.

SPI's president is Charles S. Farrell, who covered intercollegiate athletics for The Chronicle of Higher Education before moving to an editorial position in the sports department of The Washington Post. "I think I bring a unique perspective to the much-needed, frank discussion of sports in America—particularly as it relates to the black athletes," he said.

"I truly believe that if we can sit down and discuss openly, as we will at this forum, some of the problems plaguing black athletes and try to resolve them, we will begin to resolve the same problems in other areas of American society."

The event will include five panels, each with four or five participants, that will focus on the following topics:

- Academics and the black athletes.
- NCAA study on the black athlete.
- The black professional athlete.
- Improving the pipeline.
- The role of the media.

Among those who already have confirmed their participation in the forum are Arthur Ashe, who will deliver the keynote address during the forum luncheon; Harvey W. Schiller, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference; Rudy Washington of the Black Coaches Association; Gail Hopkins, assistant athletics director at the University of Arizona, and John R. Gerdy, NCAA legislative assistant.

Also tentatively set to participate in the forum are Harry Edwards of the University of California, Berkeley; Kenneth A. Free, commissioner of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference; James Brown of CBS Sports, and Doug Williams, former Grambling State University student-athlete who now is quarterback for the NFL Washington Redskins.

"The forum is necessary," explained Lee A. McElroy, District of Columbia athletics director, "because we need to stop reacting to sensitive issues affecting the black athlete and start acting on them—take a stand and think about long-term solutions. We have to candidly address sensitive issues for the benefit of black athletes and all athletes."

For additional information on the forum or to make reservations, contact McElroy (202/282-7748) or Farrell (202/745-7247).

"The fun of rooting for a college team is knowing that the athletes are serious students who take serious courses, who go to serious classes and complete serious assignments in earning a serious degree.

"Those who root for a college team that depends on tramp athletes taking tramp courses aren't really rooting for that college; they're just rooting for some semipro that the college has hired, the same way it hires security officers or kitchen cooks.

"Bradley is calling his legislation the Student-Athletes Right-to-Know Act. But shouldn't a college roter have a right to know what courses a student-athlete is taking in order to know if that athlete is worth rooting for?

"Let the colleges put that academic information in their media guides instead of all those puffy profiles."

"No team should be getting $1.25 million for getting to the Final Four. All the money that is earned from this tournament should go into one pot. And every school in the NCAA should get a share. Maybe the teams that get in the tournament could get two or three shares or something.

"The kids enjoy winning and competing. That is what this tournament is about. It shouldn't be about making money for your school.

"I know they (the NCAA) would never listen to me. But all this money can lead to problems.

"If you want to get that money, then it puts pressure on coaches to get players like Alonzo Mourning (Georgetown University) and Sean Elliott (University of Arizona).

"The athletics directors have problems with Title IX. They need money to run the women's programs. They need to balance their budget; and they know if they get into the tournament, they can balance their budget. And if they don't, they fire the coach."

ournament and progress in it.

"Let's don't put so much emphasis on making the field. That money is for everybody and it should be spread all over."

Holland is not speaking as a representative of the college athletics underclass. His school is a member of a conference—the Atlantic Coast Conference—that is already guaranteed $3.75 million out of the NCAA pool.

Holland doesn't believe it's right that the rich keep getting richer, which is a dangerous notion these days. He is even prepared to say to the unsayable: The players may deserve a piece of all this tournament money.

He would give the players money from the tournament, he said, "if it could be done on a reasonable basis without separating the basketball players from the other athletes. They're already separate enough.

"I don't like the idea of paying players. But maybe we could develop some kind of summer program where we paid for work performed, as part of their scholarships. Give them an opportunity to work with kids. Maybe something like that would be reasonable. I frankly don't see how that can happen right now, though."

Of course not. It makes too much sense. It's entirely too equitable.

Women's play-off teams guided by experienced coaches

Four veteran coaches with 15 appearances among them in the national women's semifinals and finals make for nothing but familiar faces in the eighth annual Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Chris Weller of Maryland, even though she has nearly 14 years of head coaching experience, has not been to the semifinals since a third-place finish in the first-ever NCAA tournament in 1982. Weller admits anything short of making the group of four teams in Tacoma would have been a disappointment.

Just because her teams have not reached the semifinals or finals since 1982 does not mean the Lady Terps have not been successful under Weller. Maryland qualified for six NCAA tournaments and reached the final eight teams twice before this year.

Auburn's Joe Ciampi is making his second straight appearance in the semifinals, and he is expecting a better result than last year's 56-54 loss to Louisiana Tech. This year, his Lady Tigers have the best record (31-1) of the four teams in Tacoma.

Tennessee's Pat Summitt has set a record by leading her team into the semifinals for the fourth consecutive year, and it is the third straight year for Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore. It is also the second consecutive year there have been two men and two women head coaches in the semifinals.

Even though this is only Barmore's fourth year as head coach, he has been associated with seven of Louisiana Tech's eight NCAA tournament teams. He served as cohead coach with Sonja Hogg for three years.

Barmore has reached the 200-win plateau faster than any other coach in collegiate women's basketball history. His record of 211-22 (.906) also is the best winning percentage at any level of women's collegiate basketball (minimum five years as head coach).

All No. 1 seeds survive

For the first time in the eight-year tournament history, all four No. 1 seeds reached the national semifinals: Auburn, Tennessee, Mary-

Leon Barmore

Joe Ciampi

Pat Summitt

land and defending champion Louisiana Tech.

Both Tennessee and Louisiana Tech have been in six of the eight women's semifinals and finals. Tennessee is the first team to make four consecutive appearances. Auburn is making a second consecutive appearance, and Maryland has not been back to the semifinals since 1982.

Coaches have experience

The four coaches in the semifinals are one of the most successful groups in women's basketball history. Tennessee's Pat Summitt has won 383 games; Auburn's Joe Ciampi and Maryland's Chris Weller each have 292 victories, and Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore has 211. That is 1,178 victories and 48 years of coaching experience.

This year's quartet has a com-play. And its 55-point scoring allowance leads the remaining four teams. Auburn also leads all four teams in free-throw accuracy at 78.6 percent.

Orr's figures again are outstanding—53.7 percent from the field, 81.3 at the line, 11.3 rebounds per game, five blocks in three games and 19.0 scoring. Teammate Linda Godby, a nonstarter but potent off the bench, is the leader in field-goal accuracy at 70.8 percent (minimum 10 made). Ruthie Bolton's 22 assists leads all the semifinalists. Orr is not the only shot blocker on the team—its total of 11 leads the remaining teams.

Louisiana Tech leads all the teams in the tournament in scoring offense at 91 points per game, rebounds per game at 52.3, rebound margin at 15.6 and assists at 59. Venus Lacy accuracy from the field is third behind Auburn's Godby and Tennessee teammate Daedra Charles (minimum 10 made; Gordon has made 31 and is first using a minimum of 20 made). Gordon also is fourth in rebounding at 11 per game.

Tennessee leads all four teams in both field-goal accuracy at 51.8 percent and scoring margin at 25.6, and has an impressive 42.7 percent in field-goal percentage defense, second to Auburn. More on Gordon: Her 337 career tournament points is a record, surpassing Southern California's Cheryl Miller; and her 17-for-20 free-throwing vs. Long Beach State set a tournament record, as did the team's 38-for-48.

Amazingly, three Maryland players rank 1-2-3 in steals among players in the national semifinals: Deanna Tate 14, Carla Holmes 11 and Vicky Bullett 10. Tate is a 26.3 scorer and leads the field in free-throw accuracy (92.9) and in total field goals. Olympian Bullett is a 22-point scorer and 10.3 rebounder, and shoots 84.2 percent at the line. Holmes is a 17-point scorer, shoots 91.7 percent at the line and is four-for-eight from three-point range.

Maryland forced 82 turnovers in three games, but only forced 13 at Texas. However, Maryland had only eight turnovers itself in Austin.

That gives you an idea what this versatile trio means to Maryland. The team's 50 total steals is first, of course, and makes up for the fact the team was outrebounded in all three tourney games. Its 25 steals vs. Stephen F. Austin State set a tournament record, as did Holmes' eight steals the same game. In regular-season play, Maryland led the country in field-goal shooting at 54.1.

Tournament victories

Louisiana Tech has won 28 tournament games (28-5) in eight appearances to lead Division I, while Tennessee is second with 24 victories (24-6), also in eight appearances. Auburn is 12-6 in seven, and Maryland is 9-5 in six.

Other tournament facts

There has been only one undefeated team in women's basketball since 1982—national champion Texas (34-0) in 1986. The worst record by a championship team since 1982 was 28-6 by Tennessee in 1987.

Maryland's 22-10 record in 1982 was the worst overall record of teams in the semifinals. Southern Cal's Linda Sharp is the only coach to win two NCAA women's titles (1983 and 1984), but Tennessee's Pat Summitt is the only mentor to coach teams to first-, second- and third-place finishes.

As far as scheduling for the season, Maryland played nine teams chosen to participate in the NCAA tournament; Tennessee played 14; Auburn played seven, and Louisiana Tech played nine.

In all games vs. those opponents, Auburn was 8-1, Louisiana Tech 8-3, Maryland 7-2 and Tennessee 15-3.

Auburn's Linda Godby, from Indianapolis, Indiana, is the tallest player in Tacoma at 6-6 and was the first Indiana high school woman to dunk a basketball during a game.

Basketball notes

bined record of 125-8 this season by far the best in tournament history. Last year's group, which included three of these same coaches, had 123 wins and 14 losses, now the second-best mark.

Notes on each team

Auburn used its usual formula to reach the national semifinals—Vickie Orr's scoring, rebounding and shot blocking and the country's best field-goal percentage defense. First in the country in field-goal percentage allowed in the regular season at 34.2 percent, Auburn duplicated that figure in tournament leads all four teams in rebounds at 41, or 13.7 per game; and teammate Nora Lewis is second at 37. So, it is no wonder the defending national champions rule the boards.

Lacy's 25 free throws leads the field, and her 24.3 scoring average (Lewis is next at 20) is among the leaders. Pam Wells is second among the Tacoma four in assists at 21 in three games. Tech's 80 free throws made also leads the field at Tacoma.

Bridgette Gordon, a member of the U.S. Olympic champions, leads the Tacoma four in scoring at 27.7 points per game; and her 62 percent the National Invitation Tournament.

Henson, oldest of the group at 57 (and born in tiny Okay, Oklahoma), took New Mexico State, his alma mater, to third in the 1970 Final Four. Now, he is taking Illinois to its first Final Four since 1952, when it was third. Like Seton Hall, Duke and Michigan, the Illini never have won the NCAA title. Henson is the ninth coach to take two different colleges to the Final Four.

This is Krzyzewski's third Final Four in a four-year span, a feat accomplished only by Harold Olsen, Fred Taylor, Vic Bubas, Harry Combes, Ed Jucker, John Thompson, Phil Woolpert and John Wooden (12 in 14 years). Krzyzewski, who played under Bob Knight at Army and head-coached there before coming to Duke in 1981, finished second in 1986 at Dallas and tied for third last year, losing to eventual champion Kansas.

Attendance No. 2 all-time

Tournament attendance is headed for No. 2 all-time, both in total and average per session, trailing only the 1987 tournament, with the Final Four at New Orleans. After 32 sessions, the total is 520,327 paid for an average of 16,260. Each session at the 1984 Final Four in Seattle's Kingdome totaled 38,471. It appears that the 1989 tournament total will approach 600,000 with the average above 17,500. Both figures would be second to the 654,744 total and 19,257 average in 1987, when both Final Four sessions in New Orleans totaled 64,959 (paid plus media), the record paid attendance in history.

Seattle will bring the all-time championship-game attendance to well above 900,000. The figure will top 1 million in 1992 in Minneapolis.

All-time tournament attendance will top 9.9 million in Seattle, so the 10-million mark will be reached in the first round next year.

Illinois is the only No. 1 seed left in the 1989 tournament (the other three were Oklahoma, North Carolina and Georgetown). That breaks a string of eight straight years in which two No. 1 seeds survived each year. All four No. 1 seeds in 1980 failed to reach the Final Four. That means the No. 1 seeds batted only 17-for-40 in the decade of the 1980s, or 42.5 percent made it to the Final Four. Only three won the championship—Indiana in 1987, Georgetown in 1984 and North Carolina in 1982 (remember, there are four No. 1 seeds each year—one in each regional).

First-year fortune

As mentioned, Michigan's Steve Fisher is the first interim coach ever to reach the Final Four.

Of course, a number of other first-year coaches have made the Final Four. The first rookie coach to make it with a perfect record was Indiana State's Bill Hodges at 32-0 in Salt Lake City (1979), where his Larry Bird-led team beat Ray Meyer and DePaul before losing the championship game to Michigan State and Magic Johnson in the most-watched television game in college history.

Among the first-year head coaches was Meyer himself, back in 1943 (third). Another was Louisville's Denny Crum in 1972 (fourth).

Ferry in select group

Duke's Danny Ferry has led his team to three Final Fours in his career, putting him in a select group of players who have done that in the 1980s. The others are Louisville's Rodney McCray in 1980, 1982 and 1983; Houston's Akeem Olajuwon in 1982, 1983 and 1984, and Georgetown's Patrick Ewing in 1982, 1984 and 1985. McCray's team won it in 1980, and Ewing's team won in 1984. Olajuwon and Houston were second twice, and Ferry's team was second in 1986, so he is looking for his (and Duke's) first crown.

Duke's seventh Final Four

This is Duke's seventh Final Four. That ties Duke for sixth place on the all-time list. UCLA leads with 14, then come Kentucky and North Carolina with nine each, Kansas and Ohio State eight each, and Duke and Louisville seven each.

Big Ten leads

The Big Ten Conference, with two teams in the Final Four, leads the way this year with a 13-3 record in tournament play. The Atlantic Coast Conference is next at 12-5 and the Big East Conference third

Pointers grab hockey crown

By Leo Roth

Wisconsin-Stevens Point won its first NCAA men's team championship March 24-25 by claiming the Division III ice hockey crown over Rochester Institute of Technology. The Pointers won the two-game final series before standing-room-only crowds of 2,100 at RIT's Ritter Memorial Arena.

Winning the title on the road, Stevens Point coach Mark Mazoleni said, "It doesn't make it sweeter...it's just a great victory against a tremendous team. It's what we all hoped for—a classic match up. Unfortunately, one team had to lose."

Junior left winger Shawn Wheeler, who scored the game-tying goal in game one and the game-winner with 5:39 minutes to play in the decisive second game, was named most valuable player.

Other standouts for the Pointers were freshman center Paul Caufield, who finished with two goals and two assists in the series, and third-string goalie Todd Chin, a 25-year-old freshman and ex-marine who made 59 saves—including 42 in game one.

Roe contributing two assists each. Sophomore goalie Fred Abraham made 46 total saves.

Stevens Point's first national championship came in just its second tournament appearance and capped a 34-5-2 season. The Pointers lost in the first round last year to eventual champion Wisconsin-River Falls, which also won on the road, at Elmira, New York.

Championship Results

It was RIT's sixth postseason appearance. The Tigers, 26-8-2, won the Division II championship in 1983 and Division III title in 1985.

"Games as they should be played," said first-year RIT coach Buddy Powers, the former Bowling Green assistant. "Both teams went at it tooth-and-nail, and they simply came out one goal better."

The deciding factor for the Pointers was staying power.

RIT had thrived on late-game surges, outscoring its opponents 80-33 in the third period of games. However, in the two-game finals against Stevens Point, the Tigers were outshot 23-13 and outscored

That left the Pointers with a 16-0-1 record on the road against Division III opponents.

"I guess it's mental toughness," said Wheeler, clutching the huge NCAA championship trophy outside his team's locker room. "There have been times in the past when mistakes cost us. This year, we showed lots of composure."

It was true in both games against RIT.

In game one, Stevens Point rallied from a 3-1 deficit after two periods to earn the tie. RIT was whistled for 26 minutes in penalties in the last 11:41, including two misconduct calls. Wheeler scored the game-tying goal at 16:30.

In the second game, Wheeler got the game-winner at 14:21 when he anchored himself in the slot and banged in a rebound after Abraham had stopped a shot by Caufield.

Wheeler, a bruising 6-1 forward, set a school record for penalty minutes this season but still managed to score 23 goals.

"My role is to simply stand in front of the net," said the native of Mount Vernon, New York, who grew up in Fort McMurray, Alberta. "I don't have the pretty hands or the

Eagles soar to II men's basketball championship

North Carolina Central won its first NCAA team championship with a 73-46 victory over Southeast Missouri State in the Division II Men's Basketball Championship March 25 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

The Eagles' 27-point margin of victory was the largest of any championship game in Division II tournament history. They had a 22-point lead by half time, after holding Southeast Missouri State scoreless for the last seven minutes of the first half.

North Carolina Central shot 56 percent from the field, while Southeast Missouri State hit only 33 percent.

"When we go out on the floor, there is one thing we do, and that's play man-to-man defense from buzzer to buzzer," North Carolina Central coach Mike Bernard said.

"We played hard, but we shot the ball terribly," Southeast Missouri State coach Ron Shumate said. "And there's a reason for it—they made us change our shots."

North Carolina Central made its first appearance in the tournament in 1957 but did not return until 1988. The Eagles were eliminated in the second round in each of those appearances.

Southeast Missouri State reached the championship game for the second time in the last four years and the third time overall. The Indians made their 12th appearance in the tournament.

Miles Clarke of North Carolina Central was named the tournament's most outstanding player. He was joined on the all-tournament team by teammates Dominique Stephens and Antoine Sifford, Earnest Taylor of Southeast Missouri State and Maurice Pullum of UC Riverside.

Delta State women claim Division II title

Delta State coupled hot shooting with strong rebounding to defeat Cal Poly Pomona, 88-58, for the Division II Women's Basketball Championship March 25 in Cleveland, Mississippi.

The Lady Statesmen hit 58 percent from the field and out rebounded the Broncos by 21. The margin on the defensive boards was 15. Forward Crystal Hardy had 12 rebounds including 10 defensive rebounds. That was one-third of her team's total under the defensive boards. Center Pam Lockett also grabbed a dozen rebounds and scored 25 points.

Cal Poly Pomona's Cathy Gooden led all scorers with 28 points. Center Niki Bracken added 24.

The title was the first NCAA championship, either team or individual, for the school. Delta State was making its fourth straight appearance in the tournament. The Lady Statesmen had reached the semifinals in 1986 and 1988.

Cal Poly Pomona has competed in all eight tournaments and has reached the final game six times. The Broncos have won three championships.

Lockett was named the most outstanding player. She was joined on the all-tournament team by teammate Jo Lynn Davis, Bracken, Lori Bender of Bentley and Tammy Wilson of Central Missouri State.

great skating ability. I'm a Zamboni machine. But I do the best with what I've got."

Palmer's 36th goal of the season gave RIT a 1-0 lead early in the second period. He stole a pass and drilled a shot through Pointers goalie Chin's legs. Stevens Point tied the game at 17:15 when Mike Stahley scored on a short-handed breakaway.

The Pointers took the lead at 12:37 of the third period.

Caufield won a draw back to defenseman Mike Hess, whose wrist shot dipped between the legs of a stunned Abraham. It was Hess' first goal of the year.

RIT's Tim Cordick tied it once more on a slap shot with 8:18 to play. That's how the score remained, despite some intense pressure on Chin until the final horn sounded.

Chin, who played just two games during the regular season, finished tournament play with a 9-0-2 record.

"Each game, I had to prove myself or I'd be back in the AHL," said Chin, referring to what the Pointers call the Afternoon Hockey League for seldom-used players. "I really think my time in the service helped my composure."

The title was the zenith for Mazzoleni's four-year rebuilding project. When he arrived at Stevens Point from Illinois-Chicago where he was an assistant, the Pointers were coming off a 4-24 season.

He immediately concentrated his recruiting on Midwest Junior A leagues.

"I was able to get some good kids who were willing to take a chance with me," said Mazzoleni, whose record is 83-39-4. "Each year, the recruiting just progressed. It's taken four full classes."

Sports careers workshop set

A three-day workshop being billed as the first "how-to" conference on starting a career track in sports-related business has been scheduled for May 11-13 in Phoenix.

The Sports Careers Conference is being organized by Mark Tudi, who has run a sports marketing firm for five years. Registration for the event, which will be held at the Phoenix Hyatt Regency, is $350 ($275 for students).

According to its organizers, the conference has been designed to provide a fast-paced educational program. The sports/business industry will be broken down into five groups:

- Sports journalism.
- Athletics administration.
- Sports marketing.
- Athlete representation.
- Sports entrepreneurship.

Each of these groups will be broken down in more detail to cover as many sports career alternatives as possible. In all, 150 panel discussions, presentations and round-table sessions will be offered.

Speakers and presenters confirmed for the conference include Robert Helmick, U.S. Olympic Committee president; Jerry Colangelo, owner of the NBA Phoenix Suns; Donald B. Canham, former athletics director at the University of Michigan, and John T. Waters, NCAA director of licensing.

To obtain a brochure on the sports career conference or registration information, contact Sports Careers at 2702 North 3rd Street, Suite 4000, Phoenix, Arizona 85004 (telephone 800/776-7877).

Seattle Host Committee said.

"I'm talking restaurants, hotels, food, shopping, the whole conglomerate," said Bob Walsh in an interview with the Associated Press. "They're renting boats, they're doing cruises, they're..."

The 1984 men's Final Four was held in the Kingdome in Seattle. The 1988 women's play-off was held in the Tacoma Dome. Tacoma is about 30 miles south of Seattle.

This year, both four-team play-offs are scheduled, meaning a gigantic boost to the Seattle-Tacoma area's economy.

The women's tournament will be held in Tacoma March 31 and April 2. The men's Final Four will be played in the Kingdome April 1 and April 3. It's about a 45-minute drive on Interstate 5 between the two domes.

Walsh thinks the men's Final Four will be worth $40 million for Seattle's economy, while the women will bring $7 million to $10 million to Tacoma's economy.

The 1984 men's Final Four brought in between $30 million and $35 million for Seattle, he said.

Interest in and enthusiasm for the men's Final Four never has been greater, Walsh said. A top ticket for the three-game event that sells for $55 is being sold for $1,700 a ticket by scalpers, he said.

Tickets for the men's Final Four went on sale in April 1988. There were 250,000 applications for the tickets on sale. In a lottery, the event was an immediate sellout.

The Kingdome seating capacity for the men's Final Four is 39,082, the same as it was in 1984.

In Tacoma, where Louisiana Tech

University won the women's championship last season, interest is up from last year, Walsh said. Last year's Tacoma Dome games averaged 11,500 in attendance. The Tacoma Dome will seat 18,910 for the women this year, and Walsh expects more fans than last season.

"We believe that a lot of people who will be in Seattle will want to go down to Tacoma and watch the games because they're in the area," he said. "But there are some negatives. The negatives are there's so much going on the weekend of the Final Four that it really makes it difficult."

Walsh's company, Bob Walsh and Associates of Seattle, is coordinating the two tournaments.

Walsh also is president of the Seattle Organizing Committee for the 1990 Goodwill Games. It's a hectic time, he said.

In July, Seattle will make a pitch for another men's Final Four. It will be in bidding against The Meadowlands in East Rutherford, New Jersey; Charlotte, North Carolina, and Indianapolis for either the 1994 or 1995 men's Final Four. Both Final Fours are up for grabs among the four cities.

Seattle hosted the West regional in 1987 and 1988. It already has been awarded the 1991 West regional.

When it tries for the 1994 or 1995 men's Final Four, it also will bid for the West regional in 1992 and 1993.

"I don't see any reason why Seattle can't have a West regional every single year that it doesn't have a Final Four," Walsh said.

CORRECTIONS

Due to an editor's error, Cedric W. Dempsey incorrectly was identified as director of athletics at Arizona State in the Opinions section of the March 8 issue of The NCAA News. Dempsey is athletics director at Arizona. In addition, there is no truth to the rumor that this deed was done as a good-faith gesture to Charles Harris, the actual athletics director at Arizona State, who was identified in an issue of the News several weeks ago as AD at Arizona. The News editorial staff pledges to remember that Dempsey is the Wildcat, Harris the Sun Devil.

Due to an editor's error, Alfred was omitted from the Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team standings that appeared in the March 15 issue of the News. Alfred finished in a tie for 39th place with 14 points.

Maryland men's team supporting antidrug effort

The University of Maryland, College Park, athletics department, in conjunction with Group Health Association, has introduced men's basketball drug-education trading cards to youths in the community.

Each trading card features a player from the 1988-89 Terrapin men's team, with a brief player biography and a drug-education "Tip from the Terrapins."

Complete sets of cards were distributed to spectators at the February 14 Maryland-Georgia Tech game in Cole Field House.

In addition, cards will reach area youths through the assistance of the Montgomery County and Prince George's County police departments.

"We are pleased that Group Health Association has teamed up with us on this worthwhile community project," said Maryland athletics director Lewis Perkins. "We hope that the cards will assist young people in resisting the temptation of drugs."

Scholarship winner continues basketball career at Oxford

Graduate study in politics and philosophy at Oxford University has not kept Michael Erdos from continuing the highly successful basketball career he enjoyed while an undergraduate at Dickinson College.

Erdos, who in 1987 earned an NCAA postgraduate scholarship after being named academic all-America, has captained Oxford's men's hoop team for two seasons. His father, Robert W. Erdos, reports that his son has scored 825 points (21.7 average), with shooting percentages of 54.4 from the field and 96.9 from the line.

Majoring in Latin and mathematics, Erdos graduated at the top of his Dickinson class with a grade-point average of 3.950 (4.000 scale).

Everett S. Dean, whose athletics accomplishments as a collegiate player and coach spanned four decades, will be honored April 29 at a testimonial dinner in Salem, Indiana. A native of Washington County, Indiana (Salem is the county seat), Dean graduated from Salem High School and attended Indiana University, Bloomington, where he played baseball, basketball and football.

In 1921, Dean became Indiana's first basketball all-America.

Following graduation, Dean coached baseball and basketball at Carleton College before returning tournament 28-2—a combined mark of 36-5.

Both schools' basketball teams were 1-1 in the play-offs, so both completed their seasons with combined marks of 37-6.

Ball State travels to West Virginia next September 2 to open the 1989 football season, so only a tie will keep this tie from being broken.

Although recently hampered by bad weather, construction crews have begun work on Alcorn State University's 20,000-seat football stadium. Completion is expected in time for the 1991 season.

For the third consecutive year, a student-athlete from Indiana University of Pennsylvania has been named small-college athlete of the year.

This year, Indiana's Kim Schneider, a track and field all-America (triple jump), was honored at an annual dinner celebrating women in sports, held by the Greater Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. Previous winners from the school were Tammy Donnelly (1987) and Elisa Benzoni (1988).

Schneider was one of 16 women recognized for athletics achievements at the March 15 dinner. Former Pennsylvania State University women's basketball star Suzie McConnell was named large-college athlete of the year.

From the University of North Carolina, Asheville, comes word that first-year men's basketball coach Don Doucette has an 11-game postseason winning streak. Doucette led the Bulldogs to the Big South Conference title with three postseason victories, after guiding the University of Lowell to seven straight postseason triumphs on the way to the 1988 Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

"Don Doucette may be the hottest tournament coach in all of the NCAA," wrote Mike Gore, the school's sports information director. Sorry, Mike.

Without a doubt, Hobart College men's lacrosse coach Dave Urick is king of the hill when it comes to postseason competition in team sports. His Statesmen have won every Division III title in the sport—nine in all. Urick is 27-0 in postseason competition—and counting.

Oklahoma State University recently received the original painting of "Pistol Pete," the school's athletics mascot. The work, by full-blooded Pawnee Indian Brummett Echohawk of Tulsa, was presented March to his alma mater to coach those sports. Dean remained at Indiana until 1938, when he became baseball and basketball coach at Stanford University.

His 1942 Stanford hoop team won the NCAA championship—and until this year, that squad was responsible for Stanford being the only NCAA member institution with an undefeated record in the Division I championship (prior to 1989, Stanford's only appearance in the play-offs had been during that 1942 march to the title).

Dean is believed to be the only person ever named to two national athletics halls of fame. He has been enshrined in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame and the College Baseball Hall of Fame.

He retired from coaching in 1955.

According to Ike Goen, who is planning the testimonial for the Salem Exchange Club, representatives of Indiana's five national-champion basketball teams are expected to attend the event. Bob Hammel, sports editor of the Bloomington Herald-Telephone, will serve as master of ceremonies.

"I would love to hear from any former coach or player who would like to take part in the testimonial," Goen said. He may be reached at 812/883-1385 or 883-6983.

When United Press International reported recently that West Virginia University finished the regular season with the best combined record in men's basketball and Division I-A football (see The NCAA News, March 15, 1989), the wire service forgot to mention that Ball State University had the same mark.

The Mountaineer football team was 11-1, and the WVU men's basketball team entered the NCAA Division I play-offs 25-4—a combined mark of 36-5. Ball State's football team finished 8-3 last season, and the men's basketball Cardinals entered the Division I

Dallas will host the 30th annual meeting and clinical symposium of the National Athletic Trainer's Association June 11-15. Information on the event is available from NATA headquarters (1001 East Fourth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27858).

Dick Lipe, sports information director at Bentley College, probably double-checked his math with a calculator when he added up point totals following the New England regional of the 1989 Division II Women's Basketball Championship. No wonder. The team from Sacred Heart College, which scored the fewest points of the four competing teams, won the regional. And if that's not enough, the team from Stonehill College, which scored the regional's most points with 245, was 0-2.

One of Stonehill's defeats came in a wild, 132-127, overtime game with the University of Bridgeport. The latter's 132 points set a record for points in a tournament game (men or women, all NCAA divisions). California State University, Fresno, held the old mark (127), which was set in 1966.

When Purdue University's women's basketball team defeated the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, in the first round of the Division I tournament, an amazing winning streak was preserved for another year.

Arkansas' exit from the tournament meant that the University of Texas, Austin, would not have to face another Southwest Athletic Conference opponent this season—keeping the Lady Longhorns' devastating record against SWC competition intact until 1989-90.

Since the league began sponsoring women's sports in 1982, Texas has never lost an SWC women's hoop game—and the team has played 119 of them to date.

Trivia Time: Texas' dominance of Southwest Conference foes even predates official league competition. When did the team last suffer a setback at the hands of another SWC team? Answer later.

Pete Cutino, retiring water polo coach at the University of California, Berkeley, will be honored by the school at an April 7 testimonial dinner. Proceeds from the $250-a-plate event will benefit California's aquatics endowment. Reservations may be made by calling 714/642-2444.

For the first time in Alfred University history, two of the school's athletics teams posted undefeated regular seasons in the same academic year. The men's soccer team was 13-0-3 last fall, and the men's swimming team finished its winter campaign with an 11-0 dual-meet record.

U.S. Congressman Tom McMillen will be the featured speaker at Rollins College's May 5 Blue and Gold Tar Booster Banquet. McMillen has cosponsored legislation in the 100th and 101st Congresses concerning intercollegiate athletics.

"Improving Human Performance Without Losing Dignity" was the subject of the first in the Gerry D'Agostino Memorial Lecture Series, held March 29 at Brockport State University College. The series is named in memory of D'Agostino, former Brockport State head football coach who died last June after a lengthy illness.

Tony Badalato, a 1966 Brockport State graduate, and Jay Kearney, a 1962 alumnus, were the guest speakers. Badalato is director of physical education and athletics for the Kingston, New York, Consolidated Schools. Kearney is head of sports physiology and sports science at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs.

Some 30,000 "Wildcat Discount Cards" have been distributed to grade and high school students by the University of Kentucky Athletics Association.

The program relies on the popularity of UK athletics to promote academic achievement and a drug-free life style," said Gene DeFilippo, assistant athletics director. "As an encouragement, the card holder also receives a full year of discounts at local restaurants and other businesses."

More Report Cards: Bucknell University officials have named 47 student-athletes to the dean's list for the first semester of the 1988-89 school year. All earned at least a 3.500 (4.000 scale) grade-point average. Six earned 4.000s: Jim Harvey, Bob Kelly, Susan Lang, Jennifer Walz, Steve West and Margaret Wilkes.

During the fall semester, Eastern Kentucky University's 281 student-athletes produced a cumulative GPA of 2.595, while the cumulative GPA of the general student body was 2.458. According to Joan Hopkins, Eastern Kentucky's academic athletics counselor, this is the first time since the school began monitoring student-athletes' academic performance that they have outperformed the general student population in the classroom.

Forty-two percent of all student-athletes at Pennsylvania State University-Behrend College earned GPAs of at least 3.000 during the fall semester, according to data released by the school. "These grade results represent not only the value our athletes place on academic success, but also the emphasis our coaching staff gives to successfully completing degree requirements," said Herb Lauffer, director of athletics. "I am proud of the student-athletes' and our coaches' accomplishments."

Sports information directors at Continental Divide Conference schools have announced their selections for the league's all-academic women's basketball team. Among them was Jenny Lin of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, who compiled a 3.820 GPA in mathematics and graduated last December magna cum laude.

Trivia Answer: On January 23, 1978, Texas A&M University defeated Texas, 59-52, in women's basketball—marking the last time the Lady Longhorns dropped a hoop decision to a member of the Southwest Conference. Texas is 170-0 since then.

Enforcement staff processes 53 secondary infractions cases

The NCAA enforcement staff has processed 53 secondary infractions cases in 1989. Forty-two of these cases were self-reported by the involved institutions or conferences.

Institutional and conference disciplinary actions were reviewed by the enforcement staff and a member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions. No additional NCAA penalties were imposed.

Idaho bill sets penalties for abuse of steroids

An Idaho legislative committee has passed and sent to the floor of the House a bill that would make selling or manufacturing illicit anabolic steroids a felony rather than a misdemeanor.

The measure, which passed the Senate by a unanimous vote, cleared the House Health and Welfare Committee March 15. It increases penalties for selling, furnishing or prescribing steroids or growth hormones for anything other than a medical necessity as determined by a physician.

Mick Markuson, executive director of the Idaho Board of Pharmacy, said the use of steroids is on the rise nationally and in Idaho, not just among athletes, but also among children who want to make their bodies look better.

Two University of Idaho football players were banned from playing in the NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship last year when tests detected they used steroids.

"The increased penalties probably will deter some of the black-market people from setting up in Idaho," Markuson said. Studies show high school athletes are using the drugs at an increasing rate, he added.

About 20 percent of steroid users get the drugs from doctors, while the other 80 percent buy them on the black market, Markuson said.

Anabolic steroids and growth hormones are favored by some athletes for improving performance, but they are shunned by medical experts who say they cause extremely adverse side effects.

The bill also requires better tracking of the drugs in Idaho, with inventories to be kept of all legal steroids and their distribution, United Press International reported.

Markuson said the drugs have legitimate medical uses, such as treating anemia, some forms of cancer, osteoporosis and other diseases.

Voy resigns USOC posts

Robert O. Voy, M.D., has resigned as chief medical officer and director of sports medicine for the U.S. Olympic Committee to return to private practice and become director of the Las Vegas Institute of Physical Therapy and Sports.

In a statement, Dr. Voy said, "I've always been concerned that drug use in sports is an epidemic, and I'm very concerned with what's going on today. I hope to continue to develop a credible out-of-competition drug-testing program."

According to a report in The Dallas Morning News, Voy told a source close to the USOC that he has been frustrated in recent months by what he perceived was a less-than-serious commitment by the USOC and some U.S. national governing bodies to his efforts to halt steroid and drug abuse among athletes.

Division I institutions, while 10 occurred at Division II institutions and 11 at Division III institutions. Twelve sports were involved, with football (13), men's basketball (10) and women's basketball (five) composing 28 of the 53 cases.

The violations found were isolated and primarily inadvertent in nature.

Violations that involved eligibility certification or institutional procedures included grant-in-aid awards that were not signed by the appropriate financial aid authority, excessive institutional financial aid, failure to properly compute the value of equivalency grants-in-aid, failure to notify a student-athlete by July 1 that aid would be renewed, competition while enrolled in less than 12 quarter or semester hours, practice for more than two weeks without proper academic records on file and participation prior to determining that the student-athlete had not met satisfactory-progress requirements.

In the area of recruiting, violations included improper in-person contacts (or contacts by letter) with prospects by outside athletics representatives, improper publicity concerning an official paid visit or a prospect's commitment to enroll, improper advertisements in high school programs or recruiting brochures, workouts by prospects with members of intercollegiate teams, employment of prospects as summer camp counselors, improper receipt of calendars or schedule cards by prospects, improper entertainment of high school coaches, improper in-person recruiting contacts during "dead" periods, participation by coaches on radio or television shows involving prospects, entertainment of a prospect at a site more than 30 miles from the institution's campus and improper lodging arrangements for a prospect for a short period on campus.

Other miscellaneous violations included limited out-of-season practice in football, use of football equipment during the first three days of practice, an affidavit of support for a foreign student-athlete, improper use of facilities by professional baseball teams, improper cash contributions to two assistant coaches from outside sources and employment of a coach who did not reside in the vicinity of the institution.

Disciplinary and corrective actions that were taken included implementation of educational and monitoring programs, salary freezes or deductions, individual probationary periods, forfeiture of contests involving ineligible student-athletes, termination of recruitment of prospects who were involved in violations, disassociation of outside athletics representatives who were involved in violations and grants-in-aid restrictions.

The NCAA enforcement staff and the Committee on Infractions desire to support meaningful efforts by institutions and conferences to monitor athletics programs.

Only those secondary cases that result in NCAA penalties are announced publicly. Those cases that involve actions that are determined to be representative and consistent with NCAA enforcement policies are announced only in summary fashion, as set forth in NCAA Bylaw 32.4.2.1.

b. Approved a request by the Men's and Women's Tennis Committee that the men's and women's tennis polls conducted by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association be published in The NCAA News, with the understanding that the ITCA does not require an institution to be an ITCA member to be included in its polls.

c. Decided not to move the August 1989 Executive Committee meeting from Cape Cod, Massachusetts, to San Diego, California, noting that some members of the committee already had made their travel plans to Cape Cod and that a substantial cancellation penalty would have to be paid by the Association if it broke the contract with the Cape Cod hotel.

d. Agreed that the Association should increase its subsidy for payment of premiums in the catastrophic-injury insurance program so that the premium rates to be paid by member institutions do not increase by an estimated seven to eight percent.

e. Reviewed an appeal by Western Carolina University for an additional day's per diem for its participation in the 1988 Division I Baseball Championship, noting that the 1988 Administrative Committee had considered that appeal and had requested additional information; sustained the action of the Baseball Committee in denying the appeal.

3. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 4.3.2.

a. Acting for the Council:
(1) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.8.6.1- (c) as follows:

member institution to participate in track and field competition as a member of Dominica's national team.

(b) To permit a student-athlete from a member institution to participate in fencing competition as a member of the U.S. national team.

(c) To permit two student-athletes from a member institution to participate in swimming competition as members of Denmark's national team.

(d) To permit various student-athletes from a member institution to participate in USVBA-sponsored volleyball tryout activities as part of the 1989 Olympic Festival.

(e) To permit a student-athlete from a member institution to participate in basketball competition as a member of Sweden's national team.

(f) To permit a student-athlete from a member institution to participate in fencing competition as a member of the U.S. national team.

(2) Granted a waiver per Bylaw 14.9.2.2 to permit a student-athlete from Illinois State University to transfer and be immediately eligible for competition. Appropriate medical documentation had been received to indicate that the student-athlete's reason for transfer is health-related.

(3) Granted waivers per Bylaw 16.3.1-(h) as follows:

(a) To permit the University of Notre Dame to lodge a student-athlete in the home of an institutional staff member while he recovers from injuries sustained in an automobile accident. The institution is on semester break, and it has been recommended that the student-athlete not travel home. Although it no longer is necessary for the student-athlete to remain in the hospital, his physical condition demands special attention that can be provided more effectively in a home setting versus a dormitory setting.

(b) To permit Temple University to provide travel expenses for its women's basketball team to attend the funeral of a team member's mother.

(3) To permit the University of Rhode Island to transport student-athletes outside the permissible 100-mile entertainment radius that is applied when an institution plays or practices in conjunction with an away-from-home contest per Bylaw 16.7.1. The waiver was requested inasmuch as the trips are being conducted primarily for educational rather than entertainment purposes (the contest is scheduled in Italy as part of the institution's foreign tour).

b. Acting for the Executive Committee:
Granted a waiver per Bylaw 31.2.1.3 to permit Miles College to be eligible for championship competition. The institution failed to submit institutional dues by the specified deadline, and the appropriate fine has been paid.

Membership talks with Big West sought by school

California State University, Sacramento, plans to seek affiliation with a Division I conference as it begins moving all of its sports except football to Division I.

The university, which currently is classified in Division II in all sports, announced March 15 that its athletics advisory board has recommended that it approach the 10-member Big West Conference to discuss obtaining membership in that league.

"The goal of the university is to have all of its men's and women's athletics programs, except football, at the Division I level within the framework of the five-year plan established by the university in the fall of 1986," said Calvin R. Boyes, Cal State Sacramento athletics director.

As part of that plan, the school is scheduled to move its baseball and softball programs to Division I in 1990.

"We will begin exploring the possibility of a conference affiliation in the weeks ahead," Boyes said.

"We feel this is an important phase in our five-year plan. We will continue to explore other possibilities of conference alignment as well," he said.

Plymouth State to leave league

Plymouth State College, 72-2-1 in the New England Football Conference since 1980 but able to get only one bid to the NCAA Division III Football Championship because of its schedule, is leaving the conference.

Athletics director Stephen Bamford has announced that the Division III school will begin an independent schedule in 1991.

Although not commenting on play-off possibilities, Bamford said an independent schedule "will hopefully provide us with opportunities for new goals and achievements."

He said about 15 Division III schools in New England and New York have expressed interest in scheduling Plymouth State.

Plymouth State, which had the nation's longest winning streak snapped at 20 games last fall, has won eight straight NEFC titles, and many of its victories have been routs. But the school received only one NCAA Division III play-off bid, in 1984. Selectors consistently said Plymouth State's schedule was not as strong as other schools, mainly in New York state, Bamford said.

Plymouth State's nine-game league schedule kept it from playing more than one outside team each year; and in many years, schedule conflicts kept it from playing any outside team.

Sports-turf research aimed at improving player safety

Researchers at the University of California, Riverside, say they can provide new hope for those concerned about athletics injuries associated with sports like football and baseball, according to a news release from the institution.

Scientists at the school say new cool-season turf varieties adapted to the Southwest climate provide better cushion and are safer for athletes than turf varieties currently used on athletics fields in the Southwest and West.

Sports-turf researchers invented a machine, complete with cleats, that can imitate the wear and tear of a professional football or baseball game on a field's surface.

"Results from our four-year study indicate that new perennial ryegrass varieties offer important safety features for football and baseball players. They provide better cushion during the winter months when Bermuda grasses are dormant and less capable of recovery from the stress of high-impact sports. The risk of player injury is reduced with better ground cover," said Stephen T. Cockerham, leader of UC Riverside's sports-turf research program.

Cockerham is president of the Sports Turf Managers Association and consultant to the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, home of the Los Angeles Raiders and University of Southern California football teams.

"As improvements continue in the development of cool-season turf grasses adaptable to the Southwest, sports-field management will change dramatically," Cockerham said.

Currently, warm-season grasses like hybrid Bermuda grass are most often chosen for football and baseball fields and parks in the Southwest because older varieties of cool-season turf like perennial ryegrass could not tolerate the wear and tear of high-impact sports.

Ryegrasses have been used routinely in winter months as an overseed for dormant Bermuda grass to provide good winter color on athletics fields in the Southwest and West.

The intent is for the cool-season species to die out in the late spring or early summer, encouraging a turf transition back to Bermuda grass.

Now, research has shown that several new ryegrass varieties have advantages as a primary turf surface. The Citation II variety performed best under the stress of serious sports traffic, but not statistically better than eight other varieties at UC Riverside's National Perennial Ryegrass Evaluation Trials. Fifty-three varieties were tested during the four-year study.

"One of the key advantages of the perennial ryegrasses is that you can reseed to repair injured turf," Cockerham said.

Reseeding worn turf areas is an important management tool to reduce player injuries and improve turf attractiveness. It cannot be used with hybrid Bermuda grasses, because they are sterile. Seed is not available, he said.

"A shift from Bermuda grass to perennial ryegrasses as the primary turf surface would require a higher mowing height, a change that may affect the characteristics of the field. It may seem a bit slower at first, until players get used to it," Cockerham said.

"Some of the injuries caused by unsafe football fields can now be avoided," Cockerham said. "Using the traffic simulator we invented at UCR, we can identify which turf surfaces are safest for athletes, not just attractive."

Three years ago, Cockerham invented a cleat-clad machine, now in use worldwide for sports-turf research, that can mimic the turf punishment of a football or baseball game. It is called a Brinkman Traffic Simulator (BTS).

Research results with the BTS show that some turf varieties stand up to the stress of high-impact sports; others get as hard as a rock, especially if the field is not designed and installed properly at the outset.

The traffic simulator has two cleated rollers, connected by chain and sprockets and pulled by a small tractor. The front sprocket has 21 teeth, and the rear 26, causing the rollers to turn at different speeds. The combination of weight, sprocket differential and cleats simulate the three components of sports traffic — shearing action, compaction and wear.

The traffic simulator treatment was set up to simulate the wear and tear of one professional football game per week.

Researchers had to invent the simulator because, until now, most turf research has been geared to the needs of the golf-course manager.

"Under the stress of heavy traffic by athletes, many of the accepted fundamentals of turf grass culture seem to fail," Cockerham said.

Cultural practices such as mowing height and frequency can have as much influence on wear tolerance as varieties within a species, he said. The most important single factor in determining the wear tolerance of a turf is resilience and shear strength of the total mass above the ground, he said.

The UC Riverside research program on the management of sports turf is directed by Cockerham and Victor A. Gibeault, cooperative extension turf grass specialist, with the collaboration of Matthew K. Leonard, staff research associate, and John A. Van Dam, farm adviser for San Bernardino County, California.

Their recent work on the perennial ryegrasses was published by the American Society for Testing and Materials.

Writers announce all-America team

Seniors Danny Ferry of Duke, Sean Elliott of Arizona, Stacey King of Oklahoma and Pervis Ellison of Louisville join freshman Chris Jackson of Louisiana State on the NIKE U.S. Basketball Writers Association all-America first team, which USBWA President Malcolm Moran of the New York Times announced March 21.

Jackson is only the second freshman in the USBWA's 33-year history selected to the all-America first team. A 6-1 guard from Gulfport, Mississippi, he averaged 29.8 points a game and set NCAA records for most points scored by a freshman in a game (55 vs. Mississippi) and in a season (895). The only other freshman USBWA first-team all-America was Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma in 1983.

Ferry, a 6-10 forward from Bowie, Maryland, is a two-time Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year. He led Duke in scoring and rebounding this season with 22.7 and 7.4 averages, respectively.

Elliott, a 6-8 forward from Tucson, Arizona, was named player of the year in the Pacific-10 Conference this season and led Arizona to a No. 1 national ranking with a 22-point scoring average. He holds the Arizona and Pac-10 career scoring records with 2,414.

King, a 6-11 center from Lawton, Oklahoma, was player of the year in the Big Eight Conference, where he averaged 17.4 points and 7.2 rebounds per game. He also became the first player in conference history to block more than 100 shots in a season.

Ellison, a 6-9 center from Savannah, Georgia, averaged 17.9 points and 8.5 rebounds in leading the Cardinals to the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament championship. He set conference and school records for most blocked shots in a season with 356.

Named to the USBWA all-America second team were senior forward Glen Rice of Michigan, senior guard Mookie Blaylock of Oklahoma, junior forward Hank Gathers of Loyola Marymount, senior guard Todd Lichti of Stanford and junior forward Lionel Simmons of La Salle. Gathers leads the nation in scoring and rebounding with 33.5 and 13.7 averages, respectively.

Coaches place two Sooners on basketball all-America team

Oklahoma, which advanced to the third round of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship before being upset by Virginia, placed two players—Mookie Blaylock and Stacey King—on the National Association of Basketball Coaches all-America first team.

NABC all-America teams for all three NCAA membership divisions were announced March 21.

Joining Blaylock and King on the first team were Duke's Danny Ferry, Arizona's Sean Elliott and Louisville's Pervis Ellison.

Chris Jackson, the amazing freshman from Louisiana State who had been named to at least one all-America first team, was named to the NABC second team in Division I.

Among selections to the Division II first team was Florida Southern's Kris Kearney, one of the top field-goal shooters in the division this season. Through the end of regular-season compilations by the NCAA statistics service, Kearney sported a field-goal percentage of 66.9 (188-281) and ranked among the division's leaders in that category.

Trenton State's Greg Grant, the Division III scoring leader throughout much of the season, topped the NABC first team in that division. A senior, Grant averaged 32.8 points through 25 regular-season games.

Following are the complete NABC all-America lists for all three divisions.

Four coaches named for Festival '89

The Amateur Basketball Association of the USA has named four basketball coaches to head its four men's teams in this summer's U.S. Olympic Festival '89 in Oklahoma City.

Seton Hall University coach P. J. Carlesimo was named to coach the East team; Don DeVoe of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, will coach the South squad. Michigan State's Jud Heathcote will coach the North team, and Lou Campanelli of the University of California, Berkeley, will coach the West team.

Each of the head coaches for the festival will have two assistant coaches.

Carlesimo will be assisted by Robert Tipson of Champlain College and Herbert Kenny of Wesleyan University.

DeVoe will be assisted by Bill Littlepage of Hopewell High School in Hopewell, Virginia, and Larry Chapman, coach at Auburn University, Montgomery.

Heathcote will be assisted by Dale Race, men's basketball coach at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, and Jay Harrington, coach at Belleville Area Community College in Belleville, Illinois.

Campanelli will be assisted by Gary Hulst of California State University, Hayward, and Charles Cobb of Cascade High School in Everett, Washington.

From another angle, six different Big East teams have reached the Final Four in the 1980s (Seton Hall the latest), five different Big Ten teams (with the addition of Illinois and Michigan this time) and four different ACC teams. Those three conferences also have two championships each in the 1980s, the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference two and the Big Eight Conference one. It cannot be an all-Big Ten title game, though, since Illinois and Michigan meet in the semifinals.

Georgetown No. 1 in 1980s

Using a points system of 14 points for first, 12 for second, 10 for third (no third-place games in the 1980s) and five for regional second place, Georgetown leads the 1980s in tournament play with 53 points. Louisville is second with 48 points, North Carolina third at 46, Duke fourth at 37, Houston fifth at 34, Indiana sixth at 33, Louisiana State seventh at 30, Virginia and Villanova tied for eighth at 29, and Kansas and North Carolina State tied for 10th at 24 each.

UCLA all-time leader

UCLA, the all-time leader, leads both the 1970s and 1960s using this system, with Kentucky on top in both the 1950s and 1940s (actually, 11 years since the tourney started in 1939).

The all-time chart to date shows UCLA with 190, Kentucky second at 179, North Carolina third at 131, Kansas fourth at 109, Ohio State fifth at 100, Indiana sixth at 90, Duke seventh at 86, Louisville eighth at 78, Kansas State ninth at 77, Oklahoma State 10th at 70, Villanova 11th at 69, Georgetown 12th at 65, Michigan 13th at 64, Cincinnati 14th at 60 and San Francisco 15th at 58.

Notes on each team

Glen Rice and Michigan are having an amazing tournament. Rice leads all Final Four teams in scoring at 31.3 points per game and is making five three-point goals per game—better than twice his regular-season pace of 2.3. He is shooting an amazing 60.6 percent from three-point range and 62.2 overall. Terry Mills, 11.2 before the NAAs, is second to Rice at 16.5 with Rumeal Robinson, a talented playmaker and scorer, next. Robinson's 33 assists leads the Final Four.

Michigan leads the tournament in scoring at 94.3 points per game and scoring margin at 14. Going into the NCAA, Michigan led the nation in scoring margin and was seventh in scoring, as well as first in both field-goal accuracy and three-point accuracy (19.0, 92.8, 58.0 and 49.2, respectively), so its NCAA figures are not that unexpected.

Seton Hall leads the Final Four teams in scoring defense at only 62.5 points per game; rebound margin at 9.3 per game (40.8 vs. 31.5); blocked shots at 20, and in field-goal percentage defense, allowing only 37.1 percent. Its depth is outstanding as well, with the bench scoring 73 points in the tournament, or 18.3 per game. And its three-point accuracy (45.7 percent) is second to Michigan's 51.5. Daryll Walker leads all players on Final Four teams in tournament rebounding at 10.3 per game. John Morton leads in scoring. Andrew Gaze is 52.4 in three-pointers.

Nick Anderson leads Illinois in scoring at 21.3 and is second in Final Four rebounding at 10 per game, both above his regular-season figures. The Illini are unbeaten since Kendall Gill returned after an injury, and he is second in scoring at 15.5. Gill and Anderson rank 1-2 in steals among players on Final Four teams at 14 and 12, and the team's 38 steals is No. 1 by far. The team's great speed and quickness have overcome the fact that it has at times in the tournament been out-rebounded and out-blocked.

For instance, Louisville set a tournament record of 13 blocked shots, yet Illinois won the game by 14 points. All the Illini are good passers—four players are in double figures in assists in the tournament; and a fifth, Kenny Battle, misses only due to an injury. And it is a far better three-point shooting team than tournament figures show.

Danny Ferry leads Duke in scoring and rebounding as expected, but an unexpected boost has come from freshman Christian Laettner, 6-10, from Angola, New York. A 7.9 scorer going into the tournament, he is averaging 15 points in four tournament games, with 78.6 percent shooting from the field and 84.2 at the line along with 6.3 rebounds, tied for second with Robert Brickley. His 24 vs. Georgetown included 9-for-10 shooting. Quin Snyder's 24 assists is second among players on Final Four teams. Defensively, Duke has held its foes to 42.5 field-goal shooting and 69.8 points in the tournament.

Scoring highest in 14 years

NCAA tournament scoring is up to 158.13 points per game (both teams combined)—highest in 14 years—as the three-point shot continues to open up the inside game more each year. The same is true in the national figures at 151.49 entering postseason play, also highest in 14 years.

The tournament figure is the fourth highest in history. The all-time record is a remarkable 172.59 in the 1970 tournament (for just 29 games), followed by 161.22 in 1965 and 161.08 in 1975.

Introduction of the 45-second clock in 1986 helped tournament scoring jump to 142.98, from only 127.38 in 1985—second lowest in 32 years. Introduction of the three-pointer helped it jump again in 1986, to 154.56. It edged up to 154.63 in 1987.

Each year, three-point accuracy has gone down, from 40.35 percent in 1987 to 36.92 in 1988 and 36.50 so far this tournament, because more players are shooting it, instead of just one or two specialists.

Meanwhile, two-point accuracy from inside the 19-9 arc has gone up, from 50.91 percent in 1987 to 50.97 percent in 1988 to 51.60 so far in this tournament. The same thing has been happening nationally.

Another interesting angle—tournament scoring is well above the national figure for the fourth straight year, or since the clock was used universally. That is normal, since the best teams normally score more points.

But tournament scoring had been well below national scoring for five straight years before the clock, and the downward spiral of scoring and slow-paced games prompted experiments with the clock and three-pointer. Vic Bubas' Sun Belt Conference was the first to use the 45-second clock.

Love of baseball kept her fighting for a chance to play

By Will Dunham

There are days Nancy Croteau just shakes her head and wonders if her daughter, Julie, knows what she's getting herself into.

Undaunted by a series of disappointments and setbacks, Julie Croteau, an 18-year-old from Manassas, Virginia, has become a trailblazer in the world of sports. Earlier this month, she started at first base for St. Mary's College (Maryland) against Spring Garden College.

Nancy Croteau sat on the grass down the first-base line and watched her daughter play.

"I'm very proud of Julie," Nancy Croteau said. "But there are some days when I don't think any of this is a good idea. It's a lot of pressure. She's had to worry about a lot of things: getting along with the team so that the publicity she's getting doesn't destroy her normal relationships with either the team or this college; she's had to worry about baseball; she's had to worry about saying the right thing at the right time, and she's in college and having to take calculus."

Despite her worried mom, the importance of her achievement was not lost on the teen-ager.

"Now, other girls know it can be done. If someone says, 'Look, you can't play because you're a girl,' they can say, 'Look, Julie did it, maybe I can go further. Maybe I can play in the major leagues,'" Julie Croteau said. "If I'm sending a message, that's great. I think people can do whatever they want to do. Anybody, if you work hard and you really want it, you can do anything."

Croteau's crusade has drawn the attention of women's groups, including the National Organization for Women.

Marie-Jose Ragab, a member of NOW's national staff and the president of the regional NOW chapter for Manassas, said Croteau has "opened the door" for other women and girls to try to play on teams that, up until now, have been exclusively all-male.

"We're very proud of her," Ragab said. "We're absolutely delighted to see that, in spite of all the restrictions that she had to go through and in spite of all the barriers she had to go through, she managed proficiently to make it that far and she was able to break through the barriers."

Ragab said Croteau's odyssey may have been caused by lingering male insecurity.

"Why would young men feel threatened about incorporating a young woman with them? That's a very deep question," Ragab said. "This is a story of sex discrimination. There is always this element of fear when a woman wants to break into an area that is traditionally controlled by men. This is true in the world of politics, it's true in business, it's true in the arts, in journalism and, of course, sports. It's one of the last bastions."

Playing for St. Mary's, an NCAA Division III school, culminates years of battling against an often unfriendly sports establishment. Last spring, when she hoped to be fielding ground balls and lining singles for the boys baseball team at Osbourn Park High School in Manassas, Croteau instead ended up in Federal court.

Croteau and her parents filed suit against local county officials and officials of her high school, claiming she was cut from the team solely because of her sex and contending that that action violated Federal laws prohibiting sex discrimination at institutions that receive Federal funds. The suit sought $100,000 in damages and a place on the team, but U.S. District Judge Tim Ellis III tossed the case out, ruling there was no evidence of sex discrimination.

Undeterred, Croteau earned a roster spot on an all-male semipro team within weeks of losing in court, then entered St. Mary's last fall. She immediately tried out and earned a spot on coach Hal Willard's men's baseball team during the unofficial fall season. And, after months of building up her strength and stamina with a weight-lifting program, she was ready for her debut.

"She's very well accepted as a member of this ball club, and she's just one of the guys," Willard said.

The team has had to make very few logistical compromises to accommodate Croteau. Croteau does dress for games in a locker room separate from her male teammates.

Perhaps lost in the shuffle is the basic reason for Croteau's struggle — her love of baseball.

The news media outnumbered the fans at her debut, when the St. Mary's team was beaten 4-1 by Spring Garden. Croteau, her auburn hair tied back in a ponytail, went 0-for-3 at the plate but was flawless in the field, preventing one run from scoring by blocking a bad throw to first and catching one tricky, wind-blown pop.

"It's really nice to be considered a player again—not a girl, just a player," Croteau said. "I finally feel it's a game and we're all having fun again."

After dutifully answering dozens of questions from print, radio and television reporters, Croteau expressed relief that she finally had reached the mountaintop.

"I'm glad it's over," Croteau admitted. "I just want to play some ball now."

Fraud charges to be heard in trial of two sports agents

A Federal judge has refused to dismiss fraud charges against Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

U.S. District Judge George Marovich denied motions to dismiss the case against Walters and Bloom, saying defense motions to dismiss were similar to those he had rejected before the jury trial began four weeks ago.

Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29, are accused of defrauding seven universities of grant-in-aid money by paying college athletes thousands of dollars to sign contract agreements before the athletes' college eligibility had expired.

Prosecutors contended the pair also threatened physical or financial harm to some players if they tried to back out of the deals, the Associated Press reported.

Both Walters and Bloom have pleaded not guilty.

The Federal government concluded its case March 27, with testimony by University of Iowa professor Samuel Becker, who served on a faculty committee that determined whether scholarships should be awarded to student-athletes.

Becker testified that he would not have offered scholarships to Ronnie Harmon, a former Iowa running back now with the Buffalo Bills, or to Devon Mitchell, a defensive back now with the Detroit Lions, if he had known the two had accepted cash from Walters and Bloom and signed contracts in violation of NCAA eligibility rules.

Under cross-examination, however, Becker conceded he was not certain whether the university attempted to recover scholarship money after it learned the two players had violated the rules.

The government dropped two counts in the indictment against Walters and Bloom—one concerning Ron Morris, a Southern Methodist University wide receiver now with the Chicago Bears, and the other involving former Miami University (Ohio) running back George Swann. Both were part of the multiple-count racketeering charge against the agents.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News and the NCAA national office.

Q Of the several major publications produced annually by the Association (e.g., the Manual, the Convention Proceedings, the football and basketball records books), which takes the longest to produce?

A Without question, it is the National Collegiate Championships records book. Work begins on the book with the end of the first fall championships event and continues for almost 10 months. No other NCAA publication requires as much time to go from initial copy preparation to finished product.

Debunking The Myth:

Myths die hard. We know.

Take football injuries. Turf-related injuries... a much maligned subject.

We really don't like to write about this myth-driven topic because it only gives currency to the propagators. But the subject is always simmering below the surface, so let's deal with it as quickly and incisively as possible.

Football is a contact sport. There will be collisions between immovable objects and irresistible forces. A "controlled risk" element is present in all physical competition, particularly football.

We're all aware that players in all sports are bigger, stronger and faster than they were in years past, largely due to offseason conditioning programs that weren't in vogue in years past. Football players are not only more physically fit but there is a greater premium placed on sheer speed.

But let's put a few control elements into perspective.

Coaching techniques have greatly improved over the years. Conditioning programs are better. Medical capabilities have changed dramatically. Comprehensive rehabilitation programs treat the whole body, not just the injured site. Colleges and universities exercise their commitment to the well being of players at a level higher than ever before.

Study after study on every competitive level of football consistently shows injury rates do not differ significantly for games played on grass or synthetic turf.

But the mythologists need scapegoats. Perception blocks out reality. Emotion clouds reason. And the beat goes on.

We know sometimes the beat comes down hard on athletic administrators. You have to defend your choice of playing surfaces, too often against misguided and misinformed attacks.

We wish to offer more than sympathy. We now have over two decades of experience with synthetic turf. Catalogued every major public study made on the subject and have been a responsible contributor to many of them. They are yours to share.

Equally important is our commitment to you. It is the same as the day we started—to produce the best quality surface to meet the needs of the athletes who play the game and the institutions who support their effort.

Our position on the subject of turf-related injuries has been constant. A well maintained playing surface, whether natural or synthetic, is seldom an important factor in injury causation. It makes only for good copy.

Enough said.
