Research institute releases study of black student-athletes

Black student-athletes at NCAA Division I institutions are more likely to play football and basketball, are less well-prepared for college studies, and are from homes with lower socioeconomic status than their nonblack teammates—but they also are similar in a number of ways to their nonblack counterparts and to other black students.

Those are among the findings in the second substantive research report by the American Institutes for Research in its studies of intercollegiate athletics, conducted for the NCAA Presidents Commission. The first report was released last November and was the subject of the Presidents Commission National Forum presentation at the NCAA Convention in January.

Additional reports in the next few months will deal with the female student-athlete, an analysis of student-athletes' college transcripts and their answers to open-ended questions in the studies, which involved a representative sample of more than 4,000 students at 42 Division I institutions.

The latest report includes comparisons of all black student-athletes; those in football, men's basketball and women's basketball; Blacks participating extensively in other campus activities, and black students not participating in either athletics or other activities. In addition, some comparisons are to non-black student-athletes.

Based on their percentage of the U.S. population and on the enrollment of Blacks in Division I institutions, Blacks are overrepresented in football and basketball, according to the report. While about 12 percent of the U.S. population is black, the median enrollment of black undergraduates in NCAA Division I institutions is only four percent.

Yet, 37 percent of football players, 56 percent of men's basketball players and 33 percent of women's basketball players in Division I are black. In all other sports combined,

Academic issues in Division I among major topics for Council

1989 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 42 and other issues involving academic requirements at Division I institutions are among the major items on the agenda for the NCAA Council's spring meeting, scheduled April 17-19 in Kansas City, Missouri.

While most of the items on the agenda for the Council affect all three divisions, the Division I academic issues may prove to be the most significant.

In the Division I Steering Committee's separate session, it will review Proposal No. 42 (which would do away with the partial qualifier in Division I after August 1, 1990), as well as other aspects of NCAA Bylaws 14.3.1 and 14.3.2 [formerly Bylaw 5-1-(j)].

That topic was placed on the agenda when NCAA President Albert M. Witte and NCAA Presidents Commission Chair Martin A.

Massengale met with representatives of the Southeastern Conference and Georgetown University earlier this year and agreed that both the Council and the Commission would review the matter in April.

When the steering committee meets, it will know the reaction of the Presidents Commission in the latter's April 5-6 meeting.

A recommendation from the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee also is expected. That committee, in its March 22-23 meeting in Kansas City, said it would recommend that implementation of Proposal No. 42 be delayed until August 1992.

Prior to the Convention in January, the committee recommended that no change be made in what was then Bylaw 5-1-(j) until after at least the first five years of the current research study are completed.

Also facing the Division I Steering

Committee is a review of this year's Division I academic-reporting compilation and a discussion of strengthening the existing Division I satisfactory-progress legislation.

Full Council

Among the more noteworthy items on the agenda for the full Council sessions are the annual appointments to fill vacancies on the Nominating Committee and the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees, appointment of the first members of the new Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, and consideration of the concept of a certification or external-review process in intercollegiate athletics.

The Council also will receive reports from the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, the Research Committee, the Com-

Most of respondents in media poll doubt top sports schools' integrity

Americans have serious doubts about the integrity of the nation's top sports colleges, believing they commonly give secret payments and inflated grades to student-athlete.

A majority of respondents in a Media General-Associated Press national survey also suspected athletics booster clubs of making secret payments to players, and two-thirds said the colleges overemphasize sports and neglect academic standards for athletes.

Seventy-six percent said colleges should not be permitted to pay money to their student-athletes. More than 55 percent believe schools and booster clubs commonly make payments under the table.

At the same time, 83 percent favored athletics scholarships. Among Blacks, for whom scholarships often provide an escape route from poverty, support reached 92 percent.

The poll, conducted by telephone among a random sample of 1,108 adults March 6 to 15, had a three-point margin of sampling error.

Of the respondents, 54 percent agreed in solid majorities that sports are overemphasized, academics neglected and improper payments are common.

More than eight in 10 favored the provisions of the NCAA's Proposal No. 42, which would prohibit schools from giving athletics scholarships to freshmen unable to meet the NCAA's academic requirements for initial athletics eligibility.

Georgetown University head men's basketball coach John Thompson staged a two-game protest strike this winter, arguing that the rule would disproportionately disqualify black athletes. The rule is not scheduled to go into effect until 1990-91, and Thompson ended his walkout after it was agreed that the issue would be placed in the NCAA Council and NCAA Presidents Commission agenda.

But 81 percent of the Blacks polled favored the rule, as high a level of support as among whites. Moreover, eight in 10 of the supporters—Blacks and whites alike—said they would favor the rule even if it would disqualify many Blacks and other minority athletes from scholarships.

Respondents aged 65 and over were the least supportive of scholarships in general and the least satisfied with academic standards, while the youngest, ages 18-29, were the most supportive. Blacks, similarly, were less critical than whites of

Two-shot technical fouls approved

The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee has announced rules changes regarding technical fouls, uniforms, timeouts and the throw-in.

The committee approved a penalty of two free throws for all technical fouls. Previously, only bench technicals carried this penalty. In addition, the committee voted to categorize goaltending on a free throw as a technical foul rather than a violation. The committee also liberalized the rule pertaining to grasping the basket ring. Any player will be allowed to hang on the rim if, in the officials' judgment, the player is trying to avoid injury to himself or another player.

Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the committee and director of athletics at Springfield College, announced the changes for the 1989-90 season after the committee's meeting in Seattle April 2-3.

The committee revised the color combinations that may be used for uniform numbers and voted to allow two identifying names to be worn on both the front and back of the uniform jersey. The committee also approved a rule stating that undergarments are part of the game pants and must be similar in color to the pants.

Significant discussion took place regarding the distance of the three-point field-goal line. The committee voted to retain the current distance.

In other actions, the committee

Restrictions on uniforms liberalized

The NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee has liberalized restrictions on names and numbers that appear on uniform shirts, and tights and undergarments that extend below the game shorts.

The committee, which met March 29-31 in Tacoma, Washington, approved a maximum of two one-quarter inch borders around uniform numbers. The numbers must be a solid color. A maximum of two names may appear on the front and the back of the uniform shirt.

The committee also voted that tights and undergarments that extend below the game shorts may be worn for medical reasons only. Garments that are worn for this reason must be a beige tone.

In other actions, the committee made the penalty for all technical fouls two free throws and possession of the ball to the offended team. Bench technical fouls had been penalized by two free throws, but other technical fouls carried only a one-shot penalty.

The committee also lengthened the duration of a timeout from 60 seconds to 75 seconds. A buzzer will sound after 60 seconds, and teams must be ready to resume play immediately following the second buzzer at 75 seconds.

The committee voted to increase the closely guarded distance from three feet to six feet and eliminated the backcourt violation on a defensive player on an inbounds play.

Use of a 40-second shot clock, coupled with the 10-second backcourt violation, was approved as an experimental rule.

The committee requests that conferences use three-person officiating crews and file data with the research subcommittee. Conferences that would like to request approval for other experimental rules should contact Dianne C. Jones, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater, chair of the research subcommittee.

lengthened timeouts to 75 seconds (with the first horn sounding at 60 seconds) and approved the ball becoming live when it is placed at the disposal of the player passing the ball inbounds.

The committee approved officials' signals to indicate a double foul, a lane violation and the breaking of the five-second count in a closely guarded situation. Definitions of charging and the principle of verticality were added to the body of the rules.

Permitting six personal fouls before a player is disqualified was approved as an experimental rule. Awarding three free throws if a shooter is fouled attempting a three-point shot and the try is unsuccessful, and using the 45-second clock to administer the 10-second backcourt count also were approved for experimentation.

Points of emphasis for the 1989-90 season will be the principle of verticality, especially in regards to the offensive player; rough low post play; intentional fouls, and illegal screens.

NCAA Bylaws 13.9 and 13.02.4.4—signing letters of intent and financial aid agreements/dead periods

NCAA Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that in accordance with Bylaw 13.9.1, a member institution may not participate in an institutional or conference athletics letter of intent program or issue an institutional or conference financial aid agreement that involves a signing date that precedes the initial signing date for the National Letter of Intent program in the same sport. Further, according to Bylaw 13.9.1.1, an institutional or conference financial aid form may be included in the normal mailing of the National Letter of Intent but none of the forms enclosed in the mailing may be signed by the prospect prior to the initial signing date in that sport for the National Letter of Intent program. The 1989 National Letter of Intent initial signing date in the sports of football, women's volleyball and field hockey was February 8, 1989. The initial signing date for all other sports is April 12, 1989.

Divisions I and II member institutions also are reminded that the period 48 hours prior to 8 a.m. on the date for signing the National Letter of Intent in the applicable sport is a dead period per Bylaw 13.1.3.9.1. [Please note that under Bylaw 13.1.3.2-(r), Division I women's basketball also has a dead period 48 hours after the 8 a.m. spring National Letter of Intent signing date and, thus, the National Letter of Intent cannot be hand delivered during this period.] Bylaw 13.02.4.4 defines a dead period as that period of time when it is not permissible to make in-person recruiting contacts or evaluations on or off the member institution's campus or to permit official or unofficial visits by prospects at an institution's campus. During such a dead period, a coaching staff member may not serve as a speaker or attend a meeting or banquet at which prospects are in attendance and may not visit the prospect's educational institution. It remains permissible, however, for an institutional staff member to write or telephone prospects during such a dead period.

Additionally, Bylaw 13.1.4.1 stipulates that any in-person, off-campus contact with a prospect for the purpose of signing a letter of intent or other commitment to attend the institution shall be counted in the limitations set forth in Bylaw 13.1.4. Further, subsequent to the occasion on which the prospect signs a National Letter of Intent, there shall be no limit on the number of contacts with a prospect, the prospect's relatives or legal guardians by the institution with which the prospect has signed, with the exception of certain restrictions stipulated in Bylaw 13.1.4.2. The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee has determined that for purposes of this provision, the occasion of the National Letter of Intent signing is considered to be the calendar day on which the signing occurs (i.e., 12:01 a.m. until midnight); consequently, the unlimited contacts begin after that day, and contact with a prospective student-athlete, the

Questions/Answers

Q How does a person go about being considered for a job with the NCAA? What qualifications are needed, and how do potential candidates know when there's a vacancy?

A Persons interested in applying for a position on the national office staff should direct a cover letter and detailed resume to Suzanne E. Mason, NCAA personnel manager, at the national office. Qualifications will vary, based on the position to be filled. However, experience in intercollegiate athletics as a student-athlete, coach or administrator will be helpful. Those interested in professional possibilities with the Association should watch The Market section of The NCAA News. NCAA policy dictates that all openings on the national office staff be advertised in The Market.

prospect's parents or legal guardian during the same calendar day the National Letter of Intent is signed would be considered a countable contact with a prospective student-athlete by the institution per Bylaw 13.1.4.

A Division III member institution, or one that competes in a sport in Division III, shall not, per Bylaw 13.9.2, utilize any form of a letter of intent or similar form of commitment in the recruitment of a prospect in a sport classified in Division III. However, it shall be permissible for the institution to utilize in the recruitment of a prospect its pre-enrollment forms executed by prospective students in general at that institution.

Finally, member institutions are reminded of a previous NCAA Council-approved interpretation that a high school coach who contacts a prospective student-athlete to deliver a National Letter of Intent as requested by a Division I member institution's coach must be considered a representative of the collegiate institution's athletics interests per Bylaw 13.02.10; therefore, the contact by a representative of an institution's athletics interests would not be permissible per Bylaw 13.1.2.

NCAA Bylaw 17.02.7—definition of intercollegiate competition/use of institutional athletics equipment during the academic year

The Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 16.12.1.6 and 16.12.2.6 and a previous committee interpretation and confirmed that a student-athlete would initiate the provision of Bylaw 17.02.7-(e) [participation in intercollegiate competition] if the student-athlete retains and utilizes institutional athletics equipment (e.g., golf bag, tennis racquet case) for any competition throughout the regular academic year.

NCAA Bylaw 13.3.1—permissible recruiting materials/conference academic brochures and Proposal No. 99

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.3.1 and a previous committee decision and agreed that a member conference may not produce a separate academic brochure for distribution to prospective student-athletes. Further, the subcommittees agreed that a member institution may print both an annual athletics press guide and an annual athletics recruiting brochure, with the understanding that it is permitted to send only one to prospective student-athletes. Finally, the subcommittees confirmed that the provisions of 1989 Convention Proposal No. 99 amending Bylaw 13.3.1 would permit a member institution to produce one student-athlete handbook with the same color of printing on the covers and throughout the handbook.

National meeting on black student-athlete to be suggested

From the black student-athlete to corporate-sponsor programs, the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning dealt with a diverse array of topics in its March 29-30 meeting in Seattle.

The committee—consisting of six former NCAA officers and one former standout student-athlete—will present the following recommendations and suggestions to the NCAA Council this month:

- That the Council and the Presidents Commission consider the possibility of an NCAA sponsored national meeting on the black student-athlete after considering the vice-president, Jacobson also will manage cheerleaders and others involved in spirit groups.

"We are fortunate to have someone with Sue's background and experience joining our staff," said Hughes. "She is very familiar with NCAA championship-management procedures and compliance procedures. I think she is an excellent addition to our staff."

NFL will accept Sanders for draft

Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders was granted admission to the NFL draft April 4, just three days after the Oklahoma State University junior running back asked for a special exemption to turn professional.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Sanders, a true junior with a year of eligibility left, is being allowed into the April 23 draft because Oklahoma State is on NCAA probation and because he is leaving school with the blessing both of coach Pat Jones and athletics director Myron Roderick.

"We've always believe it best for both professional and college football that the NFL's eligibility rules not work to disrupt college programs or players' educational opportunities," Browne said.

"But when an underclassman whose program is under NCAA sanctions decides to turn pro with the full support of his college coach and athletics director and when he has lost any remaining college football eligibility in the process, we have no realistic choice but to accept him."

results of the American Institutes for Research report in that regard. The research report was not available at the time of the committee's meeting and is reported elsewhere in this issue of The NCAA News.

- That the Association "tread softly" in its corporate-sponsor program and be alert to the adverse effects of any expansion of that program that might be caused by future reductions in other NCAA revenues. The committee also will express its concerns regarding corporate-sponsorship activities at the institutional level.

- That the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues or the standing Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism consider appropriate international-competition opportunities in college athletics if Olympic opportunities decline due to differing definitions of amateurism and the trend toward "open" Olympic sports.

- That the Council be alert to the possibility of legislation to restrict further the use of athletics dormitories.

- That the Council consider amending the NCAA constitution to change the title of faculty athletics representative to institutional athletics representative, noting that the latter would be consistent with the definition in the new Manual.

- That the new Legislative Review Committee or another appropriate committee be asked to consider requiring an "impact analysis" to accompany any legislation proposing changes in academic requirements.

- That the Association and member institutions use their various radio and television messages and other appropriate means to emphasize the favorable aspects of college athletics, including youth programs such as the National Youth Sports Program and the Youth Education Through Sports clinics.

- That the NYSP and YES programs use every possible means to emphasize "aspirations for educational growth" and that the NCAA encourage member institutions to replicate this type of program.

- That the Council adopt a policy of reviewing cases of probationary membership and restricted membership annually, especially as they reflect failure to comply with women's sports sponsorship criteria.

- That the Council sponsor legislation to permit and encourage the appointment of associate and assistant athletics directors to NCAA sports committees, and that such appointments count toward the minimum requirement for administrators on those committees. The committee noted that this could assist in increasing the ethnic minority representation on the committees.

- That the Council consider legislation to permit members of the new Student-Athlete Advisory committee to be reappointed for a second two-year term, noting that the limit of only a single two-year term will not permit continuity on the committee and may limit the members' interest and effectiveness.

The committee also conducted its annual review of sports sponsorship and participation trends. That topic will be featured in the News later this month.

Coaches need time to build a sound program

By Dave Goldberg

Coaches of this season's Final Four teams, aware of their own precarious job security, are critical of athletics director who succumb to pressure and fire coaches before there is a chance to succeed.

"An awful lot of coaches just as good or a lot better than our staff have not been given the opportunity that we've had," said Seton Hall's P. J. Carlesimo, whose resignation was demanded by the student senate and newspaper last year, just 14 months before he guided his team to the Final Four.

"What's happening in college athletics is wrong. It's very alarming, and it's happening because you have athletics directors who are unwilling to stand up to alumni and boosters. At Seton Hall, we were lucky enough to have people who were strong enough to take some criticism."

Michigan's Steve Fisher took over his team two days before the NCAA tournament began, when Bill by the scores they've beaten them, he's proven he's a big-time coach and is ready for the job."

Carlesimo and Duke's Mike Krzyzewski talked about the hazards of a profession in which about two dozen Division I coaches were fired or resigned at the end of the regular season.

They both noted that the Final Four teams (represented) what generally are conceded to be the top three basketball conferences—the Big Ten (Illinois and Michigan), Big East (Seton Hall) and Atlantic Coast (Duke).

All regularly get five or six teams in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, generating millions of dollars and creating a self-perpetuating cycle in which those conferences continue to thrive at the expense of others that get one team into the tournament and have it eliminated early. That, in turn, puts more pressure on athletics directors.

"We should be getting money to lower leagues," Krzyzewski said. "A lot of the coaches there are losing their jobs because they don't make the tournament or advance far enough. Then the athletics director comes in and sees his budget and decides he has to do something."

Carlesimo, who is in his seventh year at Seton Hall, was even blunter about the pressure.

During most of his tenure, the Pirates were at the bottom of the Big East, playing each year in the 8-9 game that determined who got into the regular phase of the league tournament.

Last year, he probably saved his job when his team won seven of its last nine, made the NCAA tournament for the first time and finished 22-13. This year, Seton Hall was 30-6 going into the Final Four. The school was unbeaten outside its conference.

"People are being let go after two, three or four years when they don't win," Carlesimo said. "That's not enough (time). When you take a job in the spring, you lose a recruiting year. Then you lose a second because you're still getting things in order when the early signing period is coming up. So you start out two years behind.

"I really believe that coaching is overrated. If things hadn't worked out last year, Seton Hall would be here and our players would be here, but our coaches wouldn't"

Krzyzewski, a close friend of Carlesimo from the days when he coached at Army and Carlesimo was at Wagner, concurred. He noted that sometimes a team is ready to gel, as Seton Hall was season, when the old coach is fired and a new one comes in and gets credit.

Too often, I see guys losing jobs when they have a young team and they're just about to turn the corner,"

he said. "The administration fires him, and it makes it easier for the guy coming in and makes him look good. To me, those are the sick ones."

Goldberg writes for the Associated Press.

"If you sincerely want to eliminate corruption in college athletics, the answer is simple. Eliminate the enormous flows of money that accrue to the schools that are the most successful participants."

"Simple as this sounds in theory, though, it would be almost impossible in practice. The trade-off would be to give up the glamour and money that have hooked everyone with a financial or emotional stake in good ol' Siwash U. being No. 1."

"Put another way, the hope for cleaner college athletics is abstract rather than practical."

"Therefore, the only really honest thing to do is admit the potential for corruption fostered by pretending that college athletics at the high level is amateur schoolboy sport."

"Hell, people gamble."

"The state could get into the sports-book business and skim that vigorish, or juice, rather than let the bookies keep it, or it could legalize gambling, license private businesses to run it and tax them, as the English do."

"This is not an argument for casino gambling, but rather for sports books alone, in other words, for legalizing and taxing an activity that goes on daily already."

"If Texas were to move boldly in this area, rather than wringing hands as other states cut up the action first, as in the case of parimutuels, it could pull in money from elsewhere as well as cauterizing the outward flow to Nevada and New Jersey."

"Otherwise, we can go on kidding ourselves about how pure we are, while the bookies, who know we're not, continue to profit from our folly."

"Why include teams that have no chance of winning the (NCAA Division I men's basketball) tournament?"

"Wouldn't they be happier playing in their own tournament where they have a chance to win? Of course."

"The NCAA tournament accurately reflects the reason the entire organization is ineffective."

"In all voting matters concerning large and small schools (within Division I), every member has a single vote. Naturally, the smaller institutions have a far different viewpoint than the larger ones."

"The result is the same as basketball's NCAA tournament —there is much wasted effort."

"People are being let go after two, three or four years when they don't win. That's not enough (time)..."

"I really feel Steve Fisher deserves the head-coaching position," said Lou Henson, whose Illinois team were two-time winners over Michigan in the regular season.

Bills in Congress seek to stem flow of mail-order steroids

By Ira Dreyfuss

It was junk mail. A company in Tijuana, Mexico, was offering to ship Charles J. H. Miller anabolic steroids.

It had picked the wrong client. Miller, at 78, wasn't a body-builder, but he had been reading news reports on steroids, the synthetic male hormone favored by athletes as muscle-building aids despite the drugs' health risks.

"To get this lousy letter from Mexico, boy, it really fried me," he said. "The more I read it, the madder I got."

Miller decided to take the case to

Dismissed coaches can get counseling

By Keith Drum

College basketball coaches announced April 3 that they have set up a rehabilitation and counseling fund for those coaches who are dismissed.

"We are making available $2,000 for any coach or member of his family to use for counseling, self-rehabilitation or career guidance," said Jud Heathcote of Michigan State University. Heathcote is the outgoing president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"We're trying to recognize that coaches sometimes have tunnel vision. Once they are fired, they think only of getting another job coaching. But many of them didn't get to where they are by being chopped liver. They can do many things, and we want to help them channel their energies and abilities in another area, another direction."

The fund is available to any Division I head coach or a member of his family. It will not be a handout, Heathcote said, and some kind of documentation will be required.

There currently are 34 Division I schools that have had or still have an opening in the past month.

The dismissals and "negotiated resignations" were the primary discussion topics among coaches at their convention in Seattle.

Many coaches have publicly protested the dismissals that claimed respected and successful veteran coaches.

Earlier, some coaches talked of forming a union or trying to get tenure to protect themselves. But most have rejected those ideas as unrealistic for their profession.

Coaches in all divisions pay $50 in annual dues to the NABC, but that's about the extent of their common ground, which is a problem the top coaches recognize.

Head coaches are perceived as making large sums of money. Some do, but the median salary is believed no more than $60,000. Most coaches don't have the perks that the top five percent do—shoe contracts, TV and radio shows, speaking fees.

Heathcote acknowledged that some dismissals are justified and fair and that coaches can't expect a one-way street.

"We have talked about contracts and educating young coaches that a contract should be a two-way street," Heathcote said. "We recognize there is too much jumping to a better job. A coach should be protected, and an institution should be protected."

his congressman, Fortney (Pete) Stark, D-California.

"Somebody's got to stop it, and I can't stop it as an individual," the San Lorenzo, California, man said. "My feeling is, if enough people get on the ball, we can get this country straightened out."

distribution. Both would impose prison terms, fines and forfeiture of property for the advertisement and sale of steroids.

There are some differences between the proposals.

The House bill would apply only to shipments through the U.S.

"Congressional staff members and postal inspectors predict that whatever measure Congress eventually passes will combine the tougher features of both bills."

"Why can't our government stop it?" he wondered.

Some members of Congress think it can be stopped.

Bills have been introduced in the House and Senate to ban the sale of steroids through the mail effectively closing a major channel of Postal Service; but the Senate measure would cover other common carrier shipments, including overnight express. This would extend jurisdiction from the Postal Inspection Service, which only investigates crimes involving the U.S. mails, to other agencies, including the FBI.

The House bill would impose a maximum five-year prison term, while the Senate bill would stop at three. Both would allow authorities to take and keep property involved in the commission of the crimes.

Congressional staff members and postal inspectors predict that whatever measure Congress eventually passes will combine the tougher features of both bills.

A House judiciary subcommittee on crime has heard testimony on the bill sponsored by Stark; similar Senate hearings will be held soon.

"The bill you are considering is true evidence of an individual 'back home' who suggested an idea for legislation and asked his representative to introduce a bill," Stark told the House panel.

Although the legislative response may please Miller, it will not please athletes who, authorities say, are playing games with their health by abusing the drugs.

"In too many instances, these young people and athletes are unconvinced or ignorant of the potential deleterious effects of these drugs," said crime subcommittee chair William J. Hughes of New Jersey.

More than one million people are estimated to use steroids, he says.

Researchers have linked steroid abuse to an increase risk of liver and heart damage, cancer, shrinkage of the genitals and lowered sexual drive in men and hair growth, deepened voice and heightened sexual drive and sharp swings toward aggression in women.

In addition, steroids have been linked to a reduction in bone growth leading to stunted height in adolescents.

Wolverines solve Seton Hall mystery

Michigan won the 1989 Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 3 with an 80-79 overtime triumph over Seton Hall in a game that provided as many subplots as a good mystery novel. Consider these characters and elements:

• Michigan's Steve Fisher, who became the first interim coach to claim the Division I crown.

• Overtime—marking the first time in 26 years that 40 minutes of basketball wasn't enough to decide the Division I champion.

• Seton Hall senior John Morton, who entered the game with season shooting percentages of 43.6 from the field and 81 from the line, and tournament percentages of 38.6 from the field and 69.4 from the line. Morton had scoring averages of 16.8 for the season and 15.8 in the play-offs.

He exploded against Michigan, racking up 35 points. He was 11-26 from the field (42.3 percent) and 9-10 from the line. Morton scored 15 of the 22 points Seton Hall needed to erase what had been a 12-point second-half deficit and claim the lead, 67-66, with 2:01 to play in regulation.

Morton's was among the highest point totals ever produced in the Division I championship game.

• Michigan's Rumeal Robinson, who was reaching to take the basketball from an official to attempt the front end of a one-and-one with three seconds left in overtime when Seton Hall called timeout to make him think about it. Fisher's post-game comments suggest that Robinson may have used the break to concentrate on the rhythm he developed with extra shooting practice after he missed the front end of a one-and-one with eight seconds to play at Wisconsin during the regular season, costing the Wolverines a chance to win the game.

Robinson buried both free throws this time, sinking the Pirates in the process.

• Seton Hall's amazing comebacks in the Final Four. By the end of regulation against Michigan, the Pirates had erased a combined 30-point deficit (they were down 18 in the semifinals against Duke before rocketing to a 17-point decision) against their opponents in Seattle and reduced the championship to a five-minute overtime.

• Australian Andrew Gaze, the Pirates' "wonder from down under." Among players in the Final Four, only Michigan's Glen Rice had made more three-point shots on the season—the margin was 94-93 entering the championship game.

Gaze electrified the Kingdome from the outside only once, and never during regulation. He shot 1-5 from the field for the night, and his lone three-pointer came in overtime.

• Rice, who in the championship game became the all-time leading scorer in both the Division I tournament and the Big Ten Conference. Entering the tournament, Rice was averaging 24.7 points a game. He averaged 30.7 during the Wolverines' six-game march to the title.

• Bo Schembechler, Michigan athletics director and football coach. As he made his way onto the court after the game to congratulate Fisher and the players on winning Michigan's first national championship, Schembechler's smile appeared even bigger than the one he wore after his football charges won the 1989 Rose Bowl.

"This is a great day for Michigan," he told a national television audience. "The team was magnificent, and Steve Fisher did a great job."

"I'm the happiest man alive," Fisher had claimed only seconds earlier, just before talking about Robinson's last-second heroics.

"Rumeal is such a gutsy kid... you have to look back to the Wisconsin game in the regular season, when he missed a foul shot with eight seconds left and we ended up losing.

"For weeks, he shot 100 from the line every night after practice... I rebounded for him," Fisher said. "He kept telling me, 'coach, I'll make 'em next time.'"

Rumeal Robinson (left) and Terry Mills had plenty to celebrate during Final Four weekend. Robinson had 21 points and 11 assists against Seton Hall, and Mills added eight points, six rebounds and three blocked shots.

Notes

Michigan's Rice was named the tournament's outstanding player, becoming the third Big Ten athlete so honored during the 1980s. Indiana's Keith Smart (1987) and Isiah Thomas (1981) were the others.

Joining Rice on the all-tournament team was teammate Robinson, Seton Hall's Morton and Gerald Greene, and Duke's Danny Ferry.

Michigan finished the year 30-7, Seton Hall 31-7. The other semifinalists, Duke and Illinois, finished 28-8 and 31-5, respectively. Seton Hall defeated the Blue Devils, 95-78, in the first semifinal April 1, and Michigan got by Illinois, 83-81, in the nightcap, when Sean Higgins hit a short baseline jumper off an offensive rebound in the final seconds.

About the only routine aspect of the title game, when compared to the other 1980s finals, was its edge-of-your-seat finish. Combine all of the decade's final games, and the total margin of victory is 41 points. Take away Indiana's 13-point verdict (63-50) over North Carolina in 1981 and Georgetown's nine-pointer (84-75) over Houston in 1984, and the average margin of victory for the decade's remaining eight championship games is 2.4 points.

Gordon's emotional play lifts Tennessee women

With her second national championship in three years in tow, Tennessee all-America forward Bridgette Gordon still looked sad as she left the court for the last time with just seconds to go in her final collegiate game.

After torpedoing Southeastern Conference rival Auburn with 27 points in the championship game of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship, Gordon walked almost tearfully into the awaiting embrace of coach Pat Summitt. The emotion of the moment showed on the faces of Gordon's teammates and Summitt's assistants.

A few seconds later, however, the smiles were back as Tennessee celebrated its 76-60 victory over the Lady Tigers before 9,758 spectators April 2 at Tacoma.

It was a family triumph, Summitt declared following the game. Indeed, the Lady Vols closed ranks to win their last 17 games of the season, including a 77-65 victory over Maryland in the tournament semifinals, and finished with a 34-2 record.

The family's unquestioned hero was Gordon, who has led four of the six teams Summitt has coached in Division I semifinal or final games and was named most outstanding player in this year's tourney.

Against Auburn, Gordon hit 11 of 21 field goals, mostly from the baseline. She also snared 11 rebounds to top off a collegiate career that saw her win an Olympic gold medal in addition to finishing as the top male or female scorer in Tennessee basketball history.

Gordon's seven first-half baskets helped give Tennessee an eight-point edge at intermission. Auburn closed to within three points with just under 10 minutes to go in the game, but Gordon answered with three more baskets to ignite a 13-2 run by the Lady Vols that put the game out of reach.

For Auburn, which beat defending champion Louisiana Tech in the semifinals, it was the second year in a row as Division I runner-up. The Lady Tigers' only two losses of the season were to Tennessee.

Joining Gordon on the all-tournament team was Tennessee's Sheila Frost, Auburn senior Vicki Orr, Maryland senior Deanna Tate and Louisiana Tech's Venus Lacy.

Strength in relays boosts Texas to swimming title

Texas won four of five relay events and claimed two other individual titles to capture team honors for the second straight year at the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships.

It was the third title overall for the Longhorns and coach Eddie Reese, who was named swimming coach of the year during the meet March 30 through April 1 at Indianapolis.

In outscoring runner-up Stanford by 79 points, Texas set American and meet records in the 200-yard freestyle relay, which was staged for the first time in NCAA Division I competition, and an American mark in the 800-yard freestyle relay (although Florida's 1984 meet record still stands).

Other winners for the Longhorns were sophomore Shaun Jordan, who captured the 100-yard freestyle while scoring a team-leading 50 points, and Kirk Stackle, who added this year's 100-yard breaststroke title to the 200-yard breaststroke crown he captured last year.

Texas entered the championships favorable to repeat—a fact that clearly made Reese and his swimmers nervous. Reese, however, was pleased with the Longhorns' response to the pressure.

"The means to the end is almost as important as the end," he said. "I enjoyed what we went through. I was worried about everybody waiting for someone else to take command, to take the pain. But they got better every day."

"Defending our title meant a lot to our whole team," added Texas freestyler Doug Gjertsen. "When you have so many people pulling for you, it's hard to let them down. It's sweeter the second time around, especially for me."

A total of five meet records, including standards in two new events, were established at the championships. Five American records also were recorded.

In addition, two swimmers were double titlists. Iowa's Artur Wojdat, a Polish freestyler whose meet record in the 500-yard event did not qualify as an American mark, also won the 200; and Southern California's David Wharton successfully defended his 1988 titles in the 400- and 200-yard individual medleys, establishing meet and American marks at the shorter distance.

A meet and American record also was set in the 100-yard backstroke by Harvard's David Berkoff, who stayed under water nearly the entire race in his unique "human torpedo" style to win the event for the second time in three years.

The championships' other meet and American record was set by the Stanford team of Rick Gould, Matt Rodgers, Doug Lillydahl and Jeff Garr during the preliminaries of the new 200-yard medley relay race. Princeton later edged Stanford in the event final.

Columbia fencers win third straight

Columbia withstood a strong challenge from Penn State to capture its third straight team title in the National Collegiate Men's Fencing Championships March 30-April 1 at Northwestern.

The title was Columbia's 11th men's fencing team championship, placing it one behind New York University on the all-time list.

The Lions captured just one individual title but earned 88 of a possible 90 points. Penn State won individual titles in two weapons foil and sabre and finished with 85 points. Pennsylvania was third with 70 points.

Penn State had a two-point lead over Columbia after two days of competition. Nittany Lion Peter Cox captured the sabre crown, becoming the first Penn State fencer to do so. Cox's brother, David, finished fourth behind runner-up David Mandell of Columbia and David Stollman of Pennsylvania. Peter and David Cox finished third and fifth, respectively, last year.

Penn State's Edward Mufel defeated defending champion Marc Kent of Columbia to win the foil title. Mufel finished strong after struggling to a 3-5 record in the first two qualifying rounds. Albrecht Kiel of Wayne State (Michigan) finished third, and Marty Yu of Yale was fourth.

Penn State's hopes for its first team title were dashed when Jon Normile of Columbia defended his epee crown, while the Nittany Lions could place no epee specialist higher than sixth. To gain the title, Normile had to post back-to-back victories over Claus Block of Wayne State (Michigan), who had knocked Normile into the loser's bracket earlier in the day. Pennsylvania's Chris O'Loughlin finished third.

Normile's epee crown was the 21st all-time individual championship for Columbia, second only to NYU's 28. The team title was the third for Columbia coach George Kolombatovich.

Tartars earn second straight women's fencing crown

Wayne State (Michigan) won its second straight team title and became the first school since 1983 to capture both the team and individual crowns during the National Collegiate Women's Fencing Championships April 2-4 at Northwestern.

The Tartars, who won the first women's championships in 1982, defeated Columbia-Barnard in the finals to claim the team title. Although each team won eight bouts, Wayne State earned the victory by receiving fewer touches (56) than the Light Blue (65).

With Columbia-Barnard holding an 8-7 lead in bouts, Wayne State's Yasemin Topcu gave her team the victory by defeating Darlene Pratschler and forcing the touch-count decision.

Wayne State advanced to the finals by defeating Penn State and Pennsylvania by identical 9-4 scores.

On the last day of the competition, Topcu became the first fencer since Jana Angelakis of Penn State to advance from a championship team and earn the individual title. After losing her first bout in the direct-elimination tournament, Topcu won four in a row before defeating Denise Piccininno of Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck, 10-8, for the championship. She became Wayne State's first individual-title winner.

Kris Campbell of Yale finished third ahead of Loredana Ranza of Wayne State, who finished second last year. Tzu Moy, believed to be Columbia-Barnard's best hope for the title after finishing seventh last year, came down with an illness after the team event and did not compete for the individual crown.

Topcu's victory marked the first time since 1984 that the individual championship went to a fencer from a school other than Notre Dame or Columbia-Barnard. The Irish's Molly Sullivan claimed the title in 1986 and 1988, and Caitlin Bilo-deaux of the Light Blue was victori-

Wayne State's team title was the fourth for coach Gil Pezza, who also coached the school's men's team to victories in 1984 and 1985. Pezza is no stranger to individual titles, either, having won men's crowns in the epee in 1980 and 1981.

Harvard's ice hockey title is its first NCAA championship

Harvard's men's ice hockey team was not fooling April 1.

Ed Krayner scored at the 4:16 mark of overtime, and freshman Chuckie Hughes stopped 33 shots as the Crimson defeated Minnesota, 4-3, for the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship in St. Paul, Minnesota.

It was Harvard's first NCAA championship in any sport.

"When the puck came out to me, I wasn't getting too excited because I still had a Minnesota defenseman draped on me," Krayner said. "I managed to get the puck to my backhand and went across the slot. I'm not sure where Robbie (Stauber) was, but I just shot (the puck). That's the sweetest goal I've ever scored in my life."

Krayner said watching the puck go in the net seemed to take an eternity.

"I saw it go under him and I saw it cross the goal line. It took about 15 minutes in my mind, sort of like super slow-motion."

Minnesota struck first in the game when Jon Anderson, who had a hat-trick in the Golden Gophers, 7-4 semifinal victory over Maine, scored on a low shot at 6:24 of the first period.

Harvard then killed three straight penalties, a string that coach Bill Cleary called "the turning point of the game." The momentum shifted to Harvard.

Ted Donato, voted the tournament's most outstanding player, scored his 50th point of the season in the second period on a 45-foot shot at 6:30 to tie the score. Hobey Baker Award-winner Lane MacDonald then took a pass on the right side, cut left past Minnesota defenseman David Espe, feinted and fired a low shot past Stauber into the net.

The Harvard bench celebrates a third-period goal that put the Crimson ahead of Minnesota, 3-2. Harvard won in overtime, 4-3.

Minnesota's Jason Miller tied the score and electrified the 15,861 in attendance with a power-play goal at 13:01.

Donato's second goal of the game came off a rebound at the 12:53 mark of the third stanza. A missed shot by Kevin Sneddon caromed off Stauber and straight out to the slot, where Donato flicked a 15-foot backhand shot into the upper right corner of the net.

The Gophers, however, were not finished. A cross-checking penalty on Harvard's John Weisbrod gave the Gophers a man-up situation. And at 16:34, Peter Hankinson, on feeds from Tom Pederson and Randy Skarda, scored a power-play goal to force the overtime period.

"There were no losers tonight," said Cleary, his clothes soaked with Gatorade. "Our kids did a great job."

I am so happy for them.

"It was a tribute to play Minnesota, and I told them so after the game. They play hockey the way it was meant to be played. It was too bad someone had to lose this game."

In addition to Donato, Harvard also placed defenseman Sneddon, forward MacDonald and goaltender Allain Roy on the all-tournament team. Also named were forward Anderson and defenseman Todd Richards of Minnesota.

Harvard star claims Hobey Baker Award

Lane MacDonald, the senior forward who led Harvard University to the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, has been named winner of the 1989 Hobey Baker Award as the outstanding player in college ice hockey. Announcement of MacDonald's selection was made April 2.

Said MacDonald, "It's been quite a weekend. It is almost too much for a person to ask for."

MacDonald had a goal and an assist in the championship game, a 4-3 overtime victory over the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities. He finished the season with 31 goals and 29 assists. However, Harvard coach Bill Cleary contends that MacDonald's importance to the team was greater than anything on a statistics sheet.

"Here's what the kids think of Lane—they named him captain on this year's team after he missed a year to play on the U.S. Olympic team. He's just a natural leader."

In the Olympics, MacDonald led the U.S. team in scoring with six goals in six games. But there was never a doubt that he would return to Harvard for his senior year.

Lane MacDonald, Harvard

"I knew we would have a good team, and we wanted to win a national title badly," said MacDonald.

MacDonald beat out nine other finalists for the award, including teammate Allen Bourbeau. Other finalists included last year's recipient, Robb Stauber of Minnesota; Nelson Emerson, Bowling Green State University; Bruce Hoffer, Lake Superior State University; Greg Brown and Tim Sweeney, Boston College; Kip Miller and Bobby Reynolds, Michigan State University, and David Capuano, University of Maine, Orono.

Not again

Duke upperclassmen (from left) John Smith, Phil Henderson, Quin Snyder and Danny Ferry watch their dream of playing for the national championship fade away for the second straight year. The Blue Devils lost to Seton Hall, 95-78, April 1 in the Division I semifinals. Duke has made the Final Four three of the past four years.

Scoring depth will key men's gymnastics race

Depth is as important to a top gymnastics team as it is to a top basketball or football team. In gymnastics, however, depth refers to the quality of the scores posted by individuals, not necessarily the number of competitors.

"To win the team championship, you have to have a good lineup of six gymnasts in each event," Ohio State coach Peter Kormann said.

"The key to our team this year has been our depth guys," Houston Baptist coach Hutch Dvorak said. "Those guys have really come on strong."

Houston Baptist was ranked No. 1 in the latest NCAA men's gymnastics poll with an average score of 280.16. The Huskies finished sixth in last year's team championship.

"Our first goal is to make the top three and have a chance to win (the championship)," he said.

Two of last year's outstanding performers lead the Houston Baptist team. Juniors Miguel Rubio and Alfonso Rodriguez finished one-two in the all-around competition in 1988. Rodriguez tied for first on the pommel horse, and Rubio took top honors on the high bar. Rubio also finished third on the rings and parallel bars. Rodriguez tied for third on the high bar.

Ohio State also has two outstanding individual performers in senior Gil Pinto and junior Mike Racanelli. Pinto took fourth on the parallel bars a year ago, and Racanelli tied for sixth on the floor exercise.

Championships Previews

"The key for us is to do well in the fifth and sixth slots," Kormann said, noting that these are the spots where points may be gained.

In the final analysis, the team championship comes down to six gymnasts hitting all their routines on a given night.

"I can't remember a team winning that didn't have the highest percentage of hit routines," Kormann said. "It is every coach's hope that (his team) will have its best competition the weekend of the championship."

Chad Fox of New Mexico, who has won the vault the past three years, could become the first competitor to win four straight titles in the same event. He scored a career best 9.9 during the season and has an average score of 9.77 for the year. Fox also has the 1987 NCAA floor exercise title to his credit. He has scored a 9.9 in that event this year and has an average score of 9.83.

Defending champion: Host Nebraska defeated Illinois, 288.150-287.150.

Schedule: Nebraska will host the 1989 championships April 13-15.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will be published in the April 19 issue of the News.

Contenders: Houston Baptist, UCLA, Ohio State, Illinois and Nebraska are contenders for the team title.

Championships notes: The host institution has won the last two team championships. Nebraska was the last team to win consecutive titles when it won five championships from 1979 to 1983. UCLA has won two championships in the 1980s. Ohio State and Arizona State are the only other schools to win team titles in this decade. Penn State has won the most team titles with nine, and Illinois has the most individual champions with 40.

Championship helps economy in St. Paul

The NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship semifinals and final were expected to result in about $2.7 million being pumped into the St. Paul economy, city officials said.

"This is a real jewel in terms of economic impact," said Tom Getzke, associate director of the St. Paul Convention and Visitors Bureau. "The impact of this event is felt from the airport to downtown St. Paul, and back."

The NCAA championship came on the heels of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association play-off championships, which brought in an estimated $2.4 million to St. Paul, United Press International reported.

"Our success at staging these major sports events has brought national recognition to St. Paul and has given us a share of the non-high school sports dollar, which traditionally has gone to Minneapolis and Bloomington," said Darrell Rooney, chair of the St. Paul Area Chamber of Commerce's NCAA tournament committee.

About 3,000 out-of-town hockey fans were in St. Paul for the NCAA tourney, most of them Michigan, Massachusetts and Maine.

About 4,200 motel room nights were booked in St. Paul. Combined with normal business-day occupancy, that is nearly a sellout, officials said.

Koenig, ex-aides plea 'not guilty'

Former University of New Mexico athletics director John Koenig and two former associate athletics directors pleaded not guilty April 4 to charges in a 58-count indictment returned last month by a Bernalillo County grand jury.

Koenig, 45, was named in 47 counts of the indictment that primarily consisted of charges of making false public vouchers, fraud, criminal solicitation and conspiracy. Mike Dill, 45, was named in 11 counts and Terry Hearne, 43, in eight counts.

District Judge Philip Ashby released Koenig, Dill and Hearne on their own recognizance and also gave attorneys until May 15 to file motions in the case.

Women's gym elite have little room for error

There is little room for error in the sport of gymnastics, and that margin gets even smaller at the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships.

"It's going to come down to the team that makes the fewest mistakes," Nebraska coach Rick Walton said.

"What it always comes down to (is) the team that hits the most routines wins," Utah coach Greg Marsden said. "More often than not, because of the nature of the event, mistakes will be made, and the team that minimizes its mistakes will win."

One reason the margin for error has decreased is that the number of challengers has increased. This year, there are more teams than ever that are capable of walking away with the first-place trophy.

"There are going to be teams in both sessions that are capable of winning the championship," Marsden said.

"Our sport is starting to get like men's basketball," Walton said. "There are teams that come on strong at the end of the year, and there are the perennial (championships) contenders."

"This is the widest range of teams (capable of winning the championship)," Alabama coach Sarah Patterson said.

The defending champion Crim-

Scoring in gymnastics is revised

Proliferating perfect-10 scores in gymnastics competition could become a thing of the past this season under new rules from the sport's international governing body.

Revised scoring rules were introduced this year for women's individual all-around competition, Norbert Buche, general secretary of the International Gymnastics Federation, said March 31.

If the system is successful, it may be extended to men's all-around events in time for the World Gymnastics Championships at Stuttgart, West Germany, in October, Buche said.

"The idea is to make the sports credible," he said. "In the technical parts, gymnasts have developed very quickly. Scoring did not follow at the same pace."

The new system, designed to give judges more nuances in rating performances and to avoid ties, had a successful full-scale debut at the Olympics in Seoul last September.

Introduced in men's and women's apparatus finals, it brought a "clear improvement" in scoring, Buche said.

Under the new system, performances are scored in increments of five-one hundredths of a point rather than tenths, as in the past.

This means that while judges before could give only, for example, a 9.8 or 9.9 for strong showings before reaching the perfect mark 10, they now can use 9.85 and 9.95 ratings.

The federation came under growing pressure in recent years to overhaul its competition scoring as rapid improvements in gymnasts' ability appeared to make traditional notions of perfect or high scores less and less relevant.

son Tide had an additional obstacle thrown its way when junior Marie Robbins was lost for the year with an injury. However, the team responded with a fine performance at the Southeastern Conference championships.

"This injury changes our perspective," Patterson said. "We are now thrust into the role of underdog, a role we have thrived in."

Championships Previews

"We've tried to increase our difficulty as the season progressed without compromising consistency," Marsden said.

Utah won five consecutive championships beginning in 1982. The Utes have finished second the past two seasons.

"Any time a program finishes one or two for seven years, you can't count them out," Patterson said.

Host Georgia will be vying for its second team title in three years but should have a special interest in the individual competition on the uneven bars.

Lucy Wener could become only the second woman to win three individual NCAA women's gymnastics titles in the same event. Wener took top honors on the uneven bars in 1986 and 1987. She was ranked first nationally in that event in standings as of March 28, and she won the title at the SEC meet.

Elaine Alfano of Utah won the vault title in 1982, 1983 and 1985.

Championships Profile

Event: National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics.

Field: Twelve teams will compete. The team and all-around winner from each region will receive an automatic berth. The remaining seven teams and all-around competitors will qualify at-large on the basis of their national qualifying scores. If the all-around winner in a region is on an advancing team, that position will revert to an at-large berth. The event winners in the regional competition who score at least a 9.5 may advance to the championships (in that event only) if they are not part of a qualifying team or the all-around qualifier.

Defending champion: Alabama defeated Utah, 190.05-189.50.

Schedule: Georgia will host the championships April 14-15.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will be published in the April 19 issue of the News.

Contenders: Utah, Alabama, Nebraska, UCLA, Florida and Georgia are contenders for the team title.

Championships notes: These are the eighth championships. The last two team champions, Georgia and Alabama, are from the SEC. Georgia becomes only the fourth school to host the competition. Utah has been the site five times. UCLA was the host in 1984 and Florida, another SEC school, was the host in 1986. Alabama broke the 190-point barrier last year. In addition to its five team titles, Utah has nine individual champions. Arizona State is second with eight.

Insurance is topic for two clinics

Athletics accident insurance will be the subject of two clinics scheduled during May by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

The clinics, which are free to NACDA members, will be May 8-9 at Kings Island, Ohio (near Cincinnati), and May 15-16 at Denver, Colorado. Both sessions are funded by the NACDA Foundation, which has offered several free continuing-education clinics in recent years on such topics as sports law and drug education and testing.

Among topics to be addressed at the insurance clinics are: (1) getting the best value for your dollar, (2) insurance bidding, (3) how insurance companies look at clients as a risk and (4) claims from an athletics trainer's viewpoint. The clinics will be conducted by the staff of the NACDA insurance office.

"Catastrophic insurance is one of the major issues we've seen in college athletics recently," said Gary Cunningham, director of athletics at California State University, Fresno, and NACDA president.

"We've seen some highly publicized cases recently (i.e., the Mark Buoniconti case at The Citadel) that have focused the spotlight on the need for athletics departments to be well-insured," he said. "This is a major decision each athletics director must deal with today."

Persons wishing to register for the insurance clinics should call Tom Gleason at the NACDA Foundation office in Cleveland, telephone 216/892-4000.

Six schools plan new conference

Six Colorado colleges and universities have signed an agreement to become founding members of an NCAA Division II athletics conference.

The schools are Colorado Christian University; Metropolitan State College; Regis College (Colorado); the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs; the University of Denver; and the University of Southern Colorado. The agreement is subject to the approval of the boards of the institutions.

The new conference, scheduled to begin competition in the fall of 1990, will initially include championships competition in four men's and four women's sports. The conference and its member schools will seek affiliation with the NCAA at the Division II level.

The impetus for the new conference came from recent discussions regarding the proposed expansion of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference. Metropolitan State President Thomas Brewer said, "I believe we owe a debt of gratitude to the RMAC schools for initiating the meetings that gave us the opportunity to discuss institutional athletics programs and goals with other colleges and universities throughout our state and region."

"I am very pleased with the prospects of our new conference, because I believe it brings together six schools that truly share common athletics aspirations and philosophies."

Athletics directors of the six institutions will meet to develop detailed conference plans, policies and schedules. One policy already agreed upon, however, is that any future expansion of the conference will require approval of two-thirds of the membership.

Bowl committee exempt from U.S. tax, IRS rules

A postseason football bowl committee, even though its principal purpose is not charitable or educational, is entitled to the same Federal income-tax exemption permitted for charitable and educational organizations, according to a recently published ruling by the Internal Revenue Service.

The bowl committee, which was not identified in the ruling, sponsors an NCAA-sanctioned postseason football game and derives its income from ticket sales, radio and television rights, corporate sponsorship, and concessions.

Principal expenses include promotion and operation of the bowl game, plus certain expenses (nine percent of revenues) for social events connected with the game. Net proceeds, after payment of the major portion of the revenues to the participating institutions, are turned over to local charities.

The committee's governing board apparently is selected by a local community business organization.

Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code grants tax-exempt status to various nonprofit organizations, including one organized and operated "to foster national and international amateur sports competition" as long as the organization does not provide athletics facilities or equipment.

Inclusion of amateur sports-promotion organizations in section 501(c)(3) first occurred in 1976 and was designed by Congress principally to benefit national governing bodies recognized by the U.S. Olympic Committee. The facilities-or-equipment limitation was added by Congress essentially to deny the exemption to "casual" or "recreational" groups such as private country clubs.

The facilities-or-equipment limitation turned out to pose a serious problem for several national governing bodies intending to provide training facilities; and in 1982, section 501 was amended to add a new subsection (j), in effect eliminating the limitation for "qualified" amateur sports organizations, that is, those that foster national or international sports competition if such organizations "primarily conduct national or international sports competition or support and develop amateur athletes for such competition, according to the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C.

In its recently published ruling, the IRS found that although the bowl committee is neither charitable nor educational in character, its primary purpose "is the conduct of a national athletic competition," and it therefore is qualified under section 501(j) for tax-exempt status.

The ruling, issued as a general counsel memorandum, rejects contentions that the committee is operated primarily for the benefit of the local business community rather than for fostering conduct of sports competition and that the social activities connected with the game were more than incidental to the committee's primary income.

Just trying to score can be a chore for Lady Cajun foes

Back-to-back perfect games were pitched for the University of Southwestern Louisiana women's softball team March 28 by juniors Cathy McAllister and Stefni Whitton.

McAllister struck out 10 Southeastern Louisiana University batters the way to a 5-0 victory, and Whitton preceded her with 14 "Ks" in a 7-0, first-game triumph. Whitton's was her third perfect game of the season and lowered her earned-run average to 0.47. McAllister's ERA shriveled to 0.67.

And neither woman is new to the softball spotlight.

As sophomores, McAllister and Whitton earned victories over top-five teams. A dietetics major from Slidell, Louisiana, McAllister was on the mound when the Lady Cajuns took No. 4 Louisiana Tech University, 2-1. Whitton, an accounting major from Friendswood, Texas, shut out Texas A&M University (1-0), which was ranked fourth in the nation when the teams met.

George Lott teamed with the legendary J. F. Hennessy to capture the 1928 U.S. Lawn Tennis Championships doubles title—his first major victory. A year later, he graduated from the University of Chicago.

Now, at age 82, Lott must be considered the dean of collegiate coaching—regardless of sport. He is beginning his 20th season as tennis coach at DePaul University.

Talk about coaching from experience. Consider some of Lott's on-court accomplishments:

- He won the 1924 Canadian singles and doubles titles.
- He won the Bermuda singles and doubles crowns in 1925 and 1927.
- He was a member of the Wimbledon-champion doubles teams in 1931 and 1934.
- He was a member of Davis Cup doubles teams that were undefeated for seven years (1928 through 1935).

Before accepting the DePaul coaching job in 1969, Lott served as an instructor in Chicago-area clubs through four decades. In the past five years alone, his Blue Demon teams have compiled a 56-43-1 record.

Lott is a member of the Helms Athletic Foundation Hall of Fame, the International Tennis Foundation Hall of Fame, the Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame and the DePaul athletics hall of fame.

Is there another college coach still active in his or her sport with a similar record?

Jes Hutson was right about the Thiel College men's basketball players he coached this season.

In a feature story on the program published in the January 25, 1989, issue of The NCAA News, Hutson commented on a team that had won only one of its first 12 games and, due to injuries and other circumstances, saw its roster dwindle to seven players.

"There have been many times this season when these guys could have let up and just given up," Hutson said at the time, "but they never did. And they won't... they've shown me that."

Little did Hutson know the real proof was yet to come.

After dropping five more games to stand 1-16 overall, the Tomcats won five of their last seven games to finish 6-18—three times the number of victories Thiel recorded a year ago.

"We could have folded," Hutson said, in discussing the final weeks of the campaign. "But our kids played hard."

George W. Schubert, dean of university college and summer sessions and faculty athletics representative at the University of North Dakota, and colleague Monty E. Nielsen, North Dakota's director of admissions and records and adjunct assistant professor of higher education, have been selected to present an academic paper at the 50th anniversary celebration of the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York, June 8-9. Oneonta State University College is the sponsoring academic institution.

Under the general theme of "Baseball and the American Culture," Schubert and Nielsen are preparing a paper titled "An Examination of Professional Baseball Players as Heroes and Role Models."

In addition to academic research, the authors are surveying approximately 100 current and former major leaguers on the topic of pro baseball players as role models. Survey results will be presented in conjunction with the paper.

Eighteen papers have been selected for presentation that reflect scholarly interpretation of baseball's place in the past, present and future of America.

Johnson C. Smith University, in cooperation with the Mecklenburg County (North Carolina) Health Department and the YMCA, is hosting the 1989 Classic Teen Role-Model All-Star Basketball Game April 11.

Following an all-star contest for 13-to-15-year-olds, a team of 16-19-year-olds will square off against the role-model all-stars. The latter's roster include Robert L. Albright, Johnson Smith president; Johnson Smith basketball coach Steve Joyner; Sam Killman, chief of police in Charlotte, North Carolina; Kevin Billerman and Melvin Watkins, basketball coaches at the University of North Carolina, Charlotte, and Mel Watt, an attorney and former U.S. senator.

Information about local employment opportunities also will be available.

eight percent are black.

However, black and nonblack football and basketball players are recruited by about the same number of institutions and are equally likely to receive athletics grants-in-aid, the report states.

Blacks in general, both athletes and nonathletes, are from lower socioeconomic backgrounds than are non-Blacks: 49 percent of black football and basketball players, 35 percent of Blacks in other sports and 44 percent of black students in other campus activities rank in the lowest 25 percent in socioeconomic status. Only 13 percent of nonblack football and basketball players are in that lowest quartile.

Academic preparation

Black students, both athletes and nonathletes, are not as well-prepared for college studies as are non-Blacks, based on both high school grade-point average and test scores. In terms of academic preparation, 58 percent of black football and basketball players score in the lowest quartile on the SAT (a score of 752 or below based on this sample), compared to 19 percent of nonblack players in those sports. In other sports, 35 percent of the Blacks score in the lowest quartile, as do 27 percent of black students in other campus activities.

In high school grade-point averages, 61 percent of black football and basketball players rank in the lowest quartile (a B-minus or below), while only 31 percent of nonblack players are so ranked. Among other black student-athletes, 35 percent are in the lowest quartile, as are 44 percent of the Blacks in other campus activities.

Once in college, the grade-point averages earned by black student-athletes are relatively comparable at both predominantly white institutions and predominantly black institutions. At the former, black football and basketball players have a cumulative GPA of 2.160 (4.000 scale); at the latter, 2.210. The non-black football and basketball group has a 2.480, and other Blacks in general at the predominantly white colleges post about a 2.300.

Black athletes and black nonathletes are comparable in their view that it is difficult for them to earn the grades they feel they are capable of receiving. They also are comparable in their view that it is difficult for them to earn the grades they feel they are capable of receiving.

Division I programs.

For example, while 77 percent of the oldest respondents said the schools overemphasize sports, that figure fell to 61 percent of the youngest and 52 percent of Blacks. While 39 percent of Blacks said academic standards for athletes are high enough, that figure fell to 30 percent of the youngest group and 18 percent of the oldest.

In the poll, nearly three-quarters said a "C" average should be required for a student to play sports, and an additional 20 percent favored even higher grades.

There was, however, a significant lack of faith in the grading process itself: Half of the respondents called it common practice for professors to give student-athletes higher grades than they deserve so they can continue to play. Only 32 percent doubted that occurs, while 18 percent said they were unsure.

Time demands

The time demands of football and basketball affect class-attendance patterns of black football and Black football and basketball players actually spend a few hours a week (28) less in their sports than do Division I football and basketball players in general—about three hours a week less than their non-black teammates.

week preparing for class than do Blacks in predominantly white institutions.

Personal factors

Black student-athletes at predominantly white institutions report some feelings of racial isolation (51 percent), but two-thirds report no incidents of racial discrimination. They are more likely than their nonblack teammates, however, to report instances of anxiety and depression.

Blacks and non-Blacks in football and basketball are similar in the importance they place on earning a college degree and in their choice of majors. The most popular major for both is business, and few black or nonblack football and basketball players major in physical education.

In terms of life goals—career success, job security, financial success, happiness, health, marriage—Blacks in football and basketball place a higher value on those aspects than any of the other comparison groups—nonblack teammates, Blacks in other activities and black students in general.

But 44 percent of the Blacks in football and basketball at predominantly white institutions (and 36 percent at predominantly black institutions) expect to become professional athletes, compared to 20 percent of their nonblack teammates.

The eight-page executive summary of the report will be published in next week's issue of The NCAA News. Single copies of the entire 82-page report are available on written request from NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Final Four builds interest in Seton Hall

Whether Seton Hall University's men's basketball team is national champion or not, university officials think the basketball Pirates already are tops in recruiting students.

Since making the Final Four, the school has been visited by CBS-TV, USA Today, Sports Illustrated and numerous newspapers, Charles R. Dees Jr., vice-chancellor for university affairs, said March 30.

Applications for admission increased 25 percent last year when Seton Hall made its first NCAA appearance. This year, applications have increased 17 percent over 1988, Dees said.

"I wouldn't say the basketball team's the only reason, but it's definitely part of the equation," Dees said. "It gives us name recognition more than anything."

The Catholic university of 4,200 full-time undergraduates is aiming for a peak of 5,000 students who score at least 1,000 of a possible 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Dees said.

There are about 5,000 part-time and full-time graduate students at the university, including 1,300 law students.

In recent years, Seton Hall has focused on attracting students from outside New Jersey, which has made the national exposure of the Final Four doubly effective, Dees said.

Monsignor John J. Petillo, Seton Hall chancellor, said the tournament excited students as well as prospective students.

"There was excitement like I've never felt around here before," Petillo said. "It reaffirms and heightens our students' awareness of just how much we have around here."

Baseball coaches to select high school player of year

A national high school senior player of the year will be selected and honored by the American Baseball Coaches Association and Bubblicious chewing gum beginning with the 1989 season.

The ABCA's High School All-American and Coach of the Year Committee will select senior players of the year for the eight districts. The national player of the year then will be selected from the eight district winners.

"This is an exciting awards program for our high schools," said Ray Howard, the high school representative on the ABCA Executive Committee and chair of the High School All-American and Coach of the Year Committee.

The eight district and national players of the year will be selected by the committee in August. The district winners will be announced with the all-America teams, but the national player of the year will not be announced until a press luncheon in late August.

As part of the program, Bubblicious/Warner-Lambert will pay tribute to the high school coaching members of the ABCA with a reception after the high school division meeting at the association's January Convention.

With the high school program, the ABCA now has player-of-the-year awards for all divisions of the association.

"This continues our commitment to recognize the excellence in coaching and playing in each of our divisions," said Duane Banks, ABCA president.

Prominent coaches on clinic roster

Basketball coaches from several NCAA member institutions participated in a clinic April 1 that was televised live by means of a coast-to-coast satellite hookup from Seattle.

Sponsored by Converse, the second annual "TeleClinic" was seen by high school coaches and players who viewed the 2½-hour program on hundreds of local cable channels across the nation. Viewers with satellite dishes also were able to view the clinic.

Among the coaches who appeared in the clinic were Dean Smith, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Jody Conradt, University of Texas, Austin; Nolan Richardson, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Jim Harrick, University of California, Los Angeles, and Denny Crum, University of Louisville. Also participating was Doug Semenic, basketball weight/strength coordinator at Louisville.

The clinic focused on training and off-season conditioning for male and female basketball players.

The program was designed as "an intensive teaching session where the strategy of the game and the science of conditioning will come together to show how great players are made, not born," said producer Larry Holman.

WHAT QUENCHES A FULL COURT THIRST?

AP selects Knight as top coach

Indiana's Bobby Knight has been named The Associated Press coach of the year.

Indiana was 27-8 this season with a record ninth Big Ten Conference championship. He became this year one of 27 Division I coaches with more than 500 victories, running his 24-year record at Army and Indiana to 514-187.

The Hoosiers, who lost three of last season's top four scorers, reached the round of 16 in the NCAA tournament; and Knight accepted his third AP coach trophy.

"I had a group that worked hard, and pulled together and for one another," he said. "They did what they did as a team, and this is a team award more than anything else. I accept it in behalf of the team. I'm pleased that it is recognized in that way."

Knight was an easy winner of the coach honor, receiving 445½ votes of 878 cast in a nationwide poll of sportswriters and broadcasters, beating Seton Hall's P. J. Carlesimo, who had 107, and Lute Olson of Arizona, who finished with 84. Knight previously won the AP

Volleyball association names coaches

U.S. Volleyball Association officials have announced the appointment of coaching staffs for the 1989 U.S. teams that will compete in the World University Games and for teams in this summer's U.S. Olympic Festival.

Arnie Ball, men's coach at Indiana University-Purdue University, Fort Wayne, has been named head coach of the U.S. World University Games men's team. Assisting him will be Brad Saindon of the University of Colorado and Pepperdine University's Jim McGlaughlin.

Coaching the U.S. women's team that will compete during the August 19-30 games in Sao Paulo, Brazil, will be Terry Pittet of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. Assistant coaches are Portland State University's Jeff Mozzochi and Kathy DeBoer of the University of Kentucky.

Following are college coaches who have received men's-team coaching appointments for the 1989 Olympic Festival, which is set for July 21-30 in Oklahoma City:

East: Head coach — Pete Hanson, Ohio State University; assistant — Jon Roberts, Rutgers University, Newark.

West: Head coach — Ken Stanley, Pierce Community College.

South: Head coach — Miles Pabst, University of Oklahoma.

North: Head coach — Rod Wilde, Pepperdine University.

College coaches who have received women's-team coaching assignments for the Olympic Festival include:

East: Head coach — Joe Segula, University of Pennsylvania; assistant — Patricia Kendrick, George Mason University.

West: Head coach — Frank Lavisha, Regis College (Colorado); assistant — Sue Hegerle, San Diego State University.

South: Head coach — Lisa Love, University of Texas, Arlington; assistant — Steve Lowe, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

North: Head coach — John Cook, University of Nebraska, Lincoln; assistant — Karen Guthmiller, Illinois Central College.

award in 1974-75 and 1975-76, when he won the first of his three national championships at Indiana.

"If I got an award from the NRA or the fly fishermen or the PGA, well, I've got a lot of friends in those groups who maybe think I'm a good guy," he said. "For me to get an award from the press, that means a lot. I know there was no favoritism shown in this. I say that facetiously," Knight said.

Elliott named AP's player of year

Sean Elliott had just about decided not to play for Arizona in his senior year and go for the pros instead.

A change of heart kept him with the Wildcats—to their common benefit. Arizona finished No. 1 in the final regular-season rankings, and Elliott was named Associated Press college player of the year March 31.

The 6-foot-8 forward received 288 of 879 votes in the nationwide balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters and easily outdistanced Duke's Danny Ferry, 208 votes, for the Rupp Trophy, which is presented by the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky.

Ferry, who led Duke to its third Final Four in four years, was followed by Louisiana State freshman Chris Jackson with 120 votes, Oklahoma's Stacey King with 96 and Syracuse's Sherman Douglas with 53.

Ferry improved one position from last year's voting, while Elliott jumped from sixth to first. Jackson's finish was the highest ever by a freshman.

"I'm really amazed at this kind of stuff happening to me," Elliott said when he received the trophy along with a certificate making him a Kentucky Colonel. "It's all unreal when I really think about it."

Elliott's play this season was unreal as far as opponents were concerned. He averaged 22.3 points, 7.4 rebounds and 4.1 assists per game as the Wildcats advanced to the regional semifinals in pursuit of a repeat trip to the Final Four.

"I was really close to leaving. I was sure for a while that I was going to leave," said Elliott, an all-America as a junior and senior, the 51st player to repeat with the honor. "Everything came together and then weighed the advantages of leaving against staying."

Arizona coach Lute Olson described Elliott as "an outstanding basketball player but a finer young man."

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee:

Outside competition

1. Coaches and student-athletes from same institution involved on same team outside of the playing and practice season. Reviewed the application of the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 17.02.12, 17.1.4 and 17.23.2, a Legislative Assistance column (reference: LA 88-22.2), and a previous committee interpretation (reference: LIC 87-16.7) to a situation in which an institution's coach and a student-athlete from the same institution are involved as player and coach on an outside team other than during the permissible playing and practice season. The committee:

a. Confirmed that a basketball coach and a basketball student-athlete from the same institution may participate in state or national multisport events sanctioned by the NCAA; further, no more than two student-athletes from the same institution may participate on the same team under these circumstances.

b. Confirmed that a coach and a student-athlete from the same institution may participate in sports other than basketball in state or national multisport events sanctioned by the NCAA; further, that for certain sports subject to season segment limitations per Bylaw 17.1.4, a limit on the number of student-athletes with eligibility remaining who may practice or compete on an outside team applies (see "g" below).

c. Determined that a basketball coach and a basketball student-athlete from the same institution may participate on a sanctioned basketball foreign tour involving an outside or all-star team; further, that the limits of Bylaw 17.23.2 apply, and an institutional foreign tour would occur if more than two student-athletes participate on the same team under these circumstances.

d. Determined that a coach and a student-athlete from the same institution may participate in sports other than basketball in sanctioned foreign competition involving an outside or all-star team (e.g., a team sponsored by a conference or national sports governing body); further, that the limits of Bylaw 17.23.2 apply, and an institutional foreign tour in the sport would occur if more than the number of student-athletes specified in that bylaw participates on the same team under these circumstances.

e. Determined that a coach and a student-athlete from the same institution may participate in Olympic and national team development programs and competition (as a coach and participant, respectively); further, there are no limitations on the number of student-athletes from the same institution who may participate under these circumstances.

f. Determined that a coach (even if the coach is a participant in the competition) would not be included in the limitations of Bylaw 17.23.2 in "a" through "e" above, noting that these limitations relate only to student-athletes.

g. Determined that a student-athlete may not participate on a club team involving the member institution's coach outside of the institution's playing and practice season; further, no more than the following number of Division I student-athletes with eligibility remaining in the sport may practice or compete out of season on an outside amateur team in that sport: baseball — 4 (during the academic year), field hockey — 5, lacrosse — 5, soccer — 6 (all divisions), softball — 4, volleyball — 2, water polo — 4 (during the academic year).

Recommended that these interpretations be incorporated in the 1990-91 edition of the NCAA Manual and that the Council sponsor legislation at the 1990 NCAA Convention in this regard, if formal action by the membership concerning these issues is considered appropriate.

Convention Proposal No. 83

2. Contact restrictions. Reviewed 1989 Convention Proposal No. 83 amending Bylaw 13.1.5.2, which prohibits a member institution from contacting a prospective student-athlete prior to any athletics competition when the prospect is a participant therein during the day or days of the competition; determined that these provisions should extend to contacts with the parents of prospective student-athletes but recommended the Council delay the effective date of this interpretation until August 1, 1989, to complete the current recruiting season; also concluded (in response to a request for review from the NCAA Recruiting Committee) that these restrictions would prohibit a member institution's coach from contacting a prospective student-athlete prior to the student-athlete's participation in a contest on that calendar day even if such a contact occurs during the prospect's official or unofficial visit to the institution; referred the latter issue to the Recruiting Committee with a recommendation that it request the Council to sponsor legislation to change the application of the rule in reference to official visits; finally, asked the NCAA Legislative Review Committee to consider the issue of standardizing the definition of "contacts" throughout Bylaw 13.

Waiver for eligibility requirements

3. Criteria for approval of waivers for eligibility requirements. Determined that a member institution may initiate a request for a waiver of the provisions of Bylaw 14.9.2.2(a) [one-year residence requirement for a student who transfers for reasons of health] without supporting the request; noted that the Council has the authority to review the documentation from the institution to determine whether the student-athlete's request is valid.

Conference No. 5
March 16, 1989

Extra benefits

4. Health insurance for foreign student- athletes. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.1 and 15.2.1.1, and determined that a member institution would be permitted to provide the cost of health insurance for foreign student-athletes if such insurance is required for all foreign students (but not other members of the student body) in order to enroll, noting that such a required fee would be distinguished from the optional fees outlined in Bylaw 15.2.1.2.

Tryouts—camps and clinics

5. Professional tryout held on an institution's campus. Agreed that the provisions of Bylaws 13.02.8, 13.11.1, 13.11.3.1.3 and 13.12.1 and a previous committee interpretation (LIC 88-15.3) would preclude a professional baseball team from using an institution's facilities for a tryout camp in which prospective student-athletes participate if the institution's coaching staff or athletics representatives are involved in the arrangements for the camp.

Financial aid

6. Financial aid computations based on actual amount received by student-athlete.

Asked that the conference-contact program be utilized to determine the membership's current understanding of the staff interpretation of Bylaw 15.5.3 (limit on value of financial aid awards in equivalency sports), which states that in computing equivalencies, the numerator shall represent the actual cost of room, board and tuition that a student-athlete incurs and the denominator shall represent the sum total of the actual costs that the student-athlete could receive based on the student-athlete's individual room, board and tuition.

Transfer eligibility

7. A one-time transfer waiver and financial aid agreement signed by director of athletics (Divisions I and II). Agreed that the transfer waiver provisions of Bylaw 14.6.5.4.10 were not satisfied in a situation in which a student-athlete who transferred from one Division I institution to another previously had received athletically related financial assistance and the institution from which he transferred intended to renew it for the ensuing academic year; noted that the institution provided the student-athlete with timely notice of its intent to renew the financial assistance, but that the signature on the form was not that of the chair of the institution's regular committee or the agency for the awarding of financial aid to students generally or the chair's official designee; agreed that although its notification procedure was technically at fault, the institution had made a written commitment to the student-athlete for the renewal of athletics aid for the ensuing academic year and, therefore, the transfer waiver was not applicable.

Recruiting

8. Contact with prospects by individuals other than athletics department staff (Divisions I and II). Confirmed that the provisions of Bylaws 13.1.2 and 13.1.3.6 and a previous committee interpretation (reference: LIC 87-13.15) would preclude a member institution's academic counselors from conducting rules seminars with high school athletes if the counselors are not considered employees of the institution's athletics department;

mittee on Review and Planning, the Committee on Women's Athletics, the Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Exceptions, the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure, the Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics, and the Academic Requirements Committee.

In addition, it will hear status reports on the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues and the Special Committee on Cost Reduction.

The remainder of the Council's agenda is taken up with the routine but necessary business of the Association: interpretations, proposed legislation, Convention planning, other committee appointments, membership actions, review of Administrative Committee actions and a governmental-affairs report.

As the new NCAA president, Witte presides over meetings of the full Council, assisted by Secretary-Treasurer Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego. B. J. Skelton, Clemson University, will chair the Division I Steering Committee; Jerry M. Hughes, Central Missouri State University, chairs the Division II committee, and Alvin J. Van Wie, College of Wooster, chairs Division III.

Two players draw reprimand for play-off fighting

The NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee has reprimanded publicly two University of North Texas football student-athletes for an incident during the 1988 I-AA play-offs.

Rex Johnson and Sidney Bradford were reprimanded for their involvement in a fight that took place in North Texas' first-round contest against Marshall University.

"The committee cannot condone the type of behavior exhibited by these two young men," said Bernard F. Cooper, committee chair and director of athletics and recreational resources at Indiana State University.

"If Rex Johnson had not been a senior, he would have been disqualified from the next play-off game in which he would have had the opportunity to participate.

"The committee will not tolerate any acts of misconduct and will aggressively enforce the Association's rules and regulations regarding these matters," Cooper said.

Legislation

noted that the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.2.3-(a) provide an exception to this legislation for the institution's regular admissions program; referred this item to the Recruiting Committee for further consideration and possible development of proposed legislation to change the effect of this interpretation.

Printed recruiting aids

9. Playbooks sent to prospect after signing letter of intent (Divisions I and II) Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.3.1, and determined that in accordance with the general principles governing permissible recruiting materials, the provision of a playbook to a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent (or has been officially accepted for enrollment by a nonsubscribing member institution) would be permissible, inasmuch as it would not be considered a gift of a tangible recruiting aid under such circumstances; recommended that the provisions of Bylaw 13.3.1-(l) be revised (through interpretation or, if necessary, by amendment) to permit institutions to send prospective student-athletes (subsequent to the signing of the National Letter of Intent or official acceptance for enrollment) any necessary pre-enrollment information regarding orientation, conditioning, academics and practice activities.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than April 28, 1989.

Gonzaga baseball team plans tour of Soviet Union in June

Gonzaga University's baseball team will tour the Soviet Union for 10 days in June to play several games and conduct clinics.

The tour was made possible by David A. Sabey, a Gonzaga trustee and founder and president of Seattle's Sabey Corporation, during a recent business trip to the Soviet Union.

The team, coached by Steve Hertz, will arrive in Moscow June 1. The Bulldogs then will travel to Tbilisi to conduct clinics and play the Georgian national team. An exact itinerary has not been completed.

Sabey said, "It's an experience these young men will probably never forget, and it's my hope it will give a small segment of the population of both countries a better understanding of each other."

The Rev. Bernard Coughlin, Gonzaga president, said, "It is interesting that this trip comes at a time when Russia is opening up, and it provides Gonzaga University with an opportunity to reach out to another nation that has been so far removed from the West and from the Christian tradition of the West."

"I see this as more than going to the Soviet Union to play baseball. I see it as a marvelous opportunity for our staff and students to build bridges to our brothers and sisters in the Soviet Union."

Last year, Johns Hopkins University became the first U.S. college team to play baseball in the Soviet Union, and a team from the Soviet Union later paid a return visit to the Johns Hopkins campus.

Reports indicate the Soviet Union is taking more interest in baseball because it will be a recognized medal sport in the 1992 Summer Olympic Games. It was an exhibition sport in the 1984 Games in Los Angeles and the 1988 Games in Seoul.

Coach Hertz, in his 10th season at Gonzaga, said, "Our major premise will be to be good-will ambassadors and diplomats and show the caliber of baseball in the U.S. at the collegiate level. More specifically, it will give us an opportunity to showcase our program at Gonzaga."

Eastern grid teams to play in Ireland

Football teams from Rutgers University, New Brunswick, and the University of Pittsburgh will try their luck in the Emerald Isle Classic II in Dublin, Ireland, next November, the teams have announced.

The game will be played December 2 in place of a Rutgers home game scheduled November 4 at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford.

"We are as pleased as can be that the Irish people will have the opportunity to meet our student-athletes, coaches, staff, alumni and fans, and that they, in turn, will have the opportunity to discover the wonders of Ireland and its people," said Edward J. Bloustein, Rutgers president.

Brian Boru Co. is the founder and organizer of the event. The first game was played November 19, 1988, when 42,535 fans filled The Landsdowne Road stadium to see Boston College defeat Army, 38-24.
