Committee to study freshman ineligibility in basketball

The Committee on Basketball Issues has endorsed a tentative proposal to eliminate freshmen from Division I men's basketball competition, contingent upon a survey of coaches, athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives this summer.

As part of the proposal, the committee has suggested allowing student-athletes three seasons of eligibility, with a fourth season to be granted if the athlete is within 24 hours of graduation or is enrolled in a second undergraduate program or in graduate school. Although freshmen could not play, they would be allowed to practice with the team.

The committee, an ad hoc organization, was created in 1987 by the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee and the board of directors of the National Association of Basketball Coaches to study men's basketball issues as they relate to NCAA legislation.

Victor A. Bubas, committee chair and commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference, said, "There is a strong feeling among committee members and Division I basketball coaches that freshmen should not play."

"But we don't want to increase costs to a program by instituting a system in which freshmen are ineligible. We can't have freshman teams or coaching staffs.

"The big question," Bubas said, "is how is this to be accomplished without increasing costs?"

Discussions of freshman ineligibility in the past have prompted recommendations for increased grants-in-aid to offset the loss of freshmen to a team.

Bubas said a survey would be conducted during the summer to gather opinions from coaches, athletics directors and NCAA Convention delegates.

"By September (the committee is scheduled to meet September 6 in Chicago), we should be able to decide whether the proposal might be worthy of being presented to the 1990 Convention," Bubas said.

Bubas said the committee was aware of the far-reaching effects such a proposal could have in initial-eligibility standards, satisfactory-progress provisions, coaching-staff size and grants-in-aid limits, and it would make every effort to gather as much information as possible from various NCAA constituencies.

The committee's tentative proposal originated in discussions designed to examine ways to insure that student-athletes are provided every opportunity to become better adjusted academically and socially before engaging in intercollegiate competition.

A major component of the proposal requires that student-athletes earn their fourth season of competition, which, in turn, is expected to improve graduation rates.

Graduation rates are one of the main concerns of Division I men's coaches, according to Joseph R. Vancisin, executive director of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"Basically, the issues of grades and graduation rates have caught the attention of coaches and caused concerns about freshman eligibility," Vancisin said. "The coaches believe that there should be an adjustment period to college life for incoming freshmen.

"Coaches also feel that there are too many transfers in their programs, student-athletes leaving the team and school because of frustrations over grades, playing time or both," Vancisin said.

Because of increasing media exposure and the pressures associated with Division I basketball, committee members say there is a need to continue to develop legislation that specifically addresses the problems encountered by student-athletes.

Attending the April 27 meeting in Chicago were Tom Apke, head

College athletics hearings scheduled

Hearings on the general state of college athletics are scheduled this month in Congress by the House Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz is among the witnesses scheduled to testify during the hearings, which are scheduled in two parts. The first session, May 18, will be devoted to discussion of problems in college athletics, and a second session May 24 is intended to solicit possible solutions.

Schultz is scheduled to speak during the May 24 session.

The purpose of the hearings is to inform Congress and the public about a variety of issues in college athletics, said the subcommittee chair, Democratic Rep. Pat Williams of Montana, in interviews with The Chronicle of Higher Education and The Kansas City Times.

"Our purpose is to enlighten members of Congress," Williams told the Times. "I think much of the public thinks that athletics has become too important and has overshadowed academic life in higher education. Others believe athletics is indeed a major part of college life. We plan to listen to both sides."

Among the topics tentatively scheduled for discussion during the hearings are time demands on athletes, financial-aid policies, academic standards for freshman athletes, drug use and drug testing, and equality in financing of men's and women's athletics.

Although no specific legislation is expected to result from the hearings, Williams said testimony could increase the subcommittee's interest in making legislative proposals.

In addition to Schultz, scheduled witnesses include Robert H. Atwell, president of the American Council on Education; Harry Edwards, professor of sociology at the University of California, Berkeley; Richard Lapchick, director of the Center for the Study of Sports in Society at Northeastern University, and Frank Deford, former Sports Illustrated writer.

Also scheduled to testify are the three Congressional sponsors of the proposed Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act—Sen. Bill Bradley and Reps. Tom McMillen and Ed Towns. Their proposal would require schools to report the graduation rates of student-athletes to the government.

Other members of the subcommittee, which is part of the Committee on Education and Labor, are Democrats William Ford of Michigan, Major Owens and Nita Lowy of New York, Charles Hayes and Glenn Poshard of Illinois, Carl Perkins of Kentucky, Joseph Gaydos of Pennsylvania, and George Miller of California, and Republicans Tom Coleman of Missouri, William Goodling of Pennsylvania, Marge Roukema of New Jersey, Thomas Tauke of Iowa, Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin and Paul Henry of Michigan.

NCAA awards postgraduate scholarships to ethnic minorities

Postgraduate scholarships have been awarded through the NCAA's ethnic minority enhancement program for the second year. They were selected at the April 16 meeting of the NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics.

The program was established in 1987 to address the issue of providing opportunities for ethnic minorities at all levels of intercollegiate athletics.

The subcommittee was formed by the NCAA Council to focus specifically on opportunities in coaching, athletics administration, officiating, the NCAA committee structure and conference governance structures.

Postgraduate scholarships are available to ethnic minority graduates who have been accepted into an approved sports administration program (or a related program) at an accredited NCAA member institution.

Recipients must express an interest in preparing for a professional career in the administration of intercollegiate athletics. Postgraduate scholarships are valued at $6,000 and are awarded for only one year of postgraduate study.

In the first year of the program last year, scholarships were awarded for two years.

Following are the individuals (with institution awarding undergraduate degree and institution where postgraduate scholarship will be used) who have been approved to receive postgraduate scholarships through the ethnic minority enhancement program:

Valerie L. Brown (Stockton State College, Temple University)—Brown received a bachelor of arts degree in accounting in 1985 and has been working toward a master's degree in sports administration. She hopes eventually to become a director of athletics.

Jacqueline G. Campbell (University of Virginia, University of Massachusetts, Amherst)—Campbell received a four-year field hockey scholarship to Virginia, where she also was a three-year varsity basketball squad member. She graduated from the school of commerce with an emphasis in marketing and has been employed by the Public Broadcasting Service as tape library coordinator. She

NCAA Bylaw 13.12—sports camps and clinics

As plans are being made for summer sports camps and clinics, it is important to note that NCAA summer camp and clinic regulations differ between Division I and Divisions II and III. The following is a partial summary of the regulations that apply to Division I and Divisions II and III camps or clinics:

1. Definition and purpose/type.
  - a. Division I: An institution's sports camp or instructional clinic shall be any camp or clinic that meets any of the following criteria:
    - (1) Is operated by a member institution, either on or off its campus;
    - (2) Involves one or more of the institution's athletics department personnel on a full- or part-time basis, or
    - (3) Utilizes the institution's facilities.

An institution's sports camp or clinic shall involve activities designed to improve overall skills and general knowledge in the sport.

b. Divisions II and III: An institution's sports camp or instructional clinic shall be any camp or clinic that is owned or operated by a member institution or an employee of the member institution's athletics department, either on or off its campus. An institution's sports camp or clinic shall be one that:

- (1) Places special emphasis on a particular sport or sports and provides specialized instruction, practice or competition, or
- (2) Offers a diversified experience without emphasis on instruction, practice or competition in any particular sport.

Note: In Divisions II and III, an institution's football or basketball camp or clinic may be conducted only during the institution's summer vacation period unless such activities meet the provisions regarding developmental clinics set forth in Bylaw 13.11.3.1.

2. Prospective student-athletes who may attend.
  - In all three divisions, a member institution's sports camp or clinic shall be open to any and all entrants (limited only by number and age) except that a "senior prospect" shall not be permitted to enroll, participate or be employed at any such sports camp or clinic other than those developmental clinics outlined in Bylaw 13.11.3.1. A "senior prospect" may attend a camp or clinic, provided the prospect does not participate in any of its physical activities. For purposes of this legislation, a "senior prospect" is a prospective student-athlete who is eligible for admission to a member institution (or preparatory school or two-year college) or who has started classes for the senior year in high school.

3. Employment of and admission privileges for prospective student-athletes.

a. Division I: An institution, members of its staff or a representative of its athletics interests shall not employ or give free or reduced admission privileges to a high school, preparatory school or two-year college athletics award winner. For purposes of this rule, a high school includes the ninth grade level, regardless of whether the ninth grade is part of the junior high school system.

b. Divisions II and III: In operating a sports camp or clinic, an institution, members of its staff or a representative of its athletics interests shall not employ or give free or reduced admission privileges to any individual who has started classes for the ninth grade.

4. Employment of student-athletes.

a. Division I: In the sports of football, men's basketball and soccer, the employment of student-athletes is restricted by the provisions of Bylaws 13.12.2.1.2 and 13.12.2.1.3. In other Division I sports, any number of student-athletes may be employed in the institution's camp without violating the provisions regarding out-of-season practice. However, this legislation would not permit practice activities to be conducted under the guise of summer camp employment in those sports with out-of-season practice restrictions.

b. Divisions II and III: A member institution (or employees of its athletics department) may employ student-athletes as counselors in camps or clinics, subject to the following conditions:

(1) The student-athletes shall not participate in organized practice activities, and

(2) The member institution's director of athletics must give prior approval to the student-athlete's employment arrangement.

5. Employment of high school, college preparatory school or two-year college coaches.

a. Division I: A member institution may provide an honorarium or fee to a high school, preparatory school or two-year college coach who speaks or participates at an institutional camp or clinic, with the understanding that the member institution must be able to document that the honorarium or fee provided to the coach is commensurate with similar fees paid to other individuals for like services.

b. Divisions II and III: A member institution (or employees of its athletics department) may employ a high school, preparatory school or two-year college coach at its camp or clinic, provided:

(1) The coach receives compensation that is commensurate with the going rate for camp counselors of like teaching ability and camp experience, and

(2) The coach is not paid on the basis of the value the coach may have for the employer because of the coach's reputation or contact with prospective student-athletes.

Note: For Divisions I and II, the interaction during sports camps and clinics between prospects and those coaches appointed by the camp or clinic is not subject to the recruiting calendar restrictions. However, other Divisions I and II coaches wishing to attend the camp as observers must comply with appropriate recruiting contact and evaluation periods.

Finally, member institutions in all three divisions are reminded of the provisions of 13.12.2.2.3, which stipulate that a member institution may not compensate or reimburse a high school, preparatory school or two-year college coach based on the number of campers the coach sends to camp.

Wrestling committee recommends revised drug-test procedure

Wrestlers selected for random drug testing at NCAA championships would be notified the day before the tournament begins, according to a revised drug-testing procedure recommended by the NCAA Wrestling Committee.

Under the proposed procedure, wrestlers would be selected randomly and notified at the weigh-ins. They then would have an opportunity to furnish a specimen during a three-hour period the following morning, before the first matches of the tournament. If a wrestler cannot furnish a specimen before his first match, the existing specimen-collection schedule would be used.

The recommendation was made at the committee's annual meeting April 30 to May 4 in Palm Springs, California. It is subject to approval by the drug-testing subcommittee of the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

Notification and testing never have occurred before wrestling competition. Committee members believe the revised procedure is necessary to minimize problems caused by dehydration that result from wrestlers' efforts to "make weight."

The committee voted to postpone its decisions on automatic qualification and allocation of qualifiers. Previously, the committee has made these determinations at its annual meeting. By waiting until September 15, the committee will be able to take into account more accurate data on the number of institutions sponsoring wrestling.

In addition, the committee recommended that the penalty for late entries in the championships apply to all regional qualifying tournaments ($50 per team, $300 per athlete) because they are also NCAA-sponsored events. This recommendation is subject to the approval of the Association's Executive Committee, which will meet August 14-15.

The committee also recommended to the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports that NCAA research on weight control is not necessary at this time because universities are conducting sufficient research on this topic.

Division I championships

The committee made a recommendation regarding conferences that do not meet automatic-qualification standards because fewer than six member institutions sponsor wrestling. With Executive Committee approval, such conferences would be limited to 10 qualifying wrestlers in the Division I championships. They could receive more qualifiers if the current allocation formula so indicates.

Committee members will review the feasibility of eliminating the conference automatic-qualification format and allowing only regional qualifying.

The committee recommended the establishment of general-admission seating at the 1990 Division I Wrestling Championships. The intent is to provide reduced-price seating that would enable more students and families to attend the championships, thus generating more fan support.

The general-admission tickets would cost from $4 to $8 less than reserved seating, and an all-sessions general-admission ticket would offer additional savings. The committee also recommended raising the price of all-sessions reserved tickets from $60 to $65.

The recommendations regarding ticket prices require Executive Committee approval.

In addition, the committee voted to prohibit videotaping from the arena floor during the championships and affirmed Oklahoma City as the site of the 1992 tournament.

Divisions II and III championships

The committee recommended increasing the championships field in Division II from 140 to 160 and from 200 to 220 in Division III.

The committee also recommended that individuals selected to officiate these championships live within a 500-mile radius of the site. The current limit is 250 miles. The intent of the proposal is to enlarge the pool of prospective referees.

Both recommendations are subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

The committee also voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that the Division III Midwest regional qualifying tournament be eliminated. John Carroll University is joining the Ohio Athletic Conference and would qualify through the conference tournament, and the remaining independents would go to either the West or the East regional.

In addition, the committee proposed Ithaca College and Augustana College (Illinois) as the host institutions for the 1990 and 1991 Division III Wrestling Championships, respectively.

Rules changes

The committee voted to allow injured wrestlers to declare a "medical forfeit" and remain eligible for consolation rounds and tournament placement points. A forfeit for other than medical reasons, such as flagrant misconduct, still may eliminate the wrestler from further competition and result in the removal of placement points.

The intent of the rule is to prevent a legitimately injured wrestler from having to wrestle for one second and take a default to stay eligible for further competition. Among several other rule changes or modifications, the committee voted to:

- Penalize for unsportsmanlike conduct competitors who intentionally commit "distasteful acts" such as spitting (Rule 6-4).

- Make the criteria for determining whether wrestlers are in bounds the same for both takedowns and reversals. In both cases, points shall be awarded while either wrestler's supporting points are in bounds or "while at least the feet of the scoring wrestler are on the mat and in bounds" (Rules 2-12 and 2-15).

- Require tournament committees to designate the restricted zone that coaches are not allowed to leave during a match (Rule 4-11-a).

- Notify member institutions of a rule change that will require the name or initials of the institution to appear on uniforms. Teams will have five years to comply (Rule 1-10-c).

Those rules changes relating to the areas of financial impact, competitor safety and image of the sport are subject to the rules-oversight authority of the Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee May 1 approved implementation of a pilot officiating-improvement program for wrestling. The committee voted to begin the selection of a national coordinator of officials this fall.

Another recommendation, subject to Executive Committee approval, would limit conferences not meeting automatic-qualifying standards (fewer than six members sponsoring wrestling) to 10 individual qualifiers in the Division I championships.

Members to receive insurance information

Athletics directors at NCAA member institutions are receiving information packets describing the Association's insurance programs for the 1989-90 academic year.

The packets contain enrollment forms, quotation requests and other materials regarding the NCAA-sponsored programs, which offer a plan for lifetime catastrophic-injury coverage, a basic athletics-injury plan and an athletics-staff accident plan.

This is the fifth year that the Association has offered the plans to member institutions. Lincoln National Health and Casualty Insurance Company is the underwriting carrier for the plans, which are administered by National Sports Underwriters, Inc.

60 percent participation

During 1988-89, nearly 60 percent (454) of member institutions participated in the catastrophic-injury plan, and participation levels have increased each year since the program began in 1985. The plan provides lifetime benefits, with no overall policy maximum, to student-athletes who suffer catastrophic injuries while participating in intercollegiate sports.

Participation in the basic athletics-injury program also continues to grow, with more than 200 institutions participating in 1988-89. The plan originally was developed to coordinate with the NCAA's catastrophic-injury coverage.

"Many insurance companies shy away from this type of athletics-accident medical coverage because there is potential for a high volume of claims and it is difficult to underwrite this type of risk effectively," said Richard D. Hunter, NCAA director of operations. "The fact that the basic plan is on solid financial footing—still providing good, sound benefits—illustrates the quality of the program."

Basic plan

The basic plan covers injuries sustained by student-athletes, cheerleaders, student managers and student trainers while taking part in intercollegiate sports, both at home and while traveling. The policy provides medical and dental expenses for two years up to a maximum of $25,000. It also includes an accidental death and dismemberment benefit of $5,000.

Two optional benefits have been added to the basic package this year. Coverage may be provided for conditions relating specifically to athletics participation—such as tendonitis, shin splints or reinjuries—that normal medical insurance will not cover. Institutions also may get coverage for expenses incurred when a health-maintenance organization or preferred-provider organization facility denies coverage.

Regional network

Thomas F. Wilson, president of National Sports Underwriters, said a network of regional representatives has been developed to work with member institutions to tailor the basic plan to their needs.

"In the basic plan, we have the flexibility to design coverage for each institution's specific requirements. We can set benefit levels, establish deductibles and coordinate the plan with other coverage according to the institution's unique needs. Our representatives also can answer any questions about the catastrophic-injury and athletics-staff accident plans.

"Our intent is to provide personalized service to every institution. We will be glad to meet with trainers or any other person who handles injury claims at the institution."

National Sports Underwriters processes the claims at its Overland Park, Kansas, office. Its computerized service can provide institutions with detailed reports about their claims by sport, by athlete and by provider.

Wilson said regional representatives soon will be contacting every NCAA member institution to make sure that the information packet arrived and to answer questions.

Institutions interested in receiving further details about any of the three NCAA-sponsored plans should contact National Sports Underwriters at 9300 Metcalf Avenue, Suite 350, Overland Park, Kansas 66212 (telephone 800/621-2116).

Ex-infractions chair to address forum

Frank J. Remington, former chair of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, will speak during the Association's second career counseling panel forum, which is scheduled June 16 at Dallas' Hyatt Regency DFW.

Remington will discuss his experiences as a member of the Committee on Infractions and explain Sports Seminars, Inc., a company he has formed to offer training and assistance to sports agents and student-athletes interested in pursuing careers in professional sports.

"Successful representation of athletes is a marriage between professional competence and adherence to ethical duties," Remington said in a brochure on Sports Seminars, Inc., and the Institute for Representation of Athletes, a joint venture between SSI and the University of Wisconsin, Madison. "Without both, the marriage fails and the athlete suffers."

The Association's career counseling panel forum, which is being organized by the NCAA legislative services department, is the second of six to be held through 1991 as part of a three-year plan recently endorsed by the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee. The first forum was held last December in Chicago.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will speak at the Dallas forum on the Association's views regarding career counseling panels. NCAA legislation permits the establishment of such on-campus bodies to assist student-athletes in determining their options in professional sports and to provide information on player agents and related issues.

In addition to Schultz and Remington, representatives of Major League Baseball and the National Football League will participate in the June 16 forum to discuss issues related to careers in professional sports and their agent-certification programs.

Legislative services staff members will provide recommended guidelines for administering successful on-campus counseling panels.

A review of NCAA legislation regarding amateurism and professionalism will be provided, and a round-table discussion session will afford the opportunity for attendees who now serve on institutional career counseling panels to break into small groups and discuss relevant issues.

Those interested in attending the forum must register by using the form published on this page of the News. Member institutions' chief executive officers and career counseling panel members and any conference officials are encouraged to attend.

Full agendas for the forum and other written materials will be distributed at the Hyatt.

Those making hotel reservations must contact Diane Nixon at the NCAA national office (913/384-3220) by June 1. Travel and hotel accommodations are the responsibility of those attending.

Questions and requests for additional information on the forum should be directed to Richard J. Evrard, director of legislative services, or Richard C. Perko, legislative assistant, at the Association's national office.

True amateur still has outlet to international competition

By Nicholas Rodis

FIBA, the governing body for international basketball, recently voted to allow professionals to participate in the Olympic Games. Professionals in tennis, soccer and ice hockey were eligible to participate in the 1988 Olympic Games.

These sports are included in the programs of the World University Games; U.S. teams participating in the university games are composed of amateur athletes only.

In general, many people who are involved in the highest levels of international sports feel that the International Olympic Committee (IOC) wants open Olympic Games. The decision, however, on whether or not professional athletes are allowed to compete in international competition is determined by each

There have been many discussions over the years regarding the true identity of an amateur athlete.

What about the state-supported athletes in the Eastern Bloc? What about athletes playing for various club teams in many countries around the world who receive salaries?

Some people in other parts of the world feel that student-athletes in the United States who are on athletics scholarships are not true amateurs. Even though there have been many questions raised regarding athletes in these categories, the athletes have not been denied participation in international amateur sports competition.

What effect will the changes in the Olympic Games have on our athletes who participate in the World University Summer and Winter Games?

In my opinion, the United States Collegiate Sports Council will send student-athletes to the games who are properly registered, who are following a full-time course of study and who are amateurs.

The United States Collegiate Sports Council must certify each athlete who participates in the World University Games. This right is shared by every member of the International University Sports Federation, of which the U.S. Collegiate Sports Council is a member.

Even though an international sports federation permits professionals to compete, each national university sports federation can decide who will represent its country.

I see no reason why the U.S. council should not continue its policy of having nonprofessional student-athletes represent our country. Thus, athletes from the NCAA, NAIA and National Junior College Athletic Association will be given every opportunity to compete for positions on our teams without concern that professional athletes will be vying for the same positions.

There is no need to use professional athletes in the World University Games.

There are enough world-class athletes in our colleges and universities to have our country well-presented.

In the 1987 World University Games in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, the United States won more gold medals than any other nation.

We can continue to be as successful without the use of professionals.

I do not believe that foreign countries will send professionals to the games. The World University Games could be the last bastion of major international amateur sports competition.

Letter to the Editor

Speech didn't help basketball's image

To the Editor:

I wasn't present at his speech, but Jim Valvano's remarks as reported in the April 12 issue of The NCAA News can do little to improve either the image of college basketball or Mr. Valvano himself.

No one blames coaches exclusively if an athlete doesn't graduate in a reasonable time; but in many cases, the athletes wouldn't be in school at all if the coaches hadn't brought them in. Recent reports about the graduation rate of basketball players at North Carolina State hardly lend support to Mr. Valvano's argument.

In fact, listening to Mr. Valvano complain about academics is a little like listening to him complain about money. From reports that I have read, Mr. Valvano earns more in a year or two than the average faculty member earns in an entire lifetime.

It was a great pleasure to turn a few more pages of the News and read the sensible opinions of President Rawlings at the University of Iowa. Here is a university president who is making sensible proposals; I hope the rest of the Big Ten, and eventually all of college athletics, will listen to him.

Decisions needed soon on financial aid to athletes

By Gordon E. Howell

Current NCAA legislation and proposals in the area of financial aid have done little to fully address the myriad problems faced by colleges and universities.

This may be directly the result of the diverse range of member schools' costs, resources and objectives in intercollegiate athletics.

Proponents of strictly need-based athletics aid have not clearly proven that their idea is best for the individual athlete and for the institution to administer on that basis. On the other hand, the advocates of grant-in-aid programs for the athletically gifted have not provided adequate verification that cost-containment features are not needed or are not workable.

Soon, some very difficult and painful decisions will have to be made.

Tough questions pertaining to a college's financial ability to have a balanced, broad-based sports program will be asked. Taking athletics programs down to simply the minimum required for continued membership in the NCAA, or addressing the questions of equal opportunity for men and women, or funding for fewer sports but at higher levels—all have alarming possibilities.

Most athletics administrators are not completely familiar with the details, complexities and possibilities associated with the issue of financial aid for student-athletes. They are, however, closely attuned to the dynamics of recruiting, family financial needs and perceptions, and program demands for high-level competitive success.

Compromise is imminent.

Howell is athletics director at Rollins College.

Team sanctions for positive tests in drug program a prominent issue

Richard D. Schultz, executive director
NCAA

Myrtle Beach (South Carolina) Sun News

"One of the things the Executive Committee will be considering is whether or not the sanctions (for use of illegal drugs) should be team sanctions.

"There are no team sanctions now; but unless the Executive Committee presents something, there would automatically be team sanctions in January.

"There are some concerns about the fairness of that and whether the whole team should be penalized for the indiscretions of the individual. That's an issue that will get a lot of discussion between now and January (the next NCAA Convention)."

"This award (Walter Byers Postgraduate Scholarship) is like a summation of so many of the NCAA championships (Cavanaugh won six national titles in track and field). It's recognizing all of my efforts and all aspects of my life.

"The first time standing at the top of the victory stand (after winning an NCAA championship) is a feeling you never forget. But this award brings it all together.

"I wouldn't have been an NCAA champion so many times, nor would I have developed into the person I am today. I've had a lot of positive influences in my life (through attending Rice), and Victor Lopez (women's track and field coach) is one at the top."

"I believe that if they came out and made a law, or put in my contract that I'm not responsible for it, that we would never fire you if a kid was using an illegal substance, I wouldn't change my wanting to know. I feel a responsibility toward the kid.

"I think it's a tragic thing (the indictment of four former South Carolina coaches in an investigation of illegal steroid distribution). All I can do... is deal with what's here now."

"Look at the backgrounds of a lot of athletes playing pro basketball. Basketball has been a way to better yourself, to get yourself an education, to get out of your environment.

Opinions

"My mother worked hard to support us, but there were families all around us who were very bad off financially. I grew up in an area like that, and just being around that environment was enough motivation for me to get out.

"We (Blacks) understand that very few make it in the NBA. But being in the situations we come from, we have more desire and more determination to come out. It's not a matter of being a natural athlete or having natural ability. It's hard work."

Sweet has taken her school, and herself, into spotlight

By Hank Wesch
The San Diego Union

The small office is situated in a one-story building in a quiet corner of the University of California, San Diego, campus. Immediately behind Triton athletics director Judy Sweet, when she works at her desk, is a line of NCAA trophies, part of the bounty of eight Division III titles and 11 runner-up or third-place finishes by UCSD teams in the 1980s.

"There's a reason for them being there," Sweet says, smiling. "We don't have any trophy cases on campus, so some of them have wound up here."

The problem will be solved in time. A new student center, with some built-in trophy cases, is one of several construction projects under way at the La Jolla campus.

In 13 years under Sweet, UCSD has become a force in NCAA Division III athletics. And Sweet has become a person of power in the NCAA hierarchy. Not just in Division III—where athletics scholarships do not exist and the emphasis remains on student over athlete in the term student-athlete—but overall.

On January 11, Sweet was chosen secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, the organization's second-highest elected office. She is the first woman to hold that high a position and in two years could be a candidate for the NCAA presidency.

For Sweet, the road to her current position began in Milwaukee, where she was the valedictorian at John Marshall High, and continued through undergraduate work at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, during the tumultuous years of 1965-69 and graduation with honors. She taught and did graduate work at Tulane University, the University of Arizona and Kearny High in San Diego before joining the UCSD staff as physical education teacher and coed volleyball coach in 1974.

Appointed an assistant athletics director, Sweet succeeded Howard Hunt when he became chair of the physical education department. In so doing, Sweet became one of the first women to direct an athletics department with both men's and women's programs.

Sweet has held positions with the NCAA since 1981, been a member of its Executive Committee since 1983 and served a two-year term as Division III vice-president before being elected secretary-treasurer.

Sweet recently agreed to an exclusive interview, excerpts of which follow.

First of all, could you define what your duties are as secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and what you consider to be your overall role in the organization?

There are duties defined in the NCAA Manual, and then there are responsibilities that are implied. It's interesting that the president's duties are defined with one sentence, and the secretary-treasurer's take eight sentences.

I serve as a member of the NCAA Council, which is the legislative arm of the NCAA. I serve as a member of the Executive Committee, which is the financial arm of the Association. I chair the Budget Subcommittee, a seven-person group that makes recommendations to the Executive Committee on the operating budget for the year. And I also chair the NCAA Staff Evaluation Subcommittee.

There are also "duties as assigned," which appears on a lot of job descriptions. Those mainly consist of standing committees with specific, defined responsibilities given to the secretary-treasurer. I also serve on the Administrative Committee, which consists of the five officers and the executive director, and have ongoing committee assignments (that) are not as a result of being secretary-treasurer—the minority-opportunities committee and the Special Committee to Review the Membership Structure.

How large is the NCAA budget? Do you anticipate any major changes in the apportionment of it, and how much influence are you, personally, likely to have on it?

The budget is approximately $80 million. The budget total ties in directly with a three-year basketball television contract that was negotiated last year. So, I would guess that the figures we will be working with when the Budget Subcommittee meets this July would be very similar to this year's budget. The subcommittee's recommendations go forward to the Executive Committee, which has an operating year pretty much of September through June to coincide with the academic year.

I have served on the Budget Subcommittee in the past, and as a member of the Executive Committee, part of our responsibilities was to review the recommendations of the subcommittee. But I haven't been directly responsible for making the initial recommendation, as I will this time.

Is this a new experience for you?

It's an extension of the experiences that I've had previously, through both my role at UCSD and my involvement at the NCAA. I have a sense of the operations of the organization. My position as secretary-treasurer will allow me to have a more hands-on experience and to become more involved in the actual recommendations that go forward to the bodies that make the decisions. Earlier, I was part of the bodies that were making the decisions. Now I'll be more in a position of making the recommendations.

Through your high school and college years, teaching years and even 13 years ago when you became athletics director at UCSD, did you ever envision yourself rising to your present position in the NCAA hierarchy?

I would really have had to be dreaming in order to envision the kinds of opportunities that I've been lucky enough to enjoy over the last eight years. There just wasn't much of an avenue for those kinds of experiences for women before then.

When I was at the University of Wisconsin, there weren't any athletics programs for women like we have today. What we had was the Women's Recreation Association (WRA), and by choosing the word "recreation," it gives you a sense of the overall philosophy. I served as president of the WRA and also president of what was called the nately, my timing has been very good for taking advantage of some administrative opportunities that are now opening up for girls and women.

As recently as last year, if you had asked me if I would have been privileged enough to serve as secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, I would have had to answer "no." I think that's a strong statement as to the progress that has been made in a short time, and I'm well aware that the kinds of opportunities I'm enjoying right now weren't there even a few years ago.

What in your opinion are the top three issues or problems facing the NCAA now?

Probably the first one is misunderstanding of what the NCAA is and how the NCAA operates.

I think (executive director) Dick Schultz has done a tremendous job in getting the word out and trying to help people understand that the NCAA is not an office in Shawnee Mission, Kansas, that makes the decisions for college athletics. Rather, the NCAA is 800 member institutions making decisions

"My timing was off for becoming a competitive athlete; but fortunately, my timing has been very good for taking advantage of some administrative opportunities that are now opening up for girls and women."

Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women. The thrust of both of those organizations was more toward intramural and recreation experiences than competitive experiences. So any competitive activity that I was involved in, for the most part, came about through community programs I chose to participate in. We might practice once a week, and we might compete against another institution once or twice during the course of the year.

It wasn't until 1972 that most collegiate institutions made somewhat of a commitment to providing athletics experiences for women on their campuses and not until 1981 that the NCAA started sponsoring championships for women.

My timing was off for becoming a competitive athlete; but fortunately, through a very well-defined legislative process.

But I think there's a need to improve communication at all levels, even within the 800 member institutions. There's a need to know how things happen and how people can get involved in making things happen. I think there's been significant progress over the past few years. I've seen dramatic changes since I first became involved in the organization in 1981 to where we are right now.

A second problematic area is finances for intercollegiate athletics at all levels. It's obviously more dramatic in Division I because you're talking about larger budgets and larger expenses, but the problem is by no means limited to Division I.

There was a committee recently formed on cost containment that will try to address ways for institutions to make their intercollegiate athletics programs more cost-efficient.

For example, one of the areas that I've heard discussed that would mean significant savings, primarily for Division I and maybe Division II as well, is to look at the recruiting process off campus.

Is there a way that everyone could make a commitment to limiting or changing off-campus recruiting that would ultimately result in significant cost savings while hopefully not resulting in major problems or setbacks for the programs as they exist today?

Another area the cost-containment committee will be looking at is the way athletics scholarships are awarded.

These really are just discussions, and there are lots of varying viewpoints. But there are some individuals who are advocating that in Division I, the institutions can no longer, and in the future will no longer be able to, afford to give all their participants scholarships based on currently existing criteria—where if you're a talented athlete, regardless of need, you are eligible for an athletics scholarship.

The third area that I see as a problem is integrity—integrity at all levels.

Unfortunately, we read and hear about all the problems in collegiate athletics when there are a lot of positive things that are happening. The majority of the things that are happening are positive, but that's not the message that is sent out to the public.

When student-athletes are involved in service projects for the community or are excelling in the classroom, you don't hear about those things. When student-athletes are involved with drug problems or problems with the law, or officials are found to be bending the rules to gain advantage, you hear about them in great detail.

This is not to say there aren't problems out there. We all know there are. But we spend too much time focusing on the problems and not enough time focusing on the solutions or on the positive things that already are in place.

Penn State coaches trace progress in women's athletics

By M. J. Haverbeck

Five Pennsylvania State University coaches, all winners of national championships as undergraduates, know how far today's successful women's athletics programs have come. They are especially eager to pass on that message during Penn State's year of celebrating the 25th anniversary of its women's intercollegiate program.

"There was nowhere near the financial support we have today," said women's gymnastics coach Judy Avener, a three-time national champion.

Avener was a member of national-champion gymnastics teams in 1969, 1971 and 1972 at Springfield College. "There were no scholarships. We brought our own special uniforms and drove to meets in station wagons. The farthest trip we took was to Utah, and we raised our own money to go there."

Avener maintained her interest in gymnastics after graduation, eventually joining the Penn State staff as an assistant. She was named Penn State's head coach in 1974 and her teams won national championships in 1978 and 1980.

Penn State lacrosse coach Sue Delaney-Scheetz in 1969 helped the West Chester University of Pennsylvania basketball team win the first-ever collegiate women's title. The tournament was an invitational affair featuring 16 teams.

"I don't think any of us realized what we were a part of," Delaney-Scheetz notes. "Here we were in our long, gold tunics seeing teams that played in silk shorts. As players, we arranged housing for the visiting teams and even produced the programs. It was amazing to see the crowd. The gym was filled and packed. I remember our athletics director saying he never thought the idea would go over."

Delaney-Scheetz joined the Penn State staff as an assistant in field hockey and lacrosse in 1982. Now head of the women's lacrosse program, she has taken Penn State to the national final three straight years, winning an NCAA Division I championship in 1987.

Penn State women's track coach Teri Jordan, the fastest collegiate woman miler in the nation as a Kansas State University freshman in 1972, survived threats and rejections to become an outstanding distance runner.

"I had bottles thrown at me because I was a female runner, and I was told I couldn't run a marathon." In 1973, Jordan would run the fourth fastest marathon in the world.

"At one race, they were not pleased that I was a girl instead of a guy." Jordan's first name confused race organizers, who didn't foresee that it belonged to a 5-3 woman who also would run a world-record time in the 10-mile event in 1973.

Jordan moved to California to compete with the San Jose Cinders-girls for two years but returned to Kansas State to complete her undergraduate degree in 1976 on an academic scholarship. She was the head coach at the University of Kansas four years and an assistant at the University of Texas, Austin, before taking over Penn State's program in 1984.

"The people who ran back then definitely wanted to do it, despite social pressures. In my first national college championship race, I wore a basketball uniform. There was no women's team; therefore, no uniform. The next year, we did have a team, and we went to California so I could defend my title in the mile. We had trouble finding a place to stay in Utah that would allow female athletes; so, two nights before we ran, we slept on the floor of a church."

When women's basketball coach Rene Portland and her Immaculata College teammates dominated the world of women's collegiate basketball, winning national championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974, they did so while paying for their own meals and washing their own sneakers.

"We washed our sneakers because they got dirty and the nuns had their own image of us," Portland remembers about the small Catholic school that was the first to make women's basketball visible nationally. "Our uniforms were tunics; when we were on the road, we didn't wash them, because they were wool. We just hung them out to air.

"We slept four to a room and went standby on a plane to nationals. They only had room for nine of us on the plane, so the rest stayed home. The nuns were famous for making sure we did our school work. They would tell Cathy (coach Cathy Rush) that if the paper or test wasn't on their desk that day not to plan on having us in the game that night."

Portland stayed at Immaculata as Rush's assistant for a year, then held head coaching jobs at St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania) and the University of Colorado before her appointment in 1980 at Penn State.

Penn State field hockey coach Charlene Morett Newman was in high school in the early 1970s. She was inspired by athletes like Portland. "I saw her play," Newman says, "and I was considering Immaculata because basketball was my favorite sport, but I was really impressed by Penn State. I knew I could come here and be a normal student, and I also liked the way the school treated its women athletes."

Newman was a scholarship athlete for the Lady Lions, excelling in field hockey and lacrosse. She helped Penn State win national lacrosse championships in 1979 and 1980. "I wrote a letter to a friend during my freshman year telling her how I couldn't believe what was here—things like travel bags and meal money. Some of the teams we played in those days came up here on school buses and ate bag lunches."

Newman continued to play field hockey after graduation, making Olympic teams in 1980 and 1984. She was an assistant at her alma mater and at Old Dominion University before her appointment as a head coach at Boston College. She returned to Penn State to take over from her former coach, Gillian Ratray, in 1987.

Women's sports have come a long way since the 1970s, when Federal legislation opened the door to equal funding and athletics grants. However, Penn State's Della Durant, who is retiring as assistant athletics director, believes women still have much to accomplish.

"Read this," she says, handing over a copy of a newspaper story that points out the difference in revenue returned to schools participating in the 1989 NCAA basketball championships. Men's teams need only to make the first round to receive $250,000. Women's teams earned just $30,000 by advancing to the semifinals in Tacoma, Washington.

"We need to promote, with capital letters, women's sports—to increase the awareness of the public," she said. "We need to be in a position to earn greater revenue. We are still growing. When you think about it, our women are 25 years old and our football team is over 100 years old."

Durant was the coordinator of the women's varsity program at Penn State when it was launched in 1964-65. For five years, she served on the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women executive board; now, she is a member of the NCAA Council and the Eligibility Committee. She has watched women's sport grow from a part-time club activity to its present status, but she is worried about finances.

"To keep our broad-based program (Penn State has 28 varsity sports, 13 for women) and maintain excellence in all categories of sports, there will be a few adjustments we will have to make.

"I'm expecting an increase in the cost of education, travel and related expenses, so there may be decreased schedules. We have to increase grants to those (student-athletes) not receiving 100 percent NCAA allocation.

"In Division I programs, athletes not on aid are finding it difficult to maintain jobs and earn money to pay for their education.

"I'd suggest that we endow scholarships and coaching positions, and

But as an NCAA official, what is your reaction to situations like the one at Oklahoma, where five football players were arrested on criminal charges in January and February?

It's very distressing to me for a number of reasons.

No. 1, I don't think that's representative of what's happening throughout the country in intercollegiate athletics. It may be representative of society and many of the problems that we have in society. Because the students are athletes, there is a relationship that is implied suggesting that because they're athletes, they are involved with these problematic areas. There are probably other students on the Oklahoma campus, and other campuses across the country, that are involved in similar circumstances that we never are made aware of.

No. 2, I'm distressed about the attitudes of the athletes in not recognizing their role and their responsibilities, as student-athletes, to be good citizens and positive role models because they are in the limelight. There seems to be a bit of arrogance and lack of remorse about their failure to use good judgment.

Someone along the line has missed the boat in giving them the necessary guidance that they really needed. And as young adults, they haven't assumed the responsibility that they rightfully should.

Unfortunately, from the time they are young and starting to be successful, good athletes are spoiled. They are continually praised and pampered to the point that their self-image can suggest they are immune from the restrictions and limitations placed on their peers.

Have there been instances of athletes at UCSD in trouble with the law that you've had to deal with?

You mean have we had any arrested, busted or whatever? Again, I'd like to say I think the focus needs to be on the positive and not the negative. But I would be less than truthful if I said there were no and how hard they work are any less than athletes at any Division I institution. The difference is that the pressures are different. We do like to win like anyone else, but we don't face financial consequences of not being successful. So we can participate for other reasons: for the joy of participation, for the opportunity of trying to be the best that you can be, for the opportunity to interact

"It's commonly thought that athletics are more low-key here, but I'm not sure that their (athletes') commitment and how hard they work is any less than athletes at any Division I institution. The difference is that the pressures are different. We do like to win like anyone else, but we don't face financial consequences of not being successful."

instances of misbehavior involving student-athletes here. Like most all students on this campus, our student-athletes do some things that in retrospect they probably wish they didn't do. But I don't think it's because they're athletes. I think it's because they are 18- to 21-year-olds who are experiencing new aspects of life. Most of our student-athletes keep in perspective why they're at UCSD, and that focus is to get a good education. Their experiences in athletics supplement their academic experiences, and they've made a commitment, both in the classroom and on the playing field.

It's commonly thought that athletics are more low-key here, but I'm not sure that their commitment with fellow teammates and classmates.

What are your personal feelings on the controversial issues, Proposal 42 and Proposition 48.

Let's go back to Prop. 48 first, since that's where it all began. I think that Prop. 48 was a very significant piece of legislation in several respects. No. 1, it gave a clear message to everyone in high school what was expected of them academically if they were to participate in college athletics. No. 2, it addressed the reality of who should be participating in collegiate athletics on our campuses and the necessity of not allowing young people to be placed in a collegiate environment unless they are adequately prepared for the academic challenges.

At this point, I don't personally have enough information to respond to the concerns that have been expressed regarding the cultural bias of the measurements we use to determine a young person's preparedness for college academics.

When Proposition 48 was passed, there was a commitment made to a five-year time period during which an evaluation of the standards, and a study of their impact, would be made. Proposal 42 was proposed before allowing that time period to take place, and that's why Proposal 42 has become a complication.

I also think that there was a lot of misunderstanding that went along with Proposal 42. I don't think that people really had an opportunity to discuss Proposal 42, and I would anticipate that at the next Conventions there will be some legislation that has to do with Proposal 42 since it doesn't go into effect until the fall of 1990.

When you first took over as athletics director 13 years ago, what did you hope to accomplish?

There were a lot of challenges. UCSD is a young university and was even younger then. We sponsored the same number of sports then that we currently sponsor, but it was a barebones budget compared to today. Most of the teams competed mainly on a local level, which meant a lot of games with nearby community colleges, and the others were affiliated with the NAIA. Most of the coaches could have been labeled as volunteers.

So there were challenges, to put it mildly.

Obviously, we've made a lot of progress since then. We've become affiliated with the NCAA. The facilities have been expanded. Coaches are no longer volunteers; salaries have been increased. And we've had some success on the playing field—a number of national championships, including two (men's soccer and women's volleyball) last year. And last year, we had 17 of 22 teams that either made the play-offs or were ranked in the top 20 nationally.

There are a lot of positive things that have happened, and it's because, collectively, people have worked hard to bring them about.

After the two-year term, is the progression from secretary-treasurer to NCAA president automatic, and is it your desire to be the first female president of the NCAA?

No, it's not automatic progression, although many people are under the impression it is, because that is what has generally happened. It's really too early for me to think about the presidency. In all honesty, when I accepted the nomination for secretary-treasurer, I considered it a two-year commitment only. There is potential that the secretary-treasurer moves up to the president's position, and in some ways that obviously would be very exciting and a wonderful opportunity.

But I'll evaluate in the next year and a half whether that is right for me. There are a lot of factors to be considered. A lot will depend on how my superiors feel about sharing me with the NCAA and how my staff feels about it.

Ask me again in a year and a half. I won't be quite as vague then.

UCLA wins volleyball crown

Top-ranked UCLA defeated No. 2 Stanford, 15-1, 15-13, 4-15, 15-12, April 6 to capture its 13th NCAA men's volleyball title in 20 years. UCLA is 20-0 in play-off matches on its home court, Pauley Pavilion, including a 7-0 mark in national-title matches.

In the final's first game, UCLA scored three points before Stanford got on the board; then the Bruins ran off the last 12 points to easily defeat the Cardinal, 15-1. Stanford, making its first-ever tournament appearance, lost all four serves it had.

At 10-1, UCLA scored three straight points—a spike by Trevor Schirman, a block at the net by tournament most valuable player Matt Sonnichsen, Mike Whitcomb and a hit off a block by Whitcomb—to make it 13-1. Following sideouts by both teams, Whitcomb put the Bruins at game point by pushing the ball over the net off a block.

Ironically, UCLA committed its only error of the game on game point. Carl Henkel and Schirman converged on a Stanford serve, one waiting for the other to make a pass. Schirman backed off, and Henkel tapped the ball over the net into the hands of Stanford's Craig Forsyth. Forsyth lifted the ball for an error, giving the Bruins the game.

Late in the second game, the Cardinal's Scott Fortune made a return that landed wide, giving

Championships Results

UCLA a 14-13 lead. Then, Fortune made another weak return that went straight into the net, giving UCLA the decision.

The Bruins' hitting was erratic in the third game and enabled Stanford to run away with a 15-4 decision. The Cardinal scored the final 12 points of the game in preventing a UCLA sweep.

In game No. 4, UCLA held a 13-

8 lead before Stanford closed to 13-12. But the Bruins won the last two points, taking a 15-12 victory to claim the 1989 crown.

In the consolation match, 11th-ranked Penn State swept eighth-ranked Ball State, 15-13, 15-11, 15-6.

Traditional men's tennis powers prepare for challenges

The Division I Men's Tennis Championships traditionally have been the domain of just three teams. Thirty-six of 43 team titles have been won or shared by UCLA (15), Southern California (12) and Stanford (nine).

Those perennial powerhouses will be in contention for the championship again this spring. Stanford is the defending champion. UCLA is the nation's top-ranked team, and Southern California undoubtedly will return to the tournament.

But this year's championships field could include at least four other teams that have a realistic chance of winning the team title. California, Louisiana State, UC Irvine and South Carolina all rank as contenders for what would be for any of the four a first men's tennis team title.

UCLA, which won its last national crown in 1984, has spent most of the year ranked No. 1 in the Volvo Tennis/Collegiate Rankings administered by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association. California surpassed the Bruins briefly after the Golden Bears won the ITCA national indoor team championships in February, but UCLA quickly asserted its right to the familiar top spot by posting a 6-3 victory over California in early April.

The Bruins (24-2 through May 4) feature several of the top players in the country, including doubles champions Pat Galbraith and Brian Garrow and doubles runner-up Buff Farrow. Garrow and Farrow also excel as singles players, ranking among the top 11 in the country after advancing to the finals and semifinals, respectively, in last year's tournament. Rob Bierens, Farrow's partner in the doubles finals, left the team this year and is the only player missing from a squad that went 17-10 last season and lost to Georgia in the second round of the championships.

Coach Glenn Bassett has added freshmen Bill Barber, Bill Behrens and Mark Quinney to provide strength in the lower part of the lineup.

UCLA will be keeping a close eye on South Carolina. The Gamecocks, who did not participate in the 1988 team championship, upset UCLA in the semifinals of the ITCA indoor tournament.

"On paper, they have the best players," South Carolina coach Kent DeMars said of the Bruins. "But even though they have the better players, they're just not that much better. There are so many factors in college tennis—momentum, lulls—and they can be contagious for a team. On that given day, we possibly were a little better team."

Seniors Steve Longley and Ken Diller and junior Stephane Simian lead the Gamecock squad, which faced nine opponents this spring that were rated among the top 25 in the preseason rankings. The team's deep doubles lineup is led by fourth-rated Longley-Simian, while Louis Gloria teams with fellow sophomore Erick Sydow to make South Carolina a tough team to overcome in doubles.

California can point to its current No. 3 ranking as good reason for consideration as a top contender. The Golden Bears were not as highly regarded early in the season, but they quickly established themselves as one of college tennis' top teams by claiming the ITCA indoor title.

Third-year coach Scott McCain's team is led by seniors Woody Hunt and Ted Scherman, who form the No. 2 doubles tandem in the rankings. The pair made its mark early in the season by defeating UCLA's Galbraith and Garrow in the finals of the Rolex Indoor Championships.

Coach Greg Patton's UC Irvine team has put itself in good position to make a strong showing at the championships. "Our team is like those men who get better-looking and more distinguished as they get older," he said. "I really feel that our team is twice as good as it was at the start of the season. It's not just a gut feeling; the results are proving it."

Patrick Galbraith

Among those results are a 5-2 win on the road against Louisiana State in late April and a streak of 20 straight wins by No. 1 singles player Mark Kaplan.

Right behind UC Irvine in the national rankings is Louisiana State, which beat California in the second round of the 1988 championships before losing in the finals to Stanford. Coach Jerry Simmons has successfully rebuilt a team that lost four all-Americans to graduation.

Of course, no review of a Division I tennis championship tournament would be complete without a look at Stanford. Coach Dick Gould's national champions finished last season with a 25-1 record; but even though Stanford still is the second-rated team in the nation, the Cardinal has struggled a bit this year. It was 17-4 through May 4, having lost to Kentucky, Georgia, Southern California and UCLA.

The top contender for the singles crown is Malivai Washington, a sophomore who has been ranked atop the ITCA singles poll all spring.

Key contenders for the doubles title include defending champions Galbraith and Garrow of UCLA, Hunt and Scherman of California, Rich Benson and Adam Malik of Kentucky, Brown and Augusto Solano of Arkansas, and Alabama brothers Clinton and Ellis Ferreira.

The other was Trinity (Texas), which won in 1972... If Brian Garrow and Patrick Galbraith of UCLA repeat as doubles champions, they will become the first tandem to win consecutive titles since Southern California's Stan Smith and Bob Lutz did it in 1967 and 1968... I'd love to see certain sports traveling together, like tennis and golf, with competition in mixed foursomes and mixed doubles. We could do some pretty innovative things."

At Penn State, the women's silver-anniversary-year organizers chose the motto "Women in Sports: a legacy, excellence, a future."

During the year, Penn State has honored its pioneers from the mid-1960s—people who took a chance and offered a women's varsity program to undergraduates.

Today, athletes in the Penn State women's program function in an entirely different world.

Winners of several major awards were recognized at a dinner on campus last month. After it was over, a group of young women left with dreams of Olympic gold medals, national championships and personal bests.

They will carry the women's athletics movement into the future.

Peak lacrosse play needed

Peak performance in championship play is the dream of every coach. In the Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship, that means different things to different coaches.

"We have to maintain our mental edge, play within ourselves and hustle," Johns Hopkins coach Don Zimmerman said. "If we do those three things, we'll be in a good position. If we don't do any one of those three things, we're in trouble."

The Blue Jays have stayed out of trouble this year, with an undefeated record through nine games. That includes an opening-game victory over Syracuse, 14-13, in front of 10,000 fans at Hopkins' Homewood Field.

"The early season win over Syracuse gave our team a lot of confidence," Zimmerman said. But, he added, "May's the month; March doesn't mean a thing" as far as the national championship is concerned.

"We had a veteran defense returning and a very good goalkeeper in Quint Kessenich," Zimmerman said regarding the make-up of this year's team. "Matt Panetta has come through big and that has added a lot of fire power to our attack."

Sophomore Panetta had 18 goals and 14 assists through nine games. Senior John Wilkens had 17 goals and three assists. Junior goalie Kessenich had a .655 save percentage.

Championship Preview

Firepower certainly describes defending champion Syracuse. The Orangemen had a 10-1 record through 11 games and had eclipsed 20 goals four times, including the last three games.

"We're far more colorful than we were last year," coach Roy Simmons Jr. said.

That is quite a statement, since Syracuse's Gary Gait made lacrosse history in last year's semifinal by scoring two goals on "stuff shots" from behind the net. Gait was the leading scorer in last year's tournament with 18 points. He set records for goals in a game (nine vs. Navy) and in a tournament (14) and tied the record for points in a game (12 vs. Navy). Gary's brother, Paul, was the second leading scorer with 15 points, and attackman John Zulberti was fourth with 11.

This year, Zulberti was the team's top scorer through 11 games with 23 goals and 41 assists. Gary was third with 39 goals and 11 assists, and Paul was fourth with 27 goals and 21 assists. Newcomer Tom Marachek was second with 36 goals and 16 assists.

Road to Division II baseball play-offs full of painful twists

The drive for the Division II baseball title has had some painful twists and turns for some teams this season.

In some form or another, attrition and injuries—two words that make hair stand on the back of coaches' necks—have beset the finest teams in the country. At times, the season has resembled a survival test.

The survivors favored to win the 22nd Division II Baseball Championship are Cal State Sacramento, Florida Southern, North Alabama and Tampa.

Cal State Sacramento (31-15), runner-up to Florida Southern last year, appears to have enough pitching to win its first Division II baseball title. But can it score enough runs and overcome injuries?

"We got off to a great start and really played well," said coach John Smith, in his 11th year at the Hornets' helm. "Then we had four key injuries at the end of March, and I had to insert four new players into the starting lineup. Now, the injured guys are coming back, and I think we might be starting to peak again."

Smith has two of the top pitchers in Division II with all-America Erik Bennett (6-4 record, 1.51 earned-run average) and Mike Frame (6-1, 1.84 ERA). Bennett, who has 110 strikeouts in 89<sup>2</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings, has seen his team score only two runs in his last 19 innings pitched.

All-America senior Mark Gieseke (.355 batting average, eight home runs, 38 runs batted in) is seeing very few good pitches but "is still having a great year by any standard," said Smith. Brian Hewitt (.333, 11 RBIs, 14 stolen bases), Bill Cramer (.379, four HR, 20 RBIs) and Marc Sallin (.371, 10 RBIs) are three of seven regulars hitting over .300.

Despite the loss of 10 starters from last year's national-championship team, Florida Southern (34-7) has overcome its share of problems.

"We would have considered this a rebuilding year, losing that many players; but we recruited well and came up with some good young players," said coach Chuck Anderson, who has won two Division II national championships in the last five years.

"This is a balanced ball club but one that really doesn't excel in any one area. But we've made only 45 errors in 42 games, we have a 3.10 team earned-run average and four pitchers have at least six wins."

Pitching has been the key for the Mocs, as senior Joe Logan (7-2, 3.00 ERA, 76 strikeouts in 87 innings), sophomore Tom Drell (7-1, 3.36 ERA), junior Mike Pogue (6-0, 1.99 ERA, two saves) and senior Jac Gelb (6-3, 2.85 ERA) lead a tournament-tested staff.

Junior center fielder Jeff Kilpatrick, who Anderson said "has the tools to beat you in two or three different capacities," is hitting .405 with three home runs and 36 runs batted in. He also has 18 stolen bases and leads the club in six offensive categories.

The leader of the ball club is senior Cris Allen (.318, four HR, 43 RBIs), who was moved to first base this year. He has set 10 career records at Florida Southern.

Coach Mike Lane wasn't sure what to make of his North Alabama (40-8) team when he lost three starters after the fall season.

Bad luck persisted into the spring when freshman Rusty Smith (.455, five HR, 25 RBIs) broke his thumb and was lost for the season.

"We have had an outstanding year compared with what we thought would happen," said Lane. "I wasn't sure what kind of ball club or pitching staff we would have."

Nine Lion starters have hit over .300 most of the season, led by junior third baseman Mike Burns (.373, 16 HR, 63 RBIs). Burns, who this year set single-season school records for home runs and RBIs, is a "legitimate home run threat in anyone's ballpark," said Lane.

Junior first baseman Jon Watkins (.358, five HR, 53 RBIs), said Lane, "is as good an overall hitter as we have on our ball club."

Consistent pitching will be the key to the Lions' championship hopes. Russ Cleveland (4-2, 2.84 ERA), Brad Hunter (6-2, 1.98 ERA) and Paul Ragland (7-1, 4.04 ERA) all have pitched well, whether starting or coming out of the bullpen.

Tampa (34-14-1) first-year coach Lelo Prado knew he would have a young team this year. What he didn't count on was a 16-game winning streak and 28 wins in 30 games during a six-week stretch, despite losing the services of four pitchers and a position player.

Hitting, however, has made up for a few shortcomings.

The Spartans are hitting .323, led by junior Paul Russo (.430, 20 HR, 73 RBIs), junior Steve Mauldin (.380, 27 RBIs) and senior Terry Rupp (.327, nine HR, 38 RBIs in 31 games), an all-conference center on the Spartans' basketball team. Rupp hit three home runs and drove in a school-record eight runs against Rollins earlier this season.

Sophomore Sam Militello (9-4, 3.28 ERA, 129 strikeouts) has been outstanding this season, as has junior Pat Russo (8-3, 3.15 ERA, eight saves). Pitching, however, has been a problem overall for the Spartans, although Prado has seen positive signs recently.

Said Prado, "If we keep swinging the bats and scoring runs like we have (7.6 per game), we have a chance."

"Any team that wins our region has a legitimate chance of winning a national championship."

Switch pitcher

The Hornets of Alabama State University unveiled a secret weapon April 26 against Samford University—an ambidextrous freshman pitcher. Ricky King made his debut as a starter by throwing left-handed to Samford's leadoff hitter, then switched gloves and threw right-handed. Unfortunately for King, Samford's first four batters combined to collect two walks and two singles, and the switch pitcher gave up four runs before he was chased from the mound in the second inning of Samford's 16-5 victory. But King, who attributed the performance to lack of concentration, was looking forward to his next outing.

Think ice hockey's tough? Play lacrosse goalie

By John Kekis

Syracuse University's Gary Gait emerged from a throng of players at midfield after the opening face-off and headed down the center of the field toward the Cornell University goal, where all-America goalie Paul Schimoler waited.

Meanwhile, Gary's twin brother, Paul, scampered down the right side, twirling his lacrosse stick as though he had the ball. In the dimly lit Carrier Dome, Schimoler was fooled. While he intently watched Paul Gait's every move, a huge grin crept across Gary's face as he unleashed a blistering, 35-yard shot that whizzed past Schimoler's ear and into the net just 13 seconds into the game.

Schimoler never saw it.

Welcome to the world of the college lacrosse goalie. You think a hockey goalie has it tough?

Try guarding a cage that measures a gaping six feet by six feet with no bodily protection save a caged helmet, a throat protector, a chest protector thinner than a baseball catcher's glove, and an oversized stick.

Never mind that most shots originate within eight to 14 yards of the goal, and that the 5½-ounce hard rubber ball doesn't exactly tickle when it hits bare skin.

It may be the toughest, most unrewarding position in team sports.

"I always thought hockey goalies had to be a little left of center to get in there and face a hockey puck," Hobart College coach Dave Urick said. "Granted, that puck can still hurt, but a hockey goalie is pretty well-protected. Lacrosse goalies are facing a similar object in terms of velocity, but they're protecting a much bigger area with a lot less protection."

"We're talking about a situation where they're throwing the ball 85 miles an hour," added Richie Moran, who's coached Cornell lacrosse for the past 21 years. "How would you like to have a guy throwing the ball at you being a foot away or two feet away with that velocity?"

So, just who wants the job?

"I suppose it requires somewhat of a different mental approach," says former Hobart net-minder Guy Van Arsdale, who now coaches at Rochester Institute of Technology. "I think that for a long time, goalies in all sports have been thought of as being flakes or nuts or crazy. But I used to think I was a heck of a lot more sane than those other guys who ran around outside the crease and had people beat on them with sticks. At least nobody could beat on me with a stick."

Spoken like a true goalie.

"I enjoy it," claims Schimoler, who faced 58 shots in that mid-April game against Syracuse and allowed 20 goals. "I enjoy coming out of the cage and being active. I just don't save the ball, I like to be part of the offense as well. You can score if you want."

Really? How many goals have you scored, Paul?

"None."

Unfortunately, the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association lists goals, but not by position. Suffice it to say, however, that it doesn't happen a whole lot because for a goalie to join the offense requires an attacker to stay back and tend goal.

As for injuries, amazingly, they're usually just bumps and bruises. Sure, there's the occasional mishap that leaves the crowd buzzing. Like when Hobart's Dave Creighton suffered a black eye when a shot went through his mask in the 1972 North-South all-star game. Or when Van Arsdale caught one on the thigh against Syracuse in 1981.

"They had a native American named Greg Tarbell whose shot was clocked at well over 100 miles an hour," Van Arsdale said. "The whole leg went dead. The next day, the leg was black and blue from about just above the knee to almost the groin and all the way around the whole leg except for about a four-inch strip of white skin."

"In the game, you don't feel anything," says Syracuse goalie Matt Palumb. "But about two hours later, you're sitting around and all of a sudden you get up and, boy, that hurts, and this hurts, and everything else hurts. Sometimes you have to take a look at yourself and wonder (why you're a goalie)."

"You've got to be a certain type of person, and goalies are a certain breed," says Gary Gait, who last year scored a collegiate-record 70 goals in 15 games. "They've always got a funny character about them. They get a hundred balls shot at them—it takes a certain type of person, there's no doubt.

"Crazy!" he said, laughing.

Kekis writes for the Associated Press.

chemistry. We're playing well together and playing within ourselves."

Loyola (Maryland) has some outstanding players at both ends of the field. Mike Ruland is the top scorer with 11 goals and 26 assists. He has tied the school's career assist record and will have an opportunity to break it in a game May 13. Brian Kroneberger has 24 goals and four assists. Goalie Charlie Toomey has a .747 save percentage and is the leader in that category in the United States Lacrosse Association statistics.

North Carolina coach Willie Scroggs said his 1989 team is "a little different from the North Carolina teams of the past, because we don't have one or two players who stand out." Through 14 games, Michael Thomas was the team's leading scorer with 23 goals and 21 assists. Dennis Goldstein had 22 goals and 19 assists, and Neill Redfern had 25 goals and 12 assists. Goalie Pat Olmert's save percentage is 64.

Keys to success for the Tar Heels this year include the play of the defense and goalie, controlling face-offs, and taking advantage of situational scoring opportunities.

"We need more possessions; we can't have the other team score, then come right back and get another score," Scroggs said. "We don't have the power to impose our will on other teams."

Top-ranked UCLA in position to add fifth softball crown

Already the most successful team in Division I Women's Softball Championship history, top-ranked UCLA is preparing to add another chapter and defend its 1988 title as the May 24-28 tournament approaches.

UCLA has won four of the seven NCAA championships played since 1982.

Pacific-10 Conference champions, the 39-4 Bruins return a handful of players from last year's championship team, including third baseman Janice Parks.

The senior recently was named conference player of the week after leading the Bruins to a split with Cal State Fullerton and a double-header sweep of U.S. International. In the Fullerton games, she was nine for 16 (.563) with four runs, nine RBIs, two doubles, two triples and a home run. Against U.S. International, Parks was five for six (.833) at the plate, with five RBIs and two triples.

"Having so many players returning from last year really helps the team out a lot," coach Sharron Backus said. "Everybody has really been solid for us this year. We're a little inconsistent at times, but otherwise, we're doing fine. I think we're about where we should be."

Also returning are outfielders Shanna Flynn and Lorraine Maynez, infielder Missy Phillips, and shortstop Karen Walker.

On the way to a 45-13 record, Cal State Fullerton has played some lengthy games—including a 15-inning triumph over top-ranked out every team in the conference at least once this year except San Jose State.

Winner of the Big Eight Conference and ranked No. 2 in the nation, Oklahoma State is hitting .317 as a team over 39 games but is only .252 in conference games. Senior catcher Lisa Harvey continues her torrid streak at the plate, hitting .369 compared to .253 at this time last year. Also, six starters are batting over .300 this season—Harvey, Michele Smith, Dee Brewer, Shari Johnson, Sharon Sodano and Dena Carter.

Smith (23-2, 0.45) has allowed only 11 earned runs in 170<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings, and Carter (19-2, 0.53) has allowed two earned runs in 131<sup>2</sup>/<sub>3</sub> innings on the mound. Between them, Smith and Carter have seven no-hitters this season, including two perfect games by Smith.

Three Oregon players have been honored as Pac-10 players of the week—pitcher Katie Wiese (twice), Kathy Gray and infielder Danny Senner. However, Senner injured her left knee recently and will be out for the remainder of the season. At the time of her injury, the freshman was batting .404 and led the team in hits (63), RBIs (40) and doubles (10).

UCLA and a 17-inning loss to Long Beach State in the Big West Conference title game. Coach Judi Garman's team currently ranks third in the nation.

While her team is relatively young, Garman said the Titans still are doing an outstanding job. "They really have been a pleasant surprise, because we only have three returners," she said. "We thought it would be a rebuilding year, but I'm tremendously pleased with how well we've done."

"Defensively, we have only one starter in the infield and one in the outfield, but we have a lot of junior college transfers who at least have that much experience. We were fourth in our conference last year; and this year, we finished second, so that says a lot for our new players," she added.

Fresno State's RaeAnn Pifferini, a sophomore right fielder, has an 11-game hitting streak, which places her two away from the school record. She also is approaching another school record with 72 hits this season. Junior shortstop Martha Noffsinger holds the mark with 76.

Noffsinger became only the second Bulldog in school history to reach 200 career hits by getting five hits in seven at-bats against Cal Poly Pomona. She has gone on to surpass Gena Strang's career record (216) by three.

Right-handed pitcher Carie Devcr (21-6, 0.63 ERA) recently was chosen Big West pitcher of the week after going 4-0 with two shutouts for a 0.58 ERA during the last week of April. The junior notched two wins over nationally ranked teams with a 1-0 shutout of Long Beach State and a 3-2 decision over California in nine innings.

Teammate Terry Carpenter is just two shutouts away from tying the school record of 20. She has shut

District 3 golfers top Division II title hopefuls

While District 3 teams should continue to dominate the Division II Men's Golf Championships, new faces are likely to claim team and individual titles this year.

Chuck Winship, who coached Tampa to titles in 1987 and 1988, resigned at the end of last season to take a similar position at Miami University. "We finished third last year and in 1985 and placed second in 1986 and 1987. To say that we're hungry for a win probably is an understatement," Bagley said.

Bagley will be looking to senior Charlie Whittington and junior Brian Dixon to lead the corps toward that title. A two-time honorable-mention all-America and 1989 first-team candidate, Whittington has one of the best stroke averages in the country at 72.8. His lowest round this season (65) came against Slippery Rock.

Troy State coach Barney Burnett is hoping the return of the championships to Erie, Pennsylvania, will bring good luck to his squad. "Since we're returning to the site where we won the 1984 team title (under former coach Mike Griffin), we're hoping history will repeat itself," Burnett commented.

"The disadvantage will be that we're going to a part of the country where we haven't played for two years. It will be a lot cooler, and the guys will have to make an adjustment. If I had my 'druthers, I'd like to stay in the South because we're used to the climate."

Among those making the trip for the Trojans will be Mike Wright, a 1987 second-team all-America who has a 74.1 stroke average; Barry Alexander (77.8); Mike Morton (77.4), an all-America honorable mention last year; Joe Shahady (74.4), and Preston Wilson (75.9). Wright and Shahady are all-America nominees this year.

Championships Previews

Florida). Winship also guided Jeff Leonard to individual titles those same years. But the departure of Winship and the graduation of Leonard leaves both titles up for grabs.

Florida Southern, in one of the most competitive districts in the country, has finished second four times and first four times and has had three individual titlists—all within the past decade. But according to 17-year head coach Charley Matlock, that doesn't necessarily mean anything.

"I think our chances are as good as anybody's," Matlock said. "There are three or four teams in our district alone that have a good chance of winning.

"But what gives us an advantage is that we play a major schedule, including a lot of Division I schools. Our competition so far this year has been more difficult than what we should face at the nationals. Sometimes, it makes it hard to win, but in the long run it pays off," he added.

Matlock will be taking Todd Mudge (74.2 stroke average), Tim Ling (74.4), Dave McMillan (75.1), Rodney Butcher (74.9) and Gary Cona (76.6) to the 1989 tournament.

Abilene Christian, ranked third in the nation by the Golf Coaches Association of America, recently tied with Cameron for the Lone Star Conference title. The win also gave the Wildcats their fifth straight conference win.

The team's sudden success has come under coach Vince Jarrett, now in his fifth year in that capacity. "This will be our third national appearance, and I think that's partly because we're a lot more familiar and comfortable with our opponents," he said. "Another important factor is attitude.

"If I have five guys who go out and play their best, then the team will take care of itself. I try to instill in them that they're important and that what they're doing is important, not only to themselves but to the school," Jarrett explained. "I'll take my senior cocaptains and relay to them what I think they should relay to the younger players, things like keeping up the good work, giving their best efforts, etc. Attitude definitely makes a difference."

Preparing for the championships trip are seniors Bill Steen (74.6) and Steve Johnson (77.3), junior Don Morris (78.5), and sophomores Donnie Darville (77.0) and Clint Johnson (77.4). Steen is a first-team all-America candidate and a championships veteran, along with Johnson and Darville.

Columbus coach Earl Bagley also realizes the importance of attitude in a team's success. "Positive imagery and positive attitude are the biggest parts of golf. At this stage, they all have the strokes down, so the thing that counts is the attitude," Bagley explained.

The Cougars will need every bit of positive reinforcement they can find in order to reach the

MAC moving hoops play-offs

The Mid-American Athletic Conference postseason basketball tournament will be played at Detroit's Cobo Arena for the next five years, MAC Commissioner James W. Lessig announced May 5.

The MAC and Olympic Arenas, Inc., which operates Cobo Arena signed a five-year agreement. Terms were not announced.

Cobo Arena has 11,241 seats for basketball. The MAC tournament has been held at Savage Hall on the University of Toledo campus four of the last five years.

"The Mid-American Conference is excited about playing its postseason basketball tournament at Cobo Arena in Detroit," Lessig said. "At the same time, we are very appreciative of the excellent support that we received from northwest Ohio during the time the tournament was played in Toledo.

"Our support came from many sources, including Mike Porter and the Toledo Area Chamber of Commerce, the corporations and companies that purchased tickets through our corporate ticket program, the local media, and, of course, the fans.

"Moving the tournament to Cobo Arena is a natural progression in the growth of the Mid-American Conference," Lessig added.

For the past six years, the MAC women's basketball tournament has been held in conjunction with the men's. This will continue with the move to Detroit.

The agreement between the MAC and Olympia Arenas, Inc., was unanimously approved by the Mid-American Conference council of presidents earlier this month.

Immediately following the Convention, NACDA will hold its annual management institute at the Hilton. Tuition for the June 8-10 program is $175, and attendance at the NACDA convention is an enrollment prerequisite.

Four levels of instruction will be offered during the 1989 management institute:

Iowa lineman is, by degrees, proving his detractors wrong

Greg Fedders is in a class by himself among University of Iowa athletes.

Fedders, an offensive lineman, will earn a degree in finance in July. That's reason for any student to celebrate, but Fedders' accomplishment is more noteworthy than most.

Even with all the time taken up by football, Fedders will graduate a little more than three years after he enrolled.

Fedders, 6-foot-4, 275 pounds, still has two years of football eligibility because he did not play as a freshman in 1986. He said he will attend graduate school the next two years and plans to go to law school eventually.

Fedders took 15 or 16 hours per semester and another six hours each summer. He will take 10 hours this summer to complete work on his degree.

Fred Mims, an assistant athletics director at Iowa, said Fedders' graduation will be the earliest ever by an athlete at the school.

"Greg getting through in three years is remarkable, especially with the pressures and time demands of all the things he's involved in," Mims said. "There's only one or two other cases that I can think of like Greg's in the general student population."

"As a whole, university students don't graduate in four years. The four-year graduation period has been obsolete for some time. In athletics, we work to get as many through in 4½ years as possible."

Injuries have slowed Fedders' progress in football—he has never taken part in spring practice—but he says that may have hurt him even more academically.

Fedders, who has a 3.480 grade-point average, had arthroscopic knee surgery as a freshman and underwent two back operations during a 10-month period in 1988.

"The last semester, when I had my second surgery, I had a 3.580 GPA going in, and I ended with only a 3.000 for 12 hours," Fedders said.

"Academically, being injured hurt more than it helped. It's been kind of disappointing because it seems like when I'm practicing and playing, my grades have been better," he told the Associated Press.

Fedders also was a good student at Le Mars High School, where he was president of his class and a member of the National Honor Society. But some in his home town said he wouldn't be successful at Iowa, so Fedders set out to prove them wrong.

"A few people said I'd never play at Iowa and if I did play, it wouldn't be very much," he said.

Fedders was one of six players who appeared at coach Hayden Fry's spring media conference to speak in defense of the Iowa program, which was criticized during the trial of sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom in Chicago.

Testimony at the trial showed that former Iowa players Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell took numerous courses in recreational sports to stay eligible and that Harmon was on academic probation three times during his last two years in school. That led to the formation of a university committee to review the performance of Iowa athletes.

Fedders said the trial testimony gave a misleading picture of the Iowa program.

"I feel like we've done everything to stay within the requirements," he said. "To be falsely accused of something is ridiculous. People here have worked real hard on academics."

"A positive image is what we've always tried to portray, and I think that's what we have."

Pan American's Ogletree gains 1,000th coaching victory

Coaching Milestones: Pan American University's Al Ogletree became the fourth college coach to earn 1,000 baseball victories when his team defeated Miami University (Ohio), 10-0, March 14.

Another baseball coach, Bob Bennett of California State University, Fresno, earned career victory No. 800 April 21 when his team blanked the University of the Pacific, 6-0.

Two coaches also recently earned career baseball victory No. 700. Temple University's Skip Wilson reached the milestone April 26 when his club defeated West Chester University of Pennsylvania, 19-11. At Mississippi State University, Ron Polk's 700th career triumph came April 25 when his team defeated William Carey College.

Just a few days earlier, Mississippi State fans turned out in what is believed to be record numbers for a twin bill with the visiting University of Florida. The crowd of 14,991 is believed to be a collegiate record for on-campus attendance, and it surpassed the 14,378 who watched the Bulldogs host Louisiana State University April 16, 1988.

Student-athletes attending Mid-American Athletic Conference member institutions have been hitting the books in a big way, according to an April 28 announcement by league Commissioner James W. Lessig. Named to the MAC Honor Roll were 1,012 student-athletes from the nine member schools.

Notably, honor-roll recognition required either a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in the most recent term completed or a cumulative GPA of at least 3.000 through the most recent term.

"This is a strong indication that our athletics administrators and coaches are emphasizing the importance of the academic obligations facing all of our student-athletes," Lessig said.

Former Marist College men's basketball player Rik Smits announced April 27 that he is donating $40,000 to the school for improvements to the James J. McCann Recreation Center. The money will be used to install a wooden playing surface on the building's main basketball court.

"I just wanted to pay the college back for all it did for me," said Smits, who graduated last May with a degree in communications and now plays for the NBA Indiana Pacers. "I think I can honestly say that I wouldn't be where I am today if it weren't for Marist."

"Coaching America's Coaches" is the title of what is being billed as the first national coaching education conference, a joint venture of the U.S. Olympic Committee and the Illinois-based American Coaching Effectiveness Program.

According to an announcement from Julia Quick, conference director, the September 21-24 program in Colorado Springs will be dedicated exclusively to improving the quality of coaching in America and to formulating solutions to the problems faced by coaches today.

ing from Haverford College, the first intercollegiate athletics competition is believed to have been a crew race in 1852. According to that same dispatch, when did the first intercollegiate match of any kind take place on land? Answer later.

The American Baseball Coaches Association directory announced in Briefly a few months ago now is available, according to Jerry A. Miles, ABCA executive director. Baseball Market Place 1989 ($19.95 prepaid) may be ordered from Sportsguide Inc., P.O. Box 1417, Princeton, New Jersey 08542.

For Jim Kulawiak, a faculty cut at Morton High School in Berwyn, Illinois, may have been a lucky break—even though it cost him his job.

Kulawiak's nine-year record as women's softball coach at the school was 261-31 and included the 1986 Class AA state title. But he only had three years of full-time teaching under his belt when the school board acted to cut faculty, and Kulawiak was let go.

North Central College was looking for a women's softball coach about that time, and Kulawiak was hired. He inherited a team that finished 15-19 a year ago and already has led it to 16 victories in 18 games.

"I expect my players to work hard and become fundamentally sound," he said. "A fundamentally sound team is going to win some games."

Among the Kenyon College swimmers who met President George H.W. Bush during a May 3 visit to the White House were Jeff Perkins and Erin Finneran, winners of the school's 1989 Jess Willard Falkenstine Award as the college's outstanding male and female student-athletes.

Perkins, an eight-time all-America, carries a 3.520 GPA in biology. Finneran has earned all-America an astounding 26 times and sports a 3.520 GPA in English.

Bush greeted Kenyon President Philip H. Jordan Jr., coach Jim Steen and several other swimmers

During a May 2 presentation to the San Diego, California, city council, Holiday Bowl President Leon Parma announced that the 1988 game created a total economic impact in excess of $10.6 million for the local economy. Over the past three years, Parma added, the bowl's impact has averaged $11.3 million.

Lock Haven University of Pennsylvania's women's softball team got some fine performances during April from senior pitcher Sandy Hess. She followed up an April 6, perfect-game performance against the U.S. Military Academy with an April 26 perfect-game victory over Edinboro University of Pennsylvania.

The Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, native had a 14-game record of 11-3, with an earned-run average of 0.73 and 126 strikeouts in 106 1/3 innings.

Three student-athletes—two men and a woman—have been named to the Big Eight Conference all-academic golf first teams for the second straight year. The repeaters are Jim Knoesel, University of Missouri, Columbia (senior, 3.690 GPA in business administration); Mike Rack, University of Nebraska, Lincoln (senior, 3.200 in premedicine), and Alicia Luigs, Missouri (senior, 3.250 in journalism).

Among the four Northern Illinois University staff members recently named winners of the school's 1989 outstanding service awards for civil service staff was Mike Korcek, sports information director.

The Northern Illinois alumnus joined the school's sports information staff in 1973 and was named SID in 1985. He has won six College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) national awards for writing and publications.

More Report Cards: For the second straight year, a student-athlete has been named the University of Portland's valedictorian. 1989 honoree Tracy Thorne has a 3.990 GPA in theology. She is a four-time letter-winner on the women's cross country and track teams.

California State University, Fresno, athletics officials honored 110 student-athletes May 2 for posting GPAs of 3.000 or higher during 1988. Seventy-eight of those recognized had GPAs of at least 3.500. Among the honorees were Simon Cesh, Jim Madsen, Victoria Trask and Tom Rowe—all of whom have cumulative 4.000s.

Trivia Answer: According to a release from Jeffrey Blank, Haverford College sports information director, the first land-based intercollegiate athletics contest was a cricket match between Haverford and the University of Pennsylvania that was played May 7, 1864. Haverford won, 89-60. For the record, Blank noted that the 1852 crew race was between Harvard University and Yale University.

State legislation relating to athletics

Third of three parts

This report, the third in a series of three (see The NCAA News, April 26 and May 3 issues), summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

The total report includes a list of 183 bills from 44 states. The report also includes 149 bills that have been introduced and 34 pending bills on which action has been taken since the last report (see February 8, 1989, issue of The NCAA News).

Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of April 18. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia Council and the legislatures in the U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the total report by subject.

The CFA Academic Achievement Award was created in 1981 and is presented annually by the Touchdown Club of Memphis. The award recognizes the CFA member institution with the highest graduation rate among members of its football team. We are very proud of Jerry and the fine young men on his team who have earned this recognition for their university."

Tulane athletics gets biggest donation ever—$4.5 million

Oil executive W. K. McWilliams Jr. has given $4.5 million to the Campaign for Tulane Athletics.

The gift is the largest single donation ever made to Tulane University's intercollegiate athletics program and among the largest gifts ever made to the university. The money will be used primarily for endowing athletics scholarships. A portion has been set aside for selected capital projects, including the Wilson Center for Intercollegiate Athletics, now under construction, and the Kent McWilliams Track and Field Complex.

"The key to the future of Tulane athletics is this campaign," McWilliams said. "Everything that has been outlined in the campaign is on schedule to happen. We have the commitment of the university to a top-flight program, a talented team of coaches and administrators, and a great group of young student-athletes."

With McWilliams' contribution, the campaign has raised almost three-fourths of its $25 million goal, according to Tulane development vice-president Stuart Appelbaum.

"Mr. McWilliams' gift is monumental and of historic significance. It is extraordinary evidence of his commitment to Tulane and his confidence in the university and its athletics program," Appelbaum said.

Athletics director Chester S. Gladchuk said, "With his support, we are building competitive teams of scholar-athletes, in the best tradition of intercollegiate athletics."

McWilliams, a 1943 Tulane graduate and one of Tulane's first scholarship athletes, is national honorary

NCAA seeks dissolution of injunction

Within the next week, the NCAA plans to file a motion in the Nevada Supreme Court to dissolve an injunction that prevented the suspension of University of Nevada, Las Vegas, head men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian when the school's basketball program was placed on probation more than 10 years ago, NCAA legal counsel John J. Kitchin said May 9.

The injunction was issued in Nevada district court and later upheld by the Nevada Supreme Court.

Last December, the U.S. Supreme Court, on an appeal by the NCAA, ruled that the NCAA had not violated Tarkanian's right to due process during its investigation because the Association, a private organization, is not bound by the due-process protection afforded in the U.S. Constitution. The Association maintains the position that it does observe stringent due-process procedures for all involved parties.

The U.S. Supreme Court remanded the case to the Nevada Supreme Court for review with a mandate to handle the case in accordance with the U.S. court's findings.

Once the case is heard in the state supreme court, it likely will be remanded for final review to the district court where Tarkanian was granted the injunction.

He is a cofounder of McMoRan Oil and Gas Inc., which now is a part of Freeport-McMoRan, Inc.

McWilliams has been a member of the Tulane Board of Administrators since 1981 and is cochair of the W. Kent McWilliams Geology Advisory Council. Whitelaw was the first conference commissioner to serve on the executive committee of NACDA, and he is a long-standing member of the executive board of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. He is chair of the Kickoff Classic Games Committee. He has also served on several NCAA committees.

In March, Whitelaw was the recipient of the 1989 NIT/Kodak Man-of-the-Year Award.
