Nomination deadline is July 1 for NCAA's top awards

NCAA member institutions are reminded that July 1 is the deadline for submitting nominations for Today's Top Six awards, Silver Anniversary Top Six awards and the Theodore Roosevelt Award.

The Today's Top Six and Silver Anniversary Top Six awards provide the Association the opportunity to honor the six outstanding senior student-athletes of the preceding calendar year and to recognize six distinguished former student-athletes who ended their collegiate eligibility 25 years ago.

Nominations for the Today's Top Six awards are open to men or women who represent institutions declaring eligibility for NCAA winter and spring competition and championships and who completed their intercollegiate eligibility in 1989. Nominations of student-athletes participating in fall sports will be requested later this year.

Selection criteria include athletics ability and achievement (50 percent), academic achievement and character (25 percent), and leadership and activities (25 percent). An institution may nominate more than one student-athlete in a sport(s). Selection will be based on the 1988-89 winter and spring sports season, and the 1989 fall sports season.

Silver Anniversary Top Six nominees must be men or women who completed their eligibility during the 1964-65 academic year. Nominees must be college graduates.

Member institutions are encouraged to initiate research for women candidates.

Selection criteria include prominence as a collegiate athlete (40 percent) and career achievement (60 percent).

The "Teddy" award is the highest honor the NCAA may confer on an individual. It is presented annually to a distinguished citizen of national reputation and outstanding accomplishment who having earned a varsity athletics award in college—has by a continuing interest and concern for physical fitness and competitive sport and by personal example exemplified most clearly and forcefully the ideals and purposes to which collegiate athletics programs and amateur sports competition are dedicated.

All award winners must be able to attend the 1990 NCAA honors luncheon January 8.

Nomination forms must be returned by July 1 to David E. Ca-wood, NCAA assistant executive director for communications, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

College athletics organizations elect officers

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, the College Football Association and the Division I-A Athletics Directors Association have announced the election or appointment of officers following recent meetings of those organizations.

NACDA names Lengyel

Jack Lengyel, athletics director at the U.S. Naval Academy, was elected June 7 to serve as the 1989-90 president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA). Four other officers also were elected by the 790 athletics administrators who attended the organization's convention in Anaheim, California.

Joining Lengyel will be Frank Windegger, Texas Christian University AD, first vice-president; Sam Jankovich, AD at the University of Miami (Florida), second vice-president; Bill Byrne, University of Oregon AD, third vice-president, and Elizabeth M. Kruczek, AD at Fitchburg State College, secretary. All will serve one-year terms.

Six new members of NACDA's executive committee also were appointed to four-year terms during the convention. They include:

University division—J. Frank

Broyles, AD at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and Cedric W. Dempsey, University of Arizona AD. College division—James F. Battle, AD at Virginia Union University, and University of South Dakota AD Jack Doyle.

Named junior/community college representative was Jim Harvey of Miami-Dade Community College-South. Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, was appointed to an at-large position on the committee.

Lude heads I-A directors

Milo R. Lude, director of athletics at the University of Washington, has been elected chair of the Division I-A Athletics Directors Association, which is administered by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA). Lude succeeds J. Frank Broyles, AD at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Lude was among a full slate of officers for the four-year-old I-A organization that was elected during NACDA's annual convention in early June. The 1989 gathering was held in Anaheim, California.

Sam Jankovich, athletics director at the University of Miami (Florida), was elected first vice-chair. Elected second vice-chair was Jack Lengyel of the U.S. Naval Academy.

Third vice-chair of the I-A group for 1989-90 is James L. Jones, director of athletics at Ohio State University. Carl Ullrich of the U.S. Military Academy and Michael B. McGee of the University of Southern California were reelected to serve as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

CFA names officials

The College Football Association membership elected a new chair and appointed two new members to its board of directors during the organization's recent annual meeting in Dallas.

Haskell Monroe, chancellor of the University of Missouri, Columbia, was elected to replace Col. John J. Clune, athletics director at the U.S. Air Force Academy, as chair.

Rules changed to speed up men's lacrosse

The NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee adopted rules changes June 13 to enhance the flow of the game and to decrease the length of games.

"We believe these changes will create a competitive balance between offensive and defensive play," said James A. Grube, secretary-rules editor. "The amount of time needed to complete a game will be less, but playing time has not changed."

The number of long sticks that may be used by a team at one time was reduced from five to four. A long stick measures 52 to 72 inches, a short stick 40 to 42 inches.

The committee also implemented 10-second time limits for both the offense and defense. Once the ball crosses the midline, the offense will have 10 seconds to get the ball into its attack goal area.

In the last two minutes of the game, the offense must keep the ball in its attack goal area.

The defense, upon gaining possession, must move the ball out of its goal area within 10 seconds and may not reenter that area once the ball has been brought out.

Breaks caused by suspension of play for various reasons also were shortened by the committee. When play is suspended for any reason other than a timeout, action must resume within 20 seconds. The limit had been 25 seconds.

Regular-substitution rules also were changed. Regular substitutions had been permitted any time play was suspended by game officials. Now, regular substitution may take place only after a goal is scored, after a time-serving penalty is awarded or after the ball goes out of bounds by crossing the sideline.

Special-substitution rules were not changed.

On a face-off, the official will place the ball on the ground before players line up. All portions of a player's body must be positioned to the left of the throat of his crosse.

"I was tremendously impressed by the efforts of Jim Grube and the subcommittee in developing new rules that we all feel will give us a faster-paced, more exciting game," said Eugene F. Corrigan, chair of the committee.

The committee, which is meeting in Monterey, California, will adjourn June 15. A report of additional committee actions will appear in the June 21 issue of the News.

Also, Stanley B. Sheriff, athletics director at the University of Hawaii, and Sam Jankovich, athletics director at the University of Miami (Florida), were appointed as directors. They replace Clune and Fred Schaus, recently retired athletics director at West Virginia University, who recently completed three-year terms on the CFA board.

E. William Beauchamp, executive vice-president of the University of Notre Dame continues to serve as the organization's secretary-treasurer. Other board members are William H. Cunningham, president, University of Texas, Austin; Ken Hatfield, head football coach, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Fred Jacoby, commissioner, Southwest Athletic Conference; James I. Robertson, faculty athletics representative, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; David Roselle, president, University of Kentucky, and Frank Windegger, athletics director, Texas Christian University.

Scholar-athletes are selected

Rick Hirtensteiner, a senior baseball player from Pepperdine University, and Tracy Thorne, a senior cross country runner from Portland State University, have been named West Coast Athletic Conference scholar-athletes of the year.

Hirtensteiner, from Ventura, California, played center field and hit .366 with 12 home runs for the

I-A athletics directors to be asked for ideas on ways to contain costs

Division I-A athletics directors soon will be surveyed for ideas on cost containment and athletics business management, thanks to action taken during a meeting of I-A ADs during the 1989 convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) earlier this month in Anaheim, California.

Frank Broyles, athletics director at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and outgoing chair of the four-year-old Division I-A Athletics Directors Association, appointed a committee to study cost containment and cost effectiveness that will be chaired by Douglas A. Dickey, AD at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

"The number one issue for I-A directors is cost containment," Broyles said in announcing the committee's appointment. "It's an arms race out there.

"Everyone wants an advantage over the next guy, and it's got to stop."

Broyles directed the committee to survey the I-A organization's membership on business-related issues and report findings to the membership.

An advance copy of the committee's report will be provided to Cedric W. Dempsey, athletics director at the University of Arizona and a member of the NCAA Special Committee on Cost Reduction.

"Our goal is not to drop sports," Dickey noted, "but to manage the ones we have."

1989 Column No. 24

NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1—test-score report

During its April 17-19, 1989, meeting, the NCAA Council approved for Divisions I and II an NCAA Division II Steering Committee recommendation to delay until August 1990 the effective date for requiring official ACT and SAT test scores (if utilized to certify initial eligibility under the provisions of Bylaw 14.3.1) to be received directly by the member institution from the testing agencies. Therefore, this requirement will apply to member institutions certifying initial eligibility for freshmen whose initial full-time enrollment occurs after the conclusion of the 1989-90 academic year.

NCAA Bylaw 13—recruiting regulations that apply subsequent to National Letter of Intent signing

NCAA members are reminded that specific recruiting regulations remain in effect subsequent to a prospective student-athlete's signing of a National Letter of Intent (or a prospect's official acceptance for enrollment by a member not subscribing to the letter of intent). In accordance with NCAA legislation, a prospective student-athlete remains a prospect until actual enrollment in a minimum full-time program of studies at an NCAA member institution. The following is a partial summary of regulations that apply to a prospect subsequent to the National Letter of Intent signing:

1. Contacts subsequent to National Letter of Intent signing. In accordance with Bylaw 13.1.4.9 (and 13.1.4.2 after August 1, 1989), the following conditions apply to contacts with a prospective student-athlete after the prospect has signed a letter of intent:

a. Any contact at the prospect's educational institution in Division I football and basketball shall be confined to the permissible contact period and shall not exceed one visit per week (Division I);

b. No in-person, on- or off-campus contact may be made during a "dead period" in the applicable sports (Divisions I and II);

c. No in-person, on- or off-campus contact may be made with a nonqualifier enrolled in the first year of two-year college by a Division I member (Division I);

d. No on- or off-campus contact (including correspondence and telephone calls) may be made by a representative of the institution's athletics interests in Division I except those involving permissible preenrollment activities (e.g., a discussion of summer employment arrangements) (Division I);

e. No in-person, off-campus contact may be made by a representative of the institution's athletics interests in Division II except those involving permissible preenrollment activities (e.g., a discussion of summer employment arrangements) (Division II), and

f. Contact at the site of a prospect's competition shall continue to be governed by the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.5.2 (Divisions I and II).

2. Printed recruiting materials subsequent to National Letter of Intent signing. According to Bylaw 13.3.1(-I), it is permissible for a member institution to provide a signed prospect weight-lifting program information and a copy of material related solely to the institution's strength and conditioning program. Additionally, the NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently determined that the provision of a playbook to a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent (or has been officially accepted for enrollment by a nonsubscribing member institution) would be permissible.

3. Weight-lifting activities subsequent to National Letter of Intent signing. The Legislation and Interpretations Committee has determined that the tryout regulations would not prohibit a prospective student-athlete who has signed a National Letter of Intent from participating in weight-lifting activities on the institution's campus in the presence of a member institution's strength and conditioning coach, provided such activities are not prearranged and the strength and conditioning coach is performing normal duties and responsibilities in the supervision of the weight room and does not work directly with the prospective student-athlete. However, the oversight responsibilities of the strength and conditioning coach may involve supervision of appropriate lifting techniques by the prospective student-athlete. Since only voluntary participation in such a program is permissible, the coach would be prohibited from prearranging or monitoring the prospect's lifting schedule.

4. Employment of prospects. According to Bylaw 13.2.3.1, an institution's arrangement of employment for a prospect shall be permitted, provided the employment does not begin prior to the completion of the prospect's senior year in high school.

5. Employment and participation in institutional summer camps. According to Bylaw 13.12.1.3, a senior prospect shall not be permitted to enroll, participate or be employed in any such sports camp or clinic other than those developmental clinics outlined in Bylaw 13.11.3.1. Further, the provisions of 13.12.1.6 preclude institutions from giving free or reduced-admission privileges to a high school, preparatory school or two-year college athletics award winner (Division I) or to any individual who has started classes for the ninth grade (Divisions II and III).

6. Loans to prospect. According to Bylaw 13.2.4, the arrangement of educational loans by an institution for a prospect shall be permitted, provided the loan is not made prior to the completion of the prospect's senior year in high school. When permitted, such loans must be from a regular lending agency and based on a regular repayment schedule.

7. Summer housing for prospects. According to Bylaw 13.2.5, an institution may rent dormitory space to a prospect during the summer months at the regular institutional rate, provided it is the institution's policy to make such dormitory space available on the same basis to all prospective students.

8. Precollege expenses. According to Bylaw 13.15.1.1, an institution or representative of its athletics interests shall not offer, provide or arrange financial assistance, directly or indirectly, to pay (in whole or in part) the cost of the prospect's educational or other expenses for any period prior to his or her enrollment, even for those prospects who have signed a National Letter of Intent, or an institutional offer of admission or written tender of financial assistance.

NCAA Bylaw 15.5.1.8—summer term aid

NCAA Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that according to Bylaw 15.5.1.8, institutional financial aid received during a summer term is not countable in the maximum institutional grant-in-aid limitations per Bylaw 15.5 and does not make the student-athlete a counter.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

South Carolina agrees to release athletes' drug-test results

The University of South Carolina, as part of the settlement of a lawsuit filed by a newspaper, has agreed to publicly report verifiable results of drug tests involving the school's student-athletes.

The school agreed to report future findings and released results of past tests in settling a lawsuit brought in March 1988 by The State newspaper, which sought access to testing records.

University officials believe South Carolina is one of the first NCAA member institutions to report drug-test results, according to United Press International.

"I'm not aware of any other school that does that, even though we encourage them to," said Frank Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences. "If more schools would be out front with information about their testing programs, I think allegations of mismanagement would cease."

The university reported June 9 that tests of athletes between March 1, 1988, and May 1, 1989, resulted in 38 confirmed positive tests—28 for alcohol, three each for marijuana and cocaine, two for steroids, and two for prescription drugs.

In settling the suit, the university agreed to a reporting process that includes verification of test results by the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis. The lab's findings, including types of drugs detected, will be reported in summary form at the end of every semester through the spring of 1991.

The newspaper, in return, agreed to drop its request for access to individual laboratory records that the school says it keeps in medical files for all students participating in such intercollegiate sports as football, basketball, baseball, golf and tennis.

About one-tenth of South Carolina's 350 student-athletes and trainers are selected weekly by a computer for testing. The program allows for more frequent testing when drug use is suspected, school officials said.

The first time a student tests positive for drug use or skips a test, the player's parents are notified. The athlete also is referred to substance-abuse counseling and is subject to more frequent urinalysis.

After September 1, athletes of all ages will face suspension for two positive tests for alcohol or any other drug, according to Dr. N. Peter Johnson, testing director. Currently, athletes of legal drinking age are not counseled or disciplined for alcohol use.

The agreement was announced only a few days after three former South Carolina assistant football coaches pleaded guilty before a Federal district judge to charges stemming from an investigation into distribution of illegal steroids to college players.

Another former assistant, Tom Gadd, pleaded innocent to charges that he conspired to have steroids shipped in interstate commerce and dispensed without a prescription. He is scheduled to stand trial in Columbia, South Carolina, June 19.

Pleading guilty June 1 to one count of dispensing steroids to players was former assistant Tom Kurucz, who also admitted lying to a Federal grand jury about his knowledge that coaches provided steroids to athletes and money for their purchase. He faces a one-year jail sentence and a $100,000 fine for the first count and a five-year term and a $250,000 fine for the grand-jury offense.

Also pleading guilty to a count of purchasing and importing anabolic steroids through the mail without prescriptions were former aides Keith Kephart and Jim Washburn, who face possible penalties of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

A separate trial is scheduled June 19 for John Landon Carter, a Bethesda, Maryland, man accused of providing steroids to former South Carolina players Tommy Chaikin, David Poinsett, Woody Myers and George Hyder.

It was Chaikin's allegations in Sports Illustrated last fall that made the university a target of Federal investigators.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Barton said the three coaches who pleaded guilty probably would be sentenced within four to six weeks. In return for their guilty pleas, additional charges against the men were dropped.

Duke concerned about rich-poor gap in athletics

By Dan Langendorf
Dallas Times Herald
Excerpted from a column

Retiring Big Ten Conference Commissioner Wayne Duke does not like what he sees in the future for intercollegiate athletics.

There are a postseason football play-off, more television influence, realignment of conferences, the "haves" getting richer while the "have nots" continue to struggle, and a certain confrontation between academics and athletics.

The 1990s promise to be a decade of change and, in a way, Duke is glad he is retiring. He has witnessed firsthand an infant NCAA and the rise of the Big Eight and Big Ten Conferences.

"I've been around the block,"

Wayne Duke

Duke said. "It's time to move on."

He still holds a romantic view of intercollegiate athletics, when athletes played for the love of their school and sport.

But that romantic view has given way to the big-money reality of the 1970s and '80s. Intercollegiate athletics now is being run by bottom-line businessmen, lawyers, market strategists and television executives, who now are shaping the future of college sports.

"I can't move anywhere without consulting attorneys," Duke said. "It's not as much fun anymore."

Duke remembers fondly his days at the NCAA. Executive Director Walter Byers hired Duke in 1952 as his first staff member. Duke's responsibilities included public relations and publications but he soon found himself "doing a little bit of everything."

Duke left after eight years to become, at age 34, the Big Eight Conference commissioner. No sooner had he arrived than the Orange Bowl terminated its contract with the conference. Many people thought the bowl had delivered the "death knell," but Duke kept the conference moving ahead, and the Orange Bowl eventually signed another contract.

Throughout his 37 years in athletics administration, Duke has heard every complaint and excuse imaginable, from athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives, coaches, athletes and fans. And, as he looks around intercollegiate athletics today, he is glad he is leaving.

The future is bright, Duke said, but there are things on the horizon that concern him.

Namely the play-off. "I hope it doesn't come about," he said. "I'm totally against it. I abhor some of the thinking behind it."

As a commissioner, Duke never worried about kingpins Oklahoma and Nebraska in the Big Eight, just as he never lost sleep over Ohio State and Michigan in the Big Ten. His concern was for the little guy, the Kansas States and Northwest-erns.

"A football play-off would further drive the division between the haves and the have-nots," he said. "I see a further division."

A further division also might bring about realignment of conferences. The most powerful football- and basketball-playing schools would form super conferences and reap the financial rewards, leaving the others out in the cold.

"There will be a reform agenda," Duke said. "But it should be freshman eligibility, shorter seasons and evaluation of academic standards."

Kentucky hopes fans make up for revenue lost to probation

By Mike Embry

Fans, friends and supporters are being counted on by the University of Kentucky to "come to the rescue" in overcoming expected losses in men's basketball revenues next season.

"We're in for some tough times, but our fans and alumni will give," said Gene DeFilippo, assistant athletics director in charge of the Blue and White Fund. "That was proven the past year."

"Although it will be tough the next year or two, our fans will give a little bit more to give us what we need. I really think our fans will come to the rescue."

The Blue and White Fund was started in 1973 to raise money for athletics.

Kentucky is expected to lose $2 million from NCAA sanctions imposed last month that include a two-year ban on postseason play and one season without live television.

Among the estimated $1 million in losses from live TV are nearly $250,000 from Southeastern Conference TV, $125,000 from the Big Four Classic, $125,000 from the annual game with Louisville, $135,000 from the Kentucky Invitational Tournament and $350,000 from other live telecasts.

The school also must repay $388,200 for participating in the 1988 Division I men's basketball tournament with an ineligible player, and it faces $356,675 in legal expenses incurred during the 13-month investigation.

But while Kentucky will be out of TV money, the school has successfully tapped other sources of income that should help it through the relatively lean season.

Fund-raising increased nearly three-fold, from $754,000 to nearly $2.2 million in 1988.

And last year, the university grossed in excess of $450,000 in royalties from souvenirs, said DeFilippo.

The university plans to explore other sources of revenue, including the construction of luxury boxes at Commonwealth Stadium for the 1990 football season that should bring in $500,000.

Kentucky receives no tax-dollar support for the athletics program and must rely on ticket sales, TV receipts, away-game guarantees, and contributions to the Blue and White Fund.

And despite the expected financial woes, the school's athletics association recently approved a $15.9 million budget for 1989-90—an increase of $1.1 million over the previous budget.

DeFilippo said fund-raising efforts have been made easier by C. M. Newton, who became the school's athletics director April 1. Since that time, Newton made 18 stops across the state to meet with alumni groups.

"C. M. will help us so much," said

DeFilippo. "He's the best PR man in the county. He will boost fund-raising a bunch."

And newly hired basketball coach Rick Pitino is expected to give the school a lift during the hard times.

"Rick Pitino has brought a new beginning to UK," DeFilippo said.

Embry writes for the Associated Press.

Athletes don't appreciate aid, degrees

Lois Myers, former head women's basketball coach
University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa
The Atlanta Journal and Constitution

"Generally speaking, college athletes do not appreciate the value of a scholarship. They don't appreciate a college degree; they don't appreciate the travel and cultural experience that's available to them or the fact they start out their working lives without the debt of a college education."

"No matter what level, whether it's Division I-A or NAIA, it seems like kids have their hands out. They're never satisfied."

Robert S. Devaney, athletics director
University of Nebraska, Lincoln
Omaha World-Herald

"I think the players and coaches have fun and enjoy the bowls the way they are now."

"I'm not sure they would have that much fun if four or five weeks were added to the season (with a Division I-A play-off). But if enough coaches wanted it, I'd be for it. If Tom Osborne (head football coach) thought it was a good idea, then I'd be for it."

Michael Stonebreaker, varsity football player
University of Notre Dame
Chicago Tribune

"I always thought I was indestructible—played football at Notre Dame; never been hurt in my life. Nothing."

"Been dealing with 300-pound guys, just throwing them around. I just thought things like this (car accident and conviction for driving while under the influence) could never happen to me."

"I was on top of the world. We had won the national championship. I was a potential first-round draft choice next year. And now, I'm back at the bottom again. Don't know if I'll play football next year."

"I'm not out saying this just for the hell of it or to get my community service done. People are telling you (high school students) this all the time: 'Don't do drugs. Don't drink and drive.' They're not out to give you a hard time; they're doing it because they care about you."

Bob Hurt, columnist
The Arizona Republic

"Here's a guy under pressure. He's middle-aged, probably on his last coaching stop. He sees others around him bending rules. Competition is part of his life. But how can he compete without cheating? It's the old fighting-fire-with-fire syndrome."

"It matters not where the pressures come from. It's there. It may be self-inflicted. It may come from athletics directors who have big dough in big arenas. It may come from presidents who see what successful athletics can do to fund-raising."

"Or, it may be all of the above."

"And the pressure grows. New facilities bring larger debt-service and maintenance costs. Full women's sports programs must be subsidized. More dough is available annually in postseason events and for TV appearances."

"The national average for victories is 50 percent. But how many colleges will settle for that?"

Rev. William J. Byron, president
Catholic University
The Washington Post

"To the young, we should be saying simply this: Do not be taken in by the big lie our culture of consumerism perpetuates. Do not believe that to have is to be, that to have more is to be more fully human and, worst lie of all, that to live easily is to live happily."

"If they can say yes—and really mean it—to that simple lesson, the young will be able to say no to drugs. If enough of them do, the bottom will fall out on the demand side of the market for drugs. In the face of no demand, the supply we seem to be unable to control will no longer be the problem we seem to be unable to solve."

Academics should be pushed at earlier age, coaches say

By Darryl Richards
The Dallas Morning News

Nolan Richardson, men's basketball coach at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, says Proposition 48 is a permanent part of college athletics and coaches must continue to raise the consciousness of athletes and start reaching athletes at a younger age.

Richardson, speaking during a panel discussion on Proposition 48 and Proposal 42, addressed the issue at the recent Black Coaches Association convention in Dallas.

Richardson, along with Georgetown University coach John Thompson, expressed displeasure with Proposal 42, saying it prevents athletes from having the opportunity to attend college because it withholds financial aid to athletes who do not completely satisfy the requirements of Proposition 48.

"Many of the parents today are products of the early '60s. Ask how many kids have parents that graduated from college," Richardson said. "There are not that many."

Ron Dickerson, an assistant football coach at Pennsylvania State University, challenged coaches to work with students during summer camps. Dickerson said if coaches spent 40 minutes a day during their camps providing instruction on preparing for entrance exams, the athletes would be more aware and better prepared for the SAT and the ACT.

"Most of us have camps and that extra time can do a lot for an athlete," Dickerson said. "If we can get to the athlete by the time he's in the ninth grade, a lot of athletes can receive the help they need."

Coaches within the organization called for the Black Coaches Association to propose legislation to shorten the basketball season to allow the athletes more study time.

"Basketball is unique in that it takes up two semesters to play," said Richard Walker, basketball coach at Florida International University. "Maybe the solution is to start at a later date and end at a later date. Then a student has a semester to concentrate on academics."

Red ink coloring Southwest Conference reports

By Alan Truex
Houston Chronicle

Regardless of the danger of the University of Texas, Austin; Texas A&M University, and the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, bailing out of the Southwest Athletic Conference during the next decade or so, the fact that such an exodus is being discussed seriously underscores the financial plight of the venerable alliance.

"Most of the schools are operating in the red," says Texas athletics director DeLoss Dodds. "The revenues aren't there, and expenses keep going up."

Dodds foresees a "crisis" that could come "in the next year or so."

Don McGuire, who produced SWC game telecasts for Raycom, Inc., during 1983-87, says: "They're close to a disaster, I can tell you that. The television money for the Southwest Conference hasn't come close to offsetting their losses. The TV money is absolutely stagnant."

McGuire, who now is vice-president of TBS Sports, headquartered in Atlanta, sees no mystery to the decline.

"During the last five years," he says, "there's been nothing out of the Southwest Conference but bad news, probations and that sort of stuff."

Even before those factors began to hurt, however, the conference was suffering a gradual slide in football attendance.

In 1979, SWC football crowds averaged 44,461 per game. By last season, the average had shrunk to 38,739.

The University of Houston, which averaged 43,800 for its 1977 football games, was down to 22,593 for 1988 despite a record-setting run-and-shoot offense.

Meanwhile, a couple of judicial rulings have had a major impact on the financial structure of college sports.

Among them was a 1984 Federal court ruling that broke NCAA control over television rights, allowing the individual schools and conferences to negotiate their own TV deals with a variety of networks.

Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the SWC, estimates that deregulation of the televising of college football "cut the rights fees about in half. And it forced us to put together a conference TV package to try to recapture some of the money we lost."

"Then, that caused overexposure and loss of money at the gate."

With CBS, TBS and ESPN all showing college games nationwide, the football fan is tempted to stay home and punch his remote-control buttons instead of going to the stadium.

But the SWC is losing out in the TV competition, going down at the tube as well as at the gate.

Raycom publicity director Rick Redding says the conference television ratings fell 11 percent last season.

Redding said the 7.0 average rating (meaning seven percent of the television-owning households were tuned to SWC football) was still a respectable mark considering the heavy sports competition, but the trend was not encouraging.

The hope expressed by Southwest Conference coaches and athletics directors is that the bad news is behind them.

Spike Dykes, football coach at Texas Tech University, said, "Right now, the Southwest Conference's credibility is not what we wish it was, and I understand that. But for years and years, the credibility of this conference was as good as any conference in the nation."

Dykes claims that even if Texas, Texas A&M and Arkansas were to jump to the Southeastern Conference, the 75-year-old SWC would continue to compete in football and other sports.

"It would be a different game," Dykes concedes. "But I'm sure we'd survive."

Baylor football coach Grant Teaff says, "I don't think it would do anything to Baylor. I would dare say there would be some folks who would have an interest in joining this conference."

Prep coaches ask recruiters to be honest

High school coaches have one message for would-be college recruiters, according to a recent report in The Dallas Morning News. Their word of wisdom?

Honesty.

"Be honest, be up front, be clean," said Dwight Thomas of Escambia High School in Pensacola, Florida—alma mater of University of Florida star Emmitt Smith. Thomas was on a five-man panel that addressed 135 coaches and athletics administrators during a session held in conjunction with the recent College Football Association convention.

Tom Kimbrough, a prep football coach in Plano, Texas, joined Thomas in condemning current tactics by recruiters—including incessant telephone calls to prospects' homes.

"I just chew a kid's tail out, and the (college) assistant coach calls and said, 'Hey, you played a great game.' I tell the player, 'You graded a 45.' Who do you think he'll believe?"

Another high school coach on the panel, former Texas Christian University quarterback David Rascoe, also noted the need for prospects to be just as honest as the coaches who are recruiting them.

"Recruits have to do that," he said, in response to a question from Auburn University assistant coach Pat Sullivan—himself a former standout quarterback. "Coaches have a responsibility not to lead players on. And the players have a responsibility to narrow their choices."

Shockers jolt 'Horns, win College World Series

Greg Brummett won his third game of the College World Series and Pat Meares' two-run home run in the fifth inning provided the margin of victory as Wichita State defeated Texas, 5-3, to win its first NCAA baseball championship.

Brummett, 18-2, became the seventh pitcher in College World Series history to win three games. He defeated Arkansas twice, 3-1 and 8-4, earlier in the June 2-10 tournament at Rosenblatt Stadium in Omaha, Nebraska.

"We were determined to win the tournament," said Brummett, who was named the series' most outstanding player. "I was tired. I just had to suck it up. I've pitched on three days' rest before this season but the results haven't been this good."

Brummett was shaky in the first inning, walking Texas leadoff hitter Lance Jones and giving up a single to David Tollison that advanced Jones to third base.

What followed resulted in the "turning point of the game," said Brummett.

He faked a pick-off throw to third, then wheeled left and fired to first to put out the surprised Tollison. Brummett then struck out the next two hitters to escape without allowing a run.

Said Brummett, "They had gained some confidence and I lost some confidence after those first two hitters. Then I got the pick-off, and right then and there, it gave me all the confidence in the world."

Shocker coach Gene Stephenson said his team was determined to return to the College World Series this year, after coming within one strike of reaching last year's championship game before losing to eventual runner-up Arizona State.

Said Stephenson, "I'm numb. It's a marvelous feeling just to be a part of it—to be a part of these guys and see what they have done in the last six weeks, to overcome the things they've had to overcome. You didn't see the best team we had this year, but you saw a team with a big heart, a very strong-willed team that wouldn't quit no matter what."

The Shockers played the tournament without shortstop Mike Lansing and right fielder Jeff Bonacquist, who were injured. An-

"He beat the tag," says umpire Dale Williams. Wichita State's Mike Jones, caught in a rundown between third and home, snuck under the tag of Texas pitcher Brian Dare after Longhorn third baseman Craig Newkirk mishandled a throw during the play.

other four starters played with injuries, including first baseman Bryant Winslow, who braved a stress fracture in his right leg.

After hobbling to field ground balls throughout postseason play, Winslow collided with Texas' Jones in the fifth inning of the championship game as Jones safely reached first base on a bunt. Winslow fell to the ground in agony.

"He wouldn't come out (of the game)," said Stephenson. "I told him to just stand on the base, do not move, but after one pitch he put some weight on it and realized he couldn't do anything."

Catcher Eric Wedge, who promised Stephenson last December that the Shockers would win the national championship, said it was hard for the players to control their emotions as Winslow finally was helped off the field.

"He was a tremendous inspiration to the whole club," Wedge said. "He had tears in his eyes. What he said was, 'You guys have got to win this thing. Don't you dare lose this game.'"

Wichita State was ahead 3-2 when Winslow left the game. Joey Wilson, Winslow's replacement, singled with one out in the bottom of the fifth inning; then Meares blasted his second home run of the tournament for a 5-2 lead.

The Shockers became the first team from outside the Sun Belt to win the championship in 23 years. Ohio State's 1966 squad was the last champion from a state outside of Arizona, California, Florida or Texas.

Joining Brummett on the all-tournament team were Shocker teammates Wedge, Meares (shortstop), outfielders Jim Audley and Todd Dreifort, and pitcher Jim Newlin; first baseman David Lowry, third baseman Craig Newkirk, outfielder Arthur Bryant and designated hitter Scott Bryant of Texas, and second baseman Rocky Rau of Florida State.

The tournament drew a record 132,865 fans, breaking the mark of 132,698 set last year.

Sooners end frustration with I men's golf triumph

Oklahoma broke a string of frustrating finishes in the Division I Men's Golf Championships by playing a solid final round to easily win the school's first team title in the sport June 10. The tournament was held at the Oak Tree Country Club, Edmond, Oklahoma.

Doug Martin shot a 3-under-par 67 in the final round, as the Sooners finished the tournament at 1,139—19 over par and 19 strokes ahead of runner-up Texas. "This just flat out was a team effort, that's all there is to it," Martin said. "It's great to have five guys come together and play like this."

Oklahoma's 19-shot margin of victory is the largest since 1975, when Wake Forest beat Oklahoma State by 33 strokes.

Phil Mickelson of Arizona State won individual honors, becoming the first freshman titlist since Houston's Billy Ray Brown in 1982. Mickelson had rounds of 71 and 74 June 10 to finish at 281, one over par and four strokes ahead of six players.

The 36-hole final was necessitated when rain washed out the opening round June 7.

Oklahoma began the final day tied for first with Arizona State. The Sooners then played the opening 18 holes in 3-over-par 283, leaving them with an 851 total and a 10-stroke lead over Texas heading into the final round.

Texas had moved from fifth to second thanks to a 4-over 284 in the third round. Clemson finished third at 1,160, followed by Oklahoma State in fourth with 1,162. Arizona State dropped to fifth place with 1,166.

Mickelson began the final 18 holes with a one-stroke lead over Robert Gamez of Arizona. Although Mickelson played 4-over, Gamez stumbled as well, shooting a

Rink coach stays

Ice hockey coach Doug Woog of the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, says he turned down an offer to become an assistant coach for the Minnesota North Stars.

"I like amateur athletics and the university setting," Woog said June 7 after meeting with North Stars officials.

"There is more to life than the game, and I don't see any reason to leave the university," Woog told the Associated Press.

The 45-year-old Woog has coached the Gophers for four years and has a 137-48-4 record. His teams won back-to-back championships in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association the past two seasons, and this year's team was runner-up in the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Sport's second black coach repeats achievement

When Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science hired Alison Williams as its women's lacrosse coach this spring, she became the second black women's lacrosse coach in the country. Recently, she also became the second black field hockey coach in the nation when the school named her to that position.

The other black lacrosse coach is Tina Sloan-Green, who coached Williams at Temple University. The other black field hockey coach is Michelle Madison, recently hired at Temple.

"It is an honor," said Williams. "Getting the job shows that athletics director Len Nardone feels very positive about me and knows I can build the program and do a good job. Being among the few black coaches doesn't really affect me. It's great to be in a position of having two head-coaching jobs. My main goal is to rebuild winning programs."

"She's proven herself in lacrosse," said associate director of athletics Julie Soriero. "She's proved her organizational skills, her administrative skills, her ability to motivate and keep the team together. The team showed constant progress. This should provide greater consistency in both programs.

"I also was impressed with her willingness to admit her weaknesses. She knows she's better at coaching lacrosse, but she has done her research on (field) hockey and expressed interest in going to camps and clinics to learn more. That's an earmark of her enthusiasm."

Williams played high school field hockey and lacrosse, and two years of hockey and four seasons of lacrosse at Temple. She played on Temple's 1984 national-championship lacrosse team and in four "final fours" with the Lady Owls.

Williams coached field hockey for two summers in the National Youth Sports Program at Temple. In 1988, she coached the Brandywine (Delaware) High School varsity and junior varsity lacrosse teams, which had not won a game in three years, guiding the varsity to an 8-2 record and the junior varsity to an undefeated campaign.

She faces a similar rebuilding project at Textile. The lacrosse team was 2-8 in 1988. Williams was hired in March with little time to prepare for the season. The Lady Rams were 2-11 but had shown steady improvement by the end of the season.

The field hockey team was 0-13 in 1988 and 2-10-1 in 1987.

"I'm very excited," said Williams, who graduated from Temple in 1987 with a degree in journalism. "I know I can do a lot with the team. They have enthusiasm and know they have talent. It needs to be molded together. Coaching field hockey and lacrosse is an advantage in recruiting. Sometimes you can see a good lacrosse player who also plays field hockey. You get one good athlete who can play two sports."

Academic all-America softball teams are announced

Renovation set for Butler fieldhouse

Butler University's 61-year-old Hinkle Fieldhouse will undergo a $1.5 million renovation approved by the executive committee of the institution's board of trustees and announced June 7 by President Geoffrey Bannister.

The project will be the first phase in a total renovation of the facility named after longtime Butler coach and athletics administrator Paul D. "Tony" Hinkle. The renovation is targeted for completion next fall, in time for the 1989-90 basketball season.

New offices for men's and women's basketball and women's volleyball, new locker rooms for all three sports, and a new training room, as well as new lower-level chairback seating and a VIP clubroom, will highlight the interior renovation. The exterior changes will include enhanced entryways, new roofing and windows, landscaping, a new message board, and a resurfaced parking lot.

Other improvements will include a new public address system, a new classroom and painting of the upper-level seating.

"The renovation of Hinkle Fieldhouse has become a major priority for the institution," Bannister said. "The first phase will combine the building's historic character with improvements for our coaches, student-athletes and fans."

Atlantic 10 picks new officers, keeps postseason format

Atlantic 10 Conference Commissioner Ron Bertovich has announced the league's 1989-90 officers. Elected in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, during the Atlantic 10's annual meeting, were Steve Bilsky, director of athletics at George Washington University, president; Charles Theokas, director of athletics at Temple University, vice-president; and Don J. DiJulia, director of athletics at St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania), treasurer. Lawrence J. Weise, director of athletics at St. Bonaventure University, is immediate past president.

Bertovich also announced the addition of women's cross country to the Atlantic 10 roster of championship sports. The league now sponsors seven championships for women and six for men.

League members also voted to retain the format used for its 1989 men's basketball championship—one of the most interesting in all of college basketball. All preliminary rounds, through the semifinals, are played at a neutral site—this year and again in 1990, Philadelphia's Palestra.

The Atlantic 10 championship, however, will be determined on the home court of the highest-seeded finalist. "The perception of last year's (tournament) was (that it was) the best the conference has ever had," Bertovich offered. "We feel that

Finnish football fans find favor with coach from Carleton

Willard K. Tuomi, associate professor and assistant football coach at Carleton College, may not be the greatest sports figure in Joensuu, Finland, but he apparently is one of the most popular.

Last summer, Tuomi visited Finland for the first time and took on the task of coaching the Joensuu Wolves, an all-volunteer football team made up of 35 men between the ages of 15 and 29. In their third year of existence, the Wolves compiled a 4-4 record while playing in Division I, the second most competitive league of the American Football Association of Finland.

Tuomi, who has coached football at Carleton for 33 years, made such a positive impression on members of his team that they asked him to come back and coach them again this summer.

"Everything about Finland impressed me," said Tuomi, formerly of Hibbing, Minnesota. "My parents came from Finland, and I had always wanted to go there. The country is just beautiful, and the weather was perfect. My wife and I were treated very well by everyone we met, especially the players and their families."

When Tuomi left for Finland last summer, he wasn't sure what to expect from his football team. He knew the Finns had been playing American-style football for several years, and he understood they played football primarily for fun.

I-A consortium out to attract new sponsorship

Approximately 35 NCAA Division I-A schools have made verbal agreements to form a consortium to link collegiate sports with corporate sponsorship.

"Corporate America wants us, and it's time for us to get a little smarter and get involved," said Fred L. Miller, director of athletics at San Diego State University.

"This is the way of the world, and it's time for us to get in pace. It's a different stream of income, and there are not many out there to tap."

Miller, speaking in Anaheim, California, at the convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, said he expects 35 to 40 Division I-A schools to have agreements signed by July 1. He said schools initially can earn as much as $400,000.

"It's safe to say colleges are underfunded, and it's up to us to change it," Miller told United Press International June 7. "The market is telling us to get involved. We want their dollars. Why not? All we're doing is what the rest of the world is doing."

The plan calls for 12 national sponsors for collegiate sports and sponsors for individual games. Corporations could lend their names to stadiums and even quarters of games, as well as supplying advertising in programs and on radio and television.

"We have our ideas, but we don't want to make it an easy buy," Miller said. "We want to have the leverage to maximize the dollars for the universities."

Miller said he has spoken to several major corporations but would not reveal their names, "because we'd lose leverage in negotiating with other companies. We have several corporations in place right now, but we expect bids against those."

"I went there to do the best job I could and to have fun doing it," he said. "I wanted the players to have fun, too."

Tuomi and the Wolves did have fun, but the season was not without its problems. First, there was the language barrier.

"We had 25 seconds to get the play in from the bench," said Tuomi, who did not speak Finnish. "There were a few times when the quarterback couldn't understand me and ran the wrong play. Fortunately, there were five kids on the team who were exchange students in the United States. So, things could have been worse."

As the season progressed, so did Tuomi's understanding of the Finnish language. "About halfway through the season, our quarterback got the team together for a meeting one day," he said. "I heard him tell his teammates, 'you better be more careful about what you say because (Coach Tuomi) understands more than you think.'"

Tuomi also discovered that his players had physical limitations. "For some unknown reason, they block better than tackle," he said. "Our biggest weakness was in the defensive secondary. Most of the players had no vertical leap—only about four or five inches off the ground—so they would let the receiver catch the ball, then jump on his back and bulldog him down."

"You can get frustrated, but I told myself to be patient. Some of the problems we had on defense were my fault because I spent so much time working on offense."

And what about the offense?

"We didn't have much of a passing game. I hope we'll improve on that part of our game this summer," he said. "But I was very pleased with the way things turned out. The team advanced a league from the year before and was not expected to stay in Division I."

Willard K. Tuomi

The Wolves did hold their own, finishing in the middle of their division standings. "All things considered, the kids did real well, and they seemed to enjoy themselves," Tuomi said.

The Finns do seem to enjoy the combative nature of football, Tuomi said, but not enough to play with a lot of pain.

"Anytime they got a little bump or bruise, they said something was broken," he said. "They got a bump on the head and their head was broken. They banged their neck and their neck was broken. The government pays for all medical treatment, so about half of the team would see a doctor the day after a game. But they all seemed to heal by game day."

Tuomi already has left Carleton for Joensuu. His wife, Doris, will join him later.

Players don't need more games, Nehlen says of play-off proposal

West Virginia University football coach Don Nehlen, whose Mountaineers lost the mythical national title in the Fiesta Bowl last season, has ridiculed a College Football Association proposal to hold a 16-team Division I-A play-off.

The proposal surfaced during the CFA's annual meeting in Dallas, which Nehlen attended. The CFA appointed a committee to study the plan.

"A play-off is absolutely ridiculous," Nehlen told United Press International June 7. "Adding three or four games to a season doesn't excite me. By the end of a season, our kids are all beat up. They don't need to play more games."

Nehlen sees no reason to scrap the current bowl system in favor of a play-off similar to the NCAA's basketball Final Four.

"The bowls are very, very important to college football," he said. "Why? Because every year 30 teams go to bowls and they get about $33 million from them, that's why. I have no problem with the bowl system. It has been very good for West Virginia."

CFA officials have said a 16-team play-off would generate about $80 million, a bonanza that would be shared by all Division I-A schools. Nehlen said the colleges would enrich themselves at the expense of the players.

"We can't even get them (players) $50 a month spending money, but we want to find a way to make another $80 million off them. That's a bunch of bull crap," he said. "Right now, the kids don't get one red cent."

Until we do something about that, I'm not in favor of asking more out of them."

Nehlen also said West Virginia, which rose to national prominence last season with an 11-1 record and a national-title battle against Notre Dame, would be shut out of a play-off system.

"Let's just suppose a 16-team play-off got approved. And let's say both West Virginia and Penn State had 9-2 records. Which team do you think would get in the play-off? I'll give you three guesses, and the first two don't count," he said.

"You can forget about a play-off."

'Glasnost Bowl' canceled; game moved to Los Angeles

The so-called Glasnost Bowl was canceled June 8, a victim of contractual problems between the host country and the television network that had hoped to televise the first American college football game to be played in the Soviet Union.

The game between the University of Southern California and the University of Illinois, Champaign, which was scheduled for September 2 in Moscow, will instead be played in Los Angeles during the first two weeks of September.

Announcement of the cancellation was made by Rick Ray, head of Raycom, Inc., at the North Carolina television company's Charlotte office. Raycom had been in charge of all arrangements for the game.

Tim Tessalone, sports information director at Southern Cal, said it is hoped the game will be televised nationally by a major network.

James Madison adds to program

James Madison University will add women's soccer to its intercollegiate sports program.

JMU, which has had a club-level women's soccer program operated through its recreational activities office since 1979, will begin intercollegiate competition in 1990. The first season of play will be against a schedule of junior varsity teams, NCAA Divisions II and III varsity teams, and NAIA teams. In 1991, the Dukes' schedule will consist primarily of NCAA Division I varsity teams.

A coach for the women's soccer program is scheduled to be hired by January 1, 1990, according to athletics director Dean Ehlers.

Lacrosse added

Men's lacrosse will be added to the roster of varsity sports at Canisius College starting in 1989-90, according to athletics director Daniel P. Starr. Canisius then will have 20 intercollegiate sports.

"Our students showed an interest in lacrosse by organizing a club team and playing at that level for the last four years," Starr said.

Ed Van Tine will coach the team. He compiled an 18-23 record during a five-year term at Buffalo State (1980-1984) and was named the State University of New York Athletic Conference coach of the year in 1983.

Raycom officials made the decision to cancel after contractual concerns arose within the past two weeks that could not be resolved with Soviet sports authorities.

Raycom officials were uncomfortable mainly with the arrangements for hotel rooms and transportation, said Ken Haines, the company's executive vice-president, in a telephone interview with the Associated Press.

Additionally, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported that Southern Cal athletics director Mike McGee and coach Larry Smith were disappointed in the teams' accommodations during a tour of Moscow last month.

"The accommodations were substandard, no question about that," Haines said. "We knew all along that they were not up to standards (that major college teams are used to). More than that, the overriding concern was whether they would actually be there in the numbers we needed when it was time for the game."

Haines said there also were concerns about the stadium.

TOP TEAMS CHOOSE SONY FOR SPORTS VIDEO ...AND SO SHOULD YOU!

ED-Beta Camcorder

THE SONY SPORTS VIDEO SYSTEM IS COMPRISED OF THREE MAIN ELEMENTS:

1. Field Acquisition System: a professional camcorder and lens from Sony. Like those used by news crews and TV broadcasters. Weather resistant, shock resistant, and tough — just like your players. Follow both teams at wide angle, or zoom in close at one touch of a button. The auto-iris lets you follow a play from sunlight to shadows with all the resolution you would expect from a Sony professional camera.
2. Dub/Edit System: allows you to make multiple copies of a tape in its entirety, or just specific plays — a valuable aid to your coaching staff. Just use one deck for playback and one additional deck for each break-down tape you wish to make. The results are smooth, high quality video, play after play.
3. Coaches' Viewing System: one ED-Beta Sports Deck coupled with a Sony high resolution monitor for the coach's office or a Sony large screen projection system for meeting rooms. A sports remote control handle lets you choose smooth forward or reverse play PLUS noise free slow motion and stop motion with full color reproduction.

For more information and the phone number of your nearest Sony regional office, call 1-800-523-SONY.

After 25 years, arthroscopy has become routine

By Ira Dreyfuss

In the presence of successful arthroscopic surgery, even the proudest of athletes may bend the knee.

That's the whole point.

In the years since arthroscopy first was performed in North America in Toronto, in 1964 athletes have been hobbling to their orthopedic surgeons expecting to walk, run and jump afterward.

Left fielder Kal Daniels of the Cincinnati Reds and quarterback Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers, for instance, have gone in for knee repairs more often than some people change tires.

They and other athletes are banking on arthroscopy's record as a winner. A sports-medicine knee specialist using an arthroscope simply to diagnose a knee problem, one of the tool's primary uses, may make an accurate diagnosis "99 percent of the time," says Dr. Frank R. Noyes, director of the Cincinnati Sports Medicine Center.

The doctors say the arthroscope—a fiber-optic tube connected to a TV monitor—lets them do precise surgery with minimal damage to healthy tissue. Using an arthroscope, a surgeon can poke into hidden areas, make detailed examinations, and work with smaller incisions that allow faster and more thorough healing.

Surgery typically requires no overnight hospitalization; in many cases, athletes can be back in action in months.

However, the speed of recovery varies with the kind of injury and the kind of surgery.

One common problem is a rip in the meniscus, a pad of cartilage that acts as a shock absorber between the two main bones of the knee. Surgeons can examine the meniscus by arthroscope and remove only damaged parts, instead of having to remove the entire cartilage on the suspicion that there may be hidden damage.

A patient may recover in as little as four to six weeks, says Dr. Carl L. Stanitski, associate clinical professor of orthopedics at the University of Pittsburgh.

Sports-medicine specialists see many injuries to ligaments that hold the upper leg bone to the shinbone, especially the anterior cruciate ligament in the front of the leg. Treatment has involved a painstaking sewing process, but Noyes reports success in substituting ligament from another part of a patient's body. With early rehabilitation, a patient can have a full range of motion in the knee in four to six weeks, Noyes said.

A potentially more serious problem is injury to the gristle surfaces of the joint itself—what's called the articular cartilage. Stanitski says it can be a precursor to arthritis. Doctors can smooth rough spots in the articular cartilage, but the fibrous cartilage that may replace it is scar tissue and won't have as much shock absorption or as smooth a gliding surface.

Moreover, the well-publicized speedy recoveries of superstar athletes do not imply that mere mortals will be on their feet as fast.

For one thing, these athletes are younger, which means they tend to heal faster.

For another, pro athletes are under the financial gun to get a problem fixed fast. So they seek—and get—treatment sooner, says Dr. Robert P. Nirschl, medical director of the Virginia Sports Medicine Institute, Arlington. A recreational athlete's doctor may have the option of seeing if an injury will heal itself, given enough time.

And, says Nirschl, a pro is more likely to get the finest of rehabilitation. "The facts of the matter are that a recreational athlete rarely gets that," he says. Nirschl also says that elite athletes—with their careers hinging on the recovery of their knees' hinging action—have more motivation to stick with the exercises.

Proper strength and endurance exercises beforehand can reduce the need of rehabilitative exercises later, says Dr. Joseph Feagin of Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

Feagin, a former team physician for the U.S. Military Academy, says fatigue can set up a knee injury by tiring the leg muscles, weakening their support. Feagin, who sees many hurt skiers in the resort area, says ski injuries to knees often come in the last hour on the slope.

He recommends a year-round conditioning program involving running, biking and an agility sport, such as tennis. In addition, he says, a strength program should start at least eight to 10 weeks before the start of the season. And, he says, the program should concentrate on the abdomen and hips as well as the legs, because virtually all the muscles that control the knees start in the pelvis.

The athletes most likely to make arthroscopy a fascinating part of their lives are those who put torque on their knees—especially those who have their legs anchored as they twist. These include football, soccer and tennis players, as well as skiers.

Feagin recommends developing an ability to do the twist. He recommends trying the grass drills that football coaches subject their players to. And, he says, aerobics teachers can incorporate more twisting exercises into their routines.

New award set

Another award for academic performance has been established—this one by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA). The Delta Scholar-Athlete Award will be cosponsored by NACDA and Delta Airlines, according to Homer Rice, athletics director at Georgia Institute of Technology and chair of NACDA's Mission and Values Committee.

Two Division I-A graduating senior student-athletes (one male and one female) will be honored annually.

In addition to graduating at the end of the spring or summer session of the current academic year, a nominee must have a minimum 3.000 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in his or her academic program and must have been an outstanding athlete. Nominees also must demonstrate strong character traits and be contributors to some worthy projects outside their roles as student-athletes.

Winners will be selected by the committee, and the inaugural presentation is set for October 10 in Tucson, Arizona.

Nominations for the first awards must be submitted by June 30 to Tim Gleason, NACDA assistant executive director, at P.O. Box 16428, Cleveland, Ohio 44116.

Most college athletes are in shape—but not all of them

Editor's note: The following article was written by George R. Lesmes, professor and director of the Human Performance Laboratory at Northwestern Illinois University; William Schaffer, associate professor at the school; Dennis J. Keihn, director of athletics, intramurals and recreation at NIU, and Dr. Richard Bonfiglio, chief resident at the Schwab Rehabilitation Center.

College athletes are normally thought to be some of the healthiest individuals in our society. After all, we think that if they were not healthy, they could not compete. This is generally, but not universally, true; most athletes are very healthy, but there are a surprising number of undiagnosed or undetected problems that affect some athletes' athletics or academic performances. More ominously, there are rare conditions that, if undiagnosed, would put the athlete's career or life at risk.

Many young athletes do not receive adequate medical care. These athletes come to a college or university with a desire to participate in intercollegiate athletics after receiving little or no medical attention for a number of years. Universities have the opportunity and the obligation to become health-care providers for their athletes.

The athletes are representatives of the university and therefore should not be subject to exploitation of their health. That is similar to the academic exploitation that has occurred all too often, where students are used for their athletics abilities while their academic needs are neglected. A responsible institution owes its athletes an environment in which they can flourish, and a part of this environment should be an opportunity to maximize personal health.

Along with this moral responsibility, there may be legal obligations. Although there is no legal precedent for an athlete successfully suing an athletics department for negligence in preseason screening procedures, successful suits have been brought in professional athletics in cases where athletes were allowed to play before they had adequately recovered from injuries or illness. In another case somewhat related to athletics, a physician was successfully sued for not stress-testing a patient before he began an exercise program when a stress test was obviously warranted.

At Northeastern Illinois University, a mandatory comprehensive screening program for athletes has been established through the efforts of the Human Performance Laboratory, the athletics department and Schwab Rehabilitation Center. This program includes a full musculoskeletal exam by a physical medicine specialist, cardiac stress test, blood chemistry with lipid profile, complete blood count, urinalysis, pulmonary function test, isokinetic strength test, and vision-acuity, tonometry, peripheral-vision and audiometry tests for all athletes. The evaluation will be repeated as needed for returning athletes and administered to all new athletes in subsequent years.

Many of the student-athletes have never undergone a majority of these procedures.

The evaluation serves several purposes: It detects currently undiagnosed health problems; it serves as baseline measurement of health status that can then be compared with any changes due to injury or changes in health status during the season or later in life; it alerts the coaching and athletics training personnel to deficiencies or areas where additional conditioning is needed; it educates the athlete about lifestyle changes that may help to protect future health; in addition, the information gathered is assimilated into a specialized data base, and these evaluations provide graduate students in the exercise science and cardiac rehabilitation programs with practical experience in the assessment of an athletic population.

The Human Performance Laboratory screening procedures start with blood laboratory tests. A lipid profile is performed for early detection of and reduction of heart disease risk.

Numerous studies have pointed out that atherosclerosis has already progressed in many college-age individuals and a baseline cholesterol test is recommended to find those at highest risk so that dietary intervention and modification can be instituted. This year, over 30 percent of the athletes tested had cholesterol levels above the level recommended for older adults.

A complete blood count is also performed. Based on this, one case of moderate anemia, which decreases endurance capacity, especially in females, was found. Substance abuse, including alcohol and steroids, is a growing problem with young people, and it may be manifested by increased liver enzymes in the blood, even at an early age. Thus, this test can serve as a warning to the athletes and coaches about needed behavioral changes.

The stress test is a major part of the overall examination. It gives the coach and the athlete a measurement of cardiovascular fitness. Also, the stress-test electrocardiogram usually detects several types of abnormalities that can be life-threatening for young athletes. Deaths of young athletes due to cardiovascular causes are generally due to undiagnosed abnormalities of the coronary arteries or abnormally thick heart muscle walls. These abnormalities can be detected at rest or during exercise.

Young people are not immune to hypertension, which also is routinely detected during the test. Although hypertension may not be acutely threatening to young people, medical and dietary treatment will lessen the negative effects of this condition later in life, so the earlier the detection, the better.

Three individuals with abnormalities were detected by our screening: one case of hypertension and two cases of abnormal heart rhythms. They were referred to our consulting cardiologist for further evaluation before they were allowed to join their respective teams. A number of others had borderline readings that were followed.

Complete physical examination detected a rotator cuff tear and chondromalacia patella, which, if left undetected, could eventually have impaired athletics performance. In addition, Cybex isokinetic muscle testing of the thighs is routinely done. This testing procedure gives the coach and trainer an accurate indication of the athletes' muscular strength and the balance between muscle groups.

We observed three minor cases of instability in athletes' knees that needed rehabilitation and numerous cases where major strength imbalances between muscle groups were present. These athletes were advised to change their strength training regimens to correct these problems.

Body composition was assessed with underwater weighing and skin-fold methods. For athletes with excess body fat, weight reduction was recommended to enhance their athletics performance.

Since the athlete is dependent on sensory capabilities, it is imperative that these be thoroughly evaluated as part of an overall examination. These athletes are first and foremost students, and any sensory deficiency may hamper performance in the classroom as well as in athletics.

As a part of the health screening process, the athletes undergo audiometry, visual-acuity, peripheral-vision and glaucoma tests. Two cases of nearsightedness, one case of hearing loss and one possible case of glaucoma were detected through the evaluation process. In addition, a tennis player was found to have decreased distance vision in his right eye, which could impair his ability to detect a ball hit from that direction. Visual-acuity correction would enhance his play.

We feel that a process of thorough health evaluation of athletes is a benefit both to the athlete and to the institution. The athlete's health is protected and enhanced by the detection of existing health problems, which may result in more confidence that the university has an interest in the athlete's overall well-being and not just athletics abilities.

The university gains the appreciation of the athlete and a better knowledge of its athletic population, while protecting itself as much as possible from the threat of litigation.

All of this occurs in a learning environment—it is educational both to the athlete and to the Human Performance Laboratory as the representative of the university. Thus, the university's demonstrated interest in maintaining and enhancing athletes' medical condition serves to enhance athletics performance and is also an important recruiting tool.

News Fact File

The NCAA sanctioned 79 institutional foreign tours in 1988, the last year that NCAA approval was required for such tours (they now are approved, under conditions specified in NCAA legislation, by the institutions themselves). The tours involved 17 sports (nine men's, eight women's) and visits to 38 countries.

Steroids can stunt growth, researchers claim

Youths who use steroids to increase their size may find that the drugs have the opposite effect, a researcher says.

Stunted growth is just one of many side effects that many youths are unaware of, according to a study that found steroids may be more widespread among male adolescents than previously reported.

The study of high school students in Arkansas found about 11 percent had used or were using anabolic steroids, nearly double the percentage found in a recent national study.

"It certainly indicates the use of steroids is occurring at a higher rate than people expect," said M. Susan Jay, M.D., associate professor of pediatrics at University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences and coauthor of the study.

The study was reported in the June issue of Pediatrics, a journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics, the Associated Press reported.

Lawrence Elegant, M.D., chair of the Sports Medicine Committee of the Illinois State Pediatrics Society, said the findings accurately reflect the incidence of steroid use in the Chicago area.

About 10 to 12 percent of male high school students in the area use steroids, Elegant said.

Jay and her colleagues found similar practices among Arkansas students.

Of 853 male high school juniors who responded to anonymous questionnaires, 95 reported past or present use of anabolic steroids, which are synthetic derivatives of male hormones used by some athletes and body-builders to increase muscle size.

Use among students at the six high schools studied in 1987 ranged from nine percent to 19.4 percent, with a mean of 11.1 percent. Of the users, 22 percent were not aware of any complications linked to steroids.

While adolescents who take steroids may experience a spurt in maturation, the drugs ultimately may keep them from reaching their growth potential, said co-researcher Mimi Johnson, M.D., of the University of Washington.

Sixty-four percent said they used steroids to increase strength, 50 percent wanted to increase size, 27 percent wanted to improve their physical appearance and 10 percent said they used steroids because their friends did.

Of those who used steroids, 84 percent said they participated in sports.

The previous study, led by health education professor W. E. Buckley of Pennsylvania State University, found that 6.6 percent of 3,403 senior boys at 46 schools nationwide reported using steroids.

Thirty-five percent of steroid users in the Buckley study, reported in a December issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, did not participate in high school sports.

Arkansas group did participate in sports, Jay said researchers were concerned by the estimated 16 percent who reported "using them to just look good."

"These findings may imply that peer pressure influences steroid use and that 'magical thinking' about the drugs' physiologic effects may exist," the researchers wrote.
