Nominations are open for Today's Top Six

Nominations of fall sports participants as candidates for the 1990 Today's Top Six awards must be received in the NCAA national office by November 1.

Nominees must be varsity letter-winners who complete their intercollegiate eligibility in 1989 and must be able to attend the honors luncheon January 8, 1989, in Dallas. Selection will be based on the 1989 fall sports season.

An institution may nominate more than one student-athlete in a sport. However, no more than three selections may come from any sport. There is no limit on selections from one institution.

Selection is based 50 percent on athletics ability and achievement; 25 percent on academic achievement, and 25 percent on character, leadership and activities. Selections are made by the NCAA Honors Committee.

The Today's Top Six awards are part of the College Athletics Top XII. Winter-spring Today's Top Six nominees and nominations for the Silver Anniversary awards already have been received.

Nominations also are being accepted for the Award of Valor. The award may be presented to a coach or administrator currently associated with intercollegiate athletics or to a current or former varsity letter-winner at an NCAA institution who, when confronted with a situation involving personal danger, averted or minimized potential disaster by courageous action or noteworthy bravery. The Award of Valor is not automatically awarded annually.

Nomination forms must be submitted to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director for communications, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Membership has opportunity in filling committee vacancies

By Timothy J. Lilley
Managing Editor, The NCAA News

Yes, NCAA committee appointments are based on formal rules adopted by the membership.

But no, the process has not been reduced to formality.

"I believe many people think it's an exercise," said Fannie B. Vaughan, who has handled the administration of the Association's committee-appointment system since the national office was situated in a downtown Kansas City, Missouri, office building in the 1960s. "Many apparently have the perception that appointing committee members is a formality; that decisions have been made before the appointments are made."

As evidence, Vaughan notes "light response" from the membership to published calls for nominations, both for routine term expirations and for interim vacancies. "We began announcing and seeking nominations for interim vacancies in The NCAA News in 1984," she recalled recently.

"At the time, I thought I wouldn't be able to handle the crush of responses we would get. As it has turned out, however, responses to interim-vacancy announcements has been lighter than our annual call for nominations to fill term expirations."

Review of the NCAA's entire committee-appointment process currently is being completed by the Association's Administrative Committee, which is expected to suggest possible changes to the Council next month. "That's nice," some readers probably are thinking, "but what the heck is it that they're reviewing?"

The answer is, the entire process. Here's an overview.

The big picture

When discussing NCAA committees, a glance at the big picture reveals three distinct groupings—the Association's administrative structure, general committees and sports committees. The first includes the Presidents Commission, Coun-chief executive officers are eligible to serve on the Commission, whose members are elected to four-year terms that are staggered so that no more than six Division I positions, three Division II positions and three Division III positions are open in any one year.

Commission members are not eligible to serve a second term for at least two years (i.e., members whose terms expire this year may not be reelected to take office before Janu-

Review of the NCAA's entire committee-appointment process currently is being completed by the Association's Administrative Committee, which is expected to suggest changes to the Council next month.

Officer title changes to be recommended

The NCAA Committee on Review and Planning will recommend to the NCAA Council that the titles of the top elected NCAA officers and the executive director be changed.

In its September 18-19 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee noted that 77 percent of all national associations in the United States—including most of the higher education organizations—now call the chief staff officer "president" instead of executive director, executive vice-president or other titles commonly used in the past.

The committee suggests that the executive director be called "president and executive director," thus eliminating the need to change any other staff titles. The top elected officer, currently called president, would become chair of the Association. The secretary-treasurer's title would be unchanged; and the Divisions I, II and III vice-presidents would become Divisions I, II and III chairs of the Association.

"The committee was informed that the chief operating officer of the NCAA Foundation now is called president, instead of executive director," said John R. Davis, former NCAA president who chairs the committee. "Also, in an earlier meeting, we had proposed that the term 'faculty athletics representative' be changed to 'institutional athletics representative.' In view of the functions and activities of the chief staff officer, this appears to be a logical proposal."

The committee is composed primarily of former elected NCAA officers. Davis was chairing his final meeting of the group prior to his retirement in December.

Other actions

Other actions by the committee, all of which will be presented to the Council in its October 16-18 meeting, included the following:

- That the executive director be asked to have the national office staff develop a public relations program for the Association to guide its dealings with the membership, the general public and the news

New coaches fill big jobs quite well

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Three first-year head coaches in Division I-A football who were promoted internally on staffs headed by big-name winners are handling the pressure well and are off to winning starts this fall.

They are Georgia's Ray Goff, succeeding 200-game winner Vince Dooley, who retired from coaching; Oklahoma's Gary Gibbs, stepping in for career .837 winner Barry Switzer, winner of three national titles, and Texas A&M's R. C. Slocum, replacing Jackie Sherrill, who had three Cotton Bowl teams in the past four years.

Switzer and Sherrill resigned with their programs on probation and under a cloud, but Gibbs and Slocum have engineered smooth transitions and are vowing to remove the clouds. Adding to the pressure, winning expectations remain high at all three colleges. But all three new coaches say no groups can exert any more pressure than they ary 1992). Commission members may not serve more than two terms.

Election: The Commission chair each summer appoints a Presidential Nominating Committee to develop a slate of nominees for upcoming term expirations. Following appointment of the nominating committee, the list of vacancies is published in The NCAA News (that list appeared this year in the July 5 issue) with a call for nominations.

After the deadline for nominations has passed, the nominating committee meets to develop a slate of nominees for review by the full Commission in October. Following that meeting, chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions receive ballots. They vote only for those nominees to fill positions within their own membership division.

Election results are announced at the Convention each January.

Amendment deadline is November 1

For one more year, the deadline for submitting amendments to be considered at the NCAA Convention is November 1.

Beginning next year, the Association's new legislative calendar, as adopted at the 1989 Convention, goes into effect. Unless altered at the 1990 Convention, the deadline for membership submission of amendments then will be July 1, or August 15 for the NCAA Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission.

For consideration at the January 1990 Convention in Dallas, however, proposed amendments to NCAA legislation must be received in the national office not later than Wednesday, November 1.

Winning field hockey coach's project aimed at aiding sport

Vonnie Gros has produced many winning teams during her years as a field hockey coach, but during the next two years, she may produce something that will prove to be a victory for the entire sport.

As Eleanor F. Snell Professor of Physical Education at Ursinus College, Gros will develop a set of videotapes and accompanying manuals to teach field hockey from the grass-roots level up. She also will develop a seminar to involve Ursinus students in the project.

The tapes will be geared toward players and coaches and will contain demonstrations of skills, developmental drills and use of the techniques in game situations. Four tapes are planned.

The first two tapes, one for offense and one for defense, will concentrate on basic skills. She plans to have these ready for the 1990 season. The second set will deal with more advanced techniques.

As for the manuals, one probably will complement the basic tape and one the advanced tape. They will be geared toward coaches.

"I have had it in the back of my mind for a long time that something along these lines was needed, but I never had the financial backing to do it," Gros said.

That backing came in the form of her endowed professorship, which is believed to be a rarity in physical education and athletics because it is named for a woman. Gros played for Snell, who coached field hockey, basketball and softball at Ursinus.

Snell was "well ahead of her time" in her attitude toward competition in women's athletics, Gros said, adding that she combined a strong code of ethics with her competitiveness.

Gros was a member of the U.S.

national team for 16 years. She also coached at West Chester University of Pennsylvania for 12 years, compiling a 118-6-13 record and winning Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) championships in 1975 and 1976.

She also coached at Princeton University before moving to Ursinus this year.

Gros coached the national team from 1976 to 1984. In 1979, the squad finished third in the World Cup and earned the right to compete in the Olympics in 1980. Because of the United States boycott, the team did not compete.

In 1984, however, the squad won a bronze medal in the Los Angeles Olympics.

During the course of her career, Gros has been impressed by the ability of the Dutch and Australians to foster the development of the sport. She said their systems present the sport in an organized and progressive fashion but keep the game enjoyable and the skills attainable for various age groups. The players who come up through these systems continue to contribute to the game.

Gros would like her work to have a similar effect on the American game.

"One of my primary concerns is the grass-roots coaches," she said. "There are a lot of willing people who want to help the game, but they don't have any way to learn the game."

She is particularly concerned that young players learn skills properly and hopes the videotapes will allow coaches "to see that the skills needed at the high school and college levels can be taught from day one."

She also wants to see an American style of play evolve that would be marked by a competitive spirit and a tempo that is comfortable for American players. Such a system would promote consistency in the way the game is played throughout the country, she believes.

media. A review of the Association's governmental relations is to be included in that project.

• That the NCAA Executive Committee be informed of the committee's views regarding the distribution of revenues realized from the next contract for televising the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, as follows:

The committee believes it to be "extremely important that the interests of the Association as a whole and the interests of the higher education community be reflected in the procedures for making decisions regarding the distribution" of those revenues. It also urges that the plans for distribution of such revenues be announced at the time the new rights fees are announced.

• That the Council consider legislation that would permit institutional career counseling panels to include knowledgeable alumni, friends of the institution or others outside the campus community, with the understanding that no player agents could serve on such panels and no member of such a panel could represent a student-athlete in contract negotiations with a professional sports organization. The committee also favors development of enhanced educational materials for distribution to student-athletes regarding careers in professional athletics and regarding the use of agents.

• That the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues or some other special NCAA committee explore the NCAA's appropriate role, if any, in assuring international athletics involvement for student-athletes.

• That the committee supports the concept of a longitudinal study of the data base developed by the American Institutes for Research in the 1987-88 National Study of Intercollegiate Athletes and that such a study include the development of additional data regarding the time commitments of student-athletes and regarding the effects of mandatory living arrangements (e.g., athletics dormitories) on student-athletes' feelings of isolation. The committee also recommends that the NCAA conduct a survey to determine the number of athletics dormitories currently in existence.

Other suggestions

The committee offered several suggestions to Executive Director Richard D. Schultz for consideration in the development of a certification program for intercollegiate athletics.

The group also suggested that future issues of The NCAA News include articles on the following:

• The status of the Association's ongoing research regarding academic performance.

• The use of radio by athletics programs and by the Association, based on a staff analysis prepared for the committee.

• Ongoing emphasis on the availability of the NCAA vita bank for women and ethnic minorities.

• Trends in conference alignments for men's and women's athletics, based on the committee's annual review of that information.

Schultz, NCAA Foundation President Robert C. Khayat and Associate Executive Director Thomas W. Jernstedt visited with the committee to discuss various subjects during the September 18-19 meeting.

1989 Column No. 33

NCAA Council actions affecting financial aid and other issues

During its August 1989 meeting, the Council reconsidered whether NCAA Bylaw 15.5.3 would permit member institutions to use either the actual or the average cost of a full grant-in-aid in computing the maximum value of a student-athlete's financial aid in equivalency sports. In this regard, the NCAA Division I Steering Committee recommended that the Council revise its earlier action (taken in April) that would have required institutions to use actual (rather than average) costs in calculating equivalencies during the fall of 1989. The Council concurred with the steering committee's recommendation and voted to rescind its previous (April) action. As a result, institutions may use either average or actual costs in computing the value of financial aid in equivalency sports this fall. A proposed amendment confirming this interpretation will be presented at the 1990 NCAA Convention.

The Council also voted during its August 1989 meeting:

1. To sponsor as part of the consent package proposed legislation amending Bylaw 14.6.4.4 to confirm that grace periods for practice exist for a two-year college transfer who reports for practice before the student's high school or two-year college academic record has been certified.

2. To sponsor proposed legislation amending Bylaw 14.6.4.5.1 to confirm that a partial qualifier or nonqualifier transferring to a Division I or II institution from a two-year college or a branch school shall not be permitted to utilize the discontinued/nonsponsored sport exception to the normal transfer residence requirement.

3. To amend Bylaw 30.9.8 to confirm that the director of athletics or the director of athletics' designee may administer the Student-Athlete Statement to individual student-athletes.

4. To support the Division II Steering Committee's recommendation for a change in the policy specifying who is permitted to contact the national office for an interpretation to permit those institutions with female directors of athletics and no separate senior women administrators to designate another member of the athletics department staff (in place of the senior woman administrator) to contact the national office for this purpose.

5. To approve a Division III Steering Committee recommendation to sponsor as part of the consent package an amendment to Bylaw 17.7 to confirm that Division III member institutions shall not conduct any spring football contest, scrimmage or practice.

NCAA Bylaw 13.11.2.3—recreational activities during official visit

The NCAA Legislation and Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.11.2.3 and confirmed a previous staff interpretation that during an official visit to a member institution's campus, a prospective student-athlete is not permitted to engage in conditioning activities related to the prospect's sport (e.g., swimming in the institution's pool or running on the institution's track), regardless of whether such activities are conducted in facilities that are open at the time for use by the student body or general public.

NCAA Bylaw 13.11.3.1—recruiting tryout/Council waivers

NCAA member institutions are reminded that the adoption of legislation amending Bylaw 13.11.3 at the 1989 Convention eliminated the requirement of Council approval of tryout activities listed in Bylaw 13.11.3.1.1 (developmental clinics), 13.11.3.1.2 (open events), 13.11.3.1.3 (activities not involving an institution's staff) and 13.11.3.1.4 (state, regional, national or international training programs). Please note that the institution remains responsible for ensuring that such activities comply with NCAA requirements.

NCAA Bylaw 14.3—national testing dates

Divisions I and II member institutions are reminded that in accordance with the provisions of Bylaw 14.3.1.1(b), the minimum score on the SAT or ACT examination must be achieved under normal testing conditions on a national testing date [i.e., no residual (campus) testing is permitted]. The testing date must be a national (as distinguished from regional) testing date.

Following are the SAT and ACT examination dates scheduled during the 1989-90 academic year:

in NCAA legislation appear in NCAA Constitution 5.3 in the 1989-90 NCAA Manual. A summary of those procedures was mailed to the membership September 22.

In addition to the Council, any of the division steering committees and the Presidents Commission, any six active member institutions with voting privileges may submit proposed legislation. It must be submitted by the institution's chief executive officer unless that CEO previously has notified the national office of a designated representative with that authority.

A member conference is permitted to submit proposed amendments on behalf of its member institutions without the institutional CEOs' signatures, per Constitution 5.3.2.1(e).

To meet the November 1 deadline, any proposed legislation must be received in written form in the national office by 5 p.m. Central time on that day. If a submission arrives after that time, it must have been sent by certified or registered mail postmarked no later than October 25.

All properly submitted proposals will be included in the Official Notice of the Convention, which will be mailed to the membership no later than November 29.

Questions regarding the legislative process or specific amendments should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, or Daniel T. Dutcher, legislative assistant, at the national office.

Membership

Commission's chair appoints a subcommittee of Commission members from the division in which the vacancy occurs to recommend a replacement. The Commission chair then is authorized to make that appointment.

Appointments are made only for the unexpired portion of a term. However, interim appointees who serve less than one-half of a term (i.e., less than two years) will be considered eligible for reelection to a full term.

Administrative Committee

Service: Administrative Committee members, except for the executive director, serve for two years — the duration of their terms as NCAA officers.

Election: Members of the Administrative Committee, as NCAA officers, are elected annually by the membership at the Convention. Division vice-presidents are elected in division business sessions and ratified by the full membership in the general business session. NCAA presidents and secretary-treasurers are elected in the general business session.

The NCAA Nominating Committee, appointed in April by the NCAA Council, is responsible for developing the slate of nominees for Association officers. Late each summer, The NCAA News publishes a list of vacancies among officers with a call for nominations from the membership, which is asked to submit nominations to the chair of the Nominating Committee and other appropriate members of that committee, as well as to Vaughan at the national office.

After the deadline for nominations passes, Vaughan counsels with the chair of the Nominating Committee, summarizes the nominations the committee has received and mails them to Nominating Committee members two to three weeks prior to their meeting, which is held the day before the Council's October meeting. She also contacts everyone on the Nominating Committee's slate of candidates to confirm their ability to serve and their intention to attend the next Convention.

The Nominating Committee's slate of candidates then is published in a November issue of The NCAA News and in the Official Notice of the Convention.

Council

Service: Council members are elected to serve four-year terms.

Council members are not eligible for reelection until two years have elapsed (i.e., Council members whose terms expire at the end of this year may not be elected to terms that begin before January 1992). No Council member may serve more than two terms.

Election: Council members are elected annually by the membership during the division business sessions at the Convention.

The NCAA Nominating Committee is responsible for developing the slate of Council nominees. Late each summer, The NCAA News publishes a list of Council vacancies with a call for nominations from the membership, which is asked to submit nominations to the Nominating Committee and to Vaughan at the national office.

After the deadline for nominations passes, Vaughan summarizes the nominations and mails them to Nominating Committee members two to three weeks prior to their meeting, which is held the day before the Council's October meeting. She also contacts the individuals recommended by the Nominating Committee to confirm their ability to serve and their intention to attend the next Convention.

The list of candidates is published in a November issue of The NCAA News and in the Official Notice of the Convention.

Interim vacancies: When an interim vacancy occurs, notice is published in the Committee Notices section of the next issue of The NCAA News with a call for nominations from the membership. The News editors attempt to place that section on page 2 or page 3 of each issue. Following the deadline, which is at least two weeks after the date of News publication, Vaughan prepares a list of nominees for the Administrative Committee, which makes the appointment during its next regularly scheduled conference — subject to approval by the Council at its next meeting. Interim appointees serve until the next Convention and are eligible for reelection to complete the unexpired term. They then are eligible for reelection to complete the unexpired term. They then are eligible for reelection to a full term if they have not served more than half of a term.

Executive Committee

Service: NCAA officers serve for the duration of their terms. The remaining nine members serve five-year terms that are staggered to assure that vacancies occur in the proper sequence.

Election: Executive Committee members are appointed by the Council in its post-Convention meeting. Each November, The NCAA News publishes a list of Executive Committee vacancies with a call for nominations from the membership, which is asked to submit nominations to Vaughan at the national office.

After the deadline for nominations passes, Vaughan summarizes nominations and provides them to the Council in advance of its post-Convention meeting.

Interim vacancies: When an interim vacancy occurs, notice is published in the Committee Notices section of the next News (on page 2 or page 3) with a call for nominations from the membership. After the deadline, which is at least two weeks following the date of News publication, Vaughan prepares a list of nominees for the Administrative Committee, which makes the appointment during its next regularly scheduled conference — subject to approval by the Council at its next meeting. Interim appointees serve the unexpired portion of the term and are eligible for reappointment if they have not served more than half of a term.

General committees

Appointed by the Council or the Executive Committee, these are the standing committees that perform the duties necessary to the ongoing operation of the NCAA (e.g., Academic Requirements Committee, Committee on Infractions, division championships committees). These committees are listed in Bylaw 21.3.

Service: Committee members are appointed or elected to three-year terms that begin September 1 following the member's election or appointment (e.g., in its October 1989 meeting, the Council will appoint committee members who will take office September 1, 1990). Members may serve up to three terms on one committee — two consecutive terms, and a third term that may begin no less than three years after they end their second consecutive term. It is rare that an individual serves a third term.

Committee on Infractions members are subject to the three-term limit, but they may serve all three terms consecutively.

Election: Each summer, The NCAA News publishes a list of general-committee vacancies with a call for nominations from the membership, which is asked to submit nominations to Vaughan at the national office. The committees involved also are asked to submit recommendations.

After the deadline for nominations passes, Vaughan summarizes nominations and provides them to the Council approximately four weeks in advance of its October meeting. Appointments are announced following the annual Convention.

Interim vacancies: When an interim vacancy occurs, notice is published in the Committee Notices section of the next News (page 2 or page 3) with a call for nominations from the membership. Following the deadline, which is at least two weeks after the date of News publication, Vaughan prepares a list of nominees for the Administrative Committee, which makes the appointment during its next regularly scheduled conference — subject to approval by the Council at its next meeting. (Note: The Executive Committee, rather than the Council, appoints the Divisions I, II and III Championships Committees.)

Interim appointees serve the unexpired portion of the term. In these instances, members who serve more than one-half of a term (i.e., more than 18 months) are considered to have served a full term.

Sports Committees

These include rules committees without championships administration responsibilities (e.g., Baseball Rules Committee, Women's Basketball Rules Committee), sports committee with playing rules and championships administration responsibilities (e.g., Men's and Women's Rifle Committee, Men's and Women's Swimming Committee), and sports committees with only championships administration responsibilities (e.g., Field Hockey Committee, Division III Men's Ice Hockey Committee). These committees are listed in Bylaws 21.4, 21.5 and 21.6.

Service: Committee members are appointed or elected to three-year terms that begin September 1 following the member's election or appointment (i.e., delegates to the 1990 annual Convention will elect committee members who will take office September 1, 1990). Members may serve up to three terms on one committee — two consecutive terms, and a third term that begins no less than three years after they end their second consecutive term.

Secretary-rules editors may be reelected without restriction and serve as nonvoting members of committees — except on the Men's Basketball Rules Committee and the Football Rules Committee, on which secretary-rules editors are voting members.

Election: Each fall, The NCAA News publishes a list of sports committee vacancies with a call for nominations from the membership, which is asked to submit nominations to members of the Men's Committee on Committees and the Women's Committee on Committees, as well as to Vaughan at the national office.

After the deadline for nominations passes, Vaughan summarizes nominations and provides them to the Men's Committee on Committees and the Women's Committee on Committees, which meet at the Convention to make recommendations. Following their meetings, Vaughan prepares the slate of recommended nominees at the Convention site for distribution in the general business session, where elections take place.

"There is an opportunity for nominations from the floor," she noted, "although very few nominations have been made in this manner."

Notification of election is made through publication following the Convention of the NCAA Committee Handbook. Committee listings then are updated when the NCAA Directory is published in the fall.

Interim vacancies: When an interim vacancy occurs, notice is published in the Committee Notices section of the next News (page 2 or page 3) with a call for nominations from the membership. Following the deadline, which is at least two weeks after the date of News publication, Vaughan prepares a list of nominees for the Administrative Committee, which makes the appointment during its next regularly scheduled conference — subject to approval by the Council at its next meeting.

Interim appointees serve the unexpired portion of the term. In these instances, members who serve more than one-half of a term (i.e., more than 18 months) are considered to have served a full term.

'Let 'em know'

Vaughan said coaches and administrators at NCAA member institutions who become interested in committee service should let the appropriate people know of that interest.

"It is permissible for people in the membership to nominate themselves," she explained, "but I also encourage them to talk with members of the committee on which they're interested in serving."

"When we have an interim committee vacancy, we always get input from the committee. That is why I believe it is important for those interested in serving on a particular committee to let its members know of that interest."

Vaughan added that when staff at NCAA member institutions call to express interest in serving on a certain committee, she encourages them to call the chair of that committee and to contact members of the body responsible for appointment (i.e., Administrative Committee, Council, Nominating Committee, or Men's or Women's Committee on Committees). "I believe it is most important for people to identify specific committees and vacancies they are interested in and to make their interest known to those committees," she offered.

She also said nominations are not "held over." People who are not appointed to fill an interim vacancy on a committee must be renominated when another vacancy occurs.

"I've had people call and, when told they must renominate, ask why we don't simply maintain a file," she said. "Renomination makes it possible for us to provide candidates for committee service who are interested in serving at that time."

"With the exception of NCAA officers and Council members, we entrust those nominating with the responsibility of assuring in advance that those they nominate are interested in serving and are capable of devoting the necessary time. I believe the renomination process helps facilitate that."

'On the staff'

Nominees for NCAA committee service also must meet some basic eligibility requirements, such as being on the staff of a member institution or conference.

• Individuals "on the staff" are those who receive a regular salary from a member institution or organization for the regular performance of a staff function representing at least 50 percent of the normal workload for a staff member at that institution or conference. Those on sabbatical or other temporary leave for not more than 12 consecutive months will be considered "on the staff," but those on terminal leave or on leave in excess of 12 months will not.

• In addition, to serve on the Council or Executive Committee (and, consequently, as an officer), individuals must be employed as chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative, athletics director, senior woman administrator of athletics programs or a full-time athletics administrator who is a member of an ethnic minority — or must be a member conference's full-time, salaried employee who serves as executive officer, senior woman administrator or an athletics administrator who is a member of an ethnic minority.

• To serve on the NCAA Presidents Commission, nominees must be chief executive officers of member institutions.

Additional information on NCAA committee service is available from Vaughan at the national office.

James Martin

Martin named top academic all-America

Pennsylvania State University's James Martin, a four-time wrestling all-America and the 1988 Division I wrestling champion at 126 pounds, was named GTE academic all-America of the year for the second straight year, it was announced September 21.

Martin, of Danville, Pennsylvania, was selected in a vote of the 1,400-member College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA), which administers the GTE academic all-America program. With a 3.950 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in pre-medicine, Martin received an NCAA postgraduate scholarship and now attends the Hershey Medical School at his alma mater.

During his wrestling career, Martin posted a record of 155-99-4, establishing a Nittany Lion record for victories. In addition to winning an NCAA title in 1988, he was a runner-up in 1987, took third in 1989 and was fourth in 1986.

To be eligible for the GTE academic all-America team, an athlete must be a varsity starter or key reserve and maintain a cumulative GPA of at least 3.200.

Comment

Letter to the Editor

Success in athletics is secondary

To the Editor:

I was surprised and disappointed to read the comments of Mr. Sandy Buda, head football coach at the University of Omaha, Nebraska, in the August 30 issue of The NCAA News: "Division II eligibility rules discriminatory, coach says."

From my point of view as a faculty member and a faculty athletics representative, it is a joint responsibility to analyze, debate, review and provide regulations that will direct a student-athlete toward being successful in both academics and athletics. From a life perspective, it is more important that a student-athlete be successful in academic endeavors than to achieve success in athletics. This philosophy is true not only in Division I, but in all divisions.

NCAA Bylaw 14.3 (Proposition 48) continues to be one of the most important and worthwhile pieces of legislation passed by the NCAA in the past 15 years. It has motivated high school students; it has served as a catalyst for changing university/college admissions standards; it has helped decrease eligibility problems on campuses, and it has restored academic credibility to the student-athlete and institutions of higher education. The NCAA has acted intelligently and has provided leadership with the passing of Proposition 48.

Also, Mr. Buda states that he dislikes the NCAA satisfactory-progress rule. This regulation also helps to keep the student on an academic path toward meeting educational standards and graduation requirements.

The academic requirements specified in the above two regulations are not difficult to meet. In fact, an overwhelming majority of student-athletes never have any difficulty with these requirements.

It is my hope that CEOs, faculty athletics representatives and other voting members at NCAA Conventions will continue to establish quality baseline academic regulations for student-athletes, provide leadership and resist Mr. Buda's type of philosophy as presented in The NCAA News article.

Congress should pass Bradley's legislation

The Washington Post
An editorial

The proposed Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act sounds unassailable. It would require every college or university that accepts Federal money to disclose the graduation rates of its athletics scholarship recipients. Yet this measure — no more than a consumer-information statute — was stymied in Congress last year. It warrants passage this year.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Reps. Edolphus Towns of Brooklyn and Tom McMillen of Maryland. It responds to recent revelations of academic abuses inspired by the big money and fierce competition of college sports.

Athletes on many campuses major in staying eligible; the institutions help with gut courses and remedial programs that can last for years. When athletes' eligibility is used up, they often are pushed aside without degrees, professional contracts or job prospects.

The bill would counter such abuses with disclosure. Colleges would have to calculate the graduation rates of students on athletics scholarships,

Many, probably most, college sports programs do not abuse their athletes or academic integrity. But the evidence is strong that a substantial minority do both.

compare them with graduation rates for the student body as a whole and make the information available to all high school sports recruits.

Many, probably most, college sports programs do not abuse their athletes or academic integrity. But the evidence is strong that a substantial minority do both. Consider the findings of a General Accounting Office study. At 35 of the 97 schools in the NCAA's most competitive division, no more than one in five basketball players ever graduates (according to that study). Graduation rates for football players are only slightly better.

Defenders of the programs say graduation rates merely reflect the difficulty of the educational task a college takes on. If student-athletes graduate at lower rates than others, it is because they have arrived with more educational deficiencies.

Maybe so, but that's no argument against the Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act. In fact, it makes all the more necessary sound information to help recruits, their parents and guidance counselors explore college possibilities and ask questions. Student-athletes are trading labor for a chance at an education; they deserve to know how much of one they are likely to get.

The NCAA says it would prefer to impose its own disclosure rule. But Sen. Bradley says the Association has had it chance. He's right. It's Congress's turn now, and its duty is clear.

All questions on SAT pretested to eliminate racial and ethnic bias

Donald M. Stewart, president
The College Board
Los Angeles Times

"Before a question appears on an SAT, it is scrupulously reviewed and analyzed by a racially and ethnically diverse panel of experts, then pretested by thousands of students under real test conditions to detect the slightest sign of 'item bias.'

"It (a question) is used in a real SAT only if it is fair for student of similar ability of any race, ethnic background or gender."

"It is true that some of our student-athletes, like many of their student peers, have financial needs that are not being met by existing grants-in-aid or by other available means of financial aid.

"This problem requires careful attention, but we will do our student-athletes and our institutions harm if we accept the facile solution of paying them.

"Instead, we need to think creatively about the entire financial aid package available to student-athletes in order to address their need for support for those direct activities or services associated with their student status.

"This will require reviewing assumptions about the appropriate dimensions of grants-in-aid and about the wisdom of the $1,400 limit on Pell Grant eligibility.

"These are not easy issues, and they engender a complex and lively debate. That discussion must begin, however, with the premise that we will not pay our student-athletes."

U.S. Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland
The Washington Post

"I could sit here for hours and talk about the good in the NCAA that I received out of my college education. (But) I'm afraid the NCAA is not demonstrating sufficient leadership in addressing (what is) needed to reform the system.

"We clearly know the system is out of balance. Many kids across the country are mortgaging their education to pursue the dream of becoming a professional athlete.

"If they (NCAA members) say they don't want to take this meager first step (in making public graduation rates of student-athletes), how can we expect them to take the substantive reform steps that are necessary, such as freshman eligibility? I think we need action now... we can't wait until January; we can't wait for next year (when the NCAA Convention is held)."

Graduation-rate law is not needed

USA Today
Excerpted from an editorial

Notre Dame is No. 1. And not only in gridiron polls.

The players who beat the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor are beating the books, too.

They are dispelling myths about dumb jocks and helping to create a legend of their own.

Only seven Notre Dame football players have failed to graduate in the last 19 years—a 98 percent graduation rate.

That record is remarkable, but not by itself. Basketball powerhouse Duke University has graduated 42 of 42 varsity basketball players since 1975. Stanford University graduated 162 of 175 student-athletes who entered there in 1982.

Those records show that class work and workouts do mix if schools emphasize the "student" in student-athlete.

Not enough colleges and universities do.

The only real ticket to success is a good education.

Some people are so concerned about student-athletes' learning that lesson that they're making a Federal case out of it. Sen. Bill Bradley is one.

The Rhodes scholar and former New York Knicks star wants colleges and universities to report graduation rates for student-athletes to Uncle Sam. Athletics recruits should know, he says, their chances of getting a degree.

Bradley's right. Colleges should disclose graduation rates. But a Federal law would only create a parade of forms to Capitol Hill and paper over the real problem.

To look good on paper, some schools might raise admissions requirements. That would mean some athletes wouldn't get a chance at college, much less a degree.

To look good to recruits, others might press teachers to graduate students without a real education. Their diplomas would be worth less than the paper they're printed on.

The NCAA has better ideas. It's spending $2.3 million to study the education of student-athletes. Its Presidents Commission is pushing

Athletes' grades higher, Memphis State reports

Memphis State University reports that only two of 68 returning football players were in academic trouble this fall, compared to 34 of 72 players four years ago.

From 1974 to 1986, only 16 percent of all Memphis State basketball players graduated; but since Larry Finch took over as basketball coach in 1986, six of the seven players who completed their eligibility have graduated, officials said.

After a storm of negative publicity about the poor graduation rate of Memphis State athletes, the athletics academic adviser's office was overhauled and moved in the mid-1980s from the athletics department to the Office of Student Educational Services.

Prior to the changes, 30 to 40 football players had to attend summer school each year to remain eligible, the university said.

Tim Sumner, the man in charge of making sure Memphis State athletes get an education, said 10 of the 12 Memphis State sports teams have 100 percent of their players in good academic standing, United Press International reported.

"These athletes are not taking courses that will just keep them eligible," said Sumner, academic adviser to the Tiger athletes. "The NCAA requires that courses taken have to be applicable to a degree. They have to take English and math and all the courses that every other student takes."

Two Tiger football players are ineligible this year because of academic trouble, as are two members of the women's track team, Sumner said.

A recent NCAA report showed that the average Division I basketball player in 1987-1988 signed up for 30.2 hours of academic work and completed 27.2 hours, Sumner said. Tiger basketball players passed an average of 35.1 semester hours in 1988-1989, he said.

Tiger football players completed 30.6 hours last year, compared to the NCAA's study average of 25.9 in 1987-1988, he said.

Iowa State requires freshman athletes to attend all classes and learn note-taking and good study habits.

The University of Houston increased its academic support budget for student-athletes by 600 percent in six years, raising its graduation rate to 60 percent in 1987 from 17 percent in 1981.

A Federal law can't educate student-athletes. Only colleges can—by making education No. 1.

graduate despite our best efforts and despite extensive tutorial programs. So, is their exposure to a university a waste of their time or a squandering of our resources? I do not think so.

"Moreover, if it were, then the same arguments could be applied to universities' efforts to create educational-opportunity programs. The plain truth of the matter is that many of the young people in these programs for minorities and the disadvantaged do not graduate. Should society, therefore, in a fit of puritanism, close these 'revolving doors'? I do not think so. I believe society has an obligation to make these opportunities available even if the results are not altogether encouraging."

Maine ties donations to priority seats, parking

The University of Maine has introduced a Black Bear Fund point system to tie private donations to priority seating and parking, according to Skip Chappelle, executive director of the Black Bear Fund.

Effective immediately, ticket-priority seating and VIP parking will be based on a point system designed to reward loyalty and total dollar contributions to University of Maine athletics. Priority for location of new season-ticket holders in football, hockey, and men's and women's basketball will be based upon the number of points accumulated.

Current season-ticket holders are grandfathered so that they will be able to maintain their present seats. However, they will be expected to participate. Once they do not renew, the seats will become available to the individual with the highest point total on the Black Bear Fund priority list and the general public waiting list on an alternating basis.

Twenty-five points must be earned each year to maintain seat location and VIP parking under this system. The highest Black Bear Fund point totals, 250 points or better, will have personalized parking in football.

Five points will be awarded for every $100 of undesignated funds used for scholarships donated to the Black Bear Fund. One point will be awarded for every $100 of capital and gift-in-kind project donations or other restricted athletics donations.

"The new point system clarifies the importance of the Black Bear Fund as the backbone of Maine athletics," said head hockey coach

Shawn Walsh. "To provide all of the programs with the opportunity to achieve success at the University of Maine, we need the great support of the Black Bear Fund."

News Fact File

In 1988-89, the first year of the NCAA conference-grant program, the Association provided $3,520,000 in grants to 34 Division I conferences. The grants ranged from $30,000 to $120,000; the average grant awarded was in excess of $100,000.

Multitalented

By the end of the school year, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Madison, roommates Maria "Mazi" Wellbrock (left) and Barbara "Bunny" Legg may run out of space for awards. By the time they graduate next May (both on time, each with a B average), the pair should have earned 12 varsity letters in field hockey, basketball and softball. Wellbrock is a marketing major, Legg an accounting major.

56 infractions cases are termed 'secondary'

The NCAA enforcement staff processed 56 secondary infractions cases during the third quarter of 1989, bringing the total for the year to 149.

Secondary violations are those considered to be isolated and inadvertent and that provide little or no competitive or recruiting advantage. Such violations often are self-reported to the NCAA or are found as a result of correspondence between the NCAA enforcement department and athletics department administrators.

Institutions and conferences are encouraged to take corrective or disciplinary actions, subject to the review and approval of the enforcement staff and a member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Forty-eight of the cases during the third quarter of 1989 involved Division I institutions (nine institutions were involved in two cases), while four occurred at Division II and four at Division III institutions. Fourteen different sports were involved, with men's basketball (12), football (six) and women's basketball (five) involved in 23 of the 57 cases.

Six cases involved ineligible student-athletes who competed after dropping below a 12-hour academic load. Recruiting-contact violations occurred in eight cases, including four "dead-period" violations.

Women's lacrosse gets varsity status

Susquehanna University will elevate women's lacrosse to the varsity level this spring, increasing the number of varsity sports at the school to 18.

The sport has been played at the club level for the past three years under head coach Terry Molloy, who also serves as Susquehanna's men's soccer coach. Molloy will remain as the head coach, and the squad currently has eight matches on the schedule.

College-admissions test scores down

High school students' scores on the two college-admissions tests used nationally slipped a bit in 1989, with females and minority students losing some ground on the steady gains they have made on the ACT and SAT throughout the 1980s.

The American College Test and the Scholastic Aptitude Test for years have been criticized as being biased against females and minorities. The latest averages again displayed a wide race and gender gap, the Associated Press reported.

U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos called the 1989 results "disheartening at the end of a decade marked by substantial education reform efforts."

The scores, Cavazos said, point to "an urgent need to restructure the nation's elementary and secondary schools, to create intellectual opportunities for all."

Nationally, the SAT average score dropped one point, to 903. A perfect score is 1,600.

The national ACT score for 1989 was 18.6, down from 18.8 last year.

The ACT predominates in 28 states, mostly in the Midwest and West. It is administered by American College Testing of Iowa City, Iowa.

The organization announced that, beginning in October, students will receive scores in 12 categories instead of the current five. Seven new subscores will focus on specific con-

In addition, two coaches were involved in a radio or television broadcast that also involved prospective student-athletes, and three coaching staff members made comments concerning prospects that appeared in newspaper articles.

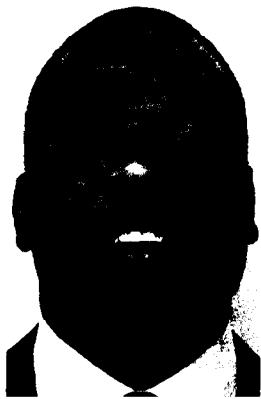

The enforcement staff also emphasized that several institutions have been cited for permitting participation in competition by student-athletes who were ineligible due to invalidated ACT or SAT scores. In such instances, the institution was required to forfeit contests, and several student-athletes used a season of competition through limited participation before being declared ineligible.

It is important that member institutions ensure the validity of academic records prior to initial competition, according to the enforcement staff. The staff should be notified in cases where there is reasonable cause to question a test score.

It also was noted that it is important to determine whether the student-athlete or others were involved in fraud in establishing an invalidated test score. In such an event, the student-athlete may be rendered permanently ineligible.

In most secondary cases, the institution or involved conference takes disciplinary action that is reviewed and accepted by the NCAA. Actions taken during the third quarter of 1989 included termination of the recruitment of involved prospective student-athletes, reprimands to involved coaching staff members, reductions in grants-in-aid in the sports involved, termination of employment, repayment of costs related to improper benefits received by student-athletes, forfeiture of contests, disassociation of outside athletics representatives and a reduction in practice periods.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions expressed its appreciation to the membership for its cooperation in secondary infractions cases.

tent areas of English, math and reading.

The SAT, sponsored by the College Board and administered by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, New Jersey, is the predominant college-entrance exam in 22 states. The multiple-choice test is divided into two parts, which test verbal and math skills.

Overall, national SAT scores showed little change for the fourth consecutive year. Average verbal scores dropped one point, to 427, compared with 1988; math scores were unchanged at 476.

Nationally, 1,088,223 high school students took the SAT in 1989, compared with 855,171 for the ACT.

Donald M. Stewart, president of the College Board, attributed the continued lag in SAT averages among females and minority students to inequities in educational opportunities.

"College Board research reveals a strong relationship between the strength of a student's high school preparation and his or her test scores," Stewart said.

"That's why we believe that score differences among ethnic groups and between men and women reflect wide disparities in academic preparation—or lack of it."

He nonetheless noted that scores among most minority groups have gained more rapidly than among whites during the 1980s, at least until this year. Average scores among Blacks, for example, have gained 28 points on the math portion of the SAT and 21 points on the verbal section since 1979.

However, the 1989 results show that white students taking the SAT averaged 200 points higher than black students on their combined math and verbal scores. Whites averaged 937 out of a possible 1,600 points, a two-point gain over last year. Blacks' scores remained unchanged at 737.

Females' combined SAT scores dipped two points to 875; male test-takers averaged 934, one point higher than a year earlier.

In a book released recently, "Standing Up to the SAT," Fair-Test, a Cambridge, Massachusetts, watchdog group, charges that the SAT asks questions about topics and concepts more likely to be familiar to males and the wealthy. The book also challenges the College Board's assertion that the test reliably predicts college success.

This year's scores "prove that the College Board and ETS (Educational Testing Service) have failed to address the issue of bias," said Bob Schaeffer, a coauthor of the Fair-Test book, in an interview.

"The SAT is simply not a level playing field for women and minorities," he said.

Officiating videotapes available from NCAA

The 1989 men's and women's basketball officiating tapes are available from the NCAA.

The men's officiating instructional tape includes discussion of the intentional foul, screening, principle of verticality and post play. The women's instructional tape covers the block-charge, illegal screen, post play/handchecking, principle of verticality, intentional foul and traveling. These tapes cost $15 in VHS format and $17 in Beta.

Also, tapes of one men's and one women's regional officiating clinic will be available after October 15.

Henry O. Nichols, NCAA national coordinator of men's basketball officiating, and Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, conduct the men's clinics. Marcy Weston, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee, and June Courteau, supervisor of officials for the Southern Conference, conduct the women's clinics. The 1989 clinic tapes cost $20 in VHS and $22 in Beta.

Complimentary copies of the instructional and clinic tapes will be distributed to Divisions I, II and III conferences.

This is the fourth year of the men's and women's basketball officiating and certification programs. They began as two-year pilot programs and were given permanent status by the NCAA Executive Committee in May 1988.

The programs are under the direction of the NCAA Basketball Officiating Committee, which is chaired by David R. Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference.

Payment for tapes will be accepted by American Express or other major credit card, checks or money order. Orders should be sent to NCAA Officiating Video Cassettes, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. An order form appears below.

Luginbill, the fourth first-year coach to come from inside the program, was associate athletics director at San Diego State since 1985 (and an assistant at Arizona State and Wyoming before that). The others were offensive assistants from outside winning programs. Kansas State's Bill Snyder came from Iowa, Pacific's Walt Harris from Tennessee and UTEP's David Lee from Arkansas.

Asked if he considered turning down the job because of the scandals, Gibbs shot back: "I would have been put in a straitjacket immediately. My wife would have shot me. This is one of the great jobs in country. The actions of five are not going to destroy the actions of 95 in the program. We have stressed to the players what is expected of them. We'll be sending the right message." There is a new sheriff in town, and he's wearing a white hat. Gibbs, 37, played at Oklahoma (where he was an honor student) and has been defensive coordinator since 1981.

Slocum, 44, worked for 16 years under three head coaches at Texas A&M, which turned to him because it needed stability. "It helped with the players to know there are people who know them... I think it's been a pretty smooth transition."

Dooley was coach for 25 years at Georgia and popular enough to be considered a candidate for governor. "When you step in the first year, people expect you to assume all the things he's done, such as speaking and going places," Goff said. "I've had to limit myself in that regard."

Snyder without question has the toughest job of all the new coaches, since Kansas State has the longest current I-A losing streak and just four winning teams in 50 years. He has changed everything from the traditional logo to the rules surrounding press coverage and has private practices on an enclosed field.

Most of his methods are similar to Hayden Fry's at Iowa. Snyder worked under Fry for 15 years. Iowa had endured 19 straight losing seasons before Fry and Snyder arrived. "To get the attention of the players, you have to shut out the outside world," Snyder says. "You have to turn every stone."

As a group, the I-A first-year coaches have started 7-14-1.

year coaches moved up from top assistant jobs at the same college (Marazana, Allen, Graves, Gilliam and Arslanian), one (Highsmith) was an assistant for another I-AA team (Florida A&M), one was a high school head coach (Kimble), one (Wilson) was an NFL player since 1978 and five were I-A assistants (Smith at Washington State, Steele at Penn State, Marshall at Tulane, Shuck at Army and Strahan at Georgia).

No first-year coach has had more experience or commands more respect than the 60-year-old Gilliam, a top assistant for 20 years under the late John Merritt, whose 29 straight winning seasons are the all-time, all-divisions NCAA coaching record. "Gilliam really was the head coach," says Arkansas-Pine Bluff coach Archie Cooley, an assistant at Tennessee State for seven years. "He and Alvin Coleman ran the whole thing. Merritt was the PR man." In 1983, with Merritt in failing health, Gilliam was acting coach.

Gilliam never complained about being passed over for head coach after Merritt died, and he served there as a professor in recent years. "Disappointed, yes; bitter, no," he said. Loyalty is the reason he came back: "They asked me to come back." Other coaches predict Gilliam will turn things around with his well-known discipline and conditioning drills. "You relish beating him now, because you know what it'll be like in a year or two," said Jackson State coach W. C. Gorden.

New-job coaches

Instead of internal promotion after Jimmy Johnson's departure to Dallas last spring, Miami (Florida) pursued Dennis Erickson, who had led Washington State to its best season in 72 years.

Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney, who had coached Erickson at Montana State and hired him as an assistant at Fresno, calls his prodigy, "Flat out, the best young coach in the country." Miami athletics director Sam Jankovich agrees.

Erickson stayed at Washington State only two years and at Wyoming only one year before that, leaving behind bitterness at both places. He said he intended a long career at Washington State, but the chance to win a national championship at Miami was too good to pass up.

His team is off to a 3-0-0 start, as Much was written in The NCAA News August 30 about Southern Methodist coach Forrest Gregg, an SMU graduate, Super Bowl coach and Hall of Fame player who left professional football to start a program wiped out by "death penalty" probation. With just 42 scholarship players, mostly freshmen (16 start), he opened not against a freshman foe, but against Rice, and lost, 35-6.

Then came "The Miracle on Mockingbird Lane" in venerable, 23,615-seat Ownby Stadium September 16. SMU came from far behind to edge Connecticut's winning program on a final-play TD pass, 31-30.

Gregg's roster includes 21 National Honor Society members, 12 honor-roll students and various other academic standouts. Evidently, the youngsters also can play a little football.

Stanford's Dennis Green is the first black head coach in Pacific-10 Conference history, but he doesn't see himself as a pioneer. He believes he has the job because he spent 17 years earning it. He came back to Iowa, his alma mater, as a volunteer coach and truck driver in 1972. He worked 5 a.m. to noon every day driving a truck, then spent the afternoon coaching football. Green is the man who ended Northwestern's record 34-game losing streak in 1982 and was voted Big Ten Coach of the Year. Then came his second stint as a pro assistant.

"In our business," says Missouri's Bob Stull of college football coaching, "There are tombstones all around us. You just have to weave around them." A long-time assistant to Don James at Washington, Stull did just that at UTEP, which had the lowest winning percentage in I-A for the 15 years before he came.

No one believed he could reach 10-2 in El Paso, as he did last year. Like others in the Big Eight Conference, he views Missouri as a sleeping giant, with one I-A school and two major cities in a state with 5 million population.

East Carolina's Bill Lewis, Georgia defensive coordinator since 1980 and Wyoming head coach in 1977-1979, has started 3-0-0 vs. last year's final 3-8-0.

Sparky Woods at South Carolina, at 2-1-1, is the other one above .500. As a group, the I-A new-jobbers have started out 18-20-3, after going 6-5-1 September 23.

Here are the records of all the new-job coaches, alphabetically by colleges:

Division I-A (12)	W-L-T
Tim Murphy, Cincinnati	1-1-1
Earle Bruce, Colorado St.	1-2-1
Bill Lewis, East Caro.	3-0-0
Chuck Stobart, Memphis St.	0-4-0
Dennis Erickson, Miami (Fla.)	3-0-0
Bob Stull, Missouri	1-2-0
Fred Goldsmith, Rice	1-2-0
Sparky Woods, South Caro.	2-1-1
Forrest Gregg, Southern Methodist	1-2-0
Dennis Green, Stanford	1-2-0
Jerry Berndt, Temple	0-4-0
Mike Price, Washington St.	4-0-0
Division I-AA (9)	W-L-T
Jerry Moore, Appalachian St.	3-1-0
Ray Telier, Columbia	0-2-0
Jack Fouts, Cornell	1-0-0
Sam Rutigliano, Liberty	2-0-0
Tom Lichtenberg, Maine	4-0-0
Dave Roberts, Northeast Ia.	2-1-0
Willie Jeffries, South Caro. St.	1-2-0
Bob Smith, Southern Ill.	1-3-0
Jim Harbaugh, Western Ky.	2-2-0

In Division I-AA, Rev. Jerry Falwell's plan to put Liberty University on the fast track in athletics started with hiring Sam Rutigliano as head football coach. Why would a former NFL coach of the year for the Cleveland Browns leave a network sportscasting job, take a pay cut and leave home?

The trip began 27 years ago when he fell asleep and his car flipped, killing his 4-year-old daughter. "I didn't know how I was going to get on with my life," he told Debbie Becker of USA Today. "It was then that I accepted Christ." Now, he can take care of his two loves, coaching and spreading the gospel: "Here, I can finally do all the things I've wanted to do since that day Nancy died."

He is off to a 2-0-0 start, and as a group, the I-AA new-jobbers are 12-6-0, led by Maine's Tom Lichtenberg, moving from Morehead State, at 4-0-0.

Quotes of the week

Cal State Fullerton coach Gene Murphy was speaking before a small turnout at his weekly luncheon after a loss when someone asked him about running a play designed by boosters (as Portland State coach Pokey Allen had done with much success). Replied Murphy: "If you get 150-200 fans in here, I'll wear a tuxedo and run five of their plays." (Mel Franks, Cal State Fullerton SID)

Southern Methodist coach Gregg, talking about his first group of players enduring the pain and tedium of preparation without the gratification of playing on Saturdays last fall (due to "death penalty" probation): "They'll always be special to me, and they should be special to the school. I think that going through what they did, they'll never forget each other. I think there will always be a closeness there."

Can you top these?

Andre Johnson, senior flanker at Ferris State, ran up 525 all-purpose yards in a 41-35 victory over Clarion. He caught six passes for 235 yards (touchdowns of 11, 93 and 73 yards), returned eight kickoffs a school-record 261 yards, made 19 yards rushing on a reverse and 10 more on two punt returns. Doug Arnold, a freshman quarterback, threw five TD passes. (Jed Halm, Ferris State SID)

We have been following college football for 50 years and do not remember both teams scoring a touchdown on their first offensive play of the game. It happened September 23 when Syracuse scored on a 69-yard trick pass play (one receiver to another receiver) to open the game; then Pittsburgh scored on a 61-yard pass involving a great fake by the quarterback, who hid the ball on his hip, on its first play. No doubt it has happened before, but when?

Kirk Baumgartner, Wisconsin-Stevens Point senior quarterback, has reached 9,684 career passing yards, smashing the Division III career record with most of the season yet to go. (Craig Roberts, Wisconsin-Stevens Point assistant SID)

Talk about great comebacks. California (Pennsylvania) made one of the greatest ever to beat Mansfield, 43-41, September 16. Down 34-7 in the second quarter, the Vulcans ended a nine-game losing streak with senior tailback Steve Brown accounting for 342 all-purpose yards and four touchdowns, including runs of 77 and 64 yards. A drained coach Jeff Petrucci said, "I'm quite relieved, but I feel like I'm 69 years old (he is 43)." Bruce Wald, California (Pennsylvania) SID

Playing in his first college football game since 1981, Mike Wishnevski, a 28-year-old fullback for Indianapolis, scored two touchdowns. He

To promote sports, Rollins cites athletes' academic success

Rollins College officials are pushing support for the school's athletics program by promoting student-athletes' academic success. Billboard, radio and television advertising is being used, as are 15,000 season-ticket brochures being distributed through local fast-food outlets.

"We want people in central Florida to know that our student-athletes can compete equally athletically and academically at the very highest levels," said Rollins athletics director Gordon E. Howell, "and we believe that is the essence of college athletics."

For the record, student-athletes have been named class valedictorians at Rollins the past two years, 99 percent of the school's athletes earn degrees, and half of those graduates carry grade-point averages of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale).

Sheila Wallace, Ohio Northern University women's volleyball coach, earned career victory No. 500 September 16 when her team defeated visiting Elmhurst College in five games (15-10, 15-13, 2-15, 7-15, 15-12). With the victory, Wallace's career record stands at 500-186, all at Ohio Northern.

Calvin College has a brother-sister goaltending act on its 1989 men's and women's soccer teams. Lynn Bulten, a senior, starts in goal for the Lady Knights. John, her brother and a Calvin junior, splits time in goal on the men's team with sophomore Todd Veenhuis.

ESPN to carry SEC basketball

A new agreement between ESPN and the Southeastern Conference to televise league basketball games nationally every Tuesday during the conference season highlights the 1989-90 SEC basketball television schedule released by Commissioner Harvey W. Schiller.

All 10 conference schools will play at least one game on ESPN during the season. The league will have 23 national cable appearances on that network. In addition, four schools (Florida, Georgia, Louisiana State and Vanderbilt) will make 12 appearances on the three major networks (ABC, CBS and NBC).

"We are extremely pleased with our television schedule, particularly the new agreement with ESPN," Schiller said. "The Southeastern Conference will be the mainstay of the Tuesday double-header, occupying the 8:30 p.m. (Central) time slot. Attention to the SEC's basketball success continues to increase our exposure, as evidenced by the numerous national television appearances on ESPN and the three major networks."

"The SEC also is fortunate to have Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions broadcasting games through the Southeast. Jefferson-Pilot has assembled another attractive package for the upcoming year."

Jefferson-Pilot will televise 30 games during the 1989-90 campaign, including two wild-card contests March 3 and seven of the eight conference tournament games from Orlando, Florida. The company is entering the third year of a four-year agreement with conference to broadcast games regionally.

"The SEC is entering a new era of basketball," Schiller said. "We are beginning the decade of the 1990s with four new coaches and a rejuvenated spirit to continue the success the league has enjoyed in the past."

Briefly in the News

Bill Edwards had a major positive influence on the athletics departments at both universities," added Agnar Pytte, Case Reserve president. "A trophy in his name is, indeed, a fitting tribute and also will serve as a special incentive for today's scholar-athlete."

Edwards, a 1930 Wittenberg graduate, posted a seven-year (1934 to 1940) record of 48-6-1 at what was then known as Western Reserve University— including a 26-13 victory over Arizona State University in the 1941 Sun Bowl. After serving as head coach at Vanderbilt University and as an assistant at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and with the National Football League Cleveland Browns, Edwards was named Wittenberg's head coach in 1955.

In 14 seasons at his alma mater, Edwards produced a 98-20-4 record. He was named college-division coach of the year in 1962 and 1963.

Edwards retired after the 1968 season, serving as Wittenberg's athletics director until 1974. He died June 12, 1987.

What's in a name?
Plenty, especially when it is followed by that ® mark.

Leave it to Will Shakespeare to capture the essence of self.

"Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; But he who filches from me my good name Robs me of that which not enriches him, And makes me poor indeed."

And so it is with AstroTurf® surfaces.

True, we introduced synthetic turf to the world of sports over 25 years ago and it has been widely copied. But never duplicated.

We've invested much money, time, effort, service and pride to make and keep AstroTurf® products the best available.

Don't be fooled by filchers who say theirs is "as good" as AstroTurf® or it's the "same" as AstroTurf® or this is "our" AstroTurf® or any other misleading verbiage.

Sorry Ibid. A rose by any other name does not smell just as sweet.

And we will zealously guard against anyone who tries to cash in on our coveted ®.

What's in a name? Plenty, when it's AstroTurf®.
