Delegates will consider 27 recruiting proposals

(Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of six articles discussing the legislative proposals to be voted upon at the 1990 NCAA Convention in Dallas. This article features the proposals dealing with recruiting.)

The 1990 NCAA Convention will conclude with the consideration of 27 amendments to the Association's recruiting legislation—the largest number of proposals on any single topic in this year's Convention agenda.

And most of the 27 will be finished earlier because they deal with specific divisions and will be voted upon in the division business sessions Monday, January 7. Only nine of the 27 will require votes in the general business session, which begins Tuesday, January 8, and is scheduled to be extended to Wednesday, January 9, if necessary.

Fifteen of the 27 proposals will be handled in the Division I business session, including three dealing with contacts or evaluations in Divisions

I-A and I-AA football, two with evaluations in Division I women's basketball, and one that would establish for the first time a recruiting calendar in Division I men's ice hockey.

The grouping also includes six amendments relating to official visits, two dealing with printed recruiting aids, and a series designed to make the legislation on camps and clinics the same for all three divisions.

Summary

Following is a summary of the 27 proposals in the recruiting grouping:

No. 104: To clarify the distinction between a prospect and a recruited prospect by specifying that a prospect is any individual who has started classes for the ninth grade and that a prospect becomes a recruited prospect if the institution provides the individual (or the individual's relatives or friends) any financial aid or other benefits that the institution does not provide to prospective students in general. NCAA Council-sponsored. General business session.

No. 105: To permit a Division I or II

institution to pay a fee required by a testing agency to obtain a prospect's official ACT or SAT score without the payment constituting recruitment of the prospect or an impermissible precollege expense. NCAA Council-sponsored. Divisions I and II, general business session.

No. 106: To eliminate in Divisions I-A and I-AA football the current limit of three contacts per prospect at the prospect's educational institution, thereby permitting an institution's football coaches to visit the prospect's educational institution on not more than one occasion during each week of the appropriate contact period. NCAA Council-sponsored. Division I business session.

No. 107: To add Fridays during October to the evaluation period in Divisions I-A and I-AA football, to establish December 24 through January 1 as a dead period, and to limit the May evaluation period to 15 consecutive days designated by the member institution. Sponsored by six Division I-A institutions. Division I business session.

No. 108: To add Fridays during September and October to the evaluation period in Divisions I-A and I-AA football and to reduce the May evaluation period by nine days. Sponsored by a Division I-AA conference. Division I business session.

No. 109: To limit Division I institutions' women's basketball coaches to not more than one visit per week to a prospect's educational institution during an evaluation period, regardless of the total number of prospects enrolled at the institution. NCAA Council-sponsored. Division I business session.

No. 110: To change the permissible dates for evaluation of prospects in Montana by Division I women's basketball coaches. Sponsored by a Division I conference. Division I business session.

No. 111: To establish permissible contact and evaluation periods in Division I men's ice hockey and to identify the full-time coaches who may recruit and evaluate prospects off campus in that sport. Sponsored by eight Division I institutions.

NCAA Youth Education through Sports program, focus on sport skills and personal development.

Youngsters get a realistic picture of student-athlete at YES clinics

By J. Gregory Summers
The NCAA News Staff

In Greek mythology, Mentor was the trusted friend and adviser of Odysseus and the teacher of his son, Telemachus. But the word mentor has taken on a different and far less mythical meaning for more than 1,100 young people who participated in three NCAA Youth Education through Sports clinics this fall.

YES program mentors are real-life collegiate student-athletes who enjoy sharing their firsthand experiences with 10- to 18-year-old youths, imparting valuable lessons about life on and off the field of play.

The free YES clinics focus on individual sport-skill instruction and personal development. Prominent college coaches lead instructional sessions for the young participants, and collegiate student-athletes and local experts conduct enrichment sessions on such topics as academic preparation, peer pressure, nutrition, goal-setting and drug education.

In their role as mentors, student-athletes demonstrate sport skills, assist coaches in the instructional sessions and meet with small groups of participants to discuss student-athlete responsibilities.

Student-athletes receive training materials developed by the NCAA and participate in a preclinic workshop conducted by Association staff members.

Fifty-eight student-athletes from 40 institutions served as mentors at fall clinics held in conjunction with

Clinics enable youngsters to see collegiate athletes as role models who are not 'superhuman' the Division I Field Hockey Championship, the National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship and the Division I Women's Volleyball Championship.

Ann Lehman, a freshman field hockey player from Yale University, said the clinics enable youngsters to see collegiate athletes as role models who are not "superhuman."

"I talked to the participants about the balance between studying and playing field hockey," she said of her mentor experience. "They learned that student-athletes study hard, set goals and sometimes have to give up opportunities to go out."

"The student-athlete mentor program is a great concept," said Mike Schofield, head men's water polo coach at the U.S. Naval Academy. "This program brings the participants in contact with collegiate role models."

Schofield noted that the young participants are not the only ones benefiting from the program. "These young adults (mentors) learn to use what they have learned to help develop the talents and self-esteem of the participants," he said. "This enhances their own self-esteem."

"The student-athletes are recognized as role models for what they have achieved in their sports and in school," he added, "and it is a positive message to them that they are recognized for their contributions."

One of the objectives of the YES program has been fulfilled by providing leadership training for the student-athletes.

Warren is Division III chair of Commission

David L. Warren, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, has been elected to serve as chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission's Division III subcommittee for 1990 and 1991.

That election, completed December 26 by mail ballot of the Commission's Division III members, concludes the selection of Commission officers for 1990.

Warren will join the three previously elected officers on the Commission's executive committee: Martin A. Massengale, chancellor, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Commission chair; Bernard F. Sliger, president, Florida State University, Division I chair, and Asa N. Green, president, Livingston University, Division II chair.

Warren joined the Commission in an at-large position last January. A former Fulbright Scholar, he has been president at Ohio Wesleyan since 1984. Prior to taking that position, he was chief administrative officer for the city of New Haven, Connecticut, where he earlier had served in various administrative and teaching positions at Yale University.

At Ohio Wesleyan, he has received national attention for his "live-in presidency," in which he has lived for periods of time with

As information is shared, career counseling panels burgeon

As the number of career counseling panels increases at NCAA member institutions, the availability of information on how to make the panels work is improving—or so it appeared at a recent forum sponsored by the Association.

The event, held recently in Kansas City, Missouri, was the third in a series of forums that the NCAA's legislative services department is presenting as part of a three-year program to assist member institutions in dealing with agents.

Representatives from approximately 35 member institutions attended the forum, where they received materials to be used in the formation and operation of panels and heard speakers on such topics as amateurism/professionalism legislation and the NCAA's new disability insurance program for exceptional athletes.

Several institutions sent representatives to the forum for the first time, which is indicative of the increased number of career counseling panels nationally, said Richard C. Perko, NCAA legislative assistant.

Approximately 95 member institutions have registered career counseling panels with the NCAA legislative services department, compared to only 70 a year ago, Perko said.

The first two forums in the series primarily were used to gather information on how panels are operated at member institutions and to discover what schools need to know about the panels.

The third forum, however, turned more to the "nuts and bolts" of operating a panel.

"Schools are saying, 'We have a panel, we've designated our people, now what do we do with it?' We're responding to that," Perko said.

"We are providing materials to use in getting these panels off the ground," he said.

Among the materials distributed in Kansas City were a document featuring guidelines for establishing a panel and a summary of NCAA rules and regulations pertaining to agents and related amateurism/professionalism issues.

Ed Garvey, former executive director of the National Football League Players Association, described a program he has created to "introduce competent agents to educated student-athletes." Titled "Sports Seminars, Incorporated," the program offers to stage in-service training sessions on campuses.

In another session, Tom Condon, a former professional football player and an attorney who represents professional athletes, discussed what career counseling panels should expect from agents and what the panels should let agents know in return.

Forum participants also learned about the disability insurance program recently approved by the NCAA Executive Committee. The program is designed to make it easier for exceptional student-athletes to obtain insurance against a disabling injury that would prevent the athlete from taking advantage of professional opportunities.

Other speakers at the forum included NCAA President Albert M. Witte, who presented the keynote address, and Cindy Patterson, associate director of athletics at Southern Methodist University. Also on hand were members of two career counseling panels—Jeff Potter of Duke University and Mike Rogers of Baylor University—who led round-table discussions on the operation of panels.

Copies of materials distributed at the forum will be sent upon request to institutions that sponsor panels but did not have representatives at the forum, or to any institution's personnel interested in establishing a panel. The materials can be obtained from the legislative services department.

The series of forums will continue in June 1990 at a Midwest location still to be determined.

From this point, Perko said, the NCAA will encourage schools to interact among themselves and create their own network of experts, while the Association serves as a "moderator" for those efforts.

Colonial League now Patriot League

Presidents of the seven Colonial League institutions announced December 21 that the league has adopted The Patriot League as its new name.

The Colonial League was established in 1984 as an athletics conference competing only in Division I-AA football. In July 1988, the Council of Presidents announced that the league would expand to 22 sports with the beginning of the 1990-91 academic year. The league also intends to be involved in activities other than athletics, with debating and cultural activities on the agenda.

Current members of the league are Bucknell University, Colgate University, Fordham University, College of Holy Cross, Lafayette College, Lehigh University and the United States Military Academy.

In making the name-change announcement, Carl F. Ullrich, Army athletics director and conference executive director, said, "We feel that now is the appropriate time to make this change. Our league will be taking a giant step forward beginning with the next academic year, and the opportunity to be known by a new name will add to the excitement."

"In changing the name from Colonial League to Patriot League, the presidents seek to differentiate more clearly between this league and the Colonial Athletic Association, which was founded in 1985 for sports other than football. We look forward to our new identity and the opportunity to compete with a full competitive schedule."

The expanded Patriot League will include competition in football, baseball, basketball (men and women), indoor and outdoor track and cross country (men and women), golf (men), lacrosse (men and women), soccer (men and women), swimming and diving (men and women), tennis (men and women), field hockey, softball (women), and volleyball (women).

Not all Patriot League members will field teams in all sports under the alignment agreed upon in July 1988.

Army will maintain its independence in football, in which it plays a Division I-A schedule. Army also will maintain other scheduling arrangements in baseball.

News Fact File

Five institutions are in the restricted-membership category for all sports this year—two from Division I-AAA and three from Division II. Four failed to meet the minimum standards (contests and/or participants) in both men's and women's programs (at least one sport in each); the other failed in its women's program.

Also, 14 institutions are in the probationary-membership category. Nine failed to meet the minimums in their women's programs, three in both men's and women's programs, one in the men's program only, and one in a mixed sport. The 14 include one Division I-A, one I-AA, four I-AAAs, five IIs and three IIIs.

NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1.1—change in ACT test scoring

In October 1989, ACT introduced the Enhanced ACT Assessment. According to ACT officials, beginning with the October 28, 1989, ACT test, it is not possible to consider scores on the Enhanced ACT Assessment as interchangeable with scores on the current ACT test. Therefore, a new score scale has been developed. Inasmuch as this will affect the minimum composite score required for purposes of Divisions I and II freshman academic requirements, the NCAA Council has approved a recommendation from the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee that, for students who take the ACT test subsequent to October 1, 1989, the minimum score required for purposes of initial eligibility will be the score that is the concordant value of the current composite score of 15. According to concordance tables published and distributed by the ACT testing agency, the concordant value of the current composite score of 15 is 18; therefore, a prospective student-athlete must achieve a minimum score of 18 on ACT tests administered subsequent to October 1, 1989, in order to fulfill the test-score requirements of Bylaw 14.3.

The Council also determined that subscores from the "old" (pre-October 1, 1989) version of the ACT may not be combined with subscores from the revised or enhanced version for purposes of establishing initial eligibility. However, it will remain permissible for subscores from two or more old versions of the ACT to be combined and for subscores from two or more revised or enhanced versions to be combined for purposes of satisfying the requirements of Bylaw 14.3.1.1.

NCAA Bylaw 16.5.1-(d)—housing and meals during vacation period

Member institutions are reminded that in accordance with Bylaw 16.5.1-(d), an institution may provide the cost of room and board to student-athletes (during the institution's vacation period) when student-athletes are required to remain on the institution's campus or report to the institution's campus for organized practice sessions or competition. Please note that the institution may not provide the cost of room and board to any student-athlete who lives at home during the vacation period, other than to permit the student-athlete to participate in team meals incidental to practice sessions.

NCAA Bylaw 16.8.1.4.1—travel to a regular-season contest during a vacation period

Member institutions are reminded that the provisions of Bylaw 16.8.1.4.1 (travel to NCAA championships and special events during the vacation period) are not applicable to regular-season competition that occurs during the institution's vacation period. Thus, member institutions may not provide transportation costs for their student-athletes to travel home (from the event site or campus) or to the event site from home in conjunction with regular-season competition.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q What service limitations apply to members of the NCAA Committee on Infractions?

A As stated in NCAA Bylaw 19.1.1.3, a member of the Committee on Infractions shall serve a three-year term, which shall commence on the first day of September following the member's election. A member may be reappointed but shall not serve more than nine years on the committee.

NCAA Bylaw 15.5.4.3—financial aid/initial counters (Division I football)

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 15.5.4.3.1, a student-athlete recruited by the awarding institution who enters in the fall term and receives institutional financial aid based in any degree on athletics ability during the first academic year in residence must be counted in the institution's limit on initial and total counters for that year in the sport of Division I football. Bylaw 15.5.4.3.2 permits a student-athlete recruited by the awarding institution who enters subsequent to the first term of the academic year (e.g., midyear) and immediately receives institutional aid based in any degree on athletics ability to count in the institution's initial financial aid limitations in the sport of football for either the current academic year (if the institution's annual limit has not been reached) or the next academic year. However, the student-athlete must be included in the institution's total counter limit during the academic year in which the aid first was received. Similarly, Bylaw 15.5.4.3.3 permits a student-athlete not recruited by the institution who receives institutional financial aid based in any degree on athletics ability subsequent to beginning football practice to count as an initial counter for either the current academic year or the next academic year if the institution has reached its initial limit for the year in question. However, the student-athlete must be considered in the total counter limit for the academic year in which the aid first was received.

Finally, in accordance with Bylaw 15.5.4.3.4, an institution that has reached its limitations on the total number of counters (i.e., 95) may replace a counter who graduates at midyear with an initial counter without exceeding the limitations on the permissible total number of counters. Please note that the replacement must be counted against the initial limit for the following academic year even if the institution's annual limit for initial counters for the current academic year has not been reached. In addition, it should be noted that a student-athlete who receives countable financial aid but whose status as an initial counter under Bylaw 15.5.4.3.2 or 15.5.4.3.3 is delayed until the following academic year must be counted against the initial limit the following academic year, regardless of whether the student-athlete reports for participation or attends the institution in that academic year. However, an institution would not be required to count a student-athlete who does not report for participation the following academic year in its limit for total number of counters for that academic year.

Texas fines former Heisman winner, firm under agent law

The Texas secretary of state fined former Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska and a Nebraska-based sports marketing firm $10,000 each December 22, alleging that they violated Texas' athlete-agent law.

Rodgers and Total Economic Management of America Inc., or TEAM America, of Lincoln, Nebraska, are accused of illegally contacting 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, junior quarterback at the University of Houston, according to Secretary of State George Bayoud.

The fines are the largest assessed since the law was enacted in 1987.

"By imposing these record fines, the message I am sending to agents should be loud and clear—don't mess with Texas athletes," Bayoud said.

The law requires that athlete agents be registered with the secretary of state, and it prohibits agents from making contact with a player who has college eligibility remaining.

A report released December 22 by Bayoud alleges that Rodgers and TEAM America had failed to register as athlete agents in Texas; illegally contacted Ware, and offered gifts, cash and other inducements to Joyce Ware, Andre Ware's mother, in an effort to lure Ware into signing a professional services contract, the attorney general to sue to collect the fines.

Telephone calls to the firm's offices were answered by an answering machine. There is no telephone listing in Lincoln for Rodgers.

Earlier, Rodgers denied any wrongdoing.

"There's definitely nothing wrong around November 30 in an attempt to convince her son to sign a contract with the company. Mrs. Ware lives in Dickinson, south of Houston.

Also, according to a statement from Bayoud's office, Rodgers later told Mrs. Ware he was a representative of the Heisman Trophy-sponsoring Downtown Athletic Club and that Rodgers provided transportation and lodging for Mrs. Ware after her arrival in New York for the December 2 Heisman presentation.

Ware had a game that day against Rice at Houston.

"The University of Houston has a lot to gain by keeping Andre in school right now," Rodgers said when the allegations became public this month. "Andre has a lot to lose by staying. I think his mother is 100 percent in agreement with that. I would love to be Andre's agent."

The report alleged that Rodgers and TEAM America's president, Howard Misle, met with Mrs. Ware in a New York hotel room December

1 and presented her with a packet of information entitled "Cash Flow and Tax Projections Prepared for Andre Ware."

During that meeting, evidence in the case indicates that Rodgers and Misle told Mrs. Ware their company could market her son's football skills for $20 million, Bayoud's statement said.

Also, the statement alleged that Misle and Rodgers took Mrs. Ware shopping and bought her several items of clothing, including a fur coat, dress, shoes and purse, the purse containing $300.

When Mrs. Ware returned from New York, she told her son about her contact with Rodgers, and Ware informed University of Houston officials, who contacted the secretary of state's office, Bayoud said.

Mrs. Ware turned over the clothes, coat and purse to the university, and the items were sent to the secretary of state's office, Bayoud said.

Associated Press reported.

The report and fines, which resulted from an 18-day investigation, can be appealed at an administrative hearing. Rodgers and the firm have 20 days to pay the fines or to request a hearing.

If penalties imposed under the agent-athlete law are not paid, the secretary of state can ask the state with contacting the family," Rodgers said. "I have done nothing at all other than talk to his mother. She was interested. I haven't broken any rules."

An investigation by Bayoud's office found that Rodgers, representing himself as an agent for TEAM America, contacted Mrs. Ware by telephone on several occasions

Schools drop use of skull as trophy

The presidents of Wittenberg University and Ohio Wesleyan University have announced that the schools will discontinue a 60-year tradition of exchanging an ancient Native American skull as a football trophy.

"We have asked that the Native American Indian Center receive this ancient skull and provide proper burial," the presidents said in a joint statement. "It is not appropriate for such a remain to be used as a sporting trophy, however innocent the intent might have been of those who originated the tradition."

President William Kinnison of Wittenberg and President David L. Warren of Ohio Wesleyan discussed the matter following an October 7 football game between the schools in Springfield, Ohio. They concluded that the skull should be replaced as a trophy with a more suitable object.

Public wants college sports reform, Jordan says

By Thomas J. Sheeran

Campus sports scandals and a newspaper investigation of a hometown basketball team have prompted the usually low-profile, private Knight Foundation to delve into reformation of college athletics.

"We've got to find a way to convince the public we can handle our own affairs," said Bryce Jordan, president of Pennsylvania State University and a member of a reform-minded commission created by the foundation.

Jordan said the American public is upset with scandals in intercollegiate athletics.

"There's no question but the public is concerned about intercollegiate athletics," he said by phone from his State College, Pennsylvania, office. "There's plenty of evidence that there is serious national concern."

That concern prompted Jordan to accept the foundation's invitation to serve on the commission, which will spend up to $2 million over the next two years drafting an agenda for the NCAA.

Jordan said he is confident the panel will independently draft proposed changes for the NCAA to consider.

He ticked off a list of problems that plague intercollegiate sports: athletes who don't learn; a threat of government regulation if the NCAA doesn't police its membership, and a 1980s list of 92 schools punished for a variety of violations, including improper recruiting and payments to athletes by team boosters.

"Up to this point, the NCAA has not been able to get the job done," said Jordan.

Creed Black, president of the Knight Foundation, said the idea for the sports-reform commission emerged from concern over campus sports scandals and his experience as publisher of the Lexington (Kentucky) Herald-Leader when it embarked on an investigation of the home-town University of Kentucky basketball program. The paper won a Pulitzer Prize for its work, and the university received a three-year probation, which began in November.

"We got on the subject of the terrible things going on in college athletics, where every day there seemed to be a different scandal," Black said.

He became convinced that problems in intercollegiate athletics were worse than what's seen on the basketball court or football field. "It's a problem that's undermining the integrity of American higher education."

"We see some of the same influences that have corrupted big-time college athletics now beginning to filter down to high schools." He noted that his high school alma mater, Tilghman High at Paducah, Kentucky, played its archrival in football on national cable television this fall.

James J. Whalen, president of Ithaca College, chair of the American Council on Education and a Knight panel member, said outsiders serving on the commission would guarantee a vigorous review of changes needed to clean up college sports.

"It's good to have members of the public and the citizenry discuss and review the things we do in education and athletics," he said. "This group has variety and will have a number of different points of view."

Whalen said he is convinced that scandals in college sports reflect both risks built into big-money athletics and "some bad apples." His school belongs to the NCAA's Division III and does not award athletics grants-in-aid.

Whalen said his coaches know he's concerned about what's going on because he attends games involving every team, from men's football to women's field hockey.

"The communication (with

Any Knight Commission proposals would be put to a vote at an NCAA Convention coaches) is pretty good," he said. "They will tell me their concerns. As far as the (NCAA) rules and regulations are concerned, we're pretty good."

Such interest by campus presidents is becoming more evident, according to S. David Berst, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement.

"I detect an enhanced integrity mood, an institutional control mood or atmosphere," he said. "I think that's what everyone's after."

The 21-member Knight Commission also includes Richard D.

Schultz, executive director of the NCAA. Other members include Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, a former basketball player at the University of Maryland, College Park, as well as several private business leaders.

Black said the commission is composed of both campus "insiders" like Jordan and Whalen and such outsiders as a former NBC chair and the president of the Coca-Cola Co. The mix is needed, he said, both for fresh outside views about the problem and for people familiar with campus sports who can lobby the NCAA for changes.

The commission hopes to make its recommendations in 1991, Black said.

Any changes to reform sports, such as tighter recruiting regulations or tougher penalties for offending schools, would go before an NCAA Convention.

The Knight Foundation, based in Akron, has $600 million in assets and supports causes and programs in communities where Knight-Ridder Inc. publishes newspapers. It also makes grants in higher education and journalism. Each year the foundation makes $25 million in grants.

Pac-10's decision to drop tournament praiseworthy

By Steve Kelley
Seattle Times

(Pacific-10) Conference chancellors and presidents have decided to make a statement in favor of academics over hoop-a-holics (in cancelling the postseason basketball tournament after 1990).

Imagine the unmitigated gall of these guys who think physics is more important than physiques, that studying the Greek scholars is more important than the zone trap, that research is as important as rebounds.

Who are they to tamper with our March Madness.... The first notion is to mourn this loss and curse these ivy-halled administrators (who probably think the pick-and-roll is a pastry) for interfering in our fun.

The sobering truth, however, is that these academicians are right. Forgetting our basketball biases, it is time to take a stand. The Pac-10 doesn't need a tournament.... The Pac-10 is showing rare courage. It is turning down the revenue of such a tournament—as much as $700,000—to make a statement in favor of books over backboards.

These administrators are to be commended. Sure, this move merely is a token gesture. Pac-10 basketball players aren't going to move closer to their degrees just because they were able to spend three more days in the classroom because of the absence of a postseason tournament.

But players need the symbolism. Priorities have been warped in recent seasons. Conferences pay lip service to academics, then agree to play games for television at 9 o'clock on weeknights.

Enough, the Pac-10 has said. It is making a stand.

Any coach who loves recruiting deserves to be watched closely

Blackie Sherrod, columnist
The Dallas Morning News

"Many of us, if we give it study, can imagine no more distasteful task than recruiting high school jocks today. I know, you'll hear coaches swear they enjoy the recruiting process. When I hear that, I look up at the sky and move a couple of steps away. Like the Robert Duvall major in "Apocalypse Now" saying, 'I love the smell of napalm in the morning.'

"I didn't believe him, either. Or if I did, I wouldn't want to share a pup tent with the crazy idiot."

Kyle Morris, suspended varsity football player
University of Florida

The Associated Press

"I am very happy to get a second chance (after being suspended with quarterback Shane Matthews for gambling on college football games). I hope I can come back and be forgiven by my coaches, teammates and fans. I realize Mr. Arnsperger (director of athletics) and the university have given me a second chance.

"Hopefully, the NCAA will look positively upon the petition for our reinstatement of eligibility for competition. These were the longest two months of my life. You never really know how much you love something until it is taken away from you. I have learned my lesson, and I hope to come back in the spring and do the best job I can."

Jon Mandel, vice-president of Grey Advertising
New York City

Scripps Howard News Service

"The problem (with the name change of the Sun Bowl to the John Hancock Bowl) isn't with the new name, it's with its impact on secondary advertisers. It detracts some from their interest.

"If I'm Mitsubishi, I'm not so sure I'm going to get all that excited about advertising in a game called 'the John Hancock Bowl.' It makes it a lot tougher sell."

Ad Hoc Committee on Athletics
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Report to the university

"College athletics across America has become a sort of farm club for professional sports. This concerns us. Intercollegiate sports has gotten out of hand....

"No university will reform its programs until the system itself is reformed and the reforms are made obligatory for all. And the system, as regulated by the NCAA, strongly resists reform.

"Either that deadlock is resolved, or the troubled partnership of universities and intercollegiate athletics will sooner or later be terminated."

Ed Sherman, columnist
Chicago Tribune

"... Big Ten Commissioner James Delany is talking about the age-old question of whether there should be a national play-off in college football:

"Can you imagine if the situations were reversed and football had a play-off and basketball didn't," Delany said. "Say someone made this proposal at the next NCAA Convention: 'Let's stage a 64-team basketball tournament, and it'll take three weeks to complete." It would have virtually no chance of getting through.

"Delany, who is the chair of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, then added with a twist of irony: 'Yes, I would be against that proposal if it came up now. It's not the right time.'

"Timing, therefore, is the key in the play-off process. If football had adopted a national tournament format way back when, it now might have a 16-team extravaganza with a title game rivaling the Super Bowl.

"But it didn't. And now, major-college football is left with the nagging question of when, or maybe if, the sport will ever see a play-off."

Bill Frieder, head men's basketball coach
Arizona State University

The Arizona Republic

"I think all the schools ought to share it (revenue from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship).

"Obviously, all the people who participate (in the 64-team tournament) should get more. But they should devise a system depending on what division they're in, and how many sports they have, and how large the school is, so that everyone benefits.

"Certainly, every school could get $100,000. The bottom 50 schools could get $100,000, and that would be phenomenal money to them."

Nebraskan heads volleyball team

Virginia Stahr, who led Nebraska to the 1989 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship finals, tops the 1989 academic all-America volleyball team announced December 10 by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) and GTE.

Stahr, a graduate student with a 3.910 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in elementary education, was a middle blocker for Nebraska, which won its 14th straight Big Eight Conference title. The native of Waco, Nebraska, also was selected as the University Division GTE academic all-America of the year for volleyball for the second straight year.

The GTE academic all-America teams are chosen by the 1,400 CoSIDA members. To be eligible, an athlete must be a varsity starter or key reserve and maintain a cumulative GPA of at least 3.200 on a 4.000 scale.

Three other student-athletes were named to the University Division first team for the second straight year—Arizona State senior Tracie Kistro, who has a 4.000 GPA in accounting; Bowling Green's Linda Popovich, a senior with a 3.960 GPA in political science, and Pamela Vehling, a senior at North Carolina State with a 3.950 GPA in math education.

In the College Division, Toni St. Clair of Muskingum was chosen academic all-America of the year. The senior from Coshocton, Ohio, is a math/business major with a 3.910 GPA.

Bowl will honor student-athletes with top grades

The Peach Bowl's annual Texaco Scholarship Breakfast will be held December 29 in Atlanta, the day before the University of Georgia and Syracuse University square off in the 22nd edition of this postseason contest.

Recognized for their classroom skills will be the 10 student-athletes on each team with the highest grade-point averages. In addition, Syracuse and Georgia each will receive a $5,000 scholarship contribution from the bowl.

"So many people make a negative association between college athletics and academics," said Peach Bowl Executive Director Robert Dale Morgan, "we felt it was time to emphasize the positive side of this issue."

Student-athletes to be recognized during the breakfast include:

Georgia—Brian Bowers, Chris Broom, Kevin Brown, Jimps Cole, Lowry Denty, Preston Jones, John Kasay, Arthur Marshall, Bill Rosenberg and Jack Swan.

Syracuse—Kevin Bauer, Fred DeRiggi, Qadry Ismail, Todd Kasmer, David Lapinski, Tom Marsilio, Mark McDonald, Rob Thomson, Greg Walker and Glen Young.

New league set for Division III

Six NCAA Division III schools will organize the Capital Athletic Conference, with league competition to begin next winter.

Charter members of the conference are Gallaudet University, Marymount University, Mary Washington College, St. Mary's College (Maryland), York College (Pennsylvania) and Catholic University.

The six schools will compete in 13 men's and women's sports and conclude each season with a conference championship tournament, beginning with the 1990-91 winter season.

"We are very excited to be a part of this new conference," said Fred O'Connor, executive director of athletics at Catholic and conference president. "All these institutions possess a mutual commitment to a balance between academics and athletics."

Seven pets help student-athlete with a career decision

Dee Dee Malone is sticking to a career decision she made as a fourth grader. The Tennessee Technological University women's volleyball player carries a 3.320 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in preveterinary medicine.

In a feature distributed by Tennessee Tech's sports information office, the sophomore from Germantown, Tennessee, said her childhood love of animals came from her pets—Boomer the dog, Louie the cat, Thumper the rabbit, Peanut the cat, Boom Boom the parakeet, Snowflake the cat and Herby the hamster. "I wanted to own a zoo or be a veterinarian."

With seven pets, it might be said that she already owns a zoo.

She chose veterinary medicine and is earning high marks in a difficult academic program. Malone said her goal at Tech, volleyball notwithstanding, is to graduate with high honors.

"That would mean more to me than being named all-world in volleyball," she offered. "The rest of my life will be based on what I do now in school."

Lori Loew quit soccer in 1987, after her sophomore year at the University of Cincinnati. "It got to the point where I didn't even feel like going to practice," she said recently. "I think I experienced burn-out."

If so, Loew found that old spark again last summer.

"She just came to me and said, 'I want to come back,'" explained Cincinnati coach Meridy Smith. "I said, 'Great... come on out.' But I wasn't expecting her to have the year she did."

Loew scored a team-record 21 goals, including five in the season's last two games. Cincinnati finished 14-3, the school's best record ever.

Off the field, Loew is working on a double major (accounting and finance).

Trivia Time: How many Penn State's men's basketball teams have won at least 20 games in a season? Answer later.

Shunichi Okuno, assistant coach for Japan's national men's basketball team, is spending four months learning the up-tempo game from new University of Kentucky coach Rick Pitino. "This fast style interests me very much—up and down, and full court," Okuno said. "I want to learn this style and take it to Japan. That is my purpose."

Pitino's approach caught Okuno's eye while the former was taking Providence College to the Final Four in 1987. That he is studying Pitino at Kentucky is ironic, since Okuno was introduced to hoops almost 30 years ago through a book written by Kentucky legend Adolph Rupp.

Six of the 13 University of Illinois, Chicago, athletics events to be televised by SportsChannel, the Midwest cable network, are men's hockey games. The other seven telecasts will feature men's basketball.

SportsChannel also will air UIC Flamesports, a weekly program covering other UIC sports.

United States Sports Academy officials have announced the addition of a sports travel and tourism emphasis to the academy's sports science graduate-degree program. Courses in travel and management, and an internship in the industry, will be required.

Winter-quarter classes begin January 9 at the Daphne, Alabama, school. Information on the sports travel and tourism program is available by contacting the admissions department at One Academy Drive, Daphne, Alabama 36526 (telephone 205/626-3303).

Interest in men's basketball has taken off at Pennsylvania State University, where seventh-year coach Bruce Parkhill has increased season victories 400 percent (from five in 1983-84 to 20 last season) since accepting the Nittany Lion job.

Penn State fans, it appears, are responding accordingly.

Season-ticket sales increased almost 40 percent (to 1,960 from 1,400) over the previous all-time high of a year ago. Through December 6, attendance at five Penn State home games (four regular-season contests and one exhibition game) was up 34 percent over the first five games last season.

Penn State's most notable statistic, however, could be the fact that all but one of Parkhill's four-year players have earned degrees.

Trivia Answer: According to the 1989-90 Penn State's men's basketball media guide, the 1951-52, 1964-65 and 1988-89 Nittany Lions each won 20 games, which is the school record for men's basketball victories in a season.
