New athletics model needed, Schultz tells delegates

By Timothy J. Lilley
Managing Editor, The NCAA News

Delegates to the 1990 NCAA Convention crowded the Grand Ballroom at the Loews Anatole Hotel Sunday night (January 7) for a reception at which they munched on appetizers and mulled over the food for thought—surprising to some—offered a short time earlier by Executive Director Richard D. Schultz in his third annual “State of the Association” address.

“It was,” Schultz told the media after his remarks, when asked if his intent was to raise some eyebrows with specific recommendations designed to create a “new model” for intercollegiate athletics.

“I feel very strongly that we have to change our model, and I feel that part of my responsibility is to stimulate thinking,” Schultz said. “That’s what I was trying to do.”

He suggested the following: reductions in the number of coaches who can recruit off-campus, permission for athletes to enter professional drafts without loss of eligibility, establishment of a fund to provide bonuses for athletes who graduate within five years, elimination of athletics dormitories and that legislation be proposed for the 1991 Convention to “effect major reform.”

“I realize that probably not all those ideas will be accepted,” Schultz said in a press conference after the opening session. “And there are probably others that can be accepted.”

“I think you have to start by providing some direction and stimulating some thinking and stimulating people to action, and that’s what I attempted to do.

“And I do believe in all those things I stated,” he continued. “I just didn’t dream those things up. Most of those proposals were directed at Division I, obviously, but that’s to negotiate. I think that gives us an opportunity to make some changes that change the course of things because that event doesn’t come along every day of the week. And I think you need to seize the opportunity.

where most of our challenges are.”

And a part of it—the Division I Men’s Basketball Championship is the source of the financial base that is a key part of the whole issue, according to Schultz.

“I think there are two things that made me feel that this was the right time,” Schultz said. “One was the new (TV) contract we’ve been able was very serious when I said that it really doesn’t make any difference how things really are. You are what you are perceived to be.

“And if you read the polls, you listen to people—if you’re just aware of what’s going on around you you’re aware of what the perception is. And that very simply tells me that the only way you’re going to change that perception is to change the model.

“There have to be some drastic changes,” Schultz added, “not just some window dressing.”

He told a gathering of more than three dozen writers and broadcasters that public relations was not an element in his decision to suggest major reform to the 1990 Convention.

“They weren’t intended to be public relations moves,” he said of the reforms proposed in his approximately 30-minute speech. “I don’t think public relations moves are sufficient. I think we need to make substantive changes.”

“To me, all those issues are very important in this new model. You’ve got to have the rules compliance. You have to demand academic integrity.

“We’ve got to be concerned about

Convention approves Commission proposals

Delegates to the largest NCAA Convention in history adopted with some modifications all three major legislative proposals developed by the NCAA Presidents Commission.

Although the Convention had not adjourned, legislation in two of the three areas—financial aid for partial qualifiers under Bylaw 14.3 and playing and practice seasons—had been decided by January 9 through their adoption and disposition of a motion to reconsider.

Delegates voted January 8 to rescind Proposal No. 42 and to modify portions of NCAA Bylaw 14.3 relating to financial aid for partial qualifiers.

Roll-call vote

By a roll-call vote of 258 to 66, Division I delegates passed Proposal No. 26 as amended by No. 26-3. Specifically, the legislation—which takes effect next August 1—rescinded 1989 Convention Proposal No. 42, which would have eliminated the partial-qualifier provision of Bylaw 14.3. In addition, No. 26 as amended:

- Stipulates that financial aid to partial qualifiers must be need-based.

- Stipulates that the source of that need-based aid may not be athletically related.

- Stipulates that a partial qualifier who receives need-based aid will not count toward maximum awards limitations until he or she practices or plays with the varsity squad.

Graduation rates

Graduation-rate disclosure legislation also was enacted by the Convention; however, the Convention had not adjourned and these proposals still were subject to reconsideration.

Divisions I and II delegates cast 1,512 votes on the major provisions of Proposal No. 24 that dealt with disclosure of graduation rates—and only 28 of those 1,512 votes were negative.

CEOs debate freshman eligibility

Thomas K. Hearn

After two members of the NCAA Presidents Commission presented opposing views of freshman eligibility, both admitted that the motivations behind their positions varied little.

What made the January 7 Presidential Debate keep so many delegates in their Chantilly Ballroom seats at Dallas’ Loews Anatole Hotel were the different routes Charles E. Young and Thomas K. Hearn suggested to improve the chances for freshman student-athletes’ academic success.

Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, and a member of the Presidents Commission for almost two years, proposed a “skeleton of a rule” that would make all freshmen ineligible for competition.

“I am not suggesting that the elimination of freshman eligibility is the end-all solution,” Young said after outlining his proposal. “But we must venture forth on several fronts at once if we are to

Athletics a great equalizer, Reagan tells NCAA

Former President Ronald W. Reagan told the largest crowd in the 25-year history of the NCAA honors program that one aspect of intercollegiate athletics always has intrigued him. “When men and women compete on the athletics field,” Reagan said January 8, “socioeconomic status disappears.

“Black or white, Christian or Jew, rich or poor... all that matters is that you’re out there on the field giving your all,” Reagan told more than 2,000 delegates and media representatives who jammed the Chantilly Ballroom in Dallas’ Loews Anatole Hotel for the dinner.

Reagan said it’s the same way in the stands, where “corporate presidents sit next to janitors... and they high-five each other when their team scores... which makes me wonder if it (status) should matter at all.”

Reagan received the Theodore Roosevelt Award—the highest honor bestowed upon an individual by the NCAA. Also honored were the College Athletics Top XII, which included the Today’s Top Six student-athletes and six Silver Anniversary honorees.

dent-athletes and six Silver Anniversary honorees.

“All of us in this room owe a debt to the NCAA for keeping athletics and academics in proper perspective,” said Reagan. “And I’m sure all of us remember a time when there was concern about an overemphasis of intercollegiate athletics. The NCAA has taken care of that.”

Women’s thanks

Also expressing gratitude to the Association was Villanova University student-athlete Vicki L. Huber, who spoke on behalf of the Today’s Top Six honorees.

“I would like to thank the NCAA,” she said, “for enabling women’s programs to develop over the last decade.” Huber added that increased competitive opportunities have enhanced the educational experiences and personal lives of women who have participated in intercollegiate athletics during that time.

She said the Association takes “great pains” to insure fair and equitable competition, adding that it is unfortunate that international competition does not benefit from a similar commitment.

“I am hopeful that in the future, the example the NCAA sets will be followed at all levels of amateur competition,” she said.

Other Today’s Top Six honorees were University of Nebraska, Lincoln, student-athletes Virginia M. Stahr (volleyball) and Jacob C. Young III (football); Pennsylvania State University wrestler James S. Martin; heptathlete Jolanda F. Jones of the University of Houston, and University of Southern California two-sport (football and baseball) star John M. Jackson.

Silver Anniversary honorees were Donald E. Baxter, M.D., Mercer University; Paul W. Bucha, U.S. Military Academy; Dick Butkus,

University of Illinois, Champaign; Brigman Owens, University of Cincinnati; Arthur J. “Archie” Roberts, M.D., Columbia University, and Roger T. Staubach, U.S. Naval Academy.

Staubach spoke on behalf of the Silver Anniversary group.

“It’s tough being a kid today,” Staubach said, “maybe tougher than when we did it.”

“Today, athletics is a stabilizing influence on youth. The education you receive on the field augments learning in the classroom. Athletes have an opportunity to find their limits and expand their limits. It’s a tremendous advantage in life.”

CBS News correspondent Harry Reasoner was master of cere-the pressures on our coaches and our athletes. We just have to get all these things back into perspective.

"If we do that, then the positives that we already have in intercollegiate athletics will still be there and they will grow with that new model.

"And hopefully," Schultz added, "the new model will change the negatives."

Opening session notes

Schultz's speech capped an opening session that included several committee reports. Among them was a report from the NCAA Council by John P. Reardon Jr., athletics director at Harvard University. Reardon made special mention of what he called the "kinder, gentler, friendlier approach" the Council had taken in recent meetings, especially when dealing with legislative interpretations and requests for waivers.

"I believe it's a more common-sense approach," Reardon told the delegates, "and I attribute much of it to Dick Schultz."

Delegates also received reports from the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure and the Special Committee on Cost Reduction (see stories on page 12).

monies for the dinner, and he recalled a television report he worked on more than 20 years ago—"What About Ronald Reagan?"

"We had a conclusion," he told those in attendance, "and I kind of hate to bring it up. We said in considering Ronald Reagan for the 1968 Republican Presidential nomination, if it didn't happen, it probably (would be) because of the age factor."

Noting that he enjoyed athletics ("I own two televisions"), Reasoner said he was happy to see the Association address the problems in college sports.

"And, I'm happy you decided to accept my network's modest financial offer," he said of the new seven-year, $1 billion television contract. Reasoner said he hoped the money would be used to "diminish rather than enhance the pressures on coaches and athletes."

"It (funds generated by the contract) gives a forum to all of you," he said. "It gives you the resources to demonstrate there is a role for amateur athletics (beyond) just getting audiences."

Voting results

Complete results of voting on all legislative proposals at the NCAA Convention will be published in the January 17 issue of The NCAA News.

Also, a summary of actions taken by the NCAA Council at its pre-Convention meeting will be published in a future issue of the News, after minutes of the meeting are completed.

restore intercollegiate athletics to its proper and respected place in American higher education."

He went on to call for active consideration by the Presidents Commission of a freshman-ineligibility proposal that would be included on the 1991 Convention agenda.

Hearn, president of Wake Forest University, has served on the Commission since mid-1988. His presentation focused on the need for academic priority and his belief that any ineligibility rule that passed an academic-priority test would be an expensive and potentially unwieldy proposition.

"I am perplexed as to why this issue has become a symbol of academic reform in college athletics," he said. "It is essential that we separate symbol and substance."

"Given the ills that prevail, freshman ineligibility is no panacea. Were freshmen to become ineligible," Hearn said, "our athletics houses would not be in order, and some problems would certainly be worse."

Hearn suggested that across-the-board freshman ineligibility would prove costly at some schools, where talented student-athletes could end up needing five or more years to satisfy degree requirements.

He also noted "incidental but undesirable" side effects that could result.

"In the real world of football, with squad sizes at 95 and 25 available grants per year, the freshman (ineligible) year will be a time of athletics testing—to see which of the freshmen recruits should be encouraged to leave the program," he reasoned. "Running off" recruited student-athletes is another generally undisclosed scandalous practice.

"No policy that makes that practice competitively desirable should be sanctioned."

Hearn also reaffirmed his support of a four-year degree track—something that Young, in his rebuttal, said has gone by the boards.

"The four-year bachelor's degree went out with... the dominance of Detroit-built automobiles," Young said. "And there's nothing (about his plan) to prevent a student-athlete capable of graduating in four years from doing so. He or she then could go on to graduate school while using remaining athletics eligibility."

In his rebuttal, Hearn noted that any truly effective ineligibility proposal would have to pass three tests, each with its own constituent group within the NCAA membership: academic (faculty athletics representatives), financial (athletics directors) and athletics (coaches).

"What will satisfy one group will alienate the others," he suggested.

Throughout their remarks, Young and Hearn consistently mentioned the need to reduce time demands on student-athletes.

Noting the American Institutes for Research survey of student-athletes conducted for the Presidents Commission, the UCLA chancellor said that athletes "themselves make it clear that their greatest problem is that the rigors and other circumstances of athletics competition make it difficult, if not impossible, for them to lead lives similar to those of 'regular' students. I believe the ability to get started in their university careers with less pressure placed upon them to be 'irregular' would certainly help."

"What we need to be doing," Hearn said, "is addressing the real rather than the symbolic problems, which have to do with the time demands being made on students and the characteristics of our admissions process."

"And about those matters, as I'm quite sure you understand, Chancellor Young and I are in agreement."

"Those of us in college athletics have been hypocritical about all this, of course," Hearn added. "Yet I've always preferred hypocrisy—not living up to your principles—to cynicism—having no principles."

"Hypocrites, to their great credit, sometimes—not often, but sometimes—practice what they preach. We have a chance to do just that at this Convention."

(Editor's Note: The NCAA News will publish transcripts of the CEOs' presentations in the January 17 issue.)

1990 Column No. 2

Member institutions should note that the next several issues of the Legislative Assistance column will contain information concerning proposals adopted by the membership at the 1990 NCAA Convention. This week's column contains sample questions from the recently completed Division I recruiting rules test developed by the legislative services department staff at the request of a number of Division I conferences. The test was developed to help educate member institutions in the area of recruiting. Similar tests will be developed in the future in other areas such as eligibility and financial aid. If you have any questions regarding the test or wish to obtain a copy of the complete test, please contact your conference office or the legislative services department.

Prepared text of Schultz's Convention address

Editor's note: The following is the prepared text of Executive Director Richard D. Schultz's address to the 84th annual NCAA Convention in Dallas Sunday, January 7.

Welcome to the 1990 NCAA Convention. I first would like to make some general comments regarding my activities on behalf of the Association, give you an update on some ongoing projects, provide some thoughts on some of the legislative items and conclude with some comments regarding the state of intercollegiate athletics from my perspective.

During the past year, I have traveled on behalf of the Association 175 days. Forty of those days have been on your campuses at your request; 18 have been meeting with conferences; 80 at NCAA meetings, including Council, Executive Committee and Presidents Commission, and 37 days were spent at such things as Congressional and Senate hearings, symposiums, representing the Association at special events, and speaking to media groups and the general public.

We soon will have a new address at the national office. The building under construction that will be leased by the Association is currently scheduled for completion in early February with a move-in date around the 23rd. A national visitors center will be part of the new facility and is scheduled to open September 1, 1990.

Bob Sprenger of our staff is responsible for the development of the center and is in attendance. He is available at the display center to provide you with information regarding this project. We urge you to tour the center at your earliest convenience, as it will be a dynamic salute to intercollegiate athletics.

The NCAA Foundation is developing well under the direction of Robert Khayat, whom we named as president of the Foundation last spring. Robert is the former vice-chancellor for public affairs and professor of law at the University of Mississippi. Perhaps you saw the special announcement New Year's Day about the Foundation by President Bush. President Bush is as excited about the potential of the Foundation as we are and will be doing other spot announcements throughout the year.

Scholarship resources

One of the current objectives of the Foundation is to provide resources for all NCAA scholarships, thereby releasing more funds to be returned to the members. Special emphasis will be on providing additional grants to women and ethnic minorities in the area of sports administration, as well as expanding the undergraduate scholarship program designed to help athletes who have exhausted their institutional aid but have not completed their degrees. This program has already aided over 150 athletes in the last two years.

The Foundation will provide research funds, especially in the areas of athletics injuries and drug- and alcohol-related projects. The Foundation also is working on a program in conjunction with the White House to make outstanding athletes from your programs available in the summer to provide positive leadership to young people in each state, with a special emphasis on drug education and educational motivation.

Robert Khayat is also here and will be available in the display area to answer any questions about the Foundation.

Schultz's proposals

Executive Director Richard D. Schultz has challenged the NCAA membership to begin constructing a new model for collegiate athletics.

Among the ideas he offered for consideration:

- Allow athletes to enter professional drafts and evaluate financial offers without losing eligibility.
- Eliminate athletics dorms.
- Consider a tenure program for coaches that would reduce pressure to win by offering job security.
- Establish an emergency loan program for needy athletes and transportation expenses home for those required to forgo vacations for athletics participation.
- Consider an endowment fund that would permit a small cash bonus for an athlete graduating within five years.
- "Drastically reduce" off-campus recruiting, with fewer coaches traveling, establish a shorter recruiting period and early signing dates in all sports.
- Reduce length of seasons and number of contests, as well as place limits on practice time and conditioning programs.

Legislative proposals

I would like to direct your attention to some of the current legislative items that will be decided at this Convention.

It is very important that you pass No. 24 dealing with public disclosure of graduation rates. Both the Senate and House are waiting to see what happens at this Convention and if 24 is not passed, I can assure you that Federal legislation will follow soon. This is a responsibility that should not be delegated to the government because if it is, this will be only the first step in Federal regulation of intercollegiate athletics. It (No. 24) also will help to eliminate some of the myths surrounding athletes and academics.

I also urge you to pass No. 26 dealing with Proposition 42, and if that fails, then No. 28. Since the last Convention, I have had several meetings with my counterparts at ACT, SAT and ETS regarding their concerns with the use of these tests in determining initial eligibility.

They feel that while the current use is not appropriate, there are appropriate ways to use the tests in conjunction with the core-curriculum requirement. They have promised to have several options available for consideration by the membership at the next Convention. The passage of one of these proposals will either curtail or delay the impact of 42 until these new procedures can be discussed. Delay also will allow the completion of the five-year study of Proposition 48 so that information also can be a part of future decisions. No one wants strong academic standards more than I do, but those standards must be fair and not limit access to certain segments of our population.

No. 30 presents a resolution to deal with cutbacks in the length of seasons other than football and basketball and presents a specific item of legislation for each of those sports. You may decide to amend those proposals to a degree but I urge you to preserve the principle of this legislation. Recent studies and athletes themselves are telling us that they do not have enough time during their playing season to be the type of students they want to be and not enough time during the off-season to do the things other students do. This is only the first step necessary to reduce time pressures on student-athletes.

No. 32 relating to summer school aid is long overdue. This body has considered similar proposals in the past. Now is the time to put this in our rule book.

"It is time for us to take stock of what we have created, save the positives but immediately rid ourselves of the negatives and develop a new, innovative approach for athletics that places it in perspective and allows athletics to be a vital, honorable part of higher education."

I also urge your consideration of No. 53 as well as other proposals providing stiffer penalties for the use of performance-enhancing drugs. While we can point with pride to our drug-testing results, my opinion is that we are only catching the dumb ones. Year-round testing provided by the Association is the next step in curbing this type of cheating.

I also hope you will look with favor on Nos. 83 through 85, which provide new ways of dealing with our elite and Olympic athletes. These proposals are the result of numerous meetings between our amateurism committee and the USOC. This legislation is only the first step in adjusting and updating some of our eligibility rules.

TV negotiations

As you are aware, we have been quite successful in our recent TV negotiations for NCAA championships. The contract with CBS will generate $1 billion in revenues over the next seven years. The dollars can be a real asset, but just as important is the fact that CBS also will carry 16 championships in addition to the Final Four. This represents an increase from six to 17 championships that will be seen on network TV. We are continuing to explore with cable companies opportunities for other events and hope to have close to 35 championships televised, representing all three divisions.

Women's events have been greatly enhanced with the new contracts, which also will include the airing of a number of women's in-season basketball games on CBS for the first time. Rights fees for these games are not included in the NCAA contract and will be negotiated directly with the participating schools by CBS.

In announcing the CBS contract, I challenged you to conceive new and creative ways to distribute these new dollars. I have issued the same challenge to the Executive Committee, which has final authority for the distribution formula. They have responded by appointing an advisory committee from the membership to assist them in devising the appropriate concept. I also have suggested that this group hold hearings in various locations and encourage both in-person and written suggestions.

We should view these new dollars as a real opportunity to create major reform without legislation. Let's go back to playing for the trophy, eliminate the incentives to break rules because of dollars, and reduce pressure on both coaches and athletes. Let's eliminate the comment about the $300,000 free throw. Let's reward integrity, quality education and good graduation rates, as well as a strong commitment to intercollegiate athletics through broad-based programs.

Let's make sure that it does not cost a school to compete in an NCAA championship by improving expense payments and by funding Division II and Division III block grants so that transportation and per diem expenses are fully covered. We have a unique opportunity that we cannot afford to waste.

State of athletics

This leads me to my final topic, the state of intercollegiate athletics in America today. For the past 2½ years, I have been emphasizing the positives of intercollegiate athletics and urging you to do the same thing. Most reactions have been good, but some have called me a Pollyanna. I still maintain that the majority of things happening in college athletics are positive; but regardless, we are what we are perceived to be. Today the general public and even our faculties and deans feel that colleges and universities are not doing a good job of controlling intercollegiate athletics and that the NCAA is an ineffective, do-nothing organization. In other words, the model is not working. If this is the case, it's time to develop a new model.

Part of my responsibilities as your executive director is to provide leadership and direction for this organization, and I intend to do that, even though some of my thoughts will not be appreciated and will probably be misinterpreted by some. We have to realize that whenever changes are made, there are winners and losers, and everyone has to give up something. It is time for us to take stock of what we have created, save the positives but im-

A Division I-A football championship: At what cost?

By E. Gordon Gee

As the college football season ends and bowl games loom in the near distance, there is increasing clamor for yet another college football game: a play-off to determine a national-championship team.

Sports commentators seem frustrated that they must compare football teams that will never meet on the field. It is apparently not enough to have several excellent teams, each winning a bowl game. A play-off game, a college version of the Super Bowl, would assuage their anxiety, producing a single national champion.

What is it in the American psyche that requires that there be one, and only one, victor? Such speculation could produce interesting, if disconcerting, theses. More to the point, however, a play-off game would further segregate college football from, well, college.

As a university president who is also a fan, I take pride in having a nationally ranked football team. Still, it is clear that calls for a national play-off game are marked by disregard for academic identity and values, and by an unseemly deference to the allure of commercial interests. We seem to have forgotten that college football teams represent colleges, and that student-athletes are students first. This view, naive and idealistic though it may seem, is firmly rooted in the history and tradition of college sports.

Collegiate athletics competition has its origins in the Greek ideal of education. Apart from intellectual and aesthetic development, physical education and competition were essential elements in molding character. The ideal life, in its physical and intellectual elements, followed the familiar Greek definition of happiness: the exercise of vital powers along lines of excellence. Even with the honor and glory bestowed upon victors, Greek games and contests were broadly participatory, played by amateurs. Joy and the love of play drove the athlete who was Pindar's "glorious-limbed youth."

That spirit governed the growth of collegiate athletics a century ago, when Greek and Latin were standard, required subjects at colleges and universities. Language and deed still enjoyed a direct and noble relationship in those fine days, and the amateur was one who loved his avocation, pursuing it with zeal.

One can say, without exaggeration, that the origin of collegiate athletics, including football, lay in the revival of Greek contests and their ideals.

"... we must continue efforts now under way to reassert that athletes are first students, whose primary gain from four years at a university is an education and not merely a television experience."

And it is no coincidence that the modern Olympic games were resumed at about the same time, in 1896.

Our modern game of football adhered to amateur ideals as one of the earliest collegiate sports, but it has departed radically from those standards in recent decades. Television coverage of college football has attracted larger audiences and, as a result, greater financial rewards for teams and their institutions of higher education.

Even apart from recruiting scandals and corruption, the presence of fiscal incentive has fundamentally altered the conduct of sports in higher education.

Collegiate football in particular has become a business with enormous commercial opportunity, and colleges and universities have not been reluctant to capitalize on that opportunity. To do so, some colleges and universities have even diluted their academic standards and expectations to secure a winning team, often making football players little more than marketable athletics commodities.

This drive for success at all costs will only be accelerated now that some would add yet another event, a national play-off game, to the glut of bowl games. We in higher education have no business entertaining such notions, for a championship game would take us one step further toward the commercialization of collegiate athletics.

Our path must be a different one. Instead of creating yet another media event and profit center, we should develop strategies to place bowl games in their proper perspective—a chance for student-athletes to celebrate their accomplishments. Furthermore, we must continue efforts now under way to reassert that athletes are first students, whose primary gain from four years at a university is an education and not merely a television experience.

Colleges and universities must stand first for academic values. If we ignore those values, however benignly, we lose our identity and foresake our heritage and our mission. Collegiate athletics has increasingly enjoyed the status and revenue of professional sports, and a play-off game would bestow still greater glory, ignoring our academic mission. Those who call for a championship game either ignore these values or find them irrelevant.

Moreover, when tuition rates have increased at a rate far in excess of the cost of living, talk of "revenue enhancement" associated with a national championship has no place in higher education.

Rather, we have a responsibility to our students and to society to seek cost containment and reduction. Even if additional revenue were to be directed to academic programs, those programs would then become inappropriately dependent upon commercial interests completely unrelated to academic values or the public trust.

A national play-off game would have nothing to do with the tradition of collegiate athletics or the academic enterprise. It would, in fact, further separate college athletics from higher education. Can we afford to satisfy commercial interests if, so doing, we lose our academic souls?

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

Game plan for surplus basketball funds:

1. Freeze pay outs to Division I field at current levels.
2. Establish an NCAA all-America scholars program for exceptional academic achievement, a la Rhodes scholars. Students at all NCAA institutions would be eligible.

This program would serve as a giant incentive for academics at American institutions and would help improve student-faculty-athletics relations on campus.

Nationally, it not only would elevate the NCAA's image, in time, it also might even pole-vault the NCAA into becoming the beacon for "EXCEL" academic achievement.

CFA committee urges more benefits for athletes

Coach Tom Osborne, reporting the recommendations of a special College Football Association committee, says the colleges better act before "it's too late."

"We're going to see the day where the athlete is either going to have to be recognized for what he contributes financially and in other ways, or we're going to pay a certain price that we may not want to pay," Osborne told a meeting of the College Football Association in Dallas.

"Eventually, the athlete is going to be heard," he said. "How long it takes to get them organized, I don't know."

Osborne, head football coach at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, said the committee of major football representatives figured that a $75 monthly stipend could go to all Division I-A football players by taking 10 percent of CFA bowl revenues, which he said amounted to $75 million per year, the Associated Press reported.

"I don't think we need to do it out of fear or threat. I think we need to do it out of a sense of rightness," he said. "It just seems to me a matter of right and wrong. Generally speaking in our country, there has been a sense that those people who generate wealth should share it in some degree."

"About one-third of college athletes, possibly more, today get no help from home," Osborne said. "Their parents exist at the poverty level. Paradoxically, a very high percentage of those same athletes have to stay in summer school at least part of the time to (stay eligible). As a result, they can't make money in the summer, and they're the ones who need it the most."

NCAA rules strictly forbid giving athletes anything beyond a basic athletics scholarship.

Tom Osborne

"But the question is... when you have football and basketball generating large amounts of money and supporting multimillion dollar programs, should those people be treated exactly like athletes who don't generate anything?" Osborne said. "That's a philosophical question. But we certainly have professional athletics impinging upon us from the top and making it a very interesting dilemma."

Osborne delivered his remarks to about 200 representatives of the 64 member schools of the CFA one day before the opening of the NCAA Convention.

Osborne's committee will seek to get legislation at next year's NCAA Convention to set up the monthly stipend.

Osborne said a football player at Nebraska was unable to go home for the recent Christmas holidays and had to be put up in a motel because the athletics dorm was closed.

"He had about $15 to eat on, and more than a week to go," Osborne said. "There was not one thing we could legally do for him. It didn't make for a very happy Christmas."

"We made him a part of the squad we took to the Fiesta Bowl, even though he had been injured and we knew he wouldn't play. We just took him along. That was the only way we could see to it that he was taken care of, that he would be fed."

A college players' union is not

"Those who deal daily with athletes themselves feel strongly there are reforms that are needed to help the athletes."

out of the question if schools do not begin sharing their wealth, Osborne predicted.

"There have been attempts to organize college football players," he said. "At various times, they've tried to postpone the start of bowl games and big games. I think there are athletes out there who feel somewhat used and put upon. And there's the problem of the agents who are telling them, 'Colleges aren't returning much to you, do you want to stay around?'"

The committee also recommended setting up a fund to cover transportation costs when an athlete needs to go home for a family emergency. There seems to be growing support for this approach among coaches, he said.

"Those who deal daily with athletes themselves feel strongly there are reforms that are needed to help the athletes. Where all that is going to wash out, I don't know," Osborne said.

time in five years, primarily due to attention to Proposal No. 30 and its 13 amendments, all of which dealt with playing and practice seasons. Delegates spent four hours and 42 minutes on No. 30—more than twice the time as any previous Convention had devoted to one proposal.

Twenty-four roll-call votes were needed to complete action on No. 30 and its amendments, including a final vote on reconsideration (which prevented any further reconsideration at this Convention) that failed in all three divisions. The votes were 102 to 217 in Division I (34 to 79 in I-A, 22 to 71 in I-AA and 46 to 67 in I-AAA), 19 to 154 in Division II and 9 to 215 in Division III.

Most notably, No. 30 reduces in all divisions the number of regular-season basketball games to 25—although an amendment will permit institutions to use only one of the existing exemptions in any four-year period.

Attendance tops 2,000

As was expected after more than 2,000 people attended the honors dinner January 8, preliminary Convention registration figures indicate that all-time attendance records were shattered.

Through noon January 9, registration had reached 2,169—including 2,023 delegates and guests and 146 members of the media.

A detailed report on the Convention, including a summary of all voting actions, will appear in the January 17 issue of The NCAA News.

Prepared

mediately rid ourselves of the negatives and develop a new, innovative approach for athletics that places it in perspective and allows athletics to be a vital, honorable part of higher education.

The basis for any new model has to be trust and integrity.

In our own Manual, we have a statement of basic purpose that says, "The competitive athletics programs of member institutions are designed to be a vital part of the educational system. A basic purpose of this Association is to maintain intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of the educational program and the athlete as an integral part of the student body and, by so doing, retain a clear line of demarcation between intercollegiate athletics and professional sports." Later, the Manual says, "It is the responsibility of each member institution to control its intercollegiate athletics program in compliance with the rules and regulations of the Association."

"Let's put some dignity back in the way we conduct our business."

Simply stated, this means that academic integrity and rules compliance should occupy a prominent place in any new model.

New model

In a new model, each institution must make a commitment to a comprehensive compliance program.

To insure this, it is important that each institution's chief executive officer designate a senior administrator to serve as compliance coordinator. Conference grants should be expanded with the provision that conferences must make a commitment to further enhance compliance services offered to their members, in addition to the legislative services approach that is more commonly associated with conference efforts.

A good first step would be to participate in the voluntary certification program we will be instituting within the next few months.

For the first two years, this will be in the form of a pilot study, with the end result being the certification of those participating. Our compliance staff will be working with each volunteer institution in developing a plan that will provide that school's athletics program with a certification procedure. The certification program will compare an institution's athletes and coaches with the rest of the student body and staff. Comparisons will be made in areas of admissions, academic progress, graduation rates and conduct. It also will require commitments to compliance, as well as academic and career counseling programs. We have received a number of volunteers already and hope to be able to include at least two members from each conference as well as a number of independents.

A commitment to a comprehensive compliance program must be part of a new model.

Academic emphasis and integrity has to be a vital part of any new model.

We must guarantee sound educational principles in all phases of our athletics operations. It is important that we have student-athletes, not athlete-students. We must maintain initial-eligibility standards even if freshmen are declared ineligible. I am not at this time advocating freshmen ineligibility as part of a new model, but strongly urge the membership to study carefully the pros and cons during this next year. The new model must guarantee quality academic advising and career counseling programs, including tutorial services, training in basic study skills and time management. Drug and alcohol education and counseling and regular review and evaluation of academic progress must be included.

Education is our business and must come first.

Any new model must drastically reduce off-campus recruiting.

This solves a number of problems concurrently, such as many of the integrity issues as well as many cost-reduction concerns. There is no need for six in-person off-campus visits. We hire presidents, commissioners, faculty and coaches with far fewer interviews. We need further restrictions on the number of coaching staff members allowed to travel, as well as shorter recruiting periods. We should establish early signing dates in all sports and significantly restrict telephone recruiting.

Let's put some dignity back in the way we conduct our business.

Tenure for coaches

A new model must reduce pressure on coaches.

Let's consider a tenure program for coaches on a basis comparable to the faculty. Initial contracts would be for five years with no termination except for rules violations or other ethical or moral reasons. Coaches would be subjected to review based on previously established criteria and granted tenure, a one-year extension or release subject to review. Coaches would not be allowed to break a contract during the initial five years. With a program like this, salaries could be brought more in line with the faculty because of added security.

When we speak of reducing pressure, we cannot forget the athlete.

The release of pressure starts by reducing time demands. We must not only reduce time demands involving the length of season and number of contests, but we also must place limits on practice time in and out of season for all sports, including supervised conditioning programs.

Athletes' needs

We also need to address other concerns regarding athletes. If we are going to actively recruit them to our programs, we need to provide additional support services and resources. Athletes should have the opportunity to determine their professional sports value through your career counseling panels by entering the draft and evaluating the financial offer without losing eligibility.

That also would reduce the efforts of the unscrupulous sports agent. Our professional draft rules should be the same for all sports; they are not now.

Let's permit institutions to provide athletes all supplies required for a course by a professor and approved by the faculty athletics representative, and let's provide financial aid in Division I up to the cost of attendance, regardless of need. Let's establish an emergency loan system for needy athletes and transportation expenses home for those who are required to forgo vacations for reasons of athletics participation.

We should continue to review rules that pertain to elite and Olympic athletes, including trust funds that would be administered by a national governing body. And we should consider an endowment fund that would permit a small cash bonus for an athlete graduating within five years.

We should allow athletes who have been recruited by a head coach who leaves the institution prior to the student's initial enrollment the opportunity to be released from the National Letter of Intent and to transfer without satisfying the normal transfer requirements. Let's also eliminate athletics dorms and the constant isolation of the athlete from the rest of the student body.

Any new model must make the athlete as indistinguishable from the rest of the student body as is humanly possible.

While there are many other thoughts and ideas for a new model, these are suggestions to stimulate your thinking and to stimulate you to action. We need to be aggressive and proactive in changing our model, because there are others less qualified waiting in the wings to do it for us.

The expertise is here, in this room, to do this quickly and efficiently. Athletics directors and coaches should lead the way in designing program changes; faculty representatives need to guarantee academic integrity, and CEOs have to direct, support and approve the entire concept.

Reforms by 1991

I ask that you be prepared by the 1991 Convention to introduce and pass legislation that will effect major reform. I personally intend to pursue these ideas, as well as further simplification of our legislative process, with you as well as with the Presidents Commission and NCAA Council. In too many cases, power coaches or alumni and boosters are dictating policy for athletics programs, with violations and probation usually to follow.

Athletics has to be a coordinated segment of the educational process, and universities have to be in control of athletics programs. You have a unique and stimulating opportunity.

Developing a new model is a courageous challenge, but one that you must accept.

Trend toward fewer coaching changes reversed

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The 1990s are reversing a trend in the coaching turnover rate in Division I basketball.

This season's 18.2 percent (53 changes by 292 teams) turnover rate is the fifth highest in annual compilations that go back to 1950. The all-time, or 40-year, average entering the 1990 season was 14.1 percent, close to last season's 14.3, which came after some gyrations in the last half of the 1980s.

After a 20-year low of just 9.2 percent in 1985, the turnover rate jumped to 19.8 percent, third highest ever, in 1986. Then, it reached a record-high 22.8 percent in 1987 before leveling off again. The second highest figure was 20.6 in 1979 and fourth highest 18.7 in 1975.

The annual figures have been revised to a minor degree to reflect a cutoff date of January 31, so each year's figure includes all changes through December of the previous year. That means all changes in the calendar year of 1989 are counted as changes for the 1990 season.

Note that all changes for whatever reason are included, including retirements and promotions. In most cases, the coach was fired.

Decline in 1980s

Despite the big numbers in 1986 and 1987, the decade of the 1980s produced a decline in the rate to 15.3 percent vs. 16.7 percent for the 1970s. But both were well above the 12.3 percent in the 1960s and 11.9 in the 1950s.

The main ingredient in the increased turnover rate is that basketball now is seen as a means of raising money for other sports. The arena building boom in the 1970s and 1980s, NCAA tournament expansion and the increase in tournament money bring more pressure to win and fill seats. Expansion helps coaches at colleges that seldom make the tournament, but not those where it is taken for granted.

Michigan, Kentucky and Florida

Leading the list is the unprecedented coaching switch at Michigan, where Bill Frieder took the Arizona State job on the eve of the NCAA tournament. Athletics director Bo Schembechler immediately installed assistant Steve Fisher, and Fisher became the first interim coach in history to lead his team to the national championship.

Fisher heads the list of 26 first-year head coaches, entering the season with a 6-0 record and a national crown. Kentucky's Rick Pitino and Florida's Don DeVoe head the list of 27 experienced head coaches who moved to new jobs.

Pitino, who led Providence to an unexpected 1987 Final Four berth before moving to the professional ranks with the New York Knicks, took over at Kentucky when an NCAA investigation and probation forced Eddie Sutton to resign.

DeVoe, who was fired at Tennessee despite an NCAA trip last season, took over at Florida when Norm Sloan, with more than 600 career victories, was forced out in the wake of allegations that led to an NCAA investigation.

Arizona State's Frieder had an 188-90 record over nine seasons at Michigan. Pitino's college record entering this season was 133-74 over seven seasons. DeVoe went to Florida in December with a 321-207 record for 18 seasons.

New-job coaches

The new-job coaches all have head-coaching experience at the

Tyrone Hill, Xavier (Ohio), tops Division I men with 13.5 rebounds per game four-year level.

Besides Pitino, Frieder and DeVoe, the coaches—with their career record entering the 1990 season and last head-coaching job (1989 unless otherwise indicated)—are Auburn's Tommy Joe Eagles (87-40, Louisiana Tech), Central Florida's Joe Dean Jr. (137-45, Birmingham Southern), Cincinnati's Bob Huggins (168-72, Akron), Colgate's Jack Bruen (110-72, Catholic), Dayton's Jim O'Brien (74-69, Wheeling Jesuit), Duquesne's John Carroll (42-38, Bloomfield), Eastern Kentucky's Mike Pollio (182-92, Virginia Commonwealth), Grambling's Aaron James (25-33, Jarvis Christian), Indiana State's Tate Locke (205-166, Jacksonville 1981, Indiana assistant in 1989), Jackson State's Andy Stoglin (32-26, Southern-Baton Rouge 1984), Loyola's (Maryland) Tom Schneider (67-96, Pennsylvania), Marquette's Kevin O'Neill (17-14, Marycrest 1982, Arizona assistant in 1989), Maryland's Gary Williams (207-128, Ohio State), Ohio's Larry Hunter (305-76, Wittenberg), Ridce's (Fordham), Northern Illinois' Jim

Before the surgery, Majerus called a friend, Indiana assistant Don Donohue (a 437-game winner at Dayton who was fired last year). "I told Don, 'I'm really apprehensive,'" Majerus said. "I don't know what I'm getting into. I wonder if Bob (Knight, Indiana coach) could give me Bo Schembechler's home number." At 7 o'clock the next morning, Schembechler (who underwent open heart surgery in 1970 and 1987) was on the phone to me. He talked to me a long time and explained everything. He said, "You're going to feel better than ever, and you're going to be more productive."

Majerus plans to change his diet: "I'm a cured man. I'm never going to that Choo-Choo Train and eat a bucket of ribs again. I don't know if I can go to a carrot souffle, but I can't eat every rib in the house like I used to."

Among the new-job coaches, Pitino has attracted a lot of attention with his prolific use of the three-quarterback (DePaul), Sam Houston State's Larry Brown (South Alabama), Tennessee's Wade Houston (Louisville), Tennessee State's Ron Abernathy (Louisiana State), Tulane's Perry Clark (Georgia Tech) and Wagner's Tim Capstraw (Siena).

Among the first-year coaches, Ayers' Ohio State team is off to a surprising 2-0 start in the Big Ten Conference and handed Indiana its first loss.

Nine at alma mater

Nine of the 53 are coaching at their alma mater. In the new-job ranks, they are Grambling's James, Marquette's O'Neill, Maryland's Williams, Ohio's Hunter and Washington's Nance.

In the first-year ranks, they are Alcorn State's Walker, Butler's Collier, Oregon State's Anderson and Wagner's Capstraw. That brings to 35 the number of Division I men head-coaching at their alma mater.

Women's coaching changes

In women's Division I basketball, 37 colleges have changed coaches, for a turnover rate of 13.3 percent. That is above the 10.4 percent a year ago, but below the 15.7 two years ago and far below the record 19 percent in 1984 (the first year changes were compiled). One of the 37 is a partial change, in which last year's cohead coach at Virginia Commonwealth takes over as head coach.

There are 22 first-year coaches—those with no previous experience as a head coach at the four-year level. They are Alabama's Rick Moody, Akron's Lisa Fitch, American's Jeff Thatcher, Baptist's John Jacumin, Boise State's June Daugherty, Brigham Young's Jeanie Wilson, Duquesne's Renee DeVarney, Indiana State's Kay Riek, Jackson State's Andrew Pennington, Kent's Bob Lindsay, Lehigh's Jocelyn Beck, Mississippi State's Jerry Henderson, Montana State's Judy Spoelstra, Murray State's Larry Wall, North Texas' Tina Slinker, Northern Iowa's Terri Lasswell, Rider's Eldon Price, St. Louis' Steve Cochran, Sam Houston State's Debbie Adams, San Diego State's Beth Burns, Texas-Arlington's Jerry Isler and Wichita State's Linda Hargrove.

Fifteen are new-job coaches—with previous head-coaching experience at the four-year level. Here is that list, with career record and last head-coaching job:

George Washington—Joe McKeown (68-20, New Mexico State); Georgia State—Brenda Paul (219-114, Mississippi State); Gonzaga—Julie Sullivan (73-118, Pacific); Louisville—Bud Childers (97-76, Murray State); Monmouth (New Jersey)—Susan DeKalb [32-44, Miami (Ohio)]; New Mexico State—Doug Hoselton (89-105, New Mexico); North Carolina-Asheville—Lalon Jones (112-31, Pembroke State); Pennsylvania—Julie Soriero (127-90, Philadelphia Textile); Rhode Island—Linda Ziemke (125-119, American); Rice—Mike Dunavant (102-84, Virginia Commonwealth); Southern California—Marianne Stanley (280-100, Pennsylvania); Southwest Texas State—Linda Sharp (271-99, Southern California); Tennessee State—Teresa Lawrence (68-34, Fisk); Virginia Commonwealth—Edward Sherod (19-10 as cohead coach at VCU with Alfreda Goff), and Winthrop—Germaine McAuley (34-142, Maryland-Eastern Shore).

Most prominent in the above group is a pair of coaches who have coached national-championship teams. They are Southwest Texas State's Linda Sharp, winner of two titles at Southern California (1983 and 1984), and Southern Cal's Marianne Stanley, who was at Pennsylvania after a coaching career at Old Dominion that included the 1985 crown.

Missouri-Kansas City is starting its first year in Division I. Men's coach Lee Hunt and women's coach Brian Agler are new in Division I but were on the job last year and are not counted in the changes. Tulane, on the other hand, is resuming varsity basketball with first-year coach Perry Clark.

An unusual new-job coach in women's basketball is Gary Schwartz, now at Division III Cal State San Bernardino after four successful seasons at Division I Montana State. After a rugged 1-3 start, Schwartz's team has won four straight games, including two over Division II foes San Francisco State and Cal State Hayward, reports SID Dave Beyer.

Can you top these?

The Central Missouri State women, 11-0 entering Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association play January 8, also are classroom standouts. The 10 players on the roster have a 3.440 grade-point average (4.000 scale) as a group for the fall semester, and nine have at least a 3.000. Sophomore Julie Savage leads with a 4.000, while senior Barb Sorenson and freshman Kristi Lawson each have a 3.800.

And junior forward Karen Chalupny, 3.400 in the classroom, has jammed four years of college work into three. She will graduate this er's Kevin Bannon (145-48, Trenton State), St. Bonaventure's Tom Chapman (258-69, Gannon), San Jose State's Stan Morrison (203-183, Southern California 1986), Utah's Rick Majerus (99-52, Ball State), Vanderbilt's Eddie Fogler (61-32, Wichita State), Virginia Commonwealth's Sonny Smith (203-177, Auburn), Wake Forest's Dave Odom (38-42, East Carolina), Washington's Lynn Nance [219-126, St. Mary's (California)], Western Carolina's Gregg Blatt (89-35, Presbyterian) and Western Michigan's Bob Donewald (207-122, Illinois State).

Tournament influence

The Division I Men's Basketball Championship's television exposure is an element in promotions to schools with higher budgets and more seats. No longer does a coach have to make the regional finals or Final Four. Two or three games will do it. A prime example from the 1988 tournament was Tom Penders, who moved from Rhode Island to Texas and led a major revival (25-9 record and the nation's biggest attendance increase—almost 6,000 to more than 10,000 per game).

This season's top example is Rick Majerus, the Marquette graduate who moved from Ball State (29-3 record and two NCAA games last season) to Utah. However, Majerus is recovering from a mid-De-pointer and his full-court press.

First-year coaches

All but one of the first-year coaches came directly from an assistant's job at Division I colleges. The exception was Davidson's Bob McKillop, who had a 268-76 record as a high school head coach. Another, Paul Landreaux at St. Mary's (California), came from one year as a UCLA assistant after a highly successful 10-year career on the junior-college level, the last nine at El Camino College. He had four 30-victory seasons and a 317-54 record.

Ten more besides Fisher moved up at the same college. They are Alcorn State's Lonnie Walker, Ball State's Dick Hunsacker, Brigham Young's Roger Reid, Centenary's Tommy Vardeman, Louisiana Tech's Jerry Loyd, Ohio State's Randy Ayers, Oregon State's Jim Anderson, Pennsylvania's Francis Dunphy, Wichita State's Mike Cohen and Youngstown State's John Stroia.

The 13 others also were assistants in Division I. They are Akron's Coleman Crawford (who came from Tennessee), Butler's Barry Collier (Stanford), Illinois State's Bob Bender (Duke), Loyola's (Illinois) Will Rey (Evansville), Marshall's Dana Altman (Kansas State), New Hampshire's Jim Boylan (Michigan State), Niagara's Jack Armstrong

Volleyball coaches name season's outstanding players and coaches

The 1989 Divisions I, II and III players- and coach-of-the-year selections recently were announced by the American Volleyball Coaches Association.

Each division's player of the year was selected by the division's AVCA all-America committee and was formally announced at a banquet held in conjunction with the AVCA's national convention. Coach-of-the-year selections, made in cooperation with Tachikara, also were announced at the AVCA's convention.

Following are the 1989 player- and coach-of-the-year selections for each division.

Division I

Two of the most dominant players of the 1980s—Long Beach State's Tara Cross and Hawaii's Tee Williams-Sanders—were named coplayers of the year for 1989.

Andy Banachowski, who led his UCLA squad to a third-place finish this season, received coach-of-the-year honors.

Cross, who earlier this year became the all-time career kill leader in women's intercollegiate volleyball, powered the 49ers to their first-ever NCAA women's volleyball championship. She had 2,729 kills to her credit and added 1,554 digs, 302 blocks and 141 service aces in her career.

Williams-Sanders led the Wahines to a 29-3 record in 1989 with a 6.19 kill-per-game average. In her three-year career at Hawaii, she collected 1,873 kills, 1,143 digs, 303 blocks and 60 service aces. She also helped the Wahines capture the 1987 championship title and a second-place finish in 1988.

Banachowski's career record of 610-138 makes him only the second coach in NCAA Division I women's history to surpass the 600-win mark. Under Banachowski, the Bruins have appeared in nine NCAA tournaments and have finished among the top four on five occasions.

Division II

UC Riverside's Sheri Benson, who helped her team to the quarterfinals before losing to North Dakota State, received Division II player-of-the-year honors.

Coach-of-the-year honors went to Debby Colberg, who led her Cal State Sacramento team to a second-place finish this season.

Other honors for Benson, a senior outside hitter, include selection to the 1989 AVCA/Russell Athletic all-America team. Also, she is a three-time all-California Collegiate Athletic Association performer and twice was named CCAA most valuable player.

Colberg won the 1981 national title on the way to a 373-100 record in her 14 years at Cal State Sacramento. Her teams have qualified for the championship tournament nine consecutive times and have finished among the top four on four occasions.

Division III

Senior setter Lori Nishikawa of Washington (Missouri) received Division III player-of-the-year honors for the second consecutive year, making her the first player to capture the honor twice since the award was established in 1985.

Larry Bock, who has been at Juniata's helm for the past 13 years, was named 1989 coach of the year. He received similar accolades from the AVCA in 1984 and twice was named AVCA East Region coach of the year.

The 5-2 Nishikawa, who holds school records in six statistical categories, recently led her team to its first women's volleyball title. The Bears also appeared in the 1987 and 1988 NCAA tournaments.

Under Bock, Juniata teams have compiled a 461-88 record and have appeared in the NCAA tournament nine consecutive years. The Indians, third-place finishers this season, have finished among the top four on six other occasions.

Recommendations to cut costs to get wide review

Some of the major reforms proposed by NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz in his 1990 "State of the Association" address already are being reviewed by the Special NCAA Committee on Cost Reduction, which is planning to present its recommendations to the membership at spring conference meetings.

"It is our intention to walk our recommendations through the various conferences at their spring meetings," Eugene F. Corrigan, Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner and chair of the special committee, said in his report to the opening session of the 1990 NCAA Convention.

"The purpose is to give each of you a shot at improving and approving the proposed legislation before we put it into final form for the 1991 Convention."

Expected to be included in that final legislation are proposals that would:

- Reduce across the board the number of athletics grants-in-aid available at member institutions.
- Limit the number of coaches who could recruit off campus.
- Establish recruiting and contact periods in all NCAA sports.
- Establish coaching-staff limits in all sports in all membership divisions.

- Establish season lengths and contest limitations in all sports and divisions.

Background

Corrigan told the Convention that the special committee has worked from the outset to look at every possible method of reducing costs—including the practical solution of "living within one's means."

"But practicality and competitive balance don't always mesh in intercollegiate athletics," he said.

"Reaching agreement on the details will be a challenge," he continued. "But the basic premise that we need to create legislation to save us from ourselves has overwhelming support."

Corrigan said that because earlier attempts at cost reduction had centered on nonrevenue-producing sports and had not been successful, the special committee determined that any measures developed would have to apply to all sports.

The committee subdivided into groups that focused on financial aid, recruiting, staffing policies and competitive policies. Corrigan called the latter "a short way of saying 'keeping up with the Joneses.'"

The subcommittees' areas of review provided the basis for a survey that was distributed to the membership three months ago, Corrigan said. In presenting a summary of the subcommittee reports and survey results, he noted that each item received support from at least two-thirds of those responding to the committee mailing.

Corrigan reported results under each subcommittee area.

Financial aid

He said the committee considered need-based aid proposals, but determined that student-athletes would receive less money under need-based programs than they do currently when Pell Grants are included.

The committee declined to support any need-based proposals, he said, for a number of reasons. Included were inherent inconsistencies in the ways institutions determine various elements associated with need-based aid.

"Thus," Corrigan reported, "we will recommend across-the-board reductions in athletics grants-in-aid in all sports." Exact numbers have not been determined, although he said the committee has looked at standard reductions of five and 10 percent.

Recruiting

The committee will recommend legislation to reduce the number of coaches who can recruit off campus, limit the number of recruiting-related phone calls, apply additional limits to on- and off-campus contacts, reduce time periods for contacts and evaluations, establish recruiting periods in all other sports, and further limit the types of printed recruiting materials that can be sent to prospects.

"The results of the survey," Corrigan added, "indicate that the membership supports these recommendations."

Staffing policies

Limitations on coaching staffs in all sports and in all divisions likely will be proposed. No specific recommendations are yet available, Corrigan said, in part because the survey did not deal in specific reduction suggestions.

Competitive policies

Additional limits on season lengths and numbers of contests will be proposed, since the survey results indicated that the present 26-week limit could be reduced. "The survey supported limits on team travel and athletics publications," Corrigan said, "as well as limitations on the overall size of squads and on travel squads."

Corrigan said the committee will be distributing additional materials to the membership over the next few months that will require a response.

"Don't let us down," he urged, "so that next year, when we walk into the Convention with a series of cost-saving proposals, they will have a chance."

Stronger Division II is foreseen in NCAA restructuring

Although recommendations to be made by the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure may best be remembered for proposals that create a more consistent look in Division I, the group's work also could lead to a more attractive Division II and greater legislative autonomy throughout the Association.

Delegates to the 1990 Convention in Dallas received a report from NCAA Secretary-Treasurer Judith M. Sweet, who has been serving as chair pro tem of the special committee while Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Southwest Athletic Conference, recovers from surgery. Shortly into her presentation, Sweet reported that Jacoby's "remarkable recovery" would permit him to return as chair effective with the group's meeting next month.

At that meeting, the special committee would review final recommendations with an eye toward sharing those with various constituent groups in the membership before presenting them to the Presidents

Commission and the NCAA Council at those groups' April meetings, Sweet said.

"It is our intention that our final recommendations will be voted upon at the Convention one year from now," Sweet said.

Among the basic concepts to be reflected in the special committee's final report will be:

- Division I membership criteria. "In concept," Sweet said, "we believe the Division I membership is the most diverse of the three divisions. It is not a matter of Division I being 'too large'; it is a matter of vastly dissimilar athletics programs and vastly dissimilar commitments to those programs that then are reflected in voting on key issues."

"We believe that there must be criteria for Division I membership that will assure greater similarity of programs and of commitment to the top level of college athletics competition."

Sweet said recommendations in this area will reflect a review of Division I member profiles that include characteristics ranging from scope of sports sponsorship to size of facilities and scheduling patterns.

Judith M. Sweet

- Legislative autonomy.

Sweet said the special committee agreed with the trend toward greater legislative autonomy among NCAA divisions and subdivisions. Noting that Convention business has been transacted much more efficiently under this concept, Sweet said the special committee believes that even more could be done and will propose legislation to further enhance divisional autonomy.

- Multidivision classification and eligibility for NCAA championships.

Although fundamentally opposed to multidivision classification, the special committee recognizes that there may be "a situation or two" where its use may be necessary to assure championships-participation opportunities to student-athletes, Sweet said.

"We are working on recommendations that will move us closer to the true purpose of federation," she said, "a belief in the fundamental philosophy of the division in which the institution is a member."

- Enhancement of Division II membership.

Sweet said Division II has a "clear philosophy—one that is appropriate for many institutions." She also said the special committee believes Division II can be made more attractive. "We will propose significant steps to do that," she added.

- Distribution of revenues.

Because of the effects revenue distribution has on membership-structure issues, Sweet said the special committee will forward to the new Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues (which she chairs) "a number of concepts to assure that the revenues resulting from the new television contract will be used in ways that benefit all members of the NCAA and that do not exacerbate the existing structural problems—especially as they relate to the divergent interests and program commitments in Division I."

Commission gains support

Charles W. Ehrhardt, faculty athletics representative at Florida State University and chair of the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association, announced January 6 in Dallas that FARA had drafted and approved a resolution supporting the Presidents Commission's NCAA legislative priorities.

In a memo to Martin A. Massengale, chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission, Ehrhardt announced adoption of the following resolution by FARA members meeting in Dallas:

"Be it resolved, that as an integral part of the National Collegiate Athletic Association—consisting of presidential, faculty and athletics interests—the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association supports the Presidents Commission's legislative priorities for the principles of academic integrity, institutional educational mission, and opportunities for student-athletes to have adequate time and support for their educational growth.

"And, be it further resolved, that through annual review of legislation and through liaison with the Presidents Commission, the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association continue to address the many academic issues of intercollegiate athletics."

FARA members also heard a report on the review of 1990 Convention legislation conducted by the group's legislative review committee.

New initial-eligibility criteria expected for vote in 1991

Initial athletics eligibility criteria probably will be considered again next January by delegates to the Association's 1991 Convention, according to Educational Testing Service President Gregory A. Anrig.

In a January 3 announcement from ETS' Princeton, New Jersey, headquarters, Anrig said ETS is part of a "joint working group" that is planning to present "alternative decision criteria" to the NCAA no later than next June 1. "This deadline would enable the recommendation to be considered at the NCAA Convention in January 1991," Anrig said.

"Richard Ferguson, president of ACT; Donald Stewart, president of the College Board, and I have met with (NCAA Executive Director) Richard D. Schultz to discuss our concerns about the appropriate use of test scores in such a standard."

"Since the introduction of (NCAA Bylaw 14.3) seven years ago," Anrig continued, "I have repeatedly stated my opposition to its use as a fixed cut-off score on nationally standardized admissions tests as a determining criterion for athletics eligibility—especially when other, equally valuable information, such as high school grades, is available.

"It is my hope that this cooperative effort among the NCAA, ACT, the College Board and ETS will identify alternative eligibility rules," Anrig said, "that will serve both student-athletes and educational institutions more fairly and effectively."

(Editor's Note: During a January 7 press conference following the opening business session of the 1990 Convention, Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said he expects as many as three alternatives to be developed for consideration as a result of the ongoing work between representatives of the NCAA, ETS, ACT and College Board.)

spring with a degree in psychology. The Central Missouri State men also were 11-0 entering conference play. Can any other NCAA college in any division top that? (Todd Gurnow, Central Missouri State assistant SID)

Beloit had three buzzer-beater baskets in one week—two won the game and the other sent the game into overtime, with Beloit eventually winning. "I've been coaching 33 years and I've never even heard of a week like that before, anywhere," says coach Bill Knapton. (Paul Erickson, Beloit SID)

Johnson C. Smith senior Kim Brewington, a 5-8 guard from Willington, North Carolina, set a Division II women's scoring record with 64 points in a 130-50 victory over Livingstone January 6. She was 21-for-32 from the field, including 6-for-13 from three-point range, and 16-for-22 in free throws (plus 10 steals and three assists). (Jim Cuthbertson, Johnson C. Smith SID)

The former record of 52 was held by three players. Brewington also exceeded the Division I record of 60 points and the Division III mark of 53. Incidentally, the North Coast Athletic Conference reported that the old mark nearly was broken by Oberlin's Ann Gilbert, who scored 51 vs. Case Reserve January 6.

Calvin's Sally Huyser, a 6-2 senior, averaged 5.5 blocked shots through her first 10 games. Can any NCAA woman top that? (Phil deHaan, Calvin SID)

Incorrect grade scale corrected

The NCAA's recently published Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletics Eligibility contains an error in its listing of standards for students from New Zealand.

The listing erroneously describes the grade scale for New Zealand's Sixth Form Certificate. The correct scale is 1-9 (1 high), and not 9-1 (9 high).

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the Council, the Legislation and Interpretations Committee reviewed various 1990 Convention proposals and other interpretations, as follows:

Convention Proposal No. 24
1. Admissions and graduation-rate disclosure (Divisions I and II). Reviewed Convention Proposal No. 24 and suggested that the Association's legal counsel review the effect of the adoption of this proposal in regard to Buckley Amendment requirements governing the disclosure of a student's academic record.

Convention Proposal No. 26
2. Partial qualifier (Division I). Noted that the intent of Part "A" of this proposal is to permit a partial qualifier to receive institutional financial aid based on demonstrated financial need; agreed that the source of such aid may be athletically related; further, noted that in regard to Part "B" of the proposal, a partial qualifier who no longer is being recruited for the institution's athletics team, but who attends the institution and receives nonathletically related institutional aid based solely on financial need, still would be considered a counter and must be included in the institution's maximum awards limitations.

Convention Proposal No. 32
3. Financial aid—summer school. Agreed that this proposal precludes the recipient of summer school financial aid from using any institutional weight-training facility (e.g., intramural, athletics department, physical education department).

Convention Proposal No. 33
4. Financial aid—summer school. Agreed that recipients of summer school financial aid under this proposal would count in the member institution's maximum limitations throughout the succeeding academic year; further, such a student-athlete in head-count sports would count for the full year and, in equivalency sports, would count at least in the same proportion as the amount of aid the student-athlete received for the summer term.

Convention Proposal No. 35
5. Maximum awards (Division I-A). Suggested that in the proposed language for NCAA Bylaw 15.5.4.1.2.1-(c), the word "during" should be substituted editorially for "beginning" to clarify the intent of the proposal.

Convention Proposal No. 38
6. Partial qualifier and nonqualifier—eligibility (Division I). Agreed that the Conference No. 20

December 14, 1989

application of this proposal would be retroactive and that student-athletes who participate in a certified all-star contest (conditioned on their belief that their eligibility has been completed) would not be precluded from receiving an additional season of eligibility per amended Bylaw 14.8.7; further, confirmed that the term "specific baccalaureate degree program" shall be defined consistently with the satisfactory-progress provisions of Bylaw 14.5.3.11.

Convention Proposal No. 41
7. Financial aid—course supplies. Agreed that this proposal sets no monetary limit on the amount that can be expended by a member institution for the purchase of course supplies for a student-athlete; however, agreed that such supplies must be required of all students enrolled in a particular course.

Convention Proposal No. 43
8. Financial aid—summer school (Divisions I and II). Agreed that recipients of summer school financial aid under this proposal would count in the member institution's maximum limitations throughout the succeeding academic year; further, such a student-athlete in head-count sports would count for the full year and, in equivalency sports, would count at least in the same proportion as the amount of aid the student-athlete received for the summer term.

Convention Proposal No. 51
9. Nonathletics achievement award (Division III). Agreed that the intent of this proposal is to give an opportunity to those student-athletes who have special skills unrelated to athletics to receive financial aid awards for such skills even though they have reached their financial need limit; agreed that each such award would be reviewed on a case-by-case basis at the institutional level and with the Council; finally, referred to the NCAA Division III Steering Committee the issue of whether an athletics department staff member would be permitted to be a member of the committee that determines which student-athletes receive such awards; suggested that nonathletics achievement awards be based on accomplishments in academics, leadership and special skills that are not related to athletics.

Convention Proposal Nos. 52 and 55
10. Individual eligibility—use of banned drugs/drug-testing consent form. Agreed that Convention Proposal No. 55 appears to be unnecessary legislation if Convention Proposal No. 52 is adopted, since the distinction between regular and postseason competition in the application of drug-testing individual eligibility rules would be eliminated.

Convention Proposal No. 64
11. One-time transfer exception—financial aid (Divisions I and II). Noted that this proposal does not become effective until August 1, 1990, but could be applied as of that date to a student-athlete who has transferred but not established a year of residence.

Convention Proposal No. 69
12. Automatic qualification for 1991 and 1992 Division I Men's Basketball Championships (Division I). Agreed that the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 30-G would not moot Convention Proposal No. 69-B in regard to the exemption of contests in a "play-in" for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, since such contests would be scheduled for the purpose of gaining entry into the tournament and could be exempted, if Proposal No. 69-B is adopted, for that purpose.

Convention Proposal Nos. 75 and 76
13. Full-time assistant coaches—Division I-AA football/men's ice hockey coaching staff limitations (Divisions I-AA and I). Confirmed that compliance with these amendments would be met by a member institution through the normal attrition of current staff members employed under written contractual agreements.

Convention Proposal No. 83
14. Broken-time payments. Confirmed that if adopted, this proposal would permit broken-time payments to be made in both the summer and during the academic year when student-athletes are not enrolled on a full-time or part-time basis at any collegiate institution; agreed that this proposal would apply to such payments both from domestic and foreign national sports governing bodies.

Proposal Nos. 116, 117 and 118
15. Amendments to current recruiting rules. Agreed that in order to achieve consistency in the application of these proposals, the effective date of each proposal should be amended to be the end of the current academic year, since member institutions currently are in the middle of their recruiting year; confirmed that under Convention Proposal No. 116, athletics representatives are not permitted to make special arrangements for entertainment (e.g., donations of goods or services, discounts) for recruiting purposes; suggested that the Council examine the language of Convention Proposal No. 116 and sponsor an amendment to insert the word "athletics" before "campus events," and delete the parenthetical expression indicating that the cost of attending events produced or performed by the institution's faculty, staff or students would not be included in the entertainment allowance, noting that this standard raises more questions than it resolves.

Interpretations
16. Council appeals of Legislation and Interpretations Committee actions. Determined that the staff would review with the Council procedures regarding appeals of committee interpretations to the Council, noting that these procedures should be similar to those utilized in conjunction with

States increase education spending

State governments are keeping up a decade-long trend of substantially increasing spending on education, the Census Bureau says.

States spent nearly $160 billion, or 33 percent of their revenues, on education in 1988, the bureau reported January 4. Most of the money went to local governments or higher education institutions, the report said.

That spending was 6.4 percent more than what the states gave to education in 1987, the report said. Since 1978, states' education spending has increased at an average annual rate of 8.6 percent, the bureau said, while overall state spending has increased by an average of 9.1 percent.

Healthy education increases are probably due, in part, to a trend by states to funnel funds to education reforms, said Education Department budget chief Charlie Kolb.

"There's been a sense for the last seven or eight years that we're not doing as well as we could have," Kolb told the Associated Press. "We're outperforming the rest of the world, but we're not outperforming."

Legislation

NCAA Committee on Infractions and Eligibility Committee appeals.

Eligibility/hardship

17. Waiver of seasons of eligibility. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 14.2.4.1 and 14.2.5, and agreed that no authority exists to grant a waiver of Bylaw 14.2.4.1 (seasons of eligibility) for a student-athlete who competed in one contest and then sat out for the remainder of the season because of his involvement in a special academic learning experience.

Eligibility

18. Core-course grade-point average for prospective student-athlete who attended two high schools (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 14.3.1 and confirmed a previous staff interpretation that when a prospective student-athlete attends more than one high school, a member institution must utilize a Form 48-H from each high school for certification purposes; agreed that under such circumstances, the high school last attended could not adjust the grades of the courses taken at the student's former high school in order to make those grades consistent with the current high school's grading system; referred to the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee for its consideration the possibility of developing a more practical procedure for certifying the eligibility of a student-athlete who has a record of multi-high school attendance.

Transfer eligibility

19. Institution's responsibility in certifying exceptions to the one-year residence requirement. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 14.6.5.1 and 14.6.5.3.10, and agreed that an institution may rely on information received from appropriate officials at the student's previous institution in order to certify the student's eligibility unless there is a reasonable basis for determining that the information is inaccurate; suggested that the compliance department review the provisions of Bylaw 14.6.5.3.10 and the possibility of developing a standard form related to the requirements for transfer student-athletes under this legislation.

Financial aid

20. Calculation of off-campus room and board stipend. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.2.1, and agreed that a member institution must use its on-campus room and board rate for determining the amount of similar expenses to be provided student-athletes who live off campus, unless the institution has no on-campus room and board facilities (per Bylaw 15.2.2.1.1).

News Fact File

In 1988-89, the Special Committee on Grants to Undergraduates received 144 applications for grants from 72 Division I institutions. The committee awarded a total of $515,000 in grants to 100 former student-athletes who have exhausted athletics eligibility and opportunities for institutional financial aid but who are close to completion of their baccalaureate degrees. They went to 82 men and 18 women; 41 were former football players, and there were no more than nine from any other sport. Thirty-two of the grants were awarded to Blacks.

I-A play-off talk resurfaces despite 1988 vote

It's that time of year again—time for sports media across the country to call stridently for a Division I-A football play-off.

The impetus this year was provided by Notre Dame's victory over then No. 1 Colorado in the Orange Bowl, but Notre Dame had lost to Miami (Florida), which finished by beating Alabama in the Sugar Bowl. Meanwhile, Florida State—which beat Miami—finished the season with 10 straight victories and an impressive romp over Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl.

Miami then was selected as the No. 1 team in the country by just about everyone—the Associated Press, United Press International (selected by the coaches, by the way), USA Today/CNN and others—forcing some in the media to suggest a play-off is the only way to determine a true I-A national champion.

"What would it take for the NCAA to start a I-A play-off?"

That question, asked recently by talk-show hosts, commentators and columnists, is easy to answer. In fact, it has been answered many times.

To establish a play-off in Division I-A football, the membership of the NCAA—which consists of the member institutions and conferences—would have to vote to have one. Every rule, every action in the NCAA is determined by the members themselves.

The key, of course, is whether the Division I-A members want a play-off. Members in the other divisions likely would vote to have one if Division I-A said it wanted one.

But the record shows that I-A presidents and chancellors don't want one (the I-A members of the Presidents Commission were unanimously opposed just two years ago), and the vast majority of the athletics directors and head coaches in I-A don't want one.

The issue was voted upon just two years ago at the 1988 NCAA Convention. It was in the form of a resolution for I-A members only, and it said, "The Division I-A members do not desire to initiate, at this time or in the near future, a Division I-A football championship."

The vote was by roll call. The results: 98 agreed that they do not want a championship, 13 disagreed and one abstained. That means 88.29 percent of the Division I-A members did not want a championship.

Trivia Time: When was the last time the two wire-service polls (Associated Press' writers' survey and United Press International's coaches' list) differed in their final No. 1 selections? Answer later.

Christmas time was no holiday for student-athletes playing on at least two NCAA members' men's basketball teams.

Dee Brown, Jacksonville University's senior guard, lost control of his car December 23 on an icy Jacksonville bridge and was stopped—head-on—by another vehicle. Fortunately, Brown was not injured, and he scored 20 points a few hours later in his team's victory over Florida A&M University.

The day before, the University of South Florida's men's basketball team bused to Ocala, about 40 miles from the University of Florida, where the schools played December 23. But not before ice turned that final, 45-minute drive into an almost-three-hour odyssey that resulted in a 90-minute game delay.

Then, after suffering a 37-point loss to the Gators, the Bulls were forced to stay the night in Gainesville due to icy roads.

Ron Tsuchiya, Tom Groden and Ed Gurka beat him to it.

Tsuchiya, who has coached at Virginia Commonwealth University since 1973, produced a 101-53 record with the men's team before VCU discontinued its sponsorship after the 1986 season. Women's swimming continues, however, and Tsuchiya entered this season with a 130-48 dual-meet record.

Groden, who coaches at Boston College, earned his 100th career victory with the Eagles men's and women's swimming teams in 1987 and 1986. Notably, both milestones came against Northeastern University. Through November 11, his records were 123-56 (men) and 135-45 (women).

Gurka has been at William Paterson College since 1975. He earned his 100th career victory on the women's side November 18, 1988. In January 1989, Gurka notched men's victory No. 100 against St. Peter's College. Through January 4 of this year, Gurka's combined record was 220-133-3.

Trivia Answer: In 1978, the writers (AP poll) picked Alabama No. 1 in their final poll, while the coaches (UPI poll) gave the nod to Southern California. In fact, according to the NCAA football records book, very little disagreement over No. 1 has occurred in the past 40 years.

Since 1950, AP and UPI have differed over the No. 1 team in the final polls seven times (1954, 1957, 1965, 1970, 1973, 1974 and 1978). And in three of those cases (1954, 1957 and 1978), the top teams were flipped (i.e., the No. 1 team in the AP poll was No. 2 in UPI, and vice versa).
