Ikenberry named to Commission

Stanley O. Ikenberry, president of the University of Illinois and current board chair of the American Council on Education, has been named by the Big Ten Conference to serve on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

He replaces Edward H. Jennings, president of Ohio State University, who resigned from the Commission after announcing that he would resign as Ohio State president later this year. Ikenberry will serve the remainder of Jennings' term, to January 1992.

President of the Illinois system since 1979, Ikenberry received his bachelor's degree at Shepherd College and his master's and doctorate at Michigan State University.

He began his career at Michigan State and in 1962 moved to West Virginia University, where he was dean of the College of Human Resources and Education from 1964 to 1969.

From 1969 until taking the presidency at Illinois, he was at Pennsylvania State University as senior vice-president and a professor in the Penn State Center for the Study of Higher Education.

Stanley O. Ikenberry

He is a past chair of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

He replaced James J. Whalen, president of Ithaca College, as chair of the ACE board last month.

NCAA staff involved in office relocation

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles in The NCAA News about the Association's new national office building.)

In May 1988, NCAA officials announced that a new national office would be built in Overland Park, Kansas.

Almost from the moment of the announcement, national office staff members have worn two hats—one for their regular jobs and another as active participants in the detailed process of designing and occupying a brand new building.

The facility—scheduled to open February 26 but awaiting the anticipated issuance of a certificate of occupancy February 8—includes many features designed to help the Association and its staff conduct business comfortably and efficiently.

At one time or another, nearly every member of the staff participated in planning and designing those features, says Richard D. Hunter, NCAA director of operations and manager for the national office building project. Staff members have participated not only in the arrangement of their own department areas, but in the selection of furniture and decor for the building's public areas and the development of such new features as a centralized

College Football Preview scheduled February 18-20

Reform and the state of college football are the themes of the NCAA's College Football '90 Preview, which will be held February 18-20 at the Hyatt Regency Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Joining approximately 60 of the nation's top sportswriters for the event will be Martin A. Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission; Sam Jankovich, director of athletics at the University of Miami (Florida), and Daniel G. Gibbens, faculty athletics representative at the University of Oklahoma.

Coaches scheduled to attend the 14th annual preview include Billy Brewer, University of Mississippi; Spike Dykes, Texas Tech University; Mike Kelly, University of Dayton; John Mackovic, University of Illinois, Champaign; Mike Price, Washington State University; Bobby Ross, Georgia Institute of Technology, and Bob Wagner, University of Hawaii.

Roger O. Valdiserri, University of Notre Dame associate athletics director and chair of the NCAA Communications Committee, will serve as moderator of the preview.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also will be in attendance.

Two panels of coaches (Brewer, Dykes and Kelly in one group and Mackovic, Price, Ross and Wagner in the other) will meet with sportswriters the first morning of the preview to discuss the state of college football and the issue of reform. They'll also provide information on their teams and conferences for

NFL plans to discuss underclass draft policy

Reality suggests that some elements have been left out—or, at least, not highlighted—in the picture that is emerging of underclass college football players making themselves available for the National Football League draft.

Truth be told, the situation will be settled before the NFL's April 1990 draft.

"Undergraduate draft eligibility is a serious and complicated issue," said Jay Moyer, NFL executive vice-president and league counsel.

"Whatever we do will recognize the practical and legal realities. It will also reflect our best effort to balance the legitimate interests of the athletes, the college football programs and the NFL clubs in light of those realities."

Moyer added that any modification of the league's current draft rules will be in place by the end of the March meeting.

Sounds simple enough—even considering Moyer's allusion to the serious and complex aspects of players like Alabama's Keith McCants and Florida's Emmitt Smith passing up a season of college ball for a chance at lucrative professional contracts.

Certainly, the landscape is different than some have painted it. Consider:

- Long before Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders made himself available for the 1989 NFL draft (a move generally considered the beginning of the end of underclassmen being

Women in sports to have their 'Day'

Activities ranging from formal ceremonies to fun runs have been organized nationwide for the fourth annual National Girls & Women in Sports Day February 8.

The event recognizes the achievements of girls and women in sports and focuses attention on issues in women's sports. Events are organized by the Girls Clubs of America, National Association for Girls and Women in Sport, Women's Sports Foundation, and the YWCA of the USA. Activities are planned in all 50 states.

"It has been very encouraging to see the widespread interest in National Girls & Women in Sports Day," said foundation president and race car driver Lyn St. James. "I'm glad to see so many girls and women recognized for their athletics achievements and contributions to sport by their schools, colleges or local groups. It's very important to provide healthy, active role models for girls to emulate."

Among the highlights are a series of events in Washington, D.C., beginning with a basketball game February 7. A team of women all-stars, including Olympians Nancy Lieberman-Cline, Anne Donovan and Vicky Bullett, will take on a team of Congressmen in the Bell Atlantic Celebrity Basketball Game at George Washington University Smith Center at 6:30 p.m. Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey, a former college and professional basketball player, will referee. Before the game, the women all-stars will participate in a clinic, organized by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, for selected junior high school players.

The basketball players and other elite women athletes will visit area schools February 8 before going to Capitol Hill for a Congressional

NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball is February 13

Coaches and players from some of the nation's outstanding women's collegiate basketball programs will participate in the eighth annual NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball press conference Tuesday, February 13, at the Grand Hyatt New York in New York City.

Participating will be coach Lin Dunn and MaChelle Joseph, Purdue University; coach Tara VanDerveer and Jennifer Azzi, Stanford University; coach Jim Foster and Dale Hodges, St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania); coach Pat Summitt and Daedra Charles, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and Kelly Lyons, Old Dominion University.

Members of the media are invited to interview the coaches and players beginning at 9:30 a.m. Debbie Byrne, Old Dominion University assistant athletics director for public relations and a member of the NCAA Communications Committee, will moderate a telephone press conference from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Eastern time. Media interested in listening to the press conference should contact Cynthia M. Van Matre at the NCAA national office for the telephone number.

Held annually since 1983 to promote women's basketball, the event was developed by the former NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee. The Spotlight affords members of the media the opportunity to meet with and interview some of the nation's top women's basketball players and coaches in a setting outside of the competitive arena.

Following is institutional and biographical information about this year's Spotlight participants:

Stanford

Stanford sported an undefeated record and a No. 2 ranking in the national polls through games played January 31. Coach VanDerveer, now in her fifth year at Stanford, has seen her Cardinal squads improve from a record of 13-15 to 14-14, 27-5 and then 28-3 last year. Her 1988-89 team became the first Pacific-10 Conference squad to complete conference play with an 18-0 record; and along the way, the Cardinal set a total of 60 school and Pac-10 records before the season ended against Louisiana Tech in the Midwest regional final. VanDerveer was named the 1989 Converse na-

A plan to give athletics administration a new face

By J. Gregory Summers
The NCAA News Staff

If an artist were to personify intercollegiate athletics competition in human form, it would have a face that was at once black, white, brown, olive, round, square, narrow, male and female. Such is the diverse nature of the student-athlete.

In contrast, an artist's portrait of the face of athletics administration would be largely white and male. But the NCAA is helping to add more diversity to this portrait through its Women's and Ethnic Minority Enhancement Programs, which offer sports administration experience for women and ethnic minorities.

The programs provide postgraduate scholarships and internships at the NCAA national office to increase the number of women and minorities qualified for careers in intercollegiate athletics.

"These programs help provide both the support necessary to complete a postgraduate sports administration degree and the internship experience that is a vital first step in beginning a career," said Stanley D. Johnson, NCAA director of professional development. "In the past, these types of opportunities either did not exist or were difficult to find for women and ethnic minorities."

"Over the long term, our goal is to start a snowball effect by preparing more role models in athletics administration for females and members of minority groups."

Those who have participated in the programs, which began in 1988-89, are making the most of the opportunity. Five of the first six interns now are working full-time in intercollegiate athletics; the other is pursuing a master's degree. Of the 20 scholarship recipients (10 women, 10 minorities) for 1988-89, seven have completed sports administration degrees and are working in athletics, and the rest are pursuing degrees.

Success stories

Patrick Carter was one of the first NCAA interns. After graduating from Grambling State University in 1985 with a degree in accounting, he worked as a customer-service representative for U.S. Sprint, a marketing agent for Advanced Tele-marketing Corporation and a sales representative for ITT Life Insurance Corporation.

In the spring of 1988, he applied for and received an NCAA ethnic minority internship. Less than 18 months later, after working about a year in the Association's legislative services department and earning his master's degree in sports administration from Grambling, he became a compliance officer at Virginia State University.

"The internship was a great experience that helped me tremendously," Carter said. "In fact, I don't think I would have the job I do now if I had not gone through the internship program. I recommend it highly to anyone interested in a career in sports administration."

Of particular value to Carter was the opportunity to visit member institutions and give presentations on rules compliance. Not only did he learn more about NCAA legislation, but he made some connections, one of which opened a door for him at Virginia State.

Carter certifies eligibility, monitors rules compliance, serves as liaison to the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, conducts on-campus seminars and answers staff members' questions about NCAA legislation. He said working at the

Patrick
Carter

NCAA prepared him well.

"I don't think there is any place outside the national office where I could have learned as much as I did about NCAA regulations," he said. "It really helps to be right at the source."

Postgraduate scholarship recipients receive a different benefit: financial assistance when it is most needed.

"The scholarship was a tremendous help, just tremendous," said Claire Townsend, who received a scholarship for 1988-89. "I was able to pursue several aspects of my postgraduate studies without having to worry as much about money."

Claire

Townsend used the funds to pursue a master's degree in education, with emphasis in sports management, from the University of Georgia. She expects to receive her degree in June after completing a study of the changes in SAT and ACT scores of freshman student-athletes since Proposition 48 went into effect. Her study involves athletes in four sports at Southeastern Conference universities.

After serving as a graduate assistant during the first two years of her postgraduate studies, Townsend is now a full-time assistant coach for the Georgia track team. She was a four-year grant-in-aid recipient in cross country and track at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, so track and field is in her blood.

"Somewhere down the line, perhaps, I would like to be involved in sports business," said Townsend, whose bachelor's degree is in corporate finance. "But that's not in my immediate plans. I'm very pleased with everything here; I like what I'm doing."

Qualifications

To qualify for a postgraduate scholarship, applicants must be women or ethnic minorities who:

- Are entering the first semester or term of postgraduate studies;
- Have been accepted into an NCAA member institution's sports administration program or a related program that will prepare them for a career in athletics, and
- Have performed with distinction as undergraduate student-body members.

Internship applicants must have completed their undergraduate degree and demonstrated an interest in a career in athletics administration.

For the 1990-91 academic year, the NCAA will award $6,000 postgraduate scholarships to 10 women and 10 ethnic minorities who are enrolled in sports administration graduate programs. Also, six to eight internships will be available at the Association's national office. The one-year internships, which will be filled by an equal number of women and ethnic minorities, include a maximum stipend of $1,200 per month.

Applications and supporting documents for the postgraduate scholarships and internships must be postmarked by March 15. The Association has sent application booklets for each program to financial aid offices and athletics departments at all member institutions. Applications also are available from conference offices.

More information about the Women's and Ethnic Minority Enhancement Programs, the postgraduate scholarships, and the internships may be obtained from Johnson at the NCAA national office.

Knight panel goals: academic, financial integrity

The Knight Commission for reform in college athletics decided January 31 that restoration of academic and financial integrity to intercollegiate sports programs would be the overriding principles guiding the panel's efforts for the next 18 months.

Those primary goals can best be ensured by independent audits that certify the status of student-athletes and the distribution and administration of athletics funding, said commission cochairs William C. Friday and the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh in a joint statement presented to commission members at their first meeting in Washington, D.C.

Academic integrity "assumes that athletes are students and are not considered for enrollment at a university unless they give reasonable promise of being successful in an authentic course of university studies leading to an authentic academic degree," the statement said.

Financial integrity would assure that all moneys—"ticket sales, TV revenues, booster club contributions, etc.—are received or administered" by the president or another top financial officer of the institution, the statement continued.

The statement emphasized that "the president of the university is the key to the successful achievement of academic and financial integrity."

A number of university CEOs and Richard D. Schultz, executive director of the NCAA, are included among the panel's members to make certain "this is not just another commission simply writing another report," said Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame.

"We want them to feel a part of whatever decisions are reached," said Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina.

The cochairs recommended sanctions by eliminating from competition any institutions of higher education that refused to endorse the principles.

The commission is funded by $2 million from the Ohio-based Knight Foundation.

Several commission members described the daylong meeting January 31 as one of the most candid discussions they had seen on college athletics problems, the Associated Press reported.

Length of playing seasons, time devoted by students to athletics participation, freshman eligibility, the impact of commercial television, integration of athletes into normal student life, and tenure for athletics directors and coaches are likely subjects for future meetings.

The commission plans to complete its work and make a reform recommendation by mid-1991.

Recently added to the commission's membership was J. Lloyd Huck, president of the Pennsylvania State University Board of Trustees and board chair of Nova Pharmaceutical Corp. He is the 22nd member.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 6

1990 Convention Proposal No. 104— prospective student-athlete

Member institutions should note that the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 104 clarifies the distinction between a prospective student-athlete and a recruited prospective student-athlete for purposes of NCAA recruiting legislation. In accordance with Convention Proposal No. 104, a prospective student-athlete is a student who has started classes for the ninth grade. In addition, a student who has not started classes for the ninth grade becomes a prospective student-athlete if the institution provides such an individual (or the individual's relatives or friends) any financial assistance or other benefits that the institution does not provide to prospective students generally. A prospective student-athlete becomes a "recruited" prospective student-athlete if an institutional staff member or representative of the institution's athletics interests solicits the prospect (or the prospect's parents or guardian) for the purpose of securing the prospect's enrollment and ultimate participation in the institution's intercollegiate athletics program. Actions by staff members or athletics representatives that cause a prospective student to become a recruited prospective student-athlete include, but are not limited to, the following:

1. Providing transportation to the prospect to visit the institution's campus;
2. Entertaining the prospect in any way on the campus, except the institution may provide a complimentary admission to an on-campus athletics contest in which its team competes when the prospect visits the institution as a member of a group tour;
3. Initiating or arranging a telephone contact with the prospect, family member or guardian for the purpose of recruitment;
4. Visiting a prospect, family member or guardian for the purpose of recruitment, or
5. Entertaining family members or guardians of a prospect on the institution's campus.

In addition, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined during its August 17, 1989, conference that the forwarding of correspondence to a prospect, other than a generic letter providing or requesting general information, and the arrangement of meals, housing, transportation and academic interviews (as permitted under applicable division legislation) during an unofficial visit would constitute recruitment of a prospective student-athlete.

1990 Convention Proposal No. 105— SAT and ACT scores

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that with the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 105, it is permissible for an institution to pay a fee required by the appropriate testing agency to obtain a prospect's official SAT or ACT test score. The payment of such a fee would be a permissible precollege expense and would not per se constitute recruitment of the prospect.

1990 Convention Proposal No. 109— women's basketball evaluations

Division I member institutions that conduct the sport of women's basketball should note that with the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 109, it is not permissible for institutional staff members in the sport of women's basketball to visit a prospect's educational institution on more than one occasion during a particular week of an evaluation period, regardless of the total number of prospects enrolled at the institution. Please note that the once-a-week limit during the contact period in this sport remains in effect.

NCAA Bylaws 13.1.3.5-(e) and 13.1.3.6-(e)— National Letter of Intent

Divisions I and II institutions that sponsor the sport of football should note that the 48-hour period from February 12 (8 a.m.) to February 14 (8 a.m.) is a dead period for recruiting in light of the initial date (February 14) for signing the National Letter of Intent. Therefore, it is not permissible to make in-person recruiting contacts or evaluations on or off the member institution's campus, or to permit official or unofficial visits by prospects to the institution's campus. It remains permissible, however, for an institutional staff member to write or telephone prospects during such a dead period.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

After lunch, Massengale, Jankovich and Gibbens will meet with the writers to discuss reform and college football. Coaches and administrators then will be available for individual interviews before the day concludes with a reception and dinner.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will kick off the second day with a 9 a.m. session, which will be followed by another session of one-on-one interview opportunities for the writers in attendance.

At noon, a telephone press conference with NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee chair and Big Ten Conference Commissioner James E. Delany will be held to discuss the 1990 Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Bill Millsaps, sports editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, will serve as moderator of the press conference.

Following are brief biographical sketches of the coaches who will participate in the 1990 preview.

Brewer

This season, Brewer's Rebels finished 7-4, defeated Air Force before a sold-out crowd in the Liberty Bowl and placed fourth in the rugged Southeastern Conference.

Brewer has twice been selected SEC coach of the year—by the Associated Press in 1983 and by United Press International in 1986.

This year's performance leaves Brewer with a 95-76-6 record in 16 years as a collegiate head coach. His 38 victories as head coach at Ole Miss represent the most regular-season wins by a Rebel coach since the Johnny Vaught era and rank him fourth on the all-time Rebel coaching list being Vaught's 180, Harry Mehre's 39 and Ed Walker's 38.

Brewer always has been known as a player's coach. His love for Ole Miss football put him a step ahead in rebuilding Rebel fortunes. He also enjoyed a winning career as a player at Mississippi.

Mackovic

In two years, John Mackovic has returned Illinois football to prominence not only within the Big Ten Conference, but throughout the collegiate ranks.

Mackovic inherited an Illini team that had a combined two-year showing of 7-14-1. He since has led Illinois to a two-year record of 15-7-1 that includes a third-place Big Ten Conference finish in 1988 and a No. 10 ranking this season in the final Associated Press poll.

The 1989 squad went 10-2 overall, 7-1 in the Big Ten and defeated Virginia in the Citrus Bowl. The 10th-place finish was the school's best since placing 10th at the end of the 1983 Rose Bowl season.

Mackovic attended Wake Forest University and was a starter at quarterback.

Five additional participants to be sought for NYSP

The NCAA News incorrectly reported in its January 31 issue that the NYSP would double its extended program in 1991 by inviting 50 schools to join the program, in addition to the 45 institutions that currently are conducting extended programs.

Actually, the NYSP plans to invite a total of 50 institutions to participate in 1991, an increase of five from the current number.

Billy Brewer

Spike Dykes

Mike Kelly

John Mackovic

Mike Price

Bobby Ross

Bob Wagner

Charlie McClendon

Mackovic also served as head football coach at Wake Forest University.

Mackovic is one of the few coaches in the game today to take losing teams in both collegiate and professional football and turn them into winning organizations.

He was head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs before taking the Illinois job.

Price

Price in his first year guided Washington State to a 6-5 record in 1989, giving the program its second straight winning campaign and its fifth winning mark in the 1980s.

He resurrected a struggling Weber State University program in 1981 that had not produced a winning record in 10 years. In his first season, Weber State finished 7-4 after losing to eventual national NCAA I-AA champion Idaho State in triple overtime.

In 1987, Price, who had a 46-44 record at Weber State, guided the Big Sky Conference team to a 10-3 record and into the quarterfinals of the NCAA play-offs. Weber State finished the conference season 7-1 to tie for the Big Sky title. The 10-3 overall record, 9-2 regular-season mark and 7-1 Big Sky finish all were record-setting marks at Weber State.

Price attended Washington State for two years before finishing his collegiate career at the University of Puget Sound, where he played two years. He graduated in 1969 with a degree in physical education.

Wagner

Wagner, who has three years under his belt as the head coach at Hawaii, led the Rainbows in 1989 to their second consecutive winning season with a 9-3-1 record and an appearance in the Aloha Bowl.

Wagner, who was chosen to be the head coach of the West in the Hula Bowl, was named the Western Athletic Conference's coach of the year.

Wagner graduated from Wittenberg University in 1969. He was also a four-year letterman and the co-captain of the lacrosse team.

In 1977, after several years of coaching in Ohio, Wagner came to Hawaii under head coach Larry Price. Wagner coached linebackers, defensive secondary and special teams before becoming head coach.

Kelly

Kelly led a Dayton squad, which posted a 13-0-1 record, to its second NCAA Division III championship of the 1980s with its victory over Union (New York) this past season. Last year's appearance in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl was the fourth overall appearance for Dayton in the 1980s.

Kelly's nine seasons have totaled 85 wins, 19 losses and one tie.

Six of Kelly's nine teams have qualified for postseason play, including five of the last six.

Kelly is currently second among active NCAA coaches (minimum of five years as head coach) in winning percentage (.814, 85-19-1), and he helped guide Dayton to one of the best winning percentages (.836, 99-19-1) among Division III teams in the 1980s.

Kelly joined the staff at Hanover College for the 1975 and 1976 seasons and moved to Dayton in 1977.

Ross

Ross, regarded as one of the leading innovators and pacesetters in college football as well as one of its most respected coaches, proved this year to any disbelievers that his methods are paying off. The Rambling Wreck rebounded from an 0-3 start to win seven of the last eight.

This year's 7-4 showing improved Ross' three-year Georgia Tech record to 12-21. During his five seasons as head coach at the University of Maryland, College Park, Ross led the Terrapins to three Atlantic Coast conference titles and four postseason bowl games.

A three-sport letterman at Virginia Military Institute in football, basketball and baseball, Ross graduated in 1959 with a degree in English and history.

Dykes

Dykes led a Texas Tech squad, which was picked to finish sixth in the Southwest Athletic Conference in 1989, to a 9-3 record, a third-place conference showing, a top-20 national ranking and an All American Bowl victory over Duke, the first Texas Tech bowl victory since 1973. Dykes was named the SWC's coach of the year in 1989.

Dykes graduated from Stephen F. Austin State University in 1959 and began his coaching career in Texas high schools before going to the University of Texas, Austin, in 1972. Dykes moved to the University of New Mexico in 1977 and later to Mississippi State University, where he became head coach in 1986. He joined the Red Raiders' staff in 1984 and became head coach in 1987.

Athletes could use more time, all right—to get jobs

By Robert E. Stewart

Listening to debate at NCAA Conventions and reading coaches' comments about the need for stipends for student-athletes, I can't help but mentally review the evolution of the role of the student-athlete.

Originally, he or she was participating in an extracurricular activity for fun. Today, playing sports at the collegiate level is construed as holding a job. Coaches requesting stipends for athletes completes the definition of the activity as a job and furthers the control the coach has over the student-athlete and the demands the coach makes of the athlete's time.

From the time I began attending NCAA Conventions in the early 1970s, my favorite part of the Convention has been the honors luncheon.

Robert E. Stewart

A trend has become evident in almost 20 years that I have been attending. When Silver Anniversary honorees were recognized back in the '70s, almost every recipient's record reflected that, in addition to going to class and participating in athletics, the individual held a job.

Amazingly, a time existed when student-athletes had time to work at a real job. For those who needed it—and it used to be a majority—there actually was time in the day to work and earn needed income. And in almost every instance, the Silver Anniversary recipients were proud of the fact they had worked.

But beginning in the '80s, the Silver Anniversary recipients' biographies no longer reflected the job as a third endeavor.

In other words, somewhere in the '60s, the concept emerged that awarding a grant-in-aid entitled us to control the student-athlete 24 hours a day. Somehow, we forgot that athletics was not started at colleges and universities to generate revenue, nor was it the primary reason for the student-athlete to be in school, and it was not intended that the coach use athletics to build an immense personal fortune.

Coaches used to be academic instructors at college campuses, who, like the student-athlete, desired other activities during the day. When the system allowed for full-time coaches with no duties in academics, it removed the coach from the mainstream activity of the institution and allowed the coach to spend full time on athletics.

Why should we be so surprised that when the coach spends full time, he or she will require the athlete to do so?

At this point, the sport becomes a professional one and not an extracurricular activity. Until all of the major universities terminate separate athletics associations and return the control to the school as a department of athletics funded by the school, rules will not solve the problem.

As long as we employ a system that allows coaches to demand more time of the student-athlete because they think it will win more games, and as long as we demand that the coach win more games, we are creating a no-win situation.

Rules do not work as long as there are those who devise ways around rules. College athletics will return to its rightful place as an amateur sport only when the coach truly believes that it's more important for the athlete to have time to work rather than watch film, read playbooks, attend "voluntary" conditioning programs—the list goes on and on.

What kind of an association are we to pass a rule that prevents a grant-in-aid athlete from earning income while in school? What right do we have to prohibit the right to work—a basic American value?

Stewart is director of athletics at Troy State University.

Big-timers begin to see wisdom in Ivy League ways

Joe Stein, columnist

New Haven Register

"Without the restraining voice of the Ivy League, college football went haywire. Not just flagrant academic and recruiting abuses, but all kinds of police-blotter stuff. Hard drugs. Robbery. Rape. Assault and battery.

"In basketball, the NCAA, which is growing richer and more arrogant every year, has threatened to take away the Ivy League's automatic tournament bid, even though it's a 64-team field. There's been mumbo-jumbo about schedules and power ratings, but anyone who saw Princeton take Georgetown down to the wire last March knew the Tigers belonged.

"The fact is—and this is a point lost on big-time colleges—the Ivies belong because of what they've stood for.

"Now, the big-timers are starting to see the light, but don't expect the Ivy League to get any apologies."

Randy Hoffman, director of athletics
San Jose State University

Big West Sports Star

"I would enact a redistribution of the NCAA basketball tournament revenues. From my vantage point, the revenues belong to all the Division I schools.

"We have to divide the revenues on a more equitable basis. The present format works for the schools that are successful and works against the schools that are not achieving the success they might have had seven or eight years ago."

Kent Hill, assistant director of athletics for student development
Georgia Institute of Technology

The Sting

"An education is a person's most dependable asset—one no one can take that away. Your athletics career, on the other hand, is really just someone else's subjective opinion. Your career can be elongated or cut short, based on whether someone thought you had a good day or not. It really comes down to that.

"Being involved in athletics and going to school at Tech is like having two full-time jobs. We tell our recruits that, because they need to be aware of what they are doing and that there is a challenge to be had here. But because the challenge is great, the reward is great.

"When you come out of Tech with a degree, it attracts more attention than perhaps some other places. That's something we can be very proud of, and it gives us a reason to do what we do here, as far as spending the extra time everyday going to study hall, going to tutoring, doing what it takes to make it."

Art Thiel, columnist
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

"The fact that many coaches and athletics directors feel the (NCAA Convention) moves went too far, while college presidents feel the Convention didn't go far enough, illustrates the fractiousness that keeps the NCAA from any serious makeover.

"The changes adopted were less reforms than compromise settlements that amount to a shave and a haircut for rogue programs.

"Big-time college sports are still running in the wrong direction. They merely lost a little momentum (at the NCAA Convention). Until (NCAA Executive Director Richard D.) Schultz persuades a majority of college athletics administrators to support the reforms he described instead of the meringue passed (by the Convention), he might get more satisfaction sitting on an Alaskan beach with a wire brush."

"As for me, right now I am not in favor of a (Division I-A) play-off. But I think it will happen. Unfortunately, when it comes, the wrong thing probably will drive it—and that is finances.

"I would like to think you would go to a play-off system because the American way is to have competition and to win; and at the end, there is a champion. That is our American way. There is no other way, and there is nothing wrong with that.

Letter to the Editor

Credit where credit is due

To the Editor:

Poor ol' Mississippi College. No one wants to give us proper credit. I noticed with interest that George H. Andrews of Oberlin College was claiming that former President Ronald Reagan was in error in claiming his alma mater, Eureka College, was the first coeducational college in the United States. Andrews states that "there seems to be general agreement that Oberlin College has the longest history of coeducation in the country."

Shame, shame. Mississippi College's running feud with Oberlin College as to which was first to grant degrees to a woman was solved several years ago when Mississippi College substantiated that it had awarded degrees to women as early as 1832. This was a year before Oberlin was even founded. Mississippi College was founded in 1826.

Just as there are those who would deny that Mississippi College was the first coeducational institution to grant degrees to women, there were skeptics this past year who gave Mississippi College little hope in the NCAA Division II football play-offs. The amazing Choctaws erased all doubts, however, defeating two previously undefeated teams en route to the Division II national championship.

We are proud of our heritage and proud of our football team. It's great to be No. 1!

"But with the pressure from the bowls, there is going to have to be a pretty strong feeling on the part of the athletics community to make it happen."

Christine H. B. Grant, women's athletics director

Looking Back

Five years ago

Chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions were notified February 28, 1985, that the Association's fifth special Convention—the first to be called by the NCAA Presidents Commission—had been scheduled June 20-21, 1985, in New Orleans to deal with integrity issues in college athletics. (The NCAA News, March 6, 1985)

Ten years ago

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, meeting February 20, 1980, with H. Boyd McWhorter, Southeastern Conference, as chair, completed a review of questionable academic practices used by institutions to establish or maintain the athletics eligibility of academically deficient student-athletes. The committee suggested several steps to control or limit the use of academic credits obtained from colleges other than the certifying institution. (February 29, 1980, NCAA News)

Twenty years ago

The NCAA News announced that a record 709 persons had attended the Association's 64th annual Convention January 12-14, 1970, in Washington, D.C. The old record had been 617 at the 1968 Convention in New York City. (February 1970 NCAA News)

Thirty years ago

A total of 521 persons attended the Association's 54th annual Convention January 6-8, 1960, in New York City, according to lists of delegates and visitors prepared for the NCAA Yearbook. (1959-60 NCAA Yearbook)

NCAA plans two-year 'field test' of certification plan

Beginning this spring, up to 50 NCAA Division I institutions voluntarily will participate in a "field test" of the Association's plan to certify athletics programs.

The procedure, which resembles accreditation procedures for universities' academic programs, was proposed last year by NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz. With the NCAA Council's approval, the Association's compliance services department is inviting institutions to apply by March 30 to participate in its two-year test of the program.

By the end of 1991, one or two institutions from each Division I conference and approximately five independent Division I institutions will finish comprehensive self-examinations of their athletics programs. The review, which includes campus visits from NCAA and conference representatives, is designed to determine whether a program is "conducted in a manner consistent with the goals, purposes and standards of the institution in general," said Brenda R. Weare, an NCAA compliance services representative assigned to oversee the pilot program.

"We just want presidents and others responsible for the athletics program to take a good, hard look at themselves," Weare explained. "We want them to ask, 'What's going on? Do we have the control we need?'"

The pilot program could result in the creation of a mandatory Division I certification program, in which the NCAA would approve or deny certification for each athletics program.

But as a voluntary effort, the pilot program's emphasis is on helping institutions in their self-study efforts while observing how well the certification process works. For that reason, participating schools will not face disciplinary actions as a result of the certification process.

Also, member institutions that have not completed the five-year self-study mandated by NCAA Constitution 6.3 can utilize their participation in the certification pilot program for that purpose.

Learning process

"This will be a learning process," Weare said. "We're experimenting with a process that hasn't been thoroughly tested in the athletics environment."

Yet, it is a process that the NCAA membership appears eager to pursue.

"This is a high priority in the department for the next two years. It's been mandated by the executive director, and there's a demand for it in the membership," she said.

To participate, an institution must meet the following requirements:

- It must be an active Division I member.
- It cannot currently be under NCAA investigation, sanctions or probation.
- Its athletics program must have adopted and made public a statement of mission and purpose.
- The program must have a departmental policies and procedures manual.
- The institution must have an athletics advisory board or a formal institutional body (as described in NCAA Constitution 6.1) that reviews athletics policies and protects institutional integrity.
- It must be able to make available accurate information that fairly describes its financial resources.

Objectives

To be certified, an institution must demonstrate that it meets several criteria, Weare said. Most importantly, it must demonstrate that the athletics department adheres to the standards and purposes of the entire institution, as well as the department's own standards.

"Almost every institution will have an institutional philosophy or lofty ideas that are floating around and get down to the nuts and bolts of what's happening on campus."

When the athletics department's purposes and standards are consistent with the institution's, it follows that the school will be able to establish goals and plans for improving consistent with the philosophy of Division I and that the athletics department is committed to improvement and to meeting goals consistent with the institution's mission.

Weare emphasized that the certification procedure will focus on how the athletics program measures up to the school's own "unique" standards, rather than attempting to compare it to other schools' athletics programs. The pilot program may yield some universal standards by which to compare all schools in the future, but that information isn't available now.

"We can't compare one school with another, because we don't have the background data necessary to make such a comparison," she said.

Process similar

By and large, the certification procedure is like the procedure followed by organizations that accredit academic programs.

After an institution's chief executive officer formally requests that the school be considered for certification, the school will be required to conduct a self-study designed to identify strengths and weaknesses of the athletics program. The institution will receive guidance through this step from the NCAA staff and the staff of the school's conference.

After completing the self-study, the school will summarize the results and submit that report to the compliance services staff.

The next step, which resembles the validation step of an accreditation process, is for a compliance services staff member and a conference administrator to visit the school

mission statement that makes reference to athletics," Weare said. "But do the actions of the athletics department further those goals?"

"We want to get beyond these and maintaining specific aspects of the program.

Each school also will be asked to demonstrate that it has adequate resources and pursues objectives

On October 28, 1989, WORLDTEK TRAVEL brought URI & Villanova together in Italy for the Milano Football Classic. Everybody came home a winner!

It was history in the making as WORLDTEK brought together the University of Rhode Island and Villanova for the first American college football game ever played in northern Italy.

It was a massive undertaking, moving two teams, tons of equipment, and hundreds of fans, but in the end everyone came out on top.

For the players and coaches, it was the opportunity of a lifetime to play abroad.

For the fans, going on special WORLDTEK package tours, it was a unique chance to travel to Europe for less, while supporting their teams.

The universities were winners, too, with a no-cost opportunity to play abroad, revitalize fan interest, and profit financially. Sound exciting? You bet it is. If you'd like to take your team to play in Europe next year, call Andy Mooradian today at the number below for more details.

Teammate takes aim at Gathers' scoring crown

Montclair State senior Carolyn Savio is No. 2 in Division III women's rebounding

West Georgia's Jeff Myers is among Division II men's leaders in free-throw shooting

Eric McArthur, UC Santa Barbara, is the Division I men's leader in rebounding

Judy Mosley, Hawaii, leads Division I women in rebounding and is No. 3 in scoring

Camille Ratledge, a Florida senior, is second in Division I women's assists

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

Bo Kimble of Loyola Marymount continues to lead Division I men's scoring at 35.8 points per game through his first 21 games. Ohio's Dave Jamerson is second at 31.8 through 20 games.

If Kimble holds the lead and wins the scoring title, he would follow teammate Hank Gathers, who led the nation last year at 32.7. Gathers is averaging "only" 28.6 this season as the Lions have averaged a record-shattering 123.6 per game en route to a 17-4 record.

Kimble and Gathers would be the first teammates in 35 years to win the title in consecutive seasons. Furman's Frank Selvy won the scoring title in 1953 and 1954, averaging 29.5 and 41.7. Then, the Paladins' Darrell Floyd won back-to-back crowns in 1955 and 1956 at 35.9 and 33.8.

The only other school to produce more than one scoring champion is South Carolina, with Grady Wallace in 1957 at 31.2 and Zam Fredrick in 1981 at 28.9. There have been only two three-time winners—Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati in 1958, 1959 and 1960 and Pete Maravich of Louisiana State in 1968, 1969 and 1970. Robertson, who went on to professional fame, averaged 35.1, 32.6 and 33.7, while Maravich, the all-time leading collegiate scorer with 3,667 points, averaged 43.8, 44.2 and 44.5. And remember, both of those legends played just three seasons of varsity basketball.

Two-time winners (all back-to-back) are Selvy, Floyd, Portland State's Freeman Williams (1977 and 1978) and Texas Southern's Harry Kelly (1982 and 1983). Interestingly enough, only Kansas' Clyde Lovellette won the scoring crown in a year that his team won the national championship—1952.

And besides Maravich's three 40-plus averages, only Selvy (41.7 in 1954) and Mississippi's Johnny Neumann (40.1 in 1971) have cracked that barrier. Louisiana State sophomore Chris Jackson became the first freshman to average more than 30 points a game, with 30.2 last season.

Top conferences

The Big Ten Conference, Atlantic Coast Conference and Big East Conference are just where you would expect when overall records against the other Division I men's conferences are examined—at the top of the heap. The records are against nonconference Division I opponents through games of January 21.

Big Ten teams have posted an 81-18 (.818) record vs. the other 31 conferences, including a 3-2 advantage over the second-plac ACC. The Big Ten has posted an 8-0 mark against the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, 6-0 vs. the Missouri Valley Conference and 8-1 vs. the Big Eight Conference.

The ACC has a 73-20 (.785) overall record, including a sweep of the Big South Conference (6-0), an 8-1 record vs. the Southern Conference, and an 8-5 mark in its matches against another of the nation's top leagues, the Big East Conference. The Big East has a 66-22 overall record (.750).

Against nonconference teams, the posted the best record at 21-12 (.636), followed by the Southeastern at 32-21 (.604), ACC at 17-13 (.567), Mid-American Athletic Conference at 21-19 (.525) and Colonial at 18-17 (.514).

Women's alma maters

Ohio State with five tops the list of schools whose graduates currently are active as Division I women's head coaches. Next are Old Dominion, Slippery Rock, Wayland Baptist and West Chester, each with four.

The five Ohio State graduates are Xavier's (Ohio) Mark Ehlen (1975), Boise State's June Daugherty (1978), Cornell's Kim Jordan (1980),

Prioleau was asked if he had butterflies going to the free-throw line with seven seconds left in a tie game against Iona: "No, I wasn't nervous; I was scared." Prioleau made both free throws for the 69-67 win. (Joe Favorito, Fordham SID)

Central (Iowa) senior forward Matt Melvin, talking about the character of archrival William Penn's old Penn Gymnasium: "I love it. It's a cross between Boston Garden and my garage." (Larry Hapfel, Central (Iowa) SID)

Can you top these?

You might have heard about this performance and still not believe it. Drexel sophomore guard Clarence Armstrong made three three-point field goals in the final 16 seconds January 20 to give the Dragons an 87-86 victory at Bucknell.

Trailing, 83-78, with 24 seconds left, Drexel rebounded a missed Bucknell free throw. Armstrong hit No. 1 at 16 seconds to make it 83-81. Drexel fouled Bucknell, which made both ends of a one-and-one at 13 seconds for an 85-81 Bucknell lead. Drexel inbounded, and Armstrong hit another three-pointer at nine seconds to make it 85-84. Drexel called a timeout.

After Bucknell inbounded, Drexel fouled immediately, and Bucknell hit the front half of the one-and-one for an 86-84 lead. Drexel brought the ball in with six seconds left, and Armstrong tossed up a 30-footer at the buzzer to win it.

There's more: Armstrong had missed his previous 12 three-point attempts. (Rob Wilson, Drexel SID)

Northwestern State (Louisiana) had six count 'em, six—players averaging in double figures through 17 games. They are starters Roman Banks (12.3), Dexter Grimsley (11.9), Eric Scanlan (10.9), Greg McCall (10.5) and Jethro Owens (10.2) and reserve Gregg Harden (10.3). (Doug Ireland, Northwestern State (Louisiana) SID)

The most difficult job in college basketball may belong to MIT public address announcer Stu Schmill. Some of the names Schmill has to pronounce from the MIT roster are Pillan Thirumalaisamy, Arvind Lakshminarayana, Stan Wojnowski, Aaron Barzilai and Vaski Rajlich. (Roger Crosley, MIT SID)

Philadelphia Textile has logged 26 straight home-court victories and made at least one three-point field goal in 109 consecutive games. (Michael Kleiner, Philadelphia Textile SID)

Western Maryland's women's team went 417 minutes and 15 seconds this season before taking its first three-point field-goal attempt.

The Green Terriers were 9-3 without benefit of a successful field goal from beyond the 19-foot, nine-inch line. Has any other team gone this far into the season without a three-point-goal attempt? (Scott Deitch, Western Maryland SID)

Other notes

Holy Cross junior forward Ann Lambiotte has led the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference in three-point field-goal percentage throughout the year and also led the nation last week. Her brother Walker, also a forward, is one of Northwestern's leading scorers and was one of the students who served on the NCAA's Long Range Planning Committee before he transferred from North Carolina State in 1987.

The Lambiotte's father, Butch, was a four-year starter at Richmond, and their brother, Ken, holds several football passing records at William and Mary. (Rosemary Shea, Holy Cross women's SID) Junior forward Leon Hill has Emory and Henry fans shaking their heads over his marked improvement from last season. After averaging 15.8 points a game last year, Hill worked on the main weakness in his game—perimeter shooting—by enrolling in every basketball camp he could find during the summer. The results?

Hill was averaging 24.6 points a game through January 27 and had connected on 33 of 59 three-point field-goal attempts (56 percent) after making a total of only three from that range last season. (Patsi Barnes Trollinger, Emory and Henry SID)

Fall deadline set

The Colorado Amateur Sports Corp. has targeted October 1 as the projected date to raise $10 million to complete financing for an Olympic Hall of Fame and Museum.

Bill Tutt, chair of the Colorado group and vice-president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said February 5 that construction of the Olympic Hall of Fame would begin in the latter part of 1991.

Project organizers already have raised $10 million to meet construction costs. Tutt said the plan is to create a museum that would rival halls of fame for professional baseball and football.

Tutt said the USOC and the Colorado committee will evaluate potential sites in the Colorado Springs area over the next 90 days. Initially, a site was donated for the project on the Banning Lewis Ranch east of Colorado Springs. That site still is being considered, along with several others.

Basketball notes

Big Ten's home-court record of 48-2 (.960) also is the best in Division I. Only Michigan State and Northwestern have lost home games. The ACC has a 41-2 (.953) mark on conference home courts, and the Big East is next at 45-5 (.900).

In home contests, the Big Eight is fourth at 42-5 (.894), followed by the Pacific-10 at 39-5 (.886), East Coast Conference at 20-3 (.870), Western Athletic Conference at 41-7 (.854) and American South Athletic Conference at 32-6 (.842).

The Big East has the best mark on nonconference opponents' home courts, 7-4 (.636), while the Big Ten (16-10) and ACC (10-7) are the only other leagues with winning records on the road. Many of the conferences play neutral-site games, with the ACC winning 22 of 33 and the Big Ten posting a 17-6 record.

The Pac-10 is fourth overall on the road at 57-21 (.731), with the Big Eight fifth at 69-28 (.711) and the WAC sixth at 60-32 (.652).

Women's conferences

Among the 32 women's Division I leagues, the Atlantic Coast Conference has the best overall record against other Division I conferences at 68-21 (.764), beating out the Southeastern Conference at 99-31 (.762).

The Big East Conference is third at 67-23 (.744), followed by the Pacific-10 Conference at 63-33 (.656), Big Ten Conference at 64-35 (.646) and Big Eight Conference at 59-40 (.596).

The ACC also has the best home mark at 36-3 (.923), again just edging the Southeastern at 44-5 (.898). Others in order are the Big Ten at 39-10 (.796), Pac-10 at 35-9 (.795), Big East at 29-7 (.784) and Colonial Athletic Association at 18-6 (.750).

On the road, the Big East has Cincinnati's Laurie Pirtle (1980) and Brooklyn's Molly Perdue (1982).

Old Dominion's four are Arizona State's Maura McHugh (1975), Florida International's Cindy Russo (1975), Old Dominion's Wendy Larry (1977) and Hartford's Jean Walling-Murphy (1981). The Slippery Rock graduates are Iowa's Vivian Stringer (1971), Butler's Paulette Stein (1972), St. Francis' (Pennsylvania) Deb Polca (1973) and Lehigh's Jocelyn Beck (1975).

Wayland Baptist's four graduates are Nevada-Reno's Charlotte Mason (1969), North Texas' Tina Slinker (1978), Oklahoma's Valerie Goodwin (1979) and Texas Tech's Marsha Sharp (1974). The West Chester four are Kansas' Marian Washington (1970), Temple's Linda MacDonald (1970), Rhode Island's Linda Ziemke (1973) and Connecticut's Geno Auriemma (1981).

Quotes of the week

North Carolina-Charlotte's sophomore guard Henry Williams on being a marked man by opponents this season after an outstanding freshman year: "They're even double-teaming me when I walk to class." (Tracey Judd, Sun Belt Conference public relations director)

Jacksonville head coach Rich Haddad following the Dolphins' 86-84 Sun Belt win over league leader Alabama-Birmingham, snapping a six-game losing streak: "Ty (senior guard Tyrone Boykin) was quoted in this morning's paper as saying, 'We're a family, and we just need to stick together and work our problems out. As a family, we can turn this thing around.' That really moved me. And he was right." (Gary Izzo, Jacksonville assistant AD) tional coach of the year and Pacific-10 coach of the year.

Azzi, a 5-9 guard from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, is the only returning player from last year's Kodak all-America team. She was the 1989 Pacific-10 player of the year and is a two-time all-conference selection. Azzi has been Stanford's leading scorer and leader in assists in each of the last two seasons. She is one of the nation's top free-throw shooters, making 93 percent of this year's attempts. She played last summer on the U.S. national team that competed in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and she went to Taiwan in 1988 as a member of the U.S. Select team.

Tennessee

No other basketball coach in the country, male or female, has enjoyed the success of Summitt. As a player, she won an Olympic silver medal in 1976. As an international coach, she brought home the first U.S. gold medal in Olympic competition in 1984. In 1987 and 1989, she led her Tennessee teams to NCAA championships. Summitt is in her 16th year at Tennessee and has led the Lady Vols to the Women's Final Four 10 times in the last 13 years. Additionally, she has produced seven U.S. basketball Olympians, 12 all-Americans and 22 international performers. This season, she earned her 400th victory and coached her 500th game.

Charles is a 6-3 junior center from Detroit, Michigan. The preseason all-America selection was Azzi's teammate on last summer's U.S. national team that played in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Charles was a key player in last year's national-championship game against Auburn, tallying 13 points, seven rebounds, two assists and two blocks in 21 minutes.

Purdue

Third-year Purdue head coach Dunn is building the Boilermaker program into one that is nationally known and consistently successful. In 1988-89, she was named the Big Ten Conference coach of the year, her team participated in its first-ever NCAA championship, and the Boilermakers were ranked in the Associated Press and USA Today Top 20 polls for the first time in the program's history.

The team's success has continued to increase this year, with weekly rankings among the nation's top 10 teams. Dunn was an assistant coach for the 1989 World University Games and was named to the U.S. Olympic Games Committee. Like Summitt, she is a graduate of the University of Tennessee, Martin.

Jennifer Azzi

Daedra Charles

A preseason all-America selection, Joseph is a 5-8 sophomore guard from Auburn, Indiana. She led the Boilermakers in scoring and assists as a freshman. She was named the Big Ten's freshman player of the year and was a second-team all-conference selection. Joseph was a member of last summer's U.S. junior national team. Joseph would like to be a coach after her college career ends.

St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania)

Foster has built a well-respected program during his 12 years at St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania). He has won 67 percent of his games and led the Hawks to appearances in the NCAA championship during each of the last five years, a feat accomplished by only 11 teams. The Hawks were 25-5 in 1985, and Foster was named the Women's Basketball Coaches Association national coach of the year and Atlantic 10 Conference coach of the year, the first such honors for a male coach.

A member of the WBCA Board of Directors, Foster served as an assistant coach for the USA junior world championship team that competed in Spain last summer, and he will be an assistant coach in the 1990 FIBA World Championships and the Goodwill Games.

A 6-1 senior center from Trenton, New Jersey, Hodges recently became her school's all-time leading scorer (1,711 points) when she scored a school single-game record 42 points against Temple. Hodges, another preseason all-America selection, was the Atlantic 10 and Philadelphia Big 5 most valuable player last year and led both groups in scoring with 23.4 points per game. She has been the scoring leader among Division I players this season and remains ranked among the top scorers with a 26.3 points-per-game average. She played on the 1988 U.S. Select team that played in Taipei, Taiwan.

Old Dominion

Lyons, a 6-2 senior from Tipp City, Ohio, leads the nation in field-goal accuracy (.685) and last year finished 10th in the nation in the same category at 62.1 percent (265-427). She has averaged more than 20 points a game during the past two seasons and is ranked among the nation's top 10 scorers. The all-America candidate was named Virginia's player of the year in 1989 and is a two-time all-Sun Belt Conference selection. Lyons played for the U.S. squad at the World University Games last summer.

News Fact File

In the 84 years of existence of the NCAA Executive Committee, 239 representatives of NCAA members have served on that committee, which has ranged in size from seven members to 14 over that period. Of the total, 20 represented institutions that now are in Division II, 44 were from current Division III members and the other 175 were from current Division I members.

The all-time leader is the University of Missouri, Columbia, with six Executive Committee members over the years; Dartmouth College is next with five. Colorado School of Mines has had three to lead the Division II list, while City College of New York, Oberlin College, Swarthmore College, Tufts University and Williams College lead the current Division III institutions with three each.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

William H. Wagoner resigned as chancellor at North Carolina-Wilmington, effective July 1. Rev. John LoSchiavo announced his retirement at San Francisco, effective at the end of the school year. He has been in the post for 13 years.

COACHES

Baseball assistant—Mark Danker appointed at Upper Iowa, where he also will assist with football. The former Iowa State baseball player has been a high school volunteer assistant coach.

Men's basketball assistant Joe Paterno requested and received a release from his duties as graduate assistant coach at Fordham to play professionally in Italy.

Football—Alan Percy "Al" Kincaid selected at Arkansas State. The former Wyoming head coach, who led the Cowboys to a 29-29 record from 1981 to 1985, served last season as recruiting coordinator at Alabama. He also has been an assistant at East Carolina and Wyoming. Kincaid replaces Larry Lacewell, who left Arkansas State to become defensive coordinator at Tennessee. James M. Meyer named at Kenyon, where he was interim head coach last season and led the Lords to their first conference title in 100 years of play. Meyer, who previously was Kenyon's offensive coordinator, led his team to a 5-4-1 mark last season. Dennis Creehan appointed at San Francisco State, where he also will be assistant to the athletics director for fund-raising and promotions. Creehan, a former head coach at Edinboro, has been an assistant at California since 1987 and also has been on the football staffs at Pittsburgh and Carnegie-Mellon and with the Canadian Football League's Edmonton Eskimos. Barry Mynter announced he will step down at the end of the 1990 season at Norwich to accept an appointment as assistant to the athletics director. Entering his 15th year in the coaching post, Mynter has a 74-70-2 record.

Football assistants—Dave Bower, offensive coordinator at Lock Haven, resigned after nine years as an aide at the school to pursue academic interests. He is a member of the school's health sciences faculty. Chuck Driesbach, defensive secondary coach at Mississippi, appointed defensive coordinator at Cornell, which also announced the retention of three assistants—Glenn Deadmond, defensive line coach; Jim Knowles, running backs coach; and Peter Noyes, who will move from defensive coordinator and linebackers coach to take charge of the offensive line. Cornell also hired Jay Venuto, an aide for the past three seasons at Georgia Southern, to serve as quarterbacks and receivers coach. Will Holthouser named defensive coordinator at Western Carolina after four years on the staff at Virginia Military, where he served last season as assistant head coach and defensive line coach. He also has coached at Gardner-Webb and Citadel. Bob Weber appointed outside linebackers coach at Vanderbilt. A former head coach at Arizona and Louisville, Weber also has been an assistant coach with the Canadian Football League's Ottawa Rough Riders and was the team's interim head coach for part of the 1988 season.

Also, Tommy West joined the staff at Tennessee, where he was a tight end during the 1970s. West, who previously served on the staff at Clemson for eight years, will replace Dave Cutcliffe as running backs coach. Cutcliffe will switch to duties as quarterbacks coach at Tennessee. Chip Garber selected as secondary coach at Mississippi State after eight years as an aide at Kentucky. He also has been on the staff at Southern Methodist. Bill Stewart hired as defensive line coach at Air Force. He was tight ends and offensive tackles coach at Arizona State the past two seasons and also has been an aide at North Carolina.

San Francisco State selected Dennis Creehan for football

Three Marshall assistants moved to the staff at Navy—Charlie Donnor, who will serve as offensive line coach; Sam Shaffer, receivers coach; and Jake Gonos, defensive line coach. Also joining the Navy staff are Frank Hickson, who moves from Temple to coach running backs; Pennsylvania's Jerry Hartman, secondary coach, and former Missouri assistant Carl Reese, who will be defensive coordinator and inside linebackers coach. Kevin Rogers remains at the academy as quarterbacks coach and Mike Drake moves from running backs coach to outside linebackers coach. Also, U.S. Marine Capt. Tom Reebe will continue to serve as a volunteer assistant in charge of outside linebackers. Dick Bumpas appointed defensive line coach at Notre Dame after one season in a similar position at Arkansas. The former Razorback all-America defensive tackle also has coached at Army, Air Force, Kansas State, Tennessee Tech and Tennessee. Mark Danker selected at Upper Iowa, where he also will assist with baseball.

Men's soccer—Roosevelt Lundy resigned after seven seasons at Virginia Commonwealth, where his teams compiled a 53-62-12 record.

Women's soccer—David M. Lombardo named at James Madison after seven years at Keene State, where his 1989 team was the Division II runner-up and his 1988 team was a Division II semifinalist. Lombardo, who coached his Keene State teams to a 78-35-8 record and moved the program from club to varsity status, also led the Owls to an appearance in the 1983 National Collegiate Women's Soccer Championship.

Men's and women's swimming—Villanova women's coach Chuck Horton given additional duties as men's coach. He also will serve as the school's aquatics director. Horton's women's teams have compiled a 30-9 record through three seasons. He also has been a men's and women's assistant at Alabama.

Men's and women's tennis Paul Kostin, head men's and women's coach at Arkansas-Little Rock, selected as men's coach at Virginia Commonwealth, effective in May. Kostin is a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee and chairs its Division I men's subcommittee.

Men's volleyball Vicki Wilcox appointed for the new program at Jersey City State. She is a former head women's coach at Brockport State, where she also played.

Women's volleyball—Susan Hegerle selected at San Diego after four years as an assistant at San Diego State, where she also played. Hegerle, who also has been an assistant at New Mexico and at the 1989 U.S. Olympic Festival, replaces John Martin, who was San Diego's first volleyball coach and steps down after 15 seasons to become the school's director of recreation and facilities. Jacqueline McCreary resigned after one year at Virginia Commonwealth with a 12-16 record.

STAFF

Academic counseling coordinator Martha McFadden hired at Virginia Commonwealth. She previously was on the academic counseling staff at Iowa State.

Aquatics director—Chuck Horton appointed at Villanova, where the three-year women's swimming coach also will take on duties as men's swimming coach.

Assistant to the athletics director—Dennis Creehan named assistant to the AD for fund-raising and promotions at San Francisco State, where he also will be head football coach. Barry Mynter appointed at Norwich, effective when he steps down as the school's head football coach following the 1990 season.

Assistant trainer Robert Feinman Jr. appointed at Rochester Institute of Technology after serving as a graduate assistant trainer at Canisius.

CONFERENCES

Mike Grose, sports information director at Regis (Colorado), selected to serve as information director for the new Colorado Athletic Conference, an NCAA Division II league.

NOTABLES

Joel Meyers, radio play-by-play announcer for UCLA football and basketball during the past six years, signed a long-term contract as an announcer and reporter at NBC Sports, where his assignments will include college basketball.

DEATHS

William Everett "Doc" Luckett, a football player at Stanford whose extra-point kick beat Southern California in a 1937 game in Los Angeles, died January 29 of a heart attack in Westminster, California. He was 72. Luckett became a petroleum engineer after leaving Stanford. Eugene R. Johnson, head men's basketball coach at Wichita State from 1928 to 1933 and coach of the 1936 U.S. Olympic men's basketball team, died December 27 in Overland Park, Kansas. He was 87. Johnson is credited with inventing the zone-press defense.

CORRECTION

Due to an editor's error, the Record section of the January 31 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly identified the coaching position to which Carl "Berny" Wagner, national coach coordinator for The Athletics Congress, was appointed. Wagner will be assistant men's and women's track and field coach at Western Oregon State.

Athletes' interests to be served in '90s, Schultz says

College athletes in the 1990s can expect more free time, more expenses paid by schools, fewer recruiting headaches, more help graduating and fewer hassles turning professional, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told the Butler University Board of Trustees February 5.

In addressing the issues the NCAA faces following its annual Convention last month, Schultz said, "Presidents had wanted changes for several years. You saw them get tired of waiting. The presidents did toss an olive branch, saying they would like coaches' input. If they come back next January with proposals for reductions in practice time, (presidents) might be willing to add a game or two back to the schedule."

The Convention voted to cut the length of basketball seasons from

Richard D. Schultz

28 to 25 games beginning in 1992.

"The concern is the time constraint on the athlete, and that's one thing we will see addressed," Schultz told the trustees, according to United Press International. "It doesn't mean we will keep them off the practice fields, but it will get them there when they want to be, not when they have to be."

Professional worth

Football and basketball players might not have to sacrifice college eligibility to discover their NFL or NBA value under a plan Schultz supports. The idea is similar to the way Major League Baseball and professional hockey leagues treat collegians.

"I've pushed for an eligibility-rules change regarding the draft," he said. "I would like to see athletes be able to determine their worth professionally and still be able to keep their eligibility. It would eliminate the unscrupulous agents."

"I don't have a problem with elite athletes. I'm worried about the athletes being misled about their potential, drafted in the seventh or eighth round, getting cut and not making the pros or having any eligibility. He's got nothing," Schultz said.

A plan to give Division I-A football schools autonomy in financial aid packages is another possibility, Schultz said. The move would allow schools to pay for college expenses not allowed now under NCAA regulations.

"I'm much more comfortable with that than a (cash) stipend because that would imply an employer-employee relationship," Schultz said.

Test scores

The NCAA will consider several plans to alter the way standardized test scores are used in determining eligibility, Schultz said. Coaches such as Georgetown University's John Thompson have said the tests discriminate against Blacks. Schultz envisions dropping the current mandatory minimum score in favor of a requirement integrating the score and school grades.

An increase in graduation rates is expected, Schultz said, with financial incentives possible for high graduation levels instead of athletics success. Schultz expects freshman ineligibility to be studied again.

"That is not a panacea for college athletics, but it should be considered," he said.

Cost-cutting ideas being studied for next year's gathering would cut recruiting, a major expense of the nation's major schools.

"We could make some major cuts in off-campus recruiting that would save money and address the integrity issue, as well as help recruits," Schultz said.

Schultz says schools' mistrust leads to controls on athletes

Restrictions on college athletes' outside activities are necessary in part because NCAA member schools don't trust each other, Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director, said February 5 in Indianapolis.

Any deviation from a uniform standard for all athletes, however innocent, might be perceived as giving the school or athlete an unfair advantage, Schultz said.

Schultz, who was in Indianapolis to speak to the Butler University Board of Trustees, also said the same restrictions on athletes—such as outside work, endorsements or television shows—don't apply to coaches because "coaches are professionals and the athletes are supposed to be amateurs."

"The number of coaches making a lot of money in other things such as TV shows is just a handful. But that's always a question people are going to debate," Schultz said.

He acknowledged that although NCAA rules forbid athletes accepting special favors not otherwise available to the general student population, the athletes are also governed by many restrictions that don't apply to other students.

"That's a good point," Schultz said. "It comes back to the premise that participation in athletics is not a right but a privilege. And one of the reasons for rules is to keep a level playing field. The fact an athlete can't work during the season is because schools don't trust each other. They would be worried that a legitimate job might be a cover for something else," he told Steve Herman of the Associated Press.

Schultz also said he saw no need for NCAA legislation on late-night starting times of games, primarily basketball, which often are dictated by lucrative television contracts.

"We don't regulate any in-season times," he said. "It just depends on the leverage the schools have in their contracts. It's all determined by the individual schools and conferences."

"The home team always should be able to reserve the right of saying what the starting time will be. If a school wants to say, 'We can't start a game past this time,' then the TV people know this going into the contract negotiations."

"We shouldn't have a national rule for everything," he said. "We try to regulate too much right now."

At a news conference at Butler's Hinkle Fieldhouse, Schultz said college sports are in "generally good shape." Two major issues expected to be taken up at the NCAA Convention next year are restructuring of the organization, which might include a realignment of some of the current Division I schools, and cutting expenses, he said.

"The members are educational institutions," Schultz said. "Education has to be the No. 1 priority. I think you will see major improvements."

He predicted fewer violations by member schools because the "membership has toughened the penalties. People understand that now. That's a healthy sign. You can't legislate integrity. The schools have to establish an atmosphere where the institutions themselves demand integrity, and get it."

luncheon hosted by Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, and Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-New Mexico. Athletes who will attend the luncheon include tennis player Chris Evert, NCAA track champion Vicki Huber and St. James. Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon, will announce the winner of the Women's Sports Foundation Flo Hyman Memorial Award.

Official Washington festivities will end February 9 in a meeting between President George Bush and a group of women athletes and women's sports leaders at the White House.

Many governors are signing state proclamations, some in formal ceremonies with women athletes and women's sports leaders. Gov. George Nickelson of South Dakota will sign a proclamation in a ceremony in the capitol building at which he also will present the first South Dakota Girls and Women in Sport Award to Ruth Rehn, assistant executive director of the South Dakota High School Activities Association.

Some colleges and universities have created events that involve local children. The University of Central Arkansas will feature the culmination of a statewide "hot shot" contest for middle and senior high school basketball players at half time of its basketball game with Henderson State University.

Columbia University and the University of Nebraska, Omaha, have both invited area Girl Scouts to attend their women's basketball games. Physical education students at several colleges will visit local schools to talk to children about fitness and sports.

Other events provide opportunities to try new sports or to enjoy physical activity. The Corning, New York, YMCA will feature a day of sports clinics for women February 10, while the University of Hawaii will have sports activities for children from Honolulu area youth groups. The University of Oregon will stage both a fun run and a 3-on-3 basketball tournament.

While most events celebrate achievements of women in sports, others examine issues in sports or reflect on the history of women's sports. One issue, that of the declining numbers of women coaching women's teams, will be the subject of a talk by Karen Ruder of Eastern Montana College at a meeting of the Yellowstone Valley Chapter of NOW in Billings.

A panel will examine the past and present of women's sports at Washington University (Missouri).

The sponsoring organizations also have created a position paper on three areas of concern: women in sports leadership, minorities in sports and fitness.

The paper notes that while women have achieved large gains in access to sports participation, there are still areas for improvement. For example, the position paper states that only 48.3 percent of coaches of women's teams at colleges are women, down from over 90 percent in 1972.

According to the position paper, minority women are even more underrepresented in the leadership of sports and have less access to sports opportunities than do whites. And while the numbers of women who participate regularly in sports and fitness activities are up, there are still far more women who do not receive the health benefits of regular exercise.

The Women's Sports Foundation is a nonprofit educational organization dedicated to promoting and enhancing the sports experience for all girls and women. Founded in 1974 by athletes, including Billie Jean King and Donna de Varona, the foundation provides educational services, awards programs and direct grants to women athletes.

Michigan House committee reviewing agent-control legislation

Former Detroit Tiger outfielder Jim Northrup told a Michigan House committee January 30 that legislation regulating athletics agents is needed to protect young, unsophisticated players from "sleazy" agents.

Northrup, whose 12-year career included 10 years with the Tigers, told the House Judiciary Committee, which was reviewing legislation designed to regulate athletics agents, that young players need some protection against agents who do not have their best interests at heart.

"Probably the biggest problem athletes have is in their youth," said Northrup, who played on the Tigers' 1968 World Series championship team. "There are a lot of unscrupulous people making a lot of offers to young kids."

"At least if you license the agents, you'll somewhat insulate the young players... (and) they can be told by the NCAA or colleges not to deal with agents that are unlicensed."

University of Michigan assistant football coach Lloyd Carr agreed.

Lincoln (Mo.) cancels '90 football season

Lincoln University (Missouri), which has not had a winning football season since 1972 and won just six games in the past five years, canceled its 1990 football season February 1.

Members of the school's board of curators cited funding problems and the inability to attract players before voting 5-3 to cancel the program.

"We felt it was necessary at this time to suspend the football program because we were not having much luck in fielding a team at all," said Jerrilyn Voss, a curator from Linn. "We just didn't think it was fair to the team, the coaches involved or the university as a whole to go on with it for this year."

David Harrison of Hartsburg made the proposal to suspend football while the administration studies the program to see if it can be restarted. He said members of a special task force appeared to be concerned about the number of athletes available, the Associated Press reported.

"It appeared very improbable to put any kind of reasonable football team on the field this fall," he said.

He said just 12 of the currently enrolled players would be eligible to play next season.

The football program cost Lincoln $200,000 for the fiscal year that ended last July 1, and curators were told the money could be put to use in other athletics programs.

Kyle Mason, a member of the task force who worked as a volunteer football coach last season, said he thinks the football program will return.

"This is not death knell for football at Lincoln," Mason said. "People shouldn't think that because of this decision. The program will return and it will return stronger than ever."

Lincoln was 1-10 last season, 2-9 in both 1987 and 1988, and 1-10 in both 1985 and 1986. The last winning season was 1972 when the Blue Tigers were 9-1.

Freshman quarterback Anthony Ivory of Kansas City said he understood the curators' decision. "Like they said, the program was suffering; but I think before they made that decision, they should have made the honest try to recruit more athletes for the next season," Ivory said.

"There does need to be some protection so that these young men, when they choose an agent, can select someone who is reputable," Carr said.

But Rep. Richard Bandstra asked for young people...but this bill applies to everybody," said Bandstra, R-Grand Rapids. "Why do older athletes need any more specific protections than anybody else who hires an agent?"

"There does need to be some protection so that these young men, when they choose an agent, can select someone who is reputable."

Northrup and the sponsors of the two-bill package, Reps. Michael Bennane and Kirk Profit, whether it's necessary for the state also to protect the financial interest of the older athlete.

"I can see the logic of these bills

Bennane, D-Detroit, said the failure of the state to protect all individuals from unscrupulous business practices should not be used as an argument against the bill.

Committee Chair Perry Bul-lard, D-Ann Arbor, delayed final consideration of the bill for several weeks, giving Bennane and Profit some time to work out the problems addressed by Bandstra, United Press International reported.

Under the package, individuals would be required to be licensed by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation if they planned to serve as athletics agents in Michigan. The department would issue two kinds of licenses - one for agents and one for firms of agents.

An agent would need a duplicate license for each firm represented, and an agent or firm would need a duplicate license for each location of operation.

As part of the licensing process, a disclosure statement would require agents to detail their educational background, training and experience as an agent; any convictions for felony or misdemeanor crimes that were punishable by imprisonment, and information on each owner, partner, officer and shareholder with more than 10 percent of stock in the firm.

"This bill simply gives the state some measure of control over athletics agents," said Profit, D-Ypsilanti.

The second bill in the package would establish standards for contracts between professional athletes and agents, requiring agents to make certain financial disclosures about their business partnerships in their dealings with athletes.

Each contract would have to include a notice informing athletes that they would have three business days after the date of execution to cancel the contract without cause.

Agents violating the contractual provisions could face up to one year in jail or up to $50,000 in fines, or both.

and verify the information in the self-study report. During the visit, conclusions will be discussed and, when appropriate, challenged.

"We hope that, in answering questions during the self-study, the school will look at, for example, such academic issues as its own graduation rate, grade-point averages and standardized test scores required for admission. If there's a discrepancy (between the athletics program and the institution as a whole), we'll ask them to justify it. If they can, fine. But we want them to think about why they differ and how the standards were arrived at."

Besides academic issues, a school will be asked to address such "areas of certification" as its purpose and mission, governance and administrative issues, financial issues, the conduct of student-athletes and coaches, and commitment to rules compliance.

Following the campus visit, the institution will be asked to submit to the NCAA staff a revised self-study report that establishes goals consistent with institutional standards and sets forth plans for achieving those goals. After a review of the revised report, a certification decision will be issued.

Probably the only major difference between the NCAA's proposed certification procedure and a typical academic accreditation procedure is the absence of a "peer-review" process in the NCAA plan.

When an academic program is reviewed for accreditation, representatives of similar programs typically visit the school to inspect the program. The NCAA certification procedure will not include such a step, partly because it is difficult to organize and partly because NCAA institutions have indicated they are uneasy about the concept, especially since review and certification standards have not been finalized.

According to Weare, the entire certification process should be completed in about five months. Typically, the institution will take 90 days to complete its self-study. Then, it will take approximately 30 days to complete the verification visit and prepare the NCAA's response. The institution will have another 30 days to revise its self-study report, then the certification decision will follow within 15 days of the NCAA's receipt of the revised report.

By the end of 1991, all of the institutions that participate in the pilot program should complete the process and receive a ruling from the national office. Then, the compliance services staff will compile results of the reviews—including information it has collected about institutions' standards and the best ways to evaluate athletics programs' adherence to those standards—and seek a decision on whether the certification program will be made mandatory for all of Division I.

Weare also hopes the pilot program will provide the NCAA membership with information that will allow it to determine what standards of operation for athletics programs are appropriate.

How to volunteer

Qualified institutions interested in volunteering for the program should mail a written request to John H. Leavens, NCAA assistant executive director for compliance services.

"We're looking for a cross-section of participating institutions, in terms of location as well as classification. Also, we'll look at the type of institution—for example, whether it's urban or rural; public or private; has a separate, incorporated athletics department or a contained university department," Weare said.

Questions about the certification procedure should be directed to Weare, who can provide more detailed information.

Bill to require full Pell Grant fizzles

The Nebraska Legislature has refused to advance a bill that would require any university or college in the state to award the full amount of a Pell Grant to a student-athlete.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, was targeted at the NCAA, which recently adopted legislation that will allow Division I institutions to give a student-athlete up to $1,700 of a Pell Grant in addition to a full athletics grant-in-aid, if the student-athlete qualifies for that amount without exceeding the cost of education at the institution. The NCAA legislation, which goes into effect August 1, raises the Pell Grant allowance from $1,400.

Chambers' bill failed to receive the required 25 votes for first-round approval. The vote in the 49-member assembly was 18-9 in favor of the bill. The sponsor still has the option of designating the proposal as his priority bill for the session, which would ensure further debate before the session ends.

The bill was opposed by Sen. Jim McFarland of Lincoln, a former football player at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, who also played in the National Football League.

According to United Press International, McFarland argued that the bill would force a confrontation between Division I-A member Nebraska and the NCAA that would result in such penalties as a reduction in grants-in-aid.

Chambers rejected the argument, saying that state law would supersede NCAA rules. As written, the bill would have prohibited the NCAA from taking action against an institution that awarded a full Pell Grant to a student-athlete and would have subjected the NCAA to a fine of not less than $2,500 for taking such action.

Although Chambers lost the battle over Pell Grants, he won another when Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr signed into law his bill allowing state universities to sue the NCAA for a violation of due process in disciplinary hearings (see January 31 issue of The NCAA News).

Orr signed the bill without comment February 1.

Irish sign TV pact outside CFA deals with ABC, ESPN

The University of Notre Dame and NBC have reached an agreement in which NBC Sports will nationally televise all of Notre Dame's home football games for a five-year period beginning in 1991.

The announcement was made jointly February 5 by Notre Dame Executive Vice-President E. William Beauchamp; Richard A. Rosenthal, director of athletics, and NBC officials.

The five-year pact covering 30 games will be worth more to Notre Dame than its projected earnings from the proposed College Football Association pact over the same time period, the school said in a news release.

Beauchamp, the university's chief financial officer as well as chair of the faculty board in control of athletics, said the university administration has directed that the bulk of the funds coming to Notre Dame from the NBC pact be invested to provide financial aid for students demonstrating need.

No. 1 priority

"The trustees of the university have made increased financial aid their No. 1 priority, and our ability to make the goal a reality was of paramount importance in our decisions. This helps us attain our goal of meeting the financial needs of all qualified applicants and will ensure admission to Notre Dame on merit alone," Beauchamp said.

Two other objectives of the agreement are the consistent national television exposure it will provide to university alumni and fans who face increasing difficulty in obtaining tickets to home games—and consistent kickoff times for those games. Virtually all Irish home games are expected to kick off at 1:30 p.m. Eastern time beginning in '91, the school said.

"For all practical purposes, all our home games have been sold out since 1965. We face an escalating demand for tickets every season, and even contributing alumni must go through a lottery to have a chance to obtain tickets for home games," Rosenthal said.

Fans a concern

"We face a demand for television exposure of our games from fans and alumni not just in our immediate area, but all over the country. This assures us that fans everywhere will be able to view our games on television, even if they are unable to obtain tickets.

"In addition, this agreement will provide uniform kickoff times for home games. In recent years, our schedule, team, fans and other campus activities have been disrupted by starting times that ranged from 11:30 a.m. until 8 p.m."

NBC Sports President Dick Ebersol cited the perennial excellence of Notre Dame's program, the national character of its alumni and student bodies, and the coast-to-coast nature of the Irish schedule as keys to NBC's interest.

"NBC's regard for regular-season college football always has been tempered by our longstanding contract with Major League Baseball. But the expiration of that agreement following the 1989 season opened scheduling windows that had not previously been available to us," Ebersol said.

Notre Dame will play 30 home games (six each year) during the five-year period—with 16 other teams benefiting from national television exposure as part of the pact.

Notre Dame's agreement with NBC means the university will not participate in the CFA's five year television package with ABC. The package also is scheduled to begin with the 1991 season.

However, Notre Dame's contract with NBC covers only Irish home games. When Notre Dame plays on the road, the Irish could still make national or regional appearances on ABC or ESPN as part of those networks' contracts with the CFA and with the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences.

Remains in CFA

The university plans to remain a member of the CFA, although it will not be part of its television package.

"Notre Dame's involvement with the CFA has been primarily based on its existence as a vehicle to propose NCAA legislation on behalf of Division I-A schools, as well as to promote and reward academic excellence and degree progress by athletes," Beauchamp said.

The agreement with NBC is not expected to substantially change the overall amount of television exposure received by Notre Dame's football team, the school announced.

Schools seek end to outbursts by scheduling contests at neutral sites

North Carolina Central University and North Carolina A&T State University have salvaged their 60-year athletics rivalry by announcing that future basketball and football contests between the two predominantly black schools will be played at neutral locations.

"This joint agreement is historic. It is a signal to the world that two great universities can, when confronted with challenges, move quickly to resolve the issue at hand," North Carolina A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort said January 30.

The decision was necessitated by a free-for-all in the second half of the January 18 basketball game between the two schools, members of two separate conferences.

After two players engaged in shoving, fans stormed the court from the stands and overwhelmed security officers. Videotapes of the incident showed students swinging chairs at each other, and eyewitnesses said some members of the pep band actually used their musical instruments as weapons.

Seven people were hurt in the fight. Five North Carolina A&T basketball players involved in the fight were placed on probation. North Carolina Central, which won the NCAA Division II national title last season, placed six players on probation for the incident.

With probation, none of the players has sat out any subsequent games; but if any of them are involved in a fight again this season, they will be suspended for one game. A third fight would suspend a player for the entire season, the Associated Press reported.

Shortly after the brawl, officials considered ending the rivalry between the schools, separated by 60 miles of interstate highway but fierce competitors since the 1930s. Tyrone R. Richmond, North Carolina Central chancellor, said that option was considered but dropped quickly.

"They are campuses which have supported one another across a number of fronts, both academically and athletically, for years," Fort said. "There was no way that we were going to allow all that to be rent asunder because of the happenstance of one unfortunate incident. No way."

Women's track a new varsity sport

The University of Notre Dame will elevate women's track and field to a varsity sport for the 1991 season, according to Richard A. Rosenthal, director of athletics.

The women will compete both indoors and outdoors, and they will be coached by Joe Piane, who is head men's track coach. Men's assistant coaches Tim Connelly and Scott Winsor also will help with the women's programs.

"The addition of track as a varsity sport for women falls in line with the expanding role of women on the campus as a whole," Rosenthal said. "The number of women in the student body has grown to where women now represent about one-third of the total undergraduate enrollment. As their numbers have increased, we've expanded the athletics offerings to women as well," he said.

The addition of track will give the school nine varsity sports for women.

Furman cuts swimming teams

The Furman University Board of Trustees has voted to eliminate the men's and women's varsity swim teams on the recommendation of a special committee.

Dr. M. B. Morrow, a trustee who heads the board's athletics committee, said, "It is not something we wanted to do, and swimming certainly was not targeted as a sport we could cut. But the committee reached the conclusion that Furman could no longer adequately support 20 varsity sports at today's cost."

The action becomes effective at the end of the school year. Twenty-three men and women swimmers receive scholarship aid, and Morrow said the university will honor those grants through the 1992-93 academic year.

Ray Parlier, director of athletics, said the money saved from the elimination of the program, which was $155,000 for the current year, will not go back into the athletics budget.

"The subcommittee will continue to look into ways the athletics department can control spending," Morrow said.

Furman President John E. Johns said, "We will honor their scholarships until graduation, and we will do all we can to help them transfer to another school if that is what they prefer."

"We also want to make it clear that the Paladin Aquatic Club, a swimming organization for young people in the community, will not be affected by these changes."

Task force at Georgia will begin study of athletes' academic success

University of Georgia President Charles B. Knapp said he will appoint a task force to look at the academic success of student-athletes.

The university council, made up primarily of faculty members, recently turned down a specific proposal for such a study by a 55-51 vote. Some council members contended that the proposal from its committee on intercollegiate athletics duplicated work already being done by another committee or asked wrong or unnecessary questions.

The proposed study was in part a reaction to critical comments from members of Georgia's 1980 football team in a January 5 article in U.S. News & World Report. The article provided profiles of 12 offensive players from that team and noted that only three of the 12 received degrees.

Although Knapp said he had not made up his mind about the composition of the task force or its charge, he said faculty members, athletics association representatives and possibly student-athletes would be asked to serve.

"As it happens, there are conflicting pressures involving different constituencies. My problem is to find a reasonable high ground where everybody can stand up," he said January 31.

While different points of view might be represented, Knapp said the primary motive for all would be the welfare of the student-athlete, the Associated Press reported.

"We don't want some kind of microscopic experiment, especially when we have NCAA and a lot of other data. You know, what strikes me is the absence of the voice of the student-athlete. That's one group that needs representation, the student-athlete," he said.

To critics who argue that athletes are exploited by coaches and schools, Knapp said, "I am not comfortable with the idea that coaches do not have the best interests of the athletes in mind. I know (football coach) Ray Goff cares."

Knapp said it was logical that his office should organize such a study, since it is the only post that involves all the interested parties.

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q Do NCAA rules permit institutions to schedule games against professional teams? If so, in which sports are such games permitted?

A Yes. Bylaw 17.01.2 states that an NCAA member "may compete against professional teams in any sport but otherwise shall not schedule intercollegiate athletics contests in conjunction with professional sports contests or exhibitions (e.g., as a preliminary event)."

● Recent meetings involving NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and NFL officials—including Commissioner Paul Tagliabue—were not scheduled or intended to deal specifically with this issue.

● Although Schultz suggested last month at the Association's annual Convention that underclassmen should be permitted to enter pro drafts and determine their value without losing eligibility, he was not suggesting major reform of NCAA rules. He merely was pointing out that differences in draft administration from sport to sport have produced inconsistencies that, it can be argued, are keeping college football and men's basketball players from getting (without loss of eligibility) the kind of information their baseball- and hockey-playing counterparts have been gathering for years.

"The NCAA's position goes back several years," said Schultz, "and maintains that student-athletes have a right to leave college any time they want to. The professional leagues establish the rules for their drafts, not the NCAA."

Since the Convention, Schultz has met with Tagliabue and, most recently, with Moyer and other NFL officials. Neither meeting was called specifically to discuss underclassmen in the draft.

"My meeting with the commissioner was scheduled well before the issue started making headlines," Schultz explained. "It was a get-acquainted session. Neither of us really knew the other very well. We covered a wide variety of topics, not just underclassmen leaving school early."

When Schultz met with Moyer and other NFL officials February 2 in Chicago, the implication that the meeting was held just because McCants, Smith and a few other college juniors had announced their departure from school was not accurate. "Meetings like this one are held annually with members of the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee and representatives of all the professional sports leagues," Schultz said.

He turned some heads last month in Dallas with the following statements, made during his "State of the Association" address: "Athletes should have the opportunity to determine their professional sports value through your career counseling panels by entering the draft and evaluating the financial offer without losing eligibility."

College football and men's basketball players can't do that now. But baseball and hockey players can—and sometimes have, even before they set foot on a college campus.

"Baseball and hockey sometimes draft players right out of high school," Schultz noted. "Those players have an opportunity to determine their value and make a decision regarding their future without losing intercollegiate eligibility."

"In basketball and football, athletes who have not exhausted their eligibility must submit their names, and by doing so, forfeit any remaining eligibility."

"If we could get them (pro football and basketball leagues) to change their rules for drafting players to more resemble what baseball and hockey have, athletes would not have to declare—and those who are good enough would be drafted."

In essence, Schultz pointed out that the Association really has no rules regarding professional drafts that need to be changed—if NFL guidelines, for example, were modified appropriately.

"The NFL has problems with that," he added. "Owners are concerned that they'd lose a draft pick by selecting a player who would choose not to turn pro. And I believe they don't want to draft underclassmen because the majority of college-age football players are not physically ready to play in the NFL."

Marginal prospects appear to be both sides' major concern. Schultz said that some of the motivation for what could be as many as three dozen underclassmen making themselves available for the 1990 draft has been generated by the rhetoric of unscrupulous agents. "Talk has been circulating about an NFL salary structure being implemented in the future," he said, "and some agents are using that talk to convince underclassmen to come out now—to have a chance at that big contract."

"My concern is for those marginal players. One thing I have urged in discussion with the NFL is that franchises guarantee underclassmen (who leave school early) that their college expenses will be paid at whatever time they might choose to finish work on their degrees."

At this point, nobody knows for sure how this all will turn out. Through the morning of February 6, only this much was certain:

● Seven players officially had announced their intention to leave school early: McCants, Smith, Arkansas' Barry Foster, Georgia's Rodney Hampton, Tennessee's Reggie Cobb, Virginia's Marcus Wilson and Pittsburgh's Marc Spindler.

● News services reported February 5 and 6 that Southern California's Junior Seau and West Virginia's Major Harris were on the verge of announcing their decisions to leave college for the pros.

● The NCAA has not and will not attempt to keep underclassmen from leaving school at any time, for any reason.

● The NFL will in some way modify its draft rules relating to underclassmen before the April 1990 round of selections.

● The issue has stirred as much—if not more—public debate as any college-sports-related topic in recent history.

Pros, cons of underclass draft

Few issues regarding college sports have generated as much public comment as the situation involving underclassmen and the National Football League draft. Following are comments that have been published around the country in the past few weeks from individuals on all sides of the issue.

Joe Paterno, head football coach, Pennsylvania State University (The New York Times): "I may be mistaken, but I think a parallel will develop between what's happening now in college football and what has happened with the 'hardship cases' in the National Basketball Association. College basketball has survived and prospered. College football is just as strong, and equally resilient."

John Mackovic, director of athletics and head football coach, University of Illinois, Champaign (Athletic Administration magazine): "The concept that an athlete needs to take the money as soon as possible is reflective of poor judgment and shortsightedness. Performance, not potential, is rewarded in professional sports. An athlete signs his first contract based on performance and contributions to his team. Every general manager has the statistics available to barter future contracts, and if you prove your worth, the clubs pay a premium. A question may be, 'Why jeopardize future earnings by being less than prepared early in a professional career?'"

Barry Foster, student-athlete, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville

(Associated Press): "Any money I make will be more than I would make in college. I have to take care of some personal business, and entering the draft will help a lot. There is a pressing financial concern... I need to help my family."

Keith McCants, student-athlete, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa (Associated Press): "I truly believe that it is now time for me to move on. With the chance to play in the NFL, I have the opportunity to provide financial security for myself and my family. I would be more than happy to play anywhere in the NFL. There are more than 600,000 college football players in the country, and I feel fortunate to have a chance to be one of the top draft choices."

NCAA staff

"office services" center (offering shipping and duplicating services) and the NCAA Visitors Center.

"I don't believe we would have accomplished this without all the help," said Hunter, who noted that many staff members contributed "substantial" time beyond their regular duties to the project.

On May 4, 1988, shortly before announcing plans for the new building to the public, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz showed drawings of the proposed facility to staff members and stated his intention to involve the staff in its design.

Under Hunter's direction, efforts to organize and coordinate staff participation began immediately.

Hunter said staff members became involved in the project at three levels: as members of the NCAA business department staff, which was given responsibility for managing the project; as members of other NCAA departments, which worked with architects to plan their own work areas, or as members of various task forces that were created to work on special projects.

Previous NCAA building projects essentially were managed by one person, according to Hunter—construction of the current headquarters building in Mission, Kansas, was supervised in 1972 and 1973 by Arthur J.

Bergstrom and the Association's expansion into a second Mission building was overseen in 1981 and 1982 by Louis J. Spry.

But the Overland Park project made bigger demands on the Association's staff.

Unprecedented

"Pretty quickly, it became apparent that this wasn't like anything we had ever done," Hunter said. "It was pretty clear that this couldn't be done by one person, even full-time."

In addition to Hunter, business staff members who have worked day-to-day on the project are Suzanne E. Mason, NCAA personnel manager; William C. Foreman, building manager; Marla B. Gleason, office services center manager; and Janice M. Eckinger, a departmental secretary.

Other key members of the new building's project management team are Robert E. Sprenger, NCAA assistant executive director for the visitors center and special projects, and Susan J. Mosby of Calcara Duffendack Foss Manlove Inc., the new building's interior architects.

Staff members in other departments initially became involved through the creation of a "move committee," which included a move coordinator (an administrative staff member) and an assistant coordinator (a non-administrative staff member) from each NCAA staff department and a representative of the NCAA Foundation.

"Their main responsibility was to coordinate and serve as a liaison between us and that department," Hunter said. "At different times in the project, that meant different things."

In the project's early days, the committee helped coordinate each department's participation in the design of the interior space of the building. Since last summer, it has been involved primarily in planning for the physical move of the Association staff into the new building.

The committee also has been an important means of providing information to each department's staff about the progress of building planning and construction and soliciting staff opinions.

Involved staff

Coordinators and assistant coordinators from each department on the committee are Shirley Whitacre and Jennifer L. Wright, representing the administration department; Mason and Eckinger, business; Karl D. Benson and Juanita G. Pullen, championships; James A. Marchiony and Susan C. Eiserman, communications; Kevin C. Lennon and Lisa D. Summers, compliance services; Charles E. Smrt and Cynthia J. Gabel, enforcement; Richard J. Evrard and Deborah A. Krivjansky, legislative services; Wallace I. Renfro and Leanne S. Strong, publishing; Will J. Rudd and Sherry R. Nelson, visitors center and special projects, and Lydia L. Sanchez and Pamela J. Broyles, executive.

Other move committee members are Dana Dean, representing the NCAA Foundation; Phyllis M. Tonn of the executive group; Daniel W. Spencer, director of data processing, and Hunter.

Many of the move committee members also are involved in another level of staff planning—the special task forces.

Ten current staff members and a former staff member have served as members of the task force to plan the new office services center. Cochaired by Mason and Foreman, the committee's members are Maxine Alejos, circulation manager; Mary A. Empson, an administration department secretary, and Eckinger, Eiserman, Gabel, Krivjansky, Pullen and Tonn. Former legislative services secretary Claudia Caton also served in the group.

The task force to plan the visitors center began its work by studying how similar attractions are organized and operated and is now busy preparing for the center's opening later this year. Originally chaired by Hunter and now chaired by Sprenger, the committee also has counted Patricia E. Bork, assistant executive director for championships; Victor M. Royal, director of graphics; Marvin Manlove, a principal of the CDFM architectural firm, and Benson, Marchiony and Renfro as members.

Another task force was formed to make recommendations about furniture needs. This group considered ways to reuse much of the furniture in the current NCAA buildings and examined samples of new furniture. Members of the panel, chaired by Hunter, were Broyles, Foreman, Renfro and Spry of the NCAA staff and Mosby and Debra Ryan of CDFM.

A fourth task force was created to recommend and select appropriate decor for common areas of the building. This art and plants task force, chaired by Mason, also includes Wayne O. Davis, publishing production assistant; Richard R. Hilliard, director of enforcement; Donna L. Hockersmith, a championships department secretary, and Sanchez as members.

Next week, this series will continue with an article on the new NCAA national office building and its features.

The NCAA's move into its new national office building in Overland Park, Kansas, is scheduled Friday through Sunday, February 23-25.

Beginning February 26, the Association will have a new mailing address and telephone number. The address will be:

NCAA
6201 College Boulevard
Overland Park, Kansas
66211-2422

The Association's new telephone number will be 913/339-1906.

During the move, the NCAA's current national office buildings will be closed.

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS North Carolina State University

North Carolina State University invites applications and nominations for the position of Director of Athletics. The University, a member of the NCAA Division I and the Atlantic Coast Conference, serves approximately 550 student-athletes in 13 men's and 11 women's intercollegiate sports. The Department of Athletics has an annual budget of about $12 million.

POSITION DESCRIPTION: The Director of Athletics is the principal administrator of the Department of Athletics. The Director must provide leadership for an athletics program that is consistent with the goals and ideals of the University, including the academic and personal development of the student-athletes. The programs must comply with NCAA, ACC, and University rules and regulations, as well as Title IX and Affirmative Action guidelines. The Director is responsible for the overall operation of the Department of Athletics, including all intercollegiate athletics programs, personnel, budget, and facilities. The Director must communicate and work effectively with the NCSU Council on Athletics, University officials, coaches, alumni, booster groups, the media and the public. The Director reports to the Chancellor.

QUALIFICATIONS: Candidates must have a baccalaureate degree, but an advanced degree is preferred. Ideally the candidate would possess substantial experience in athletics administration at a major University with recognized men's and women's programs, but candidates with comparable experience in other executive or senior management positions will be considered. The candidate must have superior leadership ability, sound fiscal and personnel management skills, proven communication skills, public relations and fund-raising abilities, and a demonstrated commitment to the educational objectives of a high quality public university.

DATE OF APPOINTMENT: Negotiable. Salary and fringe benefits are competitive.

Applications should include a current resume, a cover letter describing qualifications for the position, and names, addresses and telephone numbers of five references who may be contacted.

Review of applications will begin on March 15, 1990, and continue until a suitable applicant is found.

Nominations and applications of qualified individuals should be sent to:

Chair
Director of Athletics Search Committee
Campus Box 7501
North Carolina State University
Raleigh, NC 27695-7501

North Carolina State University is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer and encourages applications from women and members of minority groups.

NYSP Committee approves new projects

The National Youth Sports Program Committee approved eight new projects for 1990, bringing the total number of projects to 140.

The committee, which met in San Diego January 27-29, reviewed 24 preapplications, which presented information about tentative budgets, community needs, and institutional support and facilities.

Schools approved as project hosts were Barber-Scotia College, Bowie State University, Howard Community College, Jarvis Christian College in Texas, Los Angeles (California) Southwest College, Mott Community College in Michigan, Talladega College in Alabama and Wichita State University in Kansas.

The new projects will receive technical assistance during an on-site visit by an NYSP Committee member or NCAA staff member. In addition, project personnel will attend national and regional workshops.

NYSP's next national workshop is March 1-3 in Washington, D.C. Project administrators or activity directors from all NYSP projects are required to attend.

Workshop topics include changes in guidelines for 1990, regional workshops, extended programming, technical assistance and pilot programming. In addition, the national workshop gives project representatives an opportunity to provide information about NYSP to their representatives in Congress.

In other actions, the NYSP Committee reorganized groupings for this year's 22 regional workshops.

Regional workshops are attended by auxiliary staff members and are presented during the months of March, April, May and June. Committee members will lead discussions on such topics as innovative programming for 14- to 16-year-olds, parental involvement, pilot programming of student-athlete mentoring, nutrition and health, drug education, and career development.

The committee also revised NYSP guidelines for projects' drug-education specialists and auxiliary staffs. The drug-education specialist shall be a drug-education professional who has considerable experience and expertise in the field. The auxiliary staff, which includes the drug-education specialist, will be required to be in attendance at a project site and actively involved during hours of operation.

The committee also revised the percentages of time devoted to sports programming and special programming in NYSP extended programs, which operate from October to May. Time for special programming, such as cultural events, was increased from 20 to 40 percent, enabling projects to take advantage of the variety of events that are held on campuses during the academic year.

Golf reinstated

Alfred University will offer golf as an intercollegiate sport beginning next fall, 13 years after the school was forced to drop the sport due to financial problems and lack of participation.

The sport will be open to both men and women, according to Eugene Castrovilla, director of athletics.

A coach has not been named.
