1990 Convention rewrote all attendance records

The 1990 NCAA Convention in Dallas rewrote every NCAA record for Convention attendance, according to an audit of Convention registrations.

Total Convention attendance was 275 persons higher than ever before, with 2,171 registered compared to the previous high mark of 1,896 in 1989. It was the biggest one-year increase in the Association's Convention records.

Every membership division also established attendance records for both number and percentage of division members in attendance.

In Division I, every active member institution was represented—293 of 293—as was every Division I-A and I-AA conference. The only absentees in Division I were 10 Division I-AAA conferences, and most of those were non-voting conferences.

Division II had 173 of its 194 institutions and 18 of its 21 conferences in Dallas, while Division III had 230 of 315 institutions and 21 of 35 conferences.

The records

Convention attendance records were set as follows:

- Total registrants—2,171. Old record: 1,896, San Francisco, 1989.

- Organizations represented—959. Old record: 881 in 1989.

- Registered voters—769. Old record: 755 in 1989. The percentage of registered voters, 87.3, also is a record, better than the 86 percent posted in 1989.

- Active member institutions—696. Old record: 687 in 1989.

- Division I members—334. Old record: 330 in 1989. Division I percentage: 97.1, better than the 95.8 in New Orleans in 1986.

- Division II members—191. Old record: 183 in 1989. Division II percentage: 88.8, better than 86 percent in San Diego in 1987.

- Division III members—251. Old record: 248 in 1989. Division III percentage: 71.7, better than 71.3, also in 1989.

Other data

The Convention total included 1,736 delegates from active members.

Distribution of revenue under study

Suggestions from more than 200 NCAA member institutions are being reviewed by the Special NCAA Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenue. The committee met February 21-22 in Chicago and has scheduled additional meetings for April 2 and May 4-5.

"The committee received tremendous response from the membership, in the areas of enhancement of academic and educational programs, the welfare of student-athletes, championships funding, and expansion of existing programs and services," said Judith M. Sweet, chair of the committee and NCAA secretary-treasurer.

Sweet said committee members considered options for distribution of revenues generated by the Association's new championships television contract, but no specific actions were taken.

She said several principles were discussed that will be considered in See Distribution, page 2

An end to automatic qualification sought in Division III field hockey

The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Field Hockey Committee has voted to recommend to the Association's Executive Committee that automatic qualification be eliminated for the Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Ten of the 16 Division III championship berths are allocated to regions (two to each of five regions). It is the sense of the subcommittee that no other slots should be allocated to a specific group. The subcommittee has not recommended a conference for automatic qualification the past two years and did not have a recommendation this year.

In other actions, the Field Hockey Committee, which met February 20-23 in Kansas City, Missouri, voted to modify playing rules related to scoring, substitutions, injury timeouts and the administration of penalty strokes during a tiebreaker. In order for a goal to be scored, the ball must be on or within the 25-yard line when hit or deflected by the stick of an attacker. Previously, a goal could be scored from anywhere on the field.

The substitution rule has been liberalized to allow unlimited substitution between the final overtime field-play period and the first series of penalty strokes in a tiebreaker. Formerly, substitution was banned during this interval. This change will allow coaches to select strokers.

Interaction between coaches and players on the field during injury timeouts was restricted. A coach may not communicate with players who are on the field when an injury timeout is called. This does not preclude an official from permitting a coach to attend to the injured player.

During a tiebreaker, the official will address the goalkeeper first and the stroker second when administering penalty strokes. This is the same procedure that is used during regulation play.

The committee will recommend an increase of $10 in all officials' fees. Field officials would receive $80 for first- and second-round and regional games and $95 for semifinal, third-place and championship games. Alternate officials would receive $55 and $60, respectively.

The Division I subcommittee will recommend that the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference receive automatic qualification to the 1990 championship and that Rutgers University, New Brunswick, serve as host institution.

The Division III subcommittee will recommend that playing days for the regionals and finals be changed from Friday and Saturday to Saturday and Sunday. The subcommittee also will recommend that 20 teams be ranked in the Division III field hockey poll instead of 10. If 20 teams can be ranked, the subcommittee recommends that the power-rating system currently used by Division I be added to the selection criteria for Division III.

ber institutions, 128 from member conferences, 34 representing affiliated members, 17 corresponding members, 106 registered as visitors and 150 news media representatives.

Every member in District 6 (which includes Texas) was at the Convention—44 of 44. All members but one from District 7 were there (24 of 25), as were 59 of 64 from District 8 and 54 of 60 from District 5.

Division I-A institutions sent an average of 4.45 delegates each, I-AA institutions averaged 3.22 delegates and I-AAA institutions had 2.53 each. The overall Division I average was 3.44 delegates per institution. In Divisions II and III, the averages were 2.02 and 1.07 per institution, respectively.

Although it is not in the attendance category, one Convention record was not bettered—the number of legislative proposals faced by the delegates. Counting all submitted amendments-to-amendments and other proposals, this year's total was 168, one more than last year. The record is 14 years old—257 proposals at the 1976 annual Convention in St. Louis.

RPI athletes join safe-driving effort

A group of student-athletes at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is working with New York Gov. Mario M. Cuomo's office to teach youngsters in Troy, New York, about the dangers of drinking and driving.

The program, Student Athletes Against Drunk Driving, was proposed by Tim Sherwin, a former professional football player with the Indianapolis Colts and New York Giants and now assistant director of Gov. Cuomo's Athletes Against Drunk Driving program, and Carol German, assistant dean of students at Rensselaer.

Sherwin, German and Rensselaer football coach Joe King began recruiting student-athletes for the program last fall. So far, 32 athletes from women's basketball, men's hockey, field hockey and football have begun taking their message to 16 sixth-grade classes in six Troy schools.

"We put together pairs of student-athletes to go into each of the 16 sixth-grade classes in the Troy Public Schools to talk with students," said German. "The athletes helped to design the presentations."

During the April and May meetings, committee members will review tentative cost figures for various options in numerous areas recommended by the membership.

Sweet said the committee at its April meeting will discuss a schedule for conducting hearings to provide the membership additional opportunities to offer suggestions.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 9

NCAA Convention Proposal Nos. 125, 126, 128, 129 and 130—sports camps and clinics

At the 1990 NCAA Convention, the Division I membership adopted Proposal Nos. 125, 126, 128, 129 and 130 relating to sports camps and clinics. Convention Proposal No. 128 (Bylaw 13.12.1.1) defines a Division I institution's sports camp or instructional clinic as any camp or clinic that is owned or operated by a member institution or an employee of the member institution's athletics department, either on or off its campus, and in which prospective student-athletes participate. With the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 130 (Bylaw 13.12.1.2.1), a Division I institution's sports camp or clinic shall be one that: (1) places special emphasis on a particular sport or sports and provides specialized instruction, practice or competition; (2) involves activities designed to improve overall skills and general knowledge in the sport, or (3) offers a diversified experience without emphasis on instruction, practice or competition in any particular sport.

In the sports of Division I football and basketball, the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 129 (Bylaw 13.12.1.2.2) prohibits a Division I member institution from conducting its football or basketball camp or clinic except during the months of June, July and August, unless such activities meet the provisions regarding developmental clinics set forth in Bylaw 13.11.3.1. In addition, Convention Proposal No. 126 (Bylaw 13.12.2.3.1) prohibits coaching staff members in the sports of Division I football and men's basketball from being employed by (either on a salaried or volunteer basis) or lecturing at a noninstitutional (i.e., privately owned) football or basketball camp or clinic in which prospective student-athletes participate.

The NCAA Interpretations Committee, during its February 8, 1990, conference, reviewed Convention Proposal Nos. 126 and 128 as they relate to both institutional and private camps and clinics. The committee determined the following:

1. An individual coach must be at least a majority owner (51 percent of the camp or clinic) in order to be considered an "owner" of an institution's sports camp or instructional clinic.

2. An individual coach must be personally and directly responsible for the management and operation of a sports camp or an instructional clinic in order to be considered an "operator" of the camp or clinic.

Thus, a coach who does not meet the criteria set forth in Item No. 1 or 2 above could not be employed by or lecture at the camp, inasmuch as such a camp would be considered a noninstitutional camp. Please note that the Interpretations Committee has agreed that any Division I member institution's coach involved in a contractual relationship with a noninstitutional summer sports camp or clinic may submit such a contract to the NCAA for review by legal counsel in order to determine whether the individual may be permitted to participate in the camp or clinic for the summer of 1990 only. Such contracts must have been executed prior to January 9, 1990. Please note that the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 126 would not preclude a member institution's coach from being employed by or lecturing at coaching clinics for high school coaches, provided prospective student-athletes do not participate in such clinics. Also, the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 126 was not intended to preclude member institutions' coaching staff members from being employed at another member institution's sports camp or clinic during the applicable period.

A camp or clinic that meets the definition of an institutional sports camp or instructional clinic shall be open to any and all entrants (limited only by number and age), except that a senior prospective student-athlete shall not be permitted to enroll, participate or be employed at any such sports camp or clinic. A senior prospect is a prospective student-athlete who is eligible for admission to a member institution or who has started classes for the senior year in high school. It should be noted that a private camp that utilizes a member institution's facilities but is not owned or operated by a member institution or any of its employees would not be subject to the restrictions set forth in Bylaw 13.12.1.3 regarding senior prospective student-athletes. Finally, in accordance with Bylaw 13.12.1.6.1, an institution, members of its staff or representatives of its athletics interests shall not employ or give free or reduced admission privileges to a high school, preparatory school or two-year college athletics award winner. For purposes of this rule, a high school includes the ninth-grade level, regardless of whether the ninth grade is part of a junior high school system.

With the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 125 (Bylaw 13.12.2.3.1), no athletics department staff member in any sport may be employed either on a salaried or a volunteer basis by a camp or clinic established, sponsored or conducted by an individual organization that provides recruiting or scouting services concerning prospective student-athletes.

Developmental clinics (including competition conducted in conjunction with the clinic) involving prospects may be conducted at any time during the year, provided:

1. They are designed to develop fundamental skills in a sport (rather than to refine the abilities of skilled participants in the sport);

2. They are open to the general public (except for restrictions in age or number of participants);

3. They are conducted by and subject to the control of the host member institution;

4. They are conducted primarily for educational purposes and do not include material benefits for the participants (e.g., awards, prizes, merchandise gifts);

5. Clinic participants do not receive a recruiting presentation, and

6. Clinic participants reside in the state in which the host institution is located or within 100 miles of the host institution.

Please note that senior prospective student-athletes may enroll or participate (but may not be employed) in an institution's developmental clinic.

(Note: The next Legislative Assistance column will include information regarding Divisions II and III sports camps and clinics.)

Unpacking

More than 180 NCAA staff members spent much of their first day in the new national office building arranging office furniture and unpacking boxes. # Olympic Committee scales down administrative structure

The House of Delegates, the U.S. Olympic Committee's major governing body for more than a decade, has voted itself out of existence.

The more than 400-member house of delegates approved a legislative package February 11 in Phoenix that has been in the works since the Olympic Overview Commission was formed in February 1988.

In place of the house of delegates, a board of directors with 100 members is now the body that will carry out the objectives of the USOC. The board will meet three times a year, unless otherwise decided by the constituency.

The 14-member administrative committee has been replaced by the 16-member executive committee and will meet as often as needed. The executive committee will supervise the conduct of the business affairs of the USOC according to the policy guidelines prescribed by the board.

The previous responsibilities of the 93-member executive board in the old system now will be divided between the board of directors and the executive committee.

Despite the elimination of the house of delegates as a governing body, the proposed USOC constitutional changes were amended to ensure that an annual convention of the membership will be held. Members of the Olympic family will be invited to attend the convention at their own expense.

The USOC's organizational changes came two years after the formation of the Olympic Overview Commission. After the commission made its recommendations at the 1989 house of delegates, the USOC's legislation committee spent the following year refining the recommended changes to the constitution and bylaws in agreement with the membership.

In an organizational structure presented by USOC President Robert H. Helmick, the USOC was presented as a body that has three major functions. They are: a general assembly of sports bodies that functions as a congress, a member services association that provides common services to its members and a sports-business corporation that handles all business-related aspects of the organization.

Helmick sees medal gain as result of more funding

Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said the recent streamlining of the organization, combined with additional corporate funding, should translate into dozens of medals in the 1992 Winter and Summer Games.

The USOC expects to raise in excess of $100 million more from 1989 to 1992 than it did in the previous four years. It also plans to reduce costs and administrative expenses, a formula that Helmick said would equate to Olympic success, the Associated Press reported.

"We have a pool of athletes who are going to get the support they have long needed, and there's no question in my mind that we're going to have much better results in the Olympic games," he said. "But is that the goal? No. The goal is to give support to every youth in this country, black or white, able or disabled, socially advantaged or disadvantaged, who wants to participate in sports."

The reorganization of the USOC dramatically reduced the overhead so that grants to athletes will grow to 42 percent of the current budget from 24 percent in the last four years.

That, said Helmick, puts the organization "at the door" of success. He said he expects the USOC to "pass through the entrance and enter the threshold" by 1992 for the Winter and Summer Games.

"We feel that our services are now starting to get down to the athletes—not just in quantity but in quality—and that's going to show at the next Olympics," he said.

Division II has capacity to make a name for itself

By John D. Marshall Jr.

It is time for those of us in Division II to rid ourselves of complacency and take stock of some of the things we can do to help ourselves.

That is the secret to our success — helping ourselves.

We need to study our programs. We sell a program, not the school; if we are committed, there will be people attending our events who will go because of our sales pitch.

I think my plan is simple, although its initiation may be difficult. I say we can make a difference in our programs, but it will take much work.

We must identify ourselves totally with the sports we sponsor and make sure they have comfortable homes — especially those that are expected to produce revenue. Football has succeeded at Florence, Alabama. The others have floundered because we have not used the vision to sell Division II the way we sell our own individual programs.

My six years on the Division II Football Committee showed me what can be done with commitment and dedication.

What is significant about the Division I bowl games? If you said money, you deserve a chance at the next question. Why doesn't Division II have bowl games? If you said lack of money, you missed the boat. Although we don't have big donors and corporate sponsorships behind us, we do have our own bowl game — the Division II Football Championship. For those of you who have not taken it upon yourselves to attend, I can tell you it is a class act, one that you would be extremely proud of.

Somehow, we must sell our 120-plus football-playing schools that the affair should be our Rose, Cotton, Orange or whatever bowl we choose to name it. We must descend on Florence, Alabama, or whatever site in the same manner that Division I followers flock to their bowl games. This one is ours. I recognize that it is not an easy sell to those who follow individual teams or conferences, but how do you think the people of the Shoals area must feel?

They have made a firm commitment as the host, but only those few who follow certain teams ever come. We have to make a commitment to do our best to motivate our spectators to attend the Division II bowl game, regardless of who the teams are.

If we don't, how can we expect less. I am sure we could get some much-needed support for all of our programs and give those who participate nationally more in return. That also could serve as an incentive to other programs to become part of Division II.

Those on the football committee others to help us? We must sell our Division II championships as hard as we can. This is our chance to show that we can support what is ours on a national basis.

Baseball, since its move to Montgomery, Alabama, has made some money, but it can always be better.

Division II must continue to strive for excellence, and the only way to do that is to push our institutions to support Division II events.

Our student-athletes deserve no motivated me to make a commitment to our championship. I shall attempt to follow it, regardless of location. I realize how much it needs my support, regardless of the teams involved.

We really need each other. The people who have pledged their support, with no reason other than to make our division flourish, need my support and yours. If it fails, we will be able to say that we tried. So far, we have not.

We don't have big-money donors, big bowl games or a Final Four. But we do have a marketable product. Those in Division II athletics must attempt to make a statement and a commitment. We must make our fans know we need them to support our division, not just our schools, and that we do have a bowl game that is viable and visible for our student-athletes.

Then, we can stand tall and receive our share of the revenue earned by Division I, because we have taken it upon ourselves to do something for ourselves.

Without effort, we simply stand with our hands out like beggars on the block, knowing that we will only get what others want us to have.

It has to be a group effort. Although it may not take hold immediately, it will down the line, and we will be better for having tried.

NFL falls short in college player ruling

The New York Times

An editorial

The National Football League has grudgingly yielded to reality and fairness by announcing it will let college juniors enter its rookie draft — if they renounce their college eligibility. That leaves the league well short of where it needs to be, but at least the direction is progressive.

By comfortable, longstanding arrangement, the pros have agreed not to take players until their college classes graduate. That theoretically allowed players the opportunity to earn degrees, although few have done so. It also insured colleges against professional poaching and guaranteed the pros a steady supply of trained workers from the collegiate minor leagues.

In 1983, however, the defunct United States Football League signed Herschel Walker after he won the Heisman Trophy in his junior year at the University of Georgia. That broke a psychological barrier. Then last year Barry Sanders, who also won the Heisman as a junior, indicated he wanted to turn pro and might contest in court the NFL's ban on undergraduates. The league found an excuse to accommodate him in the fact that his school was about to go on probation.

With a large crop of talented juniors in the college ranks this year, further challenges — and an eventual ruling that the NFL ban constituted an unfair restraint of trade — seemed all but inevitable. The league's decision now to permit juniors to be drafted may forestall a challenge, but it doesn't make the issue moot. If juniors can sell their services to the pros, why not sophomores, freshmen or kids just out of high school?

As a practical matter, few freshmen or sophomores are ready for the pros. But with the NFL about to start a new subsidiary league with teams in Europe, Mexico, Canada and the United States, there will be more opportunities for younger players. Those who want to try playing for pay should have the option.

As for the condition that juniors renounce college eligibility, it may be what the league says it is: a well-intentioned attempt to force starry-eyed youths to think soberly about their futures. But it's also another restraint of trade. The NFL tells young players, in effect, that to seek employment with a professional team they must agree not to seek continued employment with a college team.

For a monopoly like the NFL, learning to live by the same rules as the rest of society may be difficult. But eventually, it will have to learn to deal with young players as free people.

"If you really want to take the pressure off (the players), you should do away with conference tournaments and bite the bullet financially.

"But don't come back and tell me you're going to do away with three games, because you're going to do away with 280, 281 and 282 (in the Division I power ratings), where there's no pressure playing and you don't really have to practice to beat them.

"If you're going to preach it (athletics reform), then believe it and do what is really right."

"I can't emphasize enough the importance of a good education. Part of it stems from when I was an athlete in college; so many athletes I knew were being exploited. They spent three or four years in college and had nothing to show for it.

"The first thing I tell parents is, 'We'll never discuss whether your son will play or not, but I will guarantee that if your kids stays here for four years, he will graduate on time or early.'

"Some people think I coach to win only, and that's not the case. I am coaching kids to do their best, to strive for excellence. I have no problem with kids who give it their all and we lose. I have a problem with kids not working hard. This school is giving them an education worth $15,000 a year; they owe it to the school to give it their all."

Effects of three-game cut won't be good, three coaches say

By Tom Foreman Jr.

Three Atlantic Coast Conference basketball coaches see the reduction of their future schedules from different perspectives, but they all agree that the impact won't be good.

"I'm just not so sure that you can say that three fewer games is going to be academically important," North Carolina State University coach Jim Valvano says. "I think those three games generally came at a time when you weren't in school."

"Twenty-five games is fine, too. But I would be concerned with the money that is lost not for basketball, but it will have an impact in other sports," he says.

The NCAA has voted to take three games out of the college basketball season and also to move the start of preseason practice to November 1 from October 15, beginning in 1992. Valvano says that won't make much of a difference, either.

"Once you start practice, I assure you that if you're not playing a game, you're going to practice," he says. "I don't think that is really a boon to the academic problems."

Some athletics administrators have predicted that the loss of three basketball games could mean a loss in revenue of approximately $250,000, and that would strike at the nonrevenue sports that rely on the high-profile athletics for their money.

"Basketball generally supports the rest of the department, except football. But basketball has gotten to the point that it can support a lot of other sports," he says. "You may have an impact on some of the other sports, which I don't think was intended."

Duke University coach Mike Krzyzewski says the NCAA might have considered a different approach.

"I'd rather have legislation limiting the amount of time you can be away from class, not the number of games," Krzyzewski said. "And to me, that's better because it would force you as an administrator to make sure the kids do not miss class. The number of games does not force you to do that."

Krzyzewski said schools not in Division I will feel the impact of the decision because they won't get to play as many Division I teams. He agreed with Valvano that the impact would be felt in nonrevenue sports.

Pigskin Classic to pit Colorado against Tennessee

Colorado and Tennessee, which finished the 1989 college football season ranked fourth and fifth, respectively, will play in the first Disneyland Pigskin Classic August 26 at Anaheim Stadium.

Both teams finished last season with 11-1 records.

The game will begin at 1 p.m. Pacific time. Raycom has exclusive broadcast rights.

Proceeds from the game will benefit the American Football Coaches Association retirement trust fund, the participating teams, the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame scholarship fund and the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

It was announced earlier that the eighth annual Kickoff Classic between Southern California and Syracuse at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, New Jersey, will be played August 31.

"In the major top-50-type programs, I think it'll hurt nonrevenue sports at those schools because those teams make money and, basically, it takes three opportunities or four or more to play than you would have had," Krzyzewski said.

Coach Bobby Cremins of Georgia Institute of Technology said the reduction took on a personal tone.

"I am disappointed in the reduction of practice time," Cremins said. "I like being around the players. I love teaching on the court. It puts more discipline in their lives."

Cremins also said teams may start scheduling "easy" opponents to get NCAA tournament bids.

"The 25-game schedule from the NCAA bid standpoint is interesting in that 16, 17 or 18 wins might be a great factor in getting an NCAA bid," he said. "You're going to see a lot of those easy games scheduled. It's just going to make life harder, particularly for teams in strong conferences."

ACC Commissioner Eugene F. Corrigan said both the presidents and the basketball players gained something in the decision.

"The fact the presidents won was important and the fact the student-athletes won was important. You can't have a better Convention if those two things happen," Corrigan said. "I think we probably took some steps back financially that we may need to try to reclaim in the next year or so, because I think some of those things are going to have much more of an effect than people realize."

"But I think it's going to be a trade-off, and the trade-off will be to help the student-athletes. So I feel good about where we are," Corrigan told WRAL-FM in Raleigh in a telephone interview.

La Salle's Simmons joins list of top-five scorers

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

La Salle's Lionel Simmons, by becoming only the fifth NCAA player to pass the 3,000-point milestone, has eclipsed a legendary list of college basketball's top career scorers. Simmons passed such former greats as Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson (2,973), Kansas' Danny Manning (2,951), Houston's Elvin Hayes (2,884), Indiana State's Larry Bird (2,850), Furman's Frank Selvy (2,538) and Princeton's Bill Bradley (2,503).

Through games of February 24, Simmons had 3,042 points with one regular-season game plus the Metro Atlantic Conference tournament and possible NCAA tournament games remaining on the horizon. Simmons passed the 3,000-point mark February 22 vs. Manhattan, then passed Bradley's Hersey Hawkins (3,008 points) for fourth place on the list with his last basket of the first half, a three-pointer with 1:51 remaining.

He is setting his sights on third-place career scorer Harry Kelly of Texas Southern (3,066) and could catch second-place Freeman Williams of Portland State (3,249). Only all-time NCAA leader Pete Maravich of Louisiana State (3,667), who produced his total in only three years of competition, seems out of reach.

Travis Grant of Kentucky State (previously an NAIA school) set the all-time collegiate record from 1969 to 1972 with 4,045 points.

The 6-6 Simmons, nicknamed "L-Train," scored his 3,000th point, not an easy feat in itself, in a 100-60 victory over Manhattan. But add to that 1,349 career rebounds, and Simmons has carved a unique place for himself. None of those players mentioned ever scored 3,000 points and grabbed 1,300 rebounds.

Simmons was close to the mark before the Manhattan game, but he ended the suspense with 12:44 remaining in the first half against the Jaspers when he canned a free throw. La Salle profited from Simmons' success by winning its 17th consecutive game and pushing its record to 25-1, including a perfect 15-0 record in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference.

"I really wanted to get it on a three-point shot, not on the line," said Simmons. "The fans were chanting, and I let it go and let the celebration begin."

Simmons, a prep standout at South Philadelphia High, played in the Philadelphia public school league against Loyola's (California) high-scoring duo of Hank Gathers and Bo Kimble, both alumni of Philadelphia's Dobbins Tech. La Salle, with Simmons and No. 17 scorer Michael Brooks (2,628), and Houston, with Hayes and No. 11 Otis Birdsong (2,832), are the only schools with two players among the top 25 career scorers.

Simmons' assault seems to add to the lore of Maravich, who died unexpectedly in 1989. Simmons has been the epitome of consistency in his four years but has had only one 40-point performance. The 6-5 Maravich, who averaged 44.2 points per game in his three years, had 58 games in which he scored 40 or more points.

Portland State's Williams is second with 27 40-plus outings, followed by Robertson's 23, Hayes' 18 and Bird's 15.

Women's most improved

Louisville has a slight edge over Southwest Missouri State in a close race for the nation's most-improved title in women's Division I basketball.

Kent senior Marvetta Froe is among the leaders in Division I women's rebounding

The Cardinals, coached by Bud Childers, rebounded from a 4-24 record last year to 14-8 through games of February 12. That is an improvement of 13 games (10 more victories and 16 fewer losses is 26; divide by two).

Childers took over for Louisville this season after five years at Murray State. He posted an 82-63 record, including 43-17 over the last two seasons, and he also coached at Montevallo and Cumberland.

Southwest Missouri State, led by third-year head coach Cheryl Burnett, is next at 12 games, up from 7-20 last year to 16-5. Lehigh, Northwestern and Tennessee State were up 11 games but would need great finishes to catch the leaders.

too many people watching me. If I do it on the road, the Jersey City fans won't care and I won't get embarrassed." She grabbed only 14 that night and needed seven more vs. William Paterson to reach the milestone. Much to her chagrin, when she grabbed that seventh in the second half, she became very embarrassed when almost 20 friends and relatives swarmed the floor with balloons and flowers. Said Savio: "I told you this would happen." (Al Langer, Montclair State SID)

When talking of renting an apartment since their house won't be ready until April, Arizona State's Bill Freider mentioned that his wife, Janice, had forgotten to pay last month's rent, a forgivable lapse since they haven't had to make rent payments in 18 years. But when Connecticut came within two free throws of having a 10-point play in a victory over Pittsburgh February 13. The Huskies were trailing, 16-15, when Naday Henefeld was fouled while shooting. As he made the first free throw, Pittsburgh's Brian Shorter was called for an intentional foul for pushing Rod Sellers as they jostled on the lane.

Pittsburgh coach Paul Evans was furious and was called for two technical fouls. That meant seven more free throws and possession of the ball. Henefeld made his second free throw; then Sellers missed both of his. Chris Smith made all four free throws from the technicals, giving Connecticut six points without any time ticking off the clock.

On the ensuing possession, Henefeld scored on a layup and the Huskies had a 23-16 lead. (Note: The NCAA record for most points scored with no time elapsing is 24 points; UC San Diego made 24 consecutive free throws against Menlo due to 12 bench technical fouls January 16, 1988.)

Milestones

There really is no adequate way to describe Texas' dominance of women's basketball in the Southwest Athletic Conference over the past 12 years. Jody Conradt's teams had not lost a league game since January 23, 1978, when Texas A&M prevailed, 59-53. But February 23, Arkansas defeated the Longhorns, 82-77, in Austin to stop the Texas streak at 183 games. Arkansas coach John Sutherland said his team stayed up all night watching a video replay of the game. (Southwest Conference)

Bridgewater (Virginia) women's basketball coach Laura Mapp posted her 400th career victory February 23 in an 89-86 win over Virginia Wesleyan. Mapp, head coach at Bridgewater for 29 seasons, is the most victorious women's head coach in Division III and has led her clubs to 26 winning campaigns. She also serves as women's athletics director, head field hockey coach and head women's tennis coach. (Rob Washburn, Bridgewater (Virginia) SID)

Other notes

Xavier's (Ohio) nationally ranked men's team shattered its home attendance record, averaging 7,757 fans for its 14 home games compared to 4,411 last year. The Musketeers also broke the overall attendance record, drawing 108,600 for 14 games and eclipsing the old mark of 87,800 set in 1987-88.

(Midwestern Collegiate Conference)

Iowa State had the unenviable task in the Big Eight Conference of playing the No. 1 team in the nation three times (Missouri twice and Kansas once) over a two-week stretch. (Big Eight Conference)

Cincinnati senior Andre Tate, who injured his left (nonshooting) hand February 8, was apprehensive about the prospect of playing two days later with the hand heavily taped. Teammate Louis Banks, who had broken his hand during a December exhibition game, reassured Tate, predicting that he would score 20 points in the game with South Carolina. Tate scored 21, and in his next two games set career scoring highs with 28 and 30 points. Banks, who scored 31 points in the game following his accident, has kept his left hand heavily bandaged all season. (Tom Hathaway, Cincinnati SID)

Alumni basketball games usually are for players out of shape and past their prime. But the Coastal Carolina men's alumni game February 17 surprised spectators with a final score of Red Team 162, White Team 143. Each squad had eight players and, presumably, played a full-court contest. (Pat Mashburn, Coastal Carolina assistant SID)

Divisions II, III stats in next issue

Because of the NCAA's move to its new national office, Divisions II and III men's and women's basketball statistics are not published in this issue of The NCAA News. However, the News is publishing Division I men's and women's statistics as usual.

Divisions II and III statistics will return to the News March 7.

Shooting down

In what could be a side effect of the three-point field goal, Kansas was leading men's Division I with a team field-goal percentage of 53.3 through games of February 19. Second-place Louisville is at 53.1 and Loyola (California) is next at 52.8.

If no team gets hot from the field and Kansas' mark stands, it would be the lowest to lead the country since 1973, when North Carolina shot 53 percent. The last time a team led the country shooting under 50 percent was Ohio State at 49.8 in 1961, despite all-America Jerry Lucas' nation-leading 62.3 percent.

Quotes of the week

Kansas State guard Steve Henson scored 41 points (25 in the second half) in the Wildcats' 93-90 overtime victory against Iowa State. Said Henson: "I've never had a feeling quite like that. The only thing I remember from the second half is seeing the rim." (Big Eight Conference)

When Montclair State's Carolyn Savio needed just 21 rebounds to hit the 1,000-rebound career list, she wanted to be sure to get the mark on the road against Jersey City State. Why? "Because there will be they were served with a summons and an eviction notice, he commented, "I was glad they didn't cart her off to jail, because I don't have time to bail her out." (Dean Diltz, Pacific-10 Conference assistant public relations director)

Can you top this?

This may not be so unusual with today's run-and-shoot offenses, but both Kansas and Missouri have four players with at least 80 assists each. For Kansas—Kevin Pritchard (136), Jeff Gueldner (108), Adonis Jordan (86) and Rick Calloway (82); for Missouri—Anthony Peeler (145), Travis Ford (89), John McIntyre (86) and Lee Coward (85). (Big Eight Conference)

At 18-6, Penn State is trying to put together back-to-back 20-win seasons for the first time in school history. With three regular-season games remaining plus the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament, the Nittany Lions seem to be on target. Bruce Parkhill's charges also are aiming at an NCAA tourney bid for the first time since 1965. (Jeff Brewer, Penn State sports information)

Michigan Tech has an entry in the oldest-player derby to outdo Campbell center Marvin Edmonds, who is 28 (born March 23, 1961). Michigan Tech forward Willie Wesley is 29 but will be 30 (born April 16, 1960) after the season ends. Wesley did not play prep basketball, electing instead to participate in tennis, and he served nine years in the U.S. Air Force. (Joe Gorby, Michigan Tech SID)

Skiing coaches see highly competitive title field

Explaining how easy track is to coach, Oklahoma City University basketball coach Abe Lemons reportedly once said, "All you have to do is tell the kids to keep turning left and get back here as quick as you can."

If Lemons had been commenting on skiing, he might have said, "Get back here as quick as you can and don't fall down."

When the teams gather for the NCAA Men's and Women's National Collegiate Skiing Championships, the one that keeps its participants on their feet may be the one that wins.

"This may be the most competitive field in a long time," said Chip LaCasse, coach of defending champion and 1990 host Vermont. "The team that can avoid the most pitfalls over the four days of the meet has a real advantage."

LaCasse's Catamounts and Utah have won eight of the last 10 championships, and the two are favorites for the 1990 title. Each won its respective regional competition.

"We have looked at this season as a rebuilding period for us," LaCasse said. "We graduated eight people from last year's squad, but we have eight freshmen who have moved into starting positions. The inexperience was evident at the beginning of the season, but they've come around."

Vermont is led by senior cross country skier Joe Galanes and Alpine skier Einar Boehmer. Boehmer won both the men's slalom and giant slalom at the East regional.

Freshmen Alpine skiers Sally Knight and Keri Schlopy, along with veteran cross country skiers Laura Wilson and Selma Lie, are the strength of Vermont's women's team.

The Catamounts' competition in the East has come from Dartmouth (Patty Anouk in the women's giant slalom) and Middlebury (Hilary Rose in the women's slalom).

Only 11 points separated Utah, Colorado and Wyoming in the West regional. Colorado and Wyoming were the only teams other than Utah and Vermont to win the championship in the 1980s.

Championships Preview

"There has been more balance this year in the West than I've seen in a long time," Utah coach Pat Miller said. "Everyone has a vulnerable area. In every meet, it has come down to one or two people being there or not being there. The key is staying healthy and staying on your feet."

Leading the charge for the men's giant slalom are men's Alpine skiers Oeyvind Ragnhildstveit and Hans Peter Grill, women's Alpine skiers Anke Friedrich and Katja Lesjak, and women's cross country skiers

Kim Csizmazia and Anne Kari Aas.

Colorado's strength is men's slalom, where Ian Witter and Chris Pedersen won the regional competition, and men's cross country, where Per Kare Jakobsen and Bjorn Svensson finished first and second, respectively, in the regional.

Wyoming has made its mark with a strong women's program in both Alpine and cross country events.

Increase in members' sponsorship gives rifle opportunity to reload

What a difference a year has made to the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championships.

This time last year, discussions at host Murray State University centered on ways to increase sponsorship of the sport—since numbers had dipped to the point of jeopardizing continuation of the event.

This year at the U.S. Naval Academy, talk probably will focus on means of continuing a trend in renewed sponsorship that has boosted the number of NCAA members sponsoring rifle to more than 60.

"The numbers really are encouraging," said Jerry N. Cole, director of athletics at Jacksonville State University and chair of the NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Committee. "In the past 12 months, the sport has gotten new life."

Cole attributed increased sponsorship to the efforts of committee members and to the National Rifle Association. "I know members of the committee have been involved in educating representatives of some member institutions that have expressed interest in sponsoring rifle," he said, "and those efforts apparently have paid off."

"NRA representatives also have visited some campuses—not as representatives of the NCAA or the Cole said the sport can be a legitimate alternative for institutions looking to add sports. "People all over the country are reviewing their programs with an eye toward increased opportunities for participation, and they seem to be looking most closely at individual-type sports."

"We're looking at (adding) men's and women's cross country, for example," he added (Jacksonville State already sponsors rifle).

"Like rifle, it is a sport that provides the chance to field a competitive team with a minimum investment. We went from 16 varsity sports to 10 a few years ago, and we feel obligated to have another sport or two. That's the business we're in...providing opportunities for intercollegiate participation."

Cole said one element that can make rifle attractive is the fact that many potential squad members already own most of the necessary equipment. "NRA sponsors quite an extensive junior shooting program," he explained. "For that reason, many of the student-athletes currently competing on varsity teams around the country use their own equipment. They already have been involved in shooting for some time."

"Although it may not be this simple for every institution, rifle is a viable alternative for administrators looking to broaden their base of sports. Because of that," Cole said, "I am hopeful that we'll continue to see sponsorship numbers increase."

Championships notes: Vermont and Utah won all but two team titles in the 1980s....Colorado's Ian Witter in the giant slalom and Per Jakobsen in the freestyle cross country are the only defending individual champions....Vermont has finished second more times than any team in the country (eight).

Rally-point scoring delayed until '91 volleyball play-offs

The NCAA Divisions I, II and III Women's Volleyball Committees have determined that rally-point scoring will not be used in the 1990 NCAA championships, but they have agreed that some form of rally-point scoring will be used in the 1991 championships.

The National Association for Girls and Women in Sport (NAGWS) will maintain the international form of rally-point scoring in its 1990 rules book again as an experimental rule.

The NCAA women's volleyball committees urge coaches to use rally-point scoring in the coming season, since some form of the system will be used in the 1991 championships.

NCAA member institutions that want to be considered for selection to the 1990 NCAA championships must submit scores only from matches where the following criteria are used:

Division I—Only three-of-five-game matches played to conclusion (regular or rally-point scoring) will be considered in team records for ranking consideration and for selection to the championships.

Division II—Two-of-three-game (regular scoring) or three-of-five-game matches (regular or rallypoint scoring) played to conclusion will be considered in team records for ranking consideration and for selection to the championships.

Division III—Two-of-three-game or three-of-five-game matches (regular or rally-point scoring) will be considered in team records for ranking consideration and for selection to the championships.

TV subsidiary

The U.S. Olympic Committee has formed a subsidiary to administer television sports programming that is expected to generate $30 million in revenue for the USOC's national governing bodies during the next three years.

U.S. Olympic Properties will produce almost 250 hours of non-Olympic-year programming through 1992 for numerous broadcast outlets, including NBC Sports, CBS Sports, ABC Sports, ESPN, TBS Sports and SportsChannel America.

"We are excited about the prospect of this innovative television package, which will benefit our athletes in terms of dollars and major national exposure leading to the 1992 Games," said Robert H. Helmick, USOC president.

The NCAA News coverage: Complete results will be published March 14.

Contenders: Murray State, Tennessee Tech, West Virginia.

Championships notes: Women won both 1988 individual titles—the first time in championships history that women swept the smallbore and air rifle championships....On the way to the air rifle crown, South Florida's Michelle Scarborough shot an amazing 399 out of a possible 400 (i.e., 39 out of 40 bull's-eyes, standing, from a distance of 10 meters)....West Virginia won the team title the last time Navy hosted the championships (1986).

Division I track fans to see repeat performances

Track fans are likely to have a feeling of déjà vu as they watch the 1990 championships March 9-10 at the Indiana Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis.

For the past three years, men's team competition has been close. High-scoring women's squads, however, have won their titles by comfortable margins.

Arkansas' men averaged less than 36 points while winning the last three titles by margins of eight, five and three points. Last year's three-point victory over Florida was the narrowest in the Razorbacks' six-year reign as indoor champions.

Women's champions averaged more than 60 points over the same span, including a women's team record of 71 by Texas in 1988. The average margin of victory was more than 21 points.

This year, several men's teams are capable of scoring the 30 to 35 points observers believe will be enough to win the meet, and the women's competition features a clear favorite that is likely to score enough points to earn a comfortable victory.

Men's championships

The tightness of the men's race is not lost on Arkansas coach John McDonnell. He knows his team's string of indoor titles is in jeopardy. "It's a toss-up this year," he said. "We don't have any cushion this time. A score in the 30s probably will win it, and there are a lot of teams that can score in the 30s—including ours. But there's no team that can walk in there and feel like they've got it in the bag."

The Razorbacks won the 1989 title in the distance and jumping events. Joe Falcon won his second straight title in the mile run, Reuben Reina placed third in the 5,000, and Edrick Floreal finished first in the triple jump and second in the long jump. It was a simple formula: three individuals, four events, 34 points, another crown.

Falcon, who won seven NCAA track and cross country titles, was lost to graduation. But Floreal has qualified for the triple jump with a mark of 53-7 1/2, and Reina has qualified in the mile (3:59.35) and the 3,000 meters (7:54.37). Both of Reina's times were the best in the nation through February 16.

The Razorbacks will be challenged in the distance events by 1989 cross country champion Iowa State and reigning outdoor titlist Louisiana State. Iowa State junior John Nuttall, who won the individual cross country title, has qualified with strong times in the mile (4:01.36) and the 3,000 meters (7:59.39); fellow Cyclone Jonah Koech, the cross country runner-up, has qualified in the 3,000 (8:01.09) and the 5,000 (13:58.47).

Louisiana State's Mark Elliott and Terry Thornton have qualified in both the 3,000 and 5,000 meters; they finished second and fourth, respectively, in the 3,000 last year. Sprinter Slip Watkins (200 meters, 21.19) and 55-meter hurdler Derek Hopkins (7.22) give the Tigers a combination of sprint, hurdle and distance strength that could net 30-plus points and put the Tigers in position to win the title.

But they will have to contend with sprint powers Florida, Texas A&M and Baylor.

Florida is almost certain to dominate the 400-meter dash with Tyrone Kemp and Mark Everett returning from last year's runner-up team. Kemp won the 400 in 1989 with a championships-record time of 46.03; the sophomore had the top qualifying time this season (45.83) through February 16. Everett's mark of 46.34 was third in nation. The Gators also are strong in the long jump, where freshman Dion Bentley has jumped 26-5.

Texas A&M senior Richard Bucknor, runner-up last year in the 55-meter hurdles, has qualified with a time (7.19) that would have brought him the title. The Aggies also can count on 10 points from

Event: Division I men's and women's indoor track.

Fields: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows filling the fields to a maximum of 270 men and 213 women. All eligible student-athletes who meet the automatic-qualifying standard in an event may compete. Performances meeting provisional standards will be used to develop descending-order lists for each event, which will be used to fill each field to a minimum size established by the track committee.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: Arkansas won its sixth straight men's title with a narrow three-point victory over runner-up Florida. It was the smallest margin in the Razorbacks' reign as champions. Louisiana State won four individual titles and cruised to its second women's crown in three years.

Schedule: The championships will be held March 9-10 at the Indiana Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis.

The NCAA News coverage: Championships results will appear in the March 14 issue of the News.

Contenders: Men's contenders include Arkansas, Baylor, Florida, Louisiana State and Texas A&M. Contenders for the women's title include Florida, Louisiana State and Texas.

Championships notes: This is the second year of a three-year agreement under which The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, will coordinate the championships at the Hoosier Dome. Last year's meet was the first NCAA championship managed by another governing body....Arkansas' streak of six straight crowns is the longest in the 25-year history of the men's championships. A victory in 1990 would tie the Razorbacks with UTEP for the all-time lead in team championships with seven....This is the eighth women's championships. Louisiana State, Nebraska and Texas are tied for the all-time lead in team titles with two apiece....Louisiana State's 27-point margin of victory last year was the largest ever in the women's competition....Although Tennessee never has won a women's team title, the Lady Vols have finished second three times and hold the all-time lead in individual championships with 11.

Mike Stulce, who is favored to repeat in the shot put after qualifying with an astounding indoor mark of 70-0 1/2.

Baylor may have the deepest squad of all. Senior Michael Johnson is among the top qualifiers in both the 200 (20.94) and 400 meters (46.39). Etheridge Green and Tony Miller also have qualified in the 200 and 400, respectively. In addition,

Team races in Division II will produce contrasts

This time last year, observers of Division II track and field were predicting that St. Augustine's and Abilene Christian would run away with the men's and women's crowns, respectively, at the 1989 indoor track championships.

They were right. The Falcon men racked up a championships-record 94 points and coasted to the title; their nearest challenger, Mankato State, was 63 points behind. The Wildcats took the women's crown with 69 points, a comfortable 21 points ahead of runner-up Southeast Missouri State.

In the 1990 championships, to be hosted by South Dakota March 9-10, experts believe St. Augustine's men will dominate again. The women's competition, however, is expected to be a showdown among three teams with similar strengths, with several others waiting in the wings to contend if those three neutralize each other's efforts.

Men's championships

"Prohibitive favorites" is the term one coach used to describe St.

Augustine's chances of winning its fourth straight indoor title (including a tie with Abilene Christian in 1988). Coach George Williams once again has assembled a squad loaded with enough blue-chip sprinters and jumpers to make the distance events academic.

"Nobody in America does as good a job as George Williams," said Joey Haines, whose Southeast Missouri State team won the first men's title in 1985. "He just does a tremendous job of getting top-quality athletes and keeping them happy in a Division II program, with a Division II budget."

Although reluctant to admit that his team is the clear favorite, Williams said he sees no reason why the Falcons should not win the title "if everyone stays healthy."

"If our guys have a good day, we should be able to get 45 to 50 points in the jumps alone," he said. "That should put us in good position to win the title."

Leading the Falcons' corps of talented jumpers are Terrell Carpenter, Darrin Moore, Mark Mason and Xavier Donaldson. Carpenter, who won the 1989 long jump with a championships-record leap of 7.95 meters, has qualified with a mark of 7.69 this season. Moore has reached 2.21 to qualify for a title defense in the high jump. Mason is the defending outdoor champion in the long jump—he finished third indoors—and he has qualified this season with a mark of 7.75. Donaldson, the 1988 indoor and outdoor long-jump champion, has returned from an injury-plagued 1989 season to qualify in the triple jump with a mark of 15.37.

Carpenter, also one of the leading sprinters in Division II, joins defending champion Kenneth Brokenburr to give the Falcons a formidable one-two combination in the 55-meter dash. Charles Johnson is the team's threat in the 55-meter hurdles; he has qualified with a mark (7.34) that is just three-tenths of a second off the 1989 winning time of Hampton's Brett Fortune.

Despite an indoor schedule of just three meets, Abilene Christian will participate in the indoor championships after a one-year hiatus. That's bad news for rival teams because the Wildcats will be a factor, particularly in the jumps. Two-time outdoor triple-jump champion James Browne's qualifying mark (16.23) would have won the title last year. He also has qualified in the long jump, and freshman Michael Greer could score points in the high jump.

New York Tech is expected to be one of several teams battling for second place. The Bears return 400-meter champion Howard Burnett from a team that finished fifth last year. He also anchored Tech's champion 1,600-meter relay team. Although Burnett has yet to qualify individually, coach Peter Zinno expects him to peak just in time for the championships.

The Bears' relay foursome has qualified with a mark just off its championship pace of last year, and sprinters Ralston Boswell and Raymond Sparks could earn points in the 55-meter dash.

Other teams likely to finish in the top five are Northern Colorado, which has a balanced squad; Long Island-C.W. Post, which is strong in the middle distances and the relay, and Southeast Missouri State, traditionally a power at 400 meters and up.

Women's championships

Except for a few minor differences, the contenders for the women's title are strong at the same distances: 55 meters and 400 meters. These strength-against-strength matchups will make the women's competition exciting and, perhaps, close.

Trice, Cado return in Division III

Rarely have two individuals dominated NCAA championships the way Sheila Trice and Jan Cado did in the 1989 Division III Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships.

Trice won individual titles in the 55-meter dash, 55-meter hurdles, long jump and triple jump to lead Christopher Newport to its second straight indoor crown. It could be said that she also won the team title; her 40 points topped the total of every other team.

Cado's performance was more notable for quality than quantity. The North Central leaper won individual titles in the triple jump and long jump with championships-record performances as the Cardifeel better. But after a disappointing long jump of 22-8 1/2 February 16 at the University of Illinois Striders Open, he said he still does not feel good.

"I guess there's not a lot of change in how he's been performing," Carius said. "He just does not feel up to par and has not throughout the season."

Even though Cado has qualified in the triple jump, Carius said he would hold him out of the championships if he is not feeling any better so he can get the rest he needs to recover.

With or without Cado, North Central is a longshot to repeat as champion. Four athletes who accounted for 35 1/2 of the Cardinals' 66 1/2 points have been lost to graduation. Lincoln (Pennsylvania), runner-up in 1989, could move to the top with strong performances in the sprints and middle-distance events.

"We don't have field-event people because our school doesn't have a football team," said coach Cyrus Jones. "So we have to dominate the track events to win. Forty to 50 points can win this thing, and we hope to muster up enough points on the track to do it."

A balanced MIT squad also will contend for the title.

Following is a list of top performances this season through February 14, as compiled by coach Sherry Calvert of Whittier:

55-meter dash—Reginald Evans, Lincoln (Pa.), 6.40; Eric Burrell, Wis.-Eau Claire, 6.42; Chuck Olsen, Neb. Wesleyan, 6.52.

55-meter hurdles—Victor Colter, Lincoln (Pa.), 7.59; Darren Stohlmann, Neb. Wesleyan, 7.69; Shannon Flowers, Lincoln (Pa.), 7.64.

400-meter dash—Boniface Makatiani, MIT, 49.04; Vernon Miller, Lincoln (Pa.), 49.14; Willis Todman, Fitchburg St., 49.56.

800-meter run—Miller, Lincoln (Pa.), 1:53.27; Thomas Maher, Westfield St., 1:54.74; Jeff Cullingford, Moravian, 1:54.84.

1,500-meter run—John Storms, Methodist, 3:49.88; Erich Reed, Brandeis, 3:50.96; Lance Campbell, Westfield St., 3:56.54.

5,000-meter run—Steven Swift, Tufts, 14:36.40; Bob Peterson, Wis.-Eau Claire, 14:52.44; Joel Rich, Tufts, 14:55.64.

1,600-meter relay—Lincoln (Pa.), 3:16.20; Westfield St., 3:20.61; MIT, 3:20.68.

High jump—Derrick Dorsey, Fredonia St., 2.07; Homer Newman, Mount Union, 2.03; Steve Burks, Neb. Wesleyan, 2.03; Michael Vischak, Swarthmore, 2.03.

Triple jump—Jan Cado, North Central, 16.64; James Walker, Lynchburg, 14.70; Chris Schumacher, Wis.-La Crosse, 14.67.

Pole vault—John Rhodes, Heidelberg, 4.65; Kevin Luthy, Case Reserve, 4.65; Bill

Toland, North Central, 4.63.

Shot put—Andreas Klotz, Wis.-Whitewater, 16.35; Todd Callicot, Otterbein, 16.08; David Giehrbrock, Hamline, 15.89.

35-pound weight throw—John Paul Clarke, MIT, 17.40; Eric Shank, MIT, 16.85; Ben Bautch, St. Thomas (Minn.), 16.71.

Women's championships

Trice will be hard-pressed to repeat her feat of last year. Since NCAA track championship competition began in 1921 with the first I men's outdoor meet, only one other athlete has won four individual titles in one year. His name: Jesse Owens. He did it in 1935 and 1936.

But if anyone in collegiate track and field can do it, it is Trice. She is a 23-time all-America (indoor and outdoor) who has won 11 national titles—eight in individual events and three in relays.

What's more, her qualifying marks this spring indicate that she is Baylor features a strong 1,600-meter relay team, a long-jump contender in Lee Miles and a top pole-vaulter in Bill Payne.

Strength in the jumps, pole vault and middle distances makes George Mason a dark-horse contender that could surprise the field.

Women's championships

Even-numbered years must bring good luck to coach Terry Crawford and her Texas team. After winning titles in 1986 and 1988, the Longhorns appear capable of winning several individual titles and cruising to the 1990 crown.

Through February 16, Longhorn athletes owned the top qualifying times or marks in five events. They are led by junior Carlette Guidry, the 1988 champion in the 55-meter dash and the long jump. This season, Guidry has posted top qualifying times in the 55 meters (6.69) and the 200 meters (23.19); she will be out to atone for disappointing performances in those events last year. She also is expected to qualify in the long jump.

Junior Sandie Richards gives the Longhorns additional strength in the 400 meters. She has a qualifying time of 52.63, and she anchors one of the nation's top 1,600-meter relay teams (3:38.88). Texas also looks tough in the jumping events, where senior Angie Bradburn qualified with the top mark in the high nals won their first indoor championship. His triple-jump mark of 15.93 (52 feet, 3 1/4 inches) was more than a foot better than the previous record.

Both are back this year—Trice is a senior, Cado just a sophomore. But while Trice is expected to give a repeat performance at the championships March 9-10 at Smith College, health problems have kept Cado from qualifying in the long jump and may prevent him from attending the meet.

Men's championships

Early this season, it appeared Cado had picked up right where he left off; he qualified for the championships with an astounding triple jump of 54-7 1/4. But his performances soon began to tail off, and when he said he lacked energy, coach Al Carius knew he wasn't just making excuses.

"He's incredibly intelligent, and he knows himself very well," Carius said of the 26-year-old Czechoslovakian emigrant. "In my 23 years of coaching, I've never seen anyone who can pinpoint things like he can. He knows his body and his abilities so well, he's like a scientist."

Cado's symptoms were similar to those of mononucleosis. He said he felt lethargic and his muscles did not have their normal spring. Medical tests revealed that he had an iron deficiency.

He began taking iron tablets, and he initially said he was starting to last year without winning an individual title, also features a strong 1,600-meter quartet. After failing to earn relay points last year, the Lady Pirates have put together a group that has run 3:54.52 this season. They also will be counting on Mel-leasenah Williams to equal or better her second-place finish in the 55-meter hurdles. She has qualified with a mark of 8.29.

"If one of these schools has a big meet, it will dominate the championships," said Haines. "Any of them could score enough points in the 55 meters, hurdles, 400 meters and relay to clinch the meet. But if they all do well, they will hurt each other."

That scenario would place an added emphasis on races 800 meters and longer.

"The team with the best distance runners can sneak in there and win the meet," Williams said. "Watch out for teams with strength in the 800, 1,500 and 3,000."

If Williams' prediction comes true, the edge may go to Abilene Christian. Vida Alexander, who has qualified in the 800 meters with a time of 2:14.49, gives the Wildcats middle-distance strength the others lack. In addition, Abilene Christian could earn extra points from returnees Wendy Ator, who was fifth in the outdoor high jump in 1989, and Daphne Harvey, who finished sixth in the indoor shot put.

Top distance teams South Dakota State, North Dakota State, Southeast Missouri State and Air Force could make strong showings if sprint, hurdle and relay points are spread evenly. Williams' St. Augustine's squad also could tighten the race if triple-jumper Iris Holmes and long-jumpers Cynthia Badgett and Tangel Newsome perform well.

"Everyone has more fun when the meet is tight," Williams said. "Who wants another Super Bowl? Everybody would be bored."

Christian lost 40 points with the departure of double-titlists Mazel Thomas and Sylvia Dyer, but the Wildcats return 55-meter-dash champion Alesia Turner. Her qualifying mark this season equals her winning time of last year (7.06). Senior Yolande Straughn has an even better mark in the 55 meters (6.99), in addition to qualifying in the 400 meters at 54.48. She leads off a 1,600-meter relay team that has the second-best qualifying time this season (3:48.81).

The best relay time has been posted by Norfolk State. The Spartans' time of 3:47.5 is more than two seconds better than their winning mark of last year. In addition, 400-meter-dash champion Josetta Royal is back to lead a strong group of sprinters that includes Judith Lawrence, who has qualified for the 55-meter dash at 7.11, and Lauren Bridgeforth, a hurdle qualifier at 8.29.

Delta State women out to repeat

Cleveland, Mississippi, is a long way from San Francisco, but the sports talk around these two cities probably has been similar this year. The question in every sports fan's mind has been "Can our team win another championship?"

San Francisco's 49ers provided an affirmative answer by winning a second straight Super Bowl; and now, the Lady Statesmen of Delta State will have their turn in the Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

"It's not a flashy team; the players just enjoy playing together," coach Lloyd Clark said. "Our greatest strength is our experience, and we play well together."

Clark has seven of last year's top eight players back, including Pam Lockett, who was the most outstanding player in the 1989 championship. The only new face in the starting line-up is that of Pam Taylor, the replacement for Jo Lynn Davis at point guard.

"We try to be very selective (when taking shots); and most of the time, we play man-to-man defense," Clark said. "We (take advantage of the) fast break if we've got it."

Delta State has been selective enough to rank among the national leaders in field-goal percentage, scoring offense and scoring margin. Individually, Lockett and Crystal Hardy are ranked among the top shooters in the nation. As a team, the Lady Statesmen also are leaders in scoring defense, field-goal percentage defense, rebound margin and free-throw percentage.

"We don't prepare for people," Clark said. "We play our game. We just do what we do best, and we win or lose with it."

Clark believes the half-court game is critical in championship play. A team must play sound defense and execute well on offense, taking advantage of every possession. One intangible takes on special significance.

"You have to have a lot of luck to win a national championship," Clark said. "You've got to be good, but you better be lucky, too."

Last year, luck was with the Lady Statesmen as none of the top eight players lost any playing time due to better than ever. She has a time of 7.06 in the 55 meters, three hundredths of a second faster than her title-winning time of last year; her time of 8.18 in the hurdles is less than two-tenths off her 1989 pace, and her qualifying mark in the long jump (19-4 3/4) is a personal best. All three marks top the division this season.

The only question mark is the triple jump, which she hadn't even attempted in meets through February 15. But if she qualifies in that event as she peaks for the championships, as she is expected to do, the Division III meet could be historic for the second year in a row.

"We are going to be in contention for the national championship," said Christopher Newport coach Vince Brown. "With an athlete like Sheila available, that gives us a distinct advantage."

Brown's squad will face its stiffest competition from Cortland State. Coming off their domination of the cross country championships in November, the Red Dragons are likely to have multiple point-scorers in the 800 meters, 1,500 meters and 3,000 meters. In addition, Cortland State's 1,600-meter relay quartet has posted the division's best time this season (4:02.88).

Other contenders include Tufts, which is strong in the jumps and 400 meters, and Nebraska Wesleyan, which will rely on the multi-talented Kim Oden to score in the jumps and 55-meter hurdles.

Other top performances this season include:

55-meter dash—Jeannette Brown, Christopher Newport, 7.27; Alondra Woodard, Lincoln (Pa.), 7.34; Linda Turnbull, Wesleyan, 7.38.

55-meter hurdles—Kim Oden, Neb. Wesleyan, 8.34; Ophelia Johnson, North Central, 8.37; Diane Tuxill, Cortland St., 8.50.

Wisconsin-Stevens Point, Babson top III ice hockey field

The adage states that special teams and defense win ice hockey championships. It also helps to have student-athletes who can stick the puck in the net, which is another reason why top-ranked Wisconsin-Stevens Point and second-ranked Babson are the favorites to win this year's Division III championship.

Wisconsin-Stevens Point (21-3-2) defeated Rochester Institute of Technology in last year's championship series, 3-3 and 3-2, to claim its first Division III ice hockey title. This year, however, the Pointers will have to overcome a bit of history if they are to defend the title: No defending champion has advanced to the title game the year following its championship.

Despite the loss of nine players to graduation, what will it take for the Pointers to repeat?

"We don't even want to think about repeating," said coach Mark Mazzoleni. "Just to get out of the West will be tough enough."

"We have had to work hard to be good. We haven't overwhelmed anyone by any means."

Wisconsin-Stevens Point plays an aggressive style of ice hockey and in doing so has spent a little time in the penalty box. However, the Pointers have killed penalties at the rate of 84.2 percent. The power play, a slight concern to Mazzoleni, has scored a respectable 26.9 percent of the time in man-up situations.

Leading scorers include sophomore Paul Caufield (22 goals, 16 assists, 38 points), freshman Todd Tretter (15-21-36) and senior Shawn Wheeler (18-11-29).

Said Mazzoleni, "We have gotten very good, balanced production this year with 10 players that have at least 20 points."

In goal, Kevin Marion (10 wins, one loss, two ties, 2.57 goals against average, .909 save percentage) and Todd Chin (12-2-1, 2.73, .901) have been outstanding all year, rotating game-to-game.

"When you play down the stretch, you need two goaltenders," said Mazzoleni. "If you play with one goaltender and he goes cold, you're in trouble. Same thing with an injury. We are lucky that we have two goaltenders that are as good as any Division III goalies in the country."

Babson coach Steve Stirling was surprised, albeit pleasantly, that his team turned out to be as good as it has—not only this fast, but also this year.

Babson (17-2-4), which is looking to make its ninth consecutive appearance in the NCAA tournament, has a very young team, including seven freshmen that play regularly. At the same time, the all-important leadership role that Stirling needed was grasped and expanded by the Beavers' seniors.

Said Stirling, "We have five seniors on the team and three (Jim Creamer, John Herlihy and Jamie Rice) who play an awful lot. I think the key has been the ability of our seniors to pull together as a unit our inexperienced group of players."

Those inexperienced players, however, have played a large part in Babson's success. First-year forwards Chris McGee (14-11-25) and Dan Pompeo (6-18-24) lead the team in points scored. Freshman goaltender Mark Kuryak (7-0-1, 2.25, .932) has played so well that Stirling has gone to a two-goaltender rotation for the first time in his coaching career. Junior Joe Capprini (9-2-3, 2.07, .931) also has had an outstanding season in goal.

Creamer (1-19-20), a senior all-America candidate, is the leader of a Babson defense that has allowed only 2.14 goals per game.

"Defensively, from a five-on-five standpoint, we are pretty good," said Stirling. "We are fairly defensive-minded in the sense that we don't get in a lot of shootouts or allow a lot of breakaway shots on goal."

Added Stirling, "We don't take a lot of penalties, but our penalty-killing units have played well (opponents have converted only 13 of 63 power-play scoring opportunities). Probably my biggest concern right now is our power play. To be successful in the tournament we have to pick up the tempo on the power play."

This year, the Lady Statesmen will carry the the defending-national-champion tag and a top ranking from the regular season into championship play.

"I think people gun for you harder," Clark said of being in that position. "People can become celebrities overnight by beating us; and if you can whip the defending national champion and No. 1-ranked team, you should get recognition."

Clark also thinks his players can meet this challenge.

"They understand it because of the tradition here," he said. "People play hard against us, and we talk about it all the time."

If the Lady Statesmen can stay at the top of their game throughout the tournament, the question around Cleveland again could be the same as the one going around San Francisco—Can we "threepeat"?

Kenyon women have company in III swimming

After winning six consecutive Division III swimming and diving championships—the last five in dominating fashion—Kenyon's women suddenly find themselves with lots of company at the top.

In fact, the Ladies, who won last year's meet by a record margin of 330 points, may find themselves outmanned this year by a UC San Diego team that can enter at least twice as many potential scorers as Kenyon in several events.

UC San Diego, after finishing second at last year's championships, is powered by a returning corps of swimmers who are showing improvement and a couple of newcomers who will contend for several individual titles.

The newcomers are UCLA transfer Catherine Capriles, a 1988 U.S. Olympic Trials finalist who is favored to win backstroke and individual medley titles, and freshman Sabrina Lum, a favorite in butterfly competition who also can score in the freestyles, backstrokes and individual medleys.

The Tritons also could pick up victories in the middle-distance freestyles, where top returner Jenna Banaszek is a proven contender. Other probable scorers are Katy Arnold, Erin Bakey and Alice Kirby.

Perhaps more significantly, UC San Diego appears poised to break up Kenyon's dominance of the relay events.

Kenyon hasn't lost a relay since the 1985 championships, but the Ladies appear vulnerable in the medley relays following the graduation of breaststroke record-holder Jeannine Gury. Even in the freestyle relays, where Kenyon remains strong, UC San Diego should mount a serious challenge.

Still, whatever Kenyon is lacking in quantity, it may be able compensate for in quality.

The Ladies will send three defending champions to the meet—Missi Nelson, who won the 400-yard individual medley; Kami Mathews, who won the 200-yard individual medley, and Carrie Nealon, last year's 1,650-yard freestyle champ.

ACU to play baseball again

Abilene Christian University, a member of the Lone Star Conference, plans to resume competition in baseball which has been absent from the campus since 1980. The Wildcats will play an open schedule.

"The addition of baseball is exciting to me," said A. Don Drennan, director of athletics. "It will really round out our athletics program."

Donors were found to underwrite initial funding and the program will begin on a nonscholarship basis.

Additional funding will be made possible through the establishment of the Nolan Ryan Fund for Baseball at Abilene Christian. The 43-year-old all-star pitcher for the Texas Rangers is rallying behind the university's plans to restart the baseball program.

"Any kid who wants to go to a Christian school and play baseball needs to be given the opportunity," Ryan said. "It helps make a more well-rounded person and enhances the university itself. If I can help them start baseball again, then I'm all for it."

The school will honor Ryan at a fund-raising dinner April 23. All proceeds will benefit the baseball program through the new Ryan fund.

Behind freshman Carolyn Peticoilas, Kenyon also could reclaim the preeminence in the sprint freestyles that it lost with the departure of record-holder Patricia Abt following the 1987 championships.

Although Kenyon has not replaced Gury in the breaststroke, it has come up with a successor to four-time backstroke champion Erin Finneran, who bowed out last year. Freshman Jennifer Carter may be Capriles' toughest competition in those events.

Championships Previews

The Ladies also return championships veterans Kristie Stacey in butterfly and individual medley competition and Ann Kelley in diving.

Other contending teams at the championships will base their hopes on the performances of individual title hopefuls.

Laura Witt of Wheaton (Illinois) is a favorite in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles and also could score in breaststroke competition. Overall, Wheaton may be one of the most improved teams at the meet, after finishing 23rd last year.

Emory looks to move up from a seventh-place finish last year behind Rachel LeClair, defending 200-yard backstroke champion and last year's runner-up in the 100-yard backstroke. The Eagles will get a boost from transfer Anne Marie Largay, who won the 200-yard butterfly for Johns Hopkins last year and was a 100-yard butterfly finalist.

California, Michigan schools battle in Division II swimming

It's shaping up as a battle between the states of California and Michigan in Division II men's and women's swimming and diving.

The final polls issued by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America say that the Californians, as usual, are the favorites. In men's competition, top-ranked Cal State Bakersfield is seeking its fifth consecutive team title, and Cal State Northridge, the No. 1 women's team, is looking for its fourth straight crown.

But back in Michigan, where the Oakland men have been runners-up to Cal State Bakersfield for three straight years, the Pioneers would like nothing better than to celebrate the 10th anniversary of their only national championship by adding another.

Meanwhile, after facing down Clarion, Tampa and North Dakota the past three years, the Cal State Northridge women apparently will take on a new challenger this year—Northern Michigan. And if Northern Michigan falters, Oakland is sending a pretty good women's team to the championships, too.

Men's championships

When Oakland won the Division II title in 1980, it became the first non-California winner in seven years. Since then, two California schools—Cal State Northridge from 1981 to 1985 and Cal State Bakersfield from 1986 to 1989—have dominated the competition, while Oakland has finished second six times.

But last year, Oakland showed evidence that it is loosening Bakersfield's stranglehold when the Pioneers won all five relay races. The Pioneers remain strong in those match-ups this year and are optimistic that 10 returning all-Americans can outscore their California foes in the other events.

Oakland's Hilton Woods, the 1989 Division II swimmer of the year, returns in his junior season to defend titles in the 50- and 200-yard freestyles and improve on second-place finishes in the 100-yard freestyle and 100-yard backstroke. He also anchors four of the relay teams.

Woods will have plenty of help from teammates in the sprint freestyles—sophomore Jeff Seifert actually has posted a faster qualifying time in the 50-yard freestyle and all-Americans Jon Teal and Richie Orr also are qualifiers.

Las Vegas bans betting on games by college athletes

The Las Vegas City Council has approved an ordinance that would prohibit NCAA athletes from betting on college games at sports books in the city, even if they are 21 or older.

The ordinance is designed to plug a loophole that allows anyone over the age of 21 to bet in the state's race and sports books, the Associated Press reported.

NCAA rules prohibit college athletes from betting on games.

Officials at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, have asked the city, county and state to change their laws so current college athletes will not be allowed to bet, even if they are over the legal age limit. The move comes after athletes at some universities were said to have bet on games.

Officials say the loophole in the law could be an embarrassment to Nevada if a college athlete is caught betting on games in a Nevada sports book.

The Pioneers also look to score in the backstroke, individual medley and diving events, and senior Jim Surowiec and sophomore Eric McIlquham return as challengers for titles in the 100-yard breaststroke and 100-yard butterfly, respectively.

But Oakland apparently is outmanned in the middle and distance freestyles by Cal State Bakersfield, which returns 1,650-freestyle champion and 500-yard freestyle runner-up Brent Katzer. The Roadrunners also may hold an edge over the Pioneers in the breaststroke events, where Kristian Bruggert may be able to defend titles at the 100- and 200-yard distances (he also won last year's 200-yard individual medley).

Other multitalented scoring threats for Cal State Bakersfield are championships veterans Leif Calvin and Derek Robinson, who was a 100-yard backstroke finalist last year.

In its battle to hold the team title, Cal State Bakersfield ironically may get some help from in-state rival Cal State Northridge. The Matadors should be competitive with Oakland in the sprint freestyles, where Ted Hollahan—the Division II record-holder in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles—returns to duel with Woods.

But Cal State Northridge has its own designs on the title and could take as many as 12 men to the meet. Other top returning Matador swimmers are John Kunishima and Joe Brosler.

Another contender for team honors is Shippensburg, which recently broke Clarion's string of 15 straight Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference titles. Shippensburg will be led in Buffalo by Brady Stauffer, who will defend titles in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes.

Women's championships

Cal State Northridge has won four team titles in eight years of Division II competition and returns to Buffalo with three swimmers who swam as finalists in six events last year.

One of those finalists, Toady Kimble, won the 100-yard freestyle, and another, Lisa Dial, is the top returning contender in the 500-yard freestyle. In all, Northridge will bring at least nine qualifiers to the meet.

But the Matadors graduated four champions from last year's squad, which defeated runner-up North Dakota by 117 points. All four of those titlists—Jude Kylander, Jeanna Giessinger, Stacy Mettam and Tina Schnare—also were key members of Northridge's relay teams, raising the question of whether the Matadors are vulnerable to a pair of challengers from the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

One of the GLIAC entries is Northern Michigan, which finished third at the 1988 championships but fell to 10th last year. This year, the addition of three strong freshman swimmers appears to have steered the Wildcats back toward the top.

One of the newcomers—Jenny Kleemann—has qualified in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles and 200-yard backstroke and also anchors the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays. Fellow frosh Kirsten Silvester is a qualifier in four of the five freestyle events and in the 200-yard butterfly, and Shao Hong will compete in the breaststroke events.

For championships experience, Northern Michigan looks to May Tan, a finalist in last year's butterfly events, and Brenda Ahrndt, who was runner up in the 400-yard individual medley.

The other Great Lakes power, Oakland, is led by two defending individual titlists—Lyn Schermer, who won the 200-yard freestyle, and Nikki Kelsey, who was named 1989 diver of the year after winning the one-meter event and finishing second at three meters.

Pioneer junior Lisa Guilfoyle also is likely to contribute heavily to the scoring effort as a qualifier in three freestyle events and the 100-yard breaststroke.

After finishing second last year, North Dakota will return to Division II competition with at least eight qualifiers. Senior Michelle Puetz, who had posted the division's fastest times in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes as of mid-February, and junior individual medley stand-out Marion Warner lead the Sioux.

All-Americans Liz Scheetz, Tania Ziegert and Patti Read return to the meet to lead Cal Poly San Luis Obispo's attempt to improve on last year's fifth-place finish.

Fields: Fields for the championships will be determined through qualifying standards set by the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee and approved by the Association's Executive Committee.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: Cal State Bakersfield won its fourth consecutive men's title last year, and Cal State Northridge captured its third women's championship in a row.

Schedule: The State University of New York, Buffalo, will be host for the March 7-10 championships.

The NCAA News coverage: Results of the men's and women's championships will be reported in the March 14 issue of The NCAA News.

Contenders: Men's contenders include Cal State Bakersfield, Oakland, Cal State Northridge and Shippensburg. Contenders among the women's teams include Cal State Northridge, Northern Michigan, Oakland, North Dakota and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

Championships notes: In men's competition, Cal State Bakersfield and Oakland have finished Nos. 1-2 for three straight years. Cal State Northridge has won four team titles in the eight-year history of women's competition. Clarion has won three championships. Oakland's men have been runners-up at the championships seven times since 1979; their only victory, in 1980, also is the only championship won by a non-California team since Eastern Michigan took the crown in 1972. The only other Division II men's titlist from outside California was Bucknell, which won the inaugural meet in 1964. Cal State Northridge swimmers have won 65 men's and 48 women's individual Division II titles—far more than any other school.

THE BLACK ATHLETE

WINNERS OR LOSERS IN ACADEMIA?

They have been called America's modern day gladiators. They are seen by millions of Americans every week in arenas, stadiums or on the living room television set. They are the most visible and controversial segment of American higher education. They are our major colleges' student athletes.

In a thorough and revealing telecommunications event, all of the issues surrounding today's college athletes will be evaluated, including: secondary preparation, recruiting, admissions, testing, the role of the NCAA, and graduation and matriculation issues. This live, interactive telecommunications event will provide a unique view of the best and worst aspects of how modern college programs have combined academics and athletics to the benefit of the individual athlete and the university. This event also will take a very insightful look at the myths and realities of the plight of the Black college athlete.

Student-athletes are honored for academic achievements

Throughout the year, The NCAA News receives from member institutions reports on the academic achievements of student-athletes. Generally, this information is published in the Briefly in the News column as space permits.

Over the past couple of months, however, reports have been received in record numbers. Following is a summary of those reports.

Muhlenberg College's field hockey team posted outstanding numbers on the field and in the classroom last fall. The Mules finished 14-2, won the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference title and earned the school's first invitation to the NCAA Division III field hockey play-offs. In the classroom, the 24-member squad posted a cumulative GPA of 3.012. The 11 starters have a combined 3.373.

Five Boston University men's basketball players posted first semester GPAs of at least 3.00. Heading the group was sophomore Mark Daly, with a 3.850 in math education.

Apparently, playing offensive tackle on the University of Kentucky football team requires at least as much brain as brawn. According to a recent release from the Southeastern Conference member, three offensive tackles on the depth chart (Tom Crumrine, Greg Lahr and Mike Pfeifer) earned 4.000 grade-point averages (4.000 scale) last season for at least one semester.

Chicago State University sophomore Louis Flowers has performed at least as well in the classroom as he has on the basketball floor. After arriving at Chicago State last fall, the men's basketball forward proceeded to post the highest grade-point average among all freshmen, and he earned the College of Business' Collins Scholarship.

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, runner Harald Graham posted the highest GPA among first-team selections to the Big Eight Conference's 1989 all-academic men's cross country team. The senior has a 3.820. On the women's team, Iowa State University junior Lisa Skidmore (biology) and University of Kansas sophomore Janet Haskin (prepharmacy) have 4.000 GPAs. Big Eight officials announced that 63 runners — 32 men and 31 women — were honored.

Pennsylvania State University swimmer Tim Witham has made a name for himself in the pool and in the classroom. The State College, Pennsylvania, native recently began his senior year with six consecutive semesters of 4.000 (4.000 scale) grades in biochemistry. He appears in Penn State's all-time top-25 rankings in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly and the 200-yard freestyle.

Senior Jerry Danner, who boasts a 3.930 grade-point average in math education, is the academic leader of a University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire, men's cross country team (seven runners) that sports a cumulative GPA of 3.360. Others are senior Steve Kortenkamp (3.510 in physics), senior Mike Monk (3.270 in music), sophomore Dan Frusher (3.440 in education), sophomore Scott Horman (3.460 in business finance), senior Dan Kempf (2.710 in criminal justice) and sophomore Scott Chapin (3.050, undeclared major).

Three student-athletes with GPAs above 3.800 head the men's soccer, men's cross country and men's golf all-academic teams announced recently by Association of Mid-Continent Universities (AMCU) Commissioner Jerry A. Ippoliti. They are Eastern Illinois University soccer player Terry Dixon (3.810 in geology), Western Illinois University runner Bill Kitchell (3.810 in education) and Southwest Missouri State University golfer Lance Tyson (3.870 in administrative management). Another golfer, Valparaiso University's Jeff Keresbury, posted a GPA of 3.820 in business.

Six Siena College student-athletes — three golfers and three football players — recently were recognized for their academic achievements.

Named to the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference all-academic golf team were Michael Friguletto, Steven Owens and Timothy Owens. Named to the Atlantic Collegiate Football Conference academic elite team were Kevin DeLuca, Paul Hacker and Brian Pilla.

Two players with 4.000 grade-point averages (4.000 scale) head the North Central Conference all-academic football team. University of South Dakota offensive back Jason Seuer and University of Northern Colorado defensive lineman Mike Yankovich produced the 4.000s. North Dakota State University led all league members with six players named to the team.

Forty-six football players have been named academic all-Big Ten Conference for 1989, as have 24 men's cross country runners. University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, linebacker Joel Staats, a sophomore business major, posted the only 4.000 GPA on either list.

Abilene Christian University's Jim Gash led the Lone Star Conference all-academic football team with a 4.000 GPA in finance. Close behind was teammate Bill Clayton with a 3.880. Abilene Christian's Cary Stengler (3.500 in physical education) almost grabbed top GPA honors on the Lone Star's all-academic women's volleyball team, but that went to Nancy Svoboda of Texas Woman's University (3.570 in kinesiology).

Each of the six football-playing member institutions and all nine volleyball-playing members were represented on the all-academic teams in those sports announced by the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

The 11 student-athletes named to the 1989 North Central Conference all-academic women's volleyball team produced a combined grade-point average of 3.640 (4.000 scale). Six of those named were repeat selections from the 1988 team, and one of those — Karen Henderson of St. Cloud State University — was named for the third consecutive year.

Suzanne Cooper, cocaptain of the women's basketball team at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, recently was named recipient of the scholar-athlete award given

The Revolutionary Gillette® Sensor.

It senses and adjusts to the individual needs of your face for the best shave a man can get.

The remarkable Gillette Sensor shaving system creates an entirely new standard in shaving performance. It's a shave personalized to every man.

The revolution starts with the platinum hardened Sensor twin blades. They're individually and independently mounted on highly responsive springs. So they continuously sense and automatically adjust to the individual curves and unique needs of your face.

But innovation doesn't stop there. The ultra narrow metal skin guard is also mounted on springs. It moves in total harmony with the blades to set up your beard for optimum shaving performance.

Keeping this technology in constant contact with your face required another breakthrough. A dramatic redesign of the entire pivoting process creates a wider, more responsive, unprecedentedly smooth pivoting action. Innovation is everywhere.

You can feel it in the textured ridges and balance of the Sensor razor. You appreciate it in the easy loading system and the convenient shaving organizer.

Even rinsing is innovative. The new blades are 50% narrower than any others — water flows freely around and through them, helping to make rinsing and cleaning totally effortless.

But the true revolution of Sensor comes not with any one feature, but with the way the Sensor technologies work together. They combine to give your individual face a personalized shave — the closest, smoothest, safest shave you've ever had. Or, more precisely, the best shave a man can get.

Big East Conference takes on international flavor

By Tom Canavan

The Big East Conference is proving to be a playground for the international set.

There is a wealth of talent overseas and the Big East has tapped into it, just one year after Andrew Gaze came from Australia for a year and almost carried Seton Hall University to an NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

"We have hundreds of U.S. players playing overseas in European leagues, so it's not surprising that athletes in foreign countries see opportunities to compete in America, provided they are qualified," Big East Commissioner David R. Gavitt said.

There's a lot to be said for the foreign player, too. Most are older than their U.S. equivalents and have represented their countries in international competition before hostile crowds. They also tend to be physically stronger.

Although they may not be as smooth as their American counterparts, they tend to get the job done.

Four foreign players have had a big impact on the Big East this year and the University of Pittsburgh should pick up a good one next year when Dominic Dumancic of Yugoslavia becomes eligible.

Nadav Henefeld of Israel has helped the University of Connecticut to its best start in 25 years. Dikembe Mutombo of Zaire and Georgetown University is among the nation's leaders in blocked shots and leads the Hoyas in rebounding. Lior Arditti of Israel has added depth at guard for Boston College, and Seton Hall finally seems to have found a point guard with the mid-season arrival of Marco Lokar of Italy. Arditti leads the conference in three-point shooting at about 50 percent.

"Basketball has become a global game, and no one knows more about that than I do"

Gavitt said he is not concerned about the influx of foreign players.

"Basketball has become a global game, and no one knows more about that than I do," said Gavitt, president of USA Basketball.

Lokar, a 20-year-old from Trieste, Italy, became the latest of the foreign players to make an impact. He set a conference mark for freshman by scoring 41 points for Seton Hall in a victory over Pittsburgh.

The performance was a far cry from Lokar's debut against Villanova University January 2, a couple of days after he arrived and almost three weeks before he attended his first class. Lokar lasted only 30 seconds.

Like so many of the Big East's imports, Lokar came to Seton Hall almost through word of mouth.

In Lokar's case, Mergin Sina, a former Seton Hall and University of Rhode Island player from Italy, happened to mention to the Pirates' coaching staff that Lokar was available. Assistant coach Rod Baker went to Italy and offered him a grant-in-aid.

Perhaps the biggest impact this season by a foreign player has been by Henefeld, a 21-year-old former Israeli soldier who helped the University of Connecticut reach first place in the Big East.

Henefeld, a 6-foot-7 forward who played on the Israeli national team, averages over 10 points a game and leads the team in steals and rebounds.

"He has some intuitions, some instincts about the game that you can teach only in your dreams," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun, who traveled to Tel Aviv to recruit

David R. Gavitt

Henefeld.

A patient and inventive passer, Henefeld also is deceptively quick. He already owns the school and NCAA freshman single-season records with 109 steals and has been named Big East rookie of the week three times and player of the week once.

Mutombo, a 7-footer from Zaire, got to Georgetown after a state department official leaked word of him to the Hoyas coaching staff. A junior now in his second season, Mutombo leads the Big East in blocked shots with 94 and the Hoyas in rebounding with a 9.7 per game average. He is averaging 9.3 points.

Although a member of his national team, Mutombo in some ways is still learning how to play basketball.

Georgetown coach John Thompson remembers one day at practice when Mutombo kept standing in the lane and he kept yelling at him to get out to no avail.

Finally, Thompson got frustrated and walked over the Mutombo and yelled: "Get out of the lane."

"What's the lane?" Mutombo came back.

LSU gets new mascot from zoo

A 4½-month-old male Bengal tiger has been donated to Louisiana State University by an Alabama zoological park and soon will begin his reign as Mike V, the new mascot of LSU athletics.

The baby tiger will succeed Mike IV, who has served as the school mascot since 1976.

Mike IV, who will turn 18 years old in May, will be retired to the Baton Rouge Zoo as soon as proper accommodations can be arranged. A search for a successor to Mike IV began last November when Dr. Sheldon Bivin of the LSU School of Veterinary Medicine suggested that the 500-pound tiger be retired.

NHL looking more toward colleges for talent

By Ken Rappoport

As far back as anyone can remember, the Canadian juniors were the most direct route to the NHL for young hockey players.

A virtual mini-NHL, Canadian juniors have the same rules, the same kind of rinks and the same rough brand of hockey as the pros. They even allow fighting, an NHL specialty.

But while Canadian juniors are still generally regarded as the No. 1 proving ground for professional players, they aren't alone these days in providing talent for the NHL.

In fact, they're competing for attention from NHL teams with American colleges and high schools, not to mention European players, in what has become a global grab bag.

"High school hockey has really improved in the States," New York Ranger coach Roger Neilson said. "They don't have the junior hockey, so this is the equivalent of it."

"It's particularly good in the New England area. It used to be all Minnesota and Michigan. They've still got good hockey, of course. There are over 1,100 (high school) hockey teams in the States now, so that's a lot."

In previous years, many of those players would have gone to Canada for their training in juniors.

But now, they're continuing their hockey training in American colleges, which offer scholarships and an education. In fact, in a reversal of an earlier trend, many Canadian players have gone south to compete in American schools rather than stay in juniors.

Among the more notable players who crossed the border are Calgary's Joe Nieuwencyk, who played at Cornell University; James Patrick of the New York Rangers, the University of North Dakota; Boston's Dave Poulin, the University of Notre Dame, and Montreal's Brian Hayward, Cornell.

With 46 players drafted since 1969, the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, has been the top producer of American college talent for NHL teams. The Gophers have been followed by Michigan Technological University (38); the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and the University of Denver (35 each); Boston University and North Dakota (29 each); the University of Michigan (28), and Providence College (26).

"It's now called the 'universal draft,' and for good reason," says Darcy Regier, longtime director of player personnel with the New York Islanders who now is an assistant coach. "It is not really focused as much on Canadian juniors as in the past."

"I don't know if this is a trend away from juniors or just more of an increase in interest in the United States and Europe."

There was a time when NHL teams picked players almost exclusively from the Canadian juniors, which include the Ontario Hockey League, Western Hockey League and Quebec Major Junior League, and hardly ever from the American ranks.

When the first NHL draft was held in 1969, 67 of the 84 picks came out of Canadian juniors and only seven of the others out of American colleges.

But in 1987, NHL teams drafted 109 U.S. college and high school players, as opposed to 85 from Canadian juniors. In 1988, it was 104 from American schools and 85 from Canada. And last year, it was pretty much split down the middle.

The recent swing toward European players has been almost as dramatic. In the first nine years of the draft, a total of only 26 European players were taken by NHL teams. In the 1989 draft alone, 38 players were picked from abroad, including Sweden's Mats Sundin, who was taken by the Quebec Nordiques as the first European player to be chosen first overall.

This season, the trend is reflected on the rosters of NHL teams. While a large majority of the players are still from Canada at 72 percent, the league has seen record percentages achieved for both U.S.-born (16 percent) and European-born (12 percent) players.

"In the past, juniors used to be the thing," says Bob Johnson, executive director of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States and a former NHL and college coach. "But you'll find the NHL doing more business in America these days, as well as abroad. It's now an international National Hockey League. Canadians are even in the minority on some teams."

Of course, the new drafting regulations have had something to do with this trend. After the first three rounds, drafted players are required to have more experience. The idea of the rule is to allow most players to stay in juniors, rather than rush them into the NHL at too young an age.

But mostly, the reason NHL teams are looking all over the northern United States for players these days is simply that colleges and high schools in the United States have come of age hockey-wise.

Rappoport writes for the Associated Press.

Suspension of Washburn ends

The suspension of all men's athletics programs at Washburn University was lifted by the NAIA February 16 after the school agreed to forfeit its three 1989 football victories.

"Washburn has fully complied with the directive of our national executive committee with regard to the use of two ineligible student-athletes during the 1989 football season," said Wally Schwartz, assistant executive director of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

"In complying, the Washburn men's athletics program is reinstated as a member in good standing," he said.

The suspension stemmed from the participation of linebacker Wade Dennis and running back Phillip Brooks, who were injured after three games in 1987 and applied for an extra year of eligibility under the hardship rule. Washburn ran into trouble because of its dual membership in the NAIA, which is to end after the current academic year, and NCAA Division II.

The NCAA declared both players eligible for 1989 under its hardship rule. The NAIA rejected the players' hardship appeals. Dennis and Brooks, both seniors, obtained a court injunction allowing them to play. The injunction was dropped at the conclusion of the football season, clearing the way for the NAIA to suspend Washburn.

Two companies win suits to retain suites during Final Four

Two more organizations have sued successfully for use of their private suites at Denver's McNichols Sports Arena during the NCAA Final Four, bringing the total to three.

Denver District Judge Sandra Rothenberg ruled February 20 that Consolidated Freightways Corp. could use its 18-seat box and that Business Products Inc. could use its 14-seat suite, the Associated Press reported.

The companies join Denver lawyer Marc Geman, who late last year won the right to use his 18-seat box.

The NCAA has sought use of the private boxes held by season boxholders at McNichols for the Final Four, scheduled March 31 and April 2. Under terms of a February 1988 contract, the city of Denver promised the NCAA all of McNichols' 27 suites with 350 seats during the tournament. The NCAA had hoped to use the suites for its corporate sponsors.

Rothenberg ordered that the Final Four tickets be handed over to Consolidated Freightways and BPI within five days, or within three days after they are printed.

John J. Kitchin, NCAA legal counsel in Kansas City, Missouri, said he didn't think Rothenberg's decision would affect the tournament.

"It is an unfortunate situation that everybody is in, and our position is to put on the best tournament we can," he said. "I'm not trying to place blame or anything at this point. We're trying to go forward with what we've got to do."

Under a complicated contractual agreement, the city of Denver, which owns McNichols, gave the Denver Nuggets the right to lease the suites for "covered events," or any game or show to which the general public is admitted and pays an admission fee.

Geman and the two corporations claimed that the NCAA tournament was a "covered event." They contended that the city acted improperly when it declared the tournament to be a "noncovered event."

Stan Garnett, an attorney representing the Nuggets, said the Nuggets have reached agreement with all other suite holders. Those who wanted Final Four tickets received them for other sections of McNichols, he said.

Basketball parity to stay, Big Ten coaches agree

By Joe Mooshil

Television exposure and the spreading of more talent are some of the reasons Big Ten Conference coaches give for parity in college basketball.

"Television exposure," said Steve Fisher of the University of Michigan. "You don't have to go to a top-10 program to be seen. There are so many good players everywhere."

Jud Heathcote of Michigan State University attributed parity to limitations on scholarships and freshman eligibility.

"It has come about because of scholarship limits of 15," said Heathcote. "Also, there is freshman eligibility. Freshmen will not choose to go to a school where there are five starters. They will go where they can start."

Gene Keady of Purdue University thinks specialization is a factor.

"No doubt, there are a lot better athletes who develop their skills to the utmost," said Keady. "It's not like it was when we played more than one sport. Now, they delegate their high school careers to one sport. As a result, you have specialists in sports. The coaching skills are better. We use videos that make

Educator lists challenges to school reform

Education reformers face a triple challenge in improving the nation's schools — frequent change in government leadership, a system slow to change and a fickle public, Mark Musick, Southern Regional Education Board president, said February 21.

Educators must set goals and keep government and the public focused on improving education if they are to maintain the momentum of reform, Musick said at the annual meeting of the College Board's southern regional assembly, United Press International reported.

Most education reform is pushed by governors who face reelection every four years. Reform also is a long-term process that requires the support of a public with a short attention span, Musick said.

Musick said a key to improving education is to strengthen the ties between high schools and higher education so that students are prepared for college-level work. One goal of the Southern Regional Education Board is to have four of five students entering college prepared to begin college-level work, a 50 percent increase over the number of today's college-bound students.

"This goal is a school-college issue. It's not a finger-pointing issue. We don't have time for that," Musick said.

He said high schools would be better able to prepare students for college if they knew how well former students performed in higher education.

"Colleges should report to the high schools on their students' freshman year," Musick said. "I think that could provide a tangible way for schools and colleges to work together."

To better prepare students for college, the Southern board has recommended establishing standards for a core curriculum of high school courses, increasing the percentage of students who enroll in algebra courses by the 10th grade and setting appropriate standards for college study.

you more efficient, hopefully."

Lou Henson of the University of Illinois, Champaign, attributes parity to the popularity of the game.

"Basketball has become so popular and there is so much exposure that every team is good," said Henson. "Everybody is getting exposure, and there's a lot more emphasis on basketball throughout the country."

None could foresee the possibility of any one team dominating the scene such as teams from the University of California, Los Angeles, did in '60s and '70s.

"I don't know how anyone could do what UCLA did," said University of Wisconsin, Madison, coach Steve Yoder. "UCLA could go out and get the top talent. But now, players can stay at home and get the recognition they need."

Bill Foster of Northwestern University, said, "The days of a UCLA are over." But Foster said he could see the possibility of domination by conferences such as the Big Ten or the Big East Conference.

"A couple of leagues will continue to be strong," said Foster. "I think this conference will be the best or near the best. You look at the talent of some of the teams, and it could happen."

Ohio State University's Randy Ayers said there can be no domination "because of the limitation on the number of players you can bring into the program."

"And it's tough to ask young men to lay it on the line 28 times a year. It's tough to do, physically and mentally," he said.
