Deadline approaching for time-demand ideas

The deadline is rapidly approaching for athletics interest groups to submit recommendations to the NCAA Presidents Commission to reduce time demands on student-athletes.

All such submissions must be received by the Commission not later than April 1. They are to be sent to NCAA Presidents Commission, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422.

The 1990 NCAA Convention in Dallas adopted Proposal No. 30-A by a vote of 710-33. That proposal requires interest groups such as athletics administrators, coaches and NCAA governing sports committees to propose means of reducing the time that student-athletes must spend on their sports (other than basketball and football).

Ideas submitted in accordance with the proposal will be compiled for review by the Commission in its April 4-5 meeting, as well as by the NCAA Council in its April 23-25 meeting. The source of each properly submitted idea will be identified in that compilation.

The initial invitation to submit such proposals appeared in the January 17 issue of The NCAA News.

Undergraduates making use of NCAA educational grants

Nearly two-thirds — 62 percent — of the first 75 former student-athletes who received grants from the Association to complete undergraduate degrees have graduated, according to a report presented during a recent meeting of the NCAA Special Committee on Grants to Undergraduates.

Meeting March 5-6 in Tucson, Arizona, committee members also reviewed information about all of the 200 former student-athletes who have received NCAA Grants to Undergraduates Who Have Exhausted Institutional Financial Aid Opportunity.

The grant program provides aid to selected students who have exhausted eligibility for athletics-related financial aid at a Division I institution but are within 30 semester hours of graduation.

During the first two years of the program, $1 million in grants was awarded. In addition to the original 75 recipients of grants during the 1988-89 academic year, 100 former student-athletes received aid for 1989-90 and 25 were selected to receive aid beginning this semester.

Awards include tuition, board and room, books, and fees.

Most of the 200 recipients are men (160 recipients), including 75 who participated in football, 22 in basketball, 16 in baseball and 15 in track and field. Of women recipients, 19 participated in basketball and nine in track or cross country.

Classified by race, 125 of the recipients were white and 65 were black.

Since the program started, $100,000 in grants has been returned by students who were unable to meet requirements for renewal. These funds were redistributed to other recipients.

In order for a grant to be renewed for a second semester, recipients are required to successfully complete 12 semester hours with a cumulative grade-point average of 2.000 (4.000 scale).

Commission nominating committee headed by Mankato State's Preska

The Presidential Nominating Committee that will develop a slate of candidates for 1991 vacancies on the NCAA Presidents Commission has been appointed by Martin A. Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and chair of the Commission.

Margaret R. Preska, president of Mankato State University, was named by Massengale to chair the nominating committee.

Early this summer, the Presidential Nominating Committee will invite chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions to nominate candidates for the Commission vacancies that will occur next January. That invitation will be extended via The NCAA News.

The nominating committee then will meet in the fall, probably in conjunction with the Commission's October meeting, to develop the slate of candidates. CEOs in the various NCAA membership divisions then will vote by ballot to elect those who will become members at the conclusion of the 1991 NCAA Convention in January.

Included on the Presidential Nominating Committee each year are eight members of the Commission whose terms do not expire that year. All eight NCAA geographical districts are represented this year, as are all membership divisions and subdivisions.

Serving with Preska on the nominating committee are Anthony J. Diekema, Calvin College (Division III); Gail J. Fullerton, San Jose State University (Division I-A); Joseph B. Johnson, Grambling State University (Division I-AA); Chase N. Peterson, University of Utah (Division I-A); Tyronza R. Richmond, North Carolina Central University (Division II); Catherine A. Tisinger, North Adams State College (Division III), and Stephen Joel Trachtenberg, George Washington University (Division I-AAA). Preska's institution, Mankato State, is in Division II.

Members to get help on antidrug programs

Three regional workshops will be held this spring to help NCAA member institutions develop effective drug-education and student-assistance programs for athletes.

The workshops will be conducted by Roger Svendsen and Tom Griffin of the Minnesota Institute of Public Health and will include sessions given by health professionals, athletics administrators and counselors. The workshops are sponsored by the NCAA and its Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The sessions are designed for athletics directors, coaches, trainers, team physicians, conference commissioners and others responsible for drug-education programs for student-athletes. The competitive-safeguards committee also is encouraging institutions to send staff members who work in health services, counseling, campus ministry and other student services because one of the major themes will be how athletics departments can work with other campus organizations.

The workshop dates and sites:

- April 19-20, Chicago, Illinois.
- May 3-4, Atlanta, Georgia.
- May 17-18, Los Angeles, California.

Sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the first day and end by 12:15 p.m. the next day. Participants will be responsible for travel, lodging and expenses. A limited number of hotel rooms have been reserved at each site. There is no registration fee for the workshops.

The NCAA has sent registration forms to the chief executive officer and director of athletics at each member institution. Because the enrollment in each workshop is limited, the competitive-safeguards committee urges institutions to register soon. The committee intends to sponsor additional workshops next academic year for institutions that are not selected or are unable to send representatives.

More information on the drug-education workshops is available from Susana Occhi, NCAA administration department intern, at the national office.

Expecting negative report, Michigan State defends drug plan

Michigan State University athletics officials have defended their drug-testing policy, saying they know it isn't foolproof, but they believe it's fair and effective.

University officials apparently were trying to preempt an impending report about steroid and other drug use among their athletes. School spokesman Terry Drenbow said athletes were getting "an inordinate amount of phone calls" from reporters inquiring about that topic, and he wanted to make sure the school's drug-testing policy was understood clearly.

Outgoing athletics director Douglas W. Weaver; football coach and future athletics director George Perles, and Dr. David Hough, head of sports medicine at Michigan State, attended the news conference.

Hough said the school tests for drug use only athletes who they have a reasonable cause to believe are substance abusers, the Associated Press reported.

Team doctors, for the most part, rely on coaches and team trainers to identify a problem athlete. Trouble signs are a declining performance in classes and in their sport, financial problems, and difficulty with the law or in their social lives, Hough said.

At that point, the athletes get counseling and aren't allowed to play until the team doctor believes they are thoroughly rehabilitated and in control of their drug problems. For the remainder of the season, the athlete is subject to regular, random drug testing.

Hough said a handful of athletes were treated for steroid use last year. He identified alcohol as the most prevalent drug among athletes at Michigan State and elsewhere, followed by marijuana and cocaine.

Perles acknowledged that it might be tempting for a coach to look the other way if a star athlete is suspected of using drugs, but he said health is the athletics department's No. 1 priority.

"It might be tempting; I hope to God it's not on my conscience or (that of) any of the other coaches in our conference. I don't think it would happen in our conference," Perles said. "I wouldn't have anyone in our conference, our school included, that I'd be suspicious of in that area."

Other schools that test athletes randomly, at cost of up to $250,000 a year, aren't any more successful at identifying substance abusers than Michigan State, Hough said.

He added that new sanctions presented by the NCAA should dramatically deter steroid use among athletes.

Coaches' association honors three

The American Baseball Coaches Association has elected six coaches for induction into the association's hall of fame.

The six inductees are John Cunningham, University of San Diego; Gordon Gillespie, College of St. Francis (Illinois); Robert Hannah, University of Delaware; Jerry Kindall, University of Arizona; Ron Maestri, University of New Orleans, and Ken Schreiber, LaPorte (Indiana) High School.

The six will be inducted at the Hall of Fame-Coch of the Year Banquet January 5, 1991, in New Orleans. They will join 137 other amateur baseball coaches in the ABCA Hall of Fame.

The ABCA also will present its Meritorious Service Award to George Pfister. Pfister, assistant director of baseball operations for the baseball commissioner's office, has been involved in professional baseball for more than 50 years as a player, manager and administrator.

Cunningham has served as head coach at San Diego for 27 years. His teams have won more than 600 games. Gillespie, the winningest active coach in college baseball at St. Francis, has compiled a 1,181-596 record in 37 years of coaching.

Hannah, a highly regarded administrator in addition to his coaching, also is one of college baseball's winningest active coaches, with a 616-285 record in 25 years at Delaware. Kindall, a former major-leaguer and all-America, has won three NCAA championships and nearly 700 games in 17 seasons at Arizona.

Maestri, who relinquished his coaching duties to devote full time to the director of athletics position, never had a losing season in recording a 14-year mark of 519-246 at New Orleans. Schreiber has a 781-165 record in 30 years at LaPorte High School.

class of recipients, said Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and staff liaison to the committee. When the program began, the committee hoped to achieve at least a 50 percent rate.

Hoping to improve the rate further, the committee has decided to place more emphasis on student-athletes' grade-point averages in considering future applications for grants. A rating scale used in evaluating candidates for grants was revised to reflect the increased emphasis on grades.

The committee also reviewed grant recipients' comments on program-evaluation forms. Several students said they could not have completed their degrees or obtained their current jobs without the grants.

Some also offered suggestions, such as giving former student-athletes who are seeking teaching degrees more than one year of aid.

During the committee's meeting, Walsh also shared with members a letter from Dick MacPherson of Syracuse University, in which the football coach described the grant program as "a worthy program and a big step forward."

Applications for 1990-91 grants are due to the NCAA by May 15, Walsh said. Former student-athletes seeking aid beginning in the 1991 spring semester must submit applications by October 1.

Further information about the grant program is available from Walsh at the NCAA national office.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 11

Legislative timetable

Member institutions should note the following timetable for the submission and review of proposed amendments to be voted upon by the membership at the 1991 NCAA Convention.

1. Proposed amendments submitted by the membership.

a. July 1: Deadline for submission of amendments, each with a statement of intent and separate statement of rationale (which may not exceed 200 words). A primary contact person must be designated from among the institutions (minimum of eight) sponsoring the amendment.

b. July 1-15: NCAA Legislative Review Committee will work with primary contact person to review and refine the proposal to ensure that it meets the intent of the sponsor, to ensure that the placement of the amendment is consistent with maintaining the organizational integrity of the Manual, and to edit the intent and rationale statements of the sponsors for purposes of clarity and brevity. (Note: There will be no effort by the Legislative Review Committee during this period to change the substance or intent of the proposal.)

c. July 15: Legislative Review Committee deadline for finalization of language and placement of amendment (with sponsor's approval of changes) and editorial revision of statements of intent and rationale (sponsor's approval not required).

d. August 1: Publication of amendments proposed by the membership. The publication will include instructions regarding the opportunity for the sponsors of a proposal to take action (until September 1) to refine the proposal, as follows:

(1) Without going through a formal amendment-to-amendment process, sponsors will be permitted to refine and change their proposals during this period, as long as the change in the amendment is germane to the original proposal (submitted by the July 1 deadline). Subject to this standard, the changes could increase or decrease modification of the original amendment.

(2) Member institutions will have the opportunity during this period to contact the primary contact person for each amendment's sponsors to offer suggested revisions of the proposal. The name, title and institution of the primary contact person would be published with the amendment August 1.

(3) Member institutions that support the amendment as published should indicate such support during this period to the primary contact person because once this modification period is completed, the proposal may be further amended (by nonsponsors) only through amendments-to-amendments that do not increase the modification of the proposal (per Constitution 5.3.1.2).

(4) Statements of intent and rationale for each proposal will be published with the amendment August 1 to assist member institutions in evaluating the merits of each proposal.

e. September 1: Deadline for submission by sponsors of any modifications to original member-submitted amendments.

(1) The primary contact person for each proposal will be responsible for ensuring that all the original sponsors agree to the modification.

(2) As noted, the modifications to this point must only be germane to the original amendment and may be more or less restrictive than the original proposal. This approach is consistent with Robert's Rules of Order and is intended to allow sponsors maximum flexibility in refining each proposal based on input from the membership.

f. September 15: Second publication of member-submitted amendments, this time as modified, to be sent to the membership with instructions regarding the September 15-October 15 period for amendments-to-amendments. [Note: During this review period, amendments-to-amendments may not increase the modification of the provision to be amended (per Constitution 5.3.1.2).]

g. October 15: Deadline for submission of amendments-to-amendments.

h. November 15: Publication of Official Notice of the Convention.

2. Proposed amendments submitted by the Council, its steering committees and the Presidents Commission.

a. July 1: Deadline for submission of recommendations from the Association's committees to the Council regarding proposed legislation to be considered during the next annual Convention.

b. July 2-3: NCAA Administrative Committee or a legislative subcommittee designated by the Council will review all standing committee reports and direct the staff to prepare legislation, as well as intent and rationale statements, for proposals deemed most likely to receive the Council's support. A similar process will be implemented for Presidents Commission proposals.

c. July 4-15: Legislative Review Committee will work with the staff to review and refine legislative proposals to ensure that each meets its intent, to ensure that the placement of each amendment is consistent with maintaining the organizational integrity of the Manual, and to edit the intent and rationale statements for purposes of brevity and clarity.

d. July 15: Legislative Review Committee deadline for review of prospective Presidents Commission and Council proposals. These proposals will be mailed to Council members as part of their August meeting agenda.

e. August 1-7: Council meets during this week to consider legislative proposals (i.e., those prepared by the staff and Legislative Review Committee, as well as any others deemed appropriate) and also reviews member-submitted proposals.

f. August 15: Deadline for submission of amendments by the Council, its steering committees and Presidents Commission.

g. August 15-September 1: Legislative Review Committee will work with the staff to review and refine all proposals sponsored by the Council, its steering committees and the Presidents Commission. The final form of each legislative proposal will be approved by the Administrative Committee or a legislative subcommittee of the Council or Presidents Commission.

h. September 1: Legislative Review Committee deadline for finalization of amendments.

i. September 15: Publication of all amendments submitted by the Council, its steering committees and the Presidents Commission. This publication will include instructions regarding the September 15-October 15 amendment-to-amendment period.

j. October 15: Deadline for submission of amendments-to-amendments.

k. November 15: Publication of Official Notice of the Convention.

Goal-post proposal back in committee

Acting for the NCAA Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee recently remanded to the Football Rules Committee its recommendation regarding a reduction in the width of goal-post uprights from 23 feet 4 inches to 18 feet 6 inches.

The rules committee was directed to study the issue further in regard to costs to institutions, goal-post warranty ramifications, coaches' opinions of the change, and kicking-accuracy data in all NCAA football-playing divisions and subdivisions.

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee has restated its charge to enforce proper conduct to game officials and coaches who will be involved in the 1990 Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Committee chair James E. Delany, Big Ten Conference commissioner, said the rules relating to misconduct during and after the competition will be strictly enforced. Those rules include, but are not limited to, abusive sideline behavior, fighting and postgame criticism of officiating.

Procedures dealing with misconduct have been in place for some time. The committee in the past has disciplined players and coaches for conduct that has been detrimental to the tournament.

"The men's basketball championship is the showcase for intercollegiate athletics," Delany said. "We will not tolerate any form of misconduct by players or coaches. We again are instructing both the game officials and the games committee at each site to demand the highest level of sportsmanship.

"We expect all involved to conduct themselves in a manner that will both complement and enhance the prestige of this championship," Delany said.

Iowa State study recommends changes in athletics policies

An Iowa State University committee has released a study recommending major changes in how the school handles student-athletes, including an academic-redshirt provision and tighter eligibility requirements. The study drew criticism from at least two head coaches.

The 10-month study recommends requiring academically at-risk freshmen to sit out their first year of competition and closer monitoring of the academic progress of each athlete.

One of the study's statistics showed that 34 percent of football and men's basketball players attain their degrees within six years of

Player suspended

Oklahoma State University head men's basketball coach Leonard Hamilton suspended John Potter from the team March 12 for Potter's role in a fight that broke out at the end of the Cowboys' loss to Colorado in the Big Eight Conference tournament.

"This is certainly an unfortunate situation," Hamilton said. "We do not condone this kind of action and will take whatever steps are necessary to prevent something like this from ever happening again."

The suspension was effective immediately and will cover Oklahoma State's first-round NIT game against Tulsa in Stillwater March 15.

entering the school. Overall, the report showed that almost 66 percent of woman athletes and 45 percent of men who entered Iowa State as freshmen from 1981 to 1984 graduated at the end of six years. The six-year graduation rate for all Iowa State students is about 62 percent.

Men's basketball coach Johnny Orr said that if the recommendations were implemented, the Cyclones could not compete in the Big Eight Conference in either football or basketball.

Orr termed the committee an unwanted intrusion by professors into the athletics department and said if the administration thinks he's doing a poor job with his student-athletes, it should fire him. United Press International reported.

Football coach Jim Walden also said he resents professors with expertise in other areas telling the athletics department what it should do, United Press International reported.

The committee recommended new eligibility requirements that would be more stringent than those currently required by the NCAA. The committee said normal admissions standards require students to rank in the top half of their graduating classes or score at least 24 on the ACT. However, students who do not meet such requirements may be admitted if they show potential for academic success. The minimum

Coach puts it all on the line for benefit of cancer patient

Most college basketball coaches will tell you that their job is like walking a tightrope, but Mansfield University men's coach Tom Ackerman knows better.

He really has walked a tightrope. Mansfield and its athletics department recently sponsored what was billed as the farewell performance of the world famous Wallenda Family high-wire act. The show was a benefit for aerialist Angel Wallenda, the cancer-stricken wife of Steven Wallenda, the family's only remaining male performer.

According to Mansfield sports information director Steve McCloskey, who helped organize the benefit, an anonymous donor put $50 in the "Angel Fund" to see Ackerman walk 30 feet of half-inch wire 16 feet above the floor.

There was no net. "I thought they were kidding when the announcer called me to the floor," said Ackerman, who just completed his first season at the school. "I was kind of on the spot in front of all those people.

"If I had time to think about it, I may have backed out, but it really wasn't that bad," recalled the coach, who held onto the shoulders of Steven Wallenda as the aerialist led him across the wire.

"However, I have no desire to do it again."

Mansfield raised approximately $10,000 for Angel Wallenda, who is preparing to undergo surgery for lung cancer. She already has overcome one operation, which resulted in doctors removing her right leg in 1987. Fitted with an artificial leg, Angel was able to go on with her high-wire career.

Unfortunately, the lung surgery will end that career, which prompted the Wallendas to schedule their farewell performance.

Steven Wallenda suggested the idea to McCloskey, who in turn enlisted the support of athletics

Steven Wallenda, a member of the famed Wallenda high-wire act, leads Mansfield University men's basketball coach Tom Ackerman across a half-inch wire during the Wallenda family's recent farewell performance at the school. director Roger Maisner.

"Our whole philosophy at Mansfield is people helping people," Maisner said. "When Steve asked me if we could help, I never hesitated. We are one of the biggest groups in our community and I firmly believe it's up to us to set the example."

rank in the upper half of their graduating classes or receive ACT composite scores of 18 or higher.

NCAA eligibility requires a grade-point average of 2.000 (4.000 scale) in a set of core courses and an ACT composite score of at least 15 or an SAT score of 700.

The committee also recommended that freshmen admitted under regular admissions standards be allowed to compete athletically. Those who do not meet regular admissions standards may be allowed to practice but should not be allowed to compete during their freshman year. The committee also recommended that such students have four years of athletics eligibility remaining, subject to Big Eight and NCAA regulations.

"Since it is common to redshirt student-athletes who are not prepared to compete successfully on the field, so it seems appropriate to redshirt student-athletes who are not academically prepared to compete successfully in the classroom," the report said. "On the other hand, the committee believes that good students who are also athletes should not be prevented from competing as freshmen."

The committee also suggested creating a faculty committee to review the academic records of athletes each semester to ensure that athletes are making satisfactory progress toward degrees. Most athletes are "in good academic standing and making satisfactory progress," the report said. "However, a number of transcripts reflected course selection that did not seem to be directed at systematic progress toward a degree."

Iowa State President Gordon P. Eaton, who will decide what recommendations to implement, praised the work of the committee and called the recommendations "thoughtful, scholarly and carefully conceived." He promised to give each consideration.

"Implementation of the recommendations with any necessary modifications will make Iowa State a model for intercollegiate athletics, and I intend to make it a high priority for this institution," he said.

Max Urlick, director of athletics, also commended the committee for its work but did not endorse the suggestions.

"While the information may be enlightening to individuals outside the athletics department, the data illustrate that most student-athletes experience the same successes and failures as the student body in general. I believe we are aware of both our strengths and our weaknesses and are determined to continue making progress in this area," he said.

"The present pattern indicates that we are proceeding in the right direction, and I hope perception will catch up to that progress," he continued.

Comment

Amid the criticism, it's time to note our progress

By Sam Jankovich

Much has been said about intercollegiate athletics the past couple of years, and as a person who has always enjoyed sports and intercollegiate athletics, I find many of the articles condemning big-time college sports most unfortunate.

While there certainly are problems, there are people at different levels making accusations without giving a whole lot of consideration to the substantial progress we have made in the past few years.

If you were to visit with people who have been in this business for the past 25 or 30 years, most would agree that we are in much better shape than we were five and 10 years ago. There were abuses of the young student-athletes who have represented outstanding educational institutions throughout the entire country. Much of the NCAA legislation that has been passed in recent years has addressed these abuses and has had a positive impact on college sports in general.

It is instructive to assess some of the meaningful legislation that has been passed over the years, including:

- Scholarship limitations;
- Recruiting periods;
- The (satisfactory) progress rule, and
- Proposition 48 (Bylaw 14.3).

Further, many institutions have implemented better controls and reporting procedures as far as auditing programs, salaries, people representing athletics programs and eliminating supporters from any involvement in recruiting whatsoever are concerned.

These, of course, are just a few.

It is frustrating for me to read about, and listen to, people who report that we are not making progress or that athletics is in serious trouble when, at the same time, these same people make statements not supported by the evidence. Specifically:

• Freshman eligibility: As yet, there is no proof that varsity competition by the few freshmen who compete is hurting their academic progress. Most surveys and reports indicate that the freshmen who compete are doing quite well.

• Spring football: The elimination of spring football will not help the academic progress of the young people we have participating in football. You will find that most grades have improved substantially during the spring.

• Academic integrity: The allegation that we do not have academic integrity is not the case. All one has to do is look at the progress that has been made since the good-academic-standing rule was passed, as well as Proposition 48 and other academic standards.

If you were to take a survey of most of the outstanding programs throughout the country, you will find that the academic progress of our student-athletes is much better now than ever before and would compare favorably with student bodies in general.

The most significant problem with intercollegiate athletics is that many institutions have not assumed institutional control over their athletics programs. I believe that presidents and trustees should assume the responsibility for athletics and make certain there is a chain of command and that everybody abides by it. We need to corral the fund-raising arms, as well as the outside income of coaches, and bring them under the umbrella of athletics departments. We also need strict regulations and education for people both outside and inside the departments. If we take these steps, we can continue to make progress toward correcting many of the problems that still plague intercollegiate athletics.

Because of the NCAA, I believe that colleges and universities around the country have taken a very positive grip on drug education and testing and have made tremendous progress in that area. In addition, many institutions such as Miami have hired compliance and enforcement officers to put in place preventive measures.

We thus have better institutional control over our intercollegiate athletics programs, including proper education programs for the university community, athletics department representatives, student-athletes and boosters.

One cannot legislate morality. We must employ the best possible people. In my travels and being involved with this business for over 30 years, I have found many more people who are committed to integrity and honor and the well-being of student-athletes than not.

Also, there has been a tremendous effort the last five years on the part of the administrators as well as coaches to get the proper handle on integrity, academic standards and the well-being of the young people involved.

The programs that succeed year in and year out are those programs that are doing it the right way. Let the record speak for itself; those that are winning on the field of competition and those that also are involved with outstanding academic institutions are a credit to higher education.

Freshman eligibility and time demands

To the Editor:

I strongly support legislation aimed at reducing time demands on student-athletes. However, the elimination of freshman eligibility is not the solution to the problem.

The NCAA must be careful not to penalize the large number of student-athletes who benefit from practice and competition. The NCAA must realize that many freshman student-athletes are conditioned to the positive environment that high-school athletics provided them. These student-athletes are intelligent, well-disciplined and do not have difficulty balancing their academic and athletics schedules. They learned that discipline long before enrolling in college.

There are student-athletes in all sports who enjoy the challenge that academics and athletics provide and do very well at meeting the demands placed on them. If the NCAA eliminates freshman eligibility, it will take away something that has become an important and positive aspect of these students' lives.

I believe it is fair to assume that there are sports in all three divisions of the NCAA that place unreasonable demands on student-athletes, but elimination of freshman eligibility is not the appropriate process and does not solve the overall problem of reducing time demands on student-athletes.

One may argue that the elimination of freshman eligibility is good because it gives the student-athlete a year to adjust to school. That is a valid argument, but when the student begins practicing and competing in the second year of school, the time demands are still there.

The solution to reducing time demands lies in researching ideas and suggestions from coaches, athletics administrators and others concerned with the welfare of student-athletes.

The NCAA must look positively at reducing practice and travel time away from campus. The NCAA must explore all avenues for reducing time demands on student-athletes and must be thorough in its research before making decisions that will affect the eligibility of student-athletes.

Revenue should go to all schools' scholarship funds

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Judith M. Sweet, chair of the NCAA Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues, by Richard Warch, president of Lawrence University. He sent a copy of the letter to The NCAA News.

As someone who earned the title (or epithet) as "the Robin Hood" of the NCAA Convention in Dallas in 1987, I write here with a suggestion that may not be surprising.

I recommend that the NCAA use the $1 billion CBS contract to provide scholarship funds for all member NCAA institutions in all divisions, perhaps on some enrollment-formula basis.

In the first instance, of course, these revenues should be used to cover the expenses of the teams participating in the basketball and other tournaments; but beyond that, it seems to me inappropriate to distribute those funds exclusively to the institutions whose teams are so involved.

Everyone is agreed, to some degree or other, that the money involved in big-time intercollegiate athletics is a principal source of many of the difficulties in those programs and that the quest for revenues drives all too many institutions.

By removing the extraordinary financial incentives involved in athletics, the NCAA would be sending a signal that it supports the collegiate academic values of member institutions, not just athletics ones.

Such a decision would give substance to what we often give only voice. Such a decision would be bold, controversial, perhaps even contested; but it would also do more to restore public and political faith in the NCAA and in higher education than any other act of the Association.

I have also heard the suggestion that the CBS revenues should be used to purchase insurance for all NCAA student-athletes. That idea too strikes me as having merit and might well be the "second" use of such funds after paying team expenses and before making the kind of allocation I've suggested here.

The NCAA is responding in a number of encouraging ways to the many calls for reform—including what may be styled the threats from Congress.

I urge you and your committee to take the major and meaningful step of recommending a broad distribution of the CBS revenues to support the essential purposes of higher education as conducted by member colleges for their students.

Cheating is growing, study shows

Academic fraud is as old as education itself, but studies indicate about 20 percent to 30 percent of students cheat, and the figure is apparently rising.

College administrators say the incidence of cheating is troubling but not inexplicable, given the "make it" mentality of the 1980s, the Associated Press reported.

"One student who was caught couldn't understand what he'd done that was so wrong," said Arthur Levine, chair of Harvard University's Institute for Educational Management.

"His argument amounted to: 'Everyone cheats and as long as I do it well, I won't get caught and will succeed in society.'"

Forty-three percent of 5,000 professors nationwide responded "yes" when the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching asked: "Are today's undergraduates more willing to cheat in order to get good grades?"

"Perhaps the most discouraging side of the survey data is the portrait faculty paint of students, both in the classroom and beyond," the Prince-ton-based foundation's president, Ernest L. Boyer, wrote on releasing the study last November.

Getting ahead any way you know how is sometimes perceived as part of playing the game of survival, college administrators said.

"Students read the newspaper and look at television and see plenty of examples of dishonesty in society," said Timothy F. Brooks, dean of students at the University of Delaware.

A recent national survey by the American Council on Education and the Higher Education Research Institute at the University of California, Los Angeles, offers a glimpse of the problem.

About 37 percent of the first-year students surveyed in fall 1988 said they had cheated in their final year in high school, up from about 30 percent the previous year, according to "The American Freshman," an annual survey of about 200,000 students nationwide.

About 57 percent admitted they had copied another student's work, compared with about 52 percent in 1987, the study said.

"If you find a large number of people who have been cheating in their last year of high school, that presumably has implications for their behavior in college," said William Korn, an associate director at the research institute.

Korn said the institute questioned students about cheating for the first time in 1987, but a trend toward increased academic fraud could be detected even in the gap between students who started college in 1985 as opposed to those who started just two years earlier.

Eighteen percent of students in the class of 1987 said they had cheated the previous year, compared with 21.3 percent of students who were to graduate in 1989, Korn said.

Similarly, 29.7 percent of the seniors questioned said they had copied from other students' work during the previous year, compared with 34.1 percent of sophomores, according to responses from about 3,800 students taken for the joint survey "The American College Student, 1987."

LoSchiavo saved a sport by first suspending it

By Harry Jupiter
San Francisco Chronicle

When the president of the University of San Francisco shut down the basketball program in 1982, it ignited enormous rage. USF alumni wanted to apply tar and feathers to the Rev. John LoSchiavo.

The university survived, and so did the Jesuit priest.

Basketball is back, the program is under control and now, at the age of 65, LoSchiavo is preparing to move aside.

Although he is retiring as president of USF, he is not going away. He anticipates continued heavy involvement as the school's chancellor.

In his 12 years at the helm of the university, nothing at USF got anywhere near the national attention that erupted when he took the basketball away.

"It was clear we had to do what we did," LoSchiavo says, "and it was also clear it was going to cause a firestorm. But I never expected how much it would cause."

There had been problems with the NCAA. And then, Quintin Dailey, the best basketball player USF has had in the past decade, was arrested for a sexual assault.

Father LoSchiavo said enough was more than enough. Basketball was out of hand on the Hilltop.

"We teach moral behavior and Christian values at USF," LoSchiavo said. "The basketball program was contradicting the university's basic values."

"Now, we have players and coaches who are representative of the USF ethic. It seems ethics have become kind of popular again at schools all over the United States."

LoSchiavo was stunned by the volume of mail he received in 1982. "I got more than 1,000 letters from people all over the country," he said, "most of them from people I didn't know, who expressed sympathy with the problem and agreement with what I had done."

"I also got about 50 letters that were negative, strongly opposed to what I had done. But the overwhelming response from around the country was supportive. Of course, it wasn't supportive around here. Not at first, anyway."

LoSchiavo was an all-city basketball player at St. Ignatius High School. He coached a grammar-school team in Spokane while he was attending Mt. St. Michael's Seminary, then coached the 130-pounders at St. Ignatius.

But the biggest contribution to the game came the day in 1982 when he blew the whistle.

THE BLACK ATHLETE

WINNERS OR LOSERS IN ACADEMIA?

They have been called America's modern day gladiators. They are seen by millions of Americans every week in arenas, stadiums or on the living room television set. They are the most visible and controversial segment of American higher education. They are our major colleges' student athletes.

In a thorough and revealing telecommunications event, all of the issues surrounding today's college athletes will be evaluated, including: secondary preparation, recruiting, admissions, testing, the role of the NCAA, and graduation and matriculation issues. This live, interactive telecommunications event will provide a unique view of the best and worst aspects of how modern college programs have combined academics and athletics to the benefit of the individual athlete and the university. This event also will take a very insightful look at the myths and realities of the plight of the Black college athlete.

Tournament features who's who among men's coaches

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

The 52nd Division I Men's Basketball Championship will have one of the most prestigious coaching fields ever, with one 600-game winner, six 500-game winners, nine 400-game winners and 10 more with at least 300 career wins.

North Carolina's Dean Smith, with a 686-202 record, has made seven trips to the Final Four (second only to the 12 by UCLA's John Wooden), but none since his 1982 championship team.

What coach made the most Final Four appearances without winning it all? Guy Lewis of Houston (now retired) is the answer. He led the Cougars to five Final Four berths between 1967 and 1984.

UTEP's Don Haskins, next with 563 career wins, won the championship in 1966 when the school's name was Texas Western. The other 500-game winners in the field are Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian (559), Illinois' Lou Henson (556), Missouri's Norm Stewart (552), Alabama-Birmingham's Gene Bartow (536) and Indiana's Bob Knight (532). Knight leads this year's coaching field with three NCAA titles (1976, 1981 and 1987), while Louisville's Denny Crum has two championships (1980 and 1986). Crum also has made six trips to the Final Four, trailing only Smith among active coaches.

Four times since 1982, Smith's teams were runner-up in the regional, just one victory from the Final Four. This is Smith's 16th its first trip since 1979, and Connecticut, No. 1 seed in the East region, making its first appearance since 1979.

Big Ten well-liked

The Big Ten Conference had seven teams selected for the championship, the most from one league since the field was opened up to multiple conference teams in 1975. The Big East Conference had six teams taken, and the Atlantic Coast Conference got five teams in the field.

First-timers who played

Eleven coaches are in the tournament for the first time. Four of them also played in the tournament. They are Dayton's O'Brien at St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), Brigham Young's Reid at Weber State, Illinois State's Bender at Duke and Ohio State's Ayers at Miami (Ohio).

Ayers was the leading scorer on Miami's 1978 squad, and he totaled 20 points vs. Marquette in a first-round, 84-81 victory. He came back with 18 points in a 91-69 loss to consecutive NCAA tournament—the record, by far (Georgetown's John Thompson is next at 12 straight). Illinois, Nevada-Las Vegas, Oklahoma and Syracuse all have made eight in a row. And Smith's 20 total tournaments ties him for the all-time mark with Adolph Rupp of Kentucky.

The chart on this page provides the career and tournament records and tourney finishes of all 64 coaches in the 1990 field.

First year, new job

Four coaches are making the NCAA tournament in their first year as head coaches on the four-year level. They are Ball State's Dick Hunsaker, Brigham Young's Roger Reid, Ohio State's Randy Ayers and Oregon State's Jim Anderson. Dayton's Jim O'Brien and Illinois State's Bob Bender have previous head coaching experience and led teams to the tournament in their first year at the new school.

Michigan's Steve Fisher officially is finishing his first regular season as the Wolverines' head coach. But who can forget last year, when Michigan won six straight games and the championship after Fisher took over in the tournament as interim coach for Bill Freider?

First time, long time

Six teams are in the NCAA tournament for the first time in school history—Coppin State, Northern Iowa, South Florida, Southern Mississippi, Texas Southern and Towson State.

"Long-timers" in the tournament are California, making its first NCAA trip since 1960, when coach Pete Newell led the Golden Bears to a runner-up finish (incidentally, Knight was a player on the Ohio State team that defeated California in the finals); New Mexico State, in eventual champion Kentucky.

These four coaches bring to 73 the number who have both played and coached in the tournament (of 462 tourney coaches in history, this year's newcomers included; the chart shows the other seven). Twelve more of the 73 are in the current field.

Only five in history have both played and coached in the Final Four. Dick Harp, who both played and coached at Kansas, was the first. Then came Bones McKinney (North Carolina and Wake Forest), Vic Bubas (North Carolina State and Duke), Smith (Kansas and North Carolina) and Knight (Ohio State and Indiana).

Smith and Knight are the only coaches to play on a championship team and to coach a championship team.

The only other coach in the current field (besides Knight and Smith) who played in the Final Four and coached in the tournament is Loyola Marymount's Paul Westhead. That leaves nine in the current field who have played and coached in the tournament—Syracuse's Jim Boheim, Minnesota's Clem Haskins, UTEP's Don Haskins, Kansas State's Lon Kruger, Arkansas' Nolan Richardson, Georgetown's John Thompson, Texas' Tom Penders, Robert Morris' Jarrett Durham and UC Santa Barbara's Jerry Pimm.

Boheim and Kruger played for the teams they now coach. Westhead played at St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), Clem Haskins at Western Kentucky, Don Haskins at Oklahoma State (under Henry Iba), Richardson at UTEP, Thompson at Providence, Penders at Connecticut, Durham at Duquesne and Pimm at Southern California.

West Virginia wins rifle crown by hefty margin

West Virginia shooters won the school's third team title March 10 at the NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships with performances that produced the largest margin of victory (104 points) in the championships' 11-year history.

"What impressed me most was their consistency," said first-year Mountaineer coach Marsha Beasley, shortly after her team defeated host Navy, 6,205-6,101. Beasley, the first woman to coach a rifle team in the NCAA championships, is believed to be the first woman head coach in the sport's history.

"Their performance shows how well they have adapted to the trauma associated with coaching changes," said Beasley, the third coach in the past three years at West Virginia. Greg Perrine led the squad to the 1988 title while Ed Etzel was on sabbatical.

Etzel returned last year and led the Mountaineers to the team championship—his fourth as West Virginia coach. Etzel resigned shortly after the 1989 season and was replaced by Beasley.

"The program has been in place, and this championship just continues West Virginia's success," she said. "I didn't go in and change a lot of things... I didn't need to. Ed had a great system in place, and this title is a reflection of that."

The Mountaineer effort was led by Gary Hardy, who established two championships records and won the individual air rifle title March 9. Because air-rifle targets were changed after last season (the bull's-eye was reduced by 50 percent), records have been established for competition using the new targets.

Hardy fired a 393 (400 is perfect) in the individual competition and backed that up with a 394 in the team competition. Because the Association recognizes two sets of championships records in rifle (scores fired in individual competition and scores fired in either individual or team competition), both of Hardy's scores set records for the new targets.

South Florida's Michelle Scarborough, who won the 1989 air rifle title with a 399 (39 out of a possible 40 bull's-eyes, fired on the old targets), captured the 1990 individual smallbore crown with an 1,160 (1,200 is perfect). West Virginia's Tammie DeAngelis finished second.

Championships notes

• Women once again played a major role in the championships. Half of the top 10 shooters in individual competition were women, and half of West Virginia's title-winning effort was produced by women.

• Navy's second-place finish was the highest ever by one of the service academies. These championships were the first in which all three academies were represented in the team competition.

• Sports Illustrated writer William Nack spent four days at Navy for a feature on the rifle championships that will appear in the magazine's next issue.

TEAM RESULTS

1. West Va. (Thomas Bernstein, Tammie DeAngelis, Gary Hardy, Kim Hogrefe, Ann Pfiffner, Garrett Smith) 4,652 (smallbore only); 1,553 (air rifle)—6,205; 2. Four individual titles propel Vermont to skiing victory

Vermont used four individual championships and 14 top-five finishes in eight events to defend its team title at the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships March 7-10 in Stowe, Vermont.

It was the second consecutive title for the Catamounts, who outdistanced second-place Utah, 671-571, in the four-day event. Colorado (532) was third, Wyoming (477) was fourth and Dartmouth (476) was fifth.

The victory marked the first time since 1978 that a school successfully defended the team title on its home course.

"We skied, as a team, our absolute best," Vermont coach Chip LaCasse said. "Everything came together. It was good timing. This is the best a Vermont team has ever skied."

The Catamounts did it with balance and power. Despite a first-place finish for Vermont by Einar Bohmer in the men's giant slalom, the Cats were unable to get another top-five finish the first day of competition. Utah's Anke Friedrich won the women's GS.

On the second day of competition, Vermont made its push. Joe Galanes and Sturla Hagen finished second and third in the men's diagonal cross country; and Laura Wilson, Selma Lie and Kerrin Petty finished first, third and fifth, respectively, in the women's diagonal.

The Catamounts were on top to stay.

They finished second, third and fourth in the men's slalom and fifth in the women's event to take a 19-point lead into the final day of competition. None of the eight team members fell during the slalom competition.

"To have all eight team members stand up is amazing," LaCasse said. "That had the whole team so high, and it took a lot of pressure off our cross country skiers for Saturday's competition."

Vermont responded with a one-two finish in both the men's and women's freestyle cross country events the final day. Tim Miller and Paul Hansen finished first and second in the men's event; and Laura Wilson captured her second individual title in the women's event, with Selma Lie finishing second.

"I was surprised at how well our freshmen responded to the need for a team effort," LaCasse said. "I was concerned about that in September. Half the squad were freshmen. I told them that at some time in the year, I might have to ask them to not win an event, even though they might be in a position to do so, to ensure that everyone stood up and we had a strong team effort."

"I tell you," he said, "I never had to mention it at the championship. They did it on their own in the slalom events. It was just a great team effort."

In addition to Friedrich's top finish in the giant slalom, she also won the slalom event. Utah's Luke Bodensteine won the men's diagonal cross country event. The other individual champion was Colorado's Chris Pederson in the men's slalom.

Razorback men score enough in four events to win title

Although scoring in only four events, Arkansas accumulated 44 points to capture its seventh straight Division I Men's Indoor Track Championships title March 9-10 in Indianapolis.

Arkansas finished eight points ahead of second-place Texas A&M. Florida, the 1989 runner-up, finished third with 29 points, and George Mason was fourth with 26.

The Razorbacks' key performers were Edrick Floreal, who defended his triple jump crown with a mark of 16.73 meters (54 feet, 10 3/4 inches), and Reuben Reina, who took the lead in the 3,000 meters with just 500 meters remaining and won in 7:56.62. Arkansas also got second-place finishes from Eric Henry in the mile run (3:59.18) and its 3,200-meter relay foursome (7:20.58).

The win moved Arkansas into a tie with UTEP for the all-time lead in team championships (seven). The Miners won from 1974 to 1976, in 1978 and from 1980 to 1982.

"We don't have a lot of athletes, but the ones we have are good ones," said coach John McDonnell. "We had to have super performances from everybody, and that's exactly what we had. It's a sweet victory because there were some great teams with great athletes."

Texas A&M was the only other team to win two individual titles. The Aggies' Mike Stulce won his second straight title in the shot put with a mark of 21.49 meters (70-6 1/4), the best in the world this year, and Andre Cason won the 55 meters in 6.07 seconds.

In addition to Stulce, two other performers set meet records. Gabriel Luke of Rice won the 400-meter dash with a time of 45.79, surprising college-record-holder and defending champion Tyrone Kemp of Florida, and Iowa State's Jonah Koech captured the 5,000-meter crown with a time of 13:37.94.

Michael Johnson of Baylor defended his title in the 200-meter dash with a time of 20.72, and Houston's Leroy Burrell captured his second straight long jump crown with a leap of 8.23 meters (27 feet).

Stars light the way for Texas and Wisconsin women

Texas and Wisconsin relied on stellar performances from their top runners to finish first and second, respectively, in the Division I Women's Indoor Track Championships in Indianapolis March 9-10.

Texas junior Carlette Guidry led the Longhorns to their third title in five years by winning the 55-meter and 200-meter dashes and running on a 1,600-meter relay team that recorded the fastest indoor time ever.

The Longhorns totaled 50 points to win easily over second-place Wisconsin, which scored 26. The Badgers were led by all-America distance runner Suzy Favor, who won the mile run for the third time in four years with a time of 4:38.19 and captured the 3,000-meter crown in 9:02.30 just more than an hour later.

Florida finished third with 20 1/2 points, and Arizona State and California tied for fourth with 20.

Guidry, competing for the first time in more than a month because of a strained left knee, won the 55 meters in 6.66 seconds and the 200 meters in 23.28.

She then turned in a 51.7 second leg on the Longhorns' world-best relay. The relay team of Guidry, Kellie Roberts, Nicole Ates and Sandie Richards won in 3:32.01; however, the mark is not considered a world record because Richards is Jamaican, and world-record relays must have runners from the same country.

Sheila Hudson accounted for all of California's points by winning the triple jump (13.94 meters; 45 feet, 9 inches) and the long jump (6.64, 21-9 1/2). Her triple jump mark broke the American record by six inches.

Meredith Rainey of Harvard set a collegiate record in the 800 meters with a time of 2:02.77.

Meet records were broken in two other events. Arizona State's Linda Tolbert set a new mark in the 55-meter hurdles (7.44), and Valerie McGovern of Kentucky posted a meet-record time in the 5,000 meters (15:48.17).

Villanova captured the 3,200-meter relay crown for the fourth year in a row. The Wildcats' foursome of Michelle Torelli, Abby Hunte, Kim Certain and Michelle Bennett posted a time of 8:31.95, more than two seconds faster than the winning times of the past two years.

Thanks to Brokenburr, Falcons win men's title

Led by sprinter Kenneth Brokenburr and strong performances in the jumping events, St. Augustine's totaled 70 points and coasted to its third straight Division II Men's Indoor Track Championships title March 9-10 at South Dakota.

Abilene Christian, which shared the title with St. Augustine's in 1988 but elected not to compete in last year's meet, finished second with 46 points. Hampton, last year's 10th-place finisher, moved up to third with 30 points, and Southeast Missouri State scored 27 points to finish fourth.

Brokenburr defended his title in the 55-meter dash with a winning time of 6.28, and he ran on a Falcon 1,600-meter relay team that won with a time of 3:12.85.

St. Augustine's earned 18 points in the long jump, where Terrell Carpenter won his second straight title with a leap of 7.52 meters (24 feet, 8 1/4 inches) and Xavier Donaldson finished second with a jump of 7.48 (24-6 1/2). Donaldson also finished second in the triple jump (15.46, 50-8 3/4), and defending champion Darrin Moore was second in the high jump (2.14, 7-0 1/4).

Abilene Christian was the only other team to win multiple titles. Triple-jumper James Browne, the outdoor champion the past two years, reclaimed the indoor title he won in 1988 with a mark of 15.53 (50-11 1/2). His 1988 performance (15.94, 52-3 3/4) still stands as the championships record. Wendell Edwards won the school's first 55-meter hurdles title with a time of 7.37.

Howard Burnett of New York Tech and Doug Hanson of North Dakota State also were repeat winners. Burnett defended his title in the 400-meter dash with the second-fastest time in championships history (47.17), and Hanson repeated in the 5,000 meters with a time of 14:47.40.

For the first time in the five-meet history of the event, no championships records were set. The championships began in 1985, but no meet was held in 1986.

Wildcats paced by dual champion

Paced by double titlist Yolande Straughn, Abilene Christian claimed four individual crowns and scored 60 points to capture its third straight Division II Women's Indoor Track Championships title March 9-10 at the South Dakota.

The Wildcats outscored runner-up Norfolk State by 19 points, the narrowest margin in their reign as champions. Hampton finished third with 36 points, followed by St. Augustine's with 25.

Straughn became the first woman to win titles in both the 55-meter and 400-meter dashes. She posted a time of 6.93 seconds in the 55 meters; teammate and defending champion Alesia Turner finished fourth (7.05). Straughn's time of 54.65 in the 400 was six-hundredths of a second faster than the meet record, set by Vivienne Spence of Hampton in 1987.

Other Wildcats winning individual titles were Daphne Harvey, who recorded a mark of 14.52 meters (47 feet, 7 3/4 inches) in the shot put, and Vida Alexander, who won the 800 meters with a time of 2:13.42. Abilene Christian also got second-place finishes from high-jumper Wendy Ator (1.73, 5-8) and its 1,600-meter relay foursome (3:50.45).

Hampton was the only other team to garner more than one individual title. The Lady Pirates' Melleesenah Williams won the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.15 seconds, and Judy McDonald captured the high jump crown with a leap of 1.79 (5-10 1/2).

Although Norfolk State did not win any individual titles, the Spartans earned most of their 41 points from two second-place performances and three third-place finishes.

Army's Alexa Wills set a meet record with a triple jump of 13.18 (43-3), 2 1/2 feet better than the record set last year by Sylvia Dyer of Abilene Christian.

New champions were crowned in all 10 events and the 1,600-meter relay.

Hurdlers spark Lincoln (Pennsylvania) to men's track title

Lincoln (Pennsylvania) earned only one individual title but scored 18 points in one event on the way to its first Division III Men's Indoor Track Championships title March 9-10 at Smith.

The Lions scored half of their 36 points in the 55-meter hurdles, where Victor Colter, Shannon Flowers and Mark Whitsett finished second through fourth.

MIT finished second in the meet with 30½ points, and Wisconsin-La Crosse was third with 29.

The Lions' lone individual title was in the 1,600-meter relay. The foursome of James Bell, Juan Edney, Clive Terrelonge and Lincoln Townsend recorded a time of 3:17.82 to give Lincoln its second straight relay title.

North Central jumper Jan Cado turned in his second straight brilliant performance at the championships. The sophomore from Czechoslovakia, who has been battling health problems all season, defended his titles in the long jump and triple jump. His mark in the long jump (7.57 meters; 24 feet, 10 inches) did not equal his meet-record performance of 1989, but his triple jump of 16.10 (52-10) bettered the record he set last year by more than six inches.

Also setting a meet record was pole-vaulter Dave Forshev of Mount Union. His vault of 4.90 (16-0¾) was a quarter-inch better than the record set last year by Alex Grelland of St. Lawrence. Teammate Jeff Powles captured the 1,500-meter title with a time of 3:53.55, enabling Mount Union to join North Central as the only teams winning multiple individual titles.

Otterbein's Todd Callicoat won the Division III men's indoor shot put with a heave of 16.41 meters (53 feet, 10½ inches)

Trice, Christopher Newport lead III women's track again

Sheila Trice defended her titles in the 55-meter dash and 55-meter hurdles to lead Christopher Newport to its third straight Division III Women's Indoor Track Championships title March 9-10 at Smith.

Trice also finished third in the triple jump and second in the long jump to score 34 of the Lady Captains' 59 points, the second-highest team total in the history of the championships. Christopher Newport and Massachusetts-Boston have split the six team titles.

Wisconsin-Oshkosh finished second with 43 points, Cortland State was third with 35 and Tufts totaled 29 to finish fourth.

Trice won the dash in 7.07 seconds and the hurdles with a time of 8.06. But unlike last year, when she scored all but 10 of the Lady Captains' 50 points, Trice was hardly a one-person show. Teammates Michelle Dickens and Barbara Robb posted second-place finishes—Dickens was runner-up to Trice in the 55 meters (7.29) and Robb ran the 400 meters in 58.53 seconds.

In addition, Christopher Newport's 1,600-meter relay team finished second with a time of 3:58.16.

Sarah Lenchner of Stony Brook, the meet's other double titlist, dethroned Trice in both the long jump and the triple jump. Her triple jump mark of 12.08 meters (39 feet, 7¾ inches) was a meet record, and her long jump of 5.71 (18-8¾) was nearly three inches better than her closest competition.

Repeating as individual champions were Coe's Elizabeth Messerly in the 800 meters (2:15.12) and Nebraska Wesleyan's Kim Oden in the high jump (1.75, 5-8¾).

Wisconsin-Oshkosh was sparked by Cathy Vandermar, who finished second in the 3,000 meters (9:48.98); Vicki Drewa, who placed second in the shot put (13.35, 43-9¾), and the first-place 1,600-meter relay team of Dena Beekman, Ann Fink, Amy Heath and Annette Partoll (3:56.50).

Cortland State claimed two individual crowns—Mary Beth Crawley in the 3,000 meters (9:48.39) and Vicki Mitchell in the 1,500 meters (4:34.21).

At least six teams in contention for men's swim title

At this year's Division I men's swimming and diving meet, where outstanding individual swimmers will duel in virtually every event, it's understandable that the race for team honors would be tough to call.

As many as six teams are potential winners at Indianapolis, including five that boast previous Division I individual titlists.

Defending champion Texas remains strong in the relays, where it won four of five races last year. But Southern California can offset that strength with its strong swimmers in the distance freestyles and individual medleys.

Meanwhile, Michigan, Tennessee, UCLA and Stanford can call upon versatile swimmers who can make things even more interesting.

Texas is led by three Olympians Doug Gjertsen, a two-time NCAA champion in the 200-yard freestyle; Shaun Jordan, who won the 100-yard freestyle last year, and Kirk Stackle, winner of two Division I breaststroke titles.

On a team that has made its mark in the relays, senior Gjertsen has built a reputation as one of the great anchors in NCAA swimming history. He handled the last leg for all four winning Longhorn relay teams last year and anchored two other winners in 1988.

But Southern California, a nine-time team champion looking for its first title since 1977, counters the Longhorns' strengths with some Olympians of its own.

For example, the individual medleys are practically owned by the Trojans' David Wharton, a 1988 Olympic silver medalist and the holder of world and American records in that specialty. Wharton, who also holds championships records in the 200- and 400-yard individual medleys, is seeking his third straight title in each event.

Southern Cal also threatens to dominate the distance freestyle, where Olympians Dan Jorgensen and Chris Chalmers are proven scorers.

Outside of their specialty events, however, Texas and Southern California are vulnerable.

Michigan's Brent Lang, defending champion in the 50-yard freestyle and an Olympic gold medalist, will go head-to-head with Texas' Jordan in the sprint freestyles, while another Wolverine, world-record-holder Mike Barrowman, will renew his rivalry with the Longhorns' Stackle in the breaststroke events.

In January, Michigan beat Texas and four other ranked Division I teams at the Southern Methodist University Swimming Classic in Dallas. The Wolverines benefited from the disqualification of Jordan for a false start in the 50-yard freestyle.

Another contender, Tennessee, should score in the butterfly events, where Olympian Melvin Stewart is a defending titlist.

Two of Southern California's rivals in the Pacific-10 Conference, UCLA and Stanford, also are capable of capturing team honors.

Championships Profile

Event: Division I men's swimming and diving.

Field: The field will be determined through qualifying standards set by the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee and approved by the Association's Executive Committee.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: Texas won its second straight team title and third championship of the 1980s with last year's victory.

Schedule: The 67th annual championships will be March 22 through 24 at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis. Indiana University, Bloomington, is the host.

The NCAA News Coverage: Results from the championships will appear in the March 28 issue of the News.

Contenders: Texas, Southern California, Michigan, Tennessee, UCLA, Stanford.

Championships notes: Of this year's top contenders, Michigan has won the most team titles, with 10. However, the Wolverines have not won the meet since 1961... Ohio State's 11 team championships are tops in Division I swimming. The Buckeyes haven't won since 1962... Two swimmers who were double champions at last year's meet—middle-distance freestyler Artur Wojdat and individual medley specialist David Wharton of Southern California—return in defense of their titles... Wojdat set a meet record in last year's 500-yard freestyle, while Wharton established a new mark in the 400-yard individual medley... Other 1989 record-setters were Harvard's David Berkoff in the 100-yard backstroke and relay teams from Princeton (200-yard medley) and Texas (200-yard freestyle).

The Bruins have won no individual titles in recent Division I championships, but Olympian Mark Dean should score in the individual medleys and 200-yard butterfly.

Stanford shows strength in the stroke events and also looks for points from former 500-yard freestyle titlist John Witchel, runner-up in last year's 1,650-yard freestyle.

In wrestling, a repeat as team champ is crowning achievement

It used to be that repeating as Division I wrestling team champion seemed relatively easy.

From 1928, the first year of the championships, through 1956, Oklahoma State won three or more consecutive team titles four times. Two decades later, Dan Gable's powerhouse Iowa squads made the Cowboys' accomplishments seem modest. His Hawkeyes reigned as champions from 1978 to 1986, winning by an average margin of more than 34 points and equaling what was then the longest string of national titles in any sport (nine).

But since Gable's grapplers were ousted from the throne in 1987, no team has repeated as champion. After Iowa State knocked off its intrastate rival, Arizona State won in 1988 and Oklahoma State in 1989.

The defending champion will fall again this year if the December 1-2 Las Vegas Invitational is any indication. And for the past three years it has been: The Vegas champion has won the Division I title ever since Iowa, which never attends the early season tournament, had its streak ended.

That's good news to Bobby Douglas' Arizona State squad, which won this year's Vegas jackpot by 11½ points over defending champion Oklahoma State. Even though his team has lost two of three dual matches against the top-ranked Cowboys since then, Douglas, in his 16th year, is counting on his team's experience to give it an edge at the championships.

"We've had teams with this much speed, strength and quickness before, but we've never had this kind of experience," said Douglas, who led his team to a runner-up finish last year.

"Oklahoma State is probably a better dual-meet team than we are," he said, "and we have trouble with them because we both have similar styles—we like to move in and out and stay on our feet. But our experience brings us up to a level very close to them in tournaments."

The Sun Devils' core of four senior all-Americans can amass impressive point totals in a tournament-scoring system. Defending 158-pound champion Dan St. John, hailed by some as this year's top collegiate wrestler, has moved up to 167 and has posted an overall mark of 31-0-1 (through March 9). Zeke Jones, who finished fourth last year at 118, has earned the top ranking at that weight class by going unde-they normally do during the school year.

"Women's fencing has had the ideal NCAA individual-team format. All the men did was say, 'You've done it the right way. Now how can we change ours to make it work like yours?'"

Under the new format, men's team champions will be crowned in each of three weapons: foil, sabre and epee. In each weapon, two pools of four three-man teams will fence a complete round; and the top two teams in each pool will advance to a seeded direct-elimination bracket.

The men's individual championships will remain the same, except the results will have no bearing on the team standings.

As the model for the men's team competition, the women's foil team championship will not be changed. Twelve teams of four fencers will compete in four pools to advance to a direct-elimination bracket of eight. The only change in the women's individual competition is an increase in the number of participants from 24 to 30, the same size as the men's individual fields.

The other major change in the championships is the addition of an overall team title based on the results of the three men's and one women's weapons team championships. The first-place team in each weapon will earn 60 points for its school, the second-place team 55, the third-place team 50, and so forth in multiples of five.

DeCicco believes the addition of Fencing championships have new men's format

Imagine holding a home-run derby to select the top collegiate baseball and softball teams. Or giving a football crown to the team with the best performers in a punt, pass and kick contest.

As strange as it may seem, this is akin to the system used to determine the men's team fencing champions for nearly five decades. An entire team's finish was determined by the performance of its top fencer in each of three individual weapons championships.

So when the NCAA Men's and Women's Fencing Committees, faced with dwindling sponsorship numbers, proposed combining the men's and women's championships in April, they decided it was a good time to revamp the men's competition.

The new format, approved at the 1990 Convention, will be used at this year's championships March 24-28 at Notre Dame.

"The old system was nothing like regular-season competition," said Michael DeCicco, chair of the men's committee and coach at Notre Dame. "It would be like playing an entire season of five-on-five basketball, then holding a one-on-one tournament to determine the national championship."

"For 12 years, the men's committee has been unhappy with the way in which a team earned a national championship," he said. "We changed it, quite frankly, thanks to the women. The women had a true national championship: The top 12 teams were selected and seeded, and they competed four-against-four, as feated in 31 matches. Townsend Saunders, runner-up at 142 last year, and Thom Ortiz, the seventh-place finisher at 150, have switched weights this season and also are rated as candidates to reach the finals.

Arizona State will have to get strong performances—and perhaps a few surprises at several other weights to overcome the balance, depth and youthful intensity of defending champion Oklahoma State.

The Cowboys start four freshmen, four sophomores and just two seniors, but sixth-year coach Joe Seay has one of his young charges ranked in the top 10 in each weight.

"We probably have a better bal-

Championships Profile

Event: Division I wrestling.

Field: A field of 330 Division I wrestlers will compete for team and individual championships. In addition, 25 Division II and 10 Division III qualifying wrestlers will compete for individual honors.

Automatic qualification: Big Ten Conference, Big Eight Conference, Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association, Pacific-10 Conference, Eastern Wrestling League, Mid-American Athletic Conference, East Coast Conference, Atlantic Coast Conference, Southern Conference, Big Sky, Western Athletic Conferences, New England University Wrestling Association, and two regional qualifying tournaments.

Defending champion: Oklahoma State.

Schedule: The University of Maryland, College Park, will host the championships March 22-24.

The NCAA News Coverage: Results from the championships will appear in the March 28 issue of the News.

Contenders: Arizona State, Indiana, Iowa, Iowa State, Nebraska, Oklahoma State.

Championships notes: The states of Iowa and Oklahoma virtually have monopolized the team titles. Since 1928, the crown has gone to a team from outside those states only four times: 1932 (Indiana), 1953 (Penn State), 1967 (Michigan State) and 1988 (Arizona State)... Oklahoma State leads in all-time team championships with 28 and individual crowns with 107. Last year's team title was the Cowboys' first since 1971... Iowa is second in all-time team titles with 11, including a championships-record nine straight beginning in 1978... Oklahoma State's winning point total of 91½ last year was the lowest since 1974, when Oklahoma took the crown with 69½... Seventy-one Division I schools earned points in last year's championships... This will be the fifth time that Maryland has hosted the championships. The last time was in 1987, when Iowa State ended Iowa's nine-year reign as champions.

anced team than Arizona State, but Bobby has more top-end strength," said Seay. "Our performance depends on the maturity level of our young kids. If they come through like they have all season, we have a good shot at winning the title."

The Cowboys return individual champions Kendall Cross at 126 pounds and Chris Barnes at 177. Cross has a 26-5 overall record this season, and Barnes is the top-rated 177-pounder with a record of 29-1. Other returning all-Americans are Chuck Barbec, who has moved up to 142 pounds after finishing fifth at 134; Todd Chesbro, who finished fifth at 150, and heavyweight Kirk Mammen, the sixth-place finisher in 1989.

The Cowboys finished second in Las Vegas before the emergence of true freshmen Pat Smith (158 pounds, 25-4-1 overall) and Robby Hadden (167 pounds, 19-4-1).

Third-ranked Iowa's control-oriented, push-and-pull style could pose problems for the Arizona State and Oklahoma State wrestlers, who prefer to stay on their feet and keep things in motion.

The young Hawkeyes' key returnee is top-rated 134-pounder Tom Brands, who is 32-1 this season after finishing fourth at 126 as a freshman last year. Other top performers include Brooks Simpson, a 190-pound senior (27-2-1), and freshman heavyweight John Oostendorp, who has recorded 10 falls and a 29-1 record.

Iowa is a lock to improve on its sixth-place finish of last year, the worst of the Gable regime. But the Hawkeyes' chances of making it all the way back to the top dimmed in early February when 158-pound all-America sophomore Mark Reiland suffered a broken jaw in practice and had to sit out the rest of the season.

Nebraska has surprised many opponents with what could be its best team. The Huskers feature Las Vegas individual champions in junior all-America Jason Kelber (126 pounds, 30-2) and senior heavyweight Joe Malecek (33-2-2). Nebraska also has potential scorers in 167-pound all-America Scott Chenoweth (28-4) and 190-pounder Chris Nelson (30-6).

Under first-year coach Joe McFarland, Indiana showed it is not far from contender status with a sparkling fourth place in Las Vegas and an undefeated dual-match record. Senior 150-pounder Brian Dolph, who finished third in the 1989 championships, leads an experienced squad with a 38-2 record.

Fencing

the men's weapons titles and the overall team crown gives the championships something for everybody. It places added emphasis on squad depth while continuing to reward top individuals.

"A school with no women's team probably will not be able to win the overall title," he said. "But the men's team still has the chance to go out and take pride in being the best in the country in those weapons in which they excel. At the same time, a top individual still will be able to contend for a title even if his or her team is not among the best."

The collegiate fencing community is taking a "wait-and-see" attitude about the new championships, DeCicco said. "On paper it looks great," he said. "It definitely will result in a truer team championship. We'll have to give it three or four years and see how it works out."

In the long run, DeCicco said, the change in the men's competition will be good for the sport. He believes it will encourage larger squads and more participation by all competitors.

For example, a fencer who was not among the top two on his team in a particular weapon had no chance of representing his school in the championships under the old system. Under the new format, however, all members of a top weapons team have a chance to qualify.

"There will be more opportunities for people to participate. More people will make a contribution to a team effort. T-E-A-M. There are four letters in 'team.' That's how many (fencers) there are on a women's team, isn't it?"

Championships contenders

Columbia-Barnard showed it is clearly the cream of the crop in the strong Ivy Group by claiming its fifth straight men's conference championship and its second women's title in a row. The Lion men (12-2) will go after their fourth national title in a row with the help of senior Marc Kent, runner-up in foil last year, who posted a 35-8 overall record this season. Their strong sabre team features junior Peter Clemins (35-10 overall) and senior Dave Mandell, who went 40-5 this year after finishing second in the 1989 championships.

The Lion women's team (13-3) will seek to improve on last year's second-place finish with the top two Ivy foilists: junior Tzu Moy, who posted an astounding 59-2 record this season, and sophomore Jill Tobia (47-18).

The leading contenders for the overall and weapons titles are the only teams to beat both Columbia-Barnard's men and women this season: Notre Dame and Penn State.

The Irish captured the women's foil, men's epee and men's foil competitions at the United States Fencing Association's Collegiate Open. The young men's squad (24-1), coming off its seventh straight Great Lakes Fencing Championship victory, will be led by junior Phil Leary and freshman Noel Young in the foil, sophomore Jubba Beshin in the epee, and brothers Ed and Chris Bager in the sabre.

Notre Dame's women (22-1) won their second straight Great Lakes title by defeating defending national champion Wayne State (Michigan), 49-46. The Irish women can count on steady performances from senior captain Anne Barreda; Kristin Kralicek, who finished 11th last year, and Heidi Piper, who finished 13th as a freshman in 1989.

Last year, Penn State had enough team depth to win the championships if they had been conducted under the new format. Instead, the Nittany Lions finished second in the men's competition and sixth in the women's race. Even though they were hit hard by graduation, the Nittany Lions still have the balance to make a serious bid for the overall title.

Penn State's strength lies in women's foil and men's foil. The women's squad features sophomores Lisa Posthumus and Katie Kowalski, freshman Jennifer Carcich, and junior Janet Rossman; Rossman and Kowalski finished eighth and 16th, respectively, last year. The men's squad is led by Edward Mufel, the defending foil champion; David Cox, who finished fourth in sabre last year, and Jim Marsh, who placed sixth in epee in 1989.

Other top performers to watch include women's foil specialist Loredana Ranza of Wayne State (Michigan), who finished fourth last year; Ute Schaeper of Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck, who will compete in women's foil after placing second in epee at the 1989 World Fencing Championships, and talented men's foilists Alan Weber and Scott Friedland of Pennsylvania.

Championships Profile

Event: Men's and women's fencing.

Field: Eight three-man teams will compete for team titles in each of three men's weapons events: foil, epee and sabre. Twelve four-woman teams will compete for the team title in women's foil. Fields of 30 fencers will compete for individual titles in women's foil and men's foil, epee and sabre. Championships notes: In separate men's and women's championships last year, a total of six titles were awarded: women's individual and team championships; men's individual crowns in foil, sabre and epee, and a men's team title. This year, nine titles will be handed out: individual crowns in women's foil and men's foil, epee and sabre; weapons team titles in each of those four events, and an overall (men's and women's) team championship. The new overall championship will be based on team standings in the four weapons team events. This will be the fourth time since 1982 that Notre Dame has hosted the championships. Columbia won the last three men's team titles, and Wayne State (Michigan) won the last two women's championships.

promising young skiers to a fork in the road at such an early age.

"The way the system is now, it's almost impossible to go to school" and still compete at the top level, she said after finishing third in the giant slalom at the NCAA championships.

"When you're 15 or 16, college is the last thing you want to hear. The thing you want is the travel all over Europe."

For alpine skiers and some parents with their eyes on international championship skiing or the prestigious World Cup, or even the Olympics, training is continuous.

There is a lot of money invested by parents at an early age to see their kids compete on an international level, said Pat Miller, the coach at the University of Utah, which won six NCAA championships in the 1980s.

Alpine skiers do not have the support of a system that uses college as a training ground, as do professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey.

College takes too much time and concentration for a skier with world-class ambitions.

Chip LaCasse, the coach at the University of Vermont, said that five years ago if an alpine skier went to college, his or her career was over. He is trying to change that.

"The relationship between colleges and the U.S. Ski Team is really improving," he said. He is part of a special committee working with the two bodies and focusing on getting the national team not to discourage promising youngsters from going to college.

But even he acknowledges that Olympic and World Cup prospects are skiing at the still higher level, which leaves "very little room to attend school."

"My feeling now is you can get a good education and good training, and if you're good enough, you can be brought onto the U.S. Ski Team," he said.

Patty's coach at Dartmouth, Ruff Patterson, a college skier who has coached for the U.S. team and in three Olympics, said he thinks many skiers who gave up an education to pursue the dream, and didn't achieve it, "look back with bitterness."

But he said a chance to compete in the World Cup with its increasing prestige and financial rewards is a definite reason to make the efforts.

"For guys who are first or second it's a pretty easy decision," he said. "If you're in a gray area, you're always faced with a difficult decision."

That's what faced Patty after four years on the U.S. development team.

"I wasn't sure if I was going to excel and be racing in World Cup," she said.

"It was hard to give up a world-class opportunity and go to school. Not many on the U.S. Ski Team at that level give up and go to school."

But she has not regretted it. Next June, when she graduates with an economics degree, "I'll have been on the U.S. Ski Team, I'll have an Ivy League education, and I can go out and get a job," she said.

"I've got friends still on the U.S. team. They were at my level, and they are still at that level. What are they going to do?"

"I discovered there are other things in life as much fun as skiing down a hill as fast as you can."

Iowa Senate OKs proposal to pay athletes

The Iowa Board of Regents would set up a policy for paying athletes at the state's three universities under a proposal passed in the Iowa Senate March 7.

The proposal, offered by Sen. Thomas Mann, D-Des Moines, would move college athletes to a semiprofessional status.

Under an amendment to a $760 million educational appropriations bill, the state board would review and establish a policy permitting athletes at the University of Iowa, Iowa State University and University of Northern Iowa to receive money, cars and other gifts from the school, alumni or other sources.

The regents, however, would not implement such a policy unless the NCAA passes a similar policy.

Mann's proposal would also instruct the regents to urge the NCAA to adopt a policy to pay college athletes.

The bill now moves to the House for consideration.

When Rocco J. Carzo was elected NCAA Division III vice-president at the 1990 Convention, he became the second individual from Tufts University to serve as an elected NCAA officer. The first was Clarence P. Houston, NCAA president in 1955 and 1956.

Only four other members have had more than one individual serve as an NCAA officer, and all of them are connected with the Big Ten Conference. The conference itself had Maj. John L. Griffith as president from 1933 through 1937 (and secretary-treasurer from 1940 through 1944) and Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson as secretary-treasurer from 1945 through 1951. The University of Iowa had Karl E. Leib as president, 1947-1949, and Robert F. Ray, president, 1963-1964. The University of Michigan had Ralph W. Aigler, secretary-treasurer, 1955-1956, and Marcus L. Michigan State University had John A. Fuzak, president, 1977-1978, and Gwendolyn Norrell, Division I vice-president, 1983-1984.

NCAA imposes limitations on football assistant at UTEP

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has instructed the University of Texas, El Paso, to show cause why the committee should not impose sanctions on the university if it does not limit the duties of newly hired assistant football coach Charlie Bailey.

Last August, the committee found that Bailey had been involved in major violations of NCAA legislation while he was serving as the head football coach at Memphis State University.

The NCAA membership has authorized the Committee on Infractions to require that an institution that hires an individual found to have been involved in major violations of NCAA legislation at another member institution show cause why the committee should not impose sanctions on the new institution if it does not limit the individual's athletically related duties for a period of time.

The committee informed Bailey in August that if he sought employment with an NCAA member institution within the next five years, he and that institution would be required to appear before the committee.

The committee met last month with UTEP representatives and has informed the institution that it must show cause why penalties should not be imposed upon the university if it does not:

a. Prohibit Bailey from engaging in off-campus recruiting and evaluation activities until August 2, 1991; further, during this period, the university may not replace him with another person to perform those duties.

b. Prohibit Bailey from involvement in a summer jobs program or other student-athlete work programs until after August 2, 1993.

c. Submit a report each year until August 2, 1992, of the institutional, conference and NCAA monitoring and compliance programs and seminars in which Mr. Bailey has been involved.

The committee said that it considered the following in arriving at these conditions:

a. Candor and assistance was exhibited by Bailey following the original violations, and his appearance at the Memphis State University infractions hearing was completely nonadversarial.

b. Bailey resigned voluntarily from Memphis State University, received no contract settlement and has not been involved in coaching since his resignation.

c. Bailey's new assignment is as an assistant, not head, coach.

The committee said that if Bailey's duties change substantially at UTEP, or should he accept employment in the athletics program at another NCAA member institution prior to August 2, 1994, the committee will determine whether additional actions are appropriate under the show-cause procedures.

UTEP must notify the NCAA within 15 days that it either accepts the committee's actions or that it intends to show cause why those actions are inappropriate.

The complete text of the committee's report is attached.

I. Introduction.

On August 1, 1989, the NCAA Committee on Infractions found that major violations had occurred in the Memphis State University football program involving former head football coach Charlie Bailey. Specifically, Bailey: (a) advised a representative of the university's athletics interests to pay a prospective student-athlete in excess of the commensurate rate for a summer job, and "to take care of" the young man; (b) initially was not forthcoming to the university concerning the matter, and (c) instructed a student-athlete to provide false and misleading information concerning the matter—instructions that seriously impeded and misled the investigation of the Memphis State University football program.

However, at a belated but crucial moment in the investigation, Bailey decided to tell the truth and urged the involved student-athlete to do the same. After reporting the facts to the institution and to the NCAA, Bailey resigned his position as head football coach at Memphis State University. Subsequently, he voluntarily appeared before the Committee on Infractions where he was of considerable assistance in resolving the Memphis State University infractions case.

The actions of Bailey were determined by the Committee on Infractions to constitute major violations, which exposed Memphis State University to the consequences of a "repeat major violation" and resulted in serious institutional penalties, mitigated in part because of the university's actions in the case. Among the penalties were: (a) a three-year probationary period with annual monitoring and audit reports; (b) a reduction in expense-paid visits to the university by prospects for one year; (c) a reduction of grants-in-aid in the sport of football for one year; (d) a prohibition regarding "live" television appearances by the football team for one year, and (e) a prohibition against post-season competition in football for one year.

In addition, it was noted that if Bailey had not been replaced, Memphis State would have been required to show cause in accordance with Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1) why it should not have been subject to additional penalties if it failed to take appropriate disciplinary action against him.

Bailey was informed directly by the NCAA that if he sought employment with a member institution prior to August 2, 1994, during a five-year period, he and the involved institution would be required to appear before the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1), which could limit Mr. Bailey's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period of time.

II. Committee on Infractions show-cause requirement.

On February 2, 1990, Charlie Bailey and representatives of the University of Texas, El Paso, including Director of Athletics Brad Hovious, faculty athletics representative Robert Tollen and head football coach David Lee, appeared before the committee. The university and Bailey stated that they were willing to adhere to restrictions by the committee that could result from the show-cause procedures. The committee reviewed the institution's plan to hire Bailey as an assistant football coach, the description of his proposed duties and Bailey's activities since his resignation from Memphis State.

In arriving at the conditions set forth in the following show-cause requirement submitted to UTEP, the committee considered:

A. The truthfulness, candor and assistance Bailey exhibited following the original violations in the Memphis State infractions case and his determination to make his appearance at the Memphis State University infractions hearing completely nonadversarial in the spirit of the cooperative principle of the NCAA enforcement program.

B. The fact that he had resigned voluntarily, received no contract settlement or "golden parachute" from Memphis State and had not been involved in any way in coaching since his resignation and, in fact, has been unemployed since April 20, 1989.

C. The penalties that had been imposed on his original institution.

D. The fact that his new assignment is as an assistant coach, not head coach, and is with a different institution in a different geographic region.

Therefore, under the provisions of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1), the committee hereby notifies UTEP that it shall show cause why penalties should not be imposed upon the institution unless it takes appropriate actions that will affect Charlie Bailey, which shall include:

A. A prohibition against all off-campus recruiting and evaluation of prospects until August 2, 1991; further, during the period this penalty applies to Bailey, the university may not replace him with another person to perform off-campus re-

Antidrug effort requires more than lectures, Bennett says

Teaching children to stay away from drugs requires a lot more than lectures from teachers, says national drug-policy director William J. Bennett. It takes tough school policy, community involvement and law enforcement, too.

"This is not about lock 'em up," he said in a speech earlier this month at George Washington University. "It is about establishing an environment in which good things flourish and bad things don't."

Recounting a visit two weeks ago to a drug-infested Los Angeles neighborhood where police barricaded certain areas and operated street patrols with residents, Bennett said crime decreased, as expected.

"But something else happened, too—something you might not expect: School attendance went up way up. Perhaps as many as 200 additional students went to school once a police presence was established.

"The police made it safe to go to school," he said. "They moved kids from the streets back into the classroom. If that isn't drug prevention, then I don't know what is."

Some critics have said Bennett and the drug-control strategy he developed is too weighted toward law enforcement, with 71 percent of the proposed $10.6 billion drug budget for 1991 devoted to law enforcement and 29 percent to demand reduction, including education and treatment, the Associated Press reported.

But Bennett said, "Too many insist that our drug-policy options force us to choose between enforcement and education. That's wrong, flat-out wrong."

The former education secretary said, "Education can provide the answer" to turn young people away from drugs.

But he said education must be well-rounded, and antidrug courses alone won't "inoculate our children from the temptations of drug use."

They must be included in a balanced program that stresses resistance to peer pressure in a school self-esteem "through hard work and achievement."

Some mistakes have been made in past drug-education efforts, he said, and one is "to pretend that what adolescents need most is merely more information about drugs."

times made is trying to scare children with drug horror stories," he said. But many students "are too skeptical to believe them or too smart and aware to be persuaded that every drug encounter leads to fatal injury."

"The most encouraging signs today come from drug-education programs that stress peer resistance: learning how to say no to peers," he said.

Tough school policies also play a strong role, he said, and the best are those that suspend students and notify their parents if they use drugs and which expel repeat offenders.

"Young people know hypocrisy when they see it," Bennett said. "If principals don't walk it like instructors talk it, students will walk it as they wish.... Talking a good game is insufficient to the task."

"If anything, well-packaged information on drugs can even serve to pique youthful curiosity about them (drugs)."

that maintains rigid antidrug policies, Bennett said. And he said they will work if the total effort in the school, at home and in the community—is on building character and

B. No involvement by Bailey in a summer jobs program or in other student-athlete work programs until after August 2, 1993.

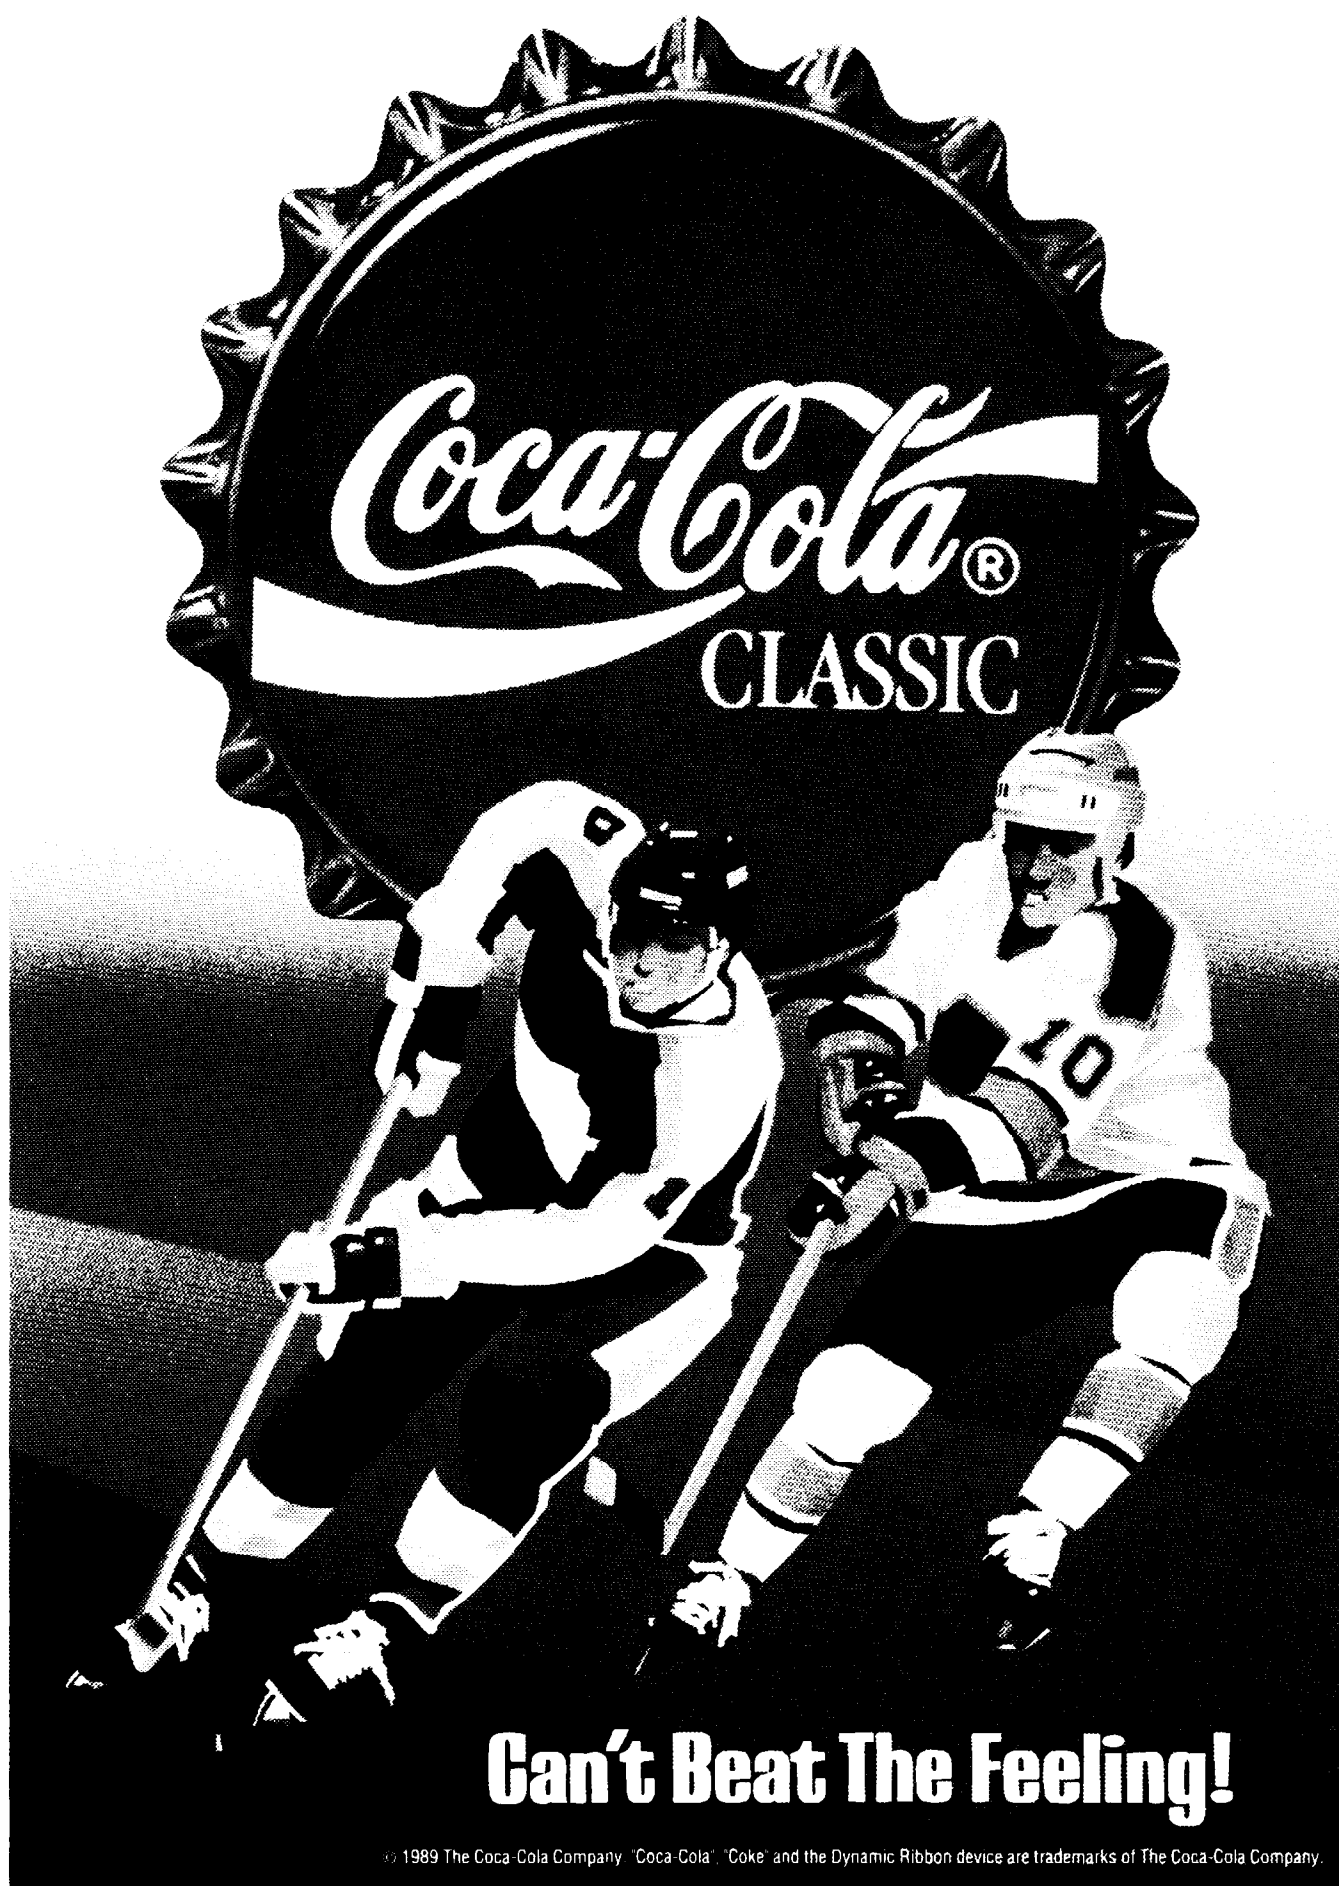

C. A report by the institution each year until August 2, 1992, of the monitoring and compliance programs in which Bailey has been involved, including institutional, conference and NCAA compliance programs and seminars.

Finally, should Bailey's duties change substantially at UTEP or should he accept employment in an athletics program at another NCAA member institution prior to August 2, 1994, he and the institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions to discuss whether additional actions are appropriate under the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1).

It should be noted further that Bailey has agreed to make this report public in its entirety. The committee views this as another example of his forthrightness.

The 15-day show-cause requirement period for UTEP as set forth in Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1) shall begin with the date of receipt by the university of this report of the committee's action. In this regard, UTEP shall notify the NCAA enforcement staff in writing within a 15-day period of its decision to accept the committee's report or of its show-cause to the committee why actions against it are inappropriate for failing to take the cited actions against Bailey.

Northwestern refutes report of steroid use for football

Northwestern University President Arnold R. Weber says there may have been isolated cases of football players who used steroids while playing for the Wildcats, but the practice was not widespread on the team.

Weber said March 8 that findings of an internal investigation he ordered did not support statements made by two former players who were quoted in January as saying that some team members routinely used steroids in 1986 and 1987.

"While we cannot rule out the possibility that there might have been an individual player or players who experimented with steroids (in high school or at Northwestern), there is no evidence that there was or is widespread steroid use by members of the football team or systematic efforts to evade drug-testing procedures, as was alleged," Weber said in a statement.

He said the investigation involved discussions with the two players and with coaches, trainers and others associated with the team, the Associated Press reported.

The probe was a result on interviews published January 24 by the campus newspaper, The Daily Northwestern, with George Harouvis, a defensive lineman who graduated last year, and an unidentified former player.

Harouvis said later from his home in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, that while many players on the team used steroids, they weren't caught during random drug tests because they usually could tell when the tests would occur and would rig the tests.

John Connolly, Northwestern's head athletics trainer who administers the drug tests, said in January that school officials took many precautions to avoid cheating on the tests.

Weber said the internal investigation found no evidence to suggest that any graduate assistants or staff members associated with the football program were involved in the use of steroids by players.

And according to the statement, "Those interviewed during the investigation, including the disaffected former players, were unanimous in their opinion that head coach Francis Peay and strength and conditioning coach Larry Lilja communicate a strong antidrug message to their student-athletes."

Northwestern began testing its athletes for drugs in the 1986-87 academic year on a voluntary basis for students who might want the tests for postseason play, the statement said.

The school's department of athletics and recreation adopted its current drug and alcohol program in August 1987 and has tested more than 1,000 athletes since then, with the incidence of positive test results "significantly below that experienced by the NCAA in its drug testing for national championships and post-season bowl games."

Weber said the whole football team was tested last season for several substances banned by the NCAA, including stimulants, street drugs, diuretics and anabolic steroids, as well as for masking agents, and there was no evidence of drug use.

Wofford gets over $1 million in donations

Supporters of Wofford College gave more than $1 million in donations and endowments during 1989 for the Division II school's athletics programs.

Also, the South Carolina school's 43-year-old Terrier Club grew to a record membership of 2,058.

The club raised $387,756 of the $1,107,281 that was given for Terrier athletics during the year. Another $674,079 was raised in the form of endowments, as well as $47,446 in restricted moneys.

Volunteers helped recruit 658 new members for the Terrier Club, and 654 previous donors increased their gifts, said Steve Powell, the club's president in 1989.

"Through the efforts of some 100 volunteers and the generosity of over 2,000 donors, the Terrier Club is making a difference at Wofford College in the lives of many, many student-athletes," Powell said. "Our challenge as we move into the decade ahead, though, is to provide even more scholarship opportunities for quality young people to compete in intercollegiate athletics at Wofford."

The Terrier Club's donations will be used for approximately 30 athletics grants-in-aid during the 1990-91 school year, while the endowments will support other scholarship funds.

Southwest Missouri State joins MVC in seven sports

Southwest Missouri State University will join the Missouri Valley Conference in basketball and six other men's sports effective July 1, league and school officials announced March 8.

The MVC Presidents' Council voted 8-0 March 4 to admit Southwest Missouri State as the league's ninth member, conference Commissioner J. Douglas Elgin said at a campus news conference.

Southwest Missouri State will terminate an eight-year membership in the Association of Mid-Continent Universities, which it joined as a charter member after moving to NCAA Division I from Division II.

Southwest Missouri State's women's athletics programs and the football team will remain associated with the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Besides basketball, the Bears will begin competing in MVC league championships in baseball, cross country, indoor track, outdoor track, golf and tennis in 1990-91.

The Missouri Valley Conference, based in St. Louis, is the oldest athletics conference west of the Mississippi and the fourth oldest in the country.

Marshall's men's basketball team placed on NCAA probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has rendered Marshall University's men's basketball program ineligible for preseason and postseason play during the 1990-91 season as part of a two-year probation for what it termed major violations of NCAA legislation.

In addition, because some ineligible student-athletes represented the university during the 1987 Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the record of the university's participation in that tournament shall be vacated, and the institution will be required to return more than $40,000 it earned from its participation.

The university self-reported a series of violations to the NCAA that occurred over a three-year period and that were "major in nature, neither isolated nor inadvertent, calculated to result in and resulting in substantial recruiting and competitive advantages." The violations included improper inducements to recruits, improper benefits to enrolled student-athletes and improper arrangements for housing for student-athletes who were nonqualifiers under the Association's legislation.

Because these major violations occurred after September 1, 1985, the violations normally would subject the university to minimum penalties prescribed by the NCAA membership. These penalties include a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for one year, loss of postseason competition and live television appearances for at least one year, and possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose lesser penalties if the committee determines that the case is "unique." The committee concluded that this case was unique because the university:

1. Self-detected and diligently investigated the violations and self-reported nearly all of them.

2. Obtained the resignation of the head coach.

3. Imposed grant-in-aid and other limitations upon its basketball program.

4. Established an extensive monitoring and compliance program.

As a result of these mitigating circumstances, the committee waived several penalties it was considering levying, including:

a. Prohibiting the university from providing any expense-paid visits to the institution for a prospective student-athlete during the 1990-91 and 1991-92 academic years.

b. Prohibiting the university from offering any additional grants-in-aid during the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons.

Instead, the committee adopted the following restrictions, which were self-imposed by Marshall University. The number of official paid visits for the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years shall be reduced by three, and the number of permissible grants-in-aid shall be reduced by one for the 1990-91 academic year and by two for the 1991-92 academic year. In addition, rather than the institution being required to return 90 percent of the net receipts earned in the 1987 basketball tournament, the committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the institution be required to return only its share of the receipts after distribution to the Southern Conference and the other members of that conference. This net share totals $42,241.

The committee also said that if the former head coach who was involved in the violations found in this case seeks employment as an athletics department staff member at an NCAA member institution during the next five years, he and the involved institution will be requested to appear before the Committee on Infractions. The committee at that time will consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of NCAA legislation. Those procedures could limit that coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

The members of the Committee on Infractions are: Roy F. Kramer, incoming commissioner of the Southeastern Conference; Beverly E. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel at Brown University; John E. Nowak, professor of law at the University of Illinois, Champaign; Patricia A. O'Hara, associate professor of law at the University of Notre Dame; Milton R. Schroeder, professor of law at Arizona State University, and D. Alan Williams (committee chair), associate professor of history at the University of Virginia.

The complete report from the Committee on Infractions follows:

I. Introduction.

On March 9, 1989, Marshall University self-reported several possible violations in the sport of men's basketball to the NCAA enforcement department. The university conducted an investigation and submitted a report of its findings to the NCAA May 15, 1989. Additional violations were reported by the university in June 1989, and, based upon a review of the self-reported violations, an official inquiry was sent to the university by the enforcement department October 12, 1989. On January 14, 1990, a prehearing conference was held with the university, and on January 19, 1990, with the counsel for the former men's head basketball coach who had resigned in April 1989. Subsequently, on February 4, 1990, the Committee on Infractions held a hearing with the university and the former head coach in Colorado, Colorado.

The case was presented to the committee as a self-report with the primary information being developed by the university, its counsel and members of its staff. The committee found a series of violations that included: improper inducements to prospective student-athletes; improper benefits to enrolled student-athletes (e.g., gifts of cash, athletics clothing, jewelry and, in one instance, the payment of a loan); the payment by the former head coach of hotel expenses for the family of an enrolled student-athlete; improper arrangements of housing at no cost to several student-athletes, and a series of violations involving local transportation, an improper recruiting contact at a junior college and payment of incidentals for prospective student-athletes on their official paid visits. Most of the violations were known or should have been known by the men's basketball coaching staff. The committee was especially concerned about a pattern of violations that provided support for student-athletes who were nonqualifiers or who were otherwise academically ineligible to receive institutional financial aid.

The case originated when the university discovered that a junior college transfer student-athlete had received an unsecured loan from a local bank. The young man had been referred to the bank by a member of the basketball coaching staff, and a loan was arranged by a representative of the university's athletics interests. Ostensibly, it was to be a "bridge loan" until the young man received moneys from his Pell Grant, but the student-athlete failed to apply for a Pell Grant and left the institution without paying off the loan.

The most serious violations involved arrangements for off-campus housing for certain student-athletes (nonqualifiers) at little or no cost to the young men. For several years, the university had a "foster parent" program for men's basketball team members. Under restricted conditions, such programs were permissible until 1986 when they were prohibited altogether. Under no circumstances, however, were foster parents permitted to give free housing, regular meals or to provide loans of money. In 1986, 1987 and 1988, members of the men's basketball staff, including the head coach, arranged for members of the team who were not eligible for financial aid to receive housing from local families ostensibly in the foster parent program. In addition, improper benefits were received in some instances.

Also, it should be noted that the committee found that the then men's head basketball coach violated NCAA standards of ethical conduct in that he knowingly and willfully operated the men's basketball program contrary to NCAA requirements through his actions as described in the findings in this case. Further, the committee found that the university itself did not exercise effective institutional control either within the men's basketball program in particular or within the athletics department administration in general during the period of these violations. Further, during the years in which violations occurred in this case, the men's basketball team enjoyed success in its conference and participated on one occasion in the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship and once in the National Invitational Tournament.

The committee determined that several of the violations found were major in nature, neither isolated nor inadvertent, and calculated to and did result in substantial recruiting and competitive advantages. Because these violations occurred after September 1, 1985, the committee's findings normally would subject the university to a minimum prescribed penalty for major violations, which would include at least a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for at least one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for at least one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, the loss of postseason competition and television appearance opportunities for at least one year, and institutional recertification of compliance. Under the terms of the NCAA legislation that establishes minimum penalties for a major infractions case, however, the Committee on Infractions may impose lesser penalties if it determines that the case is "unique."

Ordinarily, unique circumstances that justify relief from the Association's mandatory penalties include factors such as prompt detection of violations; investigating and reporting violations to the NCAA; cooperating in the processing of the case, and initiating strong corrective and disciplinary measures prior to the committee's hearing. The committee gives great weight to such institutional actions in deciding the extent to which a case presents unique circumstances. Other circumstances, although not as significant as these institutional measures, also may warrant viewing a major case as unique for some purposes.

In this regard, the committee determined that this case was unique in some respects. Although the university gained recruiting and competitive advantages as a result of the violations found in this case, the university self-detected and diligently investigated the violations, and self-reported all of the violations found (with the exception of the ethical conduct finding for the former head basketball coach) to the NCAA. Moreover, the university took substantial actions itself, obtained the resignation of the head coach in part for violations found, and imposed grant-in-aid restrictions and other limitations upon its basketball program.

The penalties imposed by the committee include placing the university on probation for two years, declaring the men's basketball team ineligible for all preseason and postseason play during the 1990-91 season, returning income derived from NCAA postseason play in 1987 and requiring the university to show cause why it should not be penalized further if it fails to disassociate the representatives of athletics interests and other individuals who were found to have been involved in violations in this case. Furthermore, the committee adopted the actions taken by the university in regard to limits on grants-in-aid and official paid visits for prospective student-athletes. Finally, the former men's head basketball coach who was found to have engaged in unethical conduct in this case shall be required to appear before the committee in the event he seeks employment in an athletically related capacity at an NCAA member institution within the next five years.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by committee.

A. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3] In January 1989, the balance of a loan for a recruited transfer student-athlete in the sport of men's basketball who was not eligible for institutional financial aid was repaid in cash at no cost to the young man. Specifically, in September 1988, a former member of the men's basketball coaching staff referred the young man to a local bank where he received a $2,000 loan through the arrangements of a representative of the university's athletics interests; further, the loan was to be repaid after the young man received Pell Grant funds; however, the young man withdrew from the university without applying for a Pell Grant or repaying the loan.

B. [NCAA Bylaws 2.1.1, 13.2.2 and 16.12.2] On several occasions during the period October 1986 to May 1989, several prospective and enrolled student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball resided in the homes of representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young men; further, in some instances, members of the men's basketball coaching staff were aware that these representatives lodged student-athletes, and the staff members failed to take affirmative action to ensure compliance with NCAA legislation, and finally, on at least one occasion, a representative provided small cash loans to a student-athlete and bought gas for the young man's automobile. Specifically:

1. During a six-week period in July and August 1987, a prospective student-athlete resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests prior to the young man's enrollment in the university; further, the graduate assistant coach discussed this housing with the representatives.

2. For a two-week period in August 1987, a transfer student-athlete who was not eligible for institutional financial aid resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests; further, at the direction of a then men's assistant basketball coach, a secretary in the basketball office discussed this lodging with the family.

3. During the period October to December 1986, a student-athlete who was a 2,000 nonqualifier resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young man; further, the then men's head basketball coach discussed the lodging arrangement with the family.

4. During the 1987-88 academic year, a transfer student-athlete who was not eligible for institutional financial aid resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young man; further, at the direction of a then men's assistant basketball coach, a secretary in the men's basketball office discussed this lodging with the family.

5. During the 1986 Christmas holiday season, from mid-July until August 1987, from April until June or July 1988, and irregularly during the 1988-89 academic year, a student-athlete resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young man; further, the student-athlete borrowed small amounts of cash from the representatives (and later repaid each loan), and the representatives occasionally bought gasoline for the student-athlete's automobile; further, the young man was registered in a campus dormitory room during these periods.

C. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3] On a weekend during the 1986-87 basketball season, the then men's head basketball coach

Q How many member institutions have women as chief executive officers? As faculty athletics representatives? As directors of athletics (over the entire athletics program)?

A According to information supplied by member institutions at the start of the 1989-90 academic year, 75 institutions have women CEOs—eight in Division I, 18 in Division II and 49 in Division III. Women serve as faculty athletics representatives at 80 schools—21 in Division I, 18 in Division II and 41 in Division III. Sixty-three women serve as athletics directors over the institutions' entire programs—one in Division I, 15 in Division II and 47 in Division III.

paid lodging and expenses at a local hotel on behalf of the family of a student-athlete.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3] During the 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 academic years, the then men's head basketball coach provided various gifts to student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball. Specifically:

1. At Christmas and on several other occasions during the period 1985 through 1989, the then head coach provided gifts to several student-athletes, including $50 cash on two occasions, a satin university jacket ($19), a university corduroy jacket ($28.50), a university warm-up suit sweat shirt ($15.50) and a warm-up suit ($50.00); further, the source of these funds was an individual who provided the money to the then head coach without realizing it would be distributed to the student-athletes.

2. During the 1984-85 basketball season, the then head coach ordered gold charms for all 15 members of the men's basketball team; further, a local jeweler designed the charm and donated them to the then head coach; further, the then head coach ordered additional charms for three new members of the 1985-86 team and five new members of the 1986-87 team.

E. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3] On various occasions during the past several academic years, numerous student-athletes were provided local automobile transportation by then members of the university's basketball coaching staff.

F. [NCAA Bylaw 13.4.2] On March 25-27, 1988, during the official paid visits to the university's campus of two prospective student-athletes from a community college, the young men charged satellite television movies to their hotel room, and this bill ($80.04) was paid by the institution.

G. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.5.2.3.3] On March 25 and 27, 1988, during the official paid visits to the university's campus of two prospective student-athletes from a community college, a private charter aircraft company hired by the institution improperly charged the university for the cost of air transportation for the young men to travel from the community college to Huntington, West Virginia. Specifically, the private charter aircraft company charged the athletics department a rate of $75 per hour for 12 hours for a total of $900 for this flight when, in fact, the university should have been charged the normal rate for the charter service of $100 per hour, a savings of approximately $300 to the institution.

Further, another prospective student-athlete from the community college accompanied the young men on this visit and was charged (and he paid) his share of the actual flight time and not the "dead head" time.

H. [NCAA Bylaw 13.1.4.9(b)] On April 11 and 12, 1988, during a period when members of the men's basketball coaching staff could not travel off campus under NCAA legislation, the then men's head basketball coach visited a junior college campus, contacted members of the junior college's men's basketball coaching staff and attended a local booster club luncheon for the junior college; further, three prospective student-athletes at the junior college were being recruited by the institution at that time.

I. [NCAA Bylaws 10.1 and 10.01.1] A former men's head basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that the former coach demonstrated a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation by his involvement in the violations in this report.

J. [NCAA Constitution 2.1.1 and 2.5.1] During the period in which the violations in this case occurred, the university did not maintain proper institutional control over its men's basketball program in that there: (1) was no consistent monitoring of the program by the athletics department administrative staff; (2) was insufficient control of the "foster parent" program and no evidence to indicate that such a program was specifically discontinued after the prohibition of such programs in 1986, and (3) were insufficient rules and compliance programs in place to properly educate the athletics staff. Finally, the manner in which the former men's head basketball coach operated the program was outside institutional control.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

The committee determined that this case was major in nature and that these violations were not isolated or inadvertent, and were calculated to and did gain substantial recruiting and competitive advantages. Because these violations occurred after September 1, 1985, the committee's findings normally would subject the university to minimum penalties, which would include at least: a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for at least one recruiting year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for at least one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, the loss of postseason competition and television appearance opportunities for at least one year, and institutional recertification of compliance. Under the terms of the NCAA legislation that establishes minimum penalties for a major rules violation, however, the Committee on Infractions may impose lesser penalties if it determines that the case is "unique."

Ordinarily, unique circumstances that justify relief from the Association's mandatory penalties include factors such as prompt detection of violations; investigating and reporting violations to the NCAA; cooperating in the processing of the case, and initiating strong corrective and disciplinary measures prior to the committee's hearing. The committee gives great weight to such institutional actions in deciding the extent to which a case presents unique circumstances. Other circumstances, although not as significant as these institutional measures, also may warrant viewing a major case as unique for some purposes. In this regard, the committee determined that this case was unique in some respects, even though the university gained recruiting and competitive advantages, because the university self-detected the violations, promptly reported them to the NCAA, and engaged in a vigorous and diligent investigation that resulted in an admission of most of the violations. Moreover, the university took substantial actions by accepting the resignation of the head coach and other members of the basketball staff, imposing grant cuts and other limitations upon its basketball program, and establishing an extensive monitoring and compliance program.

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Council subcommittee action in the event of an appeal, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Further, Marshall University shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

B. The university's men's basketball team shall end its 1990-91 season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in postseason competition following that season. In addition, the men's basketball team may not participate in a foreign tour in the summer of 1990 or following the 1990-91 season; further, the men's basketball team may not play any of its regular-season contests outside the continental United States during the 1990-91 season. Moreover, the men's basketball team may not take advantage of any exceptions to the limitation in the number of basketball contests that are provided in Bylaws 17.3.3.1 and 17.3.5.4 regarding preseason contests (or contests outside of the continental United States) during the 1990-91 season.

C. The committee has found that student-athletes who were ineligible to represent the university (and student-athletes who the institution's coaching staff knew or should have known were ineligible) represented the university in the 1987 National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship (reference: Parts II-C and II-D of this report). Therefore, under the terms of Bylaw 31.2.2.4, the record of the individuals' and the team's performances in that championship shall be deleted, and the team's place finish in the final standings shall be vacated. Additionally, under the terms of Bylaws 19.4.2.1-(k) and 31.2.2.5, the Committee on Infractions and the NCAA Executive Committee shall consider whether the institution should be required to return up to 90 percent of the net receipts earned by the university in that event. In that regard, the Committee on Infractions will recommend to the Executive Committee that the institution return the university's share of receipts after distributions to the Southern Conference office and other institutions in that conference. This net share totals $42,241.

Marshall's

D. During the period of probation, the university shall report annually on July 1, 1990, and July 1, 1991, in writing to the NCAA enforcement staff and the Committee on Infractions the actions the institution has taken to ensure that its full athletics program is in compliance with NCAA legislation and to implement those actions it self-imposed, particularly the monitoring of housing for student athletes on athletically related financial aid.

E. The university shall be prohibited from providing any expense-paid visits to the institution for prospective student-athletes in men's basketball during the 1990-91 and 1991-92 academic years. (NOTE: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended based on the mitigating factors set forth above.) The committee adopts as its own penalty the university's self-imposed reduction of three official paid visits each for the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years.

F. During the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons, the university shall be prohibited from offering any additional grants-in-aid in the sport of men's basketball. (NOTE: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended based on the mitigating factors set forth above.) The committee adopts as its own penalty the university's self-imposed reduction of one grant for the 1990-91 academic year, and a reduction of two grants for the 1991-92 academic year.

G. The university shall be required to show cause why it should not be subject to additional penalties if it does not disassociate (in accordance with Bylaw 19.4.2.6) several representatives of its athletics interests and other individuals who were involved in violations found in this case reference: Part II-B-1, Part II-B-3, Parts II-B-4 and II-B-5, Part II-A, Part II-C-2 and Part II-C-1 of this report.

tions of NCAA legislation found in this case, the former men's head basketball coach will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employ-

H. Due to his involvement in the violation as an athletics department staff member at an NCAA member institution during a five-year period (March 12, 1990, to March 12, 1995), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(l), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

I. Had the men's head basketball coach not resigned (and the remainder of the men's basketball coaching staff been replaced), the committee would have asked the university to show cause why additional penalties should not be imposed on the institution unless other actions were taken relative to the coaching and recruiting activities of the former head coach and the former assistant coaches.

J. The committee adopts as its own action the requirement set forth by the university that athletics grant-in-aid recipients in the sport of men's basketball will be required to live in university housing at least during the period of this probation.

(NOTE: Should Marshall University appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Bylaw 32.8.5. A copy of the committee's report would be provided to the institution prior to the institution's appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by Bylaw 32.8.6, would be released to the public.

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed; further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as actions by NCAA Conventions directly as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case, and finally, should any or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.)

Friends, teammates pay respects to Gathers

More than 1,200 people paid their respects March 12 to Hank Gathers, the Loyola Marymount University basketball star who collapsed and died March 4 after making a slam dunk.

"Hank fell doing what he loved to do, what he did best," said Rep. William Gray, a clergyman who represents the north Philadelphia neighborhood where the Gathers family lives.

"If you have to go, there is no better way to go than doing what you do best. Now he's in God's hall of fame."

It was one of many eulogies during the 2½-hour service at Emmanuel Institutional Baptist Church in Philadelphia. Gathers' college coach, teammates, friends and brother all spoke of his passion for basketball and life.

"He loved life, he loved himself, he loved children; but more than anything else, he loved his son and family," Derrick Gathers said of his late brother, who had a 6-year-old son. "In every endeavor, he always gave 200 percent. And we know right now, he is giving 200 percent."

Reading his remarks slowly and tearfully, Derrick added, "Not only did he master the game of basketball, he mastered the game of love."

Gathers, who led the nation in scoring and rebounding last season, died after collapsing during a game in Los Angeles. He had been diagnosed as having an irregular heartbeat and was under orders to take medication.

Loyola Marymount coach Paul Westhead, his voice choking with emotion as he brushed aside tears, called Gathers "the best player I ever had, or will have."

"Hank made all of us better people, and I want to say for our team, he was our leader. . . . We played for him," Westhead said.

Tournament

other tournament coaches are now at their alma maters. They are Northeast Louisiana's Mike Vining, Oregon State's Jim Anderson, Missouri's Norm Stewart, Colorado State's Boyd Grant and St. John's (New York) Lou Carnesecca.

Northern Iowa's Eldon Miller joins a select group of six other coaches who have taken three colleges to the NCAA tournament. Miller, 50, took Western Michigan in 1976 (the Broncos' only appearance) and Ohio State in 1980, 1982, 1983 and 1985, and now, he has led the Panthers to their first appearance. The other six coaches are Gene Bartow (Memphis State, UCLA and Alabama-Birmingham), Eddie Hickey (Creighton, St. Louis and Marquette), Frank McGuire [St. John's (New York), North Carolina and South Carolina], Ralph Miller (Wichita State, Iowa and Oregon State), Eddie Sutton (Creighton, Arkansas and Kentucky) and Joe Williams (Jacksonville, Furman and Florida State).

Clem Haskins, Georgia Tech's Bobby Cremins, Colorado State's Grant, Michigan State's Jud Heathcote, Illinois' Lou Henson, Virginia's Terry Holland (in his last appearance as a coach) and Purdue's Gene Keady are taking a second college to the tournament; that makes 75 coaches who have taken two colleges to the tournament.

Team facts

Of the 30 automatic qualifiers, Towson State and Illinois State (both 18-12) have the most losses, while among the 34 at-large selections, Kansas State (17-14) and Villanova (18-14) have the most losses. La Salle has the best record of all the entrants, at 29-1, including a season-high 21-game win streak. There have been 47 teams that entered the tournament with only one loss in the previous 51 years and six have captured the national title.

UCLA has the most tournament appearances of any team (25) in this year's field, and North Carolina and Notre Dame have 23. Notre Dame is the only independent among this year's 64 teams.

For the first time, the women's finals could outdraw the men's in attendance. Tennessee's Thompson-Boling Arena in Knoxville seats 24,535 and could be filled if defending champion Tennessee makes the semifinals. Denver's McNichols Sports Arena, site of the men's Final Four, seats 16,264.

Breakdown by conferences

In 1975, the men's basketball committee ruled for the first time that teams other than the conference champion could be chosen at large from a conference. A year later, two teams from the same conference (Big Ten) played in the national-championship game, with Indiana defeating Michigan, 86-68. In 1980, the two-team conference limit was lifted. This gave the committee maximum flexibility to balance the bracket as well as to select the best possible at-large entrants.

The committee attempts to place only one conference team in each of the four sections within a region and attempts to format the bracket so that two teams from the same conference will not compete against each other prior to a regional championship game. Rematches of regular-season games also are noted but not strictly avoided.

The top four conferences in number of berths from 1980 to 1990 are the Atlantic Coast Conference (55), Big East Conference (54), Big Ten Conference (54) and Southeastern Conference (46). The Big Ten, as mentioned, is the only league ever granted seven slots; the ACC and Big East have had six teams selected three times and the SEC once.

In 1985, the number of automatic qualifiers was capped at 30 for a five-year period (1986-90). In the immediate future, the number of

Bob Knight

Norm Stewart

automatic berths will stay at 30 but, because there eventually will be 32 conferences eligible for automatic qualification, four conferences will have to conduct a preliminary "play-in" to determine which teams will fill two automatic berths.

No home-court advantage

The home-court advantage has been a concern since 1986, when the committee ruled that regional competition would be played at neutral sites. In 1989, neutral courts were extended to all rounds of the tournament and, if an institution selected to host any level of competition also was a participant in the tournament, it was bracketed in another region.

For instance, any invitee that serves as host of first- and second-round games may not play on its home court. In order to protect the ticket sales at that site, the team also must play on days other than its days as host. Texas, Connecticut and Georgia Tech were in that position this year.

The committee defines "home court" as a building where a team plays at least half of its home games.

In seeding, the committee's primary objective is to provide equal balance in the four geographical regions (East, Midwest, Southeast and West). When feasible, the committee attempts to keep teams in their areas of natural interest; but it may assign a team to any of the four regions in its effort to balance the bracket and avoid the home-court possibilities.

This year, Connecticut (Hartford), Louisiana State (New Orleans), East Tennessee State (Knoxville), Virginia (Richmond) and St. John's (New York) (East Rutherford) were the only teams within the general area of sites that are not their home courts.

Most-improved race

South Florida enters the tournament in the lead for first place in the race for the national most-improved title. The Bulls are up 12 games over last season, and Bobby Paschal's crew clinched its first-ever NCAA tournament bid by capturing the Sun Belt Conference's automatic berth. George Washington, which ended its season in the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament, is next at 11½ games.

South Florida is 20-10 vs. 7-21 a year ago (13 more wins and 11 fewer losses is 24; divide by two), while George Washington finished 14-17 vs. 1-27 last season. The Bulls are the only team with a shot at the most-improved title to make the field. They will tie with George Washington should they lose the first tourney game. A win would clinch the most-improved title for them.

Kansas, the only most-improved candidate with a winning record last year, is the only other team in the tournament; it is up nine games.

Women's coaches

Nearly all of the top coaching names in the eight-year history of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship are on hand for the ninth tournament. Coaches of the past four championships are among them—Tennessee's Pat Summitt last year and in 1987, Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore in 1988, and Texas' Jody Conradt in 1986. That means the first four are missing, but Barmore was a top assistant to Sonja Hogg on Louisiana Tech's 1982 champions and the coaches of six second-place teams also are on hand.

Southern California's Linda Sharp, coach of the 1983 and 1984 champions, now is the coach at Southwest Texas State and did not make it this time. Also missing is Marianne Stanley, coach of Old Dominion's 1985 champion, now at Pennsylvania.

Long Beach State's Joan Bonvincini, Auburn's Joe Ciampi, Georgia's Andy Landers and Iowa's Vivian Stringer all have reached the national semifinals or finals, or both, and are ready for another shot at the championship.

Several others have reached the regional finals, one victory from the national semifinals. The 1990 coaching chart on page 26 shows the complete list.

Big winners

Texas' Jody Conradt, with 554 victories (the all-time women's career record), leads an impressive field of winning coaches. Four other coaches have more than 400 career wins—Louisiana State's Sue Gunter (434), Florida State's Marynell Meadors (418), Iowa's Stringer (415) and Tennessee's Summitt (410). Ten other women's coaches in the field have posted more than 300 career wins.

First-time teams, coaches

There are six colleges in the women's tournament for the first time—Appalachian State, California, De-Paul, Michigan, Northern Illinois and Richmond.

The chart shows six coaches in the tournament for the first time, all of them heading the first-time teams.

The coaches who led 24 of the 32 teams in the semifinals and finals since the first tournament in 1982 are on hand, plus 26 of the 32 teams that lost in the regional finals, or one victory from the semifinals.

That is 50 of the top 64 teams in tournament history, or 78 percent.

Five in all eight

Five teams have been in all eight NCAA women's tournaments. They are defending champion Tennessee, Louisiana Tech, Long Beach State, Georgia and Mississippi.

Six teams are making an eighth appearance—Auburn, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Old Dominion, Texas and Penn State.

Stanford's Evans voted top U.S. amateur athlete

Sullivan Award winner Janet Evans was just where you'd expect to find her when last fall's earthquake struck northern California at the pool.

"I was scared," said Evans, who was on the pool deck while most of her Stanford University teammates were nearby in the weight room. "We could really feel it. I thought it was the big earthquake I'd heard so much about. I grabbed one of the divers' hands and just held on. There were members of the water polo team in the pool, and the force of the quake created huge waves that literally threw them out of the water."

Her coach, Richard Quick, put everything into perspective.

"He said, 'OK, it's time to get back to the workouts.' Plaster had fallen all over the place. We were close to the epicenter. We didn't have classes the next day. There was a lot of damage on campus, and it was difficult to think about swimming for a while," she told the Associated Press.

Evans won the Sullivan Award March 12, becoming the 60th recipient of the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union's annual award to the nation's outstanding amateur athlete for the previous year. It was her third time as a finalist.

Evans said the trip to Indiana for the announcement of the Sullivan winner forced her to change her practice routine for the Division I Women's Swimming Championships, which begin March 15 at the University of Texas, Austin.

"Coming here may have affected my training a little, but in some ways, it may have been a benefit. I'll have less of a time change going from Indianapolis than if I was heading to Texas from California," she said. "I'm excited about my first NCAA meet and want to help Stanford claim the championship. We're ranked No. 1. Texas, the host, is No. 2, and they're going to be pumped up in their home pool.

"I couldn't afford the time away with the NCAA meet coming up," said Evans, who won gold medals in the 400-meter freestyle, the 400 individual medley and the 800 freestyle at the 1988 Olympics. "But I've been swimming competitively for a long time, and I know how to prepare for a big meet. I'm sure that's why my coach allowed me to come."

In 1989, Evans set one world and two American records while continuing to dominate women's swimming. She put together a streak of 27 consecutive victories that ended in December at the U.S. Open, where she had second- and third-place finishes to go with three firsts.

"This year is a little different for me because in college we swim short-course races," she said. "The long courses require more endurance, and that's one of my strengths."

Evans, who thinks some weight and height she added in 1989 will make her stronger, plans to swim the mile and the 400- and 500-yard freestyle events in the NCAA championships meet.

"I might also be in a relay. That's going to be up to my coach," she said. "Being a part of a team is different, but I'm really delighted with the way things are going at Stanford."

Unorthodox practices improve baseball team's play

When it's 30 degrees outside with snow on the ground, college baseball teams in the north have to cope the best they can.

At Allegheny College, coach Rick Creehan's Gators do their coping a little differently.

Visitors to Gator practices will see batters hitting under-inflated basketballs, pitchers throwing tennis-ball cans against a net and fielders using ping-pong paddles to block balls in the dirt.

And, judging from its top-10 ranking among Division III baseball teams, these exercises actually work.

Creehan's assistant coach, Jeff Groff, introduced the idea of hitting basketballs after learning the drill as a graduate assistant coach at Kent State University. The purpose is to teach batters to hit the ball properly.

"When I began to explain it to the kids here at Allegheny, they thought I was crazy," Groff said. "But they've seen how it also builds strength and confidence."

"The principle is very simple. The hands are the most important part in hitting. This gets the hands in the proper hitting position. There are a lot of good coaching and self-teaching points in it. If you don't roll your wrists at the right time, you feel it through your shoulders, and the bat snaps back toward your body."

Using the drill, the Gators have increased their home runs from two during 1985 to 40 last season.

"For me," says head coach Creehan, "it pays off in terms of power. We teach our kids to hit every pitch hard, no matter what. It makes them feel good when they see the basketball fly off the bat."

The other drills have similar purposes. Throwing tennis-ball cans into a net teaches pitchers the finer points of throwing a curve ball, and the ping-pong paddles help catchers and infielders learn to keep their hands together while fielding balls on the ground.

Without complaint, Gator pitchers also throw half-painted baseballs to check the spin on their pitches, and second basemen and shortstops dodge football blocking dummies while turning double plays.

If all this seems a wee bit daffy, perhaps it can be attributed to the Pennsylvania cold. But the Gators have a solution for that, too.

They open the season March 17 in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where they will play Mercy College of New York.

Bowling Green State University's February 3 ice hockey game against Miami University (Ohio) will be remembered for quite a while by Falcon coach Jerry York and senior Nelson Emerson.

Nelson Emerson

expected to make a full recovery.

As part of his weekly Bronc Diary series, University of Texas-Pan American sports information director Jim McKone recently included his first annual sports horoscope. Two listings in particular—for people born under the signs of Taurus and Libra—are worth reporting.

"Taurus—Never throw fastballs to a guy they call Slugger," says the star chart. And for Libras? "A sports writer will spell your name wrong while praising you."

York's charges defeated Miami, 4-3, for York's 400th career victory as a head coach. Emerson scored his 271st career point in the contest, eclipsing the school career-scoring mark (270) that had been held by Brian Hills.

From Tim Tucker, Murray State University assistant sports information director, comes "another reason to fear the number 13."

While pitching batting practice February 13, Murray State senior Rick Grogan, who wears No. 13, suffered a fractured skull when struck by a batted ball.

"I was standing behind the batting cage when it happened," said Racer coach Johnny Reagan, a former chair of the NCAA Baseball Committee. "The ball hit him on the only part of his head that was exposed behind (a protective) screen."

Grogan probably will not pitch this season, although he has been released from the hospital and is tional Athletic Trainers Association's annual national meeting and clinical symposium, scheduled for June 9-13. Information on the meeting is available from NATA headquarters (2952 Stemmons, Suite 200, Dallas, Texas 75247, telephone 214/637-6282).

National League President Bill White will be the keynote speaker at Muhlenberg College's April 29 fundraising banquet. Proceeds will be used to support the soccer team's August trip to England. White's son, Michael, is a junior at Muhlenberg and played on the soccer team.

Clarion University will host an Olympic-style dual wrestling meet April 6 featuring American wrestlers against the Cuban World Team. Among those scheduled to compete is John Smith, currently ranked

No. 1 in the world at 136.5 pounds, and Carlton Haselrig, the former University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, star who dominated the heavyweight division in NCAA Divisions I and II for three years.

Haselrig, by the way, recently was signed by the National Football League Pittsburgh Steelers.

More information on the match is available from Clarion's athletics department (telephone 814/226-1997).

Renovation of the field house at Bethany College (West Virginia) is on schedule, with completion of the $1.3 million project scheduled this fall.

The project, which began eight months ago, will give the building a new roof; refurbished athletics department offices; a new training facility, and a new floor, scoreboards and bleachers.

College officials also report that fund-raising is under way for a proposed $3.5 million health and recreation center. Ultimately, Bethany also plans to build a football grandstand and tennis courts, modify its track, and renovate its natatorium.

It's been a banner season for women's basketball at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

The Lady Razorbacks have been nationally ranked most of the season and are still enjoying their February 23 victory over the University of Texas, Austin, that ended the Longhorns' 183-game winning streak against Southwest Athletic Conference opponents.

Now, it appears Arkansas also will be nationally ranked in women's basketball attendance. The Ladybacks have drawn a record 1,639 fans a game this season—a 67 percent increase over last year—and averaged 2,090 fans for home games against Southwest Conference foes, including the 6,327 fans who viewed a January loss to Texas.

"It's just another indication of the growth that the Arkansas women's program has made," said head coach John Sutherland.

Appropriately, the Long family dominated the long jump competition at the North Coast Athletic Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Junior Jamie Long of the College of Wooster outjumped his brother, freshman Jesse Long of Earlham College, at the March 2-3 meet. Jamie, who also won last year's NCAC outdoor long jump title, leaped 21-9 at the indoor meet while his brother jumped 21-3¼.

Forty-one percent of the College of Wooster's 433 varsity athletes earned at least a 3.000 grade-point average last semester (4.000 scale), prompting Wooster athletics director Alvin J. Van Wie, a former NCAA Division III vice-president, to repeat his belief that participation in athletics does not hinder athletics performance.

"In fact, I think it demonstrates that student-athletes can be involved in athletics while taking part in a challenging academic program, and be successful in both," he said.

Especially noteworthy are the performances of three teams at Wooster—the women's soccer squad, with 67 percent of its players achieving a 3.000 average or higher; the men's cross country team, which won the North Coast Athletic Conference team championship while 59 percent of its runners were scoring at or above 3.000, and the recently crowned NCAC-champion women's basketball team, which saw two-thirds of its players reach the mark.

More Report Cards: St. Lawrence University sent a pretty smart Nordic team to the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships March 7-10 in Stowe, Vermont. Of the four Saint men and two women who qualified to compete, five earned grade-point averages of better than 3.000 last semester. Of three seniors, two have cumulative GPAs better than 3.500.

Trivia Answer: Bill White attended Hiram College in Ohio as a premedicine major. He left school in 1955 to pursue a career in professional baseball that spanned 13 seasons. A first baseman, white won seven Golden Glove Awards and played in six all-star games.

Top facility

Knott Arena at Mount St. Mary's College (Maryland) has been named one of the top 10 facilities in the U.S. as an athletics-recreation-convention complex by Athletic Business. The gymnasium is at left; the field house, used for track and swimming, is at right. The structure was completed in 1987. The school's enrollment is about 1,500.
