March Madness is living up to its name again

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

The madness is back.

Although it is not big news that parity exists in the 52nd Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the tournament has provided a number of surprises with first-round upsets and near-upsets. It is a combination that has coaches showing flashes of temper as well as reaching for the antacids, while Sweet Sixteen teams prepare for the next round of battle.

It is difficult to nail down just which upset was the biggest, but No. 12-seed Ball State's victories over No. 5 Oregon State and No. 4 Louisville have to be on the list. The Cardinals never have been in the final 16 teams before, and first-year coach Dick Hunsaker's reward now is to match his team against No. 1-seed Nevada-Las Vegas.

But how do you choose that upset instead of No. 11-seed Loyola Marymount's record-breaking 149-115 victory over defending champion and No. 3-seed Michigan in the second round? The Lions set seven records - in an obviously emotional mission in memory of departed comrade Hank Gathers—to make their first appearance in the regional round.

No. 14-seed Northern Iowa upset No. 3-seed Missouri in the first round and then barely lost to Minnesota in the second round. With that narrow victory, Minnesota's Clem Haskins has led the Gophers to two consecutive regional appearances. Other teams in the 16 for the second straight year include Syracuse, Nevada-Las Vegas and Duke.

The top three seeds in the Midwest region—Oklahoma, Purdue and Georgetown—all were eliminated. No. 6 Xavier (Ohio) downed No. 3 Georgetown, while Texas (No. 10) downed Purdue (No. 2) and North Carolina (No. 8) made it a short trip for Oklahoma (No. 1).

In fact, Billy Tubbs' Sooners were the only No. 1-seed that failed to advance.

Among the top 16 seeds, only seven remain, including the other No. 1 seeds—Michigan State, Nevada-Las Vegas and Connecticut. This also marks the first time in tourney history that this many high seeds (one No. 1, three No. 2s, three No. 3s and two No. 4s) exited before the regional round.

This year also marks the first time since 1986 that a No. 1 seed failed to make the regionals, and Midwest region No. 4-seed Arkansas is the lowest seed to lead a region into the Sweet Sixteen since 1979, when No. 5 Syracuse was the top-seeded team in the East.

The Atlantic Coast Conference tops all leagues with four teams remaining, including regular-season winner Clemson. Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Duke are the others, and only Virginia (in coach Terry Holland's swan song) lost. Next are the Big Ten Conference, the Big East Conference and Southwest Athletic Conference, all with two teams left.

Six conferences are represented

$550 an hour from TV once was a windfall

Wayne Duke remembers when (former) NCAA (Executive Director) Walter Byers sold the television rights to tournament (Division I Men's Basketball Championship) games from his hip pocket, one game at a time. The same transactions take place today with batteries of lawyers on hand and an armed car purring softly outside.

"Literally from his hip pocket," recalled Duke, who stepped down one year ago as commissioner of the Big Ten Conference.

"In the early 1960s, you had Oscar Robertson playing at Cincinnati and the Ohio State teams with (Jerry) Lucas and (John) Havlicek, and we were thrilled because we were able to get the top rate from the stations in Cincinnati and Columbus.

"Five hundred and fifty dollars an hour. And at the time, it seemed like all the money in the world," Duke said.

Last November, CBS agreed to pay $1 billion for the rights to televise the same tournament from 1991 through 1997. That handsome sum is testament to many things, but perhaps none more than the role Wayne Duke played in elevating this modest little ladder tournament into a national spectacle to rival the Super Bowl and the World Series.

He tended to be low-profile, but at one time or another since 1953, he either wrote the handbook for the tournament, ran it, negotiated television rights, helped determine how many teams would play and who was in and who was out, and on one memorable occasion—the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan—had to decide whether it would go on at all.

Freed of those responsibilities, Duke is no longer lobbied or criticized at this time of year when 64 schools rejoice and a dozen more carp. After scrupulously avoiding attending any football or basketball games since his retirement, Duke plans to be at this year's Final Four.

his first ever with a clear conscience.

In the meantime, he can change channels from game to game in his suburban Chicago home without fear of stomach churning or telephone ringing off the hook, without fear that a bad choice made in the isolation of the tournament committee's selection office will be exposed on a basketball floor to 20 million viewers.

It was not always so.

In the past, coaches with teams on the bubble bombarded him with sheaves of statistics, tried to curry favor from other committee members behind his back, and one went so far as to try to learn what flight Duke was returning on after the selection process was finished. The plan, apparently, was to have the equivalent of a Greek chorus meet him at the airport, complete with wailing and gnashing of teeth.

"I just took a different flight," Duke said. "But my favorite story in that vein involves Dick Vitale."

Never would have guessed.

"Dick was athletics director at Detroit at the time, and back then, we called every team that had made it. Detroit was on the bubble and I told Dick I'd call him either way, just wanting to be helpful.

"It turns out they didn't, so I call him and he starts berating me like I couldn't believe. I mean really giving it to me... so much that I was kind of puzzled," Duke continued.

"Well, I learned a few days later that while we were on the phone, his office was filled with reporters from just about every (media) outlet in the area. Then it started to make some sense.

"And," he added, "I never let him forget it."

Though the tournament had been around since 1939—posting a deficit of $2,531 that year, the only loss in its storied history—it wasn't until Byers and Duke opened the NCAA's first full-time office from a suite in the Big Ten Conference headquarters to Kansas City, Missouri, some 13 years later that it began to take off.

And it was not so much a sense of mission as one of survival that guided the organization in those formative years. Byers, a former wire-service reporter, was all of 29 at the time, and Duke was 23, having served briefly as a college sports information director at Northern Iowa and Colorado.

"Today, you've got nationwide television announcing the brackets just minutes after they're completed, and the ratings for that show alone are staggering. Newspapers put out special sections," Duke said. "But in 1953, we filled them out, carried them to a printer, and mailed them out to individual newspapers and radio stations.

"And we were grateful if they ran them at all."

Byers and Duke stayed together 11 years. Duke moved out to accept the commissioner's job of the Big Eight in 1963, then vacated that office for the same post with the Big Ten in 1971. But he wielded considerable influence throughout his tenure in both jobs, serving as a member of the selection committee from 1976 to 1981 and as its chair from 1978 to 1981.

Duke cites three administrative changes during his tenure as having contributed greatly to the tournament's success—expansion of the bracket, seeding of the entrants and the decision to offer at-large bids to teams in a conference other than the champion—as well as the controversies it generates every March.

"The biggest misconception is that you're going to get the best 64. The people on the committee know beforehand that's impossible," he said. "Sometimes, the automatic qualifiers can't hold a candle to the teams that get left out.... Sometimes, committee members come in with what I'd call parochial, or regional, interests, but they never stay that way for long.

"The only thing that's certain about the whole process," he added, "is that you're going to aggravate somebody."

Asked about the most difficult pick during his involvement with the tournament, Duke instead talks about his most difficult decision.

"Without a doubt, it was the 1981 tournament, when we were in Philadelphia and I had to preside over the decision of whether we should go on that night after the president was shot," he said. "That's the thing I'll always remember.

"And I think," Duke concluded, "that we held our collective breath until the president, from his hospital bed, uttered that W. C. Fields line: 'All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia.'"

Sacred Heart adds football, two other varsity programs

As part of its five-year strategic plan, Sacred Heart University has added football, lacrosse and women's soccer to its athletics program, Dave Bike, director of athletics, announced at a press conference March 19.

"We are very pleased to be involved with the establishment of a Division III football program and the addition of men's lacrosse and women's soccer," Bike said. With the addition of the three sports, the school will sponsor 11 varsity sports.

Anthony J. Cerna, school president, said, "This news is exciting to all of us at Sacred Heart University. We are sure it will enhance the quality of student life and present an additional reason for alumni support."

Bike said that Sacred Heart University hopes to play Division III football schools such as Stonehill College, Assumption, Western New England, MIT, Bentley, Iona and St. Peter's.

The selection of men's lacrosse, a spring sport, was made to complement the football program.

"We added women's soccer in a conscious effort to keep our commitment to our women students," said Bike.

Bike said the search for coaches would begin immediately.

Administrative Committee minutes

1. Acting for the Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Approved the 1990-91 student-athlete statements, as referred by the Council.

b. Approved a recommendation that the Association join USA Golf, a new organization being formed to serve as the national governing body in that sport.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

Authorized the executive director to sell the Association's former national office buildings. (Note: This action occurred March 12 and is included here for convenience of reference.)

3. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 4.3.2.

a. Acting for the Council:
(1) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.8.6.1-(c) to permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in tryouts or competition involving national teams in gymnastics, swimming, track and field, and volleyball.

(2) Granted waivers per Bylaws 14.8.6.1-(d) and 14.8.6.2-(b) to permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in competition as part of the 1990 New Mexico State Games.

Conference No. 4

(3) Granted waivers per Bylaw 16.13 as follows:

(a) Appalachian State University, to provide expenses for a student-athlete to attend his grandmother's funeral.

(b) Eastern Montana College, to provide expenses for a student-athlete to attend his mother's funeral.

(c) Georgia Institute of Technology, to provide expenses for a student-athlete to attend a family member's funeral.

(d) University of Kansas, to send flowers to a student-athlete who was hospitalized and to send flowers to the funeral of a student-athlete's mother.

(e) University of Wyoming, to provide expenses for a student-athlete to attend her father-in-law's funeral.

(f) University of Washington, to provide expenses for a student-athlete to attend his grandfather's funeral.

b. Acting for the Executive Committee:

Granted waivers for championships eligibility per Bylaw 31.2.1.3 to East Carolina University and the University of California, Berkeley, which failed to submit institutional sports sponsorship forms by the specified deadline.

Privette joins national office legislative staff

Amy L. Privette joined the NCAA staff March 5 as a legislative assistant. She had been marketing manager for the Hilton Head Island (South Carolina) Recreation Association.

Privette is a summa cum laude graduate of Wake Forest University, where she earned an undergraduate degree in history. She was named

Amy L. Privette

Phi Beta Kappa and received an NCAA postgraduate scholarship, which she used to obtain a master's degree in sports management from the University of Richmond.

A former captain of the Wake Forest women's basketball team, Privette was a two-time academic all-America and was named Wake Forest woman athlete of the year. She also served on the presidential advisory committee to the Wake Forest athletics council.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 12

Athletics department staff members' employment in noninstitutional camps or clinics

Member institutions should note that in sports other than Division I football and men's basketball, it would be permissible for a member institution's coach to be employed by (either on a salaried or volunteer basis) or lecture at a noninstitutional (i.e., privately owned) camp, clinic or coaching school, provided no senior prospects are enrolled or employed and free or reduced-admission privileges are not provided to any high school, preparatory school or two-year college athletics award winner. For purposes of NCAA Bylaw 13, a noninstitutional camp is any camp that does not meet the criteria set forth in Bylaw 13.12.1.1 (Division I) or 13.12.1.2 (Divisions II and III). Please note that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee has editorially revised Bylaw 13.12.4.2 to reflect the above-mentioned guidelines. This revision will appear in the 1990-91 NCAA Manual.

In addition, it should be noted that with the adoption of 1990 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 125, it would not be permissible for athletics department staff members in any sport to be employed (either on a salaried or volunteer basis) by a camp or clinic established, sponsored or conducted by an individual or organization that provides recruiting or scouting services concerning prospective student-athletes.

NCAA Bylaw 17.8.4.1.1—"college-am" golf activities

The NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed during its February 22, 1990, conference the provisions of Bylaw 17.8.4.1.1 (dates of competition) and determined that student-athletes would be permitted to participate in "college-am" golf tournaments without such participation constituting a date of competition, provided the "college-am" is held in conjunction with intercollegiate competition. The committee agreed that under such circumstances, a student-athlete would not be permitted to receive awards or prizes in conjunction with the "college-am" tournament.

NCAA Bylaw 14.3—initial eligibility/combining test scores

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that the adoption of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 11 confirmed that a student-athlete must achieve a composite score of 18 on the ACT (if taken on or subsequent to October 28, 1989) to satisfy the test-score requirement of Bylaw 14.3. For students utilizing the ACT examination, the highest score achieved on the individual subtests of the ACT from more than one national testing date may be combined in determining whether the student's composite scores meet the minimum test-score requirement. However, subscores from the previous version of the ACT examination (taken before October 28, 1989) may not be combined with subscores from the revised version of the ACT examination (taken on or after October 28, 1989). For student-athletes whose combined composite scores on ACT examinations result in a fraction of .5 or higher, the scores may be rounded to the next whole number (e.g., 17.5 shall be considered 18 and 17.4 shall be considered 17).

Finally, student-athletes utilizing the SAT examination must achieve a 700 to satisfy the test-score requirement of Bylaw 14.3. Students utilizing the SAT examination may combine the highest scores achieved on the verbal and mathematics sections of the SAT from more than one national testing date in determining whether the student has met the 700 test-score requirement.

The national testing date schedules for the ACT and SAT examinations for the 1990-91 academic year as follows:

ACT
October 27, 1990
December 8, 1990
February 9, 1991
April 13, 1991
June 8, 1991

SAT

Survey shows slight decline in alcohol use on campuses

Three out of four college students drink alcohol at least once a month, and two of five students responding to a survey said they had at least five drinks in one sitting within two weeks of answering the questionnaire, according to a recent report.

In its 10th annual national survey of drug and alcohol use among 1,200 full-time students at two- and four-year colleges, the University of Michigan's Institute of Social Research also found that nine of 10 students have had at least one drink in the past 12 months.

The findings, although not directly comparable, are similar to those obtained last year in an NCAA-funded study of more than 2,200 student-athletes at member institutions.

Both studies agree that alcohol clearly is the drug of choice on college campuses and that its use, while possibly declining somewhat, is not being abandoned to the extent that students are cutting their use of other "social" drugs like marijuana and cocaine.

The Michigan survey found that 76.2 percent of students surveyed imbibed at least one drink during the 30 days prior to answering the mailed questionnaire—down from a high of 82.8 percent in 1982.

Michigan's finding that nine of 10 students have had at least one drink during the past year is nearly identical to a finding in the recent NCAA-funded study done by researchers in Michigan State University's College of Human Medicine (see the October 16, 1989, issue of The NCAA News). The Michigan State group found that 89 percent of 2,282 varsity athletes reported the use of alcohol during the previous 12 months.

Change in heavy drinking?

However, the more recent UM study revealed a decrease—albeit statistically insignificant, according to researchers—in the percentage of students who drink heavily in one sitting. In that survey, 41.7 percent of the students reported having five or more drinks in one sitting shortly before answering the questionnaire, compared to a high of 45.4 percent giving the same answer in 1984.

In contrast, the NCAA-funded MSU study showed an increase in the percentage of student-athletes who said they have six or more drinks at a time, from 36 percent in 1985 to 43 percent in 1989.

Still, both studies offer evidence that students are drinking less frequently, if only marginally so.

The UM report says students reporting that they drank daily during the 30 days prior to the survey dropped from seven percent in 1984 to four percent. Meanwhile, the MSU group found that only 20 percent of student-athletes responding to their survey reported drinking three or more times per week in 1989, compared to 29 percent in 1985.

Habits and attitudes

In a story on the UM survey, New York Times reporter Deirdre Carmody interviewed college officials and students who said they at least are seeing changes in drinking habits and in student attitudes toward alcohol, if not in the percentages who drink.

"There is some indication that those who fall in the occasional drinking pattern are drinking less frequently and drinking less per occasion," Bill Bailey, director of the alcohol- and drug-information center at Indiana University, Bloomington, told Carmody. "There is not too much indication that heavy binge drinking has changed."

"There is little change in what we call the annual prevalence of drinking," he continued. "What has changed—and I am not sure this is related to the drinking laws—is that some institutions are reporting significant downward turns in some of the problems associated with alcohol consumption."

Those problems include drunken driving and violent acts related to alcohol consumption, Carmody reported.

In light of the survey findings, officials interviewed by the Times were skeptical that the 21-year-old legal drinking age in all 50 states and tightened campus alcohol policies are influencing students to drink less regularly or heavily.

If anything, these laws and policies may be prompting under-age students to move into off-campus housing, where they can drink unobserved by university officials, or to smuggle alcohol into university housing.

But Carmody reported that campus officials generally agree that alcohol-education programs and changes in public attitudes on drinking are having an effect on college students, and they see the apparent decline in occasional drinking as encouraging.

Sports vs. academics: Irreconcilable differences

By Jon Huer

College sports today, to be charitable, are riddled with corruption. Helped by a conveniently short memory, the public seems to have learned to live with corrupt practices as the price of an unbroken series of Saturday spectacles.

Under the relentless pressure of a multimillion-dollar enterprise, rampant institutional cheating and personal exploitation have become the standard repertoire of the college sports establishment.

Why such a mess? Unlike professional sports, which are blatantly commercial, college sports are saddled with the burden of being, well, college sports.

To be succinct, perhaps "college" and "sports" (the spectator kind) are a contradiction in terms. Consider the following sources of conflict inevitable in collegiate athletics.

Inherent conflicts

First is the conflict between the commercialism of sports as a business (of the department of athletics) and the idealism of amateur sport (of the institution). The university is a nonprofit organization; the sports business is wholly for profit.

Second is the conflict between sports as short-term entertainment and the necessarily long-term commitment of higher education. The thrill of a Saturday afternoon is trivial to the educational establishment, which measures time in years.

Then, there is the conflict between the philistines whom the sports spectacle entertains and the pristine elitists whom higher learning enlightens. A spectacle that moves the masses to frenzy is irrelevant to the institutional mission to serve a select few.

The coliseum and the academy, with their contradictory aims, cannot really mix. The "win at any cost" reality is antithetical to the "scholarship first" ideal.

Thus, college athletics and academics have been on a collision course, and neither has yielded to reason or practicality. The mess today is a preordained result. Athletics will continue to cheat, and academics will continue to suffer.

Any sensible solution to this dilemma will have to accommodate certain constraints.

First, college sports must continue which courses are selected, grades changed and eligibility extended for athletes.

Considering these essential constraints, it is easy to see why the proposals of both pragmatists and purists cannot work. Locked into a mindset that extols a balance between student-athlete and academics, it insists that student-athletes

A solution would be to allow athletes to play three years without having to be students, then let those who don't go on to professional careers begin their undergraduate studies

Penalties hurt all associated with the school, but don't blame NCAA

USA Today

Excerpted from an editorial

"When the NCAA has to crack down on athletics programs that won't obey the rules, everybody loses. It damages a school's image. It embarrasses students and alumni. It hurts fund-raising. And it penalizes other sports programs.

"But don't blame the NCAA. It has to do its job.

"Blame the coaches. Blame the players. Blame the presidents who won't stand up to coaches and athletics directors. Blame the boards of trustees and faculty members who won't support their presidents. Blame the boosters.

"Of course, it takes money to run college athletics programs; a lot of it. And TV networks don't pay millions to televise graduation ceremonies.

"But college is about learning. And winning trophies.

"Not checks."

Jeffrey H. Fogelson, director of athletics
Xavier University (Ohio)

The Associated Press

"I think the greatest benefit (in reaching the Final Four) would be for the program, maybe in less tangible ways. We like to think that if the basketball team were on a national television game, it would pay dividends beyond money, like exposing the name of the university a bit more.

"We have people who say, 'Why shouldn't the athletics department get all of it (tournament revenue)?' But if we have a bad year in basketball, we don't sell tickets, and we come in without enough money, the university is also going to underwrite those losses.

"I think it is entirely appropriate if the university decides what to do with the money."

Skip Myslenski, columnist

Chicago Tribune

"...with some exceptions, those (conference) tournaments are now nothing more than excuses for alumni to party and leagues to make money. Now, they are meaningful only to those 15 to 20 conferences that receive but one invite to college basketball's Big Dance and to those few teams that are on the bubble.

"So here's a suggestion to those conferences that have tournaments that are now obsolete: Rent hotel suites for each of your teams, and outfit each with a large screen, a VCR and highlight films. Then, sell tickets to alums, who can gather in those suites, cheer and party hearty without having to be bothered with traveling to some arena.

"You still can make money that way, and the players from your best teams can rest up for what is truly important—the NCAA tourney itself."

Joey Meyer, head men's basketball coach
DePaul University

The Associated Press

"The pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Look at how much the NCAA television package brings in, how much each school picks up just by being in the tournament.

"Think of college basketball like a competitive business; think of how many people in big-money

Jeffrey H. Fogelson

Joey Meyer

business cut corners, and it's not hard to see where the temptation is coming from."

Lowell Cohn, columnist
San Francisco Chronicle

"It's difficult for athletics programs to be on the up-and-up, to really care if athletes go to class and actually learn, when collegiate sports have become big business.

"Try to digest some of these numbers: CBS is paying $1 billion for the NCAA tournament over the next seven years. Each school that makes it to the Final Four this season earns $1,432,000. Schools get $286,500 just for reaching the tournament. That's a lot of temptation, and it explains why some universities allow coaches to recruit borderline criminals and run dirty programs.

"So don't gasp with surprise that there's point-shaving in the gyms of our institutions of higher learning. The way the system is set up, it's absolutely inevitable."

William Bennett, national drug policy director
United Press International

"The best school policies (on use of illegal drugs) I'm familiar with are unambiguous, straightforward and consistently applied: If you use drugs, your parents will be notified, and you will be suspended. Repeat offenders face expulsion."

Rumeal Robinson, varsity basketball player
University of Michigan

Chicago Tribune

"If they (freshman student-athletes) have tunnel-vision for the NBA only, let them play. If they don't, though, give them a chance to get used to college (by sitting out their freshman year).

"Basketball is now a year-long thing, and it's hard to get the credits in to stay eligible, and there's a lot of pressure on you when you're not eligible.

"You have a tendency to rush things, and you never play your best when you're rushing. Me, I didn't have to rush (after not meeting eligibility requirements); I enjoyed it."

to provide the spectacles to which the public and the sports infrastructure (mainly TV) are accustomed. Any radical departure from this premise—such as making them professional, without academic conditions, as some pragmatists (The New York Times, for example) have suggested, or raising academic expectations, as some purists have demanded—is unacceptable.

The former proposal would sever the legitimate identification of sports with academia (how could a college justify supporting a team if the players were not its students?). The latter proposal would penalize potentially good athletes who have a poor academic record.

Protecting the athlete

Second, the athlete must be protected from external exploitation as well as from his own delusions of grandeur. He must be provided with the safety net of a viable college degree. Currently, over 99 percent of student-athletes do not make it to the pros, and their graduation rate in major sports is either pitifully low or, at some institutions, nonexistent.

After three or four years of struggling with incompatible goals, they predictably succeed in neither. The existence of ex-athletes drifting and unproductive is one of the best-kept secrets of American society.

Third, the student-athlete must be asked to do the things—athletic and academic—that he can reasonably accomplish. Under present policy, an average football or basketball player spends the equivalent of a work week or more during the season practicing and traveling. The resulting physical exhaustion and mental pressure do not allow adequate preparation for the classroom. Only a student with Superman's body and Einstein's mind could be expected to do reasonably well in both; hence, the scandalous way in must be good athletes and good students simultaneously. But this balance, though noble in conception, is impossible in practice. No one has considered, apparently, that it is possible to have athletics and academics sequentially.

Yet, obviously, athletics and academics can take place at different times. On a sequential track, the student-athlete would first be an athlete and then, when his playing days were over, he would begin his studies. With this possibility in mind, I propose the following:

Full-time athletes

A prospective student-athlete signs on with a college of his choice for three years of exclusive commitment to his sport (while officially classified as a "prescience," "preeducation," "prebusiness" major, etc., according to his general preference.) Three years gives him enough time to develop and demonstrate his skill as a potential professional. After the three years—or even before then, depending on circumstances—his professional chances are fairly clear. Then, with his athletics career unequivocally decided, he is in a position to begin his academic career as a freshman.

While on the team, the athlete would be paid a salary deemed reasonable by a national overseer organization (such as the NCAA). When his playing days were over, he would become a bona fide student, and his undergraduate educational expenses would be paid by the institution as long as he maintained his academic standing.

While actively engaged in athletics, the player would be under no obligation to tackle academics. However, given the fact that many athletes are underprepared for college, it might be advisable for them to maintain a reasonable contact with basic English, math and so on.

The sequential system also would allow admission into college of those academically ineligible under prevailing rules, with the provision that qualifications would be met during the three years.

If an athlete's SAT scores or grades were too low for the freshman requirement, they could be raised during the off-season. There also might be a particular deficiency in an academic field that he would be able to remove.

Minimum academic contact

This sort of minimum contact with academics is, of course, a far cry from the crushing burden under the present system. (Of course, willing and capable athletes could participate in academics to a greater extent.)

At any rate, the athlete's academic involvement during his playing days would be determined chiefly by the coaching staff, to ensure that academics did not interfere with athletics. Reality dictates that 99 percent of athletes would have to pursue academics; in the meantime, they naturally would be mindful of the need to brush up on their academic fundamentals. There would be plenty of time and energy to accomplish this simple task without pressure as they played ball full time.

Under this plan, the student-athlete could accomplish in six or seven years what his classmates normally accomplish in four years, or usually five.

But this disparity would be to his advantage in several respects: Upon completion of his athletics commitment, he would have no illusions about fame and fortune in athletics. He would have given it his best shot and, thanks to the academic alternative, he would be at peace with himself to concentrate on his education.

The three years on the playing field also would have given him the maturity—personal, intellectual, social—that he is likely to have lacked before, and this maturity would only strengthen his resolve and improve his classroom performance.

In addition, prospective employers would view his athletics experience (much as they do military service) as a plus. If he failed in his pursuit of academics for whatever reason, he could not blame anyone but himself. Both athletics and academics have been given a fair shot. There could be no cries of foul play, exploitation or missed opportunities.

Site change for III football is recommended

The NCAA Division III Football Committee is recommending to the Executive Committee that Bradenton, Florida, serve as the 1990 and 1991 sites of the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl—the title game of the Division III Football Championship.

The recommendation calls for the University of South Florida to serve as the host institution and the Bradenton Kiwanis Club to serve as the sponsoring agency.

The committee's recommendation is based on the quality of the facility in Bradenton and the prospects for favorable weather conditions.

Fifteen of the 17 championship games, including the last five, have been played in Phenix City, Alabama. The 1983 and 1984 title games were played in Kings Island, Ohio.

Satisfy all demands

This first-athletics-then-academics plan satisfies all parties involved. The student-athlete, free from exploitation, is provided with about eligibility every season. The public is treated to a higher level of competition from the players, who are now year-round athletes.

Finally, the college, in addition to

"Upon completion of his athletics commitment, he would have no illusions about fame and fortune in athletics. He would have given it his best shot and, thanks to the academic alternative, he would be at peace with himself to concentrate on his education."

a postathletics safety net. The coach gets a pool of reliable talent for a stable program with no worries maintaining a legitimate team of semiprofessional quality, frees itself from all possibility of corruption in trying to uphold the idealism of scholarship.

The NCAA, as the overseer of all athletics operations, can enforce its policies without the criticism of selective penalties or the hypocrisy of insisting on the unrealizable balance between athletics and academics.

This proposal has one small drawback: It costs more than the current system.

For a society in which the bottom line weighs the heaviest, this drawback may be considered significant by some. But it can be resolved fairly painlessly by doing what is currently unthinkable—extending the season.

Longer season

Without being burdened by academics, players would have nothing to fear from a slightly longer season.

A few more basketball games or football weekends would only delight the alumni, as well. It is an economic solution to which everyone can agree. As an added measure, the NCAA also could use its resources to augment scholarships at smaller-income schools.

This "sequential model," as opposed to the current "parallel model," gives both athletics and academics the total commitment that each requires. The alternative—maintaining the present system by pretending that all is well—is simply too barbaric for the student-athlete and ultimately too suicidal for the athletics enterprise to contemplate.

by one team each—the Big West Conference, Pacific-10 Conference, Mid-American Athletic Conference, West Coast Athletic Conference, Southeastern Conference and Midwestern Collegiate Conference.

The ACC leads all conferences with a 9-1 tournament record, followed by the Big East 9-5, Big Ten 6-4, SWC 4-1, Big West 3-1, MCC 3-1, Pac-10 5-3, SEC 3-2, MAC 2-0 and WCAC 2-0.

It is UCLA's first time beyond the first round since 1980, when the Bruins made it to the championship game before losing to Louisville. For North Carolina and Dean Smith, it is the 10th straight Sweet Sixteen; and for the Big Eight, it is the first time since 1984 that a conference team has not advanced beyond the second round.

Louisville, which is fifth in tournament appearances with 21, made its fastest exit since 1981. Texas and Arkansas have advanced farther than any SWC team since 1984, when Houston made the second of back-to-back appearances in the title game.

This is North Carolina's 19th trip to the Sweet Sixteen, behind UCLA's 21 in the current field, and the Tar Heels' nine Final Four trips trail only UCLA's 14. UCLA also leads the current field in championships with 10.

It also is Smith's 16th consecutive NCAA tournament team, a record for coaches. His mark of seven Final Four teams is second to UCLA's John Wooden.

In tournament victories, Smith's 43 rank second to Wooden's 47, while Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian (26) is sixth.

Meanwhile, this is Ball State's and Xavier's (Ohio) first trip to the Sweet Sixteen, while Georgia Tech, Connecticut, Minnesota, Clemson, Ball State, Alabama, Loyola Marymount and Xavier (Ohio) never

Tournament scoring

Tournament scoring is down to 146.35 points per game (both teams combined) through the first- and second-round games even though Loyola Marymount scored more than that in its victory over Michigan. The first-round average of 143.47 is the lowest since 1986's 143.3 and the second-round norm of 152.13 is the lowest since 1987. These declines come despite the 45-second clock and three-point goal.

Introduction of the 45-second clock in 1986 helped tournament scoring reach 143 points per game, a big jump from the 127.4 in 1984—second lowest figure in 32 years. When the three-pointer was added in 1987, scoring went up again, to 154.56; in 1989, it jumped to 158.48.

The final national trends showed scoring at 149.9, down a little from 151.4 in 1989.

Tournament seeding

It is no surprise that the No. 1- and No. 2-seeded teams have had the best records in NCAA tournament play since 1979, when seeding began. There are four No. 1 seeds, one in each regional, making 44 top seeds in the past 11 years. And 18 of these reached the Final Four, nine reached the title game and three won the championship—Indiana in 1987, Georgetown in 1984 and North Carolina in 1982. Overall, top seeds are 116-42 in tournament play for a .734 winning percentage.

Ten No. 2 seeds made the Final Four, six reached the title game and three won the crown—Louisville in 1986 and 1980 and Michigan State in 1979. Overall, the second seeds are 90-41 for .687. In fact, neither a No. 1 nor a No. 2 seed has lost a first-round game since 1985, when the field was expanded from 48 to 64 teams.

But third place is a surprise—the No. 6 seeds have the third best record at 61-42 for .591, with five Final Four teams and two champions—Kansas in 1988 and North to the Final Four, according to seeding, and Kansas (1988) had the easiest, facing the 14-7-4 seeds (total 25) after the first round. Because of upsets, Kansas did not face the highest possible seed in any round.

Last season, Michigan faced the 11-2-5 seeds (total 18) and even faced a No. 2 seed (North Carolina) in the regional semifinals.

This also is the first year since 1979 that two No. 1 seeds are in the field after not being in the tournament the previous year. Connecticut, No. 1 seed in the East, and Michigan State, No. 1 in the Southeast, both missed the party in 1989. In that 11-year span, only five other teams—Michigan in 1985, DePaul in 1984, Virginia in 1981, Kentucky in 1980 and Indiana State in 1979—gained a No. 1 seed despite missing the field the previous year.

Oklahoma had a No. 1 seed for the third consecutive year, the first team to do so since Virginia in 1981, 1982 and 1983. And the Sooners are the only No. 1 not around.

Only two teams seeded below eighth in a regional have reached the Final Four—Pennsylvania (No. 9) in 1979 and Louisiana State (No. 11) in 1986. Each lost to the eventual champion in the semifinals—Pennsylvania by 34 to Michigan State and Louisiana State by 11 to Louisville. That means Ball State (No. 12), Loyola Marymount (No. 11) and Texas (No. 10) all have a chance.

The best performance by the No. 1 seeds (and perhaps the best job of seeding by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee) came in 1987, when the top seeds produced a 16-3 overall record, and No. 1-seed Indiana won the title. In 1989, the No. 3 seeds, led by runner-up Seton Hall, posted a best-ever 13-3 record. On the other hand, two 5-4 marks by the No. 11 seeds in 1989 and 1985 are the only winning records for seeds below No. 9 since were No. 6-seed Vanderbilt knocking off No. 3 Iowa in Iowa City and Mississippi beating Nevada-Las Vegas, also on the road. That means the Southeastern Conference has four teams in the Sweet Sixteen.

Defending champion Tennessee survived to headline the East regional in Norfolk, Virginia, while Stanford hosts the West regional and Texas the Midwest.

Seeding no surprise

There are no surprises when talking about women's seeds since the tournament started in 1982. There were no seeds in the initial year, but since seeding began in 1983, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won every championship. Last year, Tennessee, the No. 1 seed in the East region, beat a 9-4-2-1-1 seed combination to take the title.

Louisiana Tech in 1988 and Tennessee in 1987 had the toughest routes to the women's semifinals and finals, according to seeding, and Texas (1986) had the easiest, facing the 4-2-4-1 seeds (total 11) after the first and second rounds. Louisiana Tech and Tennessee faced identical 3-1-1-1 seeds (total six) after the first and second rounds.

Last year's No. 1 seeds posted a 15-3 record, the best mark since 1983. The 1983 and 1984 No. 1 seeds had identical 12-3 records for the second-best record.

This bears out the fact that many of the same women's teams are seeded high every year. What makes this scenario similar is not that they are seeded indiscriminately, but that yearly performance has not varied among these high-seeded teams. To illustrate the point, Virginia in 1986 is the only No. 1 seed in tourney history to lose a first- or second-round game.

This year was no exception as every No. 1 seed advanced, and Georgia was the only No. 2 seed that did not.

The lowest seeds to reach the semifinals were No. 4-seeds Western Kentucky in 1985 and 1986 and Tennessee in 1986. Even more impressively, at least two No. 1 seeds have made the semifinals every year except 1985, and four semifinals had only No. 1 and No. 2 seeds (1989, 1988, 1987, 1983).

Teams that have gotten the most No. 1 seeds in the eight years of seeding are Louisiana Tech with five, Texas with four, and Auburn and Southern California with three. Long Beach State, Georgia and Old Dominion all had two.

Basketball writers select two as scholar-athletes

Alex Kessler of the University of Georgia and Stefanie Kasperski of the University of Oregon are the U.S. Basketball Writers Association's scholar-athletes of the year.

Kessler, a 6-foot-11 forward who averaged 20.6 points a game for the Bulldogs this season and became Georgia's career scoring leader, was honored for the second year in a row. He is a premedicine major majoring in microbiology and has a 3.910 grade-point average (4.000 scale).

The 6-7 Kasperski, who is from West Germany, averaged 18.1 points a game this season and became the Pacific-10 Conference's career rebounding leader. She has a 3.980 GPA as a biology major.

Both recipients will receive $20,000 scholarships for two years of postgraduate study from Mercedes-Benz, sponsor of the USBWA awards.

Two first-round upsets involving a spread of at least seven places in the seeding were overshadowed by two other games involving No. 1 seeds vs. No. 16 seeds. In the Southeast Region, No. 1 Michigan State was taken to overtime by Murray State before winning, 75-71, and Oklahoma, No. 1 seed in the Midwest, had trouble putting away tourney newcomer Towson State, 77-68.

In the second round alone, eight lower seeds won to advance to the Sweet Sixteen. That matched last year's first-round upsets.

*There were 10 seeds in each regional in a 40-team field in 1979 (up from 32 teams in 1975-78) and 12 from 1980 to 1984 (the "opening rounds" in 1983 and 1984 were not seeded; the winners made the 48-team bracket). There have been 16 seeds since 1985.

Only one team seeded below sixth has won the championship since 1979—Villanova in 1985 as a No. 8 (that means 28 teams were seeded above Villanova). The Wildcats were one of five teams in the past 11 years to face a No. 1 and No. 2 seed in the Final Four. The others were Kansas in 1988, Indiana in 1987, Georgetown in 1985 and Indiana in 1981.

Late surge lifts Texas women to swimming title

Despite three record-breaking victories by Stanford freshman Janet Evans, the Cardinal was unable to withstand a final charge by Texas and the host Longhorns won their sixth team title in seven years at the Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Texas passed Stanford in the team standings in the March 15-17 meet's next-to-last event—platform diving—and then defeated the Cardinal in the 400-yard freestyle relay to give Longhorn coach Mark Schubert his first NCAA title. Richard Quick, who now coaches at Stanford and led the Cardinal to last year's crown, coached the Longhorns to their five other titles.

The race for the team title was the tightest in the meet's nine-year history, with Texas edging Stanford by only 9½ points—632-622½.

Still, it was the exploits of three-time Olympic gold medalist Evans in her first NCAA meet that captured most of the attention.

Evans set two American records, including a 4:34.39 time in the 500-yard freestyle that erased one of the nation's longest-standing women's marks—Tracy Caulkins' record of 4:36.25 set in 1979. The freshman also broke her own American record in the 1,650-yard freestyle and established meet records in all three of her victories, including the 400-yard individual medley.

Her teammate, Janel Jorgensen, swept the butterfly events and won the 200-yard individual medley, and the Cardinal's Jill Johnson added a victory in the 200-yard breaststroke. But those individual efforts could not overcome Texas' teamwork.

The Longhorns' only individual titlist was Leigh Ann Fetter, who set American and meet records in the preliminaries of the 50-yard freestyle before going on to win that event and the 100 freestyle. Texas, however, had five of the meet's 15 top scorers. Freshman Amy Shaw's 48 points led the Longhorns, followed by senior Andrea Hayes and sophomore Katy Arris with 45 each, sophomore Dorsey Tierney with 43, and junior Fetter with 40.

Texas and Stanford each won two relay races.

Florida finished a strong third at the meet with 477 points. Kristen Linehan swept the backstroke events and Whitney Hedgepeth and Stephanie Zurich added victories in the 200-yard freestyle and 100-yard breaststroke for the Lady Gators.

That trio also teamed with Lorraine Perkins to give Florida an American record in the 200-yard medley relay. Their mark is not a meet record, however; that mark is held by the 1987 Texas team that counted foreign-born Tracey McFarland among its members.

Kenyon men win again—this year by 118 points

Scoring its most points ever, Kenyon won a record 11th straight team title at the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships and made coach James Steen the most victorious coach in NCAA championships competition.

The Lords scored 653½ points at the March 15-17 meet in Brown Deer, Wisconsin, to outdistance runner-up UC San Diego by 118 points. It has been six years since an opponent has come within 100 points of beating Kenyon at the meet.

Kenyon, which last year became the first school to win 10 straight team titles in any sport or division, also handed Steen an unprecedented 18th NCAA title as a coach. Steen, who also has coached the Kenyon women to seven straight titles, passed Ted Banks of UTEP, who coached cross country and track and field teams at that school to 17 team titles from 1974 to 1981.

Sprint freestyler Jon Howell, who won his third straight 50-yard freestyle title, and Shawn Kelly each won two individual titles for Kenyon, which collected a total of five individual crowns in addition to sweeping the three freestyle relays. Also winning for Kenyon was David Wenz, whose victory in the 200-yard freestyle complemented Howell's wins in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles and Kelly's triumphs in the 200-yard butterfly (his second straight) and 400-yard individual medley.

The meet's only records were set in the relays, including Kenyon's efforts in the 200- and 400-yard freestyle relays.

UC San Diego established records in the 200- and 400-yard medley relays, in addition to claiming four individual titles. The Tritons' Bradley Thomas won the 500- and 1,650-yard freestyles.

Other double titlists at the meet were Carleton's Gregory Sampson, who repeated as 200 breaststroke champion in a sweep of the breaststroke events; Tim Niznik of St. Olaf, who won the 100-yard butterfly and 200-yard individual medley, and Chris Radpour of Emory, who repeated as one-meter diving champion and swept the diving events.

Rochester claims hoop title in tight battle with DePauw

Rochester defeated DePauw, 43-42, to win the Division III Men's Basketball Championship March 17 in Springfield, Ohio.

The Yellowjackets' only other appearance in the tournament came in 1981.

Chris Johnson hit both ends of a one-and-one with 1:05 left to give Rochester a 43-37 lead. DePauw fought back and trailed by three with 17 seconds remaining. Dave Ferrell scored on a layup with seven seconds left to cut the margin to one. DePauw got one more chance after Rochester missed a free throw but could not get off a shot.

Rochester shot 38 percent and DePauw 31 percent for the game.

"(The game was played by) two teams that played very tough, tenacious defense," Rochester coach Mike Neer said. "Both teams were tight shooting. Both teams were willing to take 40 to 45 seconds for the shot they wanted."

"We won it with our defense. When you can win a championship in 1990 and shoot 38 percent from the field, it makes it easier to sell defense to future teams."

In the third-place game, Charles Duckett stole the ball and dished off to Chris Brandt, whose bank shot gave Washington (Maryland) an 87-86 victory over Calvin.

Rochester's Chris Fite was named the tournament's most outstanding player. He was joined on the all-tournament team by Brett Crist and Brett Hecko of DePauw, Brandt of Washington (Maryland), and Steve Hondred of Calvin.

First-year coach leads Hope women to hoop title

First-year head coach Sue Wise led her Hope team to its first Division III Women's Basketball Championship appearance, and the Flying Dutch defeated St. John Fisher, 65-63, March 17 to give Hope its first NCAA team championship in any sport.

St. John Fisher, which was making its second appearance in the championship game in the past three years, held a 30-28 edge at half time.

Early in the final period, with the score tied at 32, St. John Fisher scored 20 straight points to take a 52-32 lead. Hope then put together a run of its own, outscoring the Cardinals 20-5.

Susan Heidt hit two free throws to give St. John Fisher a three-point lead with 22 seconds remaining. Hope senior Dina Disney sank a three-point field goal with 13 seconds remaining to tie the score at 63.

St. John Fisher turned over the ball on an offensive foul with five seconds left. Heidt made a steal on the inbounds play but had the ball batted away by Hope's Lissa Nienhuis. During the scramble for the ball, Disney was fouled. Although the clock showed :00, the buzzer had not sounded. Disney went to the line and converted both ends of the one-and-one, extending her streak of consecutive free throws to 37. She hit 61 of 67 attempts for the year. St. John Fisher got off a desperation shot, but it was no good.

Heidelberg defeated Centre, 71-60, in the third-place game. Centre played in the third-place game for the second straight year.

Heidt and Michelle Skovrinski of St. John Fisher, Disney and Holly Vandenberg of Hope, and Dortha Ford of Heidelberg were named to the all-tournament team.

NCAA Record

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

Robert H. Edwards appointed president at Bowdoin. The former Carleton president has served most recently as head of the Department of Health, Education and Housing for the Secretariat of His Highness the Aga Khan (Paris).

DIRECTORS OF ATHLETICS

Rick Dickson selected at Tulsa, where he has been acting AD since last year. He previously was assistant AD at the school. Judith L. Ray named women's AD at New Hampshire. She has been assistant AD for academic and student affairs at New Mexico since 1986 and is a former commissioner of the High Country Athletic Conference. Ray also has been women's AD and head women's volleyball coach at North Dakota State. Richard Becker will step down in June after 10 years as AD at Vassar to return to the school's physical education faculty.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Stephen Erber promoted from assistant AD for men at Binghamton, where he will now oversee men's and women's programs. Erber, a former member of the NCAA Wrestling Committee, was head wrestling coach at the school from 1967 to 1988 and is a former president of the State University of New York Athletic Conference.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS OF ATHLETICS

Bill Furjanic appointed at St. Francis (Pennsylvania), where he has been head men's soccer coach for two years and also has been director of intramurals. Craig Miller, assistant AD for communications at Villanova, named assistant executive director of USA Basketball.

COACHES

Baseball—Dave Stenhouse announced his retirement at Brown, effective at the end of the season. Entering his 10th season at the school, Stenhouse has coached his teams to a 159-192-5 record. He previously coached teams at Rhode Island College to a 185-135 record through 12 seasons.

Baseball assistants—Greg Christodulu named at Susquehanna, where he also will assist with football. Brian Kemp appointed at Glassboro State, where he will work with pitchers and catchers. He served last season as an aide at High Point.

Men's basketball—James R. Hill promoted from assistant at Rutgers-Newark, where he has been on the staff for two years. Hill, who also has been an aide at Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck and Upsala, succeeds John K. Adams, who remains at the school as athletics director. Adams' teams recorded a 44-77 mark through four seasons. He also coached for 11 seasons at William Paterson, compiling a 212-76 record. Ken Burmeister resigned after four seasons at Texas-San Antonio, citing philosophical differences with school administrators. He led a Roadrunner team to an appearance in the 1988 Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Ned Fowler appointed at Stephen F. Austin State. The former Tulane head coach served most recently (1987 to 1989) as an assistant at Auburn. Wally Halas resigned after three seasons at Columbia, saying he plans to begin doctoral studies. His teams recorded an 18-63 mark during his tenure.

Women's basketball—Charlotte "Chickie" Mason resigned after two years at Nevada-Reno. She plans to work with the Athletes in Action women's team. Amy Pritchard resigned after six seasons at Ohio, where her teams compiled a 74-91 record. Pritchard's 1986 team won the Mid-American Conference title and appeared in the Division I Women's Basketball Championship. Brenda Hillman stepped down after three seasons at Aurora, where she will continue to coach women's volleyball. She is completing doctoral studies.

Women's basketball assistant—Carla Dudley appointed at Southeastern Louisiana after two years on the staff at UTEP. She replaces Janice Joseph-Johnson, who resigned to move to West Germany.

Football—Jimmy Laycock received a new four-year contract at William and Mary, where he has coached his teams to a 58-53-2 record through 10 seasons.

Football assistants Michael Kolakowski, Dick Cassels and Robert Proctor joined the staff at Ohio, which also announced the retention of Nicholas Toth, who will coach special teams and running backs. Kolakowski and Cassels previously were on the staff at Maine and Proctor coached at Clarion. Bryan Durrington and Greg Olejack named defensive backs and offensive backfield coaches at Brown. Durrington served last season on the staff at Bucknell and Olejack previously was offensive coordinator and offensive line coach at Villanova. Milton Gore hired as running backs coach at Georgia Southern, where he played as a defensive back on two Division I-AA championship teams. He has been an assistant coach at North Myrtle Beach (South Carolina) High School. Gore replaces Jay Russell, who becomes quarterbacks coach at Georgia Southern. Clyde Christensen promoted from quarterbacks coach to offensive coordinator at Holy Cross, where he joined the staff last year. He also has been an offensive coordinator at East Tennessee State and East Carolina.

Also, Tom Gilmore joined the staff at Pennsylvania, where he was a standout defensive lineman during the mid-1980s. He has been defensive line coach at Columbia for the past three seasons. Dave Preszler promoted from part-time offensive backfield to full-time receivers coach at Montana State, which also announced the selection of graduate assistant coach Greg Clough as defensive line coach. Clough replaces Don Dunn, who joined the staff at Pacific. Jeff Fela named offensive line coach at Western Carolina after serving last season in a similar post at Connecticut. Fela, who also has coached at Citadel and East Carolina, replaces Johnny Wike, who was given new duties as defensive line coach at Western Carolina.

In addition, Greg Christodulu appointed quarterbacks and receivers coach at Susquehanna, where he also will assist with baseball. The former Delaware football and baseball player previously was tight ends coach at James Madison and also has been on the staff at Albany (New York). Benjy Pierce given additional duties as defensive coordinator at Northwestern State (Louisiana), where he continues to coach the defensive line. Also, the Demons hired former Northwest Missouri State offensive coordinator Steve Mullins on a temporary basis as linebackers coach. Pierce and Mullins fill posts vacated by John Thompson, who was named defensive coordinator at Louisiana Tech. In addition, Fitzgerald Hill was named wide receivers coach at Northwestern Louisiana after serving last season as a graduate assistant coach at Arkansas.

Women's softball Joann Walla named at Carroll (Wisconsin). The former high school coach has directed a girls' summer softball program in Oconomowoc, Wisconsin, since 1988. Carroll is entering its first season of varsity play.

Women's softball assistants John Manion selected at Brockport State. He is a former head coach at Genesee Community College in New York. Sandy Ruckel joined the staff at Susquehanna. She is a former semiprofessional player.

Women's tennis Mary Rae Pipa appointed at Susquehanna, replacing Connie Harnum, who remains at the school as head field hockey coach after leading her tennis teams to an 85-46-1 record through 14 seasons. Pipa is a former assistant coach at Danville (Pennsylvania) High School.

Women's tennis assistant—Christine McConnell selected at Susquehanna.

Men's and women's track and field Phil Gordon given additional duties as interim men's coach at Ohio Northern, where he is in his third year as women's coach and is also women's cross country coach.

STAFF

Development and fund-raising director Cynthia Rihm named women's director at Minnesota, where she has been a development project manager since January. Rihm, who also has held a development post at a local high school, replaces Jeanette Link, who retired after 10 years in athletics at Minnesota.

Fund-raising director—Jim Campbell selected as director of the Bison Club at Bucknell after three years as director of alumni relations at Susquehanna. He also has been director of the Little League Baseball Museum and has worked at the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

ASSOCIATIONS

Craig Miller appointed assistant executive director at USA Basketball, where he will be responsible for public relations. He previously was assistant athletics director for communications at Villanova, where he was on the staff for nine years.

NOTABLES

Bob Vanatta, commissioner of the Sunshine State Conference, has been inducted into the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Hall of Fame. Vanatta once coached at NAIA member Central Methodist. Kevin Monaghan named director of business development and sports marketing at NBC Sports. Monaghan, a former sports information director at Manhattan, previously was NBC's director of sports information. Former South Carolina head football coach and athletics director Warren Giese appointed to the board of trustees of the United States Sports Academy. Giese currently is a state senator in South Carolina.

DEATHS

Maynard "Pat" O'Brien, whose 1968 and 1969 cross country teams at Eastern Illinois won NCAA college-division team titles, died March 16 in Charleston, Illinois, at age 83. O'Brien, who retired in 1974, also led his last Eastern Illinois outdoor track team to a Division II co-championship. He served as the school's head football coach during the 1940s and 1950s. Tom Harmon, who won the 1940 Heisman Trophy as a tailback at Michigan, died of a heart attack March 15 in Los Angeles. He was 70. Harmon, regarded as one of the college game's greatest all-around players, handled passing, running and punting duties for the Wolverines and also played defense. After a relatively short professional career, Harmon turned to sports broadcasting and eventually hosted a nightly radio sports show that was heard across the nation.

Daniel Patrick McGibbeny Jr., retired executive sports editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, died March 15 at age 74. Darryl Usher, a former Illinois football player who led the nation in kickoff returns in 1987 and a former San Diego Chargers and Phoenix Cardinals special-teams member, was one of three people who died in a shooting incident February 24 in Phoenix, Arizona. He was 25. Authorities said Usher and a woman apparently were shot to death by a man who then killed himself. Wendell Wilson, former athletics director at Illinois, died February 18 in Irvine, California. He was 84. Bill Perigo, head men's basketball coach at Michigan from 1952 to 1960, died February 7 in Ann Arbor, Michigan. He was 78. Perigo, who also played and coached basketball at Western Michigan, led the Wolverines to a 78-100 record, then remained at the school as an administrator until his retirement in 1970.

School delays wrestling cut

Allegheny College's termination of varsity wrestling, scheduled for the end of the current season, will be postponed for up to three years if student participation remains at specified levels.

A phase-out plan was approved by Allegheny President Daniel F. Sullivan and Provost Andrew Ford. The plan was developed by Norman A. Sundstrom, director of athletics, and John Wilcher, wrestling coach.

Sundstrom emphasized that the reasons originally considered for ending the program, including declines in participation, still were valid. "Nonetheless," he said, "we now believe we can continue the program long enough to allow current participants to have a full, four-year experience."

Under the phase-out plan, the continuation of wrestling will depend on having at least four wrestlers at the start of each season and on the coach's judgment that the squad is large enough for safe practice and competition.

Sundstrom said new wrestlers will be welcome to join the team as long as they understand that the program will end after 1992-93. The season's length will not change, though the Gators will wrestle entirely in tournaments since the probable squad size would severely undercut dual meets.

Nichols credits his success to trying to be fair and—luck

(Editor's Note: The following interview with Henry O. Nichols, NCAA national coordinator of men's basketball officiating, was published in the March issue of Referee magazine.)

Referee: Why do you think you've had such great success in officiating?

Nichols: It's probably a combination of many things: certainly a lot of luck, being in the right place at the right time. I've been fortunate enough to have latched onto a feel for the game and projected an image that I'm fair to both teams, give them both a chance to win.

Referee: The last part of your answer implies that some officials don't give both teams a chance to win.

Nichols: Both of us know what the perception of officiating has been for years in all sports. It takes a lot to convince a college basketball coach that you're not going to be swayed by the press or by the crowd, etc. It's not a question of integrity; it's a question of pressure, emotion and being swept up by the crowd. I think somewhere along the line, the coaches felt comfortable that was not going to happen with me.

Referee: You used the word "luck" to answer part of a question, when luck probably has little to do with your success.

Nichols: It's hard for me to get outside myself, look back and say, "What's this guy all about?" I've always felt a love for the game. I'm and ex-high school coach and a player. I just know the game pretty well. I don't know how to answer your question.

Referee: Sounds like you're saying, "I'm just a regular guy who was ever get down, have a real low point?

Nichols: Oh, sure. One specific I recall was back around 1979-80, when I had a particularly tough game in the ACC. At the end of the first half as we were going down the stairs to the locker room, the home coach was walking behind us screaming and hollering so much that I called a technical foul on him. Then on the way back up to start the second half, I heard a lady say: "There he is, Elizabeth. Go kill him." And that little girl, who couldn't have been any more than nine or 10 years old, came running up to me and said, "Referee, you ain't sh--!" Her mother told her to do that.

That game ended with a rebounded shot getting stuffed by the home team at the same time the buzzer went off in a one-point game.

Henry O. Nichols

I disallowed the goal, and the home team lost. It was a situation where the ball hit the rim and missed. I relaxed, thinking I was going to hear the buzzer. Then he stuffed it, and I wasn't ready, but I took a shot at it and wiped it off.

Referee: What was the reaction?

Nichols: The home team's players were coming at me with the coach leading the charge. Just as they got to me, the coach realized he'd better stop his team, so he told them to go to the locker room. He looked at me and said: "Well, Hank. You screwed me again." He then ran off the court. The cops had to get us out and everybody was pounding on the door.... I'm getting emotional talking about it because it was just a disaster.

The next day on the plane going home, I thought about all those crazy people and that little girl. I almost called the supervisor and told him I'd had enough. The thing that really helped me was that I found out my call was right: On the tape, you could see the red light was on when the guy's hand was still on the ball before he stuffed it. Then, it dawned on me about all the chaotic stuff that's going on in college basketball. Somebody has to lend some sanity to the chaos. I told myself: "That's never going to bother me again. I'm going to do the best I can. The fans don't really know what we're supposed to do anyway. They're emotional toward the striped shirt, not toward Hank Nichols." Plus, I still enjoyed the challenge of meeting the pressure. That's how I survived all that.

Referee: Have today's coaches made it more difficult than ever for us officials?

Nichols: The coaches have more pressure on them now than ever before and their emotions probably are harder to control than in the old days, when each game didn't mean so much. I have respect for the pressure coaches are under, and I understand the emotions involved. There's so much money involved

See Nichols, page 17

"I've always made sure I was as fair as fair could be and then let the chips fall where they may. I think that attitude, more than anything else, has helped me survive."

in the right place at the right time."

Nichols: There's a lot of truth to that. Certainly I have some ability, I wouldn't deny that. But I'm not so sure I have that much more ability than the next good referee you see.

Referee: Could you list your strong suits relative to officiating?

Nichols: Understanding the game and having a feel for how it's going, the atmosphere. I have a sixth sense for what we should do. I really feel in tune with the game I'm working, but I'm still looking for the perfect game. I've made lots of mistakes, some big ones.

Referee: How about other strong suits?

Nichols: I've always made sure I was fair as fair could be and then let the chips fall where they may. I think that attitude, more than anything else, has helped me survive this wacky world of basketball officiating. I just made up my mind that if the call had to be there, and they didn't like it and as a result weren't going to let me come back, well, then I didn't want to referee for them. I don't worry about what the coaches or the fans think, because it isn't any fun that way. Many years ago, I told myself I was never going to be intimidated to do things just to please some coach.

Referee: Along the way, did you ever consider quitting? Did you

LSU's Jackson is lone repeater on writers' all-America

Chris Jackson, Louisiana State University's sophomore guard, is the lone player to repeat on this year's U.S. Basketball Writers All-America team.

The 6-1 Jackson, one of only two players ever to make the USBWA team as a freshman, averaged 28.7

points a game this year and is joined on the Mercedes-Benz-sponsored all-star group by Syracuse University center/forward Derrick Coleman; forwards Lionel Simmons of La Salle University and Larry Johnson of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and Oregon State University guard Gary Payton.

The 34th annual USBWA all-America team was selected in balloting by the 760 members of the USBWA, with final selections made by the nine-member USBWA board of directors.

Coleman was the Big East Conference player of the year. He averaged 18.1 points and 12.2 rebounds a game. He led the Orangemen to a tie for the regular-season Big East title.

The 6-7 Simmons has been the Explorers' standout for four years. He averaged 26.2 points a game as his team posted a 29-1 regular-season record. He is the first player in the history of NCAA Division I to score more than 3,000 points and collect more than 1,400 rebounds during a career.

Johnson, who is 6-7, is a junior. He helped the Runnin' Rebels to a 28-5 record, while averaging 20.8 points a game.

In the backcourt, Oregon State's Payton climaxed a four-year career by leading his team to the regular-season Pacific-10 Conference championship and a 22-6 overall record. Payton averaged 26.1 points a game.

The teams:

First team

Lionel Simmons, La Salle, senior, 6-7, 26.2 point average; Larry Johnson, UNLV, junior, 6-7, 20.8; Derrick Coleman, Syracuse, senior, 6-10, 18.3; Chris Jackson, Louisiana State, sophomore, 6-1, 28.7; Gary Payton, Oregon State, senior, 6-4, 26.1.

Chris Jackson

Second team

Dennis Scott, Georgia Tech, junior, 6-8, 27.2; Hank Gathers, Loyola Marymount, senior, 6-7, 29; Doug Smith, Missouri, junior, 6-10, 19.8; Bo Kimble, Loyola Marymount, senior, 6-5, 35.3; Rumeal Robinson, Michigan, senior, 6-2, 18.9.

Ohio Northern plans $4.5 million project

Increased interest in fitness and health is being cited as the primary reason for expanding the field house and sports facilities at Ohio Northern University.

University President DeBow Freed has announced a $4.5 million expansion to King-Horn Center and plans to include an eight-lane outdoor running track and new outdoor intramural and practice fields. The project will be completed by the fall of 1991, he said March 14.

Construction is expected to begin in July and will include a six-lane, 200-meter indoor track with pole vault, high jump, long jump and shotput areas. It will also feature a rubber surface suitable for baseball practice, as well as weight facilities, lockers and an elevated viewing area.

Spokesman Rob Tucker said Ohio Northern will be able to hold indoor track meets once the project is completed, making it one of a few such facilities in northwest Ohio, United Press International reported.

Tucker said there were still no definite plans to build a football stadium, although a new practice field will be developed by 1991. The university shares War Memorial Stadium with the local high school.

King-Horn has been the site of intercollegiate activities, concerts, high school basketball tournaments and various sports camps.

"We also will be better able to accommodate the needs of many community groups and organizations that King-Horn has served since it opened 15 years ago," Freed said.

Freed said the facility is overtaxed for its size, especially from demands placed on it by the university's intercollegiate teams, a surge in interest in fitness and health, and increased enrollments in sports-medicine and sports-management degree programs.

Five schools end association with Independence Bowl

The disbanding of the five-school Independence Bowl Football Association will open the annual December game to new teams, organizers said March 16.

The IBFA, composed of the University of Tulsa, University of Southern Mississippi, University of Cincinnati, Memphis State University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute, provided the host team for the last two games.

The bowl will now be open-ended, meaning the Sports Foundation of Shreveport-Bossier can invite both teams.

"I think people will be a lot happier this way," said Cecil Lloyd, foundation president. "We've done what's best for the Independence Bowl."

Without the association, the bowl will lose its $400,000 guarantee—the $175,000 management fee paid by the IBFA team and the minimum 9,000 tickets purchased for $225,000 by the IBFA team.

The money will have to come from other sources, Lloyd said.

"We'll make it up. There's no question in my mind," he said. "We wouldn't have the bowl again if we couldn't."

The Sports Foundation's board of directors voted not to renew a contract with the association after the member teams balked at a $25,000 membership fee, Lloyd told the Associated Press.

"In order to continue to have the bowl, ticket sales have to increase," Lloyd said. "If we don't have local support, I'll be very surprised if it survives another year."

Player suspended

Ohio Valley Conference Commissioner R. Daniel Beebe has suspended Ann Thomas, a basketball player at Tennessee State University, for the first conference game of the 1990-91 season because of her involvement in an altercation during a conference tournament game against Tennessee Technological University.

Specifically, Thomas escalated a minor incident in the game by hitting two opposing players, Beebe said.

"Thomas' actions in the incident were unsportsmanlike and will not be tolerated," said Beebe. "To her credit, Thomas acknowledged her mistake and the necessity for disciplinary action."

Oregon's Kasperski, Grinnell's Van Sickle lead academic teams

Stefanie Kasperski, the 6-7 center at the University of Oregon who is the Pacific-10 Conference's all-time leading rebounder and No. 2 scorer, heads the 1990 GTE Academic All-America university-division women's basketball team selected in balloting by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Kasperski, a senior biology major with a 3.980 grade-point average (4.000 scale), was selected as GTE academic all-America of the year for the university division as the student-athlete who best represents the qualities of an academic all-America.

She is a member of the university division first team for the second straight year.

Laura Van Sickle, a senior at Grinnell College, was chosen GTE academic all-America of the year in the college division. Van Sickle is a psychology major with a 3.870 GPA. She averaged 21 points and 11 rebounds a game.

The GTE Academic All-America teams are selected by a vote of the 1,400 members of CoSIDA. To be eligible, an athlete must be a varsity starter or key reserve and maintain a cumulative GPA of at least 3.200.

Following are the university- and college-division teams:

University Division

First team—Jan Jensen, Drake University, junior, 3.740 GPA in public relations; Stefanie Kasperski, Oregon, senior, 3.980 in biology; Dottie VanGheem, Providence, senior, 3.400 in social studies education; Amy Humphries, Evansville,

Colorado league to expand in '91

Colorado Athletic Conference Commissioner Irv Brown has announced that Fort Lewis College will join the conference for the 1991-92 year. Fort Lewis is currently a member of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference.

The CAC, which will be aligned with NCAA Division II, will begin competition next fall.

Charter members are Metropolitan State College, Regis College (Colorado), University of Denver, Colorado Christian University, University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, University of Southern Colorado and the U.S. Air Force Academy (women's programs only).

Brown also indicated that there will be no further expansion of the conference until 1992-93.

News Fact File

Seven of the 32 Division I men's basketball conferences report that they do not share revenues from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship with the members of their conferences that do not participate in the tournament. They are the Atlantic 10, Big South, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic, Metro Atlantic, Southern, Sun Belt and West Coast Conferences.

Nine of the 32 do not take a share of the tournament revenues for their conference budgets. They are the Big Eight, Big Ten, Big West, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic, Pacific-10, Southwest Athletic, American South and North Atlantic Conferences and the Ivy Group.

The Revolutionary Gillette Sensor.

It senses and adjusts to the individual needs of your face for the best shave a man can get.

The remarkable Gillette Sensor shaving system creates an entirely new standard in shaving performance. It's a shave personalized to every man. The revolution starts with the platinum hardened Sensor twin blades. They're individually and independently mounted on highly responsive springs. So they continuously sense and automatically adjust to the individual curves and unique needs of your face.

But innovation doesn't stop there. The ultra narrow metal skin guard is also mounted on springs. It moves in total harmony with the blades to set up your beard for optimum shaving performance.

Keeping this technology in constant contact with your face required another breakthrough. A dramatic redesign of the entire pivoting process creates a wider, more responsive, unprecedentedly smooth pivoting action. Innovation is everywhere.

You can feel it in the textured ridges and balance of the Sensor razor. You appreciate it in the easy loading system and the convenient shaving organizer.

Even rinsing is innovative. The new blades are 50% narrower than any others—water flows freely around and through them, helping to make rinsing and cleaning totally effortless.

But the true revolution of Sensor comes not with any one feature, but with the way the Sensor technologies work together. They combine to give your individual face a personalized shave—the closest, smoothest, safest shave you've ever had. Or, more precisely, the best shave a man can get.

After long skid, Thiel makes U-turn, finds road to recovery

Fourteen months ago, Thiel College men's basketball coach Jes Hutson told The NCAA News that the student-athletes playing for him were "trying to put Thiel on the map."

Better start looking for a new atlas.

Hutson's 1989-90 Tomcats finished 13-12 after losing a two-point decision to Grove City College in a play-off for the championship of the Presidents Athletic Conference.

Still, there were some notable achievements this season:

- In 74 years of varsity competition, no Thiel team had ever managed to win as many as 13 games in a season.

- No Tomcat squad had produced a winning record since 1969.

- In a preseason survey of coaches and media, Thiel had been picked to finish last in the PAC.

"They picked us so far back in last, we needed a telescope to see next-to-last," Hutson told Pittsburgh Post-Gazette writer Phil Axelrod. "To be frank, we thought maybe third or fourth would have been a realistic pick for us."

Few expected Hutson's team to be a challenger for the league title—let alone upset the likes of Washington and Jefferson College and Geneva College. And according to Hutson, that 13-12 mark easily could have been better.

"Six times this season, we had a chance to win ball games in the last 10 seconds," Hutson said, "and we didn't. I take the blame for all of them. When a team plays like that, it's up to the coach to find a way to win."

"Oh, we won some games late," Hutson added, "but we lost more. But none of (the defeats) were the players' fault." From that perspective, Hutson said the season—successful as it was—left some disappointment.

"The kids had a great year," he said. "I'm very proud of what they accomplished. We went from three victories two years ago to six last year to a school-record 13 this year. I just feel like I let them and our fans down in some of those close games."

"Our campus went bonkers," Hutson said of the college community's response to the season, which included a school-record, eight-game home winning streak. "Attendance (at home) was tremendous, and people traveled—even in the worst of winter—to support us on the road."

Hutson told Axelrod his first priority after accepting the Thiel job (in the process becoming the school's fifth head coach in six years) was to provide stability. "That meant I was going to work my butt off to let people know that people at Thiel work hard when it comes to basketball," he said.

"I wanted Thiel to get respect from people in the basketball world."

Now, Hutson said, coaching's inevitable "vicious circle" has reared its head as he looks to the future. "The more you experience success," he offered, "the more you expect."

"When we won five of our last seven games last year, this team really banded together. They got tired of being cannon fodder. They matured mentally, and it shows in our record."

Add those seven games to the 1989-90 slate and Thiel is 18-14 over its last 32 games. The team was 4-37 in games coached by Hutson prior to that.

"The players deserve the credit for that," he said. "And if I can just learn to coach in the close games...."

NCAA seminar planned in April

The East Coast regional seminar organized by the NCAA's compliance services and legislative services departments will be held April 25-27 in Charlotte, North Carolina, at the Sheraton Airport Plaza Hotel.

No registration fee will be charged for the seminar, although preregistration with the national office is required. Those attending will be responsible for transportation, hotel and incidental expenses.

Those wishing to attend already should have received room-registration and response forms from the national office. Questions and requests for additional forms should be directed to Barbara J. Gregg, registration coordinator for the East Coast regional seminar, at the NCAA office (913/339-1906).

Game on ESPN

The University of Colorado's 1990 football home opener against Stanford University will be telecast nationally by ESPN, officials have announced.

To accommodate the sports network, the game has been moved from Saturday, September 8, to Thursday, September 6. The kickoff tentatively has been set for 6 p.m. Mountain time.

It will be only the third night game in Folsom Field's history. The two previous night games also were televised by ESPN.

Colorado, which finished 11-1 and won the 1989 Big Eight Conference title, opens its 1990 season against the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, in the inaugural Disneyland Pigskin Classic August 26 in Anaheim.

and such fanatic followings, so much riding on every game. I'm not sure it's the coaches who've made it difficult for us officials, it's just the bigness of Division I games from where the pressure comes. But certainly, the coach is part of it.

Referee: Some referees are frustrated with the tourney-advancement procedure. In part, they don't understand the criteria for advancement and why they're not given reasons they didn't advance. How's it work?

Nichols: Each site has a committee composed of a person in charge, supervisors of officials and whoever else the committee wants to utilize, including coaches, commissioners and ex-officials, whoever they feel will make a good mix. The criteria for advancement are the same as anyone would use to evaluate officials: good calls, bad calls, taking care of the benches, running the game correctly, performing your duties.

I realize that the committee says, "These people are advancing, and these aren't," and they don't give any reasons. But when you analyze the games objectively, in most cases you should know why you did or didn't advance. I don't think it's within the purview of the committee to make a list of why you didn't advance. In recent years, the supervisors have done a terrific job of getting out of the old boys' school of "I'll help your guy and you help mine." They've come up a notch professionally. I'd say today's system is probably more fair than it's ever been. Anyone who has officiated knows there are subtle differences between good referees. Sometimes at a site, all 12 referees do well, but you can only advance six of them.

Referee: If things are equal, what factors determine who will advance?

Nichols: Who did a better job overall, including appearance, court demeanor, taking care of the bench, floor positioning, the calls you make. Plus, the committee gives each game a difficulty factor before it starts to evaluate the officials. I think it makes sense that if three officials do a bang-up job with the toughest game of the day versus three guys who do good job on an easy game, the guys who met the greater challenge will advance. I don't know how else you can do it if everything else is equal.

I think officials are starting to understand there are subtle differences between advancing and not advancing. In many cases, it's just the eye of the beholder and has nothing to do with personalities. Politics are out of the advancement process. I might think "B" did a better job, and you might think "A" did a better job. We talk about why we differ and arrive at a consensus. In some cases, it takes an extraordinary amount of time.

Referee: Don't those who fail to advance deserve to be told why? Isn't that a matter of common courtesy?

Nichols: That's a good point. Most officials will want to know why, but if you tell them and they disagree with the reasons, they're probably madder than if they didn't know why. I can't argue with your point other than to say the committee just isn't into doing that.

Referee: Are there considerations made relative to racial minorities? If things are equal, will you advance the black official over the white official?

Nichols: While race is a consideration, no, I wouldn't say a Black would automatically be advanced over a white. The NCAA is committed to paying attention to minority issues; but in my experience, I don't think any minority official has been advanced who wasn't rated as high done legitimately.

Referee: The tourney committee emphasizes that it wants the officials to keep the coaches in check, not let them get out of hand. Sometimes,

"The biggest thing that's happened is that everybody's talking about officiating the same way. That doesn't necessarily happen every night, but it's happening more today than ever."

as the others who advanced. Of course, I can't get inside everybody's head when they're making their evaluations and how much the minority issue is involved.

Referee: Is there an effort made to guarantee a minority at the Final Four?

Nichols: I think so, if it can be the tourney standards are more strict than those in the officials' regular conferences. Why does the committee apply such stringent standards?

Nichols: They want the referees to handle games according to the rules. It's obvious, when you talk about bench decorum, there are more aberrations during the season than the committee would like to see. The committee is convinced that in the showcase of college basketball, the rules should be enforced the way they're written. As a result, in the tournament there probably is a more consistent application of the bench-decorum rule than in some cases during the regular season. How an official handles bench decorum is a major consideration toward determining who advances.

Referee: What's your philosophy for handling coaches who are out of hand?

Nichols: To take care of business, and I usually have when it was necessary. But through the years, I've had situations when I let coaches go too far, have given them the benefit of the doubt for the betterment of the game. Probably I should have been tougher, although I don't think I was not tough. There were some occasions over the years where I should have called technical fouls, but I didn't.

Referee: As you go around the country to work with different officials, is there a common area where they've improved?

Nichols: Yes. The biggest thing that's happened is that everybody's talking about officiating the same way. That doesn't necessarily happen every night, but it's happening more today than ever. I think that's a result of the clinics we hold before the season starts. Everybody gets to hear a common philosophy of what we want. Everyone is in tune with that now, which is one of the biggest positives of the coordinator's program. Years ago, it used

Coroner says Gathers' medication insufficient

Basketball star Hank Gathers of Loyola Marymount University did not have enough medication in his system when he died to treat his irregular heartbeat, the Los Angeles County coroner's office said March 19.

Toxicology tests indicate that the Lions' center had a "sub-therapeutic" level of the drug Inderal in his bloodstream when he died after collapsing in a game March 4, according to the Associated Press.

"That level was 26 nanograms per milliliter, whereas therapeutic levels range from 50 to 290 nanograms per milliliter," coroner's spokesman Bob Dambacher said. That means the Inderal level in Gathers' body was about one-half to one-eleventh of the amount needed to help his heart condition.

The coroner's office would not say whether the level of Inderal in Gathers' system indicated if or when he had stopped taking the drug.

Autopsy results released March 15 showed Gathers died from inflammation and scarring of the heart muscle, but the autopsy did not say what caused the condition.

Los Angeles cardiologist Lee Scott Herman told the Associated Press that the inflammation and scarring—called cardiomyopathy—can cause arrhythmia, the irregular heartbeat that afflicted Gathers.

Cavazos tells Texas money isn't answer

Massive funding increases for education have failed to stop the declining standards in the nation's schools, Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos told the Texas Legislature recently.

He said the real answer to improved schools is "better utilization of existing resources."

"Quite frankly," Cavazos said, "we are not getting what we are paying for in our schools."

Cavazos urged Texas legislators to adopt two reforms being pushed by the Bush administration: open enrollment and school-based management.

Under open enrollment, parents are given the right to choose their child's school. Under a school-based management system, principals and teachers are given more authority in running their campuses and educating their students.

Cavazos predicted that academic choice and school-based management will become the "cornerstone of efforts" to reform the nation's schools.

to be different because not all conferences got to hear what Ed Steitz (secretary-rules editor, NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee) had to say about officiating. Now, the officials and the coaches all hear him and his philosophy. Of course, human nature being as it is, we're not going to get every play called the same way at every game, but we're working toward that, although it probably will never be accomplished.

Referee: If you could only be either the NCAA coordinator or an active official, which would you choose?

Nichols: Ten years ago, even five years ago, I would have rather been an official; now, I can make a better contribution to the game being the coordinator. But the combination of both is terrific at this point.

Referee: Describe yourself as an official.

Nichols: I worry about my court appearance, because I tend to be heavy, always fighting the battle of the bulge. I love being in the arena, being part of the game, and I feel my main job is to be fair to both teams and to do what's necessary to have that happen. I feel the game is for the kids, the coaches and the fans; it's not the official's game. I've also made every effort possible to make sure I didn't get filled up with self-importance.

Skidmore builds competitive men's program from scratch

By John Kekis

Skidmore College used to be known for its parties, not its sports performances.

The only way to get fans to the soccer games was to have a keg of beer on the sidelines.

And it was safe to say that the athletes were memorable because they were so miserable.

Take the basketball team, for instance. The 1980 Thoroughbreds were thorough all right—they were thoroughly beaten by the likes of Green Mountain College (81-22 and 107-30) and lost three of four games to junior varsity opponents.

That was Tim Brown's first year as director of athletics, when the school had 12 teams that called themselves varsity teams but played against JV teams and junior colleges.

"The first game I went to was a men's soccer game, and that was an experience," Brown said. "There was a keg set up. That was the only reason fans would come, if there was a big keg down on the sideline. The kids were competitive, but they were there just to have an experience. They didn't want a varsity experience."

Brown's job was simple—establish a competitive sports program at a school with no athletics center to speak of and a staff of about a dozen, only five of whom were full-time coaches.

At a school that was all women until 1972, that was not so simple.

"It was difficult, still is," Brown said. "You'd recruit athletes, especially the men, and they'd come here and then they'd have to go home and listen to, 'Oh, you go to the girls' school.' Their buddies from high school would always razz them when they went home."

"It was very hard for the men who first came here," said Jane Masurelli, associate director of athletics. She also coaches lacrosse and field hockey and is a fixture at just about every athletics event on campus. "It was looked upon as a women's school, and there was a real stigma attached to it."

"The toughest thing was that we were just dominated by our opponents, and we weren't competing with the schools that we wanted to compete against. We were competing against community colleges, schools that weren't well-known, and we were still getting beat."

Ah, the good old days. Tennis

England, who began coaching at Skidmore in 1978. "There were quite a few women's varsity teams, but that didn't generate the sort of spirit and interest and camaraderie you expect around an athletics program."

When Tim Brown was hired as director of athletics, his job was simple—establish a competitive sports program at a school with no athletics center to speak of and a staff of about a dozen, only five of whom were full-time coaches coach Jeff Segrave remembers them well.

"When I first came here, there were virtually no men's athletics," said Segrave, a native of Bristol,

"The transformation in the last eight years has been quite remarkable," Segrave said. "Eight years ago, there was nobody in the bleachers. In fact, we never even had any bleachers. We used to play in an old gym that had a universal weight machine at the end of it. And if a basketball player overran the court, he'd smack into the machine."

That court is still there, and so is the weight machine. They sit right next to the new Skidmore Sports and Recreational Center, home to a basketball team that won a school-record 14 games this season. One of those wins was a 71-65 victory over State University of New York at Albany, which made it to the Northeast sectionals of the NCAA Division III play-offs before losing to North Adams State College.

Skidmore's march up the various rungs of the athletics ladder started in 1982, when it joined the NAIA. The next year, it was on to the Eastern College Athletic Conference and then NCAA Division III in 1984.

Among the Thoroughbreds' accomplishments to date:

• 1984-85, women's tennis team ranked 17th in final Division III poll.

• 1985-86, women's tennis team moves up to eighth in final poll and Pam Thompson advances to national singles quarterfinals.

• 1986-87, women's tennis team becomes first Skidmore team to qualify for NCAA tournament play and advances to the quarterfinals, finishing season ranked sixth; men's golf team qualifies for NCAA tournament and finishes 11th.

Top football coaches

Selected as 1989 Kodak Coach of the Year for 1989 in their respective divisions were, from left, Bill McCartney, University of Colorado, Division I-A; Erk Russell, Georgia Southern College, Division I-AA; John M. Williams, Mississippi College, College Division I, and Mike Kelly, University of Dayton, College Division II. The coaches were selected in voting by the members of the American Football Coaches Association. The four were honored recently at that group's annual meeting in San Francisco.

Legislation and Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee:

Tentative conference schedule

1. Confirmed the following dates for conducting Interpretations Committee conference calls: February 22, March 13, March 22 and April 5. Conferences will begin at 9 a.m. Central time.

High school all-star games

2. Member institution's coach's involvement with high school all-star games. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 13.13.1 and determined that a member institution's coach may participate in a multisport clinic sponsored by a state high school coaches' association in conjunction with a high school all-star game, provided the member institution's coach is not involved in the management, coaching, officiating, supervision or promotion (including player selection) of the all-star game held in conjunction with the clinic.

Awards/amateurism

3. Student-athlete forwarding an award to the institution. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 12.1.2(k), 12.5.1 and 16.1.3.4, and agreed that additional information should be developed to determine whether a cash award earned by a student-athlete may be forwarded to the student-athlete's institution in the student-athlete's name; requested that the staff research this issue to determine the extent of such awards and report its findings to the committee.

Extra benefits

4. Coach assisting student-athlete in payment of bills. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 16.12.1.1, 16.12.2.1 and 16.12.2.2.1, and agreed that a member institution's athletics department staff members are not permitted to administer a fund for a student-athlete (utilizing cash provided by the student-athlete) in order to assist the student-athlete in making payments for various personal expenses (e.g., utility bills, rent, fees and entertainment expenses); agreed that appropriate institutional control could not be exercised under these circumstances unless formal accounting procedures are utilized.

February 1 and 8, 1990

Extra benefits

5. Hotel bill—incidental expenses. Agreed that a student-athlete (rather than the student-athlete's institution) would be required to pay for incidental expenses the individual incurred in conjunction with a hotel bill for one of the institution's away games, unless the expenses fall within the permissible actual and necessary expenses the student-athlete may receive for such contests.

Seasons of competition—waiver

6. Student-athlete competing in one contest because of administrative error. Reviewed the application of the provisions of Bylaws 14.2 and 14.2.4.1 to a situation in which a student-athlete participated in one exhibition game during the 1989-90 basketball season and then was precluded from further competition during that same season as a result of an institutionally imposed basketball team rule prohibiting members of the team from participating unless certain academic standards (applicable only to the basketball team) are met; determined that there is no authority to set aside the application of Bylaw 14.2 based on the special circumstances in this case.

Extra benefits

7. Use of per diem distributed by NCAA for participation in championships competition. Agreed that the provisions of Bylaws 16.8.1.4 and 16.8.1.5 and Executive Regulation 31.4.6.1 permit a student-athlete to receive only the amount of actual and necessary expenses incurred by the student-athlete for participation in NCAA championships competition; agreed that the institution could not provide the student-athlete with the cash difference between the amount allocated for per diem and the actual cost of the individual's room and board; requested that the staff include this interpretation in a future Legislative Assistance column.

Eligibility

8. Entertainment diving during the summer. Confirmed that a student-athlete who is employed to provide "entertainment diving" (e.g., dressing as a clown and diving for entertainment purposes at an amusement park) would not be considered to have received pay for play under Bylaw 12.1.1(a).

Awards

9. Receipt of NCAA postgraduate award by Division III student-athlete (Division III). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws

15.2.5.3 and 15.4.6.5, and confirmed that a Division III student-athlete would be permitted to receive the Walter Byers postgraduate scholarship award (which is based in part of athletics ability), inasmuch as the award is administered by a national funding operation (the NCAA) and is not administered independently by individual member institutions.

Eligibility/soccer

10. Participation in 1990 World Cup soccer competition (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 14.5.4-(d) and confirmed that a student-athlete participating in the 1990 World Cup soccer competition could not avail himself of Bylaw 14.5.4-(d) [waivers of satisfactory-progress rule—international competition], inasmuch as this exception for Pan American, Olympic or World University Games competition has been expressly voted upon by the membership; requested that the staff contact the U.S. Soccer Federation to obtain more information concerning whether individuals participating in this soccer competition are being compensated for their participation; also requested that the staff review the possibility of developing similar waivers for other outside international competition.

Satisfactory progress

11. Use of repeated remedial course (Divisions I and II). Determined that the provisions of Bylaws 14.5.2, 14.5.3.6 and 14.5.3.8 would not permit a student-athlete to use a repeated remedial course subsequent to the initial year of enrollment in order to satisfy the requirements of Bylaw 14.5.2 (satisfactory progress).

Sports camps and clinics

12. Definition of institution's sports camp or instructional clinic (Division I). Reviewed 1990 Convention Proposal Nos. 126 and 128, and determined the following:

a. In order to be considered an owner of an institution's sports camp or instructional clinic, the individual must be at least a majority owner (51 percent of the camp or clinic).

b. In order to be considered an operator of an institution's sports camp or instructional clinic, an individual must be personally and directly responsible for the management and operation of the camp or clinic.

c. Agreed that any Division I member institution's coach involved in a contractual relationship for a summer sports camp or clinic may submit such contracts to the NCAA for review by legal counsel in order to determine whether the individual may be permitted to participate in the camp or clinic for the summer of 1990 only; further, such contracts must have been executed prior to January 9, 1990.

Convention Proposal No. 32

13. Financial aid—summer school (Division I). Confirmed that a partial qualifier or nonqualifier in Division I would be permitted to receive financial aid for summer school preceding the freshman year; further, agreed that a partial qualifier or nonqualifier in Division I would not be permitted to receive training-table expenses, unless the student-athlete pays the full or additional board costs for such a benefit.

the ECAC play-offs.

• 1988-89, men's golf team finishes fourth in NCAA tourney, the highest finish ever for a New York state school; women's tennis team qualifies again for NCAA tournament and is ranked 10th; women's soccer team ranked 18th in nation; crew pair of Chris Grosso and John Onderdonk finishes third in the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta championship final, beating shells from Navy, Penn and UCLA.

• 1989-90, men's golf team, led by David Hathaway, wins its second ECAC regional tournament in three years and is ranked third in the nation heading into the spring season with a very real chance at a national championship.

The 22 varsity teams are finally living up to their nickname, and the camaraderie among the 2,100 students on campus is impressive.

Walk into a basketball game and, barring a midterm, you're likely to find: Hathaway manning the concession stand trying to earn money for the golf team's annual trip south; several hundred fans—a school-record 1,020 showed up for a mid-season game against Union College (New York); and even the hockey team, which likes to sit at the visitors' end of the court and intimidate the opposition (the basketball squad returns the favor when the icemen skate).

"It's wonderful," said Brown, who also coaches the golf team. "They get together and support each other very much. It's exciting to see, and it's just been in the past two years this has happened.

"It's a credit to the coaching staff and the loyalty they have to the total program. The basketball coach isn't just talking about the basketball team. He's talking about the hockey team and the women's basketball team. And as a result, it spills over, filters down to the kids."

"Every year it's getting better and better," said faculty member Murray Levith, a longtime basketball fan. "It's still a lot of fun and not big business. It's really nice to see the way the students are becoming involved, too. We have cheering sections now. That never happened in the early days.

"The sports that are coming of age are bringing the student body together in a social way that hasn't been possible before. And this helps a lot with coeducation. In the early days of coeducation, Skidmore had a hard time recruiting men; now, they have legitimate Division III men's teams. Now students don't feel that Skidmore's a women's college any more."

Same looks, same sport, same studies—oh, brother!

No matter how you look at them, Virginia Military Institute student-athletes Damon and Ramon Williams are hard to tell apart. Of course, that's not unusual for identical twins.

"They're always together," VMI basketball coach Joe Cantafio recently told Associated Press writer Joe Macenka. "I don't know if there's anyone in the world I could spend that much time with."

"The contact will always be there, even if we split," said Damon of his twin and VMI roommate. "We want to keep it that way."

One might argue they'd have a tough time not keeping it that way. Consider:

- The night he reached 1,000 career points, Damon scored 31 in a game. A few games later, Ramon reached 1,000 career points—by hitting for 31 in a game.

- During the 1988-89 season, Damon made 193 of 406 field-goal attempts. Ramon made 194 of 406.

- This past season when VMI played the University of Virginia, Ramon scored 31, Damon 22. After that game, each had a career point total of 1,292.

- Ramon will graduate this spring, on time. Damon will need only six hours in summer school to finish his degree. Both majored in economics.

"Sometimes, I say there's no way he looks like me," said Damon of his older brother (Ramon was born

When the University of Iowa's women's gymnastics team hosted Iowa State University March 16, the event was declared DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) night. Youngsters enrolled in the DARE program through local schools were admitted free, and a reception was held following the meet involving team members and DARE students.

Florida A&M University's Shelly Boston earned a spot in the NCAA basketball records book during the New South Conference postseason tournament when she picked up steal Nos. 159 and 160 on the season—bettering the old single-season mark of 158 set last year by Mississippi Valley State University's Donna McGary.

Yale University officials have announced that Joan Benoit Samuelson will deliver the 1990 Kiphuth Lecture April 5 at the school. Her topic will be "College Athletics: Worth the Price of Admission."

Samuelson received the 1990 Kiphuth Fellowship from Yale. It was established in memory of the late Robert J. H. Kiphuth, who served the school as swimming coach and athletics director.

Applications are available from the U.S. Tennis Association for the 1990 USTA Tennis Facility Awards Program, which recognizes outstanding facility design and construction. College facilities are eligible for consideration. More information is available from the USTA (707 Alexander Road, Princeton, New Jersey 08540, telephone 609/452-2580).

More Report Cards: At Pennsylvania State University-Behrend College, 38 percent of the school's 127 student-athletes earned fall-semester grade-point averages of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale).

Following are the student-athletes named to the 1990 Central College Hockey Association all-academic team, with GPAs in parentheses: Pete Stauber, Lake Superior State University (3.440); Walt Bartels, Michigan State University (3.690); Rich Whitten, Western Michigan University (3.500); Justin LaFayette, Ferris State University (3.800); Mike Gilmore, Michigan State (3.510), and Dan Bylsma, Bowling Green State University (3.520).

first, seven minutes before his twin). "We look at each other in the mirror and say (we) don't know how people ever get us mixed up."

Another brother story took place recently during the North Coast Athletic Conference indoor track championships' long jump competition. The older of the two, a junior at the College of Wooster, won the event with a leap of 21-9. His younger brother, a freshman at Earlham College, finished second with a jump of 21-3/4.

They are, appropriately enough, the Long brothers—Jamie Long of Wooster and Jesse Long of Earlham.

George Wigton, tennis and squash coach at Bates College, has been selected from a field of more than 20 candidates as the University of Rhode Island's first Sports Corps Fellow in the Institute for International Sport Sabbatical program.

Wigton will spend six months at Rhode Island, where he will assist in the development of a sports ethics program and an international project to be hosted by the university in 1993.

Lack of conference competition hasn't kept the wrestling team from Olivet College from earning a national reputation. Although Olivet is the only Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association member that sponsors the sport, veteran coach Jare Klein has led the Comets to a 363-74-4 mark through 22 seasons—including 29-4-1 in 1989-90 dual meets.

Junior Ted Engle finished sixth in the 118-pound class at the NCAA Division III championships, and three teammates—Paul Coats, David Robinson and Darrell Thomas—were named academic scholars by the College Wrestling Coaches Association.
