Baseball, softball stats published

Division I baseball and women's softball statistics will be published weekly for the next eight weeks in The NCAA News, beginning with this issue.

"Because of the success of the Division I men's and women's basketball programs, which have been based on reporting by conference offices, we decided about a year ago to explore the possibility of weekly baseball and women's softball stats," said James F. Wright, assistant director of communications.

"We received overwhelming support from the conferences, so the programs have been initiated," Wright added.

"We hope to produce weekly statistics for Divisions II and III in the not-too-distant future."

Statistics will be published in the News weekly through May 23 (women's softball) and May 30 (baseball).

"The baseball statistics will be updated after the Division I regionals," Wright said, "so the statistics published May 30 will be current through the start of the College World Series."

As in past years, a season wrapup of baseball and softball statistics will be published in an issue of the News this summer.

He added that several national media outlets have expressed an interest in receiving the weekly compilations as soon as they are available.

"Among others," Wright said, "we have received requests for the stats from Associated Press, USA Today, ESPN, The Sporting News, Collegiate Baseball and Baseball America."

Tops in nation

UCLA catcher Paul Ellis leads the nation in home runs with 19 in 37 games. Baseball and softball statistics are on page 9.

Scholarship application deadline is May 1

Nominations for NCAA postgraduate scholarships in sports other than football and basketball must be mailed to district selection committee chairs by May 1.

A total of 55 awards (30 for men and 25 for women, each worth $4,000) will be given to student-athletes. Nominees must have demonstrated abilities on the playing field and in the classroom. A minimum grade-point average of 3.000 (4.000 scale) is required.

Faculty athletics representatives are responsible for nominating student-athletes at each institution. The following guidelines must be met:

- Nominate not more than two men and two women.

- Use the nomination forms mailed from the national office, making certain to provide complete information.

- Include a copy of the student-athlete's transcript.

- Mail the form and transcripts in one package by certified mail—postmarked not later than May 1—to the appropriate district selection committee chair. The names of district chairs are listed in the memorandum that accompanies the nomination folders.

Change no-contact rule, Division II coaches say

Division II football coaches say they will make a concerted effort to get the no-contact rule in spring football drills changed at the next NCAA Convention.

A poll still being conducted among Division II members of the American Football Coaches Association shows at this point only four of 78 coaches in favor of the rule, and 72 of 78 say Division II should have the same number of contact drills allowed in Division I, whose teams next season will be limited to 10 contact practices in 15 practice sessions. The rule for Division II that went into effect this spring calls for 12 days of two-hour practices with no pads and no contact over a 24-day period.

The rule was adopted at the 1990 NCAA Convention in Dallas as part of an effort to allow student-athletes more time for academics and other activities.

Some Division II coaches say they have no real problem with the reduced number of practice opportunities, but they say the lack of contact drills will have an overall negative effect on their programs and their student-athletes. They also are convinced that the new rule will not result in lower costs or appreciably affect athletes' time on academics.

In past springs, Division II was allowed 20 practices, 15 of which could involve contact.

"I wonder why they changed the rule," said John Williams, coach of Division II champion Mississippi College. "I have never come to an explanation of the justification for the change. If you are talking about

I-A commissioners recommend reform

The NCAA Presidents Commission has endorsed in concept a series of recommendations for reform in college athletics prepared by a group of Division I-A conference commissioners.

The recommendations cover academics, cost reductions, time demands on student-athletes, recruiting and professional drafts.

The Commission requested NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz to work with the NCAA Council and Executive Committee and "other legislative constituencies" to prepare a legislative package, incorporating the commissioners' recommendations to be placed on the Commission's agenda for its June 26-27 meeting in Chicago.

Specific details of the recommendations were not released. The Commission will consider the proposals by the commissioners in conjunction with reports from NCAA special committees on cost reduction, membership structure and revenue distribution and other suggestions from the membership.

The commissioners' recommendations address initial athletics eligibility, satisfactory academic progress, coaching staff limitations, grants-in-aid, limitations on playing and practice seasons, membership restructuring, recruiting contacts, and changes in the National Letter of Intent signing periods.

The commissioners' recommendations also will be presented to the Council at its April meeting.

The I-A commissioners' efforts in preparing the reform recommendations were reported in the March 28 issue of The NCAA News.

The Commission also received reports from the special committees concerned with membership structure, cost reduction and revenue distribution but took no action.

Commission Chair Martin A. Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, said,

Special committees to report to Council

Reports by the Special Committee on Cost Reduction and the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure will be major topics on the agenda for the NCAA Council's spring meeting April 23-25 in Overland Park, Kansas.

Those two reports—which will not be released publicly until after the Council meeting—promise to be among the key issues at next year's NCAA Convention, along with other reform-agenda thrusts.

Eugene F. Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference and chair of the cost-reduction committee, will present that report. NCAA Secretary-Treasurer Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego, will lead the membership-structure presentation. That committee includes several Council members, and Sweet served as chair pro tem during a portion of its deliberations.

Those special committees will be among 16 committees presenting reports during the meeting. Others are the Academic Requirements, Legislative Review, Professional Sports Liaison, Research, Special Events and Postgraduate Scholarship Committees; the Special Committee to Review Amateurism Issues; the Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers; the three division steering committees, and the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, and the Committee on Review and Planning.

Other topics

Among the other topics on the April agenda:

- The results of a staff survey of the numbers and types of athletics dormitories at Divisions I and II member institutions.

- A report on the April 4-5 meeting of the Presidents Commission.

- The annual appointments to the Nominating Committee and to the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees.

- Consideration of the 1989 Ad-money, it's insignificant; we don't pay for officials for practices as Division I does. All we have is a little wear and tear on equipment.

"If they are trying to save kids some time, they are going about it in the wrong way. In the spring, we don't take that much time, there are no night meetings, no early work and no looking at film. We spend twice as much time with the kids in the fall.

"They are barking up the wrong tree if they are talking about financial or study or academic reasons."

"It's difficult to see the logic behind it (rule change)," said Ron Harms, head coach at Texas A&I University. "There may have been some logic behind it if it had been suggested that less contact caused less injuries; but in all the years I've been here, I can't point to a single injury suffered in the spring that cost the player the next season."

There is no reason to worry about time, according to Harms. "We don't have the time to devote full

Office visit

The Council will be the first of the Association's administrative bodies to visit the new national office building, which is the reason for the Overland Park meeting location. A reception for the Council is planned at the new building for the evening of April 24.

Rocco J. Carzo, new Division III vice-president, will chair his first full session of the Division III Steering Committee. Continuing officers chairing other segments of the meeting will be NCAA President Albert M. Witte, Council; Division I Vice-President B. J. Skelton, Division I Steering Committee, and Division II Vice-President Jerry M. Hughes, Division II Steering Committee.

Highlights of the Council meeting will appear in the May 2 issue of the News. Minutes of the meeting will be published when they are available later in May.

Proposal to pay athletes dropped by Iowa House

The Iowa House has stripped language from an education appropriations bill that would have paid student-athletes at state universities.

The proposal was placed in the bill through a Senate amendment, but Rep. Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, sponsored an amendment in the House to take that language out of the bill.

The Corbett amendment was passed on a voice vote, United Press International reported.

The proposal also would have called for asking the NCAA to approve the payment of student-athletes.

Athlete ineligible

Texas A&M University has declared student-athlete Mike Stulce ineligible for postseason competition for violating NCAA eligibility rules. As a result, Stulce's participation in the 1990 Division I Men's Indoor Track Championships has been vacated.

Team and individual results in the championships have been adjusted as follows.

Record regional crowd

The paid attendance at the Central regional of the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, was 7,591. The previous regional record was at the 1986 Midwest regional in Salt Lake City, where 5,569 turned out. Alabama was the top team at the Central regional, and Minnesota's Marie Roethlisberger won the all-around title.

Sports agent's alleged payment subject to probe

An Alabama state prosecutor said April 9 that a Mobile County grand jury has issued subpoenas in its probe of reports that a relative of University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, linebacker Keith McCants possibly received money from sports agent Lance Luchnick.

McCants decided to forgo his senior year of eligibility at Alabama and could be the top pick of the Atlanta Falcons in the NFL draft. He signed Luchnick to negotiate his first professional contract.

Assistant State Attorney General Don Valeska said he could not elaborate about the grand jury investigation, "but I can confirm that Attorney General Don Siegelman has ordered an investigation of this matter."

The grand jury issued the subpoenas last week for "people to appear in this case late this week," Valeska told the Associated Press.

In 1988, the Alabama Legislature passed a law that requires sports agents to register with a state commission before they can do business in Alabama. A clerk for the Alabama Athlete Agent Regulatory Committee said Luchnick was not among the more than 80 sports agents who have been issued permits by the commission.

Convictions for violations of the state law, which also makes it a felony to offer illegal inducements to athletes, carry a maximum possible penalty of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Luchnick's professional background includes documented payments to basketball coaches and charges of improper use of his clients' funds through a broad power-of-attorney clause. He has been sued by five former clients and last year declared bankruptcy.

In 1987, Auburn University lost the services of starting cornerback Kevin Porter for the 1988 Sugar Bowl after it was revealed that he had signed with former sports agent Jim Abernethy of Atlanta.

Abernethy was convicted by a Lee County jury on a charge of tampering with a sports event, but the conviction was overturned on appeal.

Following the 1986-87 basketball season, Alabama center Derrick McKey was declared ineligible after it was disclosed that he had received inducements from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

Walters and Bloom, who have since been sentenced by a Federal jury in Chicago to prison terms on racketeering, conspiracy and mail-fraud convictions, agreed in response to a state suit to pay the university $213,500 in forfeited NCAA tournament revenue.

The state's law attempting to regulate sports agents was passed after the Abernethy, Walters and Bloom cases.

Championships Corner

Division I women's basketball: The NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee is soliciting proposals from institutions interested in serving as host for a 1992 or 1993 regional tournament of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Those interested in receiving the bid materials should contact Patricia E. Bork, assistant executive director for championships. The committee will review proposed budgets at its July 1-5 meeting.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 15

NCAA Bylaw 16.8.1.1—expenses for practice and competition

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.1, expenses may be paid for practice sessions only if they are associated with an away-from-home contest, or conducted at a site located within the member institution's state or, if outside the state, no more than 100 miles from the institution's campus. In the sports of men's and women's skiing, a member institution may transport a team to a practice site beyond 100 miles out of state if necessitated by weather conditions. Any practice on an extended road trip must take place either at the competition site or on a direct route between two consecutive competition sites. It is not permissible for an institution to schedule practice sessions at other locations on a road trip in order to provide entertainment opportunities for team members.

An institution may provide actual and necessary travel expenses (e.g., transportation, lodging and meals) to a student-athlete for participation in athletics competition, provided the student-athlete is representing the institution and is eligible for the competition. Such competition includes regularly scheduled intercollegiate athletics events, NCAA championship events, a certified postseason football game and other institutional competition permissible under NCAA legislation (including postseason events and foreign tours). An eligible student-athlete may receive actual and necessary travel expenses to return to campus within 48 hours after a regularly scheduled intercollegiate contest, even if the student-athlete remains at the site after the contest and does not return with the team.

Finally, in accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.3, an institution may provide actual and necessary expenses (even though the student-athlete is not representing the institution) related to participation in the following activities: (1) established national championship events; (2) Olympic, Pan American and World University Games qualifying competition; (3) bona fide amateur competition during the Christmas and spring vacation periods, as listed in the institution's official calendar, and (4) USOC Olympic Festival basketball and volleyball tryouts. A student-athlete may receive expenses to participate in the above-mentioned activities while not representing the institution only if the student is eligible for athletically related financial aid. Participation in the activities in Item Nos. 1-3 are exempt from the application of Bylaw 14.02.6 (intercollegiate competition) and, thus, student-athletes participating in such events would not utilize a season of competition.

Per diem distributed by NCAA for participation in championship competition

The NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed during its February 8, 1990, conference the provisions of Bylaws 16.8.1.4 and 16.8.8.1.5 and Executive Regulation 31.4.6.1 and determined that such regulations permit a student-athlete to receive only the amount of actual and necessary expenses incurred by the student-athlete for participation in NCAA championship competition. The committee determined that the institution could not provide the student-athlete with the cash difference between the amount allocated for per diem and the actual cost of the individual's room and board.

NCAA Constitution 6.3—self-study program

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Constitution 6.3, an institution must conduct a comprehensive self-study and evaluation of its intercollegiate athletics program at least once every five years on a form prescribed by the NCAA Council. A report of the self-study and supporting documentation must be available for examination upon request by an authorized representative of the Association. Subjects covered by the self-study are to include: (1) institutional purpose and athletics philosophy; (2) the authority of the chief executive officer in personnel and financial affairs; (3) athletics organization and administration; (4) finances; (5) personnel; (6) sports programs; (7) recruiting policies; (8) services for student-athletes, and (9) student-athlete profiles. The initial self-study must be completed by July 30, 1991, five years subsequent to the effective date of Constitution 6.3. Institutions that have questions regarding the self-study program should contact the compliance services department at the NCAA national office.

"The Commission is now reviewing time to football. Most of us have classes to teach; we don't spend all our time on football."

"I think it is a reaction to the abuses in Division I; it trickles down," Harms said. "It's totally unfair."

"The equivalent of what they have done," said Sandy Buda, head coach at the University of Nebraska, Omaha, "is to tell a physics, biology or anatomy professor that you can have a lecture, but you can't have a lab or do any research. They wouldn't say that to any of those professors."

"Ours is the only sport that allows contact, and if you can't teach it slowly without pressure, there is good risk of injury next fall," Buda said.

Buda says Division II wants the same opportunity for success that Division I has. "How do you run an off-tackle play without having run it? You will have to experiment in the fall and hold longer practices."

"There is no way to evaluate the young student-athlete or the new student-athlete without pads," Buda said. "There also is more risk of injury in running into each other without pads; you don't expect collisions."

Football team members at Nebraska-Omaha have written Chancellor Del Weber; Robert Gibson, director of athletics, and Richard Flynn, faculty athletics representative, urging them to help reinstate contact drills in Division II spring practices.

The letter said, in part, "Scholarship awards for new players and increases for veterans are determined at the end of spring practice for the next school year. Without contact, we have no way of being evaluated. The amount of scholarship we receive determines our financial capabilities in order to continue our pursuit of a degree."

"We realize that football is a contact sport and that injuries may occur. Not having contact for an eight-month period, then suddenly having it, may only increase serious injuries in fall camp. As a dedicated team and as individuals, we are willing to take these risks; that's why we play a contact sport."

Williams and Harms agree with Nebraska-Omaha players. They say the lack of game-condition evaluations will hurt athletes' scholarship opportunities.

Harms, while not objecting to the reduction in number of practices, said he would not be able to evaluate junior college transfers, redshirt freshmen and walk-ons or those veterans trying to earn a full scholarship.

"It will end up costing more," Harms said. "We will have to bring in more players earlier in the fall to get a better evaluation of those we couldn't evaluate in the spring. These kids will have to be housed and fed."

"It's really going to be tough for new people to move in and be the starters," said Larry Elliott, head coach at Washburn University. He told The Kansas City Star he did not know if he would be able to offer them (players on partial grants) any more than they had last year.

"You can see (in the spring) if they are learning and doing things better than they did in the fall, but you won't be able to tell if they are hitters," Elliott said.

Williams says the situation will be the same at Mississippi College.

"All Division II programs bring kids in on partial scholarships with the idea you can tell them after spring if they have been moved up.

We can tell a player, 'It looks like you can contribute and we will up your scholarship.'

"But with no contact in the spring, you can't evaluate linebackers or defensive linemen, for instance. Those kids it is really hurting. What do you tell them now? All you can do is sign them back to what they had."

"We are going to practice more and harder during the fall to make up, and we will run a greater possibility of hurting players because there will be a lot more contact in the fall."

Mississippi College and Texas A&I will have another disadvantage because of the rule, their coaches say. Both schools schedule a number of Division I-AA schools; those teams, having had contact during spring, will be that much further ahead on a competitive basis, the coaches believe.

The rule "puts us at a disadvantage outside our division," Williams said.

"Most Division II schools play one division higher, and we are at a disadvantage because of the no-contact rule," Harms said. It will have a tremendous negative effect on schools like us, and it's going to force us to more contact work in the fall."

The results of the poll, which was conducted by Buda; Harms; Bob Foster, University of California, Davis; Dennis Douds, East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania, and John Williams, defensive coordinator at Troy State University, will be presented by Buda to the NCAA Division II Football Committee at its April 18-20 meeting in Overland Park, Kansas.

various options and suggestions. Our main concern is the welfare of the athletes—giving them time to be students; kids, if you will—and not forcing them to place so much emphasis on athletics."

A committee is to be appointed by the Commission to articulate general principles and procedural guidelines against which specific reform proposals will be considered.

Further research

The Commission agreed to request that funds be provided by the NCAA for further research in relation to the National Study of Intercollegiate Athletics conducted by the American Institutes for Research of Palo Alto, California.

The research, which AIR says can be completed "within two or at most three months" from the start of work, would investigate academic performance of student-athletes and their overall well-being, using the data base from the earlier AIR studies conducted for the Commission.

The research points of interest are as follows:

1. Determine the progress toward graduation and levels of satisfaction with academics and athletics of student-athletes who spend varying amounts of time in their sports.

2. Determine the effects of the time demands associated with intercollegiate athletics on freshmen, specifically on the academic performance, mental and physical health, and campus socialization of these students.

3. Determine the effects of intercollegiate competition on the academic performance on freshman student-athletes.

4. Determine the academic performance and progress toward graduation of junior college transfers who were and were not qualifiers as freshmen.

5. Determine the effects of institutional policies that promote shared living and study arrangements among student-athletes on the academic performance and personal development of these students.

6. Determine the graduation rates of Division I student-athletes by sport, by major field of study, by race/ethnicity, and as compared to the college readiness of stated education goals of these students.

7. Determine the relationship of criteria to be used by the NCAA in certifying intercollegiate athletics programs at the Division I level to the well-being of Division I student-athletes while they are enrolled and immediately after they leave college.

Reform-related actions

In other athletics-reform related actions, the Commission voted to appoint a committee to help it determine to what extent coaches' income should be controlled by institutions and the implications of income received by coaches from outside sources. The Commission said it would include directors of athletics and coaches' representatives in its deliberations.

The Commission will seek authorization from the Executive Committee to employ an adviser, at least on a part-time basis—preferably a former president or chancellor—to serve as liaison to CEOs and to "facilitate the work of the Commission."

In responding to a request for clarification of legislation approved by the 1990 Convention, the Commission said it would inform the NCAA Council that it was the Commission's intent in Proposal No. 32 to permit summer-school financial aid to incoming freshman student-athletes to come from athletically related sources.

At a press conference following the Commission meeting, Schultz said reform proposals received from the membership thus far are only suggestions that are being considered.

"Keep in mind that the Commission hasn't had time to really discuss the validity of any of the suggestions," Schultz said. "No decisions have been made on possible restrictions or cutbacks."

He told members of the media that some schools put undue pressure on coaches and players to make the (Division I men's) basketball tournament because of the financial rewards available to successful teams.

Schultz said such problems could be prevented if the tournament revenue pool was distributed among all member schools based on criteria other than winning.

During its two-day meeting, the Commission hosted a reception in the Mansfield Room of the Capitol Building for members of Congress who serve on education-related committees.

Team's baseball season canceled over alcohol-related incident

Oneonta State University College has suspended 22 baseball players and canceled the rest of its team's games this spring for a violation of campus drinking rules, college officials said April 10.

Creighton drops swim program

Creighton will drop varsity swimming at the end of the school year to save money.

Don Leahy, director of athletics, said in a news release that swimming never has been an official sport in the Missouri Valley Conference and soccer might become a championship sport by 1991-92. He also said soccer draws more fans than swimming.

Leahy said the university will keep the 22 team members on scholarship. Swimmers receive partial scholarships at Creighton.

suspended all but four of his players for an "alcohol-related incident" during the team's annual preseason southern trip, David Lasher, vice-president of college relations, told the Associated Press.

Lasher said he did not know the details of the incident that led to the suspension. Axtell was unavailable for comment, as was Albert H. Bosa, director of athletics. The college is on spring break this week.

The decision to suspend the players was made April 6 upon the team's scheduled return to Oneonta from Virginia, said Oneonta State President Alan Donovan.

"The coach sat down with the team and discussed his concerns," Donovan said.

All of the suspended players signed an athletics code of conduct at the beginning of the season in which they promised not to abuse alcohol or use illegal drugs and tobacco while on the team, college officials said.

"Obviously, our student-athletes are representatives of the institution and have to recognize that," Lasher said.

"I suspect the coach is lamenting this as much as or more than any of the players," he added.

Oneonta State, which competes in NCAA Division III, had 22 games on its schedule following its return from the South. School officials could not say how many games the team had played before the suspensions occurred or what the team's record was.

Donovan said all games the school has to cancel will be counted on Oneonta State records as forfeits.

He said the program will resume competing during the abbreviated fall season.

Axtell has been coaching nearly 20 years and is a former coach of the year in the State University of New York Athletic Conference, Lasher said. The team was 15-14 in 1989 and made the finals of its conference's tournament.

Investigation of report of steroid use unlikely

University of Texas, Austin, officials say they probably will not investigate allegations by a newspaper that former and current Longhorn football players used steroids.

James Vick, vice-president for student affairs, said an Austin American-Statesman story that quoted unnamed players as saying as many as 25 Texas football players used steroids after the NCAA banned the drugs "had very little to go on,

very little concrete."

"I don't see any plans (to investigate)," said Vick.

Under its drug policy, Texas does not punish an athlete until the athlete tests positive a second time.

Offensive lineman Shay Shafie told the American-Statesman he knew of three current players who have used steroids, but he would not identify them.

Vick said he has confidence in the university, Southwest Athletic Conference and NCAA drug-testing procedures and counseling, United Press International reported.

"I wouldn't say there is no steroid use," he said. "We'd like to see a situation where there is no steroid use."

Texas randomly tests three of 230 male scholarship athletes a week from all sports for steroids as part of the school's drug-testing program.

Comment

Institutional acceptance of athletics found lacking

By Paul E. Hartman

Intercollegiate athletics has never been totally accepted by our educational institutions. It has been tolerated and, in most cases, allowed or forced to go its own way. Even so, the majority of programs in our country are ably administered, are educationally sound and are run with integrity.

If, years ago, college and university presidents of major universities in question had taken athletics under their jurisdiction and set guidelines based on educational goals and objectives, much of what we read about today could have been avoided.

Presidents are concerned with expenses, eligibility, rules infractions, graduation rates, length of seasons and many other problems that plague big-time athletics and, to some extent, the smaller programs. They are now trying through the NCAA Presidents Commission to establish some guidelines, but it is like putting a band-aid on a large wound. The bleeding will not stop, because of the nature of the beast they have allowed to develop.

Paul E. Hartman

Problems have to be recognized for what they are if something is to be done about them. Reasons for having intercollegiate athletics must be closely examined. It must be made clear that the athletics program is accountable to the university administration and the policies and procedures that govern all departments within the institutional structure. The president is the key person at every institution. Under his or her leadership, general housecleaning must be done and programs restored to a position consistent with educational values.

Major problems are related to money, lack of control and the absence of sound educational principles. We see these problems at every level, even though they are more obvious in the larger institutions. To its credit, the NCAA is trying to resolve these issues.

Unfortunately, reducing the number of games, shortening the seasons, publishing the graduation rates and other cosmetic approaches will not alter the underlying disease.

What needs to be done is to (1) put intercollegiate athletics in the administrative system of the university with a given athletics budget and with all revenues going to the university budget; (2) treat athletes the same as other students in terms of housing, financial aid, eligibility and academic pursuits; (3) pay coaches the same as any other faculty member with the same benefits and security; (4) establish sound educational objectives for the athletics program, and (5) work hard using administrative control to make sure programs are conducted within the rules. In short, athletics programs should have athnever happen. An alternative that could work and solve many of the problems is to establish two divisions in the NCAA.

One division would be a super division and the other, the educational division. The super division would have no rules; each individual institution and each conference would establish its own guidelines, with the NCAA going back to one of its original functions—that of conducting national championships.

Water seeks its own level. There would be pressure on institutions to stay within certain financial and educational guidelines. Programs would be run like big businesses, which they are, and institutions could mold their programs according to their educational, public relations, fund-raising and entertainment goals. Many of the larger

"You see them on the television preaching, and you see them with a picture of their book behind them, and you say, 'Nike is advertising with that show, aren't they?'"

"And you hear that John Thompson and Michael Jordan and Spike Lee are killing black kids by advertising tennis shoes (causing inner-city kids to commit crimes to get the shoes). And that's the most ridiculous, hypocritical thing I've heard in my life, because last year at Ballou High School, a kid was killed over a boom box. Several kids were killed for their wallets. People of that moral fiber are going to do that without the advertisements."

"The question is who is exploiting whom?"

"If a journalism student does not land a job with Sports Illustrated, does that mean he or she was exploited? Only about one percent of the journalism school graduates are capable of writing at that level.

"If a chemical engineer major can't get a job with DuPont, has he or she been exploited?"

"No. Because in life, as in sports, there is very little room at the top, and only the most talented ever get there.

"Does that mean the rest of us have been exploited?"

"No. We just have to find our niche and settle in there, making the best we can of our situations.

"That's part of the educational experience too."

"Each year, the stories that circulate about who is doing what to whom multiply. Athletes are asked to verbally commit in December or January when the signing date is in April. Threats of giving aid to someone else who really wants to go to that school pop up in recruiting language, contacting athletes after they have made a verbal commitment to try to persuade a change of mind, offerings of scholarships that sometimes disappear at the last moment, and the list goes on and on. Some inaccurate, but, I fear, many true.

TV money represents a valuable resource

By Neal H. Pilson

Considering the publicity that comes with such major deals as our $1 billion contract with the NCAA, television's role in college sports is often criticized as adversarial, manipulative and detrimental to the health and welfare of athletes and their schools. Some say television's money breeds commercialism, the pressure to win at all costs, the resultant violations of NCAA rules and the abuse of student-athletes.

I find fault with this criticism; we in television are very sensitive to the issue of our medium's influence on college athletics. In the next five years, we estimate that the entire television industry will disburse between $1.2 billion and $1.5 billion to colleges and universities.

A positive force

But that money should be viewed by society and by college administrators as a positive force and as an enormous and attractive resource for higher education. It is money the educational institutions do not have to raise from taxpayers, parents, alumni and students, and it is money they can use for any purpose: to build new classrooms or dorms, to reduce tuition, or to pay coaches' salaries.

Fortunately, I think the NCAA has the leadership to put this money to proper use. NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz recognizes that the $1 billion the NCAA will receive from CBS is an opportunity to create major reform.

He has suggested that increased television money could go into a merit pool, with each member school eligible for the money. If a school has a certain number of full scholarships in a variety of sports, it would receive X number of dollars. If athletes have a graduation rate that is equal to or above the rest of the student body or above a certain minimum, they would qualify for so many dollars. That kind of approach may help to restore the balance between education and athletics and help to reduce the win-at-all-costs attitude at colleges and universities today.

Presidents understand

I also think university presidents now better understand that they are in business, whether they like it or not. They have an obligation to conduct their end of the business in a professional manner.

There is no real disagreement between the colleges and the television industry, and I think college presidents now understand that the so-called domination of television over college sports is a myth.

Yes, there are instances where television does ask colleges to kick off a football game at 2:43 or 7 p.m. or noon, but they are free to say no. If they do, however, we are also free to take our business elsewhere. If we are going to pay two institutions $1 million to play a football game, we want them to play during a time period when we can televise them; if they don't want to play during that time period, then we are not going to pay them. This isn't blackmail; this is Economics 101.

Good business proposition

The relationship with television is a good business proposition for the schools if they manage and administer the television money properly. We see them now bringing into their administrative and athletics departments people trained in business evaluations and opportunities. Financial consulting services are also available. Institutions are treating college sports as an important business, and we strongly encourage them to do so.

Paterno sees decline in early leavers for draft

The number of juniors who declare themselves eligible for the National Football League draft will dwindle as college football players discover their true worth, Penn State coach Joe Paterno says.

Nearly three dozen underclassmen have declared their intention to enter the NFL draft this spring, but Paterno said many will be surprised when pro teams trim their rosters in the fall.

"The first time, everybody thinks he's that good. Agents are out there telling kids how good they are, and a lot of kids are going to be disappointed," Paterno said in an interview with the Associated Press.

Fewer college basketball players make similar decisions to declare themselves "hardship" cases and make themselves eligible for the draft, the coach said.

"When people started to understand what it would take to come out and be successful, you had fewer and fewer kids coming out," Paterno said. "I think that's what will happen with football."

The coach, speaking at his first news conference of spring practice, said decisions should be up to the players and that players shouldn't be penalized for checking out professional sports.

Under current NCAA and NFL policies, once a college player signs with an agent or formally announces his intention to turn pro, he loses his right to play college football.

"I was a little upset that the commissioner of the NFL said if a kid declares he's going into the draft, he has to sign a statement that he can't go back," Paterno said.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz has suggested that players be able to test their worth in the NFL draft.

"I understand why the NFL doesn't want to do that. They don't want to have a kid come out and get drafted and then say, 'I don't like who drafted me, so I'm going back to college,'" Paterno said.

The NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee meets April 16-18 in Phoenix to discuss changes in the Association rules.

"The principle behind it... is that simply there is an inequity for some athletes in college—an innate inability to find out what's out there for them," said Richard J. Evrard, NCAA director of legislative services.

Baseball and hockey players can be selected in professional drafts and hear offers but retain their eligibility if they don't accept them, he said.

Any changes in eligibility rules would have to go before the NCAA Council, Evrard said.

Paterno said he was hoping the NFL would allow players to be drafted but be willing to wait one or two years for those players who decide to stay in school. Doing so would protect the college game, he said.

"That's the price we'll pay to make sure we continue to have the kind of game that we have had in college football," he said.

So far, 35 underclassmen have made themselves available to the NFL draft.

"Some people are going to suffer. It happened in basketball. When you first had the hardship rule in basketball, a lot of kids came out who probably weren't good enough and they sacrificed their education," Paterno said.

Congress will harm academy sports if it extends active-duty obligation

By Vice Adm. William Lawrence

In deliberations on the 1990 defense authorization bill, an increase in the active-duty obligation of service-academy graduates from five to eight years was proposed. In compromise action, the final bill increases the obligation to six years. There appears to be continued interest in the Congress in this year's session to increase the obligation to eight years.

All the service-academy superintendents and those familiar with the academies feel that the six-year obligation will seriously impact the ability to attract and admit high-quality young people. The effect on the recruiting of minorities and women will be particularly adverse. The long-term impact on the quality of the military officer corps could be quite detrimental.

Another factor

These consequences are sufficient unto themselves to justify no increase in obligation beyond the present five years, but there is another factor to be considered.

All the academy athletics directors and coaches feel that the six-year obligation will gravely threaten the viability of the academies' intercollegiate athletics programs, while the eight-year obligation will virtually destroy them because of the inability of the academies to attract fine student-athletes who are eagerly sought-after by all colleges in the country.

This is deeply regretted for several reasons. First, the service-academy varsity program provides a wonderful model and example for the entire country. All athletes at the academies are students first and athletes second. Of all schools in the country, the academies' sports programs represent the student-athlete ideal. The academies prove beyond doubt that it is possible to have highly competitive sports programs and still graduate 100 percent of their athletes.

Values of sports

Secondly, the intercollegiate athletics programs at the academies provide qualities and values that are very important to future military officers.

Three five-star-rank officers in World War II—Generals MacArthur, Eisenhower and Bradley—won varsity football letters at West Point. Admiral Bull Halsey, the Pacific hero during World War II, was a fine fullback at Navy.

There are others. The first man in space, Rear Adm. Alan Shepard, rowed varsity crew. Maj. Gen. William Carpenter, the all-America "lonesome end" on Army's great teams in the late 1950s, won the silver star in Vietnam.

One of the sports events with the highest national television viewership is the annual Army-Navy football game. People watch not only because it is always a spirited, hard-fought contest between fine young scholar-athletes, but because they derive pride and confidence that our future military leaders, who will defend our country's freedom and way of life, have the right qualities—courage, discipline, selflessness, a sense of teamwork and the "never say die" spirit.

The two highest sports honors in the country are the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Gold Medal and the NCAA Theodore Roosevelt Award, awarded to former college players who have gone on to distinguish themselves in their personal and professional lives and by their immensely significant contributions to their country.

Top awards

Only seven people in history have won both of these awards. Three of these have been service academy graduates—President Eisenhower; Rear Adm. Thomas Hamilton, sports star, World War II hero, coach and athletics administrator; and myself, a Vietnam prisoner of war and former Naval Academy superintendent.

The Congress should think carefully before taking action that could irreparably damage an invaluable influence in the preparation of future military officers and an important national tradition—service academy intercollegiate sports.

Institutional

universities have been talking about such a division for some time.

The educational division would be for those institutions that desire their programs to be in the mainstream of education. There would be rules, but they would be fewer than the ones with which we now deal, and they would be much clearer.

For example, there would be no athletics scholarships and no off-campus recruiting. Intercollegiate athletics would be for those students who chose that institution for educational reasons.

This plan essentially cuts out Division II. Division II is already the smallest division and lacks identity and direction. On the other hand, there is a possibility that the reverse could happen. Division II could become the largest division. This would be due to the fallout in the super arena and the "scholarship" programs in Division III that would have to move up or be discontinued.

One might say these concepts are impossible, but so are the steps presently being taken. Several years ago, the NCAA established a satisfactory-progress rule stating that an athlete had to be making progress in a designated program leading to a degree. As a result, some surprising new majors sprang up, such as undergraduate studies. With the new rule on published graduation rates, we are sure to see new programs enabling marginal students to graduate. This will be especially evident if graduation rates are tied in with the number of scholarships available.

The general public does not realize the maze of rules in the NCAA Manual. Most of the rules have been put in because coaches have taken advantage of the philosophy or intent of a more general rule. The result is a document containing such a volume of do's and don'ts that a coach or administrator has difficulty distinguishing the acceptable from the unacceptable.

Fortunately, in the past few years, the NCAA has eliminated some rules, and decisions have been made in favor of the student. The Manual has been rewritten and improved, but interpretation is still the key.

The answers are not easy, and change will be a difficult process. There is more concern now than ever before, and most everyone agrees that something has to be done. People are speaking out, articles are being written and a number of books have been published dealing with current problems in intercollegiate athletics.

Although there are problems in some areas of intercollegiate athletics, they are not insurmountable. In fact, most programs are outstanding in their service to college students and to the community. The important thing is to put the education and the welfare of the student first; the rest will follow.

Hartman is director of athletics at Oakland University.

have to get our heads out of the sand. The American Football Coaches Association must come up with some sort of legislation to make sure it isn't an open-floodgate type of thing.

"I think one thing you can do (to keep players from becoming pros prematurely) is make the letter of intent a four-year binding scholarship for both parties. Right now, the letter of intent and scholarship are only renewable once every year through five years.

"I know now that a lot of decisions (by players) are being made out of indecision and fear. I know I have to tighten controls on my practices, who is on our campus and who is talking to my players. It has been an open-door policy before, but not anymore. The door is being controlled."

Basketball coaches pick silver anniversary team

Rick Barry, the only player to lead the NCAA, ABA and NBA in scoring and an eight-time NBA all-star, leads the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) 1990 Balfour silver anniversary all-America team.

Composed of outstanding college basketball players from the class of 1965 who have gone on to distinguish themselves in their respective careers, the silver anniversary team also include 1965 consensus all-America Fred Hetzel of Davidson College; Toby Kimball, who led the NCAA in rebounding at the University of Connecticut; long-time Phoenix Suns' standout Dick VanArsdale of Indiana University, Bloomington, and Houston orthopedic surgeon Dr. Donald Baxter of Mercer University.

The silver anniversary team was presented with rings at the annual NABC awards dinner April 1, 1990, at the Denver Convention Center. The dinner is held as part of the annual NABC convention in conjunction with the NCAA Final Four.

Following are brief sketches of the NABC's 1990 honorees.

Barry

A consensus all-America at the University of Miami (Florida) and the nation's leading scorer in 1965 with a 37.4 average, Barry is a member of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame. He is the only player ever to lead the NCAA, the ABA and the NBA in scoring and was selected to the NBA all-star team eight times. A television and radio commentator, Barry is a color analyst for NBA games on cable network TNT and for the Seattle Supersonics. Barry's oldest son, Scooter, played on Kansas' NCAA championship team in 1988.

Baxter

A Rhodes scholar nominee at Mercer in 1965, Dr. Baxter was a four-year starter on the basketball team. He is a prominent orthopedic surgeon in the Houston area. He is remembered as the supportive roommate of the first black student at Mercer, located in Macon, Georgia, and the roommates were the subject of national media attention, including a visit from Dr. Martin Luther King in their dormitory. Dr. Baxter received a NCAA Silver Anniversary award in January.

Dr. Donald Baxter

Hetzel

Hetzel was a consensus first-team all-America selection at Davidson in 1965. He is second on Davidson's all-time scoring list with 2,032 points and is the school's only player to achieve that level in three seasons, all with at least 20 wins. Hetzel was the Southern Conference athlete of the year in 1965.

Fred Hetzel

Hetzel is president and chief executive officer of Coldwell Banker Fred Hetzel & Associates, Inc., real estate brokerage in Leesburg, Virginia.

Kimball

Thomas "Toby" Kimball was the nation's leading rebounder in 1964-65, averaging 21 rebounds per game for Connecticut while leading the Huskies to a 23-3 record and an NCAA tournament berth. Kimball played in the National Basketball Association for nine seasons with six different teams. The native of Framingham, Massachusetts, helped establish free agency in the NBA. Kimball has been involved in sales and marketing and is an independent sales representative based in the San Diego area.

Dick VanArsdale

VanArsdale

VanArsdale enjoyed an outstanding 12-year career in the NBA after earning all-Big Ten Conference and all-America honors at Indiana in 1965. Along with his identical twin, Tom, VanArsdale shared most valuable player honors for the Hoosiers as a junior and senior as well as being named to the academic all-America team. Dick was drafted by the New York Knicks and played in New York and Phoenix, averaging 16.4 points in his professional career. Still active with the Suns' as a television color commentator, Dick filled in as the Suns' head coach for part of one season. He and Tom are partners in real estate development in the Phoenix area.

Home play-off site grounds for Gophers' optimism

Minnesota has never been the host for the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships, and the closest the Golden Gophers have come to winning the meet was during the 1940s, when they finished second twice.

But this year, as the school finally takes its turn as the championships' host, the Gophers enjoy a golden opportunity to capture those long-elusive team honors.

Minnesota, which finished third at last year's meet, returns several standouts from that squad, plus a freshman who proved himself long ago to coach Fred Roethlisberger. That gymnast is his son, John Roethlisberger, this year's Big Ten Conference all-around titlist.

With the younger Roethlisberger's help, Minnesota captured its first Big Ten team title since 1984—no small feat, considering that the conference has produced two of the past five national champions. The coach's son, who also was the top finisher among several current Golden Gophers who qualified for all-around competition at last year's U.S. Men's Gymnastics Championships, was named the Big Ten's gymnast of the year.

John Roethlis-
berger

Entering regional competition, Roethlisberger was ranked in the top 10 nationally in three events—floor exercise, parallel bars and the horizontal bar—while senior Mark McKiernan was ranked second in pommel horse and third in parallel bars. Other returning Gopher finalists from last year's NCAA meet include juniors Jay Caputo and Mike Farina.

As a team, Minnesota entered the regionals ranked second nationally behind Nebraska. But the Gophers have to like their chances on their home floor—especially considering that Minnesota tied Nebraska in a dual meet March 10 in Williams Arena. Both teams scored 281.65.

Still, the Cornhuskers will be tough to beat. Two Nebraska gymnasts are ranked among the nation's top-10 all-around gymnasts, led by top-ranked and defending all-around champion Patrick Kirksey. Kirksey also is ranked second in parallel bars, where he is the top returner from last year's meet, and fifth in pommel horse.

Three other Huskers—Bob Stelter, Mark Warburton and Trent Dimas—are ranked in at least two events each, with Stelter ranked sixth all-around.

Event-by-event, Nebraska appears to hold an edge over Minnesota in the floor exercise, vault and horizontal bar, while the Gophers may be stronger in pommel horse. The key events may be the rings and parallel bars, where both teams appear equally talented.

Despite finishing behind Minnesota at the conference meet, Big Ten Conference representatives Ohio State and Iowa also will compete for NCAA team honors. These three, plus Penn State, advanced from the East regional

Ohio State is led by Mike Racanelli, who finished second behind Kirksey in the all-around competition last year and tied for third in the floor exercise. Iowa pins its hopes on Keith Rooks, the top returner from last year's pommel horse competition, and Jeff Dow, the Hawkeyes' highest-ranked all-around performer.

Cal State Fullerton and Stanford, which were expected to challenge for team honors, saw their seasons end rather abruptly at the West regional. Both were shut out from trips to the championships by strong performances from Nebraska, UCLA, host Oklahoma and surprising New Mexico.

Among other notable individuals expected to compete at the meet are last year's co-champions in the pommel horse—Penn State's Mark Sohn, who is ranked No. 1 in the event this year, and UCLA's Chris Waller.

Championships Profile

Event: National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics.

Field: Eight teams—the top four teams from each region—will compete. In individual competition, each regional's top 12 finishers in each event will advance to the championships.

Defending champion: Illinois defeated host Nebraska, 283.400-282.300, for its ninth team title.

Schedule: Minnesota will be the host for the championships April 19-21.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will be published in the April 25 issue of the News.

Contenders: Nebraska, Minnesota, Ohio State, Oklahoma, UCLA and Iowa.

Championships notes: Nebraska was the last team to win consecutive team titles, winning five championships from 1979 to 1983. Illinois and Penn State have the most team titles (nine), but Illinois' victory last year was its first since 1958. Nebraska has won six titles, all since 1979. The host team has won six of the last 10 team championships.

Utah women plan to regain gymnastics supremacy

Call it the "crowning in Corvallis."

Going in, it appears very likely that one of the three schools that have dominated the team competition at the first eight National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships will win again at this year's meet at Oregon State.

The favorite is Utah, which won the first five meets. But two former champions from the Southeastern Conference—defending titlist Georgia (which also won in 1987) and 1988 champ Alabama—will challenge the Utes.

The most likely party-crasher is another SEC team, Louisiana State.

Utah entered Midwest regional competition as the top-ranked team, behind the performances of nationally ranked all-around performers Missy Marlowe, a 1988 U.S. Olympian; all-America sophomore Shelly Schaerrer, and freshman Kristen Kenoyer. The threesome ranked Nos. 3-4-5 in all-around ratings entering the regionals.

Marlowe's strongest events are the uneven bars, where she tied for fourth last year and is ranked second this season, and the balance beam, where she ranks fourth, just behind teammate Kenoyer. Schaerrer is ranked in the top 10 in three events—floor exercise (second), uneven bars (eighth) and balance beam (10th).

But the Utes are beatable, as second-ranked Alabama proved by splitting a pair of dual meets with Utah this season.

Alabama's only loss of the season came February 19 at Utah, where the Utes prevailed, 193.75-192.10.

Missy
Marlowe

But the Crimson Tide returned the favor March 3 in Tuscaloosa, 192.30-192.15, before beating its league foes at the Southeastern Conference meet March 24 at Georgia.

Dee Foster, ranked second nationally in all-around, is Alaba-

Shelly Schaerrer

ma's top performer, but teammate Marie Robbins defeated her and defending NCAA all-around champion Corrinne Wright of Georgia at the SEC meet.

If Utah holds any edge over Alabama, it is in the floor exercise, where Schaerrer, Kenoyer and Marlowe all are strong.

Georgia has ranked ahead of conference foe Louisiana State for most of the season, but LSU finished ahead of the Lady Bulldogs at the SEC meet to establish itself as a legitimate contender for the national title, as does UCLA, which is led by Junior all-around performers Jami Snopek and Rachelle Fruge were the Lady Tigers' top performers at the conference meet. Snopek is highly ranked nationally in the vault, which is LSU's strongest event as a team.

Despite finishing third at the SEC meet, defending national champion Georgia remains a strong contender for NCAA team honors. Besides returning to defend her titles in the all-around and floor-exercise competition, the Lady Bulldogs' Wright is ranked No. 1 in uneven bars. Teammate Andrea Thomas, a three-time all-America on the balance beam, is ranked second in that event.

Nebraska also has a shot at the title, as does UCLA, which is led by top-ranked all-around gymnast and defending balance-beam co-champion Jill Andrews.

Corinne
Wright

Another top performer expected to compete in Corvallis is hometown favorite Joy Selig of Oregon State, who tied Andrews for the balance beam title last year. She currently is ranked No. 1 in the beam and the floor exercise.

Andrea
Thomas

Championships Profile

Event: National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics.

Field: Twelve teams and 12 all-around competitors will qualify for the championships. The team and all-around winner from each of five regions will receive an automatic berth. The remaining seven teams and all-around competitors will qualify at large on the basis of their national qualifying scores. If the all-around winner in a region is a member of an advancing team, the position will revert to an at-large berth. The regional event winners who score at least a 9.5 may advance to the championships (in that event only) if they are not part of a qualifying team for the all-around qualifier.

Defending champion: Host Georgia edged UCLA, 192.65-192.60.

Schedule: Oregon State will be the host for the championships April 20-21.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will be published in the April 25 issue of the News.

Contenders: Utah, Alabama, Louisiana State, Georgia, Nebraska and UCLA.

Championships notes: Oregon State becomes the fifth school to host the nine-year-old championships. The host team has won the meet four times, including Georgia's victory at home last year. Utah won three of its five titles on its home floor. The Utes have claimed the most individual titles in the championships, winning nine. Georgia gymnasts won three individual titles at last year's meet, and has won five overall. Arizona State's four individual championships at the 1986 meet is the record for titles in one year.

Hurricane Hugo not altogether an ill wind for Citadel

By Rick Scoppe

The Citadel is proving that future engineers and military officers can play baseball.

The Bulldogs, who may have one legitimate major league prospect, in

Citadel team fares well in classroom

Chal Port, the Citadel's head baseball coach, is batting 1,000 when he says his athletes are student first and baseball players second.

Eight Bulldog regulars are members of the athletics director's honor roll, either for the 1989 fall semester or for their overall academic careers, and 11 team members overall are on the list.

Walt Nadzak, director of athletics, created the honor roll in 1987 to "further reward our athletes who excel in the classroom."

To qualify, a student-athlete must have earned a 3.000 grade-point average during a single semester or have a 2.750 overall GPA.

Senior Richard Shirer, an electrical engineering major with a 5-0 pitching record, had a 3.222 last fall and carries a cumulative GPA of 3.520.

Freak accident takes life of Colorado skier

Members of the University of Colorado ski team said the death of a teammate during an April 3 training run was a freak accident.

Laura Flood, a sophomore from Ketchum, Idaho, suffered severe head injuries when she lost a ski and hit a tree on the Challenger Run at Eldora Ski Area. She was airlifted to St. Anthony Hospital in Denver, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

"It was just a stupid accident," said Betty Rounds, a teammate. "No one's to blame. The course wasn't dangerous. Her ski came off, and I don't know why. We all know the risks are there."

Flood, a prejournalism major at Colorado, finished 12th in the giant slalom at the 1989 NCAA championships. When she failed to qualify for this year's meet, she prepared "care packages" of cookies and other goodies for her teammates who did.

"Laura was so full of life," said Tim LaVallee, Colorado ski team coach. "If there was ever one person you could always count on having a smile on her face, it was Laura."

E. Gordon Gee, university president, issued a statement offering his condolences to Flood's family, teammates and friends.

"The university community is saddened and shocked," Gee said. "It is especially tragic when a talented, young life is suddenly snuffed out."

A memorial service was held April 4 at St. Thomas Aquinas University Parish in Boulder.

Binders available

Readers of The NCAA News are reminded that binders, which provide permanent, convenient storage of back issues of the paper, are available from the publishing department.

Each of the rugged, vinyl-covered binders holds 15 issues of the News. They may be purchased for $10 each, or two for $19. Orders should be directed to the circulation office at the NCAA (913/339-1900).

one stretch won 26 straight games this season, which not only set a school record, but also was the longest winning streak in the nation thus far in the season.

So how, in what was supposed to be a rebuilding year, has The Citadel done it?

Coach Chal Port believes Hurricane Hugo is partly responsible.

"Probably the good preseason work that we had on the parking lot because our field was destroyed by Hugo," Port said. "I'm serious. It made us pretty mentally tough. We're just happy to get out between the white lines and play," he told the Associated Press.

The Citadel's home field wasn't the only thing damaged by Hugo. The team's practice field, part of which is used as a parking lot during football season, was also a mess.

National Guardsmen, who arrived in the wake of the hurricane in September to help residents recover, parked their heavy vehicles and put up tents on the field.

"After they left, we tried to straighten it out... and grow grass, but the grass would not grow. It made our guys mentally tough, because a good hop is a rarity, and the outfield runs down field."

"So when we got to a level field, we were happy to be there."

The Bulldogs were 30-6 as of April 10.

"Don't worry. Our hat size is still the same. We don't have any delusions of glory," he said. "We're not future major leaguers. We're future engineers, school teachers, officers in the army and navy."

There's at least one major league prospect wearing a Bulldog uniform: left-fielder Anthony Jenkins. Other than Jenkins, Port said the players are just a bunch of "average college kids who are playing outstanding baseball right now."

Chal Port

"I'd have to say the whole is better than the parts," said Port, who is 591-359-1 and in his 26th year at the school. "We are not blessed with a great deal of team speed. Home runs come from people who haven't hit home runs before."

"We're students first, and then we come out and play," said Port, who's had all but two of his players leave with a degree. "That does not lessen our interest. But they know they are students first."

The Bulldogs returned only three starters this season and lost their top three pitchers.

"Things have just been going our way, that's for sure," Port said. "I don't know how long it will hold up. It might hold up the whole season. We're just very happy to be where we are."

Research confirms that business thrives on lots of sun and plenty of water.

The sound of water cascading from a fountain can help crystallize one's thinking.

A sunny room is infinitely more uplifting than a dim room.

Certain color schemes can warm you. Open, airy spaces can make you feel free.

Certainly, none of these thoughts is especially surprising. What is surprising, however, is that only one group of hotels seems to employ them to the fullest advantage of today's business traveller: Hyatt® Hotels.

Which may help to explain why everything, from our atriums to our guest rooms, has such a distinctive appeal.

Why business executives tend to feel more relaxed and more focused at Hyatt.

And why, given our competitive rates and the benefits of our Gold Passport® Frequent Traveller Program, enlightened companies are happy to see their executives come back to a Hyatt Hotel. After all, what's good for business people invariably is good for business.

Players, organizers reminded of summer-league guidelines

Basketball season is just around the corner—summer basketball season, that is.

Student-athletes from NCAA member institutions participate each summer in one of the hundreds of leagues certified by the Association, in accordance with NCAA Bylaws 14.8.5.2 and 30.11.

Already, 49 leagues (32 for men, 17 for women) have been certified by the Association for 1990. The first list of approved summer leagues appears below.

Following are the legislative guidelines that student-athletes and summer-league administrators need to be aware of as they prepare for hot-weather hoop competition.

Bylaw 14.8.5.2

NCAA Bylaw 14.8.5.2 relates to student-athlete participation in a men's or women's summer basketball league. Specifically, it states:

"(a) Summer League—Divisions I and II. A student-athlete may compete during the period between June 15 and August 31 on a team in a league approved by the Council per (Bylaw) 30.11, provided the student-athlete has received written permission from the institution's athletics director (or the director's official representative) for participation in the league. If the student-athlete is transferring and has been officially accepted for enrollment in a second institution, and if the previous institution certified that the student has withdrawn and does not intend to return to that institution for the next term, this written permission is to be obtained from the member institution to which the student-athlete is transferring. Under such circumstances, the student-athlete would be countable on the summer-league roster as a representative of the second institution.

"(b) Summer Competition—Division III. There are no restrictions on the participation of Division III student-athletes in outside basketball competition during the summer."

(Editor's note: Regarding paragraph (b) above, it should be noted that, in reality, this simply means that Division III student-athletes do not need written, institutional permission to play in a summer basketball league).

"(c) Puerto Rico Superior Basketball League. A student-athlete who is a resident of Puerto Rico may participate in the Superior Basketball League of Puerto Rico."

Bylaw 30.11

In addition to the above, student-athletes also are required to limit their summer-league participation to a league that has been certified by the NCAA Council as meeting the requirements set forth in NCAA Bylaw 30.11.

Those requirements include:

- No all-star game of any kind shall be permitted.
- League play shall be within 100 air miles of the city limits of the student-athlete's official residence at the end of the previous academic year or the institution the student-athlete last attended as a regular student.
- No member team shall make any payments for play or expenses directly or indirectly to any player.
- Postseason play-offs or tournaments shall be permitted, provided they involve intraleague competition and are completed by August 31.
- Each team shall include on its roster no more than one player with intercollegiate basketball eligibility remaining from any two-year or four-year college.

• All players must limit their competition to one team in one league.

• No admission shall be charged for any game, no fee shall be charged for parking to attend any game, no revenue shall be realized at any game from raffles or similar activities and no revenue shall be realized from over-the-air or cable television or radio rights fees for any game.

• Neither the league nor any member team shall have on its staff or as a participant any person associated in any employment capacity with any two-year or four-year college.

The first 49

Following are the first 49 summer leagues (32 for men, 17 for women) certified for competition for 1990. Requests for certification and/or questions regarding NCAA legislation relating to summer basketball leagues should be directed to Robert A. Burton, legislative assistant, at the Association's national office.

Additional lists of certified summer leagues will be published in The NCAA News as they are approved.

After protests, Sooners reinstate women's basketball program

University of Oklahoma officials have announced they will reinstate the women's basketball program.

The announcement by President Richard Van Horn and Donnie Duncan, director of athletics, was greeted by a chorus of cheers from members of the women's basketball team, who attended the news conference. The announcement came a day after attorneys for the players threatened a lawsuit if the program was not reinstated.

Van Horn said the outpouring of public support for the program as well as the state senate's resolution condemning the university for its action was more of a factor than the threat of the lawsuit.

"This is an enormous victory for the student-athletes, women's sports and everyone who believes in equal opportunity for women," said attorney Arthur M. Bryand, executive director of the Trial Lawyers for Public Justice.

Van Horn said school officials started to rethink the decision to eliminate the women's basketball program after the Senate action and the public outcry, the Associated Press reported.

Van Horn and Duncan said they had planned to reallocate the money to other women's sports, thereby giving more women an opportunity to take part in athletics. They said the women's basketball program had a budget of $300,000, which represents about a quarter of the total budget for women's athletics and involves 13 to 15 players.

The decision to disband the program created a furor. The Women's Basketball Coaches Association threatened a lawsuit, and players rallied on campus in attempts to fight for their program.

Attorneys for the players said the disbanding violated the Title IX provision of Federal law requiring equal opportunities for women in college athletics.

Assistant athletics director Don Jimerson said the women's basketball team had never developed much of a following over the 16-year history of the program. The average attendance at the end of the season was about 50.

"It was unfortunate that the situation had to occur," said Tim Stoner, an attorney for the WBCA. "However, now that the matter has come to the public's attention, it is our hope that the university will use its opportunity to make a greater financial and philosophical commitment to all its women's athletics programs, particularly women's basketball."

Penn State will remain in Atlantic 10 one more year

The Atlantic 10 Conference's decision to keep Pennsylvania State University in the league for another year keeps the Nittany Lions right on schedule for their eventual move to the Big Ten Conference, athletics officials say.

Atlantic 10 directors of athletics met April 5 to discuss Penn State's eventual move and agreed to let the Nittany Lions remain in the East Coast league until June 30, 1991, as Penn State had requested.

"That's the day our Atlantic 10 commitment ends," said Penn State sports information director L. Budd Thalman. "The day we join the Big Ten is not defined."

Penn State announced last December it would leave the Atlantic 10 after nearly a decade and join the 94-year-old Big Ten. At the time, the school said the Big Ten's academic tradition played the biggest role in the decision.

Penn State is an independent in football but competes in the Atlantic 10 in its other major sports.

"I made up my mind I was going to stay in coaching for some time,"

Seminar planned for May 9-11

The Northeast regional seminar organized by the NCAA's compliance services and legislative services departments will be held May 9-11 in Cambridge, Massachusetts, at the Hyatt Regency Cambridge.

No registration fee will be charged for the seminar, although preregistration with the national office is required. Those attending will be responsible for transportation, hotel and incidental expenses.

Those wishing to attend already should have received room-registration and response forms from the national office. Questions and requests for additional forms should be directed to Julie M. Beard, registration coordinator for the Northeast regional seminar, at the NCAA office (913/339-1906).

Regents propose stricter standards

Oklahoma Regents for Higher Education are proposing stricter academic standards for students participating in athletics or any other extracurricular program.

The regents proposed a grade average of 2.000 for students to be eligible for such activities. The proposal is similar to a "no-pass, no-play" rule that covers athletics in the state's public school system.

The regents staff outlined the proposal recently during a meeting of the University of Science and Arts of Oklahoma in Chickasha, United Press International reported.

The regents also suggested new minimum grade requirements that could place an estimated 1,500 to 1,700 other students at Oklahoma colleges and universities on academic probation.

football coach Joe Paterno said, citing the switch to the Big Ten and a 9,500-seat addition to 83,000-seat Beaver Stadium.

A Women's intercollegiate softball games are played under rules published by the Amateur Softball Association (ASA).

The Revolutionary Gillette Sensor.

It senses and adjusts to the individual needs of your face for the best shave a man can get.

The remarkable Gillette Sensor shaving system creates an entirely new standard in shaving performance. It's a shave personalized to every man. The revolution starts with the platinum hardened Sensor twin blades. They're individually and independently mounted on highly responsive springs. So they continuously sense and automatically adjust to the individual curves and unique needs of your face.

But innovation doesn't stop there. The ultra narrow metal skin guard is also mounted on springs. It moves in total harmony with the blades to set up your beard for optimum shaving performance.

Keeping this technology in constant contact with your face required another breakthrough. A dramatic redesign of the entire pivoting process creates a wider, more responsive, unprecedentedly smooth pivoting action. Innovation is everywhere.

You can feel it in the textured ridges and balance of the Sensor razor. You appreciate it in the easy loading system and the convenient shaving organizer.

Even rinsing is innovative. The new blades are 50% narrower than any others—water flows freely around and through them, helping to make rinsing and cleaning totally effortless.

But the true revolution of Sensor comes not with any one feature, but with the way the Sensor technologies work together. They combine to give your individual face a personalized shave—the closest, smoothest, safest shave you've ever had. Or, more precisely, the best shave a man can get.

Weber State is trying to lure more fans into the stands

Weber State College is cutting season ticket prices for football and basketball games and changing the starting time of night football games to increase attendance, according to Richard Hannan, director of athletics.

"We want to get people back into the stands. We are responding to the comments we have received from our fans," Hannan said.

Hannan said the "first phase" of a three-step program includes price reductions for season tickets, ranging from 22 to 27 percent, with $1 reductions in basketball single-game tickets in the balcony sections and a freeze on the price of single-game football tickets.

"The price of the tickets with the reduction is comparable to prices during the 1985-86 football and basketball seasons," he told United Press International.

Weber State will bring ticket prices back up and implement changes in priority seating in the Dee Events Center basketball arena, he said, within "five to 10 years."

Hannan said the decision to start night football games at 6 p.m., rather than 7 p.m., would give fans the opportunity to take their families to the games and return home at a "decent hour. It was another effort to improve relationships with the fans."

This fall's football schedule has four home games. But Hannan said it is "a temporary financial solution and would resolve itself in 1991 and 1992."

In two of the road games, at Wyoming and Southern Utah State,

In seeking ways to increase attendance at home football and basketball games, Weber State has cut prices for season tickets and will start football games earlier

Weber State will receive guaranteed appearance money. In the past, the Wildcats have paid part of Southern Utah State's expenses to play in Ogden.

"Obviously, the football schedule next year is an adjustment made to alleviate some immediate financial concerns. I feel the schedules in 1991 and 1992 implement what we want to accomplish; that is, upgraded opponents with six home games each season," he said. Weber State plays football in the Big Sky Conference.

Of the 1990-91 basketball schedule, Hannan said it should be competitive, but a schedule giving the team and coaching staff a chance for success.

"We need to get people back into the Purple Palace"—Dee Events Center—he said. "The new ticket policy is one way; another is to bring success and enthusiasm into the product on the floor."

"The decision to initiate two tournaments is an ideal situation for our program. The tournaments provide us an opportunity to bring in some excellent competition and enable our fans to see a good tournament each year with no additional cost."

The Wildcats will host a Preseason Tip-Off Tournament November 16-17 and start an inseason tournament beginning with the 1991-92 season.

"I feel the athletics department and its programs are progressing in the proper direction," said Weber State President Stephen D. Nadauld. "I commend the athletics department in its efforts to address the fiscal problems and respond in a positive manner to get them corrected."

"Hopefully, all Wildcat fans will respond the same way and support the Wildcats even more fervently in the future," Nadauld said.

Four schools plan to start league

Three Ohio institutions—Wilmington College, Bluffton College and Defiance College—and Thomas More College in Kentucky are planning to establish a Division III conference that could start competition in the 1991-92 academic year, according to Richard Scott, director of athletics at Wilmington.

The schools are attempting to reduce the number of opponents that use athletics grants in recruiting. "We are trying to equalize our competition," Scott said. "It's very tough competing against schools that give athletics scholarships."

Directors of athletics of the four schools have scheduled an April 18 meeting to review a proposed conference constitution and bylaws. They expect to meet in May with presidents and faculty athletics representatives of the four schools to formally establish and to name the conference.

Thomas More currently is an NCAA Division III member, and the other three schools are petitioning for Division III membership.

Symposium on sports law set

Seton Hall University's seventh annual sports law symposium has been set for April 20 at the Newark, New Jersey, Gateway Hilton.

Scheduled to participate in the event is NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, who will take part in a panel discussion of television negotiations in sports; Frank Cashen, chief executive officer and general manager of the New York Mets, who will deliver the keynote address, and veteran journalist Phil Pepe, who will serve as master of ceremonies.

Open to law students, attorneys, Seton Hall alumni and practitioners, the symposium will begin at 8:30 a.m. and conclude at 2:30 p.m., according to codirector Lawrence Bershad of Seton hall.

Additional information is available from Bershad, who also will accept reservations. He may be reached at 201/642-8810.

Sixty-seven Division I institutions count indoor track and outdoor track as separate sports in order to meet the minimum sponsorship requirement for Division I membership (or for Division I-A classification).

Of the 67, 59 count them separately for either men or women (one for men, 58 for women). Eight institutions count them separately for both men and women. Of the 67, 25 are Division I-A institutions, 32 are in I-AA and 10 are I-AAA members.

Regents want programs at UNLV, Nevada-Reno to be 'squeaky clean'

New policies are being drawn to tighten the regulation of intercollegiate athletics at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and the University of Nevada, Reno.

A committee on athletics policy of the University of Nevada Board of Regents has been writing the rules and will hold another meeting this month in Las Vegas.

Regent Daniel Klaich, a member of the committee, said one recommendation is to have a compliance officer in the office of the president at each university to assure that the programs at both schools comply with NCAA and Big Sky Conference and Big West Conference policies, United Press International reported.

Klaich said basketball, especially at UNLV, has been a high profile program and "this is an honest attempt on our part to be as squeaky clean as we can be."

The other two major points, according to Klaich, would require that the director of athletics could not be a coach and that all coaches would have to report their personal income annually to the school.

At the University of Nevada, Reno, Chris Ault, director of athletics, is also the football coach. The committee, said Klaich, is not recommending Ault give up one of his jobs. But when a vacancy occurs, the two jobs should be held separately.

The committee, headed by Dr. Lonnie Hammargren of Las Vegas, will forward its recommendations to the full board of regents. But Klaich said it will talk first with directors of athletics on both campuses to see what, if any, objections they have.

The compliance officer at both UNLV and Nevada-Reno would concentrate on booster organizations, making sure they did not overstep the rules in contributions and relations with top athletes.

There is a draft policy on the responsibilities of student-athletes, which says they must comply with drug, alcohol and gambling laws. It prohibits them from being in Nevada casinos if they are under 21 years old and forbids taking part in any gambling activity that involves intercollegiate sports.

And the proposed regulations include the guidelines for tradeout agreements between the department of athletics and businesses or individuals involving advertising, tickets, club memberships and sponsorships.

Title game gets high TV rating

UNLV's victory over Duke in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship final was the fourth most-watched college basketball game in history, according to Nielsen ratings.

The game received a 20 rating and 31 share, according to overnight ratings, making it the 11th highest-rated college basketball game ever. UNLV's 103-73 victory over Duke was watched in an average 18.4 million homes.

The ratings went up steadily until the game's final moments, even though the game turned into a rout.

From 9 p.m. until 9:30, the game got a 18 rating and a 28 share. For the next half hour, it got a 20.7 rating and a 31 share; from 10 p.m. until 10:30 p.m., it got a 21 rating and a 32 share.

The game's highest rating was from 10:30 p.m. until 11 p.m., a 21.2 rating with a 33 share. The final 12 minutes got a 17.9 rating and a 31 share.

A rating point represents the percentage of televisions tuned to the game and the share is the percentage of televisions on at the time.

Sportsmanship award goes to Brooklyn

For the second time in the past three years, the Brooklyn College men's basketball team has received the Sam Schoenfeld Sportsmanship Award from the College Basketball Officials Association for sportsmanship among its players, coaches, administrators and fans.

The officials' association singled out Brooklyn College from more than 230 institutions. The 600-plus college basketball officials cited the Kingsmen's program as one that best exemplifies the true spirit of sportsmanship. Brooklyn also won the award in 1984 and 1988.

Coach Mark Reiner, who is retiring, is no stranger to the award. His teams at Carnarsie High School also won the award twice. "My staff and I take pride in instilling sportsmanship in our teams," Reiner said.

Bucklew proves himself to be a straight shooter

West Virginia University President Neil S. Bucklew recently got a taste of what Mountaineer shooters have experienced on the firing line. He was pitted against three members of the school's athletics department in a friendly "shootin' match."

After some coaching by Marsha Beasley, who last month led the 1990 Mountaineers to the school's third straight NCAA team title, Bucklew squared off against athletics director Ed Pastilong, assistant athletics director Mike Parsons, and Kevin Keys, publications director.

Bucklew won the match. "The positioning was a little different than I've done with other types of shooting before," he told The Daily Athenaeum, West Virginia's campus newspaper. "It was a little harder than I thought."

"It was fun," said Pastilong, who finished second. "It was more difficult than I thought. The targets were smaller than I anticipated. I can see how this would be challenging."

Parsons and Keys tied for third.

Ever hear of a pitcher striking out five batters in the same inning?

That happened recently in a contest between the U.S. Air Force Academy and Rhodes College, according to the April 6, 1990, issue of Collegiate Baseball.

After six Air Force pitchers had combined for six no-hit innings against Rhodes, Falcon Mike Wollet entered the game. He walked the first batter he faced, then recorded three consecutive Ks.

However, strike three to one of the batters was a wild pitch that rolled away from the catcher as the batter reached first base.

Wollet then gave up a single, ending his team's bid for a no-hitter. He fanned the next Rhodes player, but the catcher dropped the third strike and made a throwing error to first base.

Athletes honored for academic achievements

More Report Cards: King's College's (Pennsylvania) top three men's tennis players also rank among the highest classroom achievers around. Jerry Benz, a junior, has a 3.800 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in mathematics and premedicine. Another junior, Scott Rauscher, has a 3.500 GPA in English and communications. Senior Don Buzinkai, who also is student-body president, boasts a 3.860 in accounting.

Ninety-two student-athletes from Jersey Nine Athletic Association members have been honored by the league with selection to its fall/winter all-student-athlete team. Those named have maintained a GPA of at least 3.300.

Sixty Alfred University student-athletes were named to the dean's list for the fall semester after earning grade-point averages of at least 3.300 (4.000 scale).

Kent State University student-athletes Kim Henzler and Eric Glenn have been honored with the Merle E. Wagoner Award for 1989-90, which is based in part on academic performance. Henzler has a cumulative GPA of 3.230 in elementary education, Glenn a 3.500 in industrial engineering.

Leading the Big Eight Conference's 1989-90 all-academic swimming teams are William Ragatz of Iowa State University (3.900 GPA in business) and Barb Pranger of the University of Kansas (4.000 in physical therapy). Fifty student-athletes (18 men and 32 women) were named to the teams.

Wollet finally struck out a fifth Rhodes player, getting the half-inning's final out and earning a spot in the record book with five Ks in the same inning. The previous mark (four) was set last season when the University of Hawaii played Colorado State University.

Sally Burks, program director for the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), has announced a May 31-June 1 conference to be held in Kansas City. "Higher Education, Athletics and Alumni" will be held at the Westin Crown Center Hotel and will be chaired by Debbie Yow, assistant served as SID at the school for 35 years.

Two regional coaching symposiums will be held next month by the U.S. Soccer Federation. One is set for May 10-12 in Plano Texas, the other for May 17-19 in Somerset, New Jersey. More information is available from Peg McClure at the federation (telephone 719/578-8300).

Former University of Delaware athletics director David M. Nelson has donated to the school his collection of personal papers, which includes quite a bit of material Nelson has accumulated as secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee.

"Sports history is a growing field, and this collection will support research by cultural and social historians into every aspect of 20th century American college football."

Illinois State University is sponjunior, she carries a 4.000 GPA in history.

Scott Baker, assistant baseball coach at Georgia Southern College, says that 30 of the 38 Eagle players who have completed eligibility since 1984 have graduated. Four others, all of whom signed professional contracts after their junior seasons, are continuing work toward their degrees. Among the 30 graduates is Darin Van Tassel, who earned an NCAA postgraduate scholarship. Following in his footsteps are current Eagles Peter Bouma (3.600 GPA in physics) and Jeff Coughlin 3.410 in mathematics.

During the fall semester, a record 40 Emory University student-athletes were named to the dean's list after earning GPAs of at least 3.310. Seven of the 40 earned 4.000s.

St. Bonaventure University officials recently announced that 76 of the school's 276 student-athletes currently are maintaining GPAs of at least 3.000—in fact, their combined GPA is 3.340.

Eight student-athletes will be honored May 1 by California State University, Northridge, during the ninth annual Varsity "N" Club Honor Roll Dinner. Those to be recognized have maintained cumulative GPAs of at least 3.200 while playing at least two seasons at the school.

Six members of the 1990 women's volleyball team at Guilford College, which will compete for the first time next fall as a member of Division III, have cumulative GPAs of at least 3.300.

Calvin College staff and students recently raised in excess of $1,700 for Special Olympics with a "Lift-America" fund-raiser. This is the second year Calvin has sponsored the weight-lifting event.

For the third time since 1986, Alfred University's men's soccer team finished first among the clubs and organizations that participated in the school's annual telethon. Last fall, men's soccer players raised $6,030 for the telethon through their on-the-phone efforts.

"The players know that the money they raise goes to university financial aid," said coach Steve Allison. "They know that the money raised from the telethon may help future students, one of their friends, future soccer players, or, possibly, even themselves or one of their teammates."

Kari McCallum has been turning up all over the place at the University of San Francisco. Most importantly, in class.

The sophomore from Seattle, Washington, carries a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale) with a double major of psychology and religion.

McCallum also has been active in athletics—to say the least.

She played basketball as a freshman. Soccer and cross country took up much of her free time this fall. McCallum started all 19 soccer games as a midfielder and, when her schedule permitted, paced the women's cross country team. She was the school's top finisher (and eighth overall) at the West Coast Conference championships.

Now, she's playing tennis—No. 4 singles and No. 2 doubles. She passed on basketball this year to have a little time with her family.

USF sports information office says McCallum might be a little disappointed the school doesn't sponsor football. Seems she was the placekicker for Seattle's Roosevelt High School.

Her brothers, John and Gregg, preceded her at Roosevelt and now handle the kicking chores at the University of Washington and the University of Oregon, respectively.

Coaching milestones: University of Delaware men's tennis coach C. Roy "Doc" Rylander earned career victory No. 300 March 27 when his team defeated the University of Tampa, 9-0.

Dale Ramsburg, in his 23rd season as baseball coach at West Virginia University, earned career victory No. 400 March 17 when his Mountaineers defeated Kent State University, 11-10. Known around campus as "Rammer," the 1964 WVU graduate has recorded more victories than any WVU coach—in any sport—in history.

Drexel University men's basketball player Todd Lehmann recently was honored by the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Association, which presented the senior from Riverside, New Jersey, with the 1990 Bud Light-NIT National Assist Leader Trophy. Lehman piled up 260 assists in 28 games, a 9.3 average.

Lehmann, who will graduate next month with a degree in marketing, played in all 112 Drexel games during his career, starting the last 102.

Soviet Sergei Beloglazov, six-time world champion and two-time Olympic titlist, will be a featured instructor at Lehigh University's annual wrestling clinic, which will take place in July. Additional information on the clinic is available from Lehigh head coach Tom Hutchinson (telephone 215/758-4304).

Several high school wrestling rules changes have been announced by the National Federation of State High School Associations, whose published rules for the sport are followed in competition involving almost a quarter-million prep athletes representing more than 8,000 secondary schools in the U.S.

Information regarding the changes is available from National Federation Publications/Communications Director Bruce Howard (telephone 816/464-5400).

Trivia Answer: Nineteen. Ed Bane of Arizona State University struck out 19 University of Denver batters June 1, 1973, in the Division I baseball tournament. Ten days later, Bane also picked up the College World Series record for strikeouts in a nine-inning game when he fanned 17 University of Oklahoma players.

Museum visitors will get chance to 'compete' in Olympics

An Olympic version of Disneyland is being built on the shores of Lake Geneva in Lausanne, Switzerland. Supporters say it will only add to the glory of the Games, but others argue that part of that vision is Mickey Mouse.

The Olympic Museum, a sprawling $30 million project, will finally give the International Olympic Committee enough space to display warehouses full of memorabilia and chronicle the Games from ancient Greece to today.

Using videotapes, computers and other highest state-of-the-art technology, it also will give the average fan a chance to sample the flavor of being an Olympic athlete, the Associated Press reported.

"It will not be a museum of sport but of the Olympics, and not just the Olympic Games but the Olympic movement," said Raymond Gafner, the IOC's former administrator who is in charge of the museum project.

Concrete is just being poured at the site, where enough dirt was dug out to fill 10,000 dump trucks. The exterior should be finished by 1991, with another year or so to do the interior work. The grand opening is set for late 1993, just before the IOC's 100th birthday.

With corporate donations paying for most of the development, the IOC is concentrating on what the museum will show and how it will show it.

The design by architects Pedro Ramirez Vasquez, and IOC member from Mexico, and Jean-Pierre Cahen provides 2,500 square meters, and the committee has hundreds of thousands of exhibitions from which to choose.

Gafner and Jean-Francois Pahud, the museum director, said the IOC aimed at building "the museum of the 21st century," which will do more than just have artifacts in display cases and articles in a hushed library.

"It will be something like Disneyland," Gafner said. "It will be a participation museum. So often, people come to a museum and automatically think, 'Do not disturb.' Well, we will disturb."

While details have to be worked out, Pahud said this "theme park" could allow visitors using simulators to get the feel of settling into starting blocks for an Olympic 100-meter dash or starting down the 90-meter hill at the ski jumps of the Winter Games.

He also would like to include exhibits that do more than simulate—a soccer ball to be kicked into a goal or a high hurdle to be jumped over.

"We want to show visitors how difficult it can be to walk along a balance beam or sink a basket," Pahud said. "It is not as easy as it looks on TV."

Gafner said the IOC also was looking for ways in which each visitor would, in effect, create his or her own museum. By using computer databanks, videotapes and other electronics, a visitor could choose an athlete, an event or an entire Olympic Games to study, then plot a route to those exhibitions and obtain information from birth-date to personal bests.

"We also want to look into the possibility of allowing the visitor to take away this information—press a button and it would be printed," Pahud said. "The video cassettes they watch would also be for sale."

This will be IOC's fourth—and by-far largest—museum in Lausanne, its headquarters.

Pierre de Coubertin, the French baron who founded the committee and revived the Games a century ago, was a pack rat who kept everything he could find relating to the Olympics.

"It was not a professional museum—when the baron received something, he'd just put a label on it," Pahud said. "The inventory was not professionally done, the collection was not complete and no one tried to update the collection."

After occupying two sites in Lausanne, the museum was closed when the IOC moved to Chateau de Vidy, a manor house by the lake, in 1969. De Coubertin's collections—and thousands of other items were packed away in boxes until the present museum opened in a townhouse in the middle of Lausanne in 1982.

"In '82, we started opening the boxes. We are still doing that," Pahud said. He estimated that the IOC collection numbered "many hundreds of thousands" of items, from de Coubertin's desk to torches that carried the flame into each of the Summer and Winter Games.

The museum now has room for only a handful of exhibitions and even the new building won't show them all. Just what will be shown is a matter of debate.

Ramirez Vasquez wants the museum to emphasize "the positive"—the glory of winning, not the drug scandals, political boycotts and other intrusions of the real world that have accompanied the growth of the Games in the last three decades.

"It will not present the sensationalist or yellow (but) present the transcendence of the Olympic Games at their best, showing the creativity of mankind, not his worst actions, not his negativity," Ramirez Vasquez said.

He seemed most sensitive about the events surrounding the 1968 Games in Mexico City, where he was interviewed. Three days before the opening ceremonies, troops opened fire on students demonstrating against massive government spending on Olympic projects. The official death toll was 37, although students say as many as 300 were killed.

Pahud said he disagreed with Ramirez Vasquez on this, one of the few points where differences have developed in the project.

Mentioning cases such as the Mexico City violence, the killing of Israeli athletes and coaches at Munich in 1972 and even the steroid used by sprinter Ben Johnson in Seoul were important for establishing the museum's credibility, the director told the AP.

"The concept of (Ramirez Vasquez) would be to eliminate these unlovely parts. But I think to be accepted, we must have these unlovely parts," Pahud said. "It must not be a main part, but it must not be forgotten."

The IOC said the role these "unlovely parts" would play in the new museum was far from being decided. They will not be carted away in boxes like de Coubertin's old dustcatchers, though, the committee said.

"It's not our intention to scrub it. It's part of our history—it happened," Michele Verdier, the IOC spokeswoman, said. "But it is a question of how it will be presented."

Congressman seeks new steroid penalties

Rep. Bill Hughes, D-New Jersey, says he plans to introduce legislation in the U.S. House that would impose criminal sanctions on coaches who persuade their athletes to use steroids or who ignore such use. His measure would also reclassify anabolic steroids as a controlled substance to help curtail illegal trafficking in steroids.

Rep. Hughes outlined his proposals at a hearing of the House Subcommittee on Crime, which is conducting a series of hearings into the steroid-abuse problem.

"The adolescent years are a time of insecurity when many youngsters look for role models to emulate," said Hughes, who chairs the subcommittee on crime. "Many of these roles models turn out to be high school and college coaches. They exert tremendous influence over these youngsters in helping to shape their physical development as well as their sense of values and ethics."

"I realize that coaches are under tremendous pressure to win at all levels of sports and that the big money of professional sports is a strong motivating influence for many athletes," he continued. "But that's no excuse for coaches or athletes to cheat or, more importantly, to risk their lives for the short-term benefits of performance-enhancing substances."

Hughes noted that previous witnesses before the crime subcommittee have estimated that some one million Americans, perhaps half of them teen-agers, use steroids illegally. He said we have to do a better job of educating parents, teachers, coaches and teammates to detect signs of steroid use and to discourage this practice. Coaches who actively condone steroid use ought to face jail sentences, he added.

In 1988, Congress enacted legislation written by Hughes that made distribution of steroids without a prescription a Federal felony punishable by up to six years' imprisonment.

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee:

Gambling

1. Printing of point-spread information in institutional publications. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 12.01.2 (line of demarcation) and agreed that under this legislation, it would not be permissible for a member institution to publish in its game program an advertisement that provides specific point-spread information regarding professional sports contests.

Eligibility

2. Prospective student-athlete declared ineligible for recruiting violations. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.2.2(g) and agreed that a member institution may pay the fees for a prospective student-athlete to receive legal counsel when the prospect is involved in an appeal of an NCAA Eligibility Committee decision, provided the student-athlete either has signed a letter of intent with the institution, or (if the institution is not a subscribing member of the National Letter of Intent program) the student-athlete has been accepted for enrollment by that institution, and has provided written confirmation of his or her intent to enroll at the institution.

Conference No. 4 March 13, 1990

Transfer eligibility

3. Nonsponsored-sport exception for student-athlete who practiced at previous institution (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 14.6.2(f) and 14.6.5.3.6-(c), and agreed that a student-athlete who transferred from a member institution after participating in practice sessions at the institution but prior to attending any classes still would be considered to have "attended" that institution for purposes of this legislation; accordingly, the student-athlete, who now wishes to transfer from his second institution (which does not sponsor his sport on the intercollegiate level), would not be eligible under the nonsponsored-sport waiver provision for competition at a third NCAA member institution.

Recruiting

4. Dead periods for midyear junior college transfers. Agreed that the provisions of Bylaws 13.1.3.5-(e) and 13.02.4.4 (dead periods surrounding midyear junior college prospective student-athletes' signing of the National Letter of Intent) would apply to those dead periods applicable to the National Letter of Intent signing dates for midyear junior college transfer students; however, this restriction would be applicable to all junior college prospects and their educational institutions (and not to the recruitment of other prospective student-athletes); requested that the NCAA Special Committee to Review Relationships with Two-Year Colleges give its reaction regarding this interpretation to the Interpretations Committee.

Transfer

5. One-time transfer exception for midyear transfer (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 14.6.5.1 and 14.6.5.3.10, and a previous NCAA Administrative Committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 1-p of the minutes of the committee's February 27, 1986, conference), and affirmed that a student-athlete would not be eligible upon transfer at midyear from one Division I institution to another (if the student-athlete was receiving athletically related financial aid that was available during the remainder of the academic year), even though the original institution erroneously advised the student-athlete that she would be immediately eligible; noted that the transfer occurred prior to the actual cancellation of the student-athlete's financial aid; further, noted that the provisions of Bylaw 14.6.5.3.10 (one-time transfer exception) have been amended effective in the fall 1990 and that the renewal of financial aid then no longer will be a factor in regard to the application of this rule.

Evaluation

6. Goodwill Games (Divisions I and II). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.3 (recruiting calendars) and a previous committee interpretation (reference: Item No. 9 of the minutes of the committee's July 1, 1987, conference), and determined that the restrictions on basketball evaluations could not be waived to permit a member institution's coaches to attend the 1990 Goodwill Games in Seattle, Washington, inasmuch as such waivers have been applied (consistently with similar exceptions to NCAA rules) only to the Olympic, Pan American and World University Games.

Denver wants another Final Four

Final Four organizers in Denver have called the Final Four an unqualified success for the city's businesses and image.

Praise was so glowing that it appeared the only ones unsatisfied were the losing teams and fans who couldn't get a ticket or had to pay as much as $3,000 for a seat to see UNLV defeat Duke in the championship final, United Press International reported.

Organizers hope the NCAA might select Denver for another Final Four, although limited seating capacity (17,000) at McNichols Sports Arena is a drawback.

"From the reports we've gotten from the NCAA and everyone involved, it was a tremendous success," said Roger Kinney, head of the Denver organizing committee. "We had some really nice compliments from the NCAA people."

The next three Final Fours will be in domes (Indianapolis, Minneapolis, New Orleans). However, the 1994 (Charlotte, North Carolina)

It appears city's businesses will realize at least $25 million from Final Four visitors and 1996 (East Rutherford, New Jersey) venues will be at arenas that hold only several thousand more spectators than McNichols does.

"I think there's a strong group of important people within the NCAA and among college coaches in the country who feel the Final Four should be played in a true basketball facility," Kinney said. "So I don't think the door is completely closed for a Final Four down the road in Denver."

Kinney said the city's support—even though few Denver residents had tickets—was evident at the March 30 practices. More than 30,000 fans flooded McNichols to see Arkansas, Duke, Georgia Tech and UNLV work out.

Kinney said it appears Denver's businesses will realize at least $25 million from Final Four visitors. The tally could be much higher

City donates land for home planned for injured player

The Oxford, Mississippi, Board of Aldermen has voted to donate land for a home to be built for paralyzed University of Mississippi football player Chuckie Mullins.

Mullins, who is undergoing therapy at a Birmingham, Alabama, hospital, has said he would like to return to Oxford to complete his degree. City Planner Ben Smith approached the city board about donating the land to Mullins, who should be released from the hospital this spring or summer.

The aldermen unanimously approved an order that calls for city-owned land, if it is needed, to be donated to the Ole Miss Foundation. The foundation is administering a trust fund to pay for Mullins' long-term care.

Mullins was a redshirt freshman on the Ole Miss football team when he was severely injured in an October game against Vanderbilt.

because of the ripple effect of tourist dollars.

Hotels, restaurants and bars in downtown Denver were swamped with customers during the tournament. Some restaurants and bars reported business 350 percent above normal.

"Monday night (April 3), tips were half again as good as New Year's Eve," said bartender Randy Starr.

Top scholar-athlete in each division honored by men's basketball coaches

University of Georgia center/forward Alec Kessler has been named the first Division I recipient of the Champion Scholar-Athlete Award as selected by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Phillip Hutcheson of David Lipscomb University, the all-time scoring leader in college basketball with 4,106 points, is the Division II winner, and Jason Qua, a forward for Clark University (Massachusetts), earned the Division III award.

The awards and postgraduate scholarships, given for outstanding athletics and academic achievement, were presented April 1 at the annual NABC awards dinner at the Denver Convention Center.

Kessler, who maintains a 3.930 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in microbiology and has been accepted at Johns Hopkins Medical School, was the Jefferson Pilot SEC player of the year this season. A four-time academic all-SEC pick, he averaged 21 points and 10.4 rebounds for the Bulldogs.

A three-time NABC Division II first-team all-America and one of only three players to earn National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics all-America recognition for four seasons, Hutcheson also is a model student. The 6-8 senior has a 4.000 GPA with a double major in political science and speech communications.

Qua, a two-time NABC Division III all-America, has a 3.060 GPA as a international development major. The 6-5 senior forward averaged 22.6 points and 9.2 rebounds this season and was named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference New England Division III first team.

"Champion is pleased to present awards that emphasize the most positive aspects of college basketball. We feel that this program accentuates the high level of the curriculum-support programs offered to student-athletes," said A. J. "Skip" Paridon, Champion vice-president and general manager.

"We also feel that the postgraduate aspect of the award is vital and affords these players the opportunity to continue their education in an advanced degree program," Paridon said.
