Three hearings set June 14 on revenue distribution report

Hearings at three locations have been scheduled for June 14 for the NCAA membership to comment on the preliminary concepts developed by the Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues.

The special committee presented its preliminary recommendations during the Executive Committee's May 7-8 meeting in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The hearings will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Stouffers Concourse Hotel in Arlington, Virginia; the O'Hare Marriott in Chicago, and the Airport Hilton Hotel in San Francisco.

Two to four members of the special advisory committee will attend each hearing, and the entire committee will meet June 18 to complete its recommendations and submit them to the Budget Subcommittee at its July 10-11 meeting.

The special advisory committee is chaired by Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics at the University of California, San Diego, and NCAA secretary-treasurer.

Some members of the special committee also will attend the annual convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics June 10-13 on Marco Island, Florida, to receive comments on the committee's recommendations.

A listing of the preliminary recommendations will be published in the next issue of The NCAA News.

NCAA members who plan to attend the hearings and who plan to reserve sleeping rooms are advised that all hotels will observe a two-week cutoff and the last day to make reservations is May 30. However, the hearings have been scheduled to allow attendees to arrive and leave the same day if they wish.

Following are hotel addresses and telephone numbers:

Stouffers Concourse Hotel at National Airport, 2399 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Virginia; telephone 703/418-6800. The hearing will be held in the Decatur and Farragut Rooms.

Deadline for legislative proposals for '91 NCAA Convention is July 1

Time already is running out for those interested in developing proposals for the 1991 NCAA Convention, due to a revised legislative calendar that has a July 1 deadline for submissions by the membership.

"Missing the filing deadline has been one of the most frequent pitfalls encountered by participants in the legislative process," said Daniel T. Dutcher, NCAA legislative assistant, who annually is involved in the preparation of proposed legislation for the Convention.

"This year, it is especially important for the membership to be aware of the deadline, since it is four months earlier than it has been." Under the new legislative calendar, membership-sponsored proposals must be submitted by July 1, and proposals sponsored by the NCAA Presidents Commission or the NCAA Council must be submitted by August 15.

"Technology is on our side, at least," Dutcher said. "Fax machines make it possible to file legislation very quickly, right up to the deadline." The telephone number for Fax submissions is 913/339-0032. "And Fax submissions are acceptable," Dutcher added, "provided they meet form requirements."

Just sign here

Dutcher said the most important elements of that form are the signatures of the required number of sponsors. "Insufficient sponsorship and incorrect sponsorship are the other most common errors we find in legislative submissions."

"This year, eight sponsors are required for proposals from the membership," Dutcher continued, "up from the six-sponsor requirement that had been in effect. And those submitting legislation must include the name of a contact person who can be reached to answer questions or provide additional information about a proposal."

Dutcher said those who are not sure whether they have sufficient sponsorship for a proposal should contact the Association's legislative services department before filing proposed legislation. "We will be happy to provide any help we can to facilitate the filing process," he explained.

Dutcher added that the most common reason a proposal is classified as having incorrect sponsorship comes from inappropriate signa-

Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act amended, moves to House Committee

The Postsecondary Education Subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives favorably reported to the full Committee on Education and Labor May 15 an amended version of the Student-Athlete Right-to-Know Act (H.R. 1454).

The bill, originally sponsored by Reps. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, and Ed Towns, D-New York, would require public reporting of student-athlete graduation rates; but the amended bill differs from the Senate version of the act, adopted in early February, in several ways.

Perhaps the most significant difference is a provision requiring all institutions offering "athletics scholarships" annually to report, on a per-sport basis, revenues and direct expenses of intercollegiate athletics programs and activities. This provision, drawn from a bill (H.R. 4232) sponsored by Rep. Paul Henry, D-Michigan, is not in the Senate bill, according to Michael Scott of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C.

The Henry amendment requires that each year, on a form prescribed by the Secretary of Education, institutions must report total revenues, revenues by sport, total expenditures and direct expenditures by sport derived from the athletics department and from athletics activities; institutions also must annually report their total revenues and expenditures. The bill further requires the secretary to collect and compile the reported data and make it "readily available for public inspection and copying."

The NCAA opposed the Henry proposal, essentially because no hearings had been held to determine

NCAA awards postgraduate scholarships to ethnic minorities

The NCAA has awarded postgraduate scholarships through the ethnic minority enhancement program for the third year. The program reaches ethnic minority graduates who have been accepted into an NCAA member institution's sports administration program or a related program that will assist the applicant in obtaining a career in athletics.

Recipients must express an interest in preparing for a professional career in administration of intercollegiate athletics. The scholarships are for one year only and are valued at $6,000.

The enhancement program, established in 1987 following a recommendation of the NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review Minority Opportunities in Intercollegiate Athletics, is aimed at creating more and better opportunities for ethnic minorities in coaching, athletics administration and officiating.

The subcommittee has announced the following individuals (with institution awarding undergraduate degree and, if different, institution where postgraduate scholarship will be used) as recipients of the scholarships:

Dawnyea M. Crider (Indiana State University)—Crider received a bachelor of science degree in marketing in December 1989 and is working toward a master's degree in sports administration. A participant in track and field in high school and college, Crider wants to coach track and field and eventually become a director of athletics.

Marianne T. Dait (Bryn Mawr College, Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine)—Dait will receive a bachelor's degree in chemistry May 20. She will pursue a doctor of osteopathy degree with an emphasis in sports medicine. She is a former student-athlete and wishes to use her knowledge of athletics and specialize in sports medicine upon graduation.

Eric R. Fleming (Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dartmouth College)—Fleming received a bachelor of science degree in economics in 1984 and will be pursuing a master's in business administration. He currently is an assistant director for intercollegiate administration at Yale University. He wants to pursue a career as a director or associate director of athletics.

Antonio S. Franklin (University of New Mexico)—Franklin received a bachelor of science degree in physical education. After receiving numerous honors for his undergraduate work, Franklin will pursue a master's degree in sports administration.

D'Andrea K. Giddens (Spelman College, Louisiana State University)—Giddens will receive a bachelor's degree in economics and health and physical education May 20. She will pursue a master's degree in exercise physiology and wants to be

11 of 1,819 athletes tested ruled ineligible in NCAA fall drug tests

As a result of NCAA drug testing involving 1,819 student-athletes at 1989 fall championships and last season's postseason football bowl games, eleven student-athletes tested positive for 12 banned substances and were declared ineligible for further competition.

The rate of positive tests resulting in ineligibility was 0.7 percent. In addition, one student-athlete was ruled ineligible for failure to appear for a scheduled, on-campus test before a bowl game.

In the fall of 1988, the ineligibility rate was 0.8 percent (13 positive tests), and in the fall of 1987, 1.3 percent (20 positive tests).

During the 1989 fall championships, 1,488 members of football teams bound for the 18 postseason bowls and 331 student-athletes in eight championships were tested.

Before the postseason bowl games, seven positive tests for anabolic steroids resulted in ineligibility: five for nandrolone, one for methyltestosterone and one for methandienone. In addition, one student-athlete was ruled ineligible for showing a testosterone/epi-testosterone ratio greater than six to one.

Three positive tests for cocaine resulted in ineligibility. All resulted from on-campus, prebowl tests.

One student-athlete in the Division III Football Championship also tested positive for nandrolone.

Four other student-athletes—all members of bowl-bound football teams—tested positive for banned substances but did not lose eligibility. One showed an excessive testosterone/epi-testosterone ratio but was not ruled ineligible pending the results of follow-up, short-notice testing, while the other three tested positive for diuretics but were able to document medical justification.

The number of positive tests not resulting in a loss of eligibility is down significantly from last year, due to the removal of sympathomimetic amines from the banned-drugs list. In the fall of 1988, 57 student-athletes retained eligibility after testing positive for 59 banned substances, including 49 positive tests for

Ivy League's competitiveness to be discussed

A symposium, moderated by Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive director of the Ivy Group Council of Presidents, will examine the Ivy League's ability to compete successfully at the NCAA Division I level, with special reference to the University of Pennsylvania's role and future, May 17 in the university's law school.

The panel will consist of Paul Zingg, dean of the liberal arts school at St. Mary's College (California); Anthony "Skip" Minisi, senior partner in a Philadelphia law firm and an all-America football player at Penn in the 1940s, and Kathy Lawlor-Gilbert, head men's and women's swimming coach at Penn.

In the NCAA drug-testing program, student-athletes are required to sign a statement of drug-testing consent before they can be certified as eligible for postseason competition by the institution. All participants in NCAA fall championships were subject to drug testing, although testing was not conducted at all postseason events.

The accompanying chart provides drug-testing results for those postseason events at which drug testing was conducted.

tures. "NCAA legislation mandates that proposals be signed by the CEO of each sponsoring institution," he noted.

"In the case of a proposal coming from a conference, the submission must be signed by the CEO of the conference on behalf of at least eight members interested in sponsoring the proposal."

Dutcher noted that CEOs have the option of designating some other institutional staff member to sign proposed amendments. "All a CEO has to do is notify the national office in writing of the person who will be handling these duties," he said. "And that may be done any time prior to filing—right up to the deadline."

"Obviously," he added, "CEOs are involved closely with the NCAA legislative process. For that reason, I would encourage staff at member institutions to contact their CEOs early on with their thoughts on legislation that should be proposed."

Now is not too soon."

Another important change in the legislative-filing process relates to the required statements of intent and rationale, according to Dutcher.

"We always have required sponsors to include with their submissions a description of the intent of the proposed legislation," he explained. "But this year, those statements also must include the rationale for the proposal. For the first time, sponsors are being asked to explain not only what they intend the proposal to do, but also why they believe the change is needed."

So for the first time, a separate statement of rationale will be required and will be limited in length. "The legislation establishing the new legislative calendar included language limiting the statements to 200 words," Dutcher noted. "It is especially important, then, for sponsors to be as clear as they can regarding the content of the legislation they are proposing."

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office, no later than June 12, 1990.

Men's and Women's Swimming Committee: Replacement for Gerald Lowrey, Emory University, resigned from Emory to accept a position at a Division I institution. Appointee must be a Division III representative of men's swimming.

Women's Basketball Rules Committee: Replacement for Rose Peeples, Loras College, who resigned from her institution. Appointee must be a Division III women's basketball representative. Because of a change in affiliation by another committee member, this now is an at-large position.

Wrestling Committee: Replacement for Myron Roderick, resigned from Oklahoma State University. Appointee must be a representative of Division I wrestling.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 20

NCAA Bylaw 15.3.1.3—institutional financial aid to professional athletes

Member institutions should note that it is not permissible to award institutional financial aid to a student-athlete who is under contract to or currently receiving compensation from a professional sports organization. In accordance with Bylaw 15.3.1.4.1, a former professional athlete may receive institutional financial aid, provided the following conditions are met: (1) The student-athlete no longer is involved in professional athletics; (2) the student-athlete is not receiving any remuneration from a professional sports organization, and (3) the student-athlete has no active contractual relationship with any professional athletics team, although the student-athlete may remain bound by an option clause (i.e., a clause in the contract that requires assignment to a particular team if the student-athlete's professional athletics career is resumed). If the student-athlete later becomes involved in professional athletics while still a student-athlete with eligibility remaining, the individual would be considered to have violated the principles of ethical conduct per Bylaw 10, thus rendering the individual ineligible for intercollegiate competition.

In addition, per Bylaw 15.3.1.4.2, an institution is required to adjust the grant-in-aid of a student-athlete who receives a bonus, salary or other compensation during the academic year (or thereafter) for participation in an athletics event, so that the total amount from such sources, when coupled with institutional financial aid, does not exceed the value of a full grant-in-aid for the balance of the academic year. If the income from such sources equals or exceeds the value of a full grant, the institution must terminate all institutional financial aid. Payments credited to a student-athlete's account that are not refundable need not become the student's obligation.

NCAA Bylaws 17.19.2 and 17.19.3—1990 Convention Proposal No. 100/women's volleyball

Member institutions in all divisions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 100 at the 1990 NCAA Convention, a member institution shall not commence official preseason volleyball practice sessions in the traditional segment for the varsity, junior varsity or freshman team prior to the following dates:

1. Traditional segment for all divisions: The date that will permit a maximum of 29 practice opportunities prior to the institution's first scheduled intercollegiate date of competition.

2. Nontraditional segment for all divisions: January 1.

In computing the number of practice opportunities in the sport of women's volleyball, Sundays are excluded from counting; but otherwise, one practice opportunity shall be counted for each day beginning with the opening of classes, one practice opportunity for each day classes are not in session in the week of the first scheduled intercollegiate match and two practice opportunities for each other day in the preseason practice period. The week of the first scheduled intercollegiate match is defined as the six days, excluding Sunday, preceding the date of competition (even if several of the days fall into different traditional calendar weeks). In this regard, an institution's required freshman orientation program is not considered to be the opening day of classes for the academic year.

In accordance with Convention Proposal No. 100, the first permissible date of competition during the traditional segment shall be September 1 (or the preceding Friday if September 1 falls on a Saturday or Sunday). In the nontraditional segment, the first permissible date of competition shall be January 1.

The following example assumes that the institution's first contest is scheduled for Saturday, September 8, 1990, and the institution's first day of classes is Tuesday, September 4, 1990.

Thursday, August 16: Participants may report for evening meal (no volleyball-related activities).

Friday, August 17: Medical examinations (if needed) and issuance of equipment to team members, and "picture day."

Saturday, August 18: First day of practice.

Sunday, August 19: Practice continues (optional, institutional discretion).

1990 Convention Proposal No. 88—academic awards banquet

Member institutions should note that in accordance with the adoption of Convention Proposal No. 88 (effective immediately), an institution may conduct an annual academic awards or recognition banquet or meeting to honor members of its intercollegiate athletics teams for academic achievements. The following regulations apply to such an event:

1. It is held to commemorate the academic accomplishments of individual student-athletes.

2. It is conducted by and subject to the control of the member institution.

3. It is held within 100 miles of the institution's main campus and within the same state.

4. Only one such event is held per year.

5. Any award presented to a student-athlete must conform with the restrictions set forth in Bylaw 16.1.4.1.3 ($100 limit).

6. Only the institution or representatives of its athletics interests (through the institution) may provide expenses for the event.

The academic awards banquet may be conducted in addition to the all-sports banquet at the conclusion of the academic year, the team banquet at the conclusion of the institution's season and the booster banquet prior to or during the member institution's intercollegiate season.

Lisa R. Johnson (Florida A&M University, Florida Atlantic University)—Johnson received a bachelor's degree in physical education April 28. After graduating with a master's in administration and supervision, she wants a career in sports and educational administration.

receive a bachelor's degree in physical education this month. She plans to pursue a master's in physical education with an emphasis in college counseling to achieve her goal of becoming a head women's volleyball coach and, ultimately, a director of athletics at a Division I institution.

Jennifer S. Lin (University of Alaska, Fairbanks; University of Iowa)—Lin received a bachelor of science degree in mathematics in December 1988. She will pursue master's degrees in education and sports administration with an emphasis on coaching. She currently is teaching in the Fairbanks North Star Borough School District and coaching freshman, junior varsity and varsity basketball at West Valley High School. She wants to teach her philosophy that good students make better athletes.

Corey T. Morishita (University of Arizona)—Morishita received a bachelor of science degree in mathematics and physical education in 1983. He currently is the assistant women's volleyball coach at Arizona. He plans to remain in education and athletics upon graduation.

Sudden-death overtimes recommended for ties in wrestling

The NCAA Wrestling Committee has recommended the use of sudden-death overtime to determine the winners of tournament matches that are tied after three regulation periods.

The new overtime format, adopted at the committee's annual meeting May 6-9 in Kansas City, Missouri, calls for overtime to start immediately after the third period. Both wrestlers would begin in a standing position, and the first competitor to score a point would win.

If neither competitor scores in three minutes, a 30-second tie-breaker would begin with one competitor in the offensive position and the other in the defensive position, based on a coin toss. The defensive man would win if he escapes before the tie-breaker ends; the offensive man would win if he maintains control for the full 30 seconds.

The proposal is subject to approval by the NCAA Executive Committee, which oversees playing rules that have a safety or financial impact or affect the image of the sport.

Under the current system, contestants wrestle three one-minute overtime periods; the periods are completed even if one wrestler scores. If the score is tied after the third overtime, each wrestler's performance is evaluated on a set of 12 criteria to determine a winner.

The Wrestling Committee approved the new format in response to increasing sentiment among coaches and fans that the criteria system is not a fair way to determine the better wrestler. Several key matches, including some in NCAA championships, have been decided by a one- or two-second advantage in riding time.

The committee also approved a limit on the number of injury timeouts a wrestler may take in one match. The proposed change, which is subject to Executive Committee approval, would limit each wrestler to three timeouts; there is no limit under current rules. The total injury time would remain at 90 seconds per wrestler.

The committee's intent is to discourage wrestlers from using their injury time as short rest periods.

"One of the committee's primary concerns is maintaining or improving both the quality of wrestling and the interest it holds for spectators," said Robert A. Bowlsby, committee chair and director of athletics at the University of Northern Iowa. "We believe that the changes we have recommended, particularly those relating to injury timeouts and the overtime format, will have a positive effect on the quality of the sport and fan interest."

Among other rules recommendations, the committee voted to require the coach of a wrestler suspected of having a communicable disease—such as measles or a skin condition—to provide a note from a doctor stating that the suspected condition is not communicable and will not endanger opponents. The documentation must be furnished at the weigh-in or before the meet or tournament.

The committee also recommended that the rules be rewritten to specify that all holds restricting breathing or circulation are illegal. Current rules could be interpreted to mean that a hold blocking circulation in the side of the neck is legal.

Both recommendations are subject to Executive Committee approval.

Other committee action

In other business, the committee evaluated the reports of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure and the Special Committee on Cost Reduction and discussed their potential impact on wrestling. The committee will prepare a position paper for distribution to the membership on the effect the recommendations in these reports will have on the sport.

The committee endorsed further research on weight fluctuation among wrestlers and agreed to cooperate in the replication of a study it conducted at the 1988 championships. The replication would be conducted by an independent researcher.

In addition, the committee discussed clinics scheduled for this fall as part of the NCAA officiating-improvement program. The clinics, tentatively scheduled for late September or early October at seven sites nationwide, will include a review of the NCAA rules tape, a two-hour instructional session and small-group demonstrations.

Officials will be required to attend one of the clinics in order to be selected to work an NCAA championship or qualifying tournament. The committee strongly recommends that coaches attend a session this fall; attendance by coaches will be mandatory in 1991, if approved by the Executive Committee.

Subcommittee recommendations

The Division I subcommittee took the following actions:

- Tentatively approved a new formula for determining the number of competitors from each qualifying tournament who will advance to the Division I championships. The subcommittee will test the new formula using previous years' results before issuing final approval.

- Discussed eliminating the conference-qualification format and allowing only regional qualifying. The subcommittee agreed to present this concept at the National Wrestling Coaches Association meeting this summer.

- Approved the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, as the host institution for the 1994 Division I championships, pending final negotiation of the contract and the availability of housing for student-athletes at nongaming hotels.

In separate meetings, the Divisions II and III subcommittees:

- Changed the regional alignments in both divisions to require less travel and missed class time and allow more geographical similarity at each regional.

- Recommended that both divisions be allowed to select five of their nine championships officials from outside a 500-mile radius of the site. The subcommittees are concerned that there will not be enough qualified officials available because the Division I qualifying tournaments are held the same weekend as the Divisions II and III championships.

Both of these items are subject to Executive Committee approval.

The Division II subcommittee also recommended North Dakota State University as the host institution for the 1991 championships. The Division III subcommittee recommended Olivet College as the site of the 1992 championships.

All championships-site recommendations require Executive Committee approval.

King will receive Corbett award

George S. King, director of athletics at Purdue University and former president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, has been chosen by the officers and executive committee of NACDA to receive the James J. Corbett Memorial Award.

The award is presented annually to the collegiate athletics administrator who "through the years has most typified Corbett's devotion to intercollegiate athletics and has worked unceasingly for its betterment." Corbett, a director of athletics at Louisiana State University, was in 1963 NACDA's first president. He died in 1966.

King will receive the Corbett award during NACDA's silver anniversary convention June 12 at the Marriott Resort on Marco Island, Florida.

"It's a very special thrill to win the Corbett award," King said. "The previous 23 winners have accomplished so much in collegiate athletics. It's an honor to be considered in their company."

King became Purdue's seventh athletics director in 1971 and has spent the past 19 years administering the Boilermakers' 16 intercollegiate sports. He was NACDA president in 1982-83 and is a former chair of the NCAA Men's Committee on Committees and the NCAA Post-season Football Committee (now Special Events Committee).

King is a 1950 graduate of Morris Harvey College (West Virginia) (now the University of Charleston). He holds a master's degree from West Virginia University. He was a basketball player at Morris Harvey, establishing several national offensive records, including a 31.2 career scoring average. He was named West Virginia's amateur athlete of the year twice (1949 and 1950) and played six years in the NBA with the Syracuse Nationals and Cincinnati Royals.

King coached seven Purdue basketball teams to an overall mark of 109-64, and his 1969 club was runner-up for the NCAA championship. He also spent five years as head coach at West Virginia, leading the squad to three Southern Conference titles. His overall collegiate coaching record is 223-119.

Putting sanity in athletics bound to ruffle feathers

By Frank Dolson
The Philadelphia Inquirer
Excerpted from a column

Big-time college athletics are a national disgrace. OK, so what else is new?

"It goes back to a Harvard president, 100 years ago, talking about the fact that athletics seemed to have taken over the university," Leroy Walker was saying. "A hundred years ago, and you'd think it was an article in Sports Illustrated last month.

Name-change. The major trouble areas shift. The basic problems remain unchanged. Intercollegiate athletics are running amok to the point that some football and basketball coaches now make more money, and wield more power, than college presidents.

So they set up another commission to study the problem, to search for answers, to come up with recommendations. And when they asked Walker to serve on it, he said, "Gentlemen, I've been on enough commissions. I appreciate the honor, but there are a lot of other things I can do with my time. If we cannot agree from the very outset that this 'patient' needs major surgery, if we're going to say, 'Give him two aspirins and come back at the turn of the century,' I'm going home."

The good news is, Walker remained a part of the Knight Commission. Maybe there is hope yet.

This is no official arm of the NCAA we're talking about. This is lem.

As that Harvard president said a century ago, as the Carnegie Report suggested half a century ago, as recent headlines on the nation's sports pages have made so disturbingly clear, something has to be done. There are few better equipped to take a shot at it than Walker, who has served as the U.S. Olympic track coach, president of The Athletics Congress, treasurer of the

"The public is becoming incensed. They're seeing athletes being exploited. Seeing coaches telling them they're going to make it to the pros when they know that less than one percent are going to make it."

The villains aren't only the coaches, athletics directors and those sophomoric alumni who persist in ignoring the rules. The blame, in many instances, goes right to the top.

"There's no doubt about it," Walker said, citing instances when professors hop aboard the athletics bandwagon in return for tickets to a bowl game, or the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament or the Final Four.

"How does the faculty permit a student to take the same course four times just to have enough hours to play?" Walker asked. "How does an admissions officer take in 17 out of 21 recruits that can't make the grade? Everybody has to assume this blame."

Unquestionably, one of the most important recommendations of the Knight Commission, once it gets done interviewing commissioners, athletics directors, faculty reps and coaches, will deal with the financial side of college sports. Until the TV money can be equitably distributed, there can be no sanity.

But it's not only the payoff for winning that's out of whack; it's the money boosters pour into the "foundations" that run sports at some schools, and the money some coaches stuff into their bank accounts.

"Why is it," Walker asked, "that a basketball coach who is riding on the shoulders of his team has the right to sign a major television contract, to have a shoe contract, to make all this money on the back of the institution, while the institution gets none of it, nor the athlete? What is (John) Chaney without the Temple basketball team? What is (Mike) Krzyzewski without Duke? What is Dean Smith without North Carolina?"

Good questions, all. The answers are certain to ruffle a lot of feathers, and it's about time.

The villains aren't only the coaches, athletics directors and those sophomoric alumni who persist in ignoring the rules. The blame, in many instances, goes right to the top an independent body trying to do what should have been done many decades ago: Restore some sanity to intercollegiate athletics. Anyone who thought the Presidents Commission of the NCAA could do that was being terribly naive. As part of the NCAA, it was part of the prob-

U.S. Olympic Committee and chancellor of North Carolina Central University.

He has watched with growing alarm as the athletics monster has gone out of control, as the spotlight has shifted from one campus horror story to another.

John A. Bergfeld, M.D., team doctor

"I think we've learned a lot by looking at films of injuries to see exactly what happens to that knee joint when it goes out. We've found that 60 percent of major injuries occur without anybody touching the knee."

Pat Donohoe, linebackers coach
University of Houston
Omaha World-Herald

"Coming out of college early is a bad, bad deal for the colleges and the kids.

"When players are allowed to leave early, some will take the easy way out of their situations. Instead of buckling down academically and getting their education taken care of at the same time they play football, some of them are going to get in trouble academically and quit.

"When are those kids going to go back to school and finish up when they don't make it in the pros? Probably never. They won't have the funds to finish up, and we can't help them anymore. This could become a pretty bad situation."

"My own suggestion (in resolving college athletics problems) would be to find ways to compel the NCAA to stop testing college sports as big business and wean itself away from big television contracts and bloated athletics department budgets. For only by doing so can it shore up the ethical standards of college athletics.

"How can the Association be compelled to kick its big-bucks addiction? I submit that if the press showed a widespread determination to probe college athletics—and I think the fruits of those investigations would be easy to come by—the NCAA, university officials and other concerned about educational values would be forced to do something to purge the hypocrisy from the present system.

"David Berst, the NCAA's chief enforcement officer, says that, for his part, he would welcome more diligent press examination of the practices of college athletics departments. At the same time, he believes that (Professor Allen) Sack's study exaggerates the prevalence of corruption in college sports, which Berst believes is confined to a handful of schools. Maybe it's time for the press to help find out who's right."

"For developing programs destined to win a championship, you need players more interested in giving to a program than simply taking from it.

"Walk-ons are a prime example. Sometimes, they do become starters and even outstanding players. But, sometimes, they contribute in other ways—challenging their teammates who may have greater credentials or a bit more God-given talent. They can have an effect on the quality of practice as well as the games; they can influence morale.

in the NCAA program and have a devastating effect on swimming in the United States in general.

"Many of them (proposals) would be very beneficial to the NCAA program. But there are certain ones that are creating panic in the swimming community."

"The athletes are far more aware of what their rights are. The athletes are aware of the lawyers, and the lawyers know cases like these (athletes' protests) can help their reputation because it will be picked up by the media and they want to help the athletes.

"Plus, athletics departments are scared to death of lawyers. It's costly to fight them, and it's not good public relations.

"They (players) want to be treated like men. I'm sure some of the things college athletes are expected to take from their coaches, a businessman wouldn't take from his boss."

"I just couldn't do it (accept an offer from the Ice Capades). My education is far too important to me.

"It's been a constant struggle for me to keep up the pace with the other people in my classes. I've worked very hard to get here, and I'm not about to give Purdue up.

"What I really want to stress to the other athletes here is that they need to finish their education."

Dale Brown, head men's basketball coach

"The people who are involved in this (Knight Commission) are people who have no need to spin their wheels.

"This is the first committee I've heard of that includes so many high-powered people—and not just in athletics. The president of CBS isn't about to waste his time. The president of Coca-Cola isn't about to waste his time.

"We are dealing here with a totally independent entity that is not looking to stroke anyone."

"These recommendations (by the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure) will permit us to look at how to change those things that need to be changed and maintain those areas that continue to make college athletics worthwhile."

California State University, Fullerton
Los Angeles Times

"It's scary. Young kids do gymnastics thinking they'll have a college program to compete in later on. In another 10 years or so, who knows if one will be there.

"Initially, programs were dropped because they weren't very good and the coaches who were responsible for them were dragging their feet. But in recent years, it's all because of budget cuts."

Three ex-sports agents draw prison terms for paying players

Three former sports agents were sentenced to prison by a Federal judge May 11 on charges they funneled illegal payments to University of Florida athletes in attempts to represent them in professional contract negotiations.

After pleas from the agents and their wives that they only tried to help the athletes, Gerald Gratenstein, John A. Kasbar and Glenn Haft were given six-month sentences in Federal minimum security facilities. A fourth agent, Gregory Latimer, received five years' probation, the Associated Press reported.

"I don't want there to be any misunderstanding, this was not some kind of community charity for athletes," assistant U.S. Attorney Alan Burrow told U.S. District Judge Maurice M. Paul during the sentencing.

The men ran Professional Athletes Financial Advisors, Inc., in Hollywood, Florida, until they were accused last year of paying several Gator football and basketball athletes to sign with the agency.

The company tried to cover up the payments by sending the athletes Western Union money orders, according to a 94-page, 21-count Federal indictment.

Uniformity sought in NCAA rules

The NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee has moved toward making consistent the Association's legislation regarding opportunities for student-athletes to test their worth in professional sports.

The committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Council that legislation be developed for the 1991 Convention to provide all student-athletes an opportunity to review options in professional sports without jeopardizing eligibility in a particular sport.

Currently, the NCAA's draft regulations for baseball and hockey are different from those for basketball and football.

Baseball and hockey student-athletes may be drafted (without their consent) and tendered a contract for consideration without losing intercollegiate eligibility in their respective sports, thereby giving them the opportunity to test their market value. Basketball and football student-athletes, however, must forfeit their eligibility in order to declare themselves eligible for professional drafts in those sports.

"The committee recognizes that it wants to place all four major professional sports on a level playing field," said Richard C. Perko, NCAA legislative assistant and staff liaison to the Professional Sports Liaison Committee. "The committee is attempting to help student-athletes test their market value."

In a related action during its April 16-18 meeting in Phoenix, the committee voted not to support a proposal to amend NCAA Bylaw 12.3.1, which states that a student-athlete may not retain the services of an agent without jeopardizing his or her eligibility.

The committee also voted not to support a proposal to grant amnesty to a prospective student-athlete who signed with an agent. The committee noted that the program had merit but would send an inappropriate message to prospective student-athletes and would be difficult to administer.

"I made a serious mistake, and I know what I have done," Haft told Paul. "I make no excuses for what I've done."

None of the defendants would comment after the sentencing.

The four agents entered guilty pleas last September to charges they conspired to commit mail and wire fraud. Gratenstein, Kasbar and Haft were given 30 days to report to the U.S. marshal in their hometown of Fort Lauderdale. Their prison sentence will be followed by three years' probation.

Latimer, former vice-president of the business, often met with the athletes in Gainesville before persuading them to fly to Hollywood to talk about signing with the company. The athletes were paid incentives to sign with the company and sometimes received subsequent payments, according to the indictment.

Burrow said the agents even billed the athletes unknowingly for airplane rides, dinners and entertainment the athletes thought they were getting free.

"The effect is, when they thought they were being wined and dined by Haft, they were wining and dining Haft," Burrow said.

None of the defendants can appeal his conviction, only the legalities of his sentence, Paul said.

NCAA rules say college athletes who hire agents to represent them in certain sports are ineligible to participate in those sports at the collegiate level. The athletes, including former Gator basketball standout Vernon Maxwell and football player Ronald Moten, all were receiving grants-in-aid and participating in university athletics after they signed agreements with the agents, according to the indictment.

The agents also could be liable for further damages since Judge Paul reserved the right to determine later how much they would be able to pay if the University of Florida is stripped of NCAA proceeds because it used ineligible players in postseason tournament games.

Q What does the NCAA Executive Committee do?

A According to the 1990-91 Executive Committee Handbook, the committee "is in essence, the Association's finance committee. It reports its proceedings to the Council but is the final authority (subject to membership action at a Convention) in three areas: the Association's finances, its championships and supervision of the national office staff (through the executive director).

The Revolutionary Gillette Sensor.

It senses and adjusts to the individual needs of your face for the best shave a man can get.

The remarkable Gillette Sensor shaving system creates an entirely new standard in shaving performance. It's a shave personalized to every man. The revolution starts with the platinum hardened Sensor twin blades. They're individually and independently mounted on highly responsive springs. So they continuously sense and automatically adjust to the individual curves and unique needs of your face.

But innovation doesn't stop there. The ultra narrow metal skin guard is also mounted on springs. It moves in total harmony with the blades to set up your beard for optimum shaving performance.

Keeping this technology in constant contact with your face required another breakthrough. A dramatic redesign of the entire pivoting process creates a wider, more responsive, unprecedentedly smooth pivoting action. Innovation is everywhere.

You can feel it in the textured ridges and balance of the Sensor razor. You appreciate it in the easy loading system and the convenient shaving organizer.

Even rinsing is innovative. The new blades are 50% narrower than any others — water flows freely around and through them, helping to make rinsing and cleaning totally effortless.

But the true revolution of Sensor comes not with any one feature, but with the way the Sensor technologies work together.

They combine to give your individual face a personalized shave — the closest, smoothest, safest shave you've ever had. Or, more precisely, the best shave a man can get.

Vidal, Solt lead UC Davis to II women's tennis title

Led by juniors Alison Vidal and Reagan Solt, UC Davis upset top-seeded Cal Poly Pomona, 5-3, to win the team title at the Division II Women's Tennis Championships.

UC Davis hosted the championships May 6-12.

Vidal and Solt posted three-set singles victories to spark the Aggies to a 4-2 lead over the Broncos after the singles round. But Cal Poly Pomona's Julie Slattery and Shelley Breeden defeated Melissa Minkin and Neha Naik at No. 3 doubles to set the stage for Vidal and Solt at No. 1 doubles. The tandem clinched UC Davis' first tennis title by defeating Donna Ewing and Cindy Hamnquist, 6-2, 6-2.

The setback ended a string of 20 straight victories for Cal Poly Pomona, a streak that included an 8-1 victory over UC Davis earlier this season.

In three team matches at the championships, Vidal and Solt were undefeated in singles and doubles.

UC Davis' victory in the finals was its second over a higher-seeded team. The third-ranked Aggies advanced to the finals by sweeping the doubles round in its defeat of No. 2-seed Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, 5-4.

In the individual competition, Edna Olivarez of Cal State Los Angeles finished her collegiate tennis career by becoming just the fourth woman in NCAA tennis championships history to win singles and doubles crowns in the same year. She shared the doubles title with partner Jennifer Choi.

The top-seeded Olivarez, who lost in the 1986 and 1987 singles semifinals, outlasted unseeded Julie Slattery of Cal Poly Pomona in a grueling three-hour match of long rallies. Her victory, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, gave Olivarez a season record of 39-4.

She and Choi won the upset-dominated doubles competition, 7-5, 7-5, over Christy Murphy and Vicki Kanter of Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. The finalists were unseeded; all four of the seeded tandems were defeated in the first round.

Eight teams already had clinched automatic berths through May 14 by winning conference titles. In addition to Stanford, they are California State University, Fullerton (Big West); The Citadel (Southern); Lafayette College (East Coast); University of Pennsylvania (Eastern); University of Southwestern Louisiana (American South); Stetson University (Trans America), and the University of Texas, Arlington (Southland).

The remaining at-large teams, top eight seeds (each assigned to a different regional) and first-round regional pairings will be announced May 21 during a press conference in Kansas City.

Twenty-six automatic qualifiers and 22 at-large teams will comprise the 48-team field, with each regional featuring a six-team, double-elimination format.

Fraser's strategy working on and off the diamond

By Theodore A. Breidenthal
The NCAA News Staff

Miami (Florida) baseball coach Ron Fraser is proof positive that creative marketing and promotional efforts for college baseball go together as smoothly as a 6-4-3 double play.

Affectionately known as "The Big Guy," Fraser has built a model program for institutions that want to incorporate marketing and promotions into their baseball programs. He has sold his program and the game of college baseball like nobody ever has or likely ever will.

"Ron was a trendsetter," said Neal Bendesky, assistant director of athletics for marketing at Miami. "He created an atmosphere for success, and he was doing it long before there was an emphasis on marketing. Now, we can reach into the community for support and attract people to the ballpark."

After 40 home dates this season, the Hurricanes' attendance totaled 124,259—an average of 3,106 per game. It is the ninth year in 10 that the Hurricanes' attendance has topped 100,000. When the Hurricanes won national championships in 1982 and 1985, attendance exceeded 1.2 million people.

In an era of profitability, Miami has sold sponsorships for all 42 home games this season. For a fee, a sponsor is given access to 24 seats in a VIP box as well as 1,000 general-admission seats. The sponsor also gets to throw out the first ball.

Said Bendesky, "The sponsorship is a great entertainment value for either employees or customers of our sponsors. It also is great for promotions within the stores."

Fraser, famous for his promotional stunts and giveaways, at times has stretched the limits of the wild and wacky.

His most famous fund-raising project took place February 16, 1977, when 26 supporters of the Hurricanes' baseball program enjoyed an 11-course meal on the infield at Mark Light Stadium. Some of the world's finest chefs were flown in to prepare the meal, while strolling violinists, a harpist, colored ice sculptures and ponds with live goldfish created a festive atmosphere. No one was allowed on the field without a tuxedo, including media representatives.

Miami's Ron Fraser

"The media really got a kick out of it. Paul McGuire (now at NBC Sports) rented a tuxedo and wore his tennis shoes," said Fraser with a chuckle.

The idea came from a television commercial; the cost of the meal was $5,000 a plate.

"It was the biggest thing I have ever pulled off in my life," said Fraser. "I tapped out a lot of people after that one."

The money, more than $130,000, paid off the debt on the stadium.

Some of Fraser's other promotions included parachutists, green baseball gloves, "Tax Night," "Trip to Nowhere Night," eating contests and weddings; even a local doctor donated an open-heart surgery that was good for three years. You name it, and Fraser has tried it.

"I call it G-rated entertainment. I got the idea to name our ticket plan 'All in the Family' ($100 admits two adults and three children to every Hurricane home game) after the

After close battle last year, women's golf race wide open

After more than 35,000 strokes on 7,344 holes by 102 golfers at the 1989 National Collegiate Women's Golf Championships, just one putt separated national champion San Jose State and runner-up Tulsa. When Pat Hurst sank a four-foot putt on the 72nd hole, the Spartans clinched their second title in three years. The putt also gave Hurst the individual championship.

But this is a new year and a new championship, and the team title once again is up for grabs. Hurst and San Jose State are back, but so is Tulsa, with a desire to retake the championship it won in 1988. Two Arizona teams, second-ranked Arizona State and fourth-ranked Arizona, will be in the hunt and fifth-ranked Oklahoma State could challenge as well, if the Cowgirls get a bid.

The Spartans are ranked No. 1 in the latest Golfstat poll, and Hurst is the No. 3-ranked individual. Just a sophomore, Hurst is ready to try and defend her individual title.

"The experience of being in the thick of it will help Pat and the members of the team who were in it last year," Spartan coach Mark Gale said. "We'll be playing on Bermuda grass greens instead of bent grass greens. That and the fact that we'll be playing across the country might hurt us."

Gale returns three players from a year ago and adds two freshmen ranked in the top 20 in the Golfstat rankings. Besides Hurst, ninth-ranked Dina Ammaccapane and freshmen Tracy Hanson and Ninni Sterner all are ranked in the top 20. But Gale does not pick his squad as the front-runner.

"I think the team to beat is Arizona State," he said. "We are ranked No. 1 based on the best single round in college golf this year. We scored a minus 19 against Arizona State. That is the lowest rating this season by ten points (the rating is based on course difficulty)."

Arizona State has the No. 1-ranked player in the nation in freshman Brandie Burton. The former national junior champion has won six of her seven tournaments this year, with her only loss coming to

San Jose State's Pat Hurst returns to defend her 1989 title

No. 2 Kelly Robbins of Tulsa. The Sun Devils also have two seniors, Amy Fruhwirth and Missy Farr, to provide depth.

"I think we have a real good chance to win," Arizona State coach Linda Vollstedt said. "We have more depth than we have ever had before. I have five really solid players." The Sun Devils have won five of the nine tournaments they have entered this season.

The thing that makes Robbins' victory over Burton even more impressive is the fact that it was at the Lady Sun Devil Invitational on Arizona State's home course. Robbins has finished in the top 10 in all nine tournaments she has entered for Tulsa this year, and has won two.

The Golden Hurricane also has the fourth-ranked individual in the nation in Cathy Mockett, who finished sixth at last year's championships.

"We always have the same goal every year, and that is to be nationally competitive," said Tulsa coach Dale McNamara. "But you never forget a tournament like last year's. There is no revenge on the girls' minds, we just fell down on the job. I think they learned a lot."

While Arizona does not have a top-10 individual, the Wildcats did finish ahead of Arizona State at the Pacific 10 championships. "I have five strong players," said Wildcats coach Kim Haddow. "In order to beat us, a team will have to play four days of solid golf."

Apparently, UCLA had four such days, because the Bruins won the Pac 10 tournament by one stroke over Arizona and two over Arizona State.

Oklahoma State would be considered one of the top contenders if it had not stumbled in the Big Eight championship. The Cowgirls lost to Kansas by two strokes. Since the Big Eight is subject to the NCAA rule stating that the selection committee must take the conference tournament winner before any other conference member, Oklahoma State's bid is in jeopardy. There are no automatic qualifiers, and Kansas' 30-plus national ranking may preclude the Jayhawks from getting a bid, and thus block Oklahoma State as well.

"We've played well all year," Oklahoma State coach Ann Pitts said. "Now we just have to wait for the committee's decision."

Hurst, a junior, also won the individual title by two strokes over Arizona's Susan Slaughter and will defend her title... Florida, San Jose State and Tulsa each have won two team titles. Miami (Florida) and Texas Christian won the other two titles... Tulsa is the only school with two individual titlists... Tulsa won the 1988 team title with a four-round record score of 1,175.

Hampton men's coach may have II track 'holiday'

One might wonder if George Williams will have to declare May 24-26 as vacation days.

Williams, the coach of defending Division II men's outdoor track and field champion St. Augustine's, will be in Hampton, Virginia, at the 1990 outdoor championships on those dates. And his team is the prohibitive favorite. Besides winning last year's outdoor title, Williams' Mighty Falcons successfully defended their 1989 indoor championship in March.

Add the fact that Williams lost only one athlete who scored points at last year's championships, and it's not hard to tell why the Mighty Falcons are once again favorites this year. But it's a role that Williams doesn't want.

"They always put that pressure on me, but I don't want it," he said. "I guess we have to be the favorites as defending champions. But I like going to the meet and meeting old friends in the coaching profession and watching the kids run."

"It's like a vacation to me."

It's more like a nightmare to opposing coaches.

Meanwhile, the nightmare is over for opponents of Abilene Christian's women's team. The Wildcats' four-year reign on Division II women's track ended last year when Cal Poly San Luis Obispo scored a 33-point victory. Cal Poly San Luis Obispo is a heavy favorite to take its second straight championship and fifth overall.

"I don't see how anybody can beat Cal Poly San Luis Obispo," said Joey Haines, coach of Southeast Missouri State. "Cal Poly and Abilene Christian are each in a class by themselves, though I'm not sure they are in the same class."

Men's championships

The St. Augustine's Mighty Falcons are loaded. Ken Brokenburr, the defending champion in the 200-meter dash and indoor champion at 55 meters, leads a team that is long on sprinters and jumpers.

Terrell Carpenter and Mark Mason have gone beyond 25 feet in the long jump, and Darrin Moore has cleared 7-3 in the high jump. Fitzroy Morrison and Melvin Johnson have shown promise in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

But Williams knows that the meet is not won on paper. "There are other strong teams out there," he said. "You never know what can happen. It could be a really interesting meet."

The Angelo State Rams have lost 17 members of last year's runner-up team to graduation and injury. The Rams are strong in the field events, however, with the addition of red-shirt freshman Eric Cole in the discus and the hammer. His personal bests this season would have won the two events at last year's championships.

"Some other teams would have to miss the bus" for Angelo State to have a chance to win the team title, according to sports information director Frank Rudnicki. But the Rams have seven provisional qualifiers to go with five automatic qualifiers, so don't count them out just yet.

Hampton coach John White believes that hosting the meet will help his sprinters and hurdlers the most. "Terrence Warren has a chance to win the 100- and 200-meter dashes," White said. "It will help him to be on a familiar track."

But White also believes that everything will have to go his way for his Pirates to contend for the team title. "We can place high in the two relays, with a good chance to win the 4X400," he said. "Brett Fortune has a shot to win the 110-meter high hurdles and Johnnie Barnes finished third last year in the 400-meter dash. All those people will have to do well."

"I would be thrilled to be in the top five."

Southeast Missouri State "will score in a lot of events," according to coach Haines, "but it will be a lot of thirds, fourths and fifths. We may look like we're doing real well, because we're scoring in a lot of events, but somebody else may win three events and outscore us."

The Indians have depth in the running events, but may not have enough front-line strength to win the team championship. Jim Heard scored in the 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs last year and is back. Ted McMillian took fourth in the 800-meter run and John Daly finished sixth in the 1,500-meter run.

Abilene Christian's problems are the opposite of those of Southeast Missouri State. The Wildcats have the strength up front, but coach Jerry Dyes is concerned about a lack of depth. "I don't think we have enough depth to contend for the title," Dyes said. "We have quality and those athletes will be tough to deal with. But things will have to go well for us."

James Browne will be back to defend his triple-jump title, while Ralph Robertson in the 100 meters and Aaron Phillips in the 400 meters give the Wildcats quality in the sprints.

Women's championships

The Cal Poly San Luis Obispo Mustangs return Teena Colebrook, the defending champion in the 800-meter and the 1,500-meter runs. Colebrook qualified for the British Olympic finals in both events in 1988 and is the NCAA record-holder in the 1,000-meter run indoors. She has won five NCAA track and field titles.

But Colebrook is not the only returning star for the Mustangs. They have 15 automatic qualifiers and seven provisional qualifiers.

Gina Albanese won the 400-meter hurdles last year and finished fifth in the 100-meter hurdles. She was on the 1,600-meter relay team that finished fifth. The Mustangs also have won eight cross country championships, so the distance events will be well represented.

Abilene Christian is strong up and down the track. Yolande Straughn, who competed in the 1988 Olympics for Barbados, has qualified for the 100- and 200-meter dashes, and is a member of both of the Wildcats' qualifying relay teams. Senior Daphne Harvey has been an all-America shot putter in her previous three seasons and will try to make it a four-year sweep.

"We've got an awfully strong program," said assistant sports information director Ron Hatfield. "We have a lot of tradition that can go a long way. But for us to win this year, our relays have to place high. Both are capable of winning."

Norfolk State finished second to Abilene Christian in the 1990 indoor championships, despite not winning an individual title. The Spartans took first place in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association outdoor championships in six different events, including two victories each by Cynthia Royster (100- and 200-meter dashes) and Josetta Royal (400-meter dash and 800-meter run). Royal also anchors the 1,600-meter relay team that won the CIAA championship and the Millrose Games.

The Alabama A&M Lady Bulldogs also should be in the race for third. "We don't have great depth," coach Joe Henderson said. "We have eight or nine girls who will be competing, but it won't be enough. We still have Cal Poly and Abilene Christian to deal with."

The Lady Bulldogs will likely get the most points from the lower-distance running events. Freshman Taiwo Aladeffa, from Nigeria, and fellow countryman Caroline Nwajei, in the 110-meter high hurdles and the 100-meter dash, give Henderson a chance for points in the sprints. Gloria Morgan finished third in the 800 meters last season and will be back.

Championships Profile

Event: Division II men's and women's outdoor track and field.

Field: Qualifying standards for the championships have been established by the NCAA Executive Committee to yield fields in each event that approximate the 1:16 participation ratio approved for individual-team championships.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: St. Augustine's won its first men's championship. Cal Poly San Luis Obispo won its fourth women's championship, tying the Mustangs with Abilene Christian for the most team titles.

Schedule: Hampton University will host the event May 24-26 in Hampton, Virginia.

The NCAA News coverage: Results from the championships will appear in the May 30 issue of The NCAA News.

Contenders: Men's: St. Augustine's, Angelo State, Hampton, Southeast Missouri State, Abilene Christian. Women's: Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, Abilene Christian, Norfolk State, Alabama A&M.

Championship notes: St. Augustine's has won the last two indoor men's championships and is heavily favored to repeat as outdoor champion... Cal Poly San Luis Obispo also is favored to continue to hold the top spot for the women... Only two teams have won the women's Division II championship. Cal Poly San Luis Obispo won the first three titles before Abilene Christian ran off four straight, a streak that was ended last year by Cal Poly SLO.

Teena Colebrook (No. 418) returns to defend the 1,500-meter title she captured in a race that included Cal State Northridge's Darcy Arreola (No. 436)

III champs return stars, but title defenses will be tough

Both defending Division III outdoor track champions are likely to lose their holds on the top spots, though Christopher Newport's grip still may be strong enough to hang on to the women's crown for another year.

North Central, the 1989 men's champion, and Christopher Newport, the defending women's titlist, have lost points from last year's teams, but for different reasons. The North Central Cardinals lost more than 30 points from their distance events alone, due to graduation. The Captains, meanwhile, have their biggest gun back. They just have chosen not to load all her chambers.

Sheila Trice, who has won eight indoor national titles but has claimed only one outdoor championship, will only be competing in three individual events (100- and 200-meter dashes and the long jump), compared with the usual six or seven.

The Captains' coach, Vince Brown, knows that could cost his team points, maybe even the team championship, but he says it is time to give something back to the athlete who has brought so much success to his team.

"If we were going to use Sheila the way we usually did, we would be the top contender," said Brown, whose team has won the last three outdoor championships. "But she is a senior and has only won one time outdoors because we have used her too much and she has just gotten too tired. We owe it to her. It will cost us at least 16 points, but she deserves a chance to win some individual titles."

But not everybody believes it will cost the Captains. "(Brown) will probably get a few more points that way," said Occidental coach Bill Harvey. "Trice probably will win her events, and they have an excellent support cast. They will be just as strong, maybe stronger."

It still is a risky move for Brown. Trice won the 55-meter hurdles (100-meters are run outdoors) and the triple jump at this year's indoor meet. With just a 6½-point margin last year, the Captains may have sacrificed team glory for some long overdue personal glory for Trice.

Men's championships

There most likely will be a new champion at the Division III Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships. And you can get that opinion from a fairly reliable source—Al Carius, the coach of defending champion North Central.

"We lost a lot of points to graduation from last year's team," Carius said. "We lost more than 30 points

After setting a meet record for the second straight year in the triple jump at the 1990 Division III Men's Indoor Track and Field in distance events alone. But we do return Jan Cado."

Ah, Jan Cado.

Cado, a defector from communist Czechoslovakia, is the defending champion in the long jump and the triple jump, two events he has won twice in two tries in the indoor championships. And he is just a sophomore, a thought that must make competing coaches shudder.

"Cado is worth 20 points all by himself," said Lincoln (Pennsylvania) coach Cyrus Jones.

But those 20 points probably will not be enough for North Central to defend its championship, a title that will probably go to Lincoln. The Lions finished second by just eight points last year and won the indoor championship this season.

"I think we have a 90 percent chance to come out on top, if Murphy's Law doesn't interfere," Jones said. Most opposing coaches think Murphy would have to run out on the track and trip a few of the Lions' runners for Lincoln not to win.

The Lions boast a potent one-two tandem of Vernon Miller and Clive Terrelonge in the intermediate distances. Both have qualified in the 400-meter dash and the 800-meter run. Terrelonge runs the second leg of the Lions' mile relay team and Miller anchors it. That relay team already has turned in a 3:10.8, a time that would have beaten Lincoln's winning time last year by more than a second.

The 110-meter high hurdles, "our strong suit in the past," according to Jones, is again strong. Last year's champion, Victor Colter, returns, as does runner-up Mark Whitsett. Those two are being challenged by freshman teammate Shannon Flowers, who finished third indoors.

"Lincoln will have a cake-walk," said coach Mark Guthrie of challenger Wisconsin-La Crosse.

If the Lions do stumble, there are not the usual number of strong challengers to take advantage. Besides North Central, La Crosse usually is in the running, but injuries and sickness have decimated the Eagles.

"Everything that could have happened did," Guthrie said. "We're pretty beat up and sick. This is the most injured team I have ever had. I've had two kids come down with fevers of 104 degrees and another with bronchitis."

"Our top long jumper jumped 23-10, but hurt his anterior cruciate ligament on that jump. Our triple jumper was jumping real well, but pulled his hamstring. I had a 7-foot high jumper hurt his knee. If we do real well, we could slip into the top five. But we will have to surprise."

Calvin, which last year finished fourth, will rely on distance runners for a large chunk of its points. The Knights have qualified six athletes in eight events and expect to qualify two more before the championships begins.

But the Knights' best chance for quality points will come from John Lumkes and Dave Sydow. Lumkes finished second in the 5,000-meter run last year. He also qualified for the 3,000-meter steeplechase and the 10,000-meter run. But Calvin's distance coach, Al Hoekstra, said that Lumkes will focus on the steeplechase and possibly one other.

"He's got a real good chance at winning the steeplechase," Hoekstra said. "He's going to try and qualify for the 1,500-meter run. If he does, that would be his double. Otherwise, he might try the 5,000. The problem is if the 5,000 has a preliminary, then he would be shot by the final of the steeplechase."

Sydow ran the second-fastest 1,500 in the country last year, but failed to make the final at nationals when he looked over the wrong shoulder and was passed in the final meter. "He learned a lesson," Hoekstra said.

The only other team with a chance at Lincoln seems to be MIT. The Engineers' hopes rest squarely on the shoulders of Bill Singhose, the defending decathlon champion. Singhose will compete in that grueling event, plus the pole vault, the 4-by-100 and 4-by-400-meter relays, and possibly the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

"If we're going to do anything," says MIT coach Gordon Kelly, "it will have to be Singhose doing most of it."

Women's championships

Even without the extra points from Trice, Christopher Newport will challenge for the title. "We have eight women qualified in 16 events," Brown said. "I think we will be right in the thick of things. We just won't have much of a cushion."

If the loss of Trice is too much, three other teams seem poised to grab the title—Occidental, Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Cortland State.

Occidental and Wisconsin-Oshkosh will approach the meet from the same direction—balance. Meanwhile, Cortland State takes Christopher Newport's tack—strength in one area (distance events).

Occidental's Harvey said his Tigers "don't have anybody in Trice's category, but we have good depth. It should be close. Christopher Newport has to be the favorite."

But Harvey warns, "Once you have it figured out exactly who will be there, somebody new enters the picture."

Hurdler Victor Colter of Lincoln (Pennsylvania)

Bill Singhose of MIT will be gunning for Kip Janvri's Division III record of three individual titles in one championship when he competes in the decathlon, the pole vault, two sprint relays and possibly the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. If Calvin's John Lumkes qualifies for the 1,500-meter run in his final opportunity, he will complete a rare combination. He already has qualified for the 10,000- and 5,000-meter runs and the 3,000-meter steeplechase. He will compete in the steeplechase and possibly one other event at the championships.

television show, but it really sums up what we are trying to do."

When it comes to putting fans in the stands, Fraser believes that if you get women to the ballpark, the whole family will follow.

"You've got to get the women to the ballpark. A father will not stay at the game very long. Usually, he feels guilty after being at work all day and not spending any time with the family before he goes to the game. So he goes home from the game early and is apologetic."

So Fraser has targeted the women with such giveaways as swimwear, beauty aids, orchids (Mothers Day) and weekend trips to exotic islands, just to name a few ideas.

Added Fraser, "Seventy percent of our audience is made up of adults, so I'd better be concerned about marketing for women."

The final piece to his marketing puzzle was something that would entertain both adults and children. Thus, in 1982, Fraser created the Miami Maniac. The rest is promotional history.

When Fraser saw John Routh at South Carolina (he was the Gamecocks' mascot, Cocky), he knew he'd found the Maniac. After a little coaxing, Routh came to Miami in 1983 and has been a fixture ever since.

The bottom line at Miami is that Fraser has created a family-oriented atmosphere to go along with a winning baseball program. He also has made his program profitable. Above all, though, Fraser has made the

University needed in south Florida, legislators say

Southwest Florida, the fastest-growing part of the state, is badly in need of a major university, two state legislators from the area have told the state board of regents.

Reps. Keith Arnold, D-Fort Myers, and Mary Ellen Hawkins, R-Naples, urged the regents May 8 to put aside politics in choosing the location for the next addition to the state's university system, United Press International reported.

Arnold said the question is not whether there will need to be a 10th university soon or whether the existing nine need to be expanded — but where it should be located.

"We're at a crossroads. Southwest Florida is 130 miles from the closest university," said Arnold, referring to the University of South Florida in Tampa. "We fly in and drive in professors from Tampa. We're not getting the job done."

The system's nine current schools are getting overcrowded and tougher to enter, and expansion of the current campuses is not considered financially viable in some cases.

Regent Betty Castor, who also is the state's commissioner of education, said she has been concerned for some time about the increasing need for a university in the southwestern part of the state, given the rapid growth of Collier, Lee and Charlotte counties.

For example, she said, south of Tampa, "there is no four-year nursing program. The issue of expansion should be a high priority."

The House budget plan for the coming fiscal year includes $1 million in planning money for two new state universities. But regents chair Charles Edwards said the Senate has to approve a gross receipts utilities tax to raise more money for higher education if the new school proposal is going to get off the ground.

experience of going to a ballgame fun for the fans.

Said Fraser, "People now come to the games and expect to have a good time, and we make sure they do. The way we do it is such that you can see the laughter on the faces of the children, and you see the smiles when someone wins a trip or opens an envelope and finds a diamond. I like to see that."

On the field, the second-ranked Hurricanes (46-8) have surprised just about all of the experts this season, including Fraser.

"They continue to surprise me," said Fraser. "There are no superstars on this club. They work hard, play hard and above all, they've learned how to win. It's a tribute to them. They are the ones who have overcome the odds and prevailed through all tests so far."

And so has Fraser.

Use play-ins

ship.

The NCAA Administrative Committee, acting on behalf of the NCAA Executive Committee, will consider this recommendation during its May 24 telephone conference.

The play-in format is being implemented because more than 30 conferences will be eligible for the 30 automatic bids to the championship beginning with the 1991 tournament. The Executive Committee has approved the play-in concept and has stipulated that its format will remain unchanged at least through the 1998 championship. The Executive Committee also has placed a moratorium on reconsideration of the 64-team field and the 30 automatic-qualifying berths through the 1998 championship.

The champions of the conferences with the lowest nonconference ratings percentage indexes (RPI), as determined annually by the basketball committee, will have the opportunity to compete for automatic bids.

Following are the conference matchups for 1991:

The Northeast Conference (ranked No. 28) will host the Patriot League (No. 33); the Southland Conference (No. 29) will host the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (No. 32), and the Southwestern Athletic Conference (No. 30) will host the Big South Conference (No. 31). The Patriot League was ranked last because it did not compete as a conference in basketball during the 1989-90 season and RPI was not calculated for it.

In the process of determining the conferences eligible for automatic qualification, the basketball committee waived waiting periods for the Big South Conference, which would not have been eligible until 1992, and the Patriot League, which would not have been eligible until 1993.

"The basketball committee believes that it is in the best interest of the conferences and the championship to expedite their entry into the tournament," said James E. Delany, committee chair and commissioner of the Big Ten Conference. "The committee feels that a one-step implementation of the play-in will cause less disruption to the championship than adding one game for each of the next three years. This is also a reflection of the overall outstanding quality of competition around the country."

The play-in games must be completed by midnight the night before the 64-team field is announced by the committee. (Next year, the committee will announce the field Sunday, March 10.) The games are exempt from NCAA number-of-contests legislation. Game management, expenses and administrative details will be the responsibilities of the participating conferences. Revenues generated by the games will be retained by conferences participating in the play-in.

Financial distribution related to the 1991 NCAA basketball championship will be determined this summer by the Executive Committee. Principles of that formula will apply to all 33 Division I conferences.

Florida Senate committee approves due-process bill aimed at NCAA

Simmering resentments against the "arrogance" of the NCAA erupted May 15, as a Florida Senate committee overwhelmingly approved legislation shielding the due-process rights of colleges, coaches and athletes under NCAA investigation.

"We ought to smash their arrogance," urged Sen. Larry Plummer, D-South Miami, as the Higher Education Committee prepared to vote on the bill. "They believe all decisions on athletics should be made by them as ordained by God."

"It's high time the NCAA had to follow the rules and make sure people's rights aren't trampled on when they conduct their investigations," said Sen. Vince Bruner, D-Fort Walton Beach, the bill's sponsor.

Bruner, who played defensive back on the University of Kentucky and Florida State University football teams during his college days, said his legislation is modeled on a Nebraska law that other state legislatures also are considering.

The bill says any proceedings of a collegiate athletics association that may result in the imposition of a penalty for violating association rules must comply with the due-process provisions of the Florida Constitution, United Press International reported.

If the association does not respect those safeguards—such as the accused's right to consult with a lawyer, to know the charges and to face the accuser—then no disciplinary actions such as probations or fines could be imposed.

"We're not talking about a criminal trial," Bruner told the committee. "But we are talking about an administrative-type hearing at least."

Furthermore, the college, coach or athlete could sue the association for damages equal to any penalty imposed in violation of the bill.

Although the bill would apply to any collegiate athletics association, the clear target was the NCAA, which placed the University of Florida on probation several years ago.

Sen. Jack Gordon, D-Miami Beach, wanted to go even further, offering an amendment to forbid any college or university receiving state funds from belonging to any association that fails to respect due-process rights of its members.

"It is outrageous that an organization representing supposedly the intellectual elite of this country... should be as blatantly violative of individual liberty as the NCAA has been," Gordon said. "We ought to send a good shot across their bow."

But Bruner said that amendment would have prohibited Florida's public universities and even the private University of Miami, which receives some state money, from belonging to the NCAA. That would leave those schools' athletics programs with no teams to play, save each other.

"I didn't want to scare anybody to death," Bruner said.

No one spoke against the bill, although a spokeswoman for Charles Reed, state university system chancellor, raised questions about the bill's constitutionality. The U.S. Supreme Court recently held that Federal due-process safeguards did not apply to the NCAA.

Bruner waved aside such concerns, but he did accept an amendment striking language that would have allowed aggrieved schools and individuals to seek 150 percent damages, saying he believed the move would make the bill more acceptable to the courts.

Sen. Eleanor Weinstock, D-Palm Beach, cast the lone dissenting vote, saying schools voluntarily join the NCAA because the advantages outweigh any problems. But hers was definitely the minority view.

"It's time they were reined in," said Sen. Carrie Meek, D-Miami.

Sen. Bob Johnson, R-Sarasota, said he also would like to take on the Florida High Schools Activities Association, which oversees high school athletics, calling it "the most obnoxious, oppressive organization on the face of the earth."

Schultz says college sports will remain on free television

Citing a number of contracts that college athletics officials have signed with ABC, CBS and NBC, including the NCAA's $1 billion contract with CBS, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee May 9 that there is no attempt to move college sports events from free television in favor of pay-per-view cable television.

Schultz was one of several sports executives who participated in a hearing conducted by the subcommittee in Washington, D.C.

There is a growing concern in Congress that free television sports may be becoming a thing of the past and that professional sports leagues may not be living up to their presumed "responsibilities" to the local communities under laws that exempt the teams from antitrust laws, the Associated Press reported.

Professional sports executives assured the subcommittee that they're not ready to dump sports off "free" TV in favor of cable TV, but they acknowledged that team owners will turn increasingly to cable to pay their bills.

Seeking audiences

That could mean more sports on cable as teams faced with increasing costs go where the largest TV audiences are. The executives said cable operators are more than willing to compete for sports rights, particularly for local viewing of baseball.

They said that doesn't mean viewers will have to pay $10 just to watch the Super Bowl or the World Series — at least for the foreseeable future — but at some point, sports fans may have to become cable TV or satellite TV subscribers to see many games.

"I am confident that for some time to come, free television will remain the key method of distribution to our fans," NBA Commissioner David J. Stern told the subcommittee. "I do not anticipate any dramatic change in the number of NBA games available on, or shifting of our key events away from, free over-the-air television."

Stern and his counterparts at the NFL and Major League Baseball said they could not foresee major championship games going to pay-per-view cable before the year 2000.

NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue repeated an earlier pledge that the Super Bowl would not be offered on pay cable in this decade.

No predictions

However, under questioning by Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Massachusetts, Tagliabue and the other executives would not make the same predictions for sports on so-called basic cable services.

Tagliabue said it was "extremely unlikely" that the Super Bowl would appear on basic cable in the next 10 years, but for regular-season games he said he couldn't say what would happen.

"Beyond the next four years, it is difficult to speculate as to the nature of NFL television arrangements," Tagliabue said.

Stern said the NBA championship games were under contract to CBS until 1997, but he would not predict what would happen after that in light of statistics showing the three major networks' share of the viewing audience has dropped from about 95 percent to about 65 percent in the past decade.

"I don't think you're going to see an increase in network" shares of the audience, Stern added.

Baseball Commissioner Francis T. Vincent Jr. said the issue was not so much championship games, to which networks can attract large audiences and therefore outbid cable, but in the broadcast of local games.

He said Chicago White Sox baseball recently went to national cable superstation WGN when no local broadcasters would bid for the rights. Elsewhere, Vincent said that because of cable, baseball fans are seeing games they otherwise would not have had access to.

The professional sport executives, along with Schultz, ticked off a list of megadollar contracts that colleges and pro leagues have signed recently with ABC, NBC and CBS, and they cited cable industry figures showing that the amount of sports on local and national free and cable TV has increased dramatically in the past decade.

Several bills are pending in Congress that would return control of cable TV prices to local franchising authorities and give communities the power to reduce rates when cable companies withdraw sports programs.

Antitrust exemptions "give the American people the right to expect more from the sports leagues than a chase for dollars that limits our ability to see sports on TV," Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Connecticut, told the subcommittee.

Study suggests Metro expansion

A study by a marketing company recommends the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference add West Virginia University and the University of Miami (Florida) to the league and become an all-sports conference.

Ed Pastilong, West Virginia's athletics director, called the results of the study by Raycom Inc. of Charlotte, North Carolina, encouraging. He also has had informal talks with the Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and the Big Ten Conferences (The NCAA News, May 9).

"That would be a pretty darned good football conference," Pastilong told the Charleston Daily Mail. "And the basketball would be pretty good, too. It's quite interesting."

"The Metro is certainly much more attractive now," Pastilong said. "The good thing about that study was Raycom was extremely thorough. They spend a whole day here in Morgantown checking us out. They studied the entire athletics department revenue and non-revenue sports."

"Then, when Raycom presented its findings, they put together 246 scenarios of how the Metro could improve itself as a conference," he said. "Raycom suggested that the Metro bring us and Miami into the conference and go all sports. I think that's one heckuva compliment to us. And I think it's well worth our interest to speak to them."

The study looked at the Metro members as well as Miami (Florida); WVU; Rutgers University, New Brunswick; Temple University, Pennsylvania State University; Boston College; University of Pittsburgh; Syracuse University, and East Carolina University. It focused on athletics, academics and postseason revenues.

Pastilong has said WVU's decision would hinge on whether Florida State University remains in the conference. Officials for the Florida school have said they won't play a Metro Conference football schedule unless WVU and Miami are on it.

Congressmen criticize pay-per-view, blackouts of college games

A decision by the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, to charge up to $25 to see games on pay-per-view television and ABC's planned blackout of the Iowa State University-University of Iowa football game in September were criticized by members of Congress during a hearing May 9 by the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee in Washington D.C.

The subcommittee is reviewing what is called a growing trend of college and professional games being carried only on cable channels, United Press International reported.

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tennessee, said Tennessee is overcharging fans to televise games that are not offered to all viewers, and Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, warned ABC Sports that it should compromise in the contract dispute that threatens to black out live television broadcasts of the Iowa-Iowa State game in September.

"I know UT fans' blood runs bright orange and they'd pay almost anything to see a game, but this doesn't mean it's right to charge this much," Cooper said.

Tennessee charged $19.95 for advance orders to watch some games last season and $24.95 for orders on the day of the game.

Cooper also said many rural fans in his east Tennessee district do not have access to cable or pay-per-view channels carrying some games.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Oklahoma, also lashed out at the school for charging between $20 and $25 a game per household for each broadcast.

"That's a lot of money," Synar said.

Cooper said he is going to pursue the matter with the school and Southeastern Conference officials.

Navy to join Patriot League

The U.S. Naval Academy announced May 10 that it will switch 12 sports programs from the Colonial Athletic Association to the Patriot League, in the process elevating the Navy women's program to NCAA Division I status.

The programs are men's basketball, cross country, track and field, swimming, tennis, and golf. The women's programs affected are cross country, volleyball, basketball, swimming, indoor track, and track and field, said Thomas Bates, Navy sports information director.

The football program will remain a Division I-A independent, as will lacrosse and soccer, Bates said.

"The Patriot League provides an opportunity to place our athletics program in another Division I league where the members have similar academic and athletics policies to those of the U.S. Naval Academy," Jack Lengyel, director of athletics, said in a statement.

Women have been playing in Division II since 1977 and "we needed to get them into Division I because Army went to Division I," said Bates. He said the men's program, which was evaluated at the same time as the women's, needed to be in the same league as the women.

"This decision was a very difficult one for us in light of the fact that the Naval Academy was one of the charter members of the Colonial Athletic Association," Lengyel said.

Navy will join the U.S. Military Academy, Bucknell University, Colgate University, Fordham University, Holy Cross College, Lafayette College and Lehigh University in the Patriot League.

Richard D. Schultz, executive director of the NCAA, testified that Tennessee and Louisiana State University were the only colleges to broadcast games on cable-television pay-per-view channels.

Schultz said the NCAA has no control over the broadcasting rights to regular-season football games, and the decision is made by the schools.

Tennessee department of athletics spokesman Haywood Harris said the school has had a television agreement for several years with CBS and cable networks ESPN and WTBS. Harris said CBS has the first option to televise Tennessee games, and the cable companies have the next option.

If none of the networks chooses to televise a game, the fourth option goes to a pay-per-view channel, Harris said.

"If it weren't on the pay-per-view channel, it wouldn't be carried at all," Harris said.

But he acknowledged that some fans with cable cannot view Tennessee games. He said the school cannot broadcast games on local television stations without risking a decline in season ticket sales.

Tennessee home football games are regularly sold out. About 62,000 tickets at the 91,110-seat stadium are sold to season ticket-holders.

Tauke's concerns

Tauke made sure the Iowa-Iowa State game came up in the discussion.

As it stands now, the big intrastate game will not be televised live because of a conflict with an ABC-Big Ten Conference contract. The contract bars local telecasts if ABC is airing national games.

The network plans to broadcast University of Michigan and Michigan State University games September 22, so the only way the Iowa-Iowa State game can be seen is if the contest is moved to night.

Tauke refused to characterize his statements as a threat, but he strongly encouraged ABC to work out an arrangement with the schools. He's the second Iowa politician to bring some pressure to bear against ABC recently.

Gov. Terry Branstad has released a letter asking ABC to work something out and reminding network officials that the state cooperated with the network's Iowa caucus coverage in 1988.

"I'm attempting to persuade ABC (that) it's in their interest as well as the public's interest for them to put together a network that can air the game," Tauke said. "It's not a threat; they're clearly interested in public relations. It's not in their best interest to pursue contracts that upset the public."

If the network holds fast, Tauke said ABC might find some congressmen taking a closer look at government regulation of the sports-television industry.

"It's important for ABC to respond to that concern; it's not in their interests to have members of Congress exploring problems," Tauke said. "They don't lose much by allowing this game. But they could gain a lot. They could alleviate some of the pressures from Congress that would occur if this problem continues to fester."

Tauke admitted that Iowa has relinquished much of its own decision-making power on television rights to the Big Ten.

In response to a question from Tauke, Schultz said that contracts that would prohibit the local telecasting of games of strong national interest are not good.

Insurance booklets on their way

The NCAA has sent information booklets describing the Association's insurance programs for 1990-91 to athletics directors at all member institutions.

The booklets contain enrollment forms, quotation requests and other materials regarding the NCAA-sponsored programs, which offer a plan for lifetime catastrophic-injury coverage, a basic athletics-injury plan and an athletics-staff accident plan.

This is the sixth year that the Association has offered this package of plans to member institutions. In the 1989-90 academic year, 473 member institutions participated in the catastrophic-injury plan, a four percent increase over the previous year. Participation in the catastrophic plan has increased every year since the program began.

The plan provides lifetime benefits, with no overall policy maximum, to student-athletes, cheerleaders, student managers and student trainers who suffer catastrophic injuries while participating in intercollegiate sports or traveling to and from athletics competitions. Five benefit enhancements have been added to the plan for 1990-91 (see The NCAA News, April 18, 1990).

The NCAA will pay the entire catastrophic-insurance premium for all participants in Division I men's and women's basketball. In addition, the NCAA will pay 50 percent of the premium for participants in all other sports at Division I institutions.

The catastrophic-injury program supplements the NCAA's basic athletics-injury plan, which covers injuries sustained by student-athletes, cheerleaders, student managers and student trainers while involved in intercollegiate sports, both at home and while traveling. The policy provides medical and dental expenses for two years up to a maximum of $25,000 and includes a minimum accidental death and dismemberment benefit of $5,000.

During 1989-90, 228 member institutions participated in the basic athletics-injury program, an increase of 30 percent over the previous year.

The athletics-staff accident plan is available for staff members of institutions, conferences and affiliated members. The plan covers bodily injury regardless of whether the staff member was on official business when it occurred. In addition, coverage may be purchased for guests who are on campus or traveling on official business approved by the athletics department.

National Sports Underwriters, which administers the plans for Lincoln National Health and Casualty Insurance Company, has developed a network of regional representatives to help member institutions tailor the programs to their needs. These representatives soon will be contacting every NCAA member institution to make sure the information packet has arrived and to answer questions.

National Sports Underwriters processes all claims at its Overland Park, Kansas, office. Its computerized service can provide institutions with detailed reports about their claims by sport, by athlete and by provider.

Institutions interested in receiving further details about any of the three NCAA-sponsored plans should contact National Sports Underwriters at 9300 Metcalf Avenue, Suite 350, Overland Park, Kansas 66212 (telephone 800/621-2116).

Program costs in error in Association publication

Due to a data-entry error, incorrect figures on annual operating costs of intercollegiate athletics programs were reported in a recent NCAA publication, The Sports and Recreational Programs of the Nation's Universities and Colleges, Report Number 7.

In Table 15 on page 69, titled "Finances," expenses for intercollegiate athletics at Class G institutions (schools sponsoring Division III basketball and no football) should be $25,705,730. The total operating costs for all 127 Class G institutions should be $37,943,482.

In Table 15a, outlays for intercollegiate athletics at Division III institutions should be $97,733,635. The total operating costs for all 309 Division III institutions should be $130,764,019.

In both tables, expenditures on intercollegiate athletics at all 780 institutions should total $1,299,669,482 and operating costs—including intramural sports, required physical education and clubs—should total $1,508,472,384.

Readers should be aware that these changes make several figures in the narrative accompanying the charts incorrect.

The NCAA publishes The Sports and Recreational Programs of the Nation's Universities and Colleges every five years. Report Number 7 was published in February.

Southwest ADs vote to shorten drug-test notice

Southwest Athletic Conference athletics directors have taken another step to reduce drug abuse, voting to shorten advance notice to athletes being tested.

"Now they won't know when we're coming," Commissioner Fred Jacoby said. "The (football) players always knew we'd come around the first week of fall practice."

Athletes who know when they'll be tested for steroids can use a masking agent or stop use long enough to go undetected.

The new regulations, Jacoby said, should help reduce steroid use and provide for more equal competition.

Under the plan, approved May 4 by athletics directors at a conference meeting in Dallas, drug testing for all sports will be done at intervals during the school year with as little as two hours notice. The measure is expected to be approved by faculty athletics representatives when they meet May 23-26 in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Jacoby said the conference had tested for steroids in the fall and for street drugs at the start of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Metro relocates

The Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference has moved to another building within the Ravinia complex in Atlanta, effective May 7.

There will be no change in the current telephone numbers. The new conference address is Two Ravinia Drive, Suite 210, Atlanta, Georgia 30346.

Duke wins CFA award for academics

Duke University has won the College Football Association's 1990 academic achievement award, on the basis of graduating 24 of 25 football players who enrolled with the incoming class of 1984. The 1990 award is Duke's fourth since the CFA program was established in 1981.

Duke also won the CFA award in 1981, 1984 (cowinner with the University of Notre Dame) and 1987.

Presented annually by the Touchdown Club of Memphis, Tennessee, the award recognizes the CFA member with the highest graduation rate among football players. Duke officials will receive the 1990 award next December at the Liberty Bowl Luncheon in Memphis.

Eleven other CFA members were named honorable mention by the CFA for having graduated at least 70 percent of the football players who enrolled in 1984. Honored were the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Boston College; Georgia Institute of Technology; the University of Hawaii; the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Notre Dame; Rice University; Rutgers University, New Brunswick; Syracuse University; Vanderbilt University, and the University of Virginia.

Chris Kennedy, Duke's director of academic support, will receive an athletics academic achievement award from the CFA for his part in helping football student-athletes earn their degrees. This is the second time Kennedy has won the award in its four-year history.

Holiday Bowl records impact on San Diego

The 1989 Sea World Holiday Bowl showed an economic impact of $11.4 million on San Diego, according to a survey conducted by CIC Research that reported over 21,500 visitors came from outside San Diego to see the game.

Over the past three years, the bowl's impact has averaged $12.2 million—during what normally is the slowest period of the year for San Diego tourism.

"The track record of the Sea World Holiday Bowl speaks for itself," said L. Robert Payne, 1990 president of the bowl. "This event is an economic winner for the city and county of San Diego. The Holiday Bowl brings in more tourist dollars than any convention that comes to town and confirms the importance of the Holiday Bowl to the community."

"Many major milestones were passed in 1989," Payne said. "The sellout was the fourth in a row and the ninth in our 12-year history. Not only did we sell out the game, but all the tickets were sold by October 2—the earliest we have accomplished that feat in our history."

"Another milestone was the team payout," Payne reported. "The participating teams, Penn State and Brigham Young, received $1,009,038 each, a total payout of $2,018,076, the biggest payday in the game."

San Diego also enjoyed significant visibility on ESPN's nationwide telecast of the 1989 game. The telecast reached nearly 8.6 million viewers based on a 6.2 rating.

"ESPN expressed confidence in the bowl by extending our original contract—which was signed in 1987—well into the 1990s," said outgoing bowl president Bruce Moore.

Aid at private colleges doubles from 1970 to '87

Student financial aid provided by private colleges to attract low-income and minority students more than doubled from 1970 to 1987, an association of the schools said recently.

But Richard Rosser, president of the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities, told the Associated Press such aid cannot continue to grow at that pace without the colleges jeopardizing "their own financial health and commitments to other areas of need."

An institute study, "A Commitment to Access," said that independent colleges and universities provided $2.43 billion from their own resources for financial assistance to undergraduate students in 1987-88 school year—a 102 percent increase, adjusted for inflation, since 1970-71.

"The Federal government's commitment to providing student financial assistance, especially in the form of grants, must be strengthened if low-income and middle-income students are going to be allowed the choice of an education best suited for them. The independent sector cannot do it alone," he said.

More than three-quarters of the growth occurred since the 1980-81 school year, the study said, estimating that the figure reached $2.626 billion in 1988-89.

In the 1975-76 school year, Federal aid was almost 3½ times the aid provided by the institutions themselves, Rosser said, adding that "independent colleges and universities now provide more grant assistance to undergraduates than all Federal student aid grants combined."

Federal aid, he said, now focuses on the "truly needy," with little help for students from middle-class families. The schools also provide little aid to middle-class students.

More than 85 percent of the aid provided by private colleges in 1987-88, $2 billion, was awarded as grants and scholarships.

In the 1986-87 term, expenses for a typical private-college student receiving aid averaged $10,300 for tuition, fees, room and board. An average of $7,300 was provided in financial aid, grants, loans and work-study, leaving the student out-of-pocket expenses of about $3,000.

The study said that on average, 59 percent of all undergraduates attending independent colleges and universities received some form of institutionally provided aid in 1987-88, up from 44 percent in 1970-71.

To finance increased student aid,

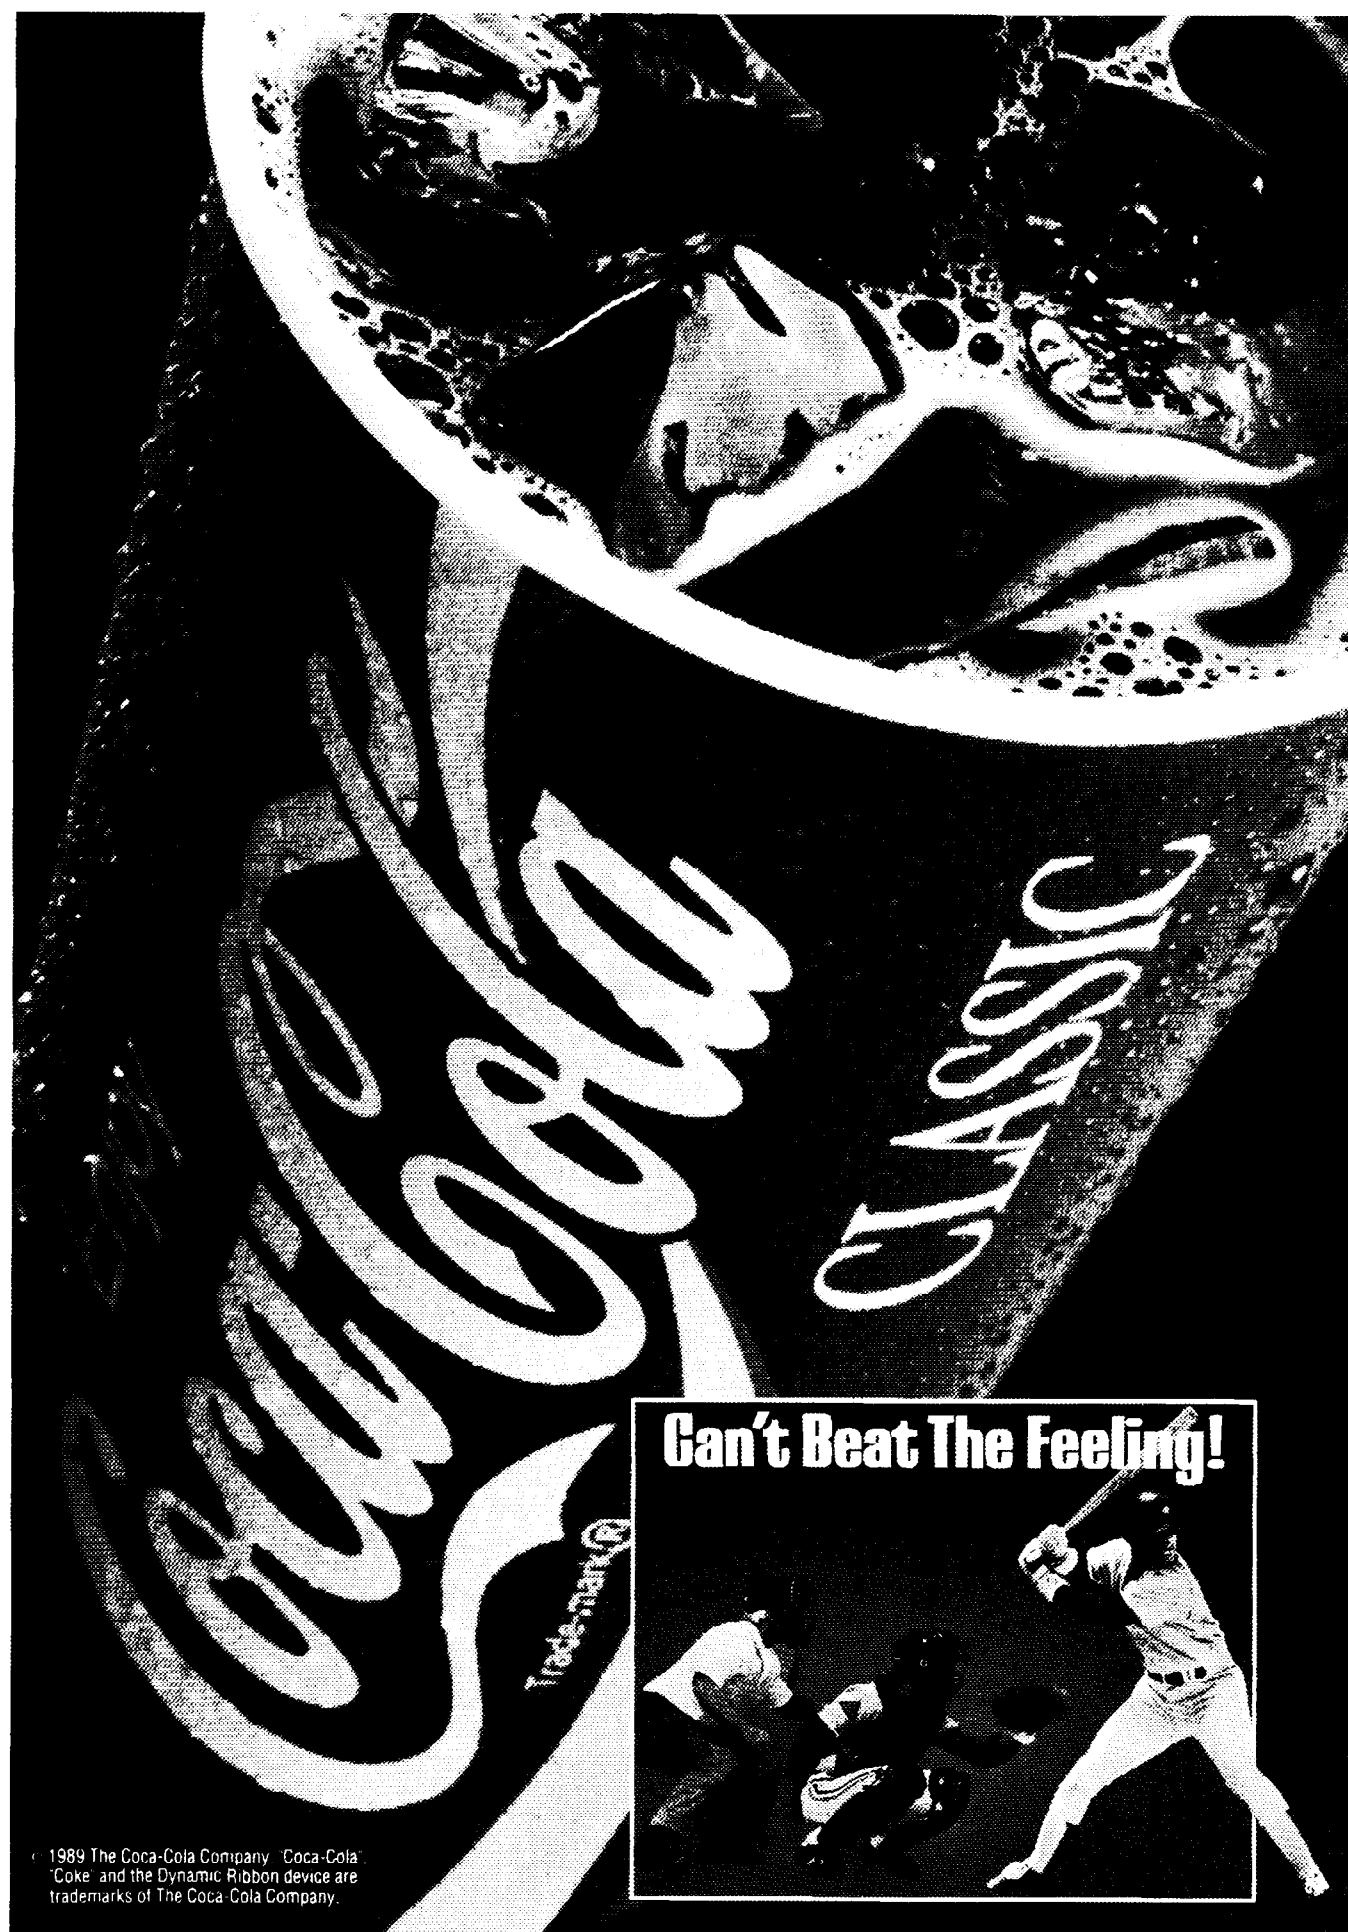

Rosser said, private colleges are often forced to keep faculty salaries low, defer maintenance and cut back on purchases of library material and science equipment.

NCAA among major sports groups cooperating on drug-testing issues

The NCAA, the National Football League and the United States Olympic Committee opened the doors of communication among their drug-testing programs May 7 at the first meeting of the NCAA Special Planning Committee for Drug Testing.

The committee, which was appointed by the NCAA Executive Committee, is the first group to contain drug-testing staff members from all three organizations. The meeting in Chicago focused on laboratory and testing issues.

"The meeting was historic because it marked the first time the three bodies that do the most testing of athletes had gotten together to discuss drug-testing issues," said Frank D. Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences and staff liaison to the special planning committee. "It was the first step in what the committee expects to be an ongoing process of sharing and cooperation among the NCAA, the NFL and the USOC."

The committee is charged with formulating long-range plans for the development, certification, funding and sponsorship of drug-testing laboratories; sharing drug-testing expertise among the NCAA and other organizations, conferences and institutions, and developing and refining drug-testing procedures and guidelines.

At the meeting, the committee met with directors of the three laboratories used by the NCAA and the one facility used by the NFL. The directors discussed the accreditation, certification and capacity of their labs, as well as the costs of conducting anabolic-steroid testing at the facilities.

Committee members agreed that the NCAA, the NFL and the USOC will benefit from more cooperation in the following areas:

- Examining laboratory and testing issues,
- Sharing collection crews,
- Developing drug-education materials that do not duplicate or contradict other efforts, and
- Funding research programs.

The group is expected to issue formal recommendations in the next 10 days.

Committee members are Edward E. Bozik, University of Pittsburgh (chair); Dr. Paul W. Gikas, University of Michigan; Malcolm C. McInnis Jr., University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Dr. Robert O. Voy, Las Vegas, Nevada (private practice); Dr. Deborah Waters, USOC, and Don Weiss, NFL. Dr. John Lombardo, the NFL's new adviser on anabolic steroids, attended the meeting in Weiss' absence.

Knight Commission leaders foresee push for reforms to benefit recruits

By Lee Byrd

The cochairmen of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics said May 15 that the panel likely will press for more liberal allowances for recruits, the abolition of athletics dormitories and an end to off-season tournaments for prep basketball players.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame, and William C.

Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina system, also criticized the increasing harvest of college undergraduates by professional football and basketball.

They met with reporters after the 22-member Knight Commission had spent two days hearing from 17 of the nation's top college basketball and football coaches. None of the coaches attended the press briefing.

Rev. Hesburgh said the coaches had proposed a major change in recruiting rules, barring them from even talking to high school students who don't show academic promise for college—meaning at least a 2.000 or "C" grade average in 11 key courses.

The idea, aired by Notre Dame basketball coach Richard "Digger" Phelps, won immediate support on the panel and among other coaches on hand, Hesburgh said.

"We're hearing a lot of static about athletics dorms, which take the kids out of the normal college experience and put them over there like a bunch of freaks," Hesburgh said. "My guess is we're probably going to be coming out against that."

While the panel remains opposed to paying student-athletes, "We're not against helping these kids," Hesburgh said. "Some of the rules now are silly."

For example, he said, athletes should be entitled to receive expenses to go home for regular vacations or for personal emergencies, such as a death in the family. And he said it would cost "peanuts" to keep them in decent clothing.

"Some of these kids can't afford a decent coat," he said. "We dress up the Olympic team, and I think every school ought to be able to dress up (its) kids."

Hesburgh said the commission hoped to meet in June with commissioners of the NFL and NBA. "We ought to say to them, 'You should think long and hard before you start enticing people to leave school before their education is completed.'"

Hesburgh noted that 30 juniors, including Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware of the University of Houston, quit school this year to make themselves available to the NFL, and only 10 were claimed.

"That means that 20 youngsters now can't go back and take up intercollegiate athletics because they're no longer eligible and they've got no hope of getting a degree unless they go back and pay for it, which many of those youngsters have no money to do. That isn't a very salutary effect on the lives of those 20 youngsters."

Hesburgh said the commission was pointing toward "fundamental change...not nit-picky things" in the rules for college sports, with its final report to the NCAA and the nation likely next March.

Among issues yet unresolved, he said, was the question of freshman eligibility, an end to which was proposed by Pennsylvania State University football coach Joseph V. Paterno. Friday said there is a "split down the middle" on that one, both within the commission and the entire academic family.

Friday said the commission also plans more hearings into whether coaches should be allowed to negotiate handsome endorsement contracts, such as the shoe promotions which net some basketball coaches six-figure incomes. One coach, Dale Brown of Louisiana State University, told the panel he intends to donate such earnings to a variety of charitable causes, including a fund to help dropout athletes finish their schooling.

In any case, both Hesburgh and Friday said the commission already has resolved that all revenue related to athletics, including endorsements, should be fully disclosed and subject to control by academic administrators. Another sure recommendation, they said, was that each institution hire an outside auditor to conduct an annual review of athletics expenditures, and to make those findings public.

As for poor student-athletes who come up with fancy cars or elaborate wardrobes—from whatever sources—"We think that ...couldn't happen without the coaches being on top of it," Hesburgh said. "Our point is, you stop that, bang, the moment you see it. And you fire the coach, if he knows about it and doesn't do anything about it."

Friday said it was the panel's unanimous opinion that high school basketball tournaments associated with summer camps or commercial promotions, such as the McDonald's All-Star Classic, should be abolished.

Byrd writes for the Associated Press.

the necessity for public reporting of this data despite the time and effort that would be required for per-sonal analysis and reporting by each institution. Several subcommittee sources reported, however, that the American Council on Education agreed to the Henry proposal—once a provision contained in the original Henry bill relating to institutional control of athletics-related revenues had been eliminated.

With respect to reporting of graduation rates, the bill would require, among other data, the annual reporting of average graduation rates, based on four-year rolling averages, for students who received athletically related financial aid. Those data would be broken down by race and sex in basketball, football and, unlike the Senate bill, in baseball, cross country/track, and ice hockey. The bill also would require publication of the average graduation rate of students at the institution, based on a four-year rolling average, broken down by race and sex.

As in the Senate version of the bill, the Secretary of Education is authorized to waive the requirements of the act for any institution that is a member of an athletics association or conference that voluntarily publishes graduation-rate data substantially comparable to the information required by the act.

The reporting requirements of the subcommittee version of the act are somewhat more detailed than those contained in the Senate version, raising questions whether the NCAA's current program of voluntary reporting of graduation-rate data will be deemed by the Secretary of Education to meet the test of substantial comparability necessary for exemption from the requirements of the act.

Action by the Postsecondary Education Subcommittee represents the first formal step in possible adoption of the House version of the act. The reported bill must now be considered by the full Committee on Energy and Commerce (presently scheduled for May 22), and thereafter by the House as a whole. If adopted by the House, then differences between the House and Senate versions would need to be reconciled.

Gait brothers playing college lacrosse like nobody else

By William Kates

If Paul and Gary Gait played basketball, they'd be mentioned in the same breath as Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson.

If hockey was their sport, Wayne Gretzky and Mario Lemieux would come to mind.

But the Canadian-born twins play lacrosse—better than anyone who has come before them, say opponents and observers—and their glorious careers are fast approaching a dead end.

"I'm not interested in basketball, but I can tell you about Michael Jordan," said Jamie Hunt, editor of Lacrosse magazine. "People vaguely familiar with lacrosse can tell you about the Gait twins."

Especially after the wave of publicity the seniors have received as they close their record-setting careers while Syracuse University goes for its third consecutive national championship.

The Gaits' extraordinary story, as far as lacrosse is concerned, will end Memorial Day at the latest, when the 1990 NCAA Division I championship game is played. There is no professional league in the sport, which traditionally has been the province of Eastern high schools and colleges.

"There's no tomorrow for them," agreed Syracuse coach Roy Simmons Jr.

Hunt added, "It's kind of depressing. They're at the top of their game and about to fade into obscurity."

But the 6-2, 200-pound identical twins show no resentment that million-dollar contracts, lucrative endorsements and continued fame aren't in their futures.

"It's a dead end, but the game wouldn't be the same if there was a professional league and lots of money involved," said Paul, Syracuse's leading scorer entering the Division I tournament with 24 goals and 27 assists. He needs just two points to reach the 200-point mark for his career.

"It would be too much like a job," Paul added. "And there are other ways to make money."

"You play lacrosse just for fun," echoed Gary, who had 49 points this season (through May 11) and is likely to finish as the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association's second-leading goal scorer.

"You play for yourself and the team. If there was a pro league with lots of money, there'd be competition among the players on the same team. It would be a selfish game. No, it wouldn't even be a game anymore."

"Besides, if we'd been interested in money and professional leagues, we would have played another sport, right?" said Gary.

The Gaits began drawing attention soon after their arrival at Syracuse four years ago. Raised playing indoor box lacrosse in Brentwood Bay, British Columbia, they quickly made the transition to field lacrosse, which is played on a larger field with more players.

As a freshman, Gary made honorable mention all-America and was selected for the NCAA all-tournament team after scoring 11 goals in two games.

By their sophomore year, the Gaits had mastered the more wide-open style of field lacrosse—and the impact was sudden and significant.

Gary was named national player of the year after scoring a collegiate season-record 70 goals. Paul earned first-team all-America honors with 47 goals and 15 assists.

Their scoring output has tailed

Paul
Gait

off the past two seasons, but only because the Orangemen are loaded with talent and opposing coaches have become obsessed with not letting the Gaits beat their teams. The Syracuse juggernaut has rolled to a 39-1 record during the past three seasons, losing only its opener last season to perennial power Johns Hopkins by a point on the road.

How imposing have the Gait brothers been? Syracuse played only 10 games in the 1990 regular season because Simmons had trouble finding opponents willing to schedule his Orangemen.

"Some of the teams said they'd be interested in getting us back on their schedule in 1991 or 1992," after the Gaits have graduated, he said.

"They are super athletes who come along once in a lifetime," said St. John's (New York) coach Bill Miltenberg, after Syracuse trounced his Redmen, 26-9, earlier this season.

During the game, Paul Gait repeated a shot performed by his brother two years ago against Pennsylvania in an NCAA tournament game when he dunked the ball over the crossbar after soaring into the goal crease from behind.

The shot, which has never been seen in lacrosse history before Gary's attempt, has become known as "Air-Gait." The Gaits also have made no-look shots—some from behind their heads or behind their backs or between their legs—commonplace.

"They've revolutionized the game," said Hunt.

The 23-year-old sibling midfielders have forced opposing coaches to invent new defensive strategies. Opposing midfielders, not generally regarded as defensive players, have had to alter their play to contain the twins.

"The sport is changing, and it's because of them," said Hunt.

Paul and Gary deny that they've had such a powerful influence on lacrosse.

"We just do things differently. Things people have never had the nerve to do," said Gary.

"What's really great is that through what they've done on and off the field, lacrosse has caught the attention of more people, especially kids," Hunt said. "More people are playing lacrosse as a result of the things they've done."
