Commission to push for entire reform package

The NCAA Presidents Commission has voted to support the entire "reform package" of legislation at the 1991 Convention, including all of the proposals developed by the "Conference of Conferences," the Special Committee on Cost Reduction and the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure.

That action in the Commission's October 2-3 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, means that both the Commission and the NCAA Council are supporting nearly all of the reform amendments for the January Convention. There were no votes in opposition to that action in the Commission meeting.

"The Commission is saying that it supports these reform-agenda items in principle," Commission Chair Martin A. Massengale said after the meeting. "We basically, as a Commission, want to stay out of the details. I think there will be some small modifications (through the amendment-to-amendment process, which ends October 15), but we support the principle and we are strongly behind these proposals."

He said the Commission will review all amendments to amendments to assure that they do not adversely affect the principle involved in each reform item.

Massengale also noted that Wilford S. Bailey, former NCAA president, and John W. Ryan, former chair of the Commission, had agreed to assist the Commission "in trying to bring this reform agenda about."

"It's fair to say that I believe this is the most extensive reform agenda the Commission has put forward since its inception," he said. "It is important that institutions take a position that supports some of the key issues and move ahead. We're hoping that all of these will be adopted."

The Commission chair also said he hopes that more the 200 chief executive officers of member institutions will attend the January Convention. The record attendance of CEOs at an NCAA Convention was 199 at the special "integrity" Convention in June 1985.

Academics

The Commission also voted to sponsor a resolution at the coming Convention that would call for strengthening of NCAA academic requirements for both initial eligibility and continuing eligibility.

The resolution will direct the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee to develop recommendations toward that end for review by the Commission in its April 1991 meeting. The Commission then would sponsor legislation at the 1992 Convention to effect more stringent eligibility standards.

"People generally have come to recognize the importance of academics and the fact that we're in a world-competitive situation today, a global marketplace," Massengale said. "It's important that we not only help people develop athletics skills, but also academic skills. Here again, it's a matter of principle."

Massengale said the Academic Requirements Committee would evaluate the initial results in the Association's ongoing academic research, and it would be difficult to say what direction that committee's recommendations might take. "But we think there is more sensitivity, if you will, more visibility and more concern about academics today than may have been true earlier. There is a lot more emphasis than in the past."

Executive Director Richard D. Schultz agreed that there are no preconceived ideas regarding the form such strengthening would take, See Commission, page 2

Time for change is now—Schultz

NCAA Executive Director urged support for the major legislative proposals at the 1991 Convention in remarks to the members of the Collegiate Commissioners Association and the University Commissioners Association October 4 in Kansas City, Missouri.

"I think we have more pressure on us to effect positive legislation today than we've ever had," Schultz told the commissioners, citing especially interest in the U.S. Congress in involving itself in athletics matters. "If we're ineffective in that (making significant legislative changes), they're going to jump in with both feet," he said.

"It's time for us to be very proactive," Schultz declared. Noting the major reform packages facing the 1991 Convention, he said, "There are items there that you like, items you don't like and some you're not sure of. But it's an ideal time for us to get these things passed."

"We've got an opportunity, and we can't miss this opportunity," he said. See Time, page 3

After 10 years in NCAA, women's athletics comes of age

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News staff

When Stanford defeated Auburn to win its first NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship, the significance of that victory last April was not Katy Steding's six three-point field goals, which set a championship-game record. And it wasn't the fact that it was a third straight title-game appearance for Auburn. What was most significant was who was watching the game. Or more accurately, how many were watching the game.

The game was viewed by 20,023 fans at Thompson-Boling Arena in Knoxville, Tennessee. That set a record for the most fans at an NCAA women's basketball game.

That the Women's Final Four was able to draw that many fans is a benchmark that will be pointed to for many years as an "arrival."

But an arrival from where? It is probably most easily explained as an attitude adjustment.

Merrily Dean Baker, NCAA assistant executive director for administration, recalls: "When I was growing up, I participated in sports with the neighborhood boys. I was called 'a tomboy.' I have daughters who participate in sports and they are called 'athletes.' That is the difference."

With that attitude adjustment, it now is acceptable for girls and women to be athletically competitive. Today, more than one million girls participate in youth and high school sports in this country. Last year, more than 10,000 women received collegiate athletics grants-in-aid, at a cost of $51 million.

"In the 1970s, American society tolerated women in sports," Baker said. "In the 1980s, society supported women in sports. I believe in the 1990s, society will embrace women in sports."

As the NCAA begins the 1990-91 academic year, the Association and its members celebrate the first decade of NCAA women's athletics, saluting the 10th anniversary of 12 championships.

Before 1981, women's championships were conducted by the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Chris Plonsky, assistant commissioner of the Big East Conference and a former women's sports information director at the University of Texas, Austin, recalls the first signs of acceptance of women's basketball during her days in Austin. "It was not just university acceptance," she said. "The community accepted it as well."

"The Austin community came to embrace those women athletes, and the media played a key role for us. We went to war in terms of having to work for the coverage. For every phone call the men's SID made to the Austin newspaper, we had to make three to get the same kind of coverage. But that's competition."

"I think the most significant benefit (of the move to the NCAA) was in public visibility," said Donna A. Lopiano, director of women's athletics at Texas. "The AIAW was structured on a geographical level. You had state championships, regional championships and then national championships. Women weren't in conferences. Their state was their conference."

"When the AIAW ceased (operations), women went into conferences, because that was the structure the NCAA recognized. Most of them went into the same conferences as the men, though a few went into women-only conferences.

"The public understood the competition. The TIAW (Texas AIAW) to them was much less meaningful than the Southwest Conference. Women's programs were much more recognized," Lopiano said.

Plonsky, who worked under Lopiano at the time of the switch, added, "It was difficult in some respects as a publicist to get people to understand the differences. The growth of women's basketball made it possible for Cheryl Miller to become such a visible name. The Pat Summitts of the world were recognized not only because of Olympic success as players, but because of their coaching success as well."

"For every Cheryl Miller, there was an athlete in another sport, like See After 10, page 5 and he said test scores probably will remain as part of an initial-eligibility requirement.

October 15 is deadline for amendments to amendments

Member institutions wishing to submit amendments-to-amendments for the 1991 NCAA Convention are reminded that under the Association's new legislative calendar, all amendments-to-amendments must be submitted by October 15.

Amendments-to-amendments may be submitted to the national office via facsimile transmission, provided they are received by the deadline and are signed properly.

In the past, the amendment-to-amendment deadline had been the day before the division business sessions of the Association's annual Convention.

Sponsorship requirements also have changed for amendments-to-amendments, which may not modify existing legislation more than the original proposals they seek to change.

"The test score is some type of consistent measure," he said. "There are differences in high schools and differences in basic education. They (test scores) may be used in a different way, maybe in conjunction with something else, maybe the test score and class rank and grade-point average.

"When we're talking about increasing initial eligibility, there's a lot of ways that could take. It could take a higher grade-point average in the core curriculum; it could mean more required core courses. So the fact that initial eligibility could be toughened doesn't necessarily mean the (minimum SAT) score is going to go from 700 to 800," Schultz said.

Membership structure

Noting the Commission's support for the membership-structure proposals, Massengale disagreed with the argument by some critics that the more stringent Division I membership requirements being proposed in that package are in contradiction to the cost-reduction measures.

"The point of the membership-structure committee's work is that an institution can decide at which level it wishes to compete," he said, explaining that the structure proposals do not require any institution to leave Division I if it does not wish to do so. "I don't agree with the statement that (the proposals) are in conflict."

He also noted that the membership-structure proposals are part of the reform package because "the membership-structure committee is saying that it will enhance reform to put schools in like groupings—more federation of groups that are more similar."

Other issues

The Commission's Presidential Nominating Committee, chaired by President Margaret R. Preska of Mankato State University, has developed its slate of candidates for vacancies that will occur on the Commission after the 1991 Convention adjourns. Balloting for those positions will begin later this month, as will the Commission's own procedures for selecting a replacement for Massengale as chair of the Commission and for Bernard F. Sliger, president of Florida State University, as its Division I chair.

Meanwhile, the Commission's Subcommittee on Objectives and Guiding Principles, chaired by President Harold H. Haak, California State University, Fresno, presented a progress report at the October meeting and will submit its final report at the Commission's January meeting. That subcommittee is attempting to develop a statement of basic principles by which the Commission can consider future actions.

The group's Advisory Committee on Coaches Compensation, chaired by Chancellor R. Gerald Turner of the University of Mississippi, is attempting to schedule its first meeting. That committee is scheduled to provide a progress report by April 1991 and a final report by June 1991.

The Commission also directed the staff to proceed with development of several items recommended last year by the Advisory Committee to Review the NCAA Governance Process. Legislation to enhance the legislative process and the role of CEOs therein will be reviewed next April; meanwhile, work will proceed on such documents as a statement of the CEO's fundamental responsibilities in athletics matters and a proposed athletics handbook for chief executive officers.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than October 22.

Walter Byers Scholarship Committee: Replacement for Edward B. Fort, North Carolina A&T State University, unable to attend meetings. Appointee should be from Division I-AA.

Division III Baseball: Replacement for Paul Solberg, Luther College, resigned, inasmuch as realignment resulted in two representatives from the same region. Appointee must be a Division III baseball representative, preferably from the Midwest region.

COMMITTEE CHANGES

General Committees

Student-Athlete Advisory Committee: Tom Burns, Millersville University of Pennsylvania, appointed as a Division II, Region I representative to replace William Heyser, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, unable to serve.

Walter Byers Scholarship: John B. Slaughter, Occidental College, appointed to replace Kenneth J. Weller, retired.

Committee on Women's Athletics: Debra Hunter, Bethel College (Minnesota), appointed to replace Cheryl A. Marra, now at a Division I institution.

Sports Committees

Division II Baseball: R. Kenneth Keiper, University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, appointed as chair to replace Robert J. Hiebert. Daniel G. Guerrero, California State University, Dominguez Hills, appointed to replace Robert J. Hiebert as a member, inasmuch as California State University, Northridge, now is a Division I institution.

Association announces new appointments

Cessna

Sharon K. Cessna has been named youth programs coordinator in the Association's administration department.

She joins the NCAA from Pennsylvania State University, York, where she was on the faculty and served as women's volleyball coach for seven years. Cessna also served as athletics director at the school the past two years.

She earned an undergraduate degree in health and physical education from James Madison University and a master's in physical education from Frostburg State University. Cessna also holds a doctorate in administration supervision from the University of Maryland, College Park.

Before joining the staff at Penn State-York, Cessna taught in high school in Westernport, Maryland.

Chambers

David N. Chambers has joined the national office staff as a legislative assistant.

Chambers earned his undergraduate and master's degrees from the University of Iowa, where he played football. He was named to the Big Ten Conference's all-academic football team and was a dean's list student.

After earning his degrees at Iowa, Chambers went on to Wake Forest University's law school. While completing requirements for his law degree, he served as a research assistant and was a member of the Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

Chambers joined the NCAA legislative services department from Iowa, where he worked as an administrative assistant and was involved in the review of Big Ten and NCAA regulations for the athletics department.

Zalot

Marcella K. Zalot has joined the national office staff as an eligibility representative in the NCAA enforcement department.

Zalot served as an intern in the enforcement department during the past academic year.

A graduate of Smith College, Zalot played intercollegiate basketball four years and women's soccer one year while at Smith. She went on to earn a master's degree in sports management from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

While at Massachusetts, Zalot served one year as a graduate assistant coach in women's basketball.

Legislative Assistance

1990 Column No. 35

Precollege expense—intrasquad scrimmages at high schools

Member institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 13.16.1, an institution or a representative of its athletics interests may not offer, provide or arrange financial assistance, directly or indirectly, to pay (in whole or in part) the cost of the prospect's educational or other expenses for any period prior to his or her enrollment or so the prospect can obtain a postgraduate education. Further, Bylaw 13.16.1.2 precludes an institution from contributing to a high school or its athletics booster club any funds realized from an athletics contest played or practice held at a high school facility, except actual and necessary expenses for the rental of the facility. Finally, the provisions of Bylaw 16.8.1.1 (expenses for practice sessions) permit an institution to participate in an intrasquad contest at a high school only if the high school is located within the member institution's state or, if outside the state, no more than 100 miles from the institution's campus.

NCAA Bylaw 13.7.5.4.1—student hosts/official visits

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.7.5.4.1, if several students host a prospect during an official visit, the institution may provide only one student host entertainment money to cover the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the prospect and the host. The other students must pay for their own entertainment.

The NCAA Interpretations Committee recently reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.7.5.4.1 and determined that a member institution may provide free meals to only one student host entertaining a particular prospective student-athlete on an official visit if restaurant facilities are utilized for the meal.

Nonprofit organizations—promotional activities

During its August 22-23, 1990, meeting, the Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 12.5.1.1 and determined that a nonprofit organization (as distinguished from a charitable or an educational organization) may utilize the names or pictures of students with remaining eligibility to promote the educational or charitable activities of the organization; however, the names and pictures of student-athletes with remaining eligibility may not be utilized to promote any commercial ventures of the nonprofit organization.

Financial aid—Division I football

During its September 13, 1990, conference, the Interpretations Committee reviewed two previous actions (reference: Item No. 6 of the minutes of the committee's June 8, 1989, conference and Item No. 7 of the minutes of the committee's July 19, 1990, conference) and confirmed that a recruited student-athlete (whether a qualifier or a nonqualifier) in the sport of football who first receives athletically related financial aid subsequent to the first academic year in residence must be considered an initial counter for that academic year in which he first receives the aid, if such aid is received during the fall term; however, if (following completion of the first academic year in residence) such a student-athlete begins receiving aid for the first time in the second or third term of an academic year, he may be considered an initial counter during either the academic year in which he first receives the aid or the next academic year. Please note that the student-athlete would count in the institution's overall limitations in the sport of football during any year in which the student-athlete receives financial aid.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Football player makes history in biology lab

By R. B. Fallstrom

The Washington University (Missouri) Bears' second-leading receiver will miss the October 20 football game against Colorado College because of a previous commitment.

Chris Warlick, a senior biology major, is going to be the only undergraduate in the country to address more than 5,000 top medical specialists at the American Society of Human Geneticists' national convention in Cincinnati.

"It's certainly distinctly unusual for this to occur," said Victor McKusick, a professor of genetics at Johns Hopkins University. "I can't remember any in the recent past."

The title of Warlick's work: "Isolation of a Yeast Artificial Chromosome Clone D14S26 Near a Gene for Familial Hypertrophic Cardiomyopathy and Identification of Two New Restriction Fragment Length Polymorphism Probes at this Lo-begin working in a genetics lab at the school's medical center. This spring, the lab was part of a project that also involved several other labs around the country in a continuing attempt to map human genes.

Warlick's main focus was an area of a chromosome near a marker for a hereditary heart ailment, familial hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. It's a disease with no outward symptoms that can strike quickly and fatally.

Warlick discovered two markers on the chromosome that could help narrow the search for the gene that causes the disease. His discoveries soon will become permanent fixtures on the updated human genetics map and will bear his initials—CW1 and CW2.

"It's exciting," McKusick said, but he added, "I wouldn't call it earth-shattering."

"This is the type of approach being used all over the place for identifying the gene defect in particular diseases," such as cystic fibrosis, McKusick added.

But Warlick's discovery is so complex that he has trouble boiling it down in layman's terms.

He hopes to be involved in furthering this study but doesn't want to miss out on any student experiences.

"College is probably the last chance you have to experience these extremes, and I'm taking advantage of it while I can," he said.

He's an adopted son of Ernie Warlick, a tight end for the National Football League's Buffalo Bills in the 1960s, but until last season he had not played the sport since age 10 because he was undersized.

Now he's 6-4 and 180, but it was academics that got him into Washington University. He ranked eighth cus."

"He's a very smart guy, and he has a great career ahead of himself as a scientist," said Helen Donis-Keller, professor of genetics at Washington University's school of medicine. "The work that he's doing is of great interest in the scientific community these days."

That's not so odd at Washington University, a Division III school that has a reputation for producing scholars.

There are no athletics scholarships, so Warlick and his teammates play for the love of the game.

Practice starts at 4 p.m., at least an hour later than for most teams, because many players have labs late in the day. And even at that time, coach Larry Kindbom has become accustomed to starting practice with about three-fourths of his squad.

Two weeks ago, Warlick had an 80-yard touchdown catch, and he has 15 receptions for 255 yards and three touchdowns through games of October 5.

"I wish I had a couple of years left to play, but it's not conducive with my future plans," he said.

Warlick is a B-minus student, struggling with calculus and organic chemistry. "Two killers—thank goodness they're of no practical value," he said.

Put him in a laboratory, and everything changes.

In the summer of 1989, Warlick

The executive director also suggested to the commissioners that some of the reform proposals can be modified in January by the amendment-to-amendment procedure, "but don't throw out the baby with the bath water," he cautioned. "We can come back in future years and fine-tune if we have to."

The Division I conference commissioners' organizations were conducting their annual fall meetings in Kansas City. Joseph L. Kearney, Western Athletic Conference, currently heads the Collegiate Commissioners Association, and Thomas E. Yeager, Colonial Athletic Association, is president of the University Commissioners Association.

Foundation issues mission statement

The board of directors of the NCAA Foundation has approved a mission statement, which emphasizes that student-athletes should enjoy a total undergraduate experience, and approved Foundation support for the NCAA Degree-Completion Scholarship Program and the Alcohol-Education Program.

Status reports regarding the Foundation and its proposed programs were presented to the board by Richard D. Schultz, board chair, and Robert C. Khayat, Foundation president.

The statement, as approved by the board, provides that the mission of the Foundation will be "to encourage every student-athlete to complete a meaningful academic degree program, participate fully in the college community and prepare for life after college athletics."

The next meeting of the board is scheduled April 1, 1991, in Indianapolis. Inquiries about the Foundation should be sent to Khayat at 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422.

ADs in Division I-A back reforms that vary from proposed legislation

Cost-cutting measures including across-the-board reductions in part-time or graduate assistant coaching staffs, recruiting limitations and five percent scholarship reductions have been endorsed by the Division I-A Directors Association.

The ADs of 94 of the 105 I-A schools attended a three-day meeting in Tucson October 1-3, with a majority voting to recommend that the cost-cutting measures be enacted by all Division I members at the annual NCAA Convention in January.

Sam Jankovich, director of athletics at the University of Miami (Florida) and chair of the Division I-A Directors Association of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, said, "The whole intent was to cut costs; the whole intent was to make the most out of what you had available," he told the Associated Press.

"What you will find across the board is that there are staff reductions dealing with almost every sport," Jankovich said.

He said the proposal before the NCAA calls for replacing graduate-student assistant coaches in football, basketball and other sports with "restricted coaches" getting paid $12,000 a year.

The graduate assistants "are going to be the big losers," Jankovich said. But he said undergraduate student assistants will be able to replace them. He suggested that graduate assistants would be better off coaching in high schools and junior colleges initially to gain a broader and "different perspective of what the industry is."

Jankovich also said too many graduate assistants go directly from playing a collegiate sport into coaching it without "the experiences of coaching at the high-school level," and he said they are too costly.

Each Division I-A football coaching staff currently can have a head coach, nine full-time assistants and five graduate assistants. Under the ADs' proposal, Jankovich said, each school would have a choice of eight full-time assistants and four restricted coaches or nine assistants and two restricted coaches. The latter would mean a $24,000 savings that could be used toward the additional full-time coach, Jankovich said.

He said the additional full-time coach would receive employee benefits but not such fringe benefits as a courtesy car or bowl-game bonus.

Jankovich said 82 percent of the directors attending the meeting voted to cut in half the recommendation of the NCAA's Special Committee on Cost Reduction for a 10 percent cut in scholarships, endorsing a five percent reduction.

Under the directors' recommendations, recruiting also would be curbed, by lowering from 10 to eight—one more than the NCAA proposal—the number of football coaches who can go off-campus. There also would be some adjustment for evaluations and contacts of potential recruits.

Jankovich said, "We all definitely feel that there are abuses; we feel that the student-athletes in the past have been bothered far too much, as well as their families and homes disrupted, and that there is an excessive cost."

He said the athletics directors endorsed "overall and overwhelmingly" reforms called for in legislation pending before the NCAA.

In addition, he said the directors voted that athletics dormitories and the number of meals provided daily for student-athletes were decisions for individual institutions.

The situation facing ADs reflects the business world's swing from generating more money to support continuing expenses to focusing on reducing costs so "we can operate our business better," Jankovich said.

He said the budget savings under the proposed reductions would vary greatly from institution to institution. And he said predicting NCAA passage would be "very hard," but that "at least, what will come out of this is that there is a message that we are all on the same page."

SEC can offer football fans a lot, including a play-off

By Paul Newberry

"Sometimes, your strength hurts you," said Joe Dean, director of athletics at Louisiana State University. "We have the best football league in America. Maybe that scared off some people."

So the Southeastern Conference ended up with the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, from the Southwest Athletic Conference, and the University of South Carolina, an independent. Both teams have loyal following but questionable TV value—certainly nothing like the University of Texas, Austin, or like Pennsylvania State University, which began the shakeup of conferences by joining the Big Ten Conference.

Now, the SEC boasts a 12-team league spread over nine states that is sure to offer some attractive TV games.

"The thing that people miss is that while TV is one of the driving forces, so are football ticket sales," Dean said. "Arkansas and South Carolina are strong additions for us. They don't hurt us TV-wise, and we're picking up two whole states."

The SEC has a strong TV package with Turner Broadcasting System, and the failure to pick up Florida State University or the University of Miami (Florida) is tempered by the fact that the league already has the University of Florida.

"We were very strong to start with, and that has certainly not been diminished," said Douglas A. Dickey, director of athletics at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. "The thing it does do, as far as TV is concerned, is it enlarges the choices when people are looking at our conference on a given day. ... There's another option for ESPN or TBS beyond the key game that CBS may have taken."

The 12-team lineup also allows the SEC to do something that no other major conference can do—split into two divisions. That could set up a big-money showdown between the two division winners in football, since the NCAA allows a 12th game on the schedule (for such groupings).

For instance, just imagine Auburn and Tennessee meeting at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta or Legion Field in Birmingham for the conference championship, with the winner advancing to the Sugar Bowl.

"That would be the only way to have a fair champion," said Florida head football coach Steve Spurrier. "Even with 10 teams, we don't play everybody else (the SEC has a seven-game league schedule). Some years, a team wins it because of scheduling."

The league's athletics director will meet in Birmingham October 10-11 to discuss the new alignment, but Dean already can envision one possible divisional structure. Kentucky, Vanderbilt, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida would be in the East and LSU, Auburn, Alabama, Mississippi, Mississippi State and Arkansas would make up the West.

"The balance of those two divisions looks good," he said. "And there are certain groups of teams that have got to be kept together. You're not going to separate Alabama and Auburn, or Georgia and Florida."

Douglas A. Dickey

With divisions, each team would probably play the other five teams in its division each year and two from the other group on a rotating, home-and-home basis. But Dean's scenario, for instance, could present some problems, since it would separate Auburn from Georgia, Florida and Tennessee—three of its biggest rivals.

"I don't have that answer," Dean said. "There may be another way."

Dickey said it is imperative that important rivalries be kept intact.

"There are some rivalries that have been very good for season-ticket sales and donor-based contributions," he said. "We've got to be careful that we don't give up some of those things."

Not everyone believes that bigger is necessarily better.

"I'm a traditionalist," said University of Kentucky head football coach Bill Curry. "I thought it was pretty good the way it was. I think that the reality of TV markets and money and all that was the reason for the expansion. I'm not at all sure that's all good. Nonetheless, it's a fact of life."

Others are more optimistic.

"I'm an expansionist," said Auburn University head basketball coach Tommy Joe Eagles. "Both schools joining the SEC have outstanding basketball traditions and strong programs right now, particularly Arkansas," which reached the Final Four last season.

While most of the attention has been on football, basketball also stands to be affected by any realignment. Eagles would like to see two divisions, with a 16-game conference schedule (home-and-home with intradivisional opponents, one game against each team from the other division) instead of the current 18-game format (home-and-home with every school).

"We'd still be playing everyone in the league," he said. "And an added benefit to that is it would allow us two more nonleague games. The 18-game league schedule in the SEC is brutal."

SEC Commissioner Roy F. Kramer said it is possible the SEC will remain as one 12-team league and not split into two divisions. But a

NCAA rule limiting entertainment for recruits has been a godsend

Bob King, associate director of athletics
Purdue University

"One former problem (in recruiting) was that you could entertain (prospective student-athletes) off campus. For example, if a recruit came to Purdue, I used to be able to take him out to dinner every time.

"Well, then Indiana could turn around and take that recruit to a better place. The next time, I would spend more money on the recruit if he visited again.

"The rule that eliminated off-campus entertainment was a godsend to everyone. It cost schools millions of dollars. Now, nobody can do it, and it's an excellent rule.

"You can entertain them on campus, but entertainment on campus is pretty much equalized."

Jerry Smith, head women's soccer coach
Santa Clara University

San Francisco Chronicle

"We've been successful because the other program (the men's team) is successful. It (success) rubs off on the entire soccer department. There's no rivalry; we're independent programs, but we share a feeling of camaraderie (Santa Clara is ranked No. 1 in both Division I men's and women's polls).

"The school is very supportive of men's and women's soccer. They've seen you can win a national championship with a lot lower budget than (that needed for) football and basketball.

"Although they aren't written in stone, we've received assurances from the athletics department (of continued support)."

"... the performance and footwear needs of athletes seem to have been forgotten. When a young athlete sees his or her hero wearing a certain brand of shoe, they equate that shoe with success and performance. They rarely question how much the athlete is being paid to wear that brand. Even less thought is given to how the shoe fits and how it is constructed. The fact remains that some shoe companies make bad shoes, and no amount of endorsement or advertising can turn a bad shoe into a good one.

"Many injuries in sports can be linked in whole or part to shoes, and these factors must be considered when judging footwear: What sport is the shoe used for? What surfaces is it used on? Does the individual athlete have foot- or leg-structure problems? What level of play is the shoe being used for? These are some of the criteria that should be used to judge an athletics shoe, and the question is: Can this shoe lessen or prevent injuries in this person under the conditions?

"My concern is simple: I want professional and college athletes to wear the best shoes possible without concern for the shoe companies' bottom line. This would seem an easy task to accomplish. Unfortunately, it is not."

"In the past, the NCAA has tried to lump all sports together. The (NCAA members) think they are treating all of them equally, but they're not taking time to understand the differences between sports.

"The issue in intercollegiate athletics is that if you are going to run a straight ship, which we're doing, and demand that players go to class and earn a degree, it's going to take a longer period of time than three or four seasons to really start to show the progress everybody is looking for.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

In regard to the NCAA's merchandising at NCAA championships (The NCAA News, September 17) bringing in $570,000, I question whether it is morally right to ask $18 for a t-shirt. At the last NCAA track and field championships, the least expensive item I saw was a baseball-style hat for $15.

We should be proud of ourselves that we have made it where most of our team members cannot purchase a souvenir to help remind them of the championships meet.

I hope all of you will speak out for the athletes on this matter.

Jackie Joyner, who received notoriety.... Everything was under one roof and everybody was accomplishing the same goal."

Along with the opportunities available to women in athletics administered by the NCAA, the added exposure opened up doors in all areas of life.

Willye White, who competed in track at Tennessee State University and then competed in five consecutive Olympic Games, has become director of health and education at the Chicago Department of Health. "I am just a wealthy person because of my participation in sports," White said. "It was a motivator. It opened my eyes to the rest of the world."

Another notable Tennessee State trackster is Wilma Rudolph. Rudolph became the first American woman to win three gold medals in track and field competition in a single Olympic Games. She won the 100- and 200-meter dashes and ran on the winning 400-meter relay team. Rudolph makes no bones about how her athletics career has helped her professionally. "Without athletics, I would not have obtained an education," she says. "Once I discovered that there was a world for young girls in athletics, I was fascinated; I was determined to conquer all."

Rudolph is the founder and president of The Wilma Rudolph Foundation, a not-for-profit athletics and educational program in Indianapolis. She has worked in diverse fields, from being an administrative analyst at the University of California, Los Angeles, to serving as a human-resources executive at a bank in Nashville, Tennessee.

With all the benefits for student-athletes inherent in the incorporation of women's sports into the NCAA, there even was some anticipation among those not in favor of the switch, notes Judith M. Sweet, secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and athletics director at the University of California, San Diego. "I think right from the start there was an awareness of the potential benefits for female athletes in being associated with the NCAA," Sweet said. "But there was some suspicion of the motives behind the dramatic departure from a men's-only organization."

"Change is not always easy, and many people fear the unknown that goes along with change. There was a problem with incorporation of women's programs, but that was more of an institutional problem than an NCAA problem."

"I personally felt that it made sense to have one governing organization for men and women and that the long-established tradition and experiences of the NCAA would escalate the development of sports opportunities for female athletes."

That overriding feeling of athletics administrators finally made the move a reality. Judith R. Holland, senior associate athletics director at the University of California, Los Angeles, was "one of the leaders who sought to expand the NCAA opportunities to include women," she said. "We wanted those opportunities for our women at UCLA. That just hadn't happened with the AIAW. It is real tough to start a single-sex organization."

"Women's athletics has made great strides since 1981, when the NCAA first sponsored women's championships," Baker says. "The AIAW served its purpose in promoting women's athletics and the time obviously was right for administration of all athletics to come under one roof."

"A single storefront is much easier and more productive."

Phyllis L. Howlett, coordinator of women's sports for the Big Ten Conference, sees many advantages that have been enjoyed since 1981. "Common eligibility makes for equitable administration on campuses," she said. "That has been enhanced by the principle of enforcement, in terms of complying with the rules."

"I also think the promotional and publicity muscle that was provided by the NCAA has greatly enhanced the championships experience of the female student-athlete."

Joyner (now Jackie Joyner-Kersey) carries that thought one step further. Not only does that muscle enhance the championships experience, it better prepares the athlete for later competition. "Once I left high school and went to a university like UCLA, being in that atmosphere of competitiveness, on the athletics field as well as in the classroom, the advantages that I received have taken me a long way. They have been very instrumental in my being able to go on and compete internationally."

Joyner-Kersey certainly has distinguished herself in the international theater, winning both the long jump and the heptathlon at the 1988 Olympics. Today, she is considered by many in athletics as the finest woman athlete in the world.

Barbara Hedges, associate athletics director at the University of Southern California, says those opportunities have raised the level of play in women's athletics. "One of the most dramatic changes that has occurred in intercollegiate athletics in the last 15 years is the increased Hunter R. Rawlings.

Since the NCAA began requiring the annual reports in 1986, the "raw" graduation rates for student-athletes have exceeded the all-university rates in every year (70 percent to 49.9 percent in 1986, 63.9 vs. 51.6 percent in 1987, 53.1 vs. 51.9 percent in 1988, 61.9 vs. 51.8 percent in 1989 and 61 vs. 55.4 percent in 1990), Samuel L. Becker, faculty athletics representative, told the athletics board.

He pointed out that the graduation rate for student-athletes is improved when it is adjusted to include similarities between the two organizations. When you break everything else away," she said, "the bottom line better be, 'Are we doing good things for the student-athletes? Are we giving them a positive experience in competition? Are we doing our best to make sure their experience is a positive one?'"

"The NCAA operates no differently than the AIAW did with regard to that standard. Both had similar opportunity for women in athletics. Starting from very minimal opportunity, women are now competing at the highest level."

"Developing opportunities for college female student-athletes is what the past 20 years have been about," the NCAA's Baker says. She points to the fact that of the 200 women on the highly successful 1984 Summer Olympics team for the United States, 180 were trained at colleges and universities that did not have women's athletics programs prior to 1972, the first year of the AIAW.

Plonsky believes the transition from the AIAW to the NCAA eight years later was natural because of the similarities between the two organizations. "When you break everything else away," she said, "the bottom line better be, 'Are we doing good things for the student-athletes? Are we giving them a positive experience in competition? Are we doing our best to make sure their experience is a positive one?'"

"The NCAA operates no differ-ently than the AIAW did with regard to that standard. Both had similar mission statements. The difference is in the application of that mission. The mission was never in question," Plonsky said.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz agrees. "The AIAW, philosophically, was very good," he said. "The only thing it lacked was the resources. The AIAW had a lot of common sense in the rules. It kept them simple and really went about things in the right way. The AIAW wanted it to be a true student-athlete organization."

It is easy to look at the past 10 years and see all the different ways that women's athletics has benefited from coming under the NCAA roof. But Sweet doesn't see the women as having a monopoly on benefits.

"I think it is important to note, particularly in the past few years, that women have been placed in an increasing number of leadership roles on NCAA committees," she said. "I believe that men and women have benefited from the sharing of philosophies and experiences, goals and values."

"I think that student-athletes also have benefited from the collective effort of the male and female professionals and that they, meaning the male and female student-athletes, also have enjoyed mutual respect and support from their male and female peers. It is a situation that didn't occur often when programs were separate and governing bodies were different."

So after nine years, women's athletics had grown in popularity to the point where more than 20,000 people packed an arena in Tennessee—even though the host Lady Volunteers had been eliminated—to watch the Women's Final Four. Holland, who is chair of the Division I Women's Basketball Committee, which oversees the championship, says she is not among the surprised.

"I don't know if it caught me off guard," she said. "I think that I had a lot of faith that the NCAA was going to continue its efforts for women's sports, and I think that has happened."

And the culmination, not just in women's basketball, but all of women's sports, can be summarized by Lopiano.

When asked to recall her fondest memory of the first nine years of NCAA women's championships, Lopiano said, "Selling out the Women's Final Four in Austin in 1987."

"Seeing tickets going for $100 a shot and having 14,000 people in the arena, television coverage—that was fun. You could sit back and say the work of the last 10 or 12 years paid off."

"It was like pitching a perfect game."

division play will be considered.

"It's certainly one of the possibilities that will be looked at very shortly," he said. "Our intention is to go into our discussions with an open mind and with every possible option, take a look at all of them and be as creative as we can in order to arrange the schedule."

What about the future? Tulane University, West Virginia University and the University of Louisville have been mentioned as possible candidates if the SEC decides to expand further.

"I think there will be a time of evaluation," said Mississippi State University athletics director Larry Templeton. "It could be over, but I don't think we're to the point of saying we're shutting the door."

Geography will be a factor in future expansion plans, according to Dickey.

"We're not going to invite Wyoming to join," he said.

"You know, it's farther from Tucson, Arizona, to Seattle than it is from Tucson to Chicago. Arizona could be in the Big Ten as easily as it is in the Pac-10. There are some strange alignments."

But Dickey added with a laugh, "If Notre Dame wanted to join the SEC, I'm sure we would look at that."

Newberry writes for the Associated Press.

Iowa reports on athletes' graduation rates

Of all recruited student-athletes who entered the University of Iowa as freshmen in the fall of 1984, a total of 61 percent earned a degree within five years, compared to 55.4 percent of all 1984 freshmen, the university reported in a news release.

Seven more 1984 recruits have earned degrees since the cutoff date for the report in August 1989 (when those seven are included, the "raw" graduate rate for student-athletes is 68.4 percent.)

The statistics are contained in a required Academic Reporting Form for 1990-91 that will be submitted to the NCAA by Iowa President transfer students and to delete student-athletes who were in good academic standing when they transferred to other colleges.

The "adjusted" rate, said Becker, was 81.4 percent for 1989.

Also, according to the report, nearly all freshmen, including student-athletes, qualify academically for regular admission to the university.

Of the 3,612 freshmen admitted to Iowa in the fall of 1989, just 241 (6.7 percent) were admitted under special authority. Of the 241, only 22 were student-athletes.

ACC is surprise leader in I-A nonconference rankings

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The Atlantic Coast Conference is the surprise leader in the national Division I-A nonconference rankings, edging the perennial champion Southeastern Conference in a close race.

The ACC boasts a 12-4 record against I-A opponents outside the conference for a .750 percentage, while the SEC, winner of six of the last seven national nonconference crowns, has a 16-7-1 record for .688 (ties computed as half won, half lost).

Both the ACC and SEC have played only a little more than half of their outside games. For that reason, it likely will be a two-conference race.

Most of the other I-A conferences have played at least 75 percent of their nonconference games. For instance, the third-place Big Eight Conference, 17-10-1 for .625, has only a few outside games left before the bowls (which do count in the compilation).

The same is true of the Pacific-10 Conference (16-12); the Southwest Athletic Conference (12-9), tied for fifth place at .571, and the Big Ten Conference (14-13-1), next at .518. The Western Athletic Conference has plenty of games left, but is 10-11 for .476.

The Southern independents, fourth at .574 on 15-11-1 with more than half of their outside games still to be played, seems to have the best chance of challenging the ACC and SEC.

It has not been a good year for the Mid-American Conference (6-12-1 for .342), Eastern independents (5-14-1 for .275), all other independents (9-18-1 for .339) and the Big West Conference (5-16-1 for .250).

The Pac-10 broke the SEC's streak in 1988 with a decade-high .794 (27-7) and also led in 1982. The Big Ten had its best record in 25 years in 1985, but the SEC got its decade high of .755 to win. The ACC won in 1981 and the SEC in 1980. Summing up, the SEC won seven times in the 1980s decade.

I-AA games deleted

It is important to remember that all games vs. Division I-AA teams and teams below I-AA are deleted in this compilation. For instance, the ACC has won seven games vs. I-AA foes but these do not count in its 12-4 record, while the SEC played just one such game and won it.

Division I-A teams usually win at least 75 percent vs. I-AA teams, but this year it is higher than ever at .878 on 39-5-1. The exceptions? Youngstown State defeated Eastern Michigan and Akron, Southwest Missouri State beat Nevada-Las Vegas, North Texas beat Southern Methodist, Montana beat Oregon State, and Arkansas State tied Memphis State.

Remember, too, that we are counting new conference members only if they compete for the championship in their new league. Thus Penn State, Arkansas, Florida State and South Carolina remain in their traditional or 1989 positions.

Keep in mind that nonconference games often mean upper-division teams in one conference vs. lower-division squads in another (with notable exceptions like Colorado vs. Washington, Tennessee and Illinois this fall). Seldom is it best vs. best until the bowls, and the all-time bowl standings show every conference just a few games above or below the break-even level.

Louisiana Tech's Bobby Slaughter is No. 2 in I-A receptions per game

Aurora's Ron Griffin ranks among Division III leaders in rushing

Colorado schedule toughest

Colorado takes over No. 1 in this week's national Division I-A toughest-schedule rankings, and teams from the Big Eight, ACC and SEC are prominent because their conferences are doing well in outside games.

Colorado's 11 Division I-A foes now stand 29-15-3 for a .649 percentage. Its opponents so far stand 14-5-1, its remaining foes 15-10-2.

Next come Kentucky's schedule at .641; Washington State, .638; Missouri, .633; North Carolina State, .632; Clemson, .625; Kansas and Georgia Tech, tied at .622; Georgia and Texas, .620; Iowa State, final-play situations).

When game films proved indisputably that Cornell had scored on fifth down, Cornell's president, Edmund Ezra Day, sent a telegram, giving the victory to Dartmouth: "Cornell relinquishes the victory to Dartmouth and extends its congratulations." Dartmouth coach and athletics director Earl Blaik (later of West Point fame) responded with appreciation for "a fine, sportsman-like gesture."

Before leaving Hanover, Day and head coach Carl Snavely decided they would give up the victory if the films showed it was fifth down. They did, and when referee Red players with two punt-return touchdowns September 29. He also returned an interception 42 yards for a TD. In all, he had 244 runback yards on four runbacks, three for TDs. (Tom Rickard, Ferrum SID)

Entering its September 22 game with Georgia, Alabama's defense had intercepted at least one pass in 22 consecutive games, dating back to October 8, 1988. The streak ended with Georgia's 17-16 win. During the streak, nine different players picked off 34 passes, led by John Mangum's nine. (Barry Allen, Alabama assistant SID) Beloit set a Division III record with 38 first downs in a 49-0 victory over Grinnell September 22. Emory and Henry's 37 vs. Samford in 1987 was the previous mark.

Wisconsin-Whitewater was leading Wisconsin-Platteville, 27-14, when a thick fog enveloped the natural bowl at Platteville September 29 as the teams began to play the second half. Both teams threatened in the last half, but there was no more scoring. At one point, Platteville's Eric Wizom threw into the fog on the far side of the field, and unknown to spectators and the press box, Chris Miller somehow caught it for a 54-yard gain. "I think the only ones to see the play were Chris and Eric," said Platteville coach George Chryst. "The memory of the score will get foggy, but the time we played in the fog long will be remembered." (Becky Bohm, Wisconsin-Platteville SID)

Quotes of the week

Cincinnati defensive tackle John Thornton, describing his team's enthusiasm after ending a 12-game losing streak with a 27-24 victory at Kent behind the passing of freshman redshirt Paul Anderson September 29: "We feel so good you can't even explain it in the newspaper." Grinning broadly, he told Tom Groesch of the Cincinnati Enquirer: "We're all wearing big Kool-Aid smiles." (John Bianco, Cincinnati assistant SID)

After his team rallied from 19 points down to tie Tennessee September 29, Auburn linebacker coach Reggie Herring was trying to describe his protege Karekin Cunningham to a writer: "He's crazy, not wild crazy, just crazy. He always has that look like he's fixing to burn your house down." (David Housel, Auburn SID)

Tennessee Tech coach Jim Ragland, describing his team's visit to Ohio University at his weekly luncheon: "It was a beautiful campus, with a river running right next to it, but there were no fish in the river. And, they had a beautiful, well-maintained stadium, but the field was too long."

Tech and Ohio combined for 1,017 yards in total offense. Ragland held up a newspaper showing a large photo of Tech's Alfonso Alexander tackling Ohio's Ricky Howell. "That's an illusion," Ragland said. "We didn't tackle anybody." (Rob Schabert, Tennessee Tech SID)

The Montclair State-Wagner game September 22 was the 12th annual Pride Bowl, a charity game played at a neutral site to benefit Project Pride. The program benefits 15,000 children in Newark, New Jersey, with 19 programs ranging from after-school tutoring to college scholarships. The game is its only fund-raising project all year. "We sometimes get caught up in football itself and lose sight of what the game is all about," said Montclair State head coach Rick Giancola. "We are extremely happy to help these kids get a better future." (Al Langer, Montclair State SID)

Hampden-Sydney sophomore Tim McGuill on being penalized for spiking the ball after his first collegiate touchdown: "How was I supposed to know it was a penalty? It was the first TD I've ever scored. It just seemed like the thing to do." (Dean Hybl, Hampden-Sydney SID)

Mario Johnson, Missouri's 6-foot-5, 314-pound defensive tackle, had narrowed his choices to Michigan and Colorado. Then, 10 minutes before he was to announce his decision at a news conference, a call came from his brother Lee, who was playing at Missouri.

Mario and his brother had had a difficult relationship at times, he told Doug Tucker of The Associated Press, but, "I said, 'I'm going to miss the chance to chance to play with you.' Lee said he really wanted to play with me.... Then the emotion just burst out in me. I said, 'I love you, and you come before any school.' Then I went out and announced I was going to Missouri."

Milestones, continued

Case Western Reserve University football history goes back 20 years to the forming of the university by the federation of Western Reserve University and Case Institute of Technology. But both colleges had played football more than 100 years.

Western Reserve football dated from 1880 and Case Institute (then Case School of Applied Sciences) football from 1887. From that viewpoint, CWRU should be in the 100-season club. (Dennis Harrison, Case Reserve archivist)

Football notes

.616; Florida, .610; Purdue, .608; Baylor, .6053 to .6047 for Maryland; UCLA, .604; Oklahoma State, .602; Stanford, .600; California, .594, and Florida State, .593, rounding out the top 20.

I-AA leaders

The nonconference picture once again is scrambled in Division I-AA because some conferences play many I-A foes, some few and some none. The same is true for opponents below I-AA, which are deleted.

The best method is to count only games with other I-AA teams. This is far from perfect because the percentage leader, the Big Sky Conference (5-1 for .833), has played only six I-AA teams, while the second-place Patriot League (16-5-1 for .825) has played 22. On the other hand, the Patriots played a majority vs. the Ivy Group, on the bottom at 4-15-1.

Third is the Ohio Valley Conference at 12-9 for .571. Then come the Southwestern Athletic Conference (5-4-1), all independents (19-18-1), and three at .500—the Mid Eastern Athletic Conference (6-6), Southern Conference (5-5) and Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference (5-5).

Below .500 are the Yankee Conference (4-6-2), Southland Conference (4-13), and the Ivy, as mentioned.

Fifth-down history

Colorado's fifth-down, final-play, game-winning touchdown (33-31) vs. Missouri October 6 came 50 years after the only other such final-play game in major-college or Division I history—Cornell vs. Dartmouth November 16, 1940, at Dartmouth's Hanover, New Hampshire, stadium (two other fifth-down plays in Division I did not come in Friesell was told, he admitted his mistake.

Should the reversal be announced by Asa Bushnell, then commissioner of the (then) Eastern Intercollegiate Association? No, said Bushnell. He informed the schools by telegram: "No official or collegiate body has the power to reverse the result. It is strictly between the schools."

Day then acted, and the game went into the books as a 3-0 Dartmouth win, not a 7-3 Cornell victory. That hurt — Cornell was undefeated and a contender for the national No. 1 ranking.

Steve Boda, retired NCAA historian, reports that two other fifth-down situations, not on the final play, found Miami (Florida) scoring a last-minute, 24-21 win over Tulane in 1972, and Notre Dame beating Carnegie Tech, 7-0, in 1938 when the referee mistakenly informed the Carnegie Tech quarterback he had another play, he did not punt, and Notre Dame took over near midfield, setting up its only touchdown. Neither result was reversed.

QB rushes 308

Stacey Robertson of Northern Illinois set an NCAA Division I-A record for rushing yards by a quarterback with 308 vs. Fresno State October 6, breaking the 294 by Kansas' Nolan Cromwell vs. Oregon State in 1975.

He scored five TDs in a 73-18 victory. Fresno State had lost just once in its previous 24 games and had been ranked No. 8 nationally in scoring defense.

Can you top these?

Division I-A directors honor academic excellence, courage

Awards for excellence in scholastics and athletics, as well as an award honoring a distance runner's courage, have been presented to student-athletes at NCAA member institutions by the Division I-A Directors Association of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

The recipients, who were selected by the Mission and Values Committee of the Division I-A Directors Association, were honored October 2 during the fall meeting of the directors in Tucson, Arizona.

Scholar-athlete awards

Alec Kessler, former basketball player at the University of Georgia, and Theresa Shanahan, former volleyball player at Boston College, received the second Delta Scholar-Athlete Awards, which annually recognize a male and female graduate of a Division I-A institution who has excelled athletically and scholastically.

Kessler, who graduated in June with a 3.910 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in microbiology, was the first-round draft choice this year of the Houston Rockets, which subsequently traded him to the Miami Heat.

While becoming Georgia's all-time scoring leader and winning all-Southeastern Conference basketball honors, Kessler also was earning recognition nationally for his academic achievements. He was a three-time GTE academic all-America and twice was named scholar-athlete of the year by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association.

He plans to attend medical school after his career in professional basketball ends.

Shanahan graduated in May with a 3.770 GPA in biology and is currently enrolled in medical school at Harvard University.

As a four-year starter and two-year team captain at Boston College, Shanahan set season and career records for digs, kills and aces. She also was a two-time all-academic selection in the Big East Conference.

This year, she was honored as Boston College's "Eagle of the Year" as the outstanding senior student-athlete.

Courage award

Liz Becker, a cross country and track runner at Wake Forest University who fought back from a brain tumor to excel in competition, received the Division I-A directors' first Award of Courage. The award will be presented annually to a Division I-A student-athlete for "exemplary displays of courage and fortitude both on and off the field of play."

Two months after winning the Atlantic Coast Conference 3,000-meters title in 1988, Becker learned of the brain tumor and was told the prognosis for recovery was not good. She underwent surgery in July 1988, when a benign tumor the size of a 50-cent piece was removed. She began running again only 1½ weeks after the surgery.

In the fall of 1989, she returned to competition and placed eighth individually at the ACC cross country championships. She also placed in the 1,500-meter run at the 1990 ACC outdoor track championships before graduating in May with a degree in health and sports sciences.

Volleyball survey goes to coaches

Division II women's volleyball coaches are reminded to complete and return a recent survey sent out by the NCAA's Division II Women's Volleyball Committee. The survey asks for coaches' opinions concerning rally-point scoring.

Under rally-point scoring, a team is awarded a point and the serve either for a side-out or for winning the rally. Rally-point scoring is being used as an experimental rule this season.

Each volleyball committee (Divisions I, II and III) will use coaches' input to determine whether to recommend adopting rally-point scoring for the 1991 season. The committees will forward a recommendation to the rules-making body for collegiate volleyball, the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport.

Division II coaches are asked to return the surveys immediately. Questions should be directed to Gail D. Hunter at the NCAA national office or Deborah Chin, chair of the Division II Women's Volleyball Committee.

Husband-and-wife team to retire

A couple believed to be the only husband-and-wife team of athletics directors in the nation has announced plans to retire next summer.

Drexel University's John Semanik, director of men's physical education and intercollegiate athletics for 29 years, and Mary F. Semanik, director of women's athletics and physical education for 25 years, will step down from their posts June 30, 1991.

"Mary and John Semanik have dedicated their lives to building an outstanding athletics program during their tenure at Drexel," said Richard E. Woodring, the university's vice-president for student life.

"The required physical education program has been a model for other universities," he said. "The intercollegiate sports program produces true scholar-athletes who excel in their sports, who graduate on time and who take their places as leaders in business, industry and government. Drexel owes a real debt of gratitude to them for their outstanding contribution to this university."

John Semanik played football at Drexel while a student during the 1950s and also served as assistant athletics director while completing a degree in business administration. From 1958 to 1962, he worked for the Federal Reserve Bank in Philadelphia, but returned to Drexel in 1962 to become athletics director and business manager. Since then, he has served a term as president of the East Coast Conference.

Meanwhile, Mary Fetter had arrived at the school in 1951 as a badminton and softball coach after starring in field hockey and also playing women's basketball at Temple University. She then coached basketball and lacrosse at Drexel until 1962, when she moved to Beaver College for three years. She returned to Drexel as women's athletics director in 1965.

The Semaniks were married five years later, in 1970.

King's (Pennsylvania) plans new facilities

King's College (Pennsylvania) has announced a $1 million expansion of its athletics plant and plans to have the facilities in operation by the fall of 1991.

The Rev. James Lackenmier, president of the college, also said the college has purchased 33.5 acres just two miles from the main campus in downtown Wilkes-Barre.

John J. Dorish, director of athletics, said the land will be used by varsity and intramural athletics, and the complex will include fields for baseball, softball, soccer and a planned field hockey program.

A field house will be erected and will include rooms for equipment, coaches and training, along with locker facilities. Parking space is projected to handle 200 cars.

Dorish indicated the college will be hiring a field hockey coach and players will be recruited, and King's will target playing a varsity schedule in several years.

The college operates 3,450-seat Scandlon Physical Education Center for men's and women's basketball and several indoor sports.

For 45 years, King's has been playing baseball, softball and other outdoor sports at various surrounding sites and has relied on the cooperation of neighboring communities to play an intercollegiate schedule. The intramural teams also have used various community facilities.

Q Who may amend NCAA legislation?

A An amendment to the Association's constitution or bylaws may be sponsored by the NCAA Council; a division steering committee; the NCAA Presidents Commission; eight or more active member institutions with voting privileges, upon written verification of sponsorship signed by each sponsoring member's chief executive officer or the CEO's designated representative; a member conference with voting privileges when submitted by the chief elected or executive officer of the conference, or the NCAA Executive Committee (amendments to executive regulations only).

For inspiration, Bethany College (West Virginia) football coach Don Turner looks to his father, 93-year-old Ralph Turner, who recently underwent hip surgery and has had cataract surgery three times in the past two years. None of that prevented him from attending the 32nd consecutive season-opening game his son coached.

"My dad has been there for me through some really tough times," the younger Turner said. "When I was coaching new programs that weren't winning, he was always there for me."

Ralph makes little of that. "I'm just an old man who loves football and horses," he said.

During a September 15 game at St. Francis College (New York), Moynihan was hit and knocked unconscious—and he went into seizure. "Jim saved my life," said Moynihan, who transferred to Monmouth (New Jersey) after playing last season at Muhlenberg College. "I heard (that) when he got out there, he was the only one who realized what was going on."

"He cleared my airway so I could breathe," Moynihan continued. "That's why my jaw is hurt, because when I went into convulsion, (the jaw muscles) tightened up and he had to pry them open."

"The True Value Academic Recognition Program brings to the forefront many of the inherent values found in intercollegiate athletics," Ippolitti said.

When Purdue University's women's volleyball team hosted the Purdue Premier tournament August 31-September 1, the Boilermakers had assistance from the campus chapter of Mortar Board, which hosted a luncheon for participating teams and honored each school's strongest student-athletes.

Visiting Purdue for the tournament were teams from California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo; Eastern Kentucky University, and Southwest Missouri State University. Among the Mortar Board awards given were those for highest grade-point average on each team and most-improved GPA on each team.

"For every tackle I make, we can build this scholarship fund at the university."

For the second straight year, the Lady Razorback Foundation at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, has topped its membership-drive goal. During the recently completed eight-day drive, supporters accounted for $46,470.

Northwestern State (Louisiana) program gets probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions placed the Northwestern State University (Louisiana) men's basketball program on three years' probation October 31 for major violations of NCAA legislation between March 1985 and July 1988. The terms of the probation include the following:

- The men's basketball team shall not be eligible for postseason play after the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons.

- The men's basketball team shall be prohibited from appearing on any live telecast during the 1990-91 academic year. (This penalty will be postponed to the 1991-92 season if current contractual obligations prevent the fulfillment of this sanction.)

- The Committee on Infractions adopted university-imposed limits of eight expense-paid visits for men's basketball recruits for the period September 1, 1990, to August 31, 1991, and 12 for the period September 1, 1991, to August 31, 1992.

- The committee also adopted action of the university to limit the men's basketball staff to a head coach, one assistant coach and one graduate assistant coach for the period of probation.

- During the 1990-91 academic year, the university may award no more than 13 athletically related grants-in-aid in men's basketball.

- During the 1991-92 academic year, the university may award no more than two initial grants-in-aid to new men's basketball student-athletes.

- During the 1992-93 academic year, the university may award no more than three initial grants-in-aid to new men's basketball student-athletes.

The Committee on Infractions found that the head men's basketball coach and the assistant men's basketball coaches who were involved in this case violated numerous NCAA rules related to recruiting inducements to prospective student-athletes and extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes. The committee also found violations of academic integrity, including the procurement of substitutes to take prospective student-athletes' pre-college enrollment tests in an effort to satisfy NCAA eligibility requirements for athletically related financial aid and competition.

Because most of the major violations in this case occurred after September 1, 1985, the committee's findings normally would subject the institution to minimum penalties prescribed by the NCAA membership. These penalties include a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, and the loss of post-season competition and television opportunities for one year.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose different penalties if it is determined that the case is unique. The committee concluded that this case was unique because of the following mitigating factors:

- Once the current university president learned of possible violations, he took decisive steps to investigate the situation.

- After determining that violations indeed had taken place, the university immediately secured the resignation of the then head coach.

- The president then employed outside legal counsel to conduct an investigation in cooperation with the NCAA enforcement staff.

- The university displayed this same spirit of cooperation and acceptance of responsibility for these violations at the hearing with the Committee on Infractions.

- The university committed resources to a compliance officer and a monitoring program already in place, and is a member of a conference that has a strong history of rules compliance and education programs for its members.

As a result of these mitigating circumstances, the committee waived several penalties it was considering levying, including a suspension of the university's 1990-91 season; postseason sanctions after the 1992-93 season, and a prohibition of expense-paid visits for prospective student-athletes in men's basketball for two academic years.

The committee noted that the then head men's basketball coach involved in this case previously had been found to have violated the principles of ethical conduct while serving as an assistant coach at another member institution, a fact that the committee made Northwestern State University aware of when that infractions case concluded. This, the committee said, should have alerted the institution to the potential for further violations.

The committee determined that if this former head coach seeks employment as an athletics-department staff member at an NCAA member institution during the next 15 years, he and the involved institution will be asked to appear before the Committee on Infractions. The committee then will consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of NCAA legislation. Those procedures could limit that coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period. In addition, the two former assistant coaches will be required to appear before the committee during the next five years and the former volunteer coach for the next seven years.

The members of the Committee on Infractions are Roy F. Kramer, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference; Beverly E. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel at Brown University; John E. Nowak, professor of law at the University of Illinois, Champaign; Milton R. Schroeder, professor of law at Arizona State University, and D. Alan Williams, committee chair, associate professor of history at the University of Virginia.

The complete Committee on Infractions report follows.

I. Introduction.

This case began as a result of violations of NCAA legislation that were reported almost simultaneously to Northwestern State University and the NCAA enforcement staff in 1988. An anonymous source contacted the enforcement department in May and June 1988 with information concerning possible violations of NCAA legislation in the conduct and administration of the university's men's basketball program and other athletics programs. This source also submitted documents to the enforcement department that supported these allegations. Separately, on July 12, 1988, the president of the university telephoned the enforcement department and reported the discovery of potential violations of NCAA legislation in the basketball program and forwarded all available documentation related to these discoveries to the enforcement staff. As a result of these conversations and receipt of these documents, a letter of preliminary inquiry was sent to the institution July 20, 1988, and a letter of official inquiry was sent January 29, 1990. The institution responded to the official inquiry June 14, 1990; a prehearing conference was conducted with university representatives July 19, 1990, and the institutional hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions was conducted August 14, 1990. The former men's basketball staff members involved in this case did not exercise their privileges to be present.

The Committee on Infractions found that the then head men's basketball coach, from the time of his employment in March 1985 until his dismissal by the university in July 1988, violated numerous NCAA rules related to recruiting inducements to prospective student-athletes, extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes and academic integrity. These violations included but were not limited to gifts of cash to prospective student-athletes; promises and delivery of cash bonuses for signing letters of intent; cash payments to enrolled student-athletes; arrangement and payment of bank loans for student-athletes; payment of summer school tuition for prospective student-athletes enrolled at junior colleges; payment of tuition for enrolled student-athletes; use of the then head coach's personal automobiles; inducements to prospects' relatives; payment of bills for a student-athlete's parent; offers and the provision of cost-free transportation for prospective and enrolled student-athletes to and from the campus and their homes; numerous extra and improper recruiting contacts; gifts of clothing and souvenirs to prospects during official paid visits; tryouts, and, most reprehensible of all, the procurement of substitutes (including a student manager) to take prospective student-athletes' pre-college enrollment tests in an effort to satisfy NCAA requirements for athletically related aid and competition. The offers and gifts of money to prospects ranged from $200 to $2,000 and usually were between $500 to $700, and, on one occasion, included a check for $20,000 to the high school coach of a nationally recruited prospective student-athlete in the hopes of influencing the young man to sign with the university. In the process of carrying out these violations, the then head coach also involved two then assistant coaches and a then volunteer assistant coach, all of whom appear to have been willing participants. It also should be noted that this head coach previously had been found by the Committee on Infractions to have violated the principles of ethical conduct while a assistant men's basketball coach at another member institution.

Quite obviously, operating the men's basketball program with such a willful and blatant disregard for NCAA rules and regulations reflects a violation by the university of the principles of institutional control in that the university failed to adequately monitor the men's basketball program. In fact, the Committee on Infractions notified the then president of the university of this coach's behavior at his previous institution when that infractions case was concluded, which should have alerted the institution to the potential for further violations. The reasons for that negligence may be that the coach was an alumnus who had been a popular student-athlete and former assistant basketball coach at the university with ties to the community. Moreover, during the period of these violations, the university faced a decline in enrollment and financial exigency that resulted in numerous reductions in personnel at the university in the registrar's office, financial controller's office and athletics department. Had these positions remained at the university, some degree of monitoring of the head coach's activities could have been provided. Nevertheless, having been alerted to the situation, there is no indication that the previous administration acted to assert control.

To the present administration's credit in this case, once the president learned of possible violations, he took decisive steps to investigate the situation, and, after determining that violations had taken place, the university immediately secured the resignation of the then head coach. Subsequently, the university employed outside legal counsel to conduct an investigation in cooperation with NCAA enforcement department staff members. The university and the enforcement staff were in virtual agreement that nearly all of the alleged violations had occurred. The university continued to display this same spirit of cooperation and acceptance of responsibility for these violations at the hearing. The findings are set forth in detail in Part II of this report.

The committee has determined that the range and scope of these violations clearly constitute major violations of NCAA rules and regulations. The prescribed "minimum penalty" as set forth in Bylaw 19.4.2.2 requires that the committee normally impose at least the following penalties, which are among the minimum penalties for a first major rules violator: a two-year probationary period; elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits related to the sport for at least one year; elimination of off-campus recruiting for the sport for at least one year; loss of postseason competition and television appearances for at least one year, and possible termination of the employment of staff members involved in the violations. The widespread scope of these violations led the committee to impose a penalty that exceeded those required for minimum penalties as set forth in Bylaw 19. However, the committee did find grounds for mitigation from some of these more extensive penalties due to the university's cooperative posture during the investigation, its decisive actions in removing the then head coach, the commitment of institutional resources to a compliance officer and monitoring program already in place, and its alliance with a conference that has had a strong history of rules compliance and education programs for its members.

The committee imposed the penalties set forth in Part III of this report. In brief, these penalties include a three-year probation with annual monitoring reports; an institutional self-study of whether it has the resources to compete with its full intercollegiate athletics program at the Division I level; a prohibition of postseason competition in men's basketball during the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons; a prohibition against live television appearances during the 1990-91 season; restrictions on official paid visits; limits on the number of coaching staff members; limitations on the number of team members receiving grants-in-aid for 1990-91, 1991-92 and the 1992-93 academic years, and a requirement for institutional recertification in all sports. Finally, there is a requirement that the former head men's basketball coach involved in this case will appear before the Committee on Infractions if he wishes to be employed by or be affiliated in any athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during the next 15 years, that the former volunteer assistant coach will be required to appear during the next seven years, and the two former assistant coaches will be required to appear during the next five years.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by committee.

A. [NCAA Bylaws 16.12.2, 16.12.2.3-(a) and 16.12.2.4]

On several occasions during the period 1986 to 1988, the then head men's basketball coach utilized his personal funds to make payments on bank loans of several men's basketball student-athletes at a local bank; further, on one occasion, the coach deposited $1,900 in a checking account at the bank for a student-athlete; further, the coach directed several student-athletes to contact a vice-president of the bank (who also is a representative of the university's athletics interests), who arranged for and permitted several student-athletes to receive "signature" loans in amounts ranging from approximately $200 to $600, even though the young men had no previous credit history and provided no collateral or cosigners to guarantee the payment of these loans, and finally, on some occasions, a former assistant men's basketball coach transported student-athletes to the bank to apply for these loans.

B. [NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1.1]

During the fall semester of the 1986-87 academic year, a student-athlete received athletically related financial aid (room, board, tuition, books and fees) when the young man was ineligible to receive such aid under NCAA legislation. Specifically, the young man received $2,271.80 in athletically related financial aid for the first semester, and finally, prior to the second semester, the institution discovered that the young man was not eligible for institutional financial aid and did not provide such aid for the second semester but did not report the violation to the NCAA.

C. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.2.2]

During the spring of 1985, while recruiting a then prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered several improper recruiting inducements including cash, clothes and an automobile—to the young man; further, the coach also provided $1,000 cash and other gifts to the prospect.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2]

On numerous occasions from 1985 to 1987, the then head men's basketball coach provided cash to a student-athlete for "weekend spending money" during private meetings conducted in the coach's office on Thursday or Friday afternoons.

E. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.1]

In July 1985, while recruiting a then prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach made statements to the young man that reasonably led the prospect to believe that he would receive money if he enrolled at the institution. Specifically, during the young man's official paid visit to the university's campus, the coach told the young man that he would not have any troubles or worries at the university and that whatever he needed, he would receive.

F. [NCAA Bylaws 11.6.2.3, 13.2.2, 13.5.4, 13.15 and 16.12.2]

In August 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach and a then volunteer assistant men's basketball coach arranged for or provided inducements to the young man; further, on occasions from 1985 to 1987, the then head men's basketball coach provided cash (a total of approximately $2,000) to the young man, and on one occasion, wrote a personal check for $100 payable to the young man.

G. [NCAA Bylaws 15.1.1-(a) and 16.12.2]

During the 1985-86 academic year, a then assistant men's basketball coach advised a student-athlete that a then part-owner and president of a car dealership (who also was a representative of the university's athletics interests) would arrange for the young man's automobile to be repaired at the dealership at no cost to the young man; further, the student-athlete took his 1979 Lincoln Town Coupe to the dealership and received repairs totaling approximately $500 at no cost to him.

Also, during the spring of 1986, the representative employed the young man on a part-time basis at this dealership, even though the student-athlete was receiving a full athletics grant-in-aid at the time; further, the young man earned approximately $1,500 during this period; further, institutional officials were not aware of this employment; the student-athlete's institutional aid was not adjusted, and, as a result, the young man's institutional aid and employment earnings exceeded the value of commonly accepted educational expenses.

H. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.2.2]

During the spring of 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered several improper recruiting inducements to the young man, including cash; further, at the instruction of the coach, a then assistant men's basketball coach provided cash to the young man.

I. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.1]

In the spring of 1985, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach instructed a then assistant men's basketball coach to offer $500 cash to the prospect if the young man would sign a National Letter of Intent to attend the university; further, during a meeting between the assistant coach and the young man in a men's basketball locker room, the assistant coach showed the prospect an envelope that contained the $500 cash and told the young man that he would receive the envelope if he would sign with the university, and finally, the young man declined the offer.

J. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1, 13.2.2 and 13.5.1]

During the spring and summer of 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered several improper recruiting inducements to the young man, including $500 cash, clothes and an automobile; entertained him for a meal, and provided cash gifts and automobile transportation.

K. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.5.1]

During the summer or fall of 1985, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered several improper recruiting inducements to the young man (including a Datsun 280Z automobile, $200 for his regular-season basketball tickets and clothes) and instructed a then assistant men's basketball coach to offer cash to the young man; further, the assistant coach also provided local automobile transportation.

L. [NCAA Bylaws 13.6.5.1, 13.6.5.4.3 and 16.10.2.1]

On October 25, 1986, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach arranged for three then basketball student-athletes to use his personal automobile, a blue Chevrolet Malibu, to transport the prospect round trip between Natchitoches and Shreveport, Louisiana (a total distance of approximately 140 miles), to attend the university's football games.

M. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.1]

On or about November 10, 1986, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach sent a then volunteer assistant men's basketball coach to the young man's high school basketball coach with a $20,000 check plus an offer of free air transportation for the young man's father to travel to the institution in an attempt to influence the young man to sign a National Letter of Intent to attend the university; further, the check was not given to the young man or to any member of his family, and finally, the young man eventually signed with another member institution.

N. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.2.2]

During the spring of 1986, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered several improper recruiting inducements to the young man and members of his family; further, the coach also provided cash to the young man and entertained him for a meal.

O. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2]

On at least two occasions during the 1986-87 academic year, the then head men's basketball coach and a then assistant basketball coach arranged for a student-athlete to receive transportation between the young man's home and the university's campus, a distance of approximately 150 miles, at no cost to the young man.

P. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2]

In December 1986, the then head men's basketball coach gave a personal check for $200 to the mother of a then student-athlete to pay miscellaneous Christmas holiday expenses.

Q. [NCAA Bylaws 13.1.4-(b) and 13.2.2]

During the spring of 1986, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a then assistant men's basketball coach made at least four in-person, off-campus recruiting contacts with the young man at his junior college; further, on one occasion, the assistant coach entertained the young man for a meal at a restaurant in his home town.

R. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.2]

In December 1986 or January 1987, after a recruiting contact at the high school of a prospective student-athlete, a then volunteer assistant men's basketball coach told the young man to follow him to a restaurant where the coach purchased a meal for the young man; further, the university reported that during the young man's recruitment, the assistant coach gave the young man a T-shirt and hat bearing the 1987 NCAA Final Four men's basketball championship logo.

S. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.16.1]

The university self-reported that in the spring of 1987, while recruiting two prospective student-athletes, the then head men's basketball coach paid the educational costs for the young men to attend summer school at the university.

T. [NCAA Bylaws 11.6.2.3, 13.1.1.1, 13.1.4.1-(b), 13.2.1, 13.2.2 and 13.5.1]

During the period January 1986 through the summer of 1987, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach and a then volunteer assistant men's basketball coach made improper recruiting contacts and offered the young man improper recruiting inducements—including cash, special financing on a loan to purchase an automobile, basketball shoes and other athletics apparel.

U. [NCAA Bylaws 11.6.2.3, 13.1.2.1, 13.2.1 and 13.5.4]

During the spring and summer of 1987, while recruiting a then prospective student-athlete, a then graduate assistant men's basketball coach offered cost-free transportation between the young man's home and the university's campus if he would enroll at the university; further, in fulfillment of these offers, the assistant coach later provided an airline ticket to the young man for travel between the young man's home town and Shreveport, Louisiana, at no cost to the young man in order for him to enroll at the university for the 1987 fall academic term.

V. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2]

In December 1987, a then part-time assistant men's basketball coach arranged for a student-athlete to be provided local automobile transportation and a round-trip commercial airline ticket between Shreveport, Louisiana, and the young man's home town at no cost to the young man.

W. [NCAA Bylaws 13.1.3.1 and 13.2.2]

In the spring and summer of 1987, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach provided $500 cash to the young man. Specifically, on May 21, at the approximate time of the prospect's high school graduation, the coach wired $500 via Western Union to the young man.

X. [NCAA Bylaw 14.3]

In the spring and summer of 1987, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach and a then graduate assistant men's basketball coach arranged for a student athletics trainer to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) for the prospect in an attempt to qualify the young man for athletically related financial aid, practice and intercollegiate competition at the university during the 1987-88 academic year; further, after this attempt failed, the head coach persuaded the young man to sign a statement to indicate that he actually took this test, and then, after signing the statement, the head coach purchased a meal for the young man.

Further, in June 1988, the head coach telephoned the young man at his home and cautioned him that the NCAA might interview him concerning the circumstances of this SAT test, and in July 1988, the head coach traveled to the young man's home town and asked him to lie about having a test taken for him; further, the head coach asked the prospect to copy a prepared statement in the young man's own handwriting setting forth false information concerning the prospect's SAT test; further, the head coach told the young man that he was in trouble and that it would help to have the prospect sign the statement, and finally, the young man then signed the statement and was driven to a local restaurant where the head coach purchased a meal for the prospect.

Y. [NCAA Bylaw 14.3]

In the spring of 1987, while recruiting a then prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach and a then men's graduate assistant men's basketball coach arranged for the then men's basketball manager to take a Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) for the prospect in an attempt to qualify the young man for athletically related financial aid, practice and intercollegiate competition at the university during the 1987-88 academic year; further, the prospect subsequently enrolled and competed at the university during the 1987-88 academic year after being certified as eligible on the basis of this fraudulent score.

Z. [NCAA Bylaws 14.01.4.3-(a) and 14.3]

In the summer of 1986, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a then volunteer assistant men's basketball coach (with the assistance of a then men's basketball student-athlete, a former high school teammate of the prospect) arranged for an unnamed individual to take an American College Test (ACT) for the prospect in an attempt to qualify the young man for athletically related financial aid, practice and intercollegiate competition at the university during the 1986-87 academic year; further, the young man violated the provisions of ethical conduct by his involvement in this academic fraud; further, an ACT test score was credited to the prospect's name and submitted to the university, which was used to certify the young man eligible for athletically related financial aid, practice and competition for the 1986-87 academic year.

AA. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.5.1]

During the spring of 1988, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered $2,000 to the young man in a bank account; further, a then assistant men's basketball coach provided local automobile transportation and reassured the young man that the head coach's offers were sincere.

BB. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1 and 13.2.2]

During the spring of 1988, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach offered $100 to the prospect; further, during the young man's official paid visit to the university, the head coach instructed a then assistant men's basketball coach to transport the young man to a local sporting goods store where the prospect received basketball shoes and other athletics apparel at no cost to the young man.

CC. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.2]

In the summer of 1988, while recruiting two prospective student-athletes, the then head men's basketball coach arranged for the young men to receive transportation between their respective homes and a junior college in order for the young men to enroll in summer school; further, the head coach paid the costs of the young men's attendance at the junior college and provided regular spending money to the young men throughout the summer.

DD. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.2]

On two occasions in April 1988, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the then head men's basketball coach directed an institutional staff member to wire $200 cash via Western Union to the young man. Specifically, on April 18 and 22, the young man received $100 by wire, and the second transmission included a "Happy Birthday" message.

EE. [NCAA Bylaws 13.1.3 and 13.2.2]

From 1985 to 1988, during the official paid visits to the university's campus of several prospective student-athletes and during in-person, off-campus recruiting contacts with these young men, members of the men's basketball coaching staff provided various souvenirs to these prospects at no cost to the young men.

FF. [NCAA Bylaws 13.11.1, 13.11.2.3-(a), 13.11.2.3-(b) and 13.11.2.3-(c)]

During the 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years, numerous prospective student-athletes participated in pickup basketball games in either Prather Coliseum or an intramural gym, both located on the university's campus, with members of the men's basketball team during the young men's official paid visits to the university's campus; further, on some occasions, members of the men's basketball coaching staff observed these games, and finally, in one instance, an assistant coach participated in a one-on-one basketball contest with a prospective student-athlete during an off-campus recruiting contact with the young man.

GG. [NCAA Bylaws 16.02.3 and 16.12.3-(b)]

On two occasions in 1988, the then head men's basketball coach arranged for or provided a guarantee of bond for a student-athlete in order for the young man to be released from the jail.

HH. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3-(c)]

Throughout the summer of 1986, the then head men's basketball coach provided his personal automobile to a then student-athlete for his personal use, including going to work.

II. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.2]

From the fall of 1985 through the spring of 1988, members of the men's basketball coaching staff permitted men's basketball student-athletes to use telephones located in the basketball coaches' offices to place several personal, long-distance telephone calls at no cost to the young men.

JJ. [NCAA Bylaw 13.5.4]

In late August or early September 1987, a member of the men's basketball coaching staff arranged for a prospective student-athlete to receive a prepaid bus ticket at a bus station (at an estimated cost of $87) to travel one way from his home to Natchitoches, Louisiana, in order for the young man to enroll at the university for the fall semester of the 1987-88 academic year.

KK. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1-(b) and 10.1-(c)]

A former head men's basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics due to his knowing and willful effort to operate the institution's intercollegiate men's basketball program contrary to the provisions of NCAA legislation by his involvement in arranging for fraudulent precollege enrollment test scores to be submitted to the university for prospective student-athletes and for his involvement in the findings of violations in this report.

LL. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1-(a) and 10.1-(d)]

A former head men's basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics due to his refusal to provide information relevant to an investigation of a possible violation of NCAA legislation, his provision of false and misleading information to the NCAA enforcement staff and the institution, and his efforts to mislead investigators by encouraging others to provide false and misleading information to the NCAA and the institution.

MM. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1-(a), 10.1-(b), 10.1-(c) and 10.1-(d)]

A former volunteer assistant men's basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics due to his involvement in the findings of violations in this report, his involvement in arranging for a fraudulent precollege enrollment test score to be submitted to the university for certification of a prospective student-athlete, his refusal to furnish information relevant to the investigation of possible violations of NCAA legislation, and his willful effort to encourage other persons to provide false and misleading information to the NCAA and the institution.

NN. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1-(b) and 10.1-(c)]

A former assistant men's basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics due to his involvement in the findings of violations in this report and his involvement in fraudulent precollege enrollment tests for two prospective student-athletes.

OO. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1 and 10.1-(c)]

A former assistant men's basketball coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that the coach demonstrated a knowing and willful effort to operate the university's intercollegiate program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation.

PP. [NCAA Constitution 2.1, 2.5.1 and 6.01.1]

The scope and nature of violations found in this case demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring in the conduct and administration of the institution's men's intercollegiate basketball program during the 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years. The seriousness of this finding and this infractions case is heightened by the fact that shortly after the former head coach involved in this case was employed by Northwestern State University, the university was made aware of his involvement in NCAA violations, including a violation of the ethical-conduct legislation, during his tenure as an assistant basketball coach at another member institution. In this regard, after notice of these violations had been given to the then chief executive officer of Northwestern State University, the president expressed to the NCAA his complete confidence in the head coach, who had given the institution his assurances of his commitment to NCAA rules and regulations when, in fact, he continually was committing even more serious violations throughout his employment at Northwestern State University. Given fair notice, the university failed to take precautionary steps to ensure that such conduct could be detected.

QQ. [NCAA Bylaw 30.3.3]

Based upon a review of the findings contained in this report, the institution's NCAA certification of compliance forms for the 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 academic years were erroneous.

Also, with full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the intercollegiate men's basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the then head men's basketball coach and a then assistant basketball coach attested on statements filed with the university's chief executive officer that they had reported their knowledge of and involvement in any violations of NCAA legislation involving the institution when, in fact, they had not done so.

Further, two other then assistant men's basketball coaches failed to sign the 1985-86 and 1986-87 NCAA certification of compliance forms, and one assistant coach failed to sign the 1987-88 form.

Finally, based upon the information provided by these individuals and without intent to do so, the institution's chief executive officer erroneously certified the institution's compliance with NCAA legislation on July 3, 1986; June 1, 1987, and May 31, 1988.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved major violations of NCAA legislation that are set forth in Part II of this report. Because this case involves major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985, NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2, as adopted by the Convention of the Association, requires, "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons," minimum penalties that shall include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year, or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The committee has considered both the nature of the violations, which are set forth in Part II of this report, as well as the mitigating factors that should be taken into account. For the reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions determined that the extensive violations in this case required sanctions that exceeded those set forth as the "minimum penalties." At the same time, the committee determined for reasons also set forth in Part I of this report that there were mitigating factors that should limit the full impact of those penalties; therefore, in some instances, the committee has rescinded, reduced or adopted the university's self-imposed sanctions in determining the appropriate penalty. Accordingly, the Committee on Infractions has imposed the following penalties:

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of three years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Council subcommittee action in the event of an appeal, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Further, Northwestern State University (Louisiana) shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

B. During the period of probation, the university shall report in writing (prior to July 1, 1991; July 1, 1992, and prior to the end of the probationary period) to the NCAA enforcement staff and the Committee on Infractions the actions it has taken to: (1) improve, as needed, its rules compliance and monitoring programs for all of its intercollegiate athletics teams, and (2) monitor the men's intercollegiate basketball program in a manner that will include, but not be limited to, monitoring on- and off-campus recruiting activities, and monitoring university and athletics department resources that might be used to provide benefits to prospective or enrolled student-athletes.

Further, prior to July 1, 1991, the university shall conduct an institutional self-study to determine whether it has the resources to conduct its full intercollegiate athletics program in Division I.

C. The intercollegiate men's basketball team shall be prohibited from participating in any competition against any intercollegiate team during the 1990-91 season. (Note: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended for reasons set forth in Part I of this report.)

D. The men's intercollegiate basketball team shall end its 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 seasons with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in any postseason competition following those seasons. In addition, the men's

Quarterly state legislation summary

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 25 bills from 12 states. The report includes five bills that have been introduced and 20 pending bills on which action has been taken since the last report (see the July 4, 1990, issue of The NCAA News). Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of October 1, 1990. Listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Anabolic steroids	11
Scalping	5
Athlete agents	2
Gambling	2
Coaches	1
Drug testing	1
Due process	1
Miscellaneous	2

Twelve bills in nine states have become law since the last report, including seven on anabolic steroids; two each on athlete agents and scalping, and one on gambling. In addition, the California legislature passed a joint resolution that requests the Federal government to pass legislation that would require the NCAA to revise its bylaws to provide greater due-process protection for those accused of violations.

Alaska S. 542 (Author: Committee on Rules)

basketball team may not participate in a foreign tour in the summers of 1991 and 1992; further, the men's basketball team may not play any of its regular-season contests outside the continental United States during the 1991-92 and 1992-93 seasons. Moreover, the men's basketball team may not take advantage of any exceptions to the limitation in the number of basketball contests that are provided in Bylaws 17.3.3.1 and 17.3.5.4 regarding preseason contests (or contests outside of the continental United States) during the 1991-92 season. (Note: The part of this penalty prohibiting participation in post-season competition following the 1992-93 regular season is suspended for reasons referred to in Part I of this report.)

E. The intercollegiate men's basketball team shall be prohibited from appearing on any "live" telecast (as defined by Bylaw 19.4.2.5.2) during the 1990-91 academic year. (Note: If current contractual obligations prevent the fulfillment of this sanction during the 1990-91 academic year, this penalty will be postponed to the 1991-92 academic year.)

F. The university shall be prohibited from providing any expense-paid recruiting visits to prospective student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball for two complete academic years, which shall begin September 1, 1990, and end August 31, 1992. If the implementation of this penalty is delayed as a result of an appeal or other action in this case, the penalty shall be implemented during the next complete academic year. (Note: This penalty is immediately suspended, and the committee adopts the university-imposed sanctions of a limit of eight expense-paid visits in the sport of men's basketball for the period September 1, 1990, to August 31, 1991, and 12 for the period September 1, 1991, to August 31, 1992.)

G. The committee would have eliminated all off-campus recruiting in the sport of men's basketball for a period of two years if any members of the coaching staff involved in the serious violations in this case still had been employed by the university in an athletically related position, and the committee would have reduced the number of men's basketball coaches who could perform coaching duties. Instead, the committee has adopted the action of the university to limit the men's basketball staff to a head coach, one assistant coach and one graduate assistant coach for the period of probation.

H. During the 1990-91 academic year, the university may award athletically related aid to no more than 13 members of the men's intercollegiate basketball team; further, during the 1991-92 academic year, the university may award initial grants-in-aid to no more than two new student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball; further, during the 1992-93 academic year, the university may award initial grants-in-aid to no more than three new student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball.

I. The university shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

J. If any person who was found in this case to have violated the principles of ethical conduct still had been employed by the university, the university would have been required to show cause why it should not have been subject to further penalties if it had failed to take disciplinary action against these members of its staff.

K. Due to his involvement in violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, the former head men's basketball coach who was involved in this case will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a 15-year period (October 3, 1990, to October 3, 2005), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(l), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

L. Due to his involvement in violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, the former volunteer assistant men's basketball coach involved in this case will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a seven-year period (October 3, 1990, to October 3, 1997), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(l), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

M. Due to his involvement in violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, a former assistant men's basketball coach involved in this case will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a five-year period (October 3, 1990, to October 3, 1995), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(l), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period. The committee noted that this former assistant men's basketball coach did provide information helpful in the resolution of this case.

N. Due to his involvement in violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, another former assistant men's basketball coach involved in this case will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a five-year period (October 3, 1990, to October 3, 1995), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(l), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

(Note: Should Northwestern State University appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council Subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Bylaw 32.8.5. A copy of the committee's report would be provided to the institution prior to the institution's appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by Bylaw 32.8.6, would be released to the public.)

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed; further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Finally, should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.)

Swimming coaches announce all-academic awards

The College Swimming Coaches Association of America has announced its all-academic team for the 1990 spring semester. A total of 102 teams make up the list—94 from NCAA member institutions and eight members of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). Executive Director Dale Neuburger said that the total of 102 teams represents an increase of 23 from the fall 1989 list of honorees.

In order for a swimming team to be considered for all-academic honors, it must record an overall grade-point average of at least 2.800 (4.000 scale). Teams are recognized for reaching the following plateaus: superior—3.250 or above; excellent—3.000 or above, and commendable—2.800 or above.

Of the 94 NCAA teams honored, 18 finished in the top 10 at their respective championships. The complete list of spring 1990 honorees with team grade-point averages follows.

Several 'perfect' grid teams recalled

By Dick Kishpaugh

The NCAA News' recent inquiry concerning unbeaten, untied and unscored-upon college football teams brings to mind several outstanding achievements of that type.

In the entire history of college gridiron games, there are probably several dozen teams that have reached that elusive goal.

Yale, for example, has had five perfect-record unscored-upon teams since scoring values were adopted in 1883 (this, however, includes a war-shortened 1917 season). The Blues of 1888, 1891, 1892, 1909 and 1917 all held opponents scoreless.

Michigan's powerhouse of 1901 had a 550-0 advantage over 11 opponents. Some other uncrossed goal lines worthy of mention include the Illinois team of 1910; Otto Seiler accounted for all of the points in three of those games with drop-kicked field goals in 3-0 victories over Chicago, Indiana and Syracuse.

No one came close to Western Michigan's goal line in the 1922 season, and one amazing fact is that the three top stars of that team—John Gill, Oscar Johnson and Leo Redmond—all became coaching legends in Michigan. All are alive to enjoy the 1990 season.

Tennessee and Duke share one misery—each had uncrossed goal lines in the regular season only to lose to Southern California in the Rose Bowl. The 1939 Tennessee team was beaten by the Trojans, 14-0, in the 1940 postseason classic. Duke's fate a year earlier was even more difficult to swallow. The Blue Devils led, 3-0, until a pass from Doyle Nave to Al Krueger in the closing minutes gave Southern Cal a 7-3 triumph.

And no discussion of the Rose Bowl would be complete without mention of Colgate's 1932 team, which hoped for a Rose Bowl bid but went nowhere, thus spawning the expression—unbeaten, untied, unscored upon, and uninvited.

Yale's 1888 team was surely the best of the early times, scoring a prodigious 704 points in 14 shutout victories. The Elis were unscored upon in 13-victory seasons in 1891 and 1892, and altogether posted 35 consecutive shutouts prior to a 14-6 win over Penn in 1893.

The immortal Walter Camp coached those great Yale teams, although he actually stayed in the background since Yale's "graduate coach" policy saw the previous year's captain return to take charge.

The talent was so great that 13 of the Elis from 1888 to 1892 became coaches at other colleges, including the incomparable Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Camp received hundreds of letters asking for advice; one of those inquiries came in 1892 from a machine-shop instructor at a small Midwestern university, who, hoping that he was not asking too great a favor, sought advice on how to develop a good football team.

The writer was James H. Kivlan of Notre Dame.

Acosta, Carpenter will receive CCWAA awards

Vivian Acosta and Linda Jean Carpenter, pioneers in research documenting the changing status of women in sport over the past two decades, will be honored by the Council of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators at the 1990 CCWAA fall forum, October 14-16 in Lexington, Kentucky.

"The selection of Acosta and Carpenter as the recipients of the Honor Award is particularly timely and relevant to the theme of gender equity, a topic that will dominate the fall forum," said CCWAA President Kaye Hart, director of women's athletics at Utah State University. "We are greatly indebted to these two women for their courage in addressing this issue in such a diligent way."

Acosta and Carpenter hold professorships in the department of physical education at Brooklyn College. They received B.A. and M.A. degrees from Brigham Young University and doctorates from the University of Southern California.

Acosta has coached five sports, and served on the boards of the National Association of Girls and Women in Sport and the Women's Sports Foundation. Carpenter, who also holds a law degree from Fordham University, is a member of the Law and Sport Committee for the Joint Committee of the NAGWS and the National Association for Sport and Physical Education; the Legislation Committee for the U.S. Olympic Committee, and the Coaches Advisory Roundtable of the Women's Sports Foundation.

The Honor Award will be presented at a luncheon sponsored by Dial Corporation October 15. For more information on attending the fall forum, contact Marcia Sanchez (Washington State University) 509/335-0311.

Georgia plans stadium expansion to seat 86,327

The University of Georgia will begin a project in December to expand Sanford Stadium to 86,327 seats before the 1991 football season.

An appropriation of $5.2 million has been provided to enclose the lower level of the west end of the stadium and add 4,205 seats, giving the Bulldogs one of the largest college stadiums in the country.

The last expansion of the stadium was started 10 years ago. A $12 million addition was begun in December 1980 to increase the capacity from about 60,000 to the current capacity of 82,122.

Championships Corner

Men's tennis: The NCAA Men's and Women's Tennis Committee is soliciting bids for the 1992, 1993 and 1994 Division I Men's Tennis Championships. Institutions interested in hosting the events should contact Daniel A. Calandro, assistant director of championships, at the national office by November 14, 1990.

Men's and women's cross country: Adjustments have been made in regional allocations for individual at-large selections to the 1990 NCAA Division III Men's and Women's Cross Country Championships. For the men's championships, two individuals will be selected at large from the New York region and four individuals will be selected at large from the Central region. For the women's championships, six individuals will be selected at large from the New England region; three individuals will be selected at large from the Midwest region; two individuals will be selected at large from the Mideast region; two individuals will be selected at large from the Central region, and no individual at-large selections will be made from the West region. These numbers supercede those published in the 1990 championships handbook for men's and women's cross country.

Penn State teams to raise funds in 'swimmarowthon'

Swimmers at Pennsylvania State University are preparing to show just how far they are willing to go for a friend.

Each member of the Nittany Lion men's and women's swim teams will swim 5,000 yards—200 lengths of the pool—October 17 to help raise funds for an 11-year-old leukemia victim who is awaiting a bone-marrow transplant.

Team members are soliciting sponsors to contribute for each 25-yard length of the pool they swim on behalf of Jessica Hoy, who has battled cancer since she was 3.

The all-day event is being dubbed a "swimmarowthon" by organizers Peter Brown, head men's swimming coach at Penn State, and assistant coach Janie Brown.

"In that the transplant costs are enormous, we are hoping to raise a substantial amount of money for Jessica and her family," Peter Brown said. "Thus far, the idea has been well received."

Hoy, who will undergo surgery as soon as a suitable bone-marrow donor is found, is a swimming fan, Brown said. Penn State team members befriended the youngster during the past year.

In February, after enjoying a period of remission, Hoy suffered a second relapse of the leukemia.

The Penn State swimmers join another group of university students—members of Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity—who helped Hoy earlier in the year by raising $3,600 to buy her a heated, above-the-ground swimming pool. Hoy must avoid swimming in public pools because the leukemia makes it difficult for her to fight off common sicknesses. The gift was arranged through the local chapter of the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

Proceeds from the swimmers' marathon will be presented to the Hoy family at a ceremony November 17 during Penn State's home dual meet with Villanova University.

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee:

Satisfactory progress

1. Satisfactory progress for participant in Senior World Wrestling Championships. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 14.5.5-(b) (waivers of the satisfactory-progress rule—international competition), and determined that there is no authority to grant a student-athlete a waiver of the July 19, 1990, conference) and confirmed that under the applicable interpretation, a recruited student-athlete (whether a qualifier or a nonqualifier) in the sport of football who first receives athletically related financial aid subsequent to his first academic year in residence must be considered an initial counter for that academic year in which he first receives the aid, if such aid is received during the fall term; however, if (following completion of the first academic year in residence) such a student-athlete begins receiving aid for the first time in the second or third term of an academic year, he may be considered an initial counter during either the academic year in which he first receives the aid or the next academic year.

Amateurism

4. Student-athletes marketing their singing abilities. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 12.5.1.2 and 12.5.2.1, and determined that a student-athlete pursuing a career in singing could be involved in making a record album, provided such activity meets the requirements set forth in Bylaw 12.5.1.2 (continuation of nonathletically related promotional activity after enrollment); noted specifically that it would not be permissible for the student-athlete's name or picture to appear on the album cover.

Outside competition

5. Member institution competing against U.S. national team during the institution's season. Reviewed Bylaws 14.8.6.1-(c) and 14.9.2.1-(a) (participation in outside competition during season), and previous NCAA Administrative Committee interpretations (reference: Item No. 5 of the minutes of the committee's March 25, 1976, conference and Item No. 2-c of the minutes of the committee's June 24, 1976, conference), and determined that student-athletes from a member conference's ice hockey teams may not participate in all-star contests against the U.S. national team prior to the 1992 Olympic Games during the student-athletes' competitive seasons without jeopardizing the students' eligibility to participate on behalf of their respective institutions for the remainder of the season.

Coaching compensation

6. Providing bonuses for Division I athletics staff member based on the number of victories during a single season (Division I). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 11.3.2.3 (bonuses for specific and extraordinary achievement) and 11.3.2.4, and determined that an outside individual, group or agency may provide a bonus to supplement a Division I athletics department staff member's salary based on the number of games the coach's team wins during a single season.

Membership

7. Division I-A football criteria—permanent seats (Division I). Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 20.9.5.3 (football-attendance requirement) and 20.9.5.3.5 (counting attendance), and determined the following:

a. An institution that utilizes executive boxes in its stadium leased to box holders who design the seating arrangements at their discretion may utilize the actual number of tickets sold for contests in determining the institution's number of permanent seats, provided the number of tickets sold does not exceed occupancy limitations established by the applicable fire marshal's code.

b. An institution may count permanent seats (as distinguished from standing-room areas) used for the press box, television, radio, film crew, media and coaches in meeting the facility's permanent-seat requirement; however, the committee determined that such seats may not be used in counting attendance in accordance with Bylaw 20.9.5.3.5 if individuals utilizing such seats receive complimentary admissions to attend the institution's contest.

Student host/official visit

8. Student hosts receiving free meals in restaurant facilities. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.7.5.4.1 (multiple hosts) and determined that a member institution may provide free meals to only one student host entertaining a particular prospective student-athlete on an official visit if restaurant facilities are utilized for the meal.

Eligibility/graduate students

9. Graduate student who attended more than one member institution as an undergraduate. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 14.1.7.2 and a previous Administrative Committee decision (reference: Item No. 2-s of the minutes of the committee's May 6, 1982, conference), and confirmed that a student-athlete who attended more than one college institution as an undergraduate would be eligible as a graduate student only at the institution from which the student-athlete received a baccalaureate degree; further, the fact that the student-athlete participated in athletics for a time at another institution would not make the student-athlete eligible as a graduate student at that institution.

Conference No. 13 September 13, 1990

satisfactory-progress requirements during an academic year in which the student is not enrolled for a term as a result of participation in competition (e.g., Senior World Greco-Roman Wrestling Championships) other than the international events (i.e., Olympic, Pan American or World University Games) specified in the regulation.

NCAA Convention delegates

2. Committee chair's designation of committee members to speak at Convention. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Constitution 5.1.3.5.1-(c) and determined that it would be permissible for various committee members to be designated to speak on behalf of the chair in Convention business sessions; thus, various members of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, if designated by the chair of the committee, may speak on the floor of the 1991 Convention.

Financial aid/players (countable/exempted)

3. Recruited football student-athlete initially receiving athletically related financial aid subsequent to the first academic year (Division I). Reviewed two previous actions (reference: Item No. 6 of the minutes of the committee's June 8, 1989, conference and Item No. 7 of the minutes of the committee's

NAIA separates basketball into two divisions

NAIA schools will be separated into two divisions each in men's and women's basketball under a resolution adopted October 3 at the association's 50th annual convention in Kansas City, Missouri.

The proposal, which has been considered at the three previous conventions, was approved 257-143. Three delegates abstained.

Arleigh Dodson of Lewis and Clark College, chair of the constitutional bylaws committee, told delegates earlier that the basketball issue would not be brought up again next year. "It's time to resolve this issue," he said.

The division setup, similar to that in NAIA football, will begin for a two-year trial period in 1991-92. Schools will determine what division they play in—with financial-aid capabilities and enrollments among the determining factors.

The NAIA said separate championships will be held in the two divisions for both men's and women's basketball. The men's Division I tournament will remain in Kansas City, where it has been played for 53 years, and the women's Division I tournament will remain in Jackson, Tennessee. Sites of the Division II tournaments will be determined later.

The delegates also voted to have a committee study division play in women's volleyball.

The convention delegates also approved, 413-0, a proposal to restructure the organization, giving the council of presidents governance over the NAIA. The national executive committee, which shared governance of the NAIA previously, will be disbanded at the end of the year.

The proposal to give full governor

(b) Approved a recommendation by the Men's Soccer Committee that the U.S. Coast Guard Academy be moved from the Metro region to the New England region for selection purposes for the 1990 Division III Men's Soccer Championship.

NAIA

nance of the NAIA to the council of presidents was virtually assured of approval October 2 at a caucus, when the executive committee withdrew its own proposal and accepted a compromise giving control to the council.

The council is made up of a college president from each of the NAIA's 32 geographical regions. The executive committee has 10 members representing coaches, athletics director, faculty athletics representatives and others.

In the structuring change, the title of executive director will be changed to chief executive officer and president January 1 when James Chasteen, president of Athens (Alabama) State College and John C. Calhoun Community College, becomes the new chief executive of the NAIA, an association of about 500 small colleges and universities.

In other action, the NAIA:

- Rejected a proposal to allow a fifth season of competition for athletes.

- Granted voting status to recognized affiliated conferences.

- Awarded the 1992 convention, to be held October 9-14, to San Antonio, Texas; the 1991 convention was previously awarded to Portland, Oregon.

Huskies end Tar Heels' 103-game unbeaten streak

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News Staff

Fifteen years after his UCLA Bruins lost for the first time in 89 college basketball games, Bill Walton was asked if he thought losing was good for the team and whether the loss helped the Bruins focus more on their vulnerability. "It never does anybody any good to lose," Walton replied rather tersely.

The University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, women's soccer team now understands what Walton meant after having its 103-game streak broken September 22. The Tar Heels lost to the University of Connecticut, 3-2, when Britton Arico converted a penalty kick with 1:35 left in the second overtime.

North Carolina coach Anson Dorrance concurs with Walton. "It never helps to lose," he said. "It doesn't have the positive effect people think it does. It may cause you to focus more in practice. The only thing the streak was good for was positive publicity for our school and our sport. There was no pressure on our team to preserve the streak, we just want to win for winning's sake."

For Connecticut, however, the win was monumental.

"It was a very intense game," Huskies coach Len Tsantiris said. "It was very exciting. It was a great plus, not just for us, but for women's intercollegiate soccer—and not just the victory, but the type of game that was played."

The game was played in a rainstorm in Storrs, Connecticut. Connecticut applied a smothering defense on North Carolina's best two offensive players, Chris Lilly and Mia Hamm. That defense and an aggressive offense were the keys to victory, according to Tsantiris. "My defenders did a great job," he said. "North Carolina hasn't faced that kind of pressure much. It turned out to be very successful."

Dorrance agreed. "Every team has to focus on those two (Lilly and Hamm) because they are so talented," the Tar Heels coach said. "But what Lenny's team did was not so much shut down Chris and Mia, but put constant pressure on our goal. To score three goals on us is unheard of. They never gave up and chased down every half chance."

Hamm opened the scoring with 11:08 remaining in regulation, but Connecticut tied it when Denise Swenson chipped the ball over North Carolina's sophomore keeper, Lori Walker.

Two minutes and 22 seconds into the first overtime, Swenson headed in a pass to give the Huskies the lead. In the second overtime, Hamm converted a penalty kick at 3:15 into the period to tie the score. When Merridee Proost tripped Swenson, who was breaking in on the goal, it set up Arico's penalty kick.

"UConn didn't get lucky," Dorrance said regarding the upset. "It always has been possible to beat us. The nature of our sport is that a team cannot develop any prolonged confidence. It's like baseball and facing a pitcher on his game; it's tough to win. When you face a tough goalie who is on his or her game, you stand a good chance to lose. Connecticut's goalie (Wendy Logan) was on her game."

Still, Tsantiris knows that his team was able to accomplish something no other team has done since November 24, 1985—beat North Carolina. And he feels fortunate. "North Carolina is not an easy team to play," he said. "We decided if we worked together as a team and didn't worry about their championships, we would have a chance. I think we took the right attitude. It paid off."

Now, both coaches face new challenges. Dorrance has to help his team get over a loss, an experience none of his players had ever had on the collegiate level. Tsantiris, meanwhile, has to make his team realize that the season is not over. There is more work to be done.

"The thing that will be a challenge for our team is to get experience," Dorrance said. "We're a young team. Experience just takes time. The team has reacted well since the loss. They (the players) don't like the fact that they lost. The further away from the loss and the more they understand that UConn played with a lot of emotion and played an outstanding game, the better they will be."

Tsantiris said the Huskies did have some trouble coming back to reality. "It was very exciting," he said. "The next three games were a struggle. We've won two and lost one since."

And was this the highlight for his team? "We hope not. We're (ranked) No. 5 and want to keep climbing."

The loss by top-ranked North Carolina moved second-ranked Santa Clara University into the top spot in Soccer America's poll. The Bronco men have been ranked first since October 24, 1989, giving Santa Clara both top-ranked teams for the first time in the poll's history.

But the double ranking may be short-lived. The Bronco men had their 37-game unbeaten streak snapped by Portland, 1-0, September 30 and could fall from the top spot.

Bowl date changed

The Sunshine Football Classic, a new college football bowl game to be played in Joe Robbie Stadium, has been moved to Friday, December 28. Kickoff is scheduled for 8 p.m. (Eastern time).

The game, originally scheduled December 29, was moved to accommodate the nearly 14,000 Miami Dolphins season-ticket holders who also purchased tickets for the first Sunshine Football Classic. The Dolphins are scheduled to play the Indianapolis Colts December 30 at 1 p.m.

"With so many Dolphins fans supporting our game, we think it is important to give them a day in between games," said Richard Giannini, president of the bowl. "It would be difficult to attend the bowl on Saturday night and then turn around and go to the Dolphins game the next day."
