Commission adopts 'Statement of Guiding Principles'

While it was successfully promoting adoption of the reform agenda at the 1991 Convention in Nashville, the NCAA Presidents Commission took time to adopt a detailed "Statement of Guiding Principles" to assist it in its future deliberations.

The statement was developed by a Commission subcommittee chaired by Harold H. Haak, president of California State University, Fresno. Serving with Haak on the subcommittee were Presidents Robert Dickeson, University of Northern Colorado; Michael R. Ferrari, Drake University; Roger H. Martin, Moravian College, and Stanley G. Rives, Eastern Illinois University. Haak, Ferrari and Rives completed their service on the Commission at the Nashville meeting.

After a preamble regarding the role and authority of the Commission, the document sets forth the Commission's endorsement of the principles for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics as set forth in Article 2 of the NCAA constitution.

The crux of the statement is the closing segment, which presents guiding principles and concerns of the Presidents Commission. The primary concerns listed, each with supporting detail, are:

- Concern for institutional control;
- Concern for the student-athlete;
- Concern for the concepts of ethical conduct and fairness;
- Concern for academic standards and the primacy of the educational mission, and

• Concern for economy and appropriate balance between athletics and other institutional priorities.

The complete text of the Commission statement follows.

Statement of Guiding Principles Preamble

The Presidents Commission exists to encourage presidential involvement in the affairs of the NCAA. The Commission serves as an ongoing forum for chief executive officers to ensure the proper role of intercollegiate athletics in American higher education. In pursuing its work with policy initiatives, the Commission shall establish effective communication with institutional chief executive officers of member institutions, as well as with the NCAA Council and the NCAA executive director. The Commission focuses on issues at the policy level, obtaining the views of professional college and university athletics administrators and relying upon them to develop implementation details. The Commission's highest priorities are the integrity of intercollegiate athletics programs, the welfare of student-athletes, and the balance between intercollegiate athletics and other institutional priorities.

Harold H. Haak

The Commission supports the basic purpose of the NCAA as stated in NCAA Constitution 1.3.1: "The competitive athletics programs of member institutions are designed to be a vital part of the educational system. A basic purpose of this Association is to maintain intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of the educational program and the athlete as an integral part of the student body, and by so doing, retain a clear line of demarcation between intercollegiate athletics and professional sports." The Commission recognizes that each NCAA member institution is responsible for conducting its intercollegiate athletics program in compliance with the rules and regulations of the Association.

In the development and support of policy initiatives, the Presidents Commission may review any activity of the Association, place any matter of concern on the agenda of any meeting of the NCAA Council or for any NCAA Convention, commission studies of intercollegiate athletics issues and urge courses of action, establish the sequence for legislative proposals in any Convention, call for a special meeting of the Association, designate mandatory roll-call votes on specific legislative proposals at any Convention, and approve the appointment of the Association's executive director.

NCAA Principles for the Conduct of Intercollegiate Athletics

The Presidents Commission endorses the principles for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics that have been adopted by the NCAA membership. Those principles are set forth in Article 2 of the NCAA constitution, as follows:

Most voting records broken at Convention

For the second straight year, the NCAA Convention shattered nearly all of the Association's voting records, in the process recording the 10 largest votes ever tallied at any NCAA Convention.

Prior to the Nashville gathering, there had been only four counted votes over 700 in 84 years of NCAA Conventions. This year, there were 20 votes exceeding the 700 mark. And Divisions I, II and III all raised their voting records.

The only groups that did not break their voting marks were Divisions I-A and I-AA, despite the controversy surrounding proposals to reduce grants-in-aid and numbers of coaches in those subdivisions. And in I-AA, every eligible voter voted.

The biggest jump came in Division III, which raised its record from 238 to 268 and had 27 counted votes higher than the previous mark.

Record attendance of more than 2,300 and nearly double the number of roll-call votes from the year before fueled the voting barrage.

The voting-record summary in Nashville:

• General session: A record 758 votes, on three occasions—the final vote on Proposal No. 48 (Division I voting autonomy), the total vote on No. 50 (multidivision classification in women's basketball) and the total vote on No. 51-I (an amendment to Divisions II and III multidivision classification). Old record: 746, 1990 annual Convention, to include basketball and football in a time-reduction resolution.

The general session also had nine votes ranging from 747 through 757, as well as 10 more from 714 through 743. Of the 33 highest vote counts in NCAA history, 29 have occurred at the last two Conventions.

• Division I: A record 330, just one short of the highest possible Division I vote at this year's Convention. That came on Proposal No. 38-11, one of the numerous amendments to the proposal to reduce time demands on student-athletes. Old record: 327, 1990 Convention, on three occasions.

Division I had a total of 13 votes higher than the previous record, and six other counts tied the old mark.

• Division II: A record 196 on Proposal No. 38-17, another of the amendments to the season limitations (time-demand issue). Old record: 187 in 1988 on a Division II tryout amendment.

Division II had 20 votes higher than the old record, with two others that tied it. The highest possible vote in Division II this year was 222.

• Division III: A record 268 on two proposals, both dealing with playing- and practice-season limits in that division—No. 39-I and No. 39-5. Old record: 238, 1990, on two proposals (both also dealing with the playing-season issues).

Better football sportsmanship sought

The NCAA Football Rules Committee at its annual meeting adopted additional measures to stem unsportsmanlike acts that it feels are demeaning to the image of the game and voted to keep the width of goal posts at 18 feet, six inches.

The committee, which met January 21-23 in Corpus Christi, Texas, voted to pass regulations designed to control taunting and "show-boating" by players and adopted a provision that prohibits players from inciting spectators.

"The No. 1 concern of the committee was the image of the game deteriorating because of antics and actions of players," said David M. Nelson, the committee's secretary-rules editor.

"I believe that was the committee's top priority. There really weren't any dramatic rules changes that alter the character of the game.

"I think we've got an excellent game, and the statistics prove that. We had the second-highest attendance in history this past year. Overall, the game is in good shape."

The committee, which voted at last year's meeting to narrow the width of goal posts from 23 feet, four inches to 18 feet, six inches, voted to keep the narrow width after considerable discussion and debate.

In other measures, the committee voted to allow defenses to score in overtime periods, which are used below the Division I-A level to determine advancement in cham-

Interns visit

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz addressed a group of 28 interns representing 19 member conferences January 17 during the Association's 1991 conference intern seminar. During the three-day conference, which was called

"Paths to Success," the interns participated in a number of workshops designed to provide information and insights to assist them in their athletics careers. Four interns currently working at the Association's national office also participated.

Football injury rates for practice, games increase

Football injury rates for both practices and games were higher than the average rates for the past seven years, according to the results of the 1990-91 NCAA Injury Surveillance System.

Knee and ankle injuries continue to be the most common football injuries. Of particular interest was the preseason football injury rate in Division II. According to Randall W. Dick, NCAA assistant director of sports sciences, since no contact was permitted in Division II spring practice, some coaches believed that lack of contact in the spring drills would result in higher injury rates during fall preseason, as players competed for starting positions within a shorter, therefore more intense, time frame. However, this year's Division II football fall preseason injury rate was lower than in previous years, thereby discounting the coaches' theory. Dick noted that Division II spring-drill contact has been reinstated for the coming season.

In other fall sports studied, wom-

School to sponsor women's soccer

The Manhattan College women's soccer program, which has competed as a club team for the past two seasons, will begin play as an NCAA Division I varsity team beginning in the fall of 1991.

"There was strong interest from our student body and the college's administration," said Manhattan's director of athletics, Robert J. Byrnes. "Women's soccer has become a very popular sport in our area. Therefore, we are making the commitment to upgrade our program, including making athletics scholarships available to prospective student-athletes."

Women's soccer had the highest game injury rate of the three women's sports in the study. The sport showed a higher practice injury rate but a lower game injury rate for the past season when compared to the previous year and its five-year average.

The survey, conducted as part of the NCAA Injury Surveillance System, is statistically reliable, but researchers should be cautious when comparing the results with injury data from other studies.

"No common definition of injury, measure of severity or evaluation of exposure exists in the athletics injury literature," Dick said. "Therefore, the information contained in this summary must be evaluated under the definitions and methodology outlined for the NCAA Injury Surveillance System (ISS)." The ISS was developed in 1982 to provide current and reliable data on injury trends in intercollegiate athletics. Injury data are collected yearly from a representative sample of NCAA member institutions and the resulting data summaries are reviewed by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports. The committee's goal continues to be to reduce injury rates through suggested changes in rules, protective equipment or coaching techniques based on data provided by the Injury Surveillance System.

Sampling

Exposure and injury data were submitted weekly by athletics trainers from institutions selected to represent a cross section of NCAA membership. The cross section was based on the three divisions of the NCAA and the four geographical regions of the country. The selected institutions composed a minimum 10 percent sample of the membership sponsoring the sport; therefore, the resulting data should be representative of the total population of NCAA institutions, Dick said.

Dick said it is important to note that this system does not identify every injury that occurs at NCAA institutions in a particular sport. Rather, it collects a sampling that is representative of a cross section of NCAA institutions.

Exposures

An athlete exposure (A-E) is one athlete participating in one practice or game in which he or she is exposed to the possibility of athletics injury. For example, five practices, each involving 60 participants, and one game involving 40 participants would result in a total of 340 A-Es for a particular week.

Injuries

A reportable injury in the Injury Surveillance System is defined as one that:

- Occurred as a result of participation in an organized intercollegiate ate practice or game.

- Required medical attention by a team athletics trainer or physician.

- Resulted in restriction of the student-athlete's participation for one or more days beyond the day of injury.

Injury rate

An injury rate is a ratio of the number of injuries in a particular category to the number of athlete exposures in that category. This value is then multiplied by 1,000 to produce an injury rate per 1,000 athlete exposures. For example, six reportable injuries during a period of 563 athlete exposures would give an injury rate of 10.7 injuries per 1,000 athlete exposures (6 divided by 563) x 1,000.

Additional information on the report is available from Dick at the NCAA national office.

The following tables highlight selected information from the fall 1990-91 Injury Surveillance System. Injury rates and game-practice percentages are compared to an average value calculated from all years in which ISS data have been collected in a specific sport.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than February 6.

Committee on Review and Planning: Replacement for Tracy Caulkins, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be a female former student-athlete of national prominence.

Division III Women's Basketball Committee: Replacement for Ismell Edwards, Rust College, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be a representative of women's basketball from Division III.

Legislative Assistance

1991 Column No. 4

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 19—exit interviews

Division I member institutions should note that with the adoption of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 19 (effective August 1, 1991), Division I member institutions are required to conduct interviews with a sample of student-athletes following the expiration of their eligibility. The institution's director of athletics, senior woman administrator or a designated representative (excluding coaching staff members) must conduct exit interviews in each sport with a sample of student-athletes (as determined by the institution) whose eligibility has expired. Such interviews must include questions regarding the value of the student's athletics experiences, the extent of the athletics time demands encountered by the student-athlete, proposed changes in intercollegiate athletics and concerns related to the administration of the student-athlete's specific sport.

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 29—academic counseling

Division I member institutions should note that with the adoption of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 29 (effective August 1, 1991), it is mandatory that all Division I member institutions make academic counseling and tutoring services available to all recruited student-athletes. Such counseling and tutoring services may be provided by the department of athletics or through the institution's nonathletics student-support services.

During its pre-Convention meeting, the NCAA Council reviewed the provisions of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 29 and determined that member institutions would have flexibility in determining the academic counseling program appropriate for each recruited student-athlete and would not require that all such student-athletes participate in such programs, it being understood that the opportunity to participate in such a program is made available to all recruited student-athletes.

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 26—partial qualifier/Division II

Division II member institutions should note that with the adoption of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 26 (effective August 1, 1991), a partial qualifier in Division II is defined as a student who does not meet the requirements for a qualifier but who, at the time of graduation from high school, presents one of the following academic requirements: (1) a minimum cumulative grade-point average of 2.000 (based on a maximum of 4.000) in a successfully completed core curriculum of at least 11 academic courses (see NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1.1.1 for additional core-curriculum requirements), or (2) a minimum 700 combined score on the SAT verbal and math sections or a minimum composite score on the ACT of 15 (if taken prior to October 28, 1989) or 18 (if taken on or subsequent to October 28, 1989) (see Bylaw 14.3.1.1.2 for additional test-score requirements). Please note that a student-athlete who graduates from high school and presents an overall cumulative grade-point average of at least 2.000 no longer would be considered a partial qualifier unless the student has satisfied either the core-curriculum requirements or the standardized test-score component of the Association's initial-eligibility legislation.

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 27—transfer eligibility/Division III

Division III member institutions should note that the adoption of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 27 (effective August 1, 1991) applies to student-athletes who would not have been eligible for athletics competition had they remained at the institution from which they transferred. Such a student-athlete must fulfill one academic year of residence at the certifying Division III member institution prior to representing the institution in intercollegiate athletics competition.

During its post-Convention meeting, the Council reviewed 1991 Convention Proposal No. 27 and determined that the requirement that the student would have been eligible had he or she remained at the institution from which the student transferred would relate only to the student's academic eligibility (as distinguished from disciplinary suspensions) at the previous institution. This represents a revision of the Council's pre-Convention interpretation regarding this proposal.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

1. The principle of institutional control and responsibility. It is the responsibility of each member institution to control its intercollegiate athletics program in compliance with the rules and regulations of the Association. The institution's chief executive officer is responsible for the administration of all aspects of the athletics program, including approval of the budget and audit of all expenditures. The institution's responsibility for conduct of its intercollegiate athletics program includes responsibility for the actions of its staff members and for the actions of any other individual or organization engaged in activities promoting the athletics interests of the institution.

2. The principle of student-athlete welfare. Intercollegiate athletics programs shall be conducted in a manner designed to protect and enhance the physical and educational welfare of student-athletes.

3. The principle of ethical conduct. Student-athletes and individuals employed by or associated with an institution shall deport themselves with honesty and good sportsmanship. Their behavior shall at all times reflect the standards of honor and dignity that characterize participation in competitive sports in the collegiate setting.

4. The principle of sound academic standards. Intercollegiate athletics programs shall be maintained as a vital component of the educational program, and student-athletes shall be an integral part of the student body. The admission, academic standing and academic progress of student-athletes shall be consistent with the policies and standards adopted by the institution for the student body in general.

5. The principle of rules compliance. Each institution shall comply with all applicable rules and regulations of the Association. It shall monitor its programs to assure compliance and to identify and report to the Association instances in which compliance has not been achieved. In any such instance, the institution shall cooperate fully with the Association and shall take appropriate corrective actions. Members of an institution's staff, student-athletes, and other individuals and groups representing the institution's athletics interests shall comply with the applicable Association rules, and the member institution shall be responsible for such compliance.

6. The principle of amateurism. Student-athletes shall be amateurs in an intercollegiate sport and their participation should be motivated primarily by education and by the physical, mental and social benefits to be derived. Student participation in intercollegiate athletics is an avocation, and student-athletes should be protected from exploitation by professional and commercial enterprises.

7. The principle of competitive equity. The structure and programs of the Association and the activities of its members shall promote opportunity for equity in competition to assure that individual student-athletes and institutions will not be prevented unfairly from achieving the benefits inherent in participation in intercollegiate athletics.

8. The principle governing recruiting. The recruiting process involves a balancing of the interests of prospective student-athletes, their educational institutions and the Association's member institutions. Recruiting regulations shall be designed to promote equity among member institutions in their recruiting of prospects and to shield them from undue pressures that may interfere with the scholastic or athletics interests of the prospects or their educational institutions.

9. The principle governing eligibility. Eligibility requirements shall be designed to assure proper emphasis on educational objectives, to promote competitive equity among institutions and to prevent exploitation of student-athletes.

10. The principle governing financial aid. A student-athlete may receive athletically related financial aid administered by the institution without violating the principle of amateurism, provided the amount does not exceed the cost of education authorized by the Association. Any other financial assistance, except that received from one upon whom the student-athlete is naturally or legally dependent, shall be prohibited except as specifically authorized by the Association.

11. The principle governing playing and practice seasons. The time required of student-athletes for participation in intercollegiate athletics shall be regulated to minimize interference with their opportunities for acquiring a quality education in a manner consistent with that afforded the general student body.

12. The principle governing post-season competition and contests sponsored by noncollegiate organizations. The conditions under which postseason competition occurs shall be controlled to assure that the benefits inherent in such competition flow fairly to all participants, to prevent unjustified intrusion on the time student-athletes devote to their academic programs, and to protect student-athletes from exploitation by professional and commercial enterprises.

13. The principle governing the economy of athletics program operation. Intercollegiate athletics programs shall be administered in keeping with prudent management and fiscal practices to assure the financial stability necessary for providing student-athletes with adequate opportunities for athletics competition as an integral part of a quality educational experience.

Guiding principles and concerns of the Presidents Commission

The deliberations and decisions of the Presidents Commission may reflect any or all of the NCAA principles set forth above. Certain of those principles, however, are of greater concern to the Commission than others because they inherently relate to major athletics policy matters and because they are of primary interest to chief executive officers.

The following are primary concerns of the Commission:

1. Concern for institutional control. The responsibility for and control of the institutional athletics program should reside with the chief executive officer of the institution.

The chief executive officer should assure that institutional officers, including those in athletics, accept responsibility for maintaining academic integrity, institutional accountability, and compliance with NCAA rules and regulations.

The athletics administrators, coaches and staff should be subject to the same standards of reporting, accountability and institutional obligations as other staff members.

2. Concern for the student-athlete. Opportunities for intercollegiate athletics participation should be offered to men and women students on an equitable basis.

Student-athletes should enjoy student-life opportunities and experiences comparable to those available to other students.

Student-athletes should achieve at least the same retention and graduation levels as the student body in general.

Student-athletes should be protected from undue athletics demands on their time that interfere with or diminish their opportunity for academic and social development.

Student-athletes should be protected from academic, commercial or other forms of exploitation.

3. Concern for the concepts of ethical conduct and fairness. College athletics competitiveness should be so balanced as to resist undue influences from professional, Olympic and other noncollegiate sports interests.

Stanley G. Rives

College athletics competitiveness should be characterized by an open sharing of information regarding athletics programs and procedures, costs, and academic performance.

As positive role models in our society, student-athletes, coaches and others involved in intercollegiate athletics should be exemplars of personal behavior, on and off the field of play.

Use of banned drugs to enhance athletics performance is unacceptable inasmuch as it endangers the health of the student-athlete, violates the concept of fairness, violates NCAA regulations and in many cases is illegal.

4. Concern for academic standards and the primacy of the educational mission. Athletics programs should be properly balanced as an important component of the institution's educational mission, and student-athletes should be an integral part of the student body.

Student-athletes should be provided opportunities for academic success at the institution comparable to those available to all students, and student-athletes should be held to the same academic standards and expectations in admissions, academic standing and academic progress as other students.

5. Concern for economy and appropriate balance between athletics and other institutional priorities. As with other institutional programs, athletics programs should be managed with prudent fiscal practices, with all funds under the ultimate control of the chief executive officer.

The cost of the institution's athletics programs should undergo regular review to ensure appropriate balance with other institutional priorities.

Nearly every counted vote in Division III in Nashville was bigger than the division's old record. The highest possible Division III vote was 350.

• Division I-A: The highest 1991 vote in Division I-A was 110 on Proposal No. 40-A, the grant cut in Division I-A football. That was five under the record 115 (and highest possible) at the 1990 Convention on the spring football practice issue. All Division I-A members were represented at the Convention in Nashville, so some did not vote or did not have their votes recorded on that proposal.

• Division I-AA: The highest was 94 (the highest possible this year, but under the record 96 at last year's Convention). This year's perfect count was on No. 35, the proposal to reduce the number of coaches in Division I-AA football. Last year's 96 (the subdivision has lost members) was on the spring football practice proposal.

Unofficially, the Convention attracted a total of 2,310 registrants—2,172 delegates (including 238 chief executive officers) and 138 news media representatives. The old records for attendance were 2,171 (2,021 delegates and 150 media at the 1990 Convention) and 199 CEOs (at the June 1985 special integrity Convention).

Official attendance figures will be announced in The NCAA News after the registration files are audited.

pensionship play. Previously, if the defense gained possession of the ball, it was not allowed to advance it.

In a related matter, the committee voted to give the winner of the coin toss before the overtime period options similar to those given the winner of the toss before the game. Under the previous rule, the referee chose which goal line the defense would defend.

The committee also voted to penalize offensive holding and clipping behind the line of scrimmage from the spot of the foul. The penalty had been enforced from the previous line of scrimmage.

In other actions, the committee:

• Approved a new rule recommending that home management provide microphones for the referee to provide spectators more information on penalties and timing adjustments.

• Approved a rule change that prevents offensive players other than the fumbler from advancing a fumble on all fourth-down plays. The previous rule prohibited such advancement only on fourth-down plays inside the five-yard line and on two-point conversion attempts.

• Adopted a provision that gives the receiving team the option of taking the ball 30 yards downfield from the spot of the kick when a kick-off goes out of bounds before being touched.

• Voted to require the offensive team to notify the referee immediately before running a guard-around play, commonly called a "fumble-rooski."

• Approved a rule preventing players from writing words or numbers on their bodies or on tape.

• Agreed to study ways to reduce the length of games and the impact such measures would have on the number of plays per contest.

• Voted to make a rule against split officiating crews mandatory in 1992.

The committee's recommendations are subject to approval by the NCAA Executive Committee.

NCAA presidents act like presidents

Chicago Tribune
An editorial

If the NCAA Convention in Nashville had been a football game, the Presidents Commission would be accused of running up the score.

What was expected to be a nip-and-tuck contest between the forces of reform and defenders of the status quo quickly became a rout, with the reformer presidents ramming through virtually their full slate of proposals against an overmatched faction of coaches, directors of athletics and others with vested interests.

The results are enough to make even a hardened cynic believe that college sports really may be ready for reform.

Among the changes adopted were cuts in scholarships and coaching staffs for all sports, including the "revenue sports" of football and basketball; a prohibition against athletics dormitories, which have been incubators for trouble on some campuses and which isolate athletes from the rest of the student body, and a reduction in training-table meals from three a day to one.

In one of their most significant acts, the delegates approved nearly 10-1 a 20-hour-a-week limit on the time athletes can (be required to) devote to their sports. Additionally, they reduced the number of campus visits allowed for basketball and football recruits and required that every Division I school offer counseling and tutoring to recruited athletes.

The principal motivation for the reforms, NCAA officials said, is financial. Richard D. Schultz, executive director of the association, estimated the average saving to Division I-A football programs at $500,000.

But if the motivation wasn't necessarily the noblest, the result was exactly what has been needed: a reassertion of authority by the chief executives of the colleges and universities.

Most of the recent scandals and abuses in collegiate sports have been traceable, directly or indirectly, to the presidents' abdication of authority over sports programs to coaches, directors of athletics and other self-interested parties.

As important as they are in their own right, the proposals adopted in Nashville are significant because they say who is in charge. And that, finally, is who it ought to be: the chief executives.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

The legislation from the NCAA Convention of 1991 will long be remembered for the debate and controversy it has provoked. While the Presidents Commission may have felt the time was right to enact far-reaching reform, it is apparent that specific reforms may do more harm than good.

A case in point: Under the 1990 rules, soccer teams were allowed to play 22 matches in approximately 11 weeks. By scheduling the first regular-season match during August, the demands on players were reduced to approximately 1.9 games per week on average.

Under the Convention changes, we will play 20 matches in approximately nine weeks, for an average of 2.2 per week.

It is a reasonable assumption that by playing more games in fewer weeks, players will be required to miss more class time, not less.

With the increased time demands of more games in fewer days, the time available to recover from injury is reduced. This, coupled with the prevalence of overtime matches in soccer, is not in the best interest of players' health.

Limited substitution has slowed the game down somewhat but with "More than anything else, women in sports are encouraged by the strong control and commitment to reform demonstrated at the 1991 NCAA Convention.

"I went there (Illinois) not only to get an accounting degree, but also to improve as an athlete. I think by taking time away, by taking coaches away, you're allowing less quality instruction. That's going to hurt us.

"They're not looking at the student-athlete close enough. They're looking at extreme situations.

Emphasis on sports can be an advantage, educator says

By Larry Taft
The (Nashville) Tennessean

A lack of quality education has reached the crisis level in the nation's cities and is threatening the country, a University of Chicago education/sports reform advocate has said.

Clyde D. Bell says sports is one vehicle that can save youngsters from the self-perpetuating poverty that results from poor education.

"We love the games, and Michael Jordan floats backwards and is very gifted. But, essentially, that is corporate sport. It is for entertainment and profit," said Bell.

"A lot of people will criticize, saying there is too much emphasis on sports, but that is not true at the school-age level. On the entry level, athletics can make a difference, and it is a challenge to make the coach sensitive to what his role as a teacher/counselor should be.

"I'm not sure we're getting as much support as we should from the colleges, but I had a great conversation with Albert Witte (immediate past NCAA president), and he is going to sit on our national board."

Bell, who lobbied NCAA college administrators at the Nashville Convention to rethink their approach to athletics and education, is associate director of the office of special programs, which oversees the University of Chicago's Institute for Athletics and Education.

"As has been reported by Mr. [Gordon] Berlin of the Ford Foundation, we are developing a subclass of this country that cannot read, write, compute or communicate. That subclass threatens this country as we understand it," Bell said.

"The issue, the solution, is education. By utilizing the subsystem of the school that is athletics, sports can be used as a tool to reinforce the academic performance."

Bell hopes he can encourage colleges to be more sensitive to the educational needs of their future athletes.

"You have to start with the premise that the country, particularly the urban areas, is in crisis," he said. "When you see that in cities like Chicago, where three girls graduate from public high schools for every one boy, you can look at the social problems within this country—who is in jail, who's into drugs, and you'll see a disproportionate number of Blacks.

"Our urban areas are in crisis, and to address that, we would argue that the colleges are going to have to help find a mechanism to reinforce high-school and elementary school programs."

Bell said his group has shown signs of making an impact, but it needs more support, including both moral and financial, from the colleges.

"We are getting results. Chris Zorich of Notre Dame was in our program in Chicago where we have classes to help educate inner-city youngsters on how to prepare for college entrance tests," Bell said.

"We have programs that provide guidance all the way down to the freshman level, and that is going to be the key to helping some of these students help themselves.

"Athletics is another way to address it, and the colleges can help."

Those opposed to reforms deserve no sympathy

Daniel F. Sullivan, president of Division III national football champion Allegheny College, calls the NCAA's package of reforms for big-time college athletics "a step in the right direction" and says he is "unsympathetic" with those opposed to the measures.

"If anything, big-time college athletics needs more cleaning up. More efforts are needed to contain sports programs' costs and to give student-athletes a better shot at being students first," he maintains.

"Probably no single thing has eroded public confidence in American higher education more than abuses in athletics," Sullivan said. "No college can teach integrity in the pursuit of knowledge, or how to live a life of purpose and service, when its own integrity is compromised in the unconstrained pursuit of victory on the playing field," he told PRNewswire.

Allegheny not only holds the championship in Division III football, but also has been nationally ranked in 11 sports in the last four years.

Sullivan, a three-sport college athlete and now president of the North Coast Athletic Conference, says, "Allegheny's performance proves a key point. On-field results do not suffer when players are expected to be total students. They can still win at sports—and at much more—when they're given the time to complete rigorous degree programs in four years and to take advantage of other college activities."

Sullivan points to Allegheny's record of producing U.S. business leaders and future doctorates (top five percent among liberal arts colleges nationally), as well as doctors, lawyers and government officials. "Yet even in an academic environment that produces this kind of success," he says, "our athletes perform with the best."

He cites this year's all-America linebacker with a 3.800 grade-point average and a major in economics and the Gators' nationally ranked women's volleyball team with a collective 3.300 grade-point average. "Then there are the student government senators, the symphony players and the resident assistants on the student life staff," he adds.

"The way these young people are growing intellectually and personally would be constrained severely if sports ate up more of their time than 20 hours each week, which is one of the new NCAA limits," Sullivan notes. "But Allegheny carefully controls the time athletics takes, and we're under the limits in all sports. All colleges should be."

As for cost-containment, Sullivan observes, "Division III colleges achieve success without awarding any grants-in-aid for sports and with small, but excellent, coaching staffs. We ride herd closely on athletics expenses because the money for sports comes from the sources that also pay for academic programs, including students' tuition."

Just the tip of the iceberg

By C. W. Nevius
San Francisco Chronicle
Excerpted from a column

It is not hard to picture the members of the NCAA Presidents Commission walking away from the NCAA Convention slapping imaginary dust off their hands.

"Well," they could be saying, "now that we've cleaned up college sports, let's do something about the energy shortage."

First, let's say that many of the reforms adopted so far are welcome and long overdue. No one—except recruiters for football factories—will miss the palatial dorms that are only available to athletes and are to be eliminated by 1996.

Somewhere, the idea of giving a student a chance to attend school on an athletics scholarship went way off track, and this de facto segregation was the unfortunate result.

Nor will there be dreadful repercussions from the elimination of a three-times-a-day "training-table" meal. Now, it is cut to one, despite cries from the coaching lobby, which provided experts to testify that "athletes often have special nutritional needs." Right, guys, you bet.

The cries and complaints from the jockocracy are heartrending. One athletics director explained that spring football must be expanded—it was diminished in an Sullivan acknowledges that Allegheny's teams have racked up their rankings competing primarily with schools with the same "academics first" philosophy, but he rejects arguments that Division III's level of competition is inferior to Division I or II.

"There's no difference in the drama generated in a title game or what it means to the players to achieve their goals," he says. "More important, Division III athletics is focused on the players, for their personal growth and development, rather than on gaining institutional prestige, alumni support or television revenues."

Sullivan also supports the NCAA's efforts to have colleges give balanced attention to all sports, not just the so-called "majors" like football and basketball. The North Coast Athletic Conference that he heads was founded to promote this earlier ruling—because the time is needed to stress "safety."

Sure, like the job safety of football coaches who need the time to build a team that will win and make money.

As wonderful as all these reforms sound, the reality is the NCAA Presidents Commission is taking on an established, organized and profitable operation, big-time college athletics.

This was just the opening kickoff. There is some real head butting coming up. As University of Iowa President Hunter Rawlings III said, this is just a start, "and frankly, I don't think it's a very big start."

Even in big programs, college football and basketball coaches are not necessarily bad people. It's just that their job produces such extreme tunnel vision that they can have problems seeing the forest for the trees. Already, some of them who grabbed their hearts and appeared ready to perish in shock are admitting that some of the reforms won't be so bad.

But that's the shame. With all the howls of protest, it is easy for the Presidents Commission to think it cut deeply into the problem. Actually, it just scratched the surface.

It was interesting to see that one of the proposals was voted down by a hand (paddle) count. The voters knew they wanted to turn that one ideal, and the league's academic-powerhouse members like Allegheny, Kenyon College, Oberlin College and Ohio Wesleyan University produce nationally ranked teams in up to 16 sports every year.

"The balanced approach only makes sense educationally, by providing consistent benefits to students across the board. But unfortunately, it probably won't take hold in Division I until less financial incentive is attached to winning in football and basketball," he says.

Sullivan says that whether or not colleges and universities believe reform will affect their success in the win-loss column, they should get better control of their sports programs.

"All colleges have to do this for themselves, or they'll keep losing public credibility," he argues. "And they absolutely have to do it for their students, or they won't fully be teaching key values."

down, but they weren't sure they wanted to have their name on the ballot.

The proposal would have punished Division I schools if they did not graduate half their scholarship athletes.

One of the sponsors, Thomas J. Scanlan of Manhattan College, called the idea a "simple, direct, unequivocal means to end the scandalous exploitation of student-athletes."

Actually, as we know, the graduation rate of many "big-time" sports programs is appallingly low. Athletes get no more than a visitor's pass on a college campus, which is revoked as soon as his or her eligibility is up.

Even those who beat the impossible odds and actually make it to play professional sports are often no more than tourists in higher education. Fewer than half the NFL players graduated from college.

As Scanlan said, "If we were unwilling to commit ourselves to the graduation of one of every two athletes we recruit," the American public has every right to regard college athletics with contempt.

If they can graduate one of every two athletes and are not doing it, it is inexcusable. If it cannot be done, we need to know why.

That should keep the Presidents Commission busy.

fewer scholarships to offer, we may experience a serious drop in the quality of our sport and the number of healthy players ready to play it.

The rationale behind 20 practice opportunities before the first match appears to be sound enough on the surface, until semester and quarter schools are compared.

Assuming that Sundays are free and that two practices on a nonschool day and one on a school day is the norm, on the semester system schools would be able to report and begin practice on or around August 20. Schools on a quarter system, on the other hand, must return a week later, around August 27, in effect giving the semester schools an extra week of practice and extra days to ease players into match fitness.

It would appear that we are increasing the risk of injuries (particularly for schools on the quarter system), which will be compounded by the congestion of the season immediately following.

Aside from the obvious injury concerns, I would also ask, how fair is this practice?

My last point is more in terms of mental health than physical. Banning players from outside competition deprives them of their opportunity to get away from college pressures and enjoy their sport for competition and enjoyment's sake.

It is motivation for them to stay in shape during the off-season, and it probably serves as some kind of motivation to keep them out of the bars on weekends when otherwise they might not.

With the off-season reduced by four weeks, winter and spring play gone, and the time allowed for preseason preparation reduced to insufficient levels, we have a situation that is not in the best interests of our athletes.

The quality of college soccer (and other sports) will suffer and our athletes once again will be at the short end of the stick.

Cutting costs and reducing time demands on college athletes may be necessary measures but let us not forget that we have a responsibility as professionals to ensure a safe and healthy environment.

We also have a right to our freedom away from our responsibilities, and some well-meaning people may have overlooked that in the quest for generic conformity.

I think the resolve is there."

Omaha World-Herald

"I wouldn't be surprised if the presidents might want to look at adding core courses or increasing the test scores, to put a little more strength into Proposition 48 (Bylaw 14.3).

"I look at the academic aspect (of next year's NCAA Convention) to be quite emotional."

Roy Kramer, commissioner

Thomas K. Hearn, president

"Either reform will succeed, or there will be replacement of the present system. The status quo no longer can be maintained... It is easy for the athletics establishment, so omnipotent on its own turf, not to be aware of the forces that are gathering on the hills, including Capitol Hill."

West Virginia University would be more likely to agree with a five percent reduction in grants for football and basketball instead of the 10 percent cutback adopted by the NCAA, Ed Pastilong, director of athletics, says.

The NCAA at its annual Convention adopted cutbacks in grants from 95 to 85 in football and 15 to 13 in men's and women's basketball to cut costs.

"I feel that this will be addressed between now and next year's Convention, and there's a possibility the reduction will be changed to five percent," Pastilong told the Associated Press. "Many people feel that if you're going to have a reduction in cost, you should not do it at the expense of prohibiting men and women from attending college."

Also at the Convention, recruiting visits were cut back from 85 to 70 in football and 18 to 15 in basketball.

West Virginia's coaching staffs already were averaging near the lower numbers anyway, so it shouldn't affect the school, Pastilong said.

The Convention also adopted a resolution requiring athletes to live in the same dormitories as other students instead of special facilities.

Ed Pastilong

West Virginia's athletes already are mixed in with the general student population, Pastilong said.

Pastilong said he respected the work done by the NCAA Presidents Commission, which set the agenda approved at the Convention, because "the university presidents are responsible for a particular university's mission and should have a strong say in what takes place in all areas, and in this case athletics issues."

Terps claim most coaches, but Iba network widest

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The college with the most graduates in the Division I active head-coaching ranks?

Maryland once again leads with six. Duke has five and Indiana and Mississippi State four each.

Five of the Maryland graduates played at least part of their careers under Bud Millikan, Oklahoma State 1942, who played under Henry Iba, the "Iron Duke" whose coaching family tree in the Division I ranks is amazing. More about that later.

The family-tree members from Maryland are Old Dominion's Tom Young (1958), Monmouth's (New Jersey) Wayne Szoke (1963) and three 1968 graduates—Colorado's Joe Harrington, Towson State's Terry Truax and Maryland's Gary Williams. The sixth Maryland graduate is Southwestern Louisiana's Marty Fletcher (1973), who played under Lefty Driesell.

Duke's five are Driesell (1954), North Carolina-Charlotte's Jeff Mullins (1964), Winthrop's Steve Vacendak (1966), Creighton's Tony Barone (1968) and Illinois State's Bob Bender (1980).

Mullins, Vacendak and Barone played under Vic Bubas, former Sun Belt Conference commissioner whose 213-67 record spanned the decade of the 1960s and included three Final Four trips.

Indiana's four are Evansville's Jim Crews (1976), Georgia State's Bob Reinhart (1961), Miami's (Ohio) Joby Wright (1972) and William and Mary's Chuck Swenson (1976).

Mississippi State's four are Central Florida's Joe Dean Jr. (1976), Delaware's Steve Steinwedel (1975), Mississippi State's Richard Williams (1967) and Texas A&M's Kermit Davis Jr. (1982).

Eleven colleges have three graduates who are current Division I head coaches. They are Fordham, Grambling, La Salle, Long Beach State, Marquette, North Carolina, Oklahoma State, South Carolina, St. Francis (Pennsylvania), St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) and Weber State.

Iba's network

Oklahoma State's three are Texas Christian's Moe Iba (a son, 1962), UTEP's Don Haskins (1953) and Oklahoma State's Eddie Sutton (1959).

But this trio is only a small part of the Iron Duke's network, whose members refer to him as "Mister Iba."

An incredible 44 current Division I head coaches (or almost 15 percent of the 295) are members of Iba's family tree—that is, they played either for Iba in college or were assistants or players under a coach whose lineage can be traced back to him.

So wrote Bill Connors, veteran Tulsa World columnist, in the Sporting News 1991 College Basketball Yearbook. Says Connors: "I can't take full credit for that 44 figure—I know that Mike Douchant and his staff made a lot of phone calls and found some I didn't know about. And remember, his all-time tree includes many more former Division I coaches plus others in lower divisions."

And this does not include, Connors points out, many others like Indiana's Bob Knight, Duke's Mike Krzyzewski and former Kansas coach Larry Brown (who played on one of Iba's Olympic teams), who have developed friendships with Iba over the years.

Coaches from all levels, whether members of the tree or not, come to Stillwater seeking advice from Iba, now 88. Although he retired 20 years ago (after winning 767 games and two national championships), he offers criticism that is valid in today's game.

UCLA's John Wooden, winner of 10 national titles, calls him "basketball's greatest friend and finest gentleman."

It is a generational thing. UTEP's two graduates, Nolan Richardson at Arkansas and Andy Stoglin at Jackson State, were under Haskins. As another example, Drake's Gary Garner and St. Louis' Rich Grawer were under Missouri's Norm Stewart, who was under Wilbur "Sparky" Stalcup (at Missouri), who was under Iba.

Other family trees

Of course, one could, with extensive research, draw up family trees for many veteran, successful head coaches of this and earlier generations.

Knight is growing one at Indiana, for instance.

Dean Smith at North Carolina, who recently got his 700th career victory, has a trio of pupils with Vanderbilt's Eddie Fogler (1970), Kansas' Roy Williams (1972) and Furman's George Estes (1971), plus former college coaches like Brown (1962), with three Final Four teams.

Smith himself is a member of the

Jethro Owens, Northwestern State (Louisiana), tops Division I field-goal shooters

Ziemke (1973) and Connecticut's Geno Auriemma (1981).

The first three played under a legend, the late Carol Eckman, a pioneer who organized the first national women's invitational tournament, conducted in 1969, 1970 and 1971.

Many other present and former women's coaches at all levels are members of Eckman's family tree. Her career winning percentage was .939.

Slippery Rock's quartet includes

Alabama State junior Lisa McMullen leads all Division I scorers with a 31.5 average

Virginia Commonwealth's Susan Walvius and UTEP's Sandra Rushing. Siena's Gina Castelli is 27 and seven are 28.

In men's Division I basketball, only two head coaches are under 30. The youngest is Niagara's Jack Armstrong, who just turned 28 January 3. Rich Zvoisek of St. Francis (New York) is 29, but will reach 30 on March 3.

Only two are 30—Wagner's Tim Capstraw and Virginia's Jeff Jones. Three are 31.

added. "I didn't even get his name." The rescue received no publicity at the time, other than the student newspaper.

Anderson said it was just "reflex and common sense." On second thought, he said. "It was stupid—my back could have gone out and the water was deep." Would he do it again? "Sure." (Jonathan Tapper, Northeastern sports information assistant)

Can you top these?

Talk about crazy schedules. Drake plays 15 of its first 17 games at home due to scheduling conflicts with city-owned Vets Auditorium, then plays 10 of its next 12 games on the road.

Said first-year coach Rudy Washington: "I was at a function with Michael Jordan this summer in New York City and he said that even the NBA isn't crazy enough to send a team on the road that long." (Mike Madden, Drake SID)

Texas Tech's women are off to a 10-2 start—second best in the 10 seasons of NCAA and Southwest Athletic Conference control—and they look even better in the classroom. The team had a combined 3.150 grade-point average (on a 4.000 scale) last semester and nine of the 14 players were above 3.000. Freshman guard Diana Kersey earned a perfect 4.000. (Kent Best, Texas Tech assistant SID)

Quotes of the week

Chadron State's first-ever visit to Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colorado, was coming up when coach Kip Cady learned he had to shell out $80 for a pair of chains to deal with Wolf Creek Pass, elevation 10,850 feet, plus two feet of fresh snow. He never had put on chains in his life, but one of his players, Tish Linke of Granby, Colorado, also in the mountains, came to the rescue.

"The trip over the pass wasn't too bad because you couldn't see more than 15 feet," the coach said. "But it was clear as a bell coming back and things got scary. You could see it was several thousand feet straight down. I'll tell you one thing. As long as we have to make this trip I'll be sure to recruit at least one mountain girl who knows how to put chains on." (Con Marshall, Chadron State SID)

Basketball notes

Forrest "Phog" Allen family tree at Kansas, which might be first in terms of wins per coach. Smith (701 through January 22), Ralph Miller (674 including vacated and forfeited games) and Adolph Rupp (875, the all-time leader) all played at Kansas, as did Frosty Cox (203) and Dick Harp (141). Allen himself won 746 and played at Kansas under the game's inventor, Dr. James Naismith, who told him (in 1906), "Forrest, you don't coach basketball, you just play it."

The above six Kansas graduates have won 3,340 games, or almost 557 per man, with 94 NCAA tournament victories (more than any other college's graduates) and 18 Final Four teams—13 teams in the title game and six champions.

Then there is John McLendon Jr., a 1936 Kansas graduate who did not play varsity basketball but studied under Allen and won 523 college games in 25 seasons, including three NAIA championships at Tennessee State (1957-58-59). He was elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Women's alma maters

Ohio State leads the active women's head-coaching ranks in Division I with seven graduates.

West Chester and Slippery Rock have four each, and 13 other colleges have three each.

The Ohio State seven includes Ohio's Marsha Reall (1975), Xavier's (Ohio) Mark Ehlen (1975), Illinois' Kathy Lindsey (1978), Boise State's June Daugherty (1978), Cornell's Kim Jordan (1980), Cincinnati's Laurie Pirtle (1980) and Brooklyn's Molly Perdue (1982).

All but Ehlen and Perdue were there in the Debbie Wilson coaching years (1973-1980). Perdue played under current Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer.

West Chester's four are Kansas' Marian Washington (1970), Minnesota's Linda MacDonald-Hill (1970), Rhode Island's Linda

Iowa's Vivian Stringer (1970), Butler's Paulette Stein (1972), St. Francis' (Pennsylvania) Deb Polca (1973) and Lehigh's Jocelyn Beck (1975).

All four were under Dr. Anne Griffiths, a 111-56 winner who now is dean of the College of Education and Human Services Professions at Slippery Rock.

Oldest coaches

The oldest coaches in women's Division I basketball include some of the game's biggest winners.

Youngstown State's Ed DiGregorio is the oldest at 64. Next at 62 is West Virginia's Kittie Blakemore, then Eastern Washington's Bill Smithpeters, third at 60. Augusta's Lowell Barnhart is fourth at 58.

Both Fresno State's Bob Spencer and Drexel's Lillian Haas are 57 and Maryland-Eastern Shore's Willie Simon is 54.

Two more are 53—Loyola's (Maryland) Frank Szymanski and Northwestern's Don Perrelli. Three are tied for 10th at 52. They are Central Connecticut State's Brenda Reilly, Lafayette's Pat Fisher and Bill Sheahan of Mount St. Mary's (Maryland). Spencer tops this group in wins at 539 entering the season. That is second in all of Division I to the 556 by Texas' Jody Conradt. Simon's 317 is second in this group.

Six more have won at least 200. They are Reilly 278, Perrelli 275, Blakemore 258, Smithpeters 253, Haas 242 and Sheahan 211 (all totals are entering this season).

Eight of the 12 oldest women's coaches are men—the reverse of the division picture. There are 168 women and 118 men in Division I head-coaching ranks, including three colleges that have cohead coaches.

Youngest coaches

Only four Division I women's coaches are under 28. Long Island-Brooklyn's Marguerite Moran is the youngest at 24. Two are 26—

One big assist

Northeastern's Marcellus Anderson spent one summer as a lifeguard growing up in Washington, D.C., but never put his skills to use because "everyone in D.C. knows how to swim." But that changed, reports Joe Burris of the Boston Globe, when Anderson's team played in Hawaii's Maui Classic. He and some teammates were on the beach one day when a youngster asked them to save his father.

"His father was about 200 yards out," said Anderson, who was nursing a bad back at the time. "I swam out and got him. I brought him in about 75 yards. He was panicking and hitting me in the head." Teammate John Callahan then joined him and they brought him in the rest of the way. "The man said 'Thank you,' and just left," Anderson

Miami (Ohio) men's basketball is given two-year probation

I. Introduction.

This case began May 10, 1989, when the NCAA enforcement staff received an anonymous letter indicating that a possible violation involving the then Miami University (Ohio) head men's basketball coach and a member of the men's basketball team may have occurred. The letter contained information indicating that the then head men's basketball coach had provided a grade to the student-athlete in a "basketball theory" class, even though the student-athlete neither attended the class nor completed any required assignments.

On December 19, 1989, the enforcement staff interviewed the head men's basketball coach in the presence of a university representative. In February 1990, the enforcement staff interviewed the former student-athlete and the university's registrar. An official inquiry was sent to the university May 15, 1990. The institution responded in writing July 2, 1990. Included in the university's response was a statement by the then head men's basketball coach. Separate prehearing conferences were conducted with representatives of the institution and the head men's basketball coach (who no longer was employed by the university) October 29, 1990. A hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions with the involved parties was held November 11, 1990.

This case involved a fundamental violation of university academic integrity and NCAA rules by a head coach in an attempt to retain the eligibility of a team member. The involved student-athlete would not have remained eligible to compete without a substantial improvement in his grade-point average during the fall of 1989. The then head coach viewed the young man as important to the basketball team's success, and, therefore, the student-athlete was enrolled in a class taught by the coach. The coach awarded him a grade of A (a grade sufficient for the young man to retain his eligibility) despite the fact that the young man did not participate in any way in the class.

At the time of the violation, the coach recognized and later admitted that he knew his actions were contrary to university academic rules, although he did not know that these actions also were contrary to NCAA legislation. The coach and the student-athlete agreed to keep the grade arrangement confidential between themselves.

Upon being informed by the NCAA enforcement staff of a possible violation, the university provided its full cooperation in the investigation. The coach, when confronted with the allegation, immediately acknowledged his involvement and accepted full responsibility for his actions. Investigation by the university and the enforcement staff indicated that this was a single, aberrant act by a coach who had been involved in no other known violations of university academic or NCAA rules and regulations during his tenure of 20 plus years at the institution.

The university undertook an examination of its academic policies and practices, making several changes, and made very clear what it had always maintained—that the proper relationship of a coach and student-athlete in a teacher/student setting is an academic relationship and not one related to athletics. The committee appreciated the position of the university that academic fraud is exceptionally difficult to detect without violating basic professor/student relationships; yet the committee also agreed with the position of the university that any such fraud is a threat to the basic academic integrity of any institution.

Following institutional procedures in disciplinary matters for employees, the university terminated the employment of the head men's basketball coach in the summer of 1990. The university reported the violation to the Mid-American Conference, which, November 1, 1990, with the concurrence of the university, imposed several penalties: all individual records and performances achieved by the ineligible student-athlete were eliminated; all team records and performances achieved during the participation of the ineligible student-athlete were vacated; all contests in which the former student-athlete competed while ineligible were forfeited; all monies received from the 1989 Mid-American Conference men's basketball tournament were to be returned to the conference, and the university was placed on probation for two years with monitoring by the conference office.

The Committee on Infractions has determined that academic fraud is a major violation of NCAA regulations. Certainly, a case in which a head men's basketball coach was able to preserve a season of eligibility for one of his top student-athletes improperly is a major violation. The minimum required penalties for a major violation as set forth by the Association are: a two-year probationary period; elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits related to the sport for at least one year; elimination of off-campus recruiting for the sport for at least one year; loss of postseason competition and television appearances for at least one year, and possible termination of the employment of staff members involved in the violations. The committee is mandated by the prescribed legislation to impose the full penalties unless it determines that the case is unique. The committee has found that a case may be unique when there is: prompt detection and reporting of the violations to the NCAA; thorough investigation of the athletics program by the institution that goes beyond merely cooperating in the processing of the case, and initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions (including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that the institution will comply with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance in the future).

The committee found that this is a unique case. The committee noted the university's full cooperation, its history of no infractions cases, its actions in terminating the head coach from his position, the isolated albeit serious nature of this single violation and the penalties already imposed by the Mid-American Conference. Therefore, the committee imposed the following penalties: a two-year probationary period with monitoring reports and acceptance of all the conference penalties as the NCAA's. Further, the committee determined that it normally would have required the former head men's basketball coach and any member institution that wishes to employ him in an athletically related position during the next five years to come before the committee. In view of the coach's full cooperation and candor in this matter, the committee determined that the period during which he will be subject to this show-cause procedure shall be limited to a period of three years.

II. Violation of NCAA legislation as determined by committee.

[NCAA Bylaws 2.1, 2.3, 2.4, 10.1-(b), 14.0.1.4 and 14.5.1]

During the fall semester of the 1988-89 academic year, the then head men's basketball coach violated the principles of ethical conduct and fundamental institutional academic standards when he arranged for a then student-athlete to receive a grade of A in a course entitled basketball theory (PHS 331.A), which the head coach instructed, even though the young man neither attended the class nor performed any course work required of other members of the class; thereby, the young man was able to retain his academic eligibility to compete in the sport of men's intercollegiate basketball during the 1988-89 season.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved a major violation of NCAA legislation that is set forth in Part II of this report. Because this case involves a major violation of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985, NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2, as adopted by the Convention, requires, "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons," minimum penalties that shall include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year, or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

For the reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the committee determined that this is a unique case. Accordingly, the Committee on Infractions has reduced

Hampton football program receives two years' probation

I. Introduction.

This case began when the NCAA enforcement staff received an anonymous letter February 26, 1988, alleging that four student-athletes at Hampton University had competed while ineligible during the 1987 season. The letter was accompanied by computer printouts of the student-athlete's grades. In response to a request by the enforcement staff, the institution forwarded copies of their transcripts along with other information it utilized to determine the student-athletes' eligibility for competition. Subsequently, the anonymous source also provided the NCAA with a copy of a document reported to be the official transcript for one student-athlete and a computer printout of grades for another student-athlete, both of which were alleged to have been generated by the registrar's office at the university. The transcripts submitted by the anonymous source and those submitted by the institution were substantially different.

As a result of these differences, the enforcement staff began an investigation and issued a letter of preliminary inquiry to the institution September 22, 1988. A letter of official inquiry was forwarded April 10, 1990, and a prehearing conference was held September 5, 1990. The hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions involving NCAA enforcement staff members, institutional representatives and other involved parties occurred November 9, 1990.

Prior to the completion of the enforcement staff's investigation, this matter became the subject of public review when the head football coach was tried February 28, 1989, in a state court in Virginia on two misdemeanor charges relating to the altering of a transcript and was the subject of a preliminary hearing on the same date on four counts of forgery.

Although different issues were under consideration at the NCAA hearing, reference to those proceedings is included here because the institution relied, in part, on the findings from those court proceedings in which the coach was found not guilty of the misdemeanors. Also, the felony forgery counts were not certified to the grand jury.

There were two issues for consideration by the committee: (a) whether student-athletes participated in athletics competition while ineligible in 1986 and 1987, and (b) whether there was a lack of institutional control.

The committee found that violations of NCAA legislation occurred in that a former student-athlete played football while academically ineligible in 1986, and two former student-athletes played football while academically ineligible during 1986 and 1987. Specifically, the director of athletics and the faculty athletics representative, who were charged by the institution with the responsibility of making eligibility determinations, certified the student-athletes as eligible when they were, in effect, not eligible. The findings that two student-athletes participated while ineligible, a serious violation of NCAA legislation, is even more significant based on information that emerged in the investigation and at the hearing regarding the institutional culture that prevailed at Hampton University, which made such violations possible.

The investigation found that institutional guidelines were not followed in the processing of several student-athlete applications for credit-by-examination, an institutional vehicle that permits students to obtain grades and credits without class enrollment or participation. Student-athletes did not sign the forms as required, and the dates the exams were administered were not always entered. Further, in some cases, the signature of one institutional employee appeared on forms that were dated prior to the individual's employment at the university. Specifically, eight credit-by-examination applications for one student-athlete and four credit-by-examination applications for another student-athlete resulted in the retroactive assignment of grades for each of the courses. In neither case did the student-athlete sign the applications in accordance with the form's instructions. On several forms, the head football coach, who administered the exams, signed the student-athletes' names, and in several other instances, the coach signed the name of the instructor originally designated by the department chair to administer the exam. This was not a case of unearned or fraudulent credit. However, due to an absence of institutional control, the reliability of the student-athletes' academic records was obscured.

Whether institutional control is viewed as a lack of appropriate controls, a failure of the controls, inconsistent application of controls, or an understanding with respect to the nonapplication of controls, the nonexistence of a verifiable and reliable system of controls raises questions about the integrity of the academic eligibility certification process at Hampton University and undermines confidence in the operating principles that govern athletics competition. The committee found that the institution did not adhere to its own articulated standards for the processing and recording of academic evaluations and that the operation of the athletics program reflected a violation of the principles of institutional control.

The committee determined that the violations constituted major violations of NCAA legislation. Because the major violations in this case occurred after September 1, 1985, the committee's findings normally would subject the university to the minimum prescribed penalties in NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2. NCAA legislation, however, permits the committee to impose lesser penalties under certain circumstances. The university, in acknowledging that procedures employed within the football program failed to meet acceptable levels of compliance with university policies and procedures concerning academic record-keeping and accountability, detailed a number of corrective measures that were self-imposed in the fall of 1988. These measures address identified weaknesses in the institution's academic evaluative and record-keeping practices. Due to mitigating circumstances found by the committee, including the university's immediate efforts to correct the administrative problems identified in the investigation and to strengthen its overall procedures for accountability in the processing of academic evaluations and the committee's acceptance of the substantial penalties already imposed by the institution, the committee chose to impose less than the full range of minimum penalties.

The violations found by the committee are set forth in Part II of this report, and the penalties imposed are set forth in Part III.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by committee.

A. (NCAA Constitution 2.1.1, 2.4, 2.5.1 and 3.2.4.3, and Bylaws 14.5.2 and 14.5.2.1.1)

1. During the 1986 season, a student-athlete who did not meet NCAA satisfactory-progress and good-academic-standing legislation participated while ineligible.

2. During the 1987 season, two student-athletes who did not meet NCAA satisfactory-progress and one student-athlete who did not meet good-academic-standing legislation participated while ineligible.

B. (NCAA Bylaw 2.1)

The scope and nature of violations found in this case demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring in the conduct and administration of the athletics program as evidenced by the lack of oversight of reports on academic evaluations, grade changes, grade certifications and retroactive processing of course credits (drops and adds).

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

The university has taken substantial corrective actions to improve its academic records practices and NCAA compliance procedures as indicated in a 14-point outline submitted as a part of the institution's response to the official inquiry in this case. In addition, the university has forfeited all games and awards for the 1986 and 1987 football seasons and has returned all championship trophies and other indicia of recognition related to its conference championship season. Moreover, the university declared itself ineligible for postseason competition in the sport of football for a period of one year. The committee has accepted the institution's self-imposed penalties and corrective actions and determined that these actions and other mitigating circumstances should be considered in its determination that the institution should receive penalties that differ from the full set of penalties otherwise required by NCAA legislation. Accordingly, the penalties imposed in this case by the Committee on Infractions are as follows:

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Council subcommittee action in the event of an appeal by the university to the Council, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Further, Hampton University shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

B. The university shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

C. The institution shall be prohibited from providing any expense-paid visits to the institution for prospective student-athletes in the sport of football during the 1991-92 academic year. (Note: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended for reasons set forth in Part I of this report.)

D. All members of the university's football coaching staff shall be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting or evaluation activities during the 1991-92 academic year. (Note: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended for reasons set forth in Part I of this report.)

E. The committee adopts the university's action to require the institution's football team to end its 1991 season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and to prohibit participation in postseason competition following that season.

F. The university's football team shall be prohibited from appearing on any "live" telecast (as defined by Bylaw 19.4.2.5.2) during the 1991-92 season. (Note: This penalty is immediately and completely suspended for reasons set forth in Part I of this report.)

G. The committee adopts the university's action to forfeit all football games the university won in 1986 and 1987, including forfeiture of the conference championship and other indicia of recognition for those seasons.

(Note: Should Hampton University appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Bylaw 32.8.5. A copy of the committee's report would be provided to the institution prior to the institution's appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by Bylaw 32.8.6, would be released to the public.)

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed; further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Finally, should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.)

CORRECTIONS

An article on newly elected NCAA officers in the January 16 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly reported that new Division I vice-president Douglas S. Hobbs is chair of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee. Hobbs is a former chair of the committee, which is now chaired by Lorna P. Straus of the University of Chicago.

The Record section of the January 16 issue of the News incorrectly reported the position held by Jack Weidenbach at Michigan. Weidenbach is athletics director at the school.

The Basketball Notes column in the January 9 issue of the News incorrectly reported the home town of a member of the Hunter men's basketball team and misspelled the name of another team member. The home town of Mohammad Dagman is Lattakia, Syria, and the correct spelling of a team member from Israel is Jon Haklay.

A story in the January 2 issue of the News listing the National Soccer Coaches Association's all-America teams incorrectly named the school where Division III women's first-team member Ann Haggerty plays. She is a member of the team at William Smith. Also, the name of Division III women's second-team member Lida Nassif of William Smith was misspelled.

Kent hockey joins CCHA

The Central Collegiate Hockey Association recently approved the addition of Kent State University to the league.

The addition of Kent marks the first time the league has expanded since the University of Illinois, Chicago, was added in 1982-83.

The Golden Flashes will begin play in the CCHA in the 1992-93 season. Currently, they are an independent.

A scheduling committee has been formed to incorporate Kent into the regular schedule beginning with the 1992-93 season.

Jeff Weiss, CCHA director of communications, said the addition of Kent will mean the end of round-robin scheduling for the league and the format for the play-offs will be examined.

NACDA appoints North Carolina AD

John D. Swofford, athletics director at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has been named third vice-president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA).

The opening was created when Sam Jankovich resigned as athletics director at the University of Miami (Florida), and as first vice-president of NACDA, to become chief executive officer of the New England Patriots. The University of Oregon's Bill Byrne replaced Jankovich as first vice-president and James L. Jones of Ohio State replaced Byrne as second vice-president. Swofford replaces Jones.

Rutgers expands athletes' community-service efforts

Until eight months ago, members of the athletics program at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, performed community services on their own on a limited basis. But then the athletics department decided that the time, talents and abilities of Rutgers' 1,000-plus student-athletes and coaches could be utilized on a broader scale.

That's when Kevin MacConnell, the department's assistant director of marketing and communications, got involved. Both coaches and athletes are now rendering community service wherever they can—from donating blood to visiting area schools to reading to children.

"I have been very pleased by the response from our coaches and the players," MacConnell says. "They have been very receptive to these community activities and continue to be interested in doing more."

The kickoff for the community involvement program began with the April 1990 spring football game, an intersquad game for the Scarlet Knights, when the $4,000 in proceeds was given to the children's wards at two area hospitals. The fund-raising goal for this year's game, according to MacConnell, is $10,000.

Frederick E. Gruninger, director of athletics, says the division has taken "a giant step forward" in the area of community involvement. "I think it is a credit to themselves as individuals and as athletes," Gruninger says of those involved in the program. "It brings us closer to the community and gives the students an understanding of the positive things that can result from good relationships."

Reading to area elementary school students has been among the more recent activities.

The crew team was actively involved in the Rutgers blood drive conducted this fall through New Jersey Blood Services. While the success of the drive was limited (only 155 students gave blood), 125 of those who gave—60 percent—were athletes, with the crew team being the largest part of that number. The softball, gymnastics and cheerleading teams also participated.

the prescribed penalties and shall impose the following penalties:

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Council subcommittee action as a result of an appeal by the university to the Council, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Further, Miami University (Ohio) shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

B. During this period of probation, the institution shall submit to the committee the same series of monitoring reports it submits to the Mid-American Conference, which shall be on or before July 1, 1991; July 1, 1992, and the expiration date of this probationary period.

C. The committee adopts the following penalties as its own that were imposed by the Mid-American Conference in its letter to the institution dated November 1, 1990:

echoes these sentiments. "My team has donated blood, and two of my girls participated in the reading program and had a real good time," she says. "They would like to do it again."

The reading program has been so successful that MacConnell is trying to develop a schedule that will accommodate all elementary schools in Middlesex and Somerset counties.

Members of both the gymnastics and softball teams also helped with the American Cancer Society Walk-A-Thon in Highland Park and several athletes visited hospitals during the holidays.

"I think it's very good for the kids to get out and meet the public and let them know about the teams," Chollet-Norton says. "It also gives the athletes exposure."

Swimming, basketball and soccer team members helped out at the Cub/Boy Scouts Day at Johnson Park in Piscataway. For the future months, coaches and team members have agreed to offer clinics for the 1991 Special Olympics, as well as a basketball tournament in March.

remaining funds will be used in the summer school program to assist in teaching and advising. Additional money will be used for student services, the band and as discretionary funds by John V. Lombardi, university president.

William Arnsparger, director of athletics, said, "We take pride in being able to help the university through this time of budget cuts and the financial crunch in our university community... Thanks for this gift should go to our coaches, student-athletes, staff, fans and the NCAA for making it happen."

Football coach Steve Spurrier has contributed $50,000 of his personal funds for women's athletics and the college of health and human performance, of which he is a graduate.

"I've always believed that when a person finds himself in a position financially to contribute to his alma mater, it's his responsibility to do so. Being a Florida graduate is a big reason such good things have happened to me and my family, and I'm very proud to make this contribution."

Patrick Bird, dean of the college, said Spurrier's contribution would be used for student and faculty support.

Home-court advantage

An Iowa realtor has announced he will donate $3 million to help Drake University reverse its fortunes, aesthetically and athletically.

Here's what the Des Moines Register said about William C. Knapp's interest in the school:

"If there is such a thing as university home-court advantage in community leaders, Drake University has it in William C. Knapp."

"Knapp, chair of Iowa Realty Co. Inc. and a member of the university's board of governors, has done as much as any individual in recent years to help Drake reverse its fortunes. When the Drake campus found itself increasingly encroached upon by a blighted and crime-ridden neighborhood, Knapp engineered a remarkable real-estate renaissance of the area."

"He didn't stop with that. Last weekend, Drake announced that Knapp would donate $3 million toward construction of a multipurpose arena. The building would give the school a sorely needed place for home basketball games and other major campus events.

"The project also will be a major shot in the arm for the neighborhood revitalization effort Knapp has inspired."

"Knapp's commitment brings gifts and pledges for the sports arena to $9.7 million of the estimated $12 million cost. It means the project, which Drake could not confirm until 80 percent of the money was pledged, now could be ready by the fall of 1992."

"While Knapp's gift is not Drake's largest contribution, it is the largest gift by an individual."

"Yet, Knapp is willing to yield even that distinction: He shrugged off a suggestion that the arena be named for him, at least for now, in hopes an even larger gift might come along."

"His generosity means a clear home-court advantage for Drake, and for Des Moines."

Sheffield gearing up for university games

Sheffield, England, host for the 1991 World University Summer Games July 14-25, will have more sports and cultural facilities than any other city that has ever had the games, according to Nicholas Rodis, executive director of the U.S. Collegiate Sports Council. The games have been held in Moscow, Mexico City, Tokyo, Budapest and many other outstanding cities since 1959, when they were designated as The Summer Universiade (1959 is recognized as the beginning of the modern World University Summer Games).

The Don Valley Athletic Stadium, completed last summer at an estimated cost of $56 million, has a 400-meter eight-lane track with seating for 25,000. The entire track and field program will be held in this facility.

The Ponds Forge International Sports and Leisure Center will have a 50-meter 10-lane Olympic standard pool and a diving pool over five meters, in addition to a multipurpose sports hall. This venue will be used for the swimming and diving events, the water polo final and quarterfinals for volleyball and basketball.

The Don Valley Arena, due for completion in May 1991 at an estimated cost of $68 million, will be used for gymnastics and the basketball and volleyball finals. After the games, major music concerts, conferences, stage productions and ice shows will be held in this 10,000-seat building.

The Hillsborough Leisure Center, built at an estimated cost of $24 million, will have an Olympic standard water polo pool and a sports hall for volleyball and basketball. In addition to this facility, the Waltham Sports Center, completed in August 1990 at an estimated cost of $4 million, will be used for additional volleyball and basketball competition.

The Lyceum Theater, considered to be one of Britain's outstanding provincial theaters, will be the major venue for the cultural festival segment of the games.

It is estimated that $280 million will be spent on the sports facilities. In addition, the organizing committee will spend a substantial amount of money for the student village. Over 100 countries will be represented by 5,000 athletes and officials. Former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has said, "This will be the largest sports event ever held in Britain. It will be a major boost to the economy. I've been impressed by the energy and enthusiasm the local organizers are showing."

The United States plans to send a delegation of over 400 athletes, coaches and officials, which could be the largest delegation, Rodis said.

Basketball Championship Guide ready

The publication also contains feature stories, tournament records, conference-tournament information and an application for tickets to the 1992 Final Four.

For the first time, a featured section is devoted to the Women's Final Four. This section includes a feature story about the 10th anniversary of the women's championship.

The guide can be ordered by sending $7 (which includes postage and handling) to NCAA Publications, 904 North Broadway, Lexington, Kentucky 40505. Credit card holders can order by calling 1-800/525-5456 if the order is a minimum of $14.

ECAC sets telecasts of hockey match-ups

The first set of confirmed Eastern College Athletic Conference Division I hockey telecasts has been announced by ECAC Hockey Executive Director Joe Bertagna.

Highlighting the schedule is the New England Sports Network's coverage of the 30th Annual ECAC Division I championships at the Boston Garden in March.

"We are happy to see that fans will again have a chance to see ECAC hockey, not only in our 12 rinks but also in their homes through the efforts of NESN and others," said Bertagna.

In addition to NESN's second year of tournament coverage, the Boston-based network will broadcast six ECAC-Hockey East contests, including the opening round of Boston's famed Beanpot Tournament from the Boston Garden on Monday, February 4. That game features Harvard and Boston U. Should Harvard advance to the final, the championship game will be broadcast by WSBK, Channel 38, in Boston.

The ECAC-Hockey East connection will continue in March when "Hockeyfest '91" unfolds at the Garden, with NESN carrying all six games of the dual-championship weekend.

Alley Cat Productions of Cincinnati will produce three Vermont games on WCAX-TV, Burlington, Vermont. The Cornell Sports Network will carry three Big Red games.

Indiana's Ken Snow named top soccer player for a second year in row

Ken Snow of the Indiana University, Bloomington, has become the first player to win the Missouri Athletic Club Collegiate Soccer Player of the Year Award twice in his career. The four-time first-team all-America as selected by the National Soccer Coaches of America, also won the award in 1988 and finished second to Virginia goalkeeper Tony Meola last season.

Snow dominated the voting by over 1,100 college soccer coaches nationwide by accumulating 384 points and 77 first-place votes. The University of Virginia's Jeff Agoos was second with 269 points and 45 first-place votes.

Snow capped his four-year career at Indiana as the school's all-time leading goal-scorer (84) and point-scorer (196). He scored 14 goals in 1990, while adding six assists for 34 points. In November, he also was named the recipient of the Hermann Award, the other major award for the outstanding collegiate soccer player, for the second time. He won the Hermann Award in 1988 and was a finalist in 1989.

Consortium helping NCAA student-athletes

For almost six years, student-athletes all over the country have enjoyed academic support and financial assistance through an alliance of institutions representing all NCAA membership divisions.

Known as the National Consortium for Academics and Sports, the organization is administered through Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society, which is directed by Richard F. Lapchick.

"I think credit should be given to these institutions," Lapchick said recently. "They truly want to see student-athletes get a real chance to complete their education. (And) the fact that these institutions are working together to assure these common goals adds importance to our effort."

In joining the Consortium, which began with 11 members in June 1985, the 66 currently participating institutions have agreed to underwrite further education for any individual who competed in the past 10 years in a revenue-producing sport, but who did not earn an undergraduate degree. In exchange, the former athletes agree to counsel middle-school and high-school students about the importance of an education.

According to figures developed by the Center for the Study of Sport in Society, 2,044 former student-athletes have taken advantage of the consortium program, and 617 of them have earned degrees. In return, the former student-athletes have spoken to more than a half-million youngsters.

Recently, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz was honored by the consortium during its annual awards banquet. Schultz said the alliance included schools "dedicated to the success of young people and the improvement of the quality of leadership that we have in America."

More information on the consortium is available by contacting Lapchick or Charles S. Farrell, special projects coordinator at the Center for the Study of Sport in Society, 271 Huntington Avenue, Suite 244, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

Still a winner

Suzy Favor, former student-athlete at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, who was presented the Honda-Broderick Cup as the outstanding collegiate woman athlete of 1990, won her first two events in national competition with a victory in the mile in the Sunkist Invitational in Los Angeles January 15 and later in the 1,500-meter run in a Portland meet. Favor was honored with a Today's Top Six award at the NCAA Convention in Nashville.

Sports teams to complete seasons at U.S. International

U.S. International University's baseball, softball and golf teams will complete their seasons this year despite the school's recent bankruptcy filing, school president Kenneth McLennan has announced.

Funds to cover all costs must be on deposit before those teams start their seasons, however, because U.S. International will not provide any funding, McLennan said.

The school's baseball, softball and golf coaches began fund-raising efforts so their teams could compete this year after the board of trustees voted in late December to suspend spring sports. The basketball team was allowed to finish its season.

U.S. International will not meet the criteria for NCAA Division I membership at the end of the academic year, and the school's sports future will be determined as part of the reorganization plan this spring, McLennan said.

The university filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code December 20. The petition was filed one day before a scheduled foreclosure sale on about 70 acres of the campus in the Scripps Ranch area of San Diego.

That parcel was the collateral on a $3.5 million loan. The school had fallen behind in its payments.

News Fact File

Florida swimmers earn five world championships

University of Florida swimmers stole the show at the recently completed World Aquatic Championships in Australia. Gators Nicole Haislett (only a freshman), Martin Zubero (swimming for his native Spain) and Anthony Nesty (from Surinam) won five gold medals, three of which were earned by Haislett.

According to Florida coach Skip Foster, Nesty's homeland declared January 16 a national holiday in honor of his accomplishments in the pool.

And not only can Florida claim more gold medals than any other American college program, but the Gator contingent (which also included Jon Sakovich and Jose Ballester) had it represented a single country — would have ranked No. 2 in gold medals among the nations participating.

When basketball player J. L. Barry transferred last year from Winthrop College to Ohio University, he didn't think much about wearing the colors of another Buckeye State school (and Ohio rival), Miami University, since his dad, Joe, is an assistant coach there.

Then, he started wearing Miami (Ohio) T-shirts and other clothing in public.

"People, townspeople mostly, came up to me," he said, "suggesting I should not dress [in Miami (Ohio) colors]. They didn't know I was an Ohio basketball player... I probably would have gotten an earful."

Central Connecticut State University officials recently unveiled a new athletics logo. "The new logo gives us more distinction and will be recognized all over the country," said Judith A. Davidson, athletics director. "It is widely applicable for all of our teams. The logo is contemporary, dynamic and bold."

Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference Commissioner Kenneth A. Free has announced the signing of a corporate-sponsorship agreement with USAir. MEAC's official airline, in return for that designation, will sponsor league championships during the winter and spring; an invitational golf tournament, and the carried combined GPAs of at least 3.000. And 15 of the school's 126 student-athletes who earned GPAs of at least 3.000 had 4.000s.

Wabash College's freshman men's basketball players apparently had little trouble adjusting to college courses, since they produced a cumulative GPA of 3.100. Leading the way was Karl Kercheval, who earned a 3.700.

University of Georgia officials have announced that 63 men student-athletes earned fall-quarter GPAs of at least 3.000, including 16 who earned GPAs of at least 3.600. Earning 4.000s were Bulldogs Terry Childers, Jonathan Foggin, Jack Frierson, Greg Kennedy and Al Parker.

Towson State University women's gymnastics coach Dick Filbert already has some high numbers to be proud of, and the 1990-91 season still is young. All 10 members of the Towson State team earned fall-semester GPAs above 3.000. "We had some girls who had to work very hard to get a 3.000," Filbert said, "and we're very pleased they were able to do it. I'm very proud of this team for its academic work."

Fifty-three Brockport State University College student-athletes were named to the academic honor roll for the fall semester. Led by Ed Smart and Kim Yehling, each of whom earned 4.000s, all of those honored had GPAs of at least 3.000.

Of the 124 University of New Hampshire men student-athletes who posted GPAs of at least 3.000 during the fall semester, 37 earned GPAs of at least 3.500. Gene White and Michael Dix earned 4.000s.

Five Wayne State College (Nebraska) student-athletes who earned 4.000s were among a group of 93 who earned fall-semester GPAs of at least 3.000. Nineteen of them also earned varsity letters during the fall. The five with 4.000s are Tom Bardsley, Phil Chvala, Jeff Gohr, Bill Guenther and Gerard Ras.

Few Spartans use steroids, study says

An eight-month investigation found no evidence of widespread steroid use on the Michigan State University football team, the head of a special panel said January 17.

The committee was formed in April after The Detroit News reported steroid use was rampant on the 1987 Spartan football squad, which won the Rose Bowl.

The newspaper also reported that players on the team successfully cheated on urine tests at the Rose Bowl to avoid detection.

"We know that there is some steroid use, but it is very, very small. We're very confident that MSU has a low usage. It's not anywhere near the national average," said James Studer, assistant vice-president for student affairs. He chaired the special committee.

Since Michigan State began its drug-testing program in 1986, only two to three athletes a year—most of them football players—have tested positive for steroid use, Studer said.

Studer said interviews with 74 people found mostly rumors. "Of all those interviews, only two individuals said they had personally observed athletes using steroids," the Associated Press reported.

To back up the committee's conclusions, Studer pointed out that random NCAA tests of 36 football players last September came back negative. On top of that, 36 players, including the 22 starters, were tested at the John Hancock Bowl and none tested positive for steroid use.

Since 1986, Michigan State has tested athletes for steroids and street drug use if there was a reasonable suspicion.

The committee praised that program but said the school should have random mandatory testing for steroids. It also recommended a firm policy of follow-up testing for any athlete who tests positive for steroids or street drugs.

University spokesman Terry Denbow said school President John DiBiaggio and football coach George Perles, who also is director of athletics, had reviewed the report and agreed with its findings.

Division I-A honors Ross as top coach

Bobby Ross, who guided Georgia Tech to an undefeated season and a share of the mythical Division I-A national championships, has been named Division I-A coach of the year by the American Football Coaches Association.

Georgia Tech, which completed an 11-0-1 season, was crowned national champion by United Press International. Colorado, which finished 11-1-1, won the Associated Press' national title.

It is the first time that Ross has won the coaches' award, which is sponsored by Kodak.

Tim Stowers of Georgia Southern was named Division I-AA coach of the year by the AFCA. Rocky Hager of North Dakota State won the award for NCAA Division II and NAIA Division I schools, while Ken O'Keefe of Allegheny College was the winner in NCAA Division III and NAIA Division II.

NEW SERVICE LINKS RECRUITS WITH COLLEGES

Athletes' profiles offered free to all schools via computer data bank

The National Directory of College-bound Athletes is introducing a new service to colleges that will make recruiting high school athletes easier, more enjoyable and more cost-efficient.

At no initial cost, coaches can use any personal computer to view detailed profiles of hundreds — or even thousands — of talented high school athletes in all sports from schools across the country.

This service is being offered to colleges at no cost for an introductory period through the end of 1991. In 1992, each college will have the opportunity to continue for a small fee or terminate use at no cost or further obligation.

This is not another entry into the oversaturated market of talent evaluation or blue-chip recruiting guides. Rather, National Directory of College-bound Athletes is an exciting new concept as valuable for Division III schools as for Division I. It can save users time and money while helping them gain a recruiting advantage.

Here's how the service works:

For a nominal processing fee of $25, high school athletes fill out a complete NDCA profile sheet. The profile is returned to our office and is entered into a computer data bank. Those who can't afford the $25 fee can apply to have profiles entered at no cost.

As a subscriber, you can use any personal computer, any time of day, to access as many profiles as you wish. When you see athletes who capture your interest, copy down information or simply make a printout of the entire profile. Additional profiles will be entered each day as the service grows nationally.

The easy-to-use computer program allows coaches to select profiles by sport and region or cut directly to an individual, thus avoiding the need to scroll through unwanted files.

Each athlete's profile contains:

- The home address and phone number of the athlete;
- The home address and phone number of the athlete's coach;
- Names of the athlete's parents;
- The address of the school;
- Names and phone numbers of three opposing coaches who have seen the athlete play;

- Sport of choice and position;
- Date of birth and year of graduation;

- Accurate height, weight and speed;
- Detailed high school statistics;
- Other varsity sports played;
- High school grade-point average, class rank and SAT scores;
- Size of high school;
- Family income;
- Anticipated college major;
- Preferences for college size and region;

- The answer to the question: "What are you looking for in a college?"
- Other achievements, awards, honors and interests.

After a profile is entered in the computer, the athlete can phone our office as often as he or she wishes to update statistics, test scores, or other information. This makes it possible for coaches to get up-to-date information and enables them to easily follow an athlete's progress both athletically and academically.

Because NDCA is not a selective service interested only in blue-chip athletes, our data bank is as valuable to small colleges as it is to large ones. The profile information will make it easier for smaller schools to identify and contact players who meet their specific needs and qualifications.

As schools look for ways to save time and money, and gain an athletic edge, National Directory of College-bound Athletes provides many obvious advantages. One big advantage, as mentioned earlier, is that NDCA is free through the end of 1991 and there is no obligation to continue thereafter.

You have nothing to lose.
