Financial issues call for courage, Schultz warns

While the legislation passed at the 1991 NCAA Convention was a good first step toward reigning in escalating costs, athletics departments that are not courageous in dealing with broader financial issues "are in for some serious problems" during the next two years, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told approximately 50 of the nation's top sports reporters February 19 at the 1991 College Football Forum.

"Without a doubt, the '90s are going to be a decade of change in intercollegiate athletics," Schultz said during the final session of the three-day forum in Kansas City, Missouri. "In my mind, what we've done is really just the first step. I think there are many other things we can do to change and improve college athletics without hurting the quality."

Schultz said economic factors such as the pending recession and the Persian Gulf war will be felt by athletics programs very soon.

"Most colleges and universities feel a delayed impact from financial pressures in our general economy," he said. "We haven't felt it in athletics yet, but we're going to feel it more. Everybody is going to have to pull their belts up a notch or two and realize that there are going to be some tough times ahead if we are not prepared to deal with them financially."

Repeating an idea he proposed in his "State of the Association" address at the January Convention in Nashville, Tennessee, Schultz suggested that the next step in reform is to reexamine the entire system for funding intercollegiate athletics.

"The only way we are going to get true reform and deal with some of the nitty-gritty problems that are out there is to fund our athletics departments like we do any other auxiliary enterprise or any other departments at our university," he said. "Why not have athletics departments go through the same budgetary process, get their needs approved by the university?"

Under the current system, with

John Majors (far right), head football coach at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, answers a question from a member of the media attending the NCAA College Football Forum in Kansas City, Missouri. Annually, some of the top coaches and athletics administrators discuss issues regarding college football with representatives of newspapers and wire services. The forum was held February 17-19 at a Kansas City hotel.

the majority of athletics-department ledgers awash in red ink, the difference between winning and losing—particularly in football—can mean the difference between financial success and financial failure for the entire department.

Universities could encourage athletics departments to generate as much revenue as they can, Schultz said, but make up any budget shortfalls. By the same token, athletics profits could be put back into the university's general fund. This would take away the "win at all costs" pressure that self-supporting departments feel.

"Because of that pressure, suddenly you have people stepping across the line to try to gain a competitive edge," Schultz said. "If we can deal with the financial pressures that are there, we can eliminate a lot of the pressure that created many of our problems."

Schultz acknowledged that it will be very difficult to formulate legislation in this area that would apply to every institution. Instead, he feels that each school will have to make a decision based on its own circumstances.

Coaches' concerns addressed

Schultz also addressed the new football coaching-staff and scholarship reductions and recruiting limitations that were criticized earlier in the forum by the coaches in attendance. They agreed that while reducing costs is necessary, cutting staff will harm the quality of the athletics experience for student-athletes.

"Sure, we can cut costs in a lot of places," Pennsylvania State University coach Joe Paterno said the day before Schultz's address. "But when you start cutting coaches, then you start to take away the ability to educate kids, make sure the competition is meaningful and have the right kind of people around these kids."

He added that reducing staff without making other major changes in college football—such as returning to freshman ineligibility and onepatoon play—could be "asking for a lot more problems than we have now."

The coaches at the forum also were concerned about new legislation that requires them to designate which assistants can recruit off campus and which cannot. They agreed that this distinction will hurt staff morale, create salary discrepancy.

New Title IX guide available soon

Squire, Sanders and Dempsey, the NCAA's legal counsel in Washington, D.C., has prepared an updated version of the NCAA "Guide to Title IX and Intercollegiate Athletics," originally published in December 1988.

The updated guide incorporates the changes in enforcement practices made by the "Title IX Athletics Investigator's Manual" issued by the U.S. Department of Education in 1990.

It provides detailed information regarding the standards and methods used by the Office for Civil Rights in investigating Title IX complaints. The new guide will be available through NCAA publishing about March 1.

Subcommittee preparing I-AAA football proposal

Divisions I and II member institutions that use multidivision classification for football are studying legislative concepts that an NCAA Council subcommittee is recommending for the establishment of a Division I-AAA football classification.

Among the issues addressed in the proposed concepts are the structure of Division I-AAA, eligibility for championships, length of playing and practice seasons, coaching-staff size, and recruiting limitations.

At the 1991 Convention in Nashville, NCAA member institutions approved Proposal No. 53, which in September 1993 will eliminate the opportunity for Division I schools to be classified in Division II or III football and also will prevent Division II schools from playing in Division III.

And, in return for what was described on the Convention floor as a show of "good faith" in eliminating multidivision classification, the membership also approved Proposal No. 54—a resolution directing the Council Subcommittee to Develop a Division I-AAA Football Classification to recommend legislation for the 1992 Convention that would establish the classification and a Division I-AAA championship.

The intent of proponents of that classification is to offer a low-cost, "nonscholarship" football option for Division I programs.

As a result, the subcommittee will recommend legislation to the Council at its April meeting to establish the Division I-AAA football classification as an alternative for Division I schools affected by the passage of Proposal No. 53. It also is exploring ways of providing a championship opportunity for Division II schools affected by the action.

Focus on I-AAA

The subcommittee is concentrating now on the establishment of the Division I-AAA classification, said R. Elaine Dreidame, senior associate director of athletics at the University of Dayton and chair of the Council subcommittee.

Anticipating the actions in Nashville, the subcommittee surveyed the institutions that would be affected by the elimination of multidivision-classification opportunities in football and learned that the Division I programs identify with one of two groups.

One group, which includes all of the 19 schools that currently play in Division III and at least two of the seven schools that play in Division

II, prefer to adopt the Division III emphasis on a need-based financial aid system. The second group consists of the other five schools that play in Division II and wish to continue offering limited athletically related aid for football, but at a level less costly than Division I-AA.

Because the large majority of the Division I institutions favor the Division III approach, the subcommittee has decided that it will propose legislation establishing the same financial aid criteria for Division I-AAA football that are used in Division III, Dreidame said.

To do otherwise and permit limited aid not only would increase costs because of financial aid dollars, but would jeopardize the opportunity for Division I-AAA football-playing members to continue scheduling Division III institutions as opponents, she said. Division III teams are unlikely to be willing to play teams that operate under different financial aid requirements. Left without Division III opponents, many Division I-AAA teams would have to travel long distances to play other teams in that classification, which could be cost-prohibitive.

"That's the way the legislation is going to have to go," she said of the decision to implement Division III criteria. "The subcommittee does not believe that it can pursue a middle-of-the-road approach."

However, Dreidame said the subcommittee will continue to work with the five schools that currently prefer to continue offering limited financial aid in football, in hopes of finding alternatives to requiring those schools to adopt Division

Division III seeks to expand criteria for football play-off

The NCAA Division III Football Committee has voted to recommend to the Association's Executive Committee an expansion of the list of criteria used to select teams for the Division III Football Championship.

If its recommendation is approved, the Division III Football Committee will be able to use specific selection criteria other than those listed for all championships in Bylaw 31.3.3: won-lost record, strength of schedule, and eligibility and availability of student-athletes.

At its February 11-13 meeting in Bradenton, Florida, the committee voted to add the division classification of opponents, records at home and away, record in the previous five games, opponents' overall records, record against top-ranked teams, head-to-head competition, performance against common opponents, conference standings, and points allowed to the list of factors that may be considered.

"Because championship selection is an imperfect science, it helps to be able to use as much information as possible," said committee chair Robert C. Deming, director of athletics at Ithaca College. "If someone questions a particular selection, the committee is on more solid ground if it can say that almost everything that could have been considered was considered."

Deming said the committee believes that it will have more credibility if it can move beyond the general criteria in Bylaw 31.3.3, which states that additional criteria can be used with Executive Committee approval.

"Being somewhat general does not satisfy a lot of people if there is more specific information available," he said.

Deming added that the committee's goal is to select play-off-caliber teams and rank them high in late-season polls, in hopes that those teams will take advantage of the opportunity to play their way into the region's top four teams in the season's final week.

The committee also discussed the importance of intraregional play and reaffirmed that regional scheduling is consistent with the Division III philosophy, an opinion that was expressed by the Division III Championships Committee at its May 1988 meeting.

Deming added that it is "extremely difficult" to establish regional rankings when the top teams play several games against opponents from outside their regions.

The top four teams in each of four regions are selected for the championship tournament.

"If nobody in a region is seeing a particular team play, there is no legitimate way to rank the team within the region," he said. "For a region to give up one of its (championship) spots to a team that isn't playing many games within that region is very hard to do."

The committee noted that Division III schools that play outside their regions because of conference geography should consider applying for regional realignment in football only.

In other actions, the committee:

- Met with representatives of the Kiwanis Club of Bradenton, Florida, the host agency for the 1990 and 1991 championships, to evaluate last year's event and begin planning for the coming year.

- Began preliminary discussions of possible sites for the 1992 championship.

If the expanded championship-selection guidelines are approved, the committee will send a statement of the division philosophy and the selection criteria for teams and sites to athletics directors and football coaches at Division III football-playing institutions.

Robert Morris sues Association, says basketball penalty too harsh

A hearing on Robert Morris College's lawsuit against the NCAA has been scheduled February 21, the last day of the school's basketball season.

The lawsuit filed February 14 in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court in Pittsburgh argued that the NCAA punished the college too harshly for repaying part of a basketball player's bank loan, the Associated Press reported.

The NCAA has banned Robert Morris from postseason play and ordered it to return $88,145 in 1989 NCAA tournament revenue.

The suit contends sanctions were too severe when compared with penalties received by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and other large universities for what the lawsuit says were worse offenses.

"I hated to address it this way, but there is no other way to get relief, and I think relief is due," Edward A. Nicholson, school president, said.

On February 12, the NCAA denied a separate request by the college to lift the ban on postseason play, eliminate the fine and have a two-year probation. It said the appeals period had passed and Robert Morris had no new evidence to present.

Robert Morris' sanctions stem from a 1986 bank loan to Andre Boyd, who was ineligible for a grant-in-aid because he scored too low on his Scholastic Aptitude Test. Had he accepted the grant, he would have been ineligible to play basketball his freshman year. To retain four years of eligibility, Boyd paid his own tuition and costs that year.

C. Robert Miller, former director of athletics at Robert Morris, helped Boyd get a $6,200 bank loan for his schooling. He persuaded school trustee Robert Amos Jr. to cosign for the loan. The college has said that Boyd was unaware that Amos had cosigned, and Amos was unaware that doing so violated NCAA regulations.

Boyd missed three payments in the summer of 1989, and the bank automatically deducted $355 a month from Amos' personal account—constituting an improper extra benefit, the NCAA said.

Robert Morris officials said they discovered the irregularities, investigated them and reported their findings to the NCAA in December 1989. Boyd—now a fifth-year senior and the team's second-leading scorer—repaid Amos, the school said.

In May, the NCAA Committee on Infractions said Robert Morris gained substantial recruiting and competitive advantages by letting Boyd play when he should have been ineligible.

The committee put the college on probation for two years, ordered it to return $88,145 from the 1989 tournament in which Boyd played, banned the team from television and postseason competition this season, and took away two grants-in-aid.

Robert Morris was in second place in the Northeast Conference with an 11-4 league record and 16-11 overall, with one game remaining.

The school's regular season ends February 21, and the conference tournament, from which Robert Morris is banned, begins February 26. The conference winner will play in an elimination tournament with another conference's champion to qualify for the NCAA tournament in March.

ancies and limit coaching opportunities.

Having coached for 25 years, Schultz said he could sympathize with the coaches and probably would have the same complaints if he were a coach today.

But he also said he has learned that coaches are very creative and resourceful, and he is confident they will find ways to adjust to the new rules and maintain high-quality competition on the field.

As an example, he referred to the doomsday predictions that followed the reduction of football scholarships from 120 to 95.

"Well, what has happened? There is more parity, more strength in college football today than there ever has been. I don't know if a further reduction will have the same impact, but it has the potential of creating more parity without damaging the product."

On the second day of the forum, Bernard F. Sliger, president of Florida State University and former Division I chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission, told the coaches and reporters that some of the cuts could be restored next year if the coaches present specific, viable counterproposals.

"As you will recall if you attended that Convention, the buzz word was 'fine-tuning,' so I think some of that will be looked at again," Sliger said. "The presidents are open to specific suggestions on individual sports."

Schultz added that a subcommittee of the NCAA Council has been formed to review the proposed reductions on a sport-by-sport basis. The group will hold public hearings at which coaches and other interest groups will be welcome to discuss their concerns.

"Both the Council and the Presidents Commission have sent out the very clear message that this is to be fine-tuning; it is not going to be reversal," he said. "I urge those who have concerns to come forward with legitimate reasons for fine-tuning that legislation so it will work."

Division I-A play-off

After his address, Schultz fielded questions from reporters. When he was asked about the possibility of a Division I-A football play-off, he said fans and media support the concept more than the NCAA membership does. But he cautioned that the expanding National Football League season may make it difficult for an average-sized postseason bowl game to get an acceptable television contract because the networks will be tied up with late-season NFL broadcasts. This could lead several bowls to fold and make a national play-off more attractive.

"If we lose eight or nine bowl games in the next five or six years, then the attitude may change," he said. "You may see people say, 'Let's start talking about a play-off now.' But that's something that has to come from the membership, and unless something drastic happens to the bowls, I don't see that coming down the road in the next few years."

The 15th annual forum previously called the College Football Preview—brought eight of the nation's top coaches and three prominent administrators together with reporters for panel discussions and individual interviews.

Coaches in attendance included LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young University; John Jenkins, University of Houston; Joe Krivak, University of Maryland, College Park; John Majors, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Bill Mallory, Indiana University, Bloomington; Paterno; Bill Snyder, Kansas State University, and Bruce Snyder, University of California, Berkeley.

Administrators at the forum were Sliger; Roy Kramer, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference and member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, and Dave Swank, dean of the University of Oklahoma College of Law, also a member of the Committee on Infractions.

The forum was moderated by Roger O. Valdiserri, University of Notre Dame associate athletics director and chair of the NCAA Communications Committee.

1991 Column No. 8

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 20—telephone calls and contacts

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that with the adoption of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 20 (effective July 1, 1991), it is not permissible for a Division I or II member institution to make telephone calls to or have off-campus contact with a prospective student-athlete (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) prior to July 1 following the completion of the prospect's junior year in high school. In addition, it is not permissible for enrolled student-athletes or other enrolled students to make or participate in telephone calls to prospects at the direction of a coaching staff member or when they are financed by the institution or a representative of its athletics interests, except that enrolled students (but not student-athletes) may make telephone calls pursuant to an institution's regular admissions program directed at all prospective students. Further, enrolled student-athletes (or other enrolled students) may receive telephone calls made at the expense of the prospective student-athlete subsequent to July 1 following the completion of the prospect's junior year in high school. Also, student-athletes (or other enrolled students) may have correspondence with prospects, provided such correspondence does not occur prior to September 1 at the beginning of the prospect's junior year in high school.

Divisions I and II institutional staff members (e.g., faculty members, athletics department staff members and administrators) may not telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) prior to July 1 following the prospect's completion of the junior year in high school. Thereafter, institutional staff members may not telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) more than once per week but may accept collect calls from the prospect. In addition, institutional staff members in Divisions I and II may not telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) during the conduct of any of the institution's intercollegiate athletics contests in that sport.

In addition, during its pre-Convention review of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 20, the Council determined that it would be permissible for institutional staff members (but not student-athletes) to receive telephone calls initiated by a prospective student-athlete at the prospect's expense prior to July 1 following the completion of the prospect's junior year in high school, provided the telephone conversation is conducted for the purpose of arranging or requesting complimentary admissions to an institution's athletics event and no recruitment takes place during the call.

Coaching limitations—use of outside consultants

During its January 31, 1991, meeting, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 11.6.1.1.1 and determined that a member institution may not utilize a consultant from outside the institution (e.g., former professional athlete, skill instruction specialist) who is involved in any on-court or on-field activities on an individual or team basis without counting the consultant in the coaching limitations in that sport.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to the legislative services department at the NCAA national office.

I-AAA financial aid criteria or move to the more expensive Division I-AA classification.

Concepts mailed

The Division I schools that prefer to utilize Division III financial aid criteria also prefer not to permit spring football practice and to limit the number of full-time coaches to two or three, according to their responses to the subcommittee's survey.

Those preferences are reflected in the legislative concepts the subcommittee has proposed for establishment of Division I-AAA football. A description of those concepts recently was mailed to Division I institutions that currently use multidivision classification, as well as to a number of nonfootball-playing Division I schools that have indicated a possible interest in forming new programs if a Division I-AAA football classification is established.

Each of the institutions is being asked to indicate its support for or concerns about each of the concepts by March 1. After considering the replies, the subcommittee plans to forward its recommendations to the Council and the division steering committees in April; and with the approval of those groups, the recommendations then would be distributed to conferences for comment. The Council would take final action on the legislation in August, in time for consideration at the 1992 Convention.

"We're going to make it as simple as possible, with as few rules as possible," Dreidame said. "In 1992, we simply want to establish a Division I-AAA classification and put forward enough rules so that schools can decide if it fits their needs."

Taking care

Since establishment of the Division I-AAA classification must be approved by the entire NCAA membership, the subcommittee is taking care to guard against making proposals that would be harmful to the interests of other membership classifications.

R. Elaine Dreidame

"You have to make sure you don't inadvertently step on any toes," Dreidame said.

Among the concepts proposed by the subcommittee is the formal establishment of a Division I-AAA membership classification, which would group schools that elect to play football at the Division I-AAA level with Division I schools that do not play football. Those schools would meet together in a common business session at Conventions, but only schools playing football at that level would vote on football issues—similar to how business currently is conducted in Division II.

However, to reassure Division I-A member institutions that Division I-AAA members will not be involved in Division I-A football legislative matters, the subcommittee also proposes to modify the instances in which an action of a Division I subdivision can be rescinded by a vote of all of the subdivisions. Under that proposal, Division I-AAA institutions would not be able to participate in a rescission vote on Divisions I-A or I-AA football matters, although the process still would permit all three subdivisions to vote to rescind a Division I-AAA football action.

I-AA option abandoned

Dreidame noted that the subcommittee had considered another option supported by several Division I schools—establishing "scholarship" and "nonscholarship" subdivisions of the Division I-AA classification.

The idea was abandoned in part because Division I-AA, as a subdivision of Division I, cannot sponsor more than one championship in football for its members. However, even if it were possible to conduct dual championships, Dreidame said there is concern that adding "cost-containment-minded" football programs to Division I-AA could upset what she described as "the voting balance" in the classification.

Offering examples, she questioned whether the current maximum number of grants-in-aid and size of football coaching staffs could be maintained in that classification if 30 or so programs emphasizing cost containment were added to the Division I-AA membership.

Even though the subcommittee has ruled out establishing a non-scholarship option within Division I-AA, it has not overlooked the possibility that the establishment of Division I-AAA could draw schools away from Division I-AA. For that reason, the subcommittee also is proposing a resolution for the 1992 Convention that would protect the size of the bracket in the Division I-AA Football Championship for five years.

In another sensitive area, this time involving fears that Division II will lose members to Division I with the establishment of low-cost Division I-AAA football, the subcommittee proposes to require an institution to be classified in Division

I for a minimum of five years before becoming eligible for the Division I-AAA championship in football. That restriction, combined with the probability that many schools now playing football in Division II would find it difficult to recruit without offering any type of athletics-related aid in the sport, should deter schools from attempting to make an "easy jump" to Division I, Dreidame said.

Other legislative concepts recommended by the subcommittee address minimum scheduling requirements for championship eligibility (at least 50 percent of contests must be played against Divisions I-AA and I-AAA institutions), minimum and maximum numbers of contests (maximum of 10, with the same minimum as other Division I football-playing institutions), and season length (the first contest could not occur until 11 weeks before the first round of the Division III Football Championship, and teams would be allowed 27 preseason practice opportunities).

To conduct the proposed one-game championship playoff in Division I-AAA, a four-member sport committee would be established.

Division II issues

It is possible that nearly identical proposals will be made to establish a Division II-AAA classification for Division II schools that wish to compete in football under Division III financial aid criteria, Dreidame said.

However, another option for that group also is being explored.

At the recent Convention in Nashville, the membership approved a resolution (Proposal No. 57) directing the Council and Executive Committee to sponsor legislation in 1992 that would permit the establishment of Division II championships in sports in which Divisions I and III currently have their own championships and Division II does not. In such cases, the Division II sport would be permitted a one-game play-off involving two teams.

Although the resolution was intended specifically for the sports of field hockey, men's ice hockey and men's lacrosse, its passage raised the question of whether such a championship opportunity also could be created for Division II institutions that choose to sponsor a football program under the same financial aid rules as Division I-AAA and Division III.

If Division I-AAA is approved at the 1992 Convention, a championship opportunity will then exist for low-cost football programs in Divisions I and III but not in Division II, suggested Howard Elwell, director of athletics at Gannon University and a Division II consultant to the Council subcommittee.

For that reason, the Council will be asked in April to consider sponsoring the establishment of such an "exception play-off game" for football, which Elwell said is the route Division II schools prefer over creating a Division II-AAA.

If the Council rejects that concept, then the subcommittee would proceed with developing a proposal to create a Division II-AAA classification, which probably would utilize rules mostly identical to those proposed for Division I-AAA. By doing so, those schools would preserve the opportunity to include Divisions I-AAA and III schools on their schedules, thus also keeping their travel costs at a minimum.

Regardless of how the mission is accomplished, the objective is the same in Divisions I and II.

"We all want to keep our programs, but on a cost-containment basis," Elwell said. Without the opportunity for multidivision classification, schools face the prospect of dropping football unless a low-cost option is substituted, he believes.

"There is definitely a need for cost containment at the Division I level, to take care of those 3,000 student-athletes who otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity to play," said Dreidame, echoing Elwell.

"All we want is to give these students a chance to play."

New format proposed for Division II Football Championship

The NCAA Division II Football Committee has proposed a new format for the Division II Football Championship that would crown four regional champions and prevent the two best teams from facing each other in the semifinals.

The committee made the recommendation at its annual meeting February 12-15 in San Diego, California. It is subject to approval by the Association's Executive Committee.

Under the new format, the 16-team field would be divided into four regionals and each team would be placed in the regional corresponding to its geographical location. In selecting teams, the committee would attempt to choose the top four teams in each region. However, if there were conclusive evidence that a team not ranked among the top four in one region was better than a top-four team in another, the committee would reserve the right to select the lower-ranked team and move it to the other regional.

For example, if the fifth-ranked team in the Midwest region clearly was better than the fourth-ranked team in the West region, the committee could select the Midwest team and place it in the West regional.

The committee would seed teams within each regional and attempt to separate members of the same conference so they would not play each other in the first round. The winners of each regional would advance to the semifinals as regional champions and be resceded so that the No. 1 seed played No. 4 and No. 2 played No. 3. The winners of these games would advance to the championship.

Previously, the entire 16-team bracket was set in advance, with no reseceding to prevent the top two remaining teams from facing each other before the championship game.

If this recommendation is approved, the committee will continue to conduct a nationwide poll of the top 20 Division II teams, but it also will rank the top six teams in each of the four regions.

The committee discussed the current composition of regions and agreed to delay realignment for two years until it can determine how legislation passed at the 1991 Convention will affect the number of institutions coming into Division II.

The new format does not call for a change in the site-selection procedure for tournament games. Regional and semifinal games will be played on the campus of one of the competing teams, and the championship game will be played in Florence, Alabama.

The committee recommended that the title game remain in Florence under an annually renewable two-year contract until the committee or the host agency determines that the site is not in the best interest of Division II football. The host agency is the Shoals National Championship Committee.

The committee also voted to consider games against only NCAA Divisions I and II opponents when determining the strength of a team's schedule for selection purposes. Games against NCAA Division III or National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics teams will not be recognized.

In other actions, the committee recommended that:

- Division II football conferences be allowed to experiment with the tie-breaker procedure in NCAA Football Rules and Interpretations during any regular-season conference game. Currently, the tie-breaker can be used only in conference title games when automatic championship berths are at stake.

Study of women's athletics completed

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics reviewed a study conducted by the NCAA research staff on women in intercollegiate athletics and approved release of the study within a few weeks.

The research is entitled "A Study of Women in Intercollegiate Athletics—Perceived Barriers of Women in Intercollegiate Athletics." An executive summary of the study will be published in The NCAA News, and a full report can be obtained from the research staff at the national office when it becomes available.

In other action during the committee's February 12-13 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, a resolution was adopted recommending to the NCAA Council that the NCAA formally recognize National Girls and Women in Sports Day and encourage member institutions to participate in the observance.

A discussion was held on a resolution by the Council of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators urging the NCAA to recognize and promote gender equity in such areas as research grants, championships promotion, certification of institutions' athletics programs and coaching positions.

The resolution was sent to the NCAA Council during the Association's Convention in Nashville and was referred to the Committee on

There is no automatic qualification in Division II football.

- The fee for game officials increase from $175 to $225 for each Division II postseason game.

- Visible 25-second clocks be mandatory at all postseason games. NCAA football rules require such clocks to be used during all regular-season games beginning in 1992.

- The University of North Alabama receive a $1,500 honorarium for its staff's service in conducting the 1990 championship.

Women's Athletics by the Council.

The committee also discussed working with the new NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee on joint issues such as NCAA involvement in assisting institutions in developing internship programs.

Representatives of the Sara Lee Corp., which has pledged $6 million to promote women's athletics, reported on the development of pilot programs on several college campuses as part of a planned national program whereby purchasers of L'Eggs pantyhose could designate $1 of the purchase price for the women's athletics programs at the institution of their choice.

Women's basketball is letting go of men's coattails

By Jeff Shain

No longer content to ride the coattails of men's programs, women's college basketball is striving to establish its own identity as it enters the second decade under NCAA jurisdiction.

Buoyed by more media coverage including live national telecasts of the Women's Final Four—many of the top women's programs are finding they can attract their own audience without competing with the men for the same fan dollar.

"We have a marketing and promotions person at our university specifically for women's sports," said Jim Bolla, head women's coach at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, whose team plays in the shadow of the unbeaten defending men's national champion. "If the product is good enough to capture

Though acceptance has been slow, the gains have been steady. Attendance at women's games has increased every year, and at places like the University of Tennessee,

Knoxville; the University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Virginia, crowds of 10,000 are not uncommon. Televised games, once a rarity even in local and regional markets, are now popping up on cable.

Last year, women's basketball reached a peak when its championship game in Knoxville, Tennessee, outdrew the men's title game. While it must be noted that Thompson-Boling Arena is larger than Denver's McNichols Arena, home of the men's Final Four, the fact that the women's game can fill a large arena to the rafters showed the game's strength.

"Ten years ago, we were treated almost as an afterthought. Now, people see us as potentially being a positive for the university, and we are being treated as such," said Geno Auriemma, head women's coach at the University of Connecticut. "The biggest thing is that the administration is willing to work as much as the coaches.

"The media also have been great to us. We used to be on the back pages with the tire ads. Now, we're on the front page in some papers."

TV football schedule is eroding class time

By Mike Conklin

Chicago Tribune

Excerpted from a column

The next time you hear college football coaches say they're against a play-off because it interferes with classes, consider what'll be taking place next season.

At the urging of the College Football Association, ESPN is planning to turn Thursdays into "college football night." So far, the schedule includes six weekly games, and a network spokesperson said we can expect additional games. They won't involve lesser lights, either.

With Tennessee-Louisville, Houston-Miami (Florida), Virginia-Georgia Tech and Texas-Texas A&M already on the card, the stakes and viewership will be high—which is exactly what coaches want.

"When we developed the new TV plan, our membership expressed interest in creating a new night for college football," said CFA Executive Director Chuck Neinas.

Hey, at last word, Thursday was a day for classes on campuses. With some kickoffs starting as late as 8 p.m., you can probably forget about Friday morning, too.

Grant cuts could force freshmen into football before they're ready

Jerry Pettibone, head football coach

The National Sports Daily

"It's (scholarship cuts) going to create more of an opportunity for true freshmen to play. You will still like to redshirt as many as you can just to give them an opportunity to make the transition from high school to college. When you're only at 85 (scholarships), that creates less of an opportunity to do that.

"You could put a player on the field too soon, and he could have a bad experience and ruin his confidence. There will always be a transition period from high school to college with a youngster leaving home, getting homesick, going through the anxiety of making new friends, and trying to understand what he's supposed to do."

"If I can't have a second car, I don't want any of my neighbors having a second car. That's the attitude that prevails in college athletics today. My feeling is that if we're over budget and losing money, it's up to us to cut our budget.

"I don't think any of the schools that are serious about academics and athletics would vote for these cutbacks (scholarship reductions, for example) for the well-being of the student-athlete.

"It's basically the smaller schools that don't want to spend the money to play at this level or develop the overall program that vote for that. There are probably 200 of those schools, and the majority rules."

"It's important to me to do this job to the best of my abilities. I hope women are realistic enough to know I'm not going to be a savior. But I know I'm in a position now to have my voice heard. People will listen.

"I also recognize the importance of my job, because my performance will reflect on other women in this role.

"If I was 25 years old and just getting into the business, knowing this (recruiting) is what I'd have to do, I'd seriously have to question whether I'd want to do this for a living. It didn't used to be like this, the way it is today."

"They (the NCAA) don't know anything about us. They don't care about us. There are three sports in the NCAA. There's football. There's basketball. There's all others.

"Until hockey is treated as an individual sport, we're never going to be treated properly. It's impossible to treat us with the same brush as you treat swimming or women's basketball. There have to be more than three sports in the NCAA. I think the NCAA is going to have to look at how they've affected some of the individual sports with this broad brush. If they do that, I think everybody in hockey will be happy. If they don't, I think everybody in hockey will be unhappy, and it remains to be seen what will happen after that.

"I want to be in the NCAA. I'm hoping it will be the NCAA. We are a minor sport in the eyes of the NCAA. It's not a national sport. There aren't a lot of people worrying about what's going on in college hockey in New Mexico. Fine. But don't let people in New Mexico vote against me."

Lou McCullough, commissioner
Trans America Athletic Conference

The Des Moines Register

"If you (NCAA) presidents would make the entrance requirements high enough so that athletes would be able to demonstrate that they could handle college work, it would cure most of our current problems.

"There would be no need for graduation surveys and at least half of the NCAA Manual could be eliminated if we had strengthened the academic requirements several years ago.

"Since the presidents are now in charge, maybe I will see the day the NCAA quits letting nonqualified athletes into college."

Metro not only league affected by waiver plan

By Jim O'Connell

The recent recommendation by a special NCAA committee for a waiver provision to be added to the requirements for a conference's automatic berth in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship was not offered solely in respect to the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference.

The Metro will see its membership fall to four next season, two below the number needed for an automatic bid, with the loss of the University of South Carolina, Columbia, to the Southeastern Conference; Florida State University to the Atlantic Coast Conference, and Memphis State University and the University of Cincinnati to the newly formed Great Midwest.

That leaves the University of Louisville, Southern Mississippi University, Tulane University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Virginia Tech just joined the Big East Conference's football-only league.

The Metro can regain its automatic bid after a one-year waiting period if it gets enough members to meet the minimum of six and if that many schools have been Division I for eight consecutive years and if at least three have been members of that conference for the five preceding academic years.

The rule also affects the East Coast Conference, whose members need the automatic bid and the guaranteed share of the NCAA tournament revenue more than the Metro's members, who still could qualify as at-large teams or survive as independents.

The ECC currently has seven members, but Drexel University and the University of Delaware will leave after this season to join the North Atlantic Conference.

"We're trying to resolve the issue and we have a couple of options," said conference spokesperson Marie Wozniak. "We are covered under the same special committee (provision). We had a proposal planned for the recent Convention asking for a period to comply, but we withdrew it when the special committee was announced."

The NCAA said the loss of any automatic bids wouldn't greatly affect the tournament since there are three more conferences than automatic bids and the top 30 conferences still will get the bids with the remainder qualifying through play-in games.

O'Connell writes for the Associated Press.

Women to commit to the NCAA. Though there were misgivings about joining forces with an Association dominated by football and men's basketball, the move turned out to be beneficial.

"I think the most significant benefit (of the move to the NCAA) was in public visibility," said Donna A. Lopiano, director of women's athletics at Texas. "The AIAW was structured on a geographical level. You had state championships, regional championships and then, national championships. Women weren't in conferences; their states were their conferences."

"When the AIAW ceased, women went into conferences because that was the structure the NCAA recognized. Most of them went into the same conferences as the men, though a few went into women-only conferences. The public understood the competition. The TIAW (Texas AIAW) to them was much less meaningful than the Southwest Conference."

However, there still remained the problem of selling the game. Many schools scheduled basketball dou-

USIA is seeking coaches to help foreign teams

American coaches with foreign-language abilities are being recruited by the U. S. Information Agency to travel abroad as part of Sports America, the USIA branch that coordinates sport-education programs with American embassies around the world.

"On the average, we run programs in 45 countries each year," said William Peters, the agency's Sports America program manager. "We carry out programs all over the world. After things in the Persian Gulf cool off, we'll also be looking for coaches who speak Arabic."

Peters said the USIA provides international transportation for coaches and an honorarium of $50 for each day they're out of the country, as well as covering miscellaneous expenses. "The American embassy and the host organization cover local costs," he added.

"We don't want coaches to have many out-of-pocket expenses, but they won't get rich, either. We promote the program as a unique experience for the coaches...an opportunity to represent the United States overseas."

Coaches with Spanish- or French-speaking abilities are among the most sought-after, Peters said, because they provide the broadest reach. "Any language capability is welcome, however," he said, noting that programs have been developed around the language capabilities of interested coaches.

"Our embassies now are working on fiscal-year 1991 plans," he explained. "Some will be specific—asking, for example, for a swimming coach to visit during the third quarter of the year. Others will be more general—asking simply for a coach to visit sometime during the year."

Basketball is the most popular sport, if the USIA's current file of resumes is any indication. "We probably have an eight-inch-thick stack of resumes from basketball coaches," said Peters.

Interested coaches should send background information regarding their coaching and foreign-language abilities and experience to Peters' attention at Sports America, Room 561, USIA, 301 4th Street S.W., Washington, DC 20547.

ble-headers with their men's and women's teams, hoping to attract some spillover attendance. But the idea received only a lukewarm reception.

"You'd walk into the gym (to begin the women's game), and no one would be there; then, the stands would fill up for the men's game," Virginia guard Tammi Reiss said. "Or, we'd play after the men, and people would be leaving. It was really discouraging."

Gradually, coaches and administrators found that the demographics of women's basketball fans differed from those of the men, who tended to be boosters, businessmen and students.

"Our coaches association did a survey a few years ago that showed that a majority of our fans are young families and retireds," said Rene Portland, head women's coach at Pennsylvania State University.

Virginia coach Debbie Ryan added: "On one hand, it's a great situation—in the families are a lot of youngsters that we provide female role models for. But we want to get more college students to support us. Right now, we have a very loyal following in the community, but we want more of (the players') peers in the stands."

Despite the efforts to separate the two programs, several women's coaches still find that a successful men's program can be a valuable recruiting tool.

"There is so much to be gained from being at a school where basketball is so important," Auriemma said. "When I was (an assistant) at Virginia and Ralph Sampson was there, the women's team was just 15-13. But in talking to recruits, people would say, 'Yeah, Virginia—you've got a great program.'

"When we say we're from Connecticut, it helps us get in the door. Once we're in the door, we have to sell our own program."

Bolla said: "Coach (Jerry) Tarkanian helps us recruit. I'll bring a recruit in to meet him, and he'll sign a picture for her and tell her (Nevada-Las Vegas) is the place to come. Stacey Augmon, Larry Johnson, Anderson Hunt—they all talk to our recruits and come to our games."

While it seems that successful men's and women's basketball programs would go hand-in-hand, that hasn't been the case. Of the current top 10 women's teams in the USA Today ratings, seven are schools more known for their success in football than men's basketball during the past decade. Auriemma says there's a reason for that.

"It takes money to have a big-time women's basketball program. What's the best way to get that money? Big-time football," he said.

"Those schools have tremendous departments of athletics and have the resources to spend on it."

Auriemma and the others are hoping that in the next 10 years, that kind of dependence won't be as necessary.

College skiing winds of change blowing out west

There are winds of change in the West in collegiate skiing as the 1991 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships approach.

East and West will gather February 27-March 2 in Park City, Utah, for the 38th annual event, which Utah will host.

For the past decade, Utah has dominated not only the West region, but the championships as well, winning six titles. That had put an end to a string of eight titles by Colorado in the previous 10 years.

"The last regional championship we won was in 1986," said Colorado coach Richard Rokos, whose Bison beat Utah for the title this year.

"We don't have dominating strength in any event," Rokos said. "But we have good balance throughout, and that is our strength. If we can stay healthy, I think we will do well."

Colorado won all but one meet on the winter collegiate circuit, and the lone loss was to Utah, whose coach, Pat Miller, is not ready to give anything away. He says the Utes have been either injured or ill all season.

"Don't count us out," Miller says. "Colorado has skied well all year and is really strong. But when we are healthy, we can ski with anyone. Our Alpine teams are strong, along with our men's cross country team."

It could be academic because the team to beat probably is Vermont, the two-time defending champion. The Catamounts returned almost everyone from a team that beat Utah by 100 points last year.

"We've been undefeated for the season," Vermont coach Chip LaCasse said. "We have the same Alpine team as last year, and we have added to the team with Meg St. John and Caity Boyd."

"Our cross country team lost a couple of strong people, but we replaced them with two brothers—Trond and Knut Nystad—who have performed extremely well."

The real strength of the Vermont team, however, is the women's cross country squad, which returns two-time national champion Laura Wilson. Wilson won both the classical and freestyle events last year. Also back is Selma Lie, second in the freestyle and third in the diagonal events a year ago.

The only other returning national champions are also from Vermont. Einar Bohmer, who won the men's giant slalom and finished third in the slalom last year, is back. Also returning to defend his title is Tim Miller, who won the freestyle cross country event in 1990.

"It's always hard to know how we compare with the West," LaCasse said. "We never face each other during the season. But our philosophy has always been to do our best, be as prepared as we can be, and not worry about anyone else."

Following is an event-by-event ranking of the top qualifiers in the West following regional competition and in the East prior to the regional:

Laura Wilson also returns to defend 1990 championships in cross country

Championships Profile

Event: Men's and women's skiing.

Field: Approximately 160 competitors (80 men and 80 women) will be selected.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champion: Vermont is the two-time defending champion, beating Utah in both meetings.

Schedule: The University of Utah will host the championships February 27-March 2.

The NCAA News coverage: Complete results will appear March 6.

Contenders: Vermont, Colorado and Utah.

Championships notes: Skiing has been a sport of dynasties with Denver winning 14 titles, Colorado 11 and Utah 6... Vermont's Laura Wilson returns to defend her national championships in both the freestyle and diagonal cross country events... If Vermont repeats as champion, it would be only the Catamounts' fourth team title.

Deadline near for NCAA programs

The deadline for applications for NCAA Ethnic Minority and Women's Enhancement Programs internships and scholarships is March 15.

Ten scholarship grants to ethnic minorities and 10 to women are awarded annually. In addition, eight persons will be selected for internships in the national office.

Scholarship applicants must be entering the first semester or term of postgraduate studies, and internship candidates must have completed requirements for their undergraduate degrees.

Application folders can be obtained from the director of athletics or the office of financial aid at member institutions or from Stanley D. Johnson, director of professional development, at the NCAA national office.

Applications must be typed, and three endorsement forms are to be included in the application folder.

Also required are official college transcripts, graduate record examination score or other professionals entrance scores and a self-report essay.

Need is not a factor in the awarding of scholarships or internships.

News Fact File

Total NCAA membership has increased each year since 1949 except two—it dropped from 862 to 861 between 1978 and 1979 and from 988 to 981 between 1984 and 1985. The total membership in 1990 was 1,034. The total in 1949 was 317.

Drug-testing accreditation planned

The College of American Pathologists and the American Association for Clinical Chemistry plan to develop an athletics drug-testing accreditation and proficiency program.

Plans are being developed in cooperation with the NCAA Drug-Testing Committee, which includes representatives of the National Football League and U.S. Olympic Committee.

During the first phase, a pilot survey will be conducted for laboratories that responded to an anabolic steroid questionnaire.

If the results of the pilot survey demonstrate sufficient technical ability and interest, this information will be used to develop the accreditation and proficiency program.

The drugs involved will be a subset of those banned by various sports organizations. Educational materials that include analytical techniques for these compounds and bibliographic information will accompany the drug-testing accreditation program.

Current plans are to conduct the pilot survey this spring and launch the program next fall.

Players can apply for U.S. teams

Applications for the 1991 USA national women's basketball team trials and U.S. Olympic Festival '91 regional trials are available from USA Basketball at 1750 East Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909 (telephone 719/632-7687).

Olympic Festival regional trials are scheduled April 19-21 at four regional sites. USA national team trials to select teams for the Pan American Games and World University Games will be held May 30-June 2 at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs.

Eligibility requirements and training and competition schedules are included with applications.

Wrestling picture full of Division II contenders

Although last year's Division II Wrestling Championship was a tight two-horse race, that's not likely this season. The same two teams, two-time defending champion Portland State and 1990 runner-up Central State (Oklahoma), will be in the picture, but if another photo finish materializes, a wide-angle lens could be in order.

In a year in which the national poll has differed significantly each week, tournament host North Dakota State, Central State (Oklahoma), South Dakota State, Nebraska-Omaha, Lake Superior State and Portland State loom as the top contenders in a wide-open tournament.

"There's not a dominant team this year," said Arthur "Bucky" Maughan, coach of top-ranked North Dakota State (8-1) of the powerful North Central Conference. "I'm surprised we're No. 1. I think we're a year away, but evidently no one else has a lot either."

Maughan's team last won the national title in 1988 with only one champion, but seven place-winners. Should North Dakota State claim the crown this year, the 27-year veteran coach said the Herd will do it in a similar manner—with depth.

Another Maughan, Arthur's son Bret (118 pounds, 22-4), ranked second at his weight, figures to be a major factor. He finished third last year. Teammates Bryan Nelson (190 pounds, 9-2-1) and Mark Anderson (158 pounds, 18-4) are ranked second and third at their respective weights. Nelson finished third in last year's tournament. Maughan has three other wrestlers who are ranked eighth at their weights, including Wayne Werner (126 pounds, 2-5-1), Lloyd Wurm (134 pounds, 19-4) and heavyweight Tim Tekautz

With the absence of a standout team, one might think the fact the bouts will be held on Bison mats would make North Dakota State the favorite. After all, the last time the Herd hosted (1988), it won. Maughan, however, said he sees the site as a non-factor.

"Wrestling is not a sport like football or basketball where home advantage means much," he said. "Personally, I would rather have it somewhere else so I could concentrate on my team alone, but I think we owe it to our fans to host."

Another team whose depth makes it a contender is Central State (Oklahoma). Coach David James' team, while only in its second year in

Championships Preview

Division II (the Broncos claimed eight NAIA crowns before joining the NCAA), showed no rookie jitters in 1990, missing a team title by 4½ points. With two defending national champions, Howard Moore (167 pounds, 24-8) and Greg Oplotnik (190 pounds, 24-2), plus Jeff Gowens (134 pounds, 28-12-1), who was third at his weight, on their roster, plus nationally ranked wrestlers at four other weights, the Broncos (8-4) appear primed to make another run. To take the title, however, James said his team will need his young people (he starts two freshmen and three sophomores) to step up.

"For our first year in the division last year, we had a great effort," James said. "Maybe in another year (when there wasn't a team with as many champions as Portland State had), that would have been enough to win.

"Last year, Portland State and we ran away with it. I expect this year to be completely different. In order to win, we will need to have six or seven place-winners."

Third-ranked South Dakota State (8-2), the second North Central Conference member in the national top four, has never finished in the top two, but both Maughan and James named the Jackrabbits as a darkhorse. Coach Mike Engels, whose 10-2 squad handed North Dakota State its only regular-season loss (21-16), has five ranked wrestlers, including 1990 all-America honoree Mike Pankratz (126 pounds, 21-5-1) and Greg Saylor (190 pounds, 18-7).

The third North Central Conference member in the top four, fourth-ranked Nebraska-Omaha, fell from the top spot late in the season with a 25-10 loss to North Dakota State. Coach Mike Denney said that he has four potential champions, led by Scott Ruff (142 pounds, 22-2), who was third last year; Jessie Smith (167 pounds, 26-7); 1990 runner-up Joe Wypiszewski (177, 24-4-2), and Pat Gentzler (190 pounds, 23-5), who was seventh last year.

"We will have to have those individuals do well, but we will have to have everyone hitting on all cylinders to win," Denney said. "We'll need a total team effort, which has always been our trademark."

Like South Dakota State, Lake Superior State has never finished first or second, but the Lakers could be a sleeper, according to the coaches of the other top teams. Coach Tom Borrelli's team has been outstanding in dual meets (14-1), but he said that he doesn't know if his team has enough stallions to make noise at Schedule: North Dakota State University will host the 1991 championships March 1-3.

The NCAA News coverage: Results will be published in the March 6 issue of The NCAA News.

Contenders: North Dakota State, Central State (Oklahoma), South Dakota State, Nebraska-Omaha, Lake Superior State, Portland State.

Notes: Portland State won its second consecutive team title last year and third overall, edging runner-up Central State (Oklahoma), 100½ to 96, the smallest margin of victory since 1983. North Dakota State last served as host that same year, finishing as runner-up to champion Cal State Bakersfield. Cal State Bakersfield and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo share the all-time lead in team championships with eight. Both schools now wrestle in Division I. Of those schools now wrestling in Division II, Portland State and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville lead with three apiece. The last team to win three consecutive team titles was Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (1984-86).

Still, Borrelli does have ranked wrestlers in 1990 all-America competitors Robert Symanns (118 pounds, 27-6) and Eric Cluck (158 pounds, 20-10-3), as well as Brandon Forga (177 pounds, 24-11).

"It all depends on whether the kids ranked above ours are as tough as the rankings say," Borrelli said. "Our goal is to get into the top four—once we do that, anything can happen."

Five notches from last year's top spot, but still firmly implanted in everyone's mind as a factor, is Portland State (6-7-1). Forget the fact that the Vikings have a losing record—they did last year, too. While every other team seems to depend on depth, the two-time champions look to two-time tournament "most outstanding wrestler" Dan Russell (167, 23-1-1) and aptly named Tony Champion (177 pounds, 25-4-1), who will look to extend his weight-class dynasty to a third year.

Despite that duo's imposing presence, coach Marlin Grahn downplays his squad's chance of a threepeat, since many other key figures from last year's team were lost to graduation.

"We don't have the big power guns from last year," Grahn said. "I would say we're a far outside contender, but we might surprise some people."

That's probably impossible for a two-time champion to do, but given the talent of some of the Vikings, surprise may not be a necessary ingredient for success, if not as a champion, then as a spoiler.

Surprise, however, does figure to be one of the features of this year's tournament. If the finish is close enough to be described as a photo, it's likely to be of the group variety.

Augsburg wrestlers could end East Coast's grip on title

East Coast dominance, specifically by colleges from New Jersey and New York, has marked the Division III wrestling tournament for 15 years. In fact, in the championships' 17-year history, no team west of the Mississippi River has won the team title. With top-ranked Augsburg (16-0) having held the No. 1 ranking since the season's first whistle, the tournament trophy could be ready to cross the Old Man, and travel the mile-and-a-half to the Auggies' Minneapolis campus.

That trip, however, is far from a foregone conclusion. Yes, Augsburg is and has been ranked first, but whether it will be there when the tournament concludes is open to question. The coaches of the prime contenders, Auggie coach Jeff Swenson included, emphasize that, whereas the national tournament has featured one dominant team (Ithaca) the past two years, this year the watchword will be balance.

"We need a team effort to win," Swenson said. "We don't have any ideas of three or four people carrying us. This will be one of the more balanced nationals ever."

Although three or four contenders can't take the team title, it's a nice place to start. The Auggies, last year's runner-up, have four all-America athletes returning, led by Matt Kretlow (167 pounds, 43-3), who missed last year's tournament because of injury, but placed his two previous seasons. Joe Hoalmen (142 pounds, 33-9), placed fourth at 126 pounds last year and could wrestle at 134 or 142 in this year's tournament. Swenson also brings all-America athletes to the mat in Kevin Schlitz (190 pounds, 32-3) and Chester Grauberger (heavyweight, 42-1). Schlitz placed fifth last year at his weight. Grauberger was third.

Swenson said he likes entering the tournament as the top-ranked team, but that other than getting recognition for his team and school, it doesn't mean much.

"We've been a strong 16-team tournament team and I hope we can be a strong Division III tournament team," he said. "We're stressing improvement from each individual and finishing moves, and downplaying winning or losing. If each individual can improve, the winning will take care of itself."

Augsburg's most serious challenge is likely to come from second-ranked Brockport State (8-1), a team most coaches of the top-rated programs targeted as a tournament favorite along with the Auggies. Brockport State returns two 1990 national champions in Fritz Zagorski and Brian Quick. Zagorski has a 12-2 record at 126 pounds, the same weight class he won at last year's tournament. Quick, last year's 190-pound champion, has a 16-4-1 record. Zagorski and Quick are no doubt the Golden Eagles' marquee wrestlers, but if coach Don Murray has learned anything in his 21 seasons, it's that nothing is a lock once the tournament starts. He foresees a wide-open battle for both team and individual honors.

"We have a few big guns, but our team is more depth than big guns," he said. "A big gun today is a quiet gun tomorrow. Anybody or any team is capable of anything on a given day."

If history plays any part on that given day, third-ranked Trenton State College, which has won more national tournaments (five) than anyone else in Division III, could be the team. The last time Augustana (Illinois) hosted (1985) also was the last time coach Dave Icenhower's Lions won. Reflection on that win, however, only clouds his ideas on the chances of his team and other teams.

"In 1985, we had our worst dual-meet season ever and won (so anything can happen)," he pointed out.

For that reason, the Lions' 2-3 dual-meet start may not have made Icenhower too uncomfortable. But the fact that Trenton State went 14-0 for the remainder of the year made him feel a lot better than did banking on historical trends.

"I like the things I see in this team," he said. "Everyone we have is capable of placing." Leading that group are past all-America honorees Steve Rivera (118 pounds, 9-2), Rich Venuto (142 pounds, 21-6) and Shawn O'Meara (150 pounds, 18-3-2).

In order to win its sixth team championship, Icenhower said, his team will need much more than strong performances from those individuals.

"Augsburg and Brockport State could be carried by individuals, but we can't. If we're going to win, it has to be a team effort. We'll have to have six or seven all-Americans."

John Carroll (12-2), the nation's fourth-ranked team, has two returning all-America wrestlers in 134-pound performer Dave Buckiso, who was a runner-up in last year's tournament, and Corey Bowser, who was seventh in the 190-pound class in 1990. Buckiso has gone 23-6 for coach Kerry Volkman's squad, while Bowser is 12-8-1.

Fifth-ranked Central (Iowa) (22-5) has two 1990 all-America wrestlers who lead a deep squad. Those two standouts, Joe Stutting and Jon McGovern, flip-flopped weights this season, but little else has changed as both have remained dominant. Stutting, who placed third at 167 last year, has gone 35-7 in the 158-pound class, while McGovern, a fourth-place finisher at 158 pounds a year ago, has posted a 31-4-1 mark at 167 pounds this season. Four other Dutchmen wrestlers have recorded more than 20 wins.

With this year's expected wide-open tournament, sixth-ranked Montclair State and the seventh-ranked hosts also could challenge for the crown. Seventeenth-ranked Ithaca, the tournament winner the past two years, had its ranks decimated by graduation, making its chances for an unprecedented third straight title slim.

Championships Profile

Event: Division III wrestling.

Field: A field of 200 wrestlers will compete for team and individual championships.

Automatic qualification: College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference, New England College Conference Wrestling Association, New Jersey Athletic Conference, Ohio Athletic Conference, State University of New York Athletic Conference, and two regional qualifying tournaments.

Schedule: Augustana College (Illinois) will be the host for the 1991 championships March 1-2.

The NCAA News coverage: Results appear in the March 6 issue of The NCAA News.

Contenders: Augsburg, Brockport State, Trenton State, John Carroll, Central (Iowa).

Championships Notes: Ithaca has won the past two championships, but losses to graduation have dropped the Bombers to 17th in the rankings. No team has won three straight titles. Teams from New Jersey or New York have won all but the first two of the 17 previous tournaments. The tournament was last held at Augustana (Ill.) in 1985, with Trenton State winning. Trenton State holds the all-time lead in team championships with five. Last year's outstanding wrestler, Rob Florca of Wisconsin-Whitewater returns to defend his title at 158 pounds.

Diplomats enjoy good fortune

Luck may not have been on Franklin and Marshall's side in last year's Division III Men's Basketball Championship, but this year, the Diplomats definitely have had a lot of good fortune.

In 1990, Franklin and Marshall was upset in the second round by Johns Hopkins, a team it had defeated handily earlier in the season (97-60).

The Diplomats have put the 1990 tournament behind them and are looking for their fourth straight appearance in the championship.

They already have passed the 20-win mark this year, but the victories have been hard-earned.

"We've been very fortunate," coach Glenn Robinson said. "The players seem to rise up and do great things for the comebacks."

One of those great comebacks was against Ohio Wesleyan. In a seesaw battle, Franklin and Marshall was down by two points in the final seconds; but center David Wilding converted his first three-point attempt of the year at the buzzer to win the game, 69-68.

In addition, the Diplomats have come out on top in three other nail biters, registering one-point wins over Buffalo State, 70-69; Elizabethtown, 67-66, and Muhlenberg, 71-70. With no time remaining in regulation, a Muhlenberg senior had the chance to win the game with two free throws but missed both.

Robinson attributes the team's success to hard work, but he admits that he began the season with some concern over the loss of three starters.

"We had to change some player's positions to adjust," he said.

Leading scorer Will Lasky switched from shooting guard to the point position to ease the loss of Art Mascolo, 1990 Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) player of the year. Chris Finch, a small forward last year, moved to shooting guard.

Ed Plakans, last year's ECAC and Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference rookie of the year, is another talented player. "Plakans exemplifies the team—character first and player second," said Robinson.

The changes have been to the Diplomats' advantage. The new team has earned the No. 2 ranking in Division III.

A sizzling team shooting percentage has been another factor in the Diplomats' success. They hit more than 50 percent from the field.

There are no seniors in the starting lineup, but the Diplomats have exceptional balance among their young players. Five players have averaged in double figures at some point in the season.

Despite the fact that his Diplomats are loaded with offensive ability, Robinson knows it will take their best effort every game to win the championship.

"Everyone's fired up come tournament time," he said.

Salem State is another team that has been fired up during the regular season. It also is another offensive powerhouse, averaging more than 90 points a game.

Speed and depth have been keys to the team's good standing this year. The Vikings' fast-break offense and full-court press are exciting to watch, coach Jim Todd said.

The Vikings never have had trou-

Franklin and Marshall's Will Lasky (No. 44) moved from shooting guard to point guard this season, and former small forward Chris Finch (No. 32) took over as shooting guard ble scoring, according to Todd. This year, they are concentrating on defense.

"We are playing the best defense we've played in four years," Todd said.

Senior tricapitain John Coffey and junior Jim Edgehill are consistent performers. Coffey has been averaging almost 17 points per game, and Edgehill averages approximately a dozen. After two seasons, Edgehill is fifth among Division III juniors in free-throw percentage, shooting a steady 82.1 percent.

The Vikings are not feeling any pressure because of a third-place ranking in the Division III poll, through games of February 11.

"They are pretty loose yet," Todd said.

But as tournament time approaches, nervousness will increase, not only for Salem State but also for 39 other teams.

Championship Profile

Event: Division III men's basketball.

Field: In 1991, 40 teams will compete for the championship.

Automatic qualification: College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Little East Conference, Massachusetts State College Athletic Conference, Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference (two berths), Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, New Jersey Athletic Conference, North Coast Athletic Conference, Ohio Athletic Conference, Old Dominion Athletic Conference, Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, State University of New York Athletic Conference and University Athletic Association.

Defending champion: Rochester.

Schedule: First-round games will be played February 28 and second-round games will be played March 2 on the campuses of participating institutions. Sectionals will be played March 8 and 9, also at on-campus sites. The championship semifinals and final will be held at Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio, March 15 and 16.

The NCAA News coverage: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the March 6 and March 13 issues. Championship results will appear in the March 20 issue of the News.

Contenders: Franklin and Marshall, Salem State, Hope, UC San Diego and Calvin.

Championship notes: This is the 17th championship... The record for the most points scored in regulation is held by Southeastern Massachusetts (122) vs. Salem State (112) and was set in 1990... Since 1975, only two players have been selected to the all-tournament team two consecutive years—Michael Thomas, North Park, 1979 and 1980, and Mark Linde, Wisconsin-Whitewater, 1983 and 1984.

Best record no guarantee of postseason hoop success

Nothing guarantees that the team with the best record at the start of the Division III Women's Basketball Championship will win the title. Last year's final is evidence of that.

Hope overcame a 20-point deficit to nip St. John Fisher, 65-63. St. John Fisher, a major contender for the title in 1990, had one of the best records, 27-1, going into the championship.

Just what will it take for a team to capture the Division III Women's Basketball Championship this year?

Coaches have as many answers as they do game plans, but the consensus is that the team that remains injury-free will have the best chance at the title.

The team that can stay healthy, be consistent and win the close ones can take it all this year, Capital coach Dixie Jeffers said.

Capital made three consecutive appearances in the tournament in 1985, 1986 and 1987. In 1986, the Crusaders advanced to the semifinals and finished third.

Capital climbed to the No. 1 spot in the Division III women's basketball poll at the end of January and still occupied that spot in the poll that included games through February 11. That has made others sit up and take notice.

"The fact that we are No. 1 is not a fluke," Jeffers said.

The team is not doing anything different from last year in terms of style. Running and pressing are still the mainstays of Capital's game. The difference is in the players. The veterans have improved, and recruiting yielded new talent.

The Crusaders are a relatively young team, with only one senior, but, according to Jeffers, experience is not everything.

"If you want it badly enough, you can achieve it," she said.

For the Cobbers of Concordia-Moorhead, experience may be the key to their success this season. They lost only one player to graduation and have a bit of tournament tradition under their belts with eight tournament appearances since 1982.

Senior Michelle Thykeson, 6-2, leads the Cobbers. She has been their top scorer for two years, and consistency offensively has placed her among the top 10 nationally in shooting percentage. She is hitting nearly 60 percent of her shots.

Thykeson can also be a defensive threat. As a center, she led the team in steals in 1990.

Of the losses the Cobbers have suffered thus far, two have been at the hands of ranked Division II schools.

"Playing against better competition has made us mentally tougher," coach Duane Siverson said.

In Siverson's estimation, the key to capturing the title will be execution.

"Each year, it comes down to half-court offense and half-court defense," he said.

Although St. John Fisher had been out of the top 10 until recently, last year's runner-up is not out of the race for the championship.

"Rankings don't matter. We just play our schedule," coach Philip Kahler said.

Lack of injuries and the home-court advantage are important elements in the outcome of the championship, Kahler believes.

"The last two years, we have been injury-free, but we never have had the home-court advantage," Kahler said.

With or without a home-court advantage, Washington (Missouri) hopes it can build on last year's tournament appearance.

A team will need momentum going into the championships, coach Nancy Fahey said.

She added that playing good basketball and depth also will be factors in a team's success.

The team with the best record or most talent will not necessarily claim the final victory. The team that remains healthy, peaks in performance level and has some depth is likely to take the title. For that team, the championship experience will be one for the record.

Event on ESPN

Highlights of the 26th annual NCAA honors dinner, which was staged during the 1991 NCAA Convention in Nashville, will be broadcast in late February by the ESPN cable network.

The broadcast is set for 9 a.m. Eastern time Tuesday, February 26.

At the dinner, the NCAA presented its highest honor, the Theodore Roosevelt Award, to tennis great Althea Gibson. Also, six current and six former student-athletes were honored as Today's Top Six and Silver Anniversary award recipients.

The dinner also featured a salute to the 10th anniversary of NCAA sponsorship of women's championships.

Automatic Qualification: College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Little East Conference, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, New Jersey Athletic Conference, Ohio Athletic Conference, University Athletic Association and Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Field: The field for the 1991 championship consists of 32 teams.

Defending champion: Hope.

Schedule: Regional games will be played March 1 or 2. Sectional games will be played March 8-9. The semifinals and finals will be held March 15-16. All games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions.

The NCAA News coverage: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the March 6 and March 13 issues of the News. Championship results will appear March 20.

Contenders: Adrian, Capital, Concordia-Moorhead, St. Thomas (Minnesota) and Washington (Missouri).

Championship notes: This year, a new format will be followed... Regional competition will feature only two teams and 16 regional games will be played... Four teams will be brought together for sectional competition... No third-place games will be played at sectionals... Concordia-Moorhead, Salem State and Kean share the record for most tournament appearances since 1982 with eight... Elizabethtown holds the record for appearances in the semifinals and finals with four. It also is the only school to win more than one title.

Three seniors set high standards in women's game

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Three seniors already have reached 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds on the women's Division I career charts, and a fourth likely will join the club before this season ends.

Vanderbilt's Wendy Scholtens had 2,455 points and 1,176 rebounds, Maine's Rachel Bouchard 2,203 and 1,222 and Cal State Fullerton's Genia Miller 2,140 and 1,016 through February 11. Grambling's Tarcha Hollis, with 1,896 and 1,073, seems certain to reach 2,000 because she is averaging 24.3 points a game this season.

The 6-4 Scholtens also tops all seniors in free-throw accuracy at 86.7 percent, and she is third on the career list. She also has a chance to make the record book's career lists in assists, blocked shots and steals. Indeed, she may be one of the most versatile players in college basketball history, male or female.

The 6-3 Miller also tops all seniors by a wide margin in career blocked shots at 376, already third. The categorical picture follows.

Scoring—In total points, it is Scholtens 2,455, Bouchard 2,203, Northern Illinois' 5-7 Lisa Foss 2,174, Miller 2,140, Connecticut's Kerry Bascom 1,923, North Carolina State's Andrea Stinson 1,918, Hollis 1,896 and Colgate's Suzanne Bowen 1,863.

Hollis leads in career average at 24.3. Miami (Florida) senior Frances Savage is next at 23.3, but she was injured, played only two games, and will return next season. Then come Stinson at 22.8, Bouchard 21.6, Scholtens 21.5, Tennessee Tech's Angela Moorhead 20.8, Foss 20.1 and Miller 19.8.

Hollis now ranks fifth on the career per-game list since 1982—first year of NCAA women's statistics—and 17th all time.

Rebounding—Totals for the four players over 1,000 are listed above. In average, the 6-4 Hollis has 13.8, the 6-0 Bouchard 12, Scholtens 10.3 and Miller 9.4. Hollis and Bouchard should make the career list in average, but none will make the list in total, where the cutoff is a hefty 1,500.

Field-goal accuracy—Tennessee Tech's 6-2 Renay Adams leads at 63.9 percent, followed by Wake Forest's 6-2 Jenny Mitchell 61 and Arkansas' 6-4 Delmonica DeHorney 60.5. Adams now is sixth and could reach third on the since-1982 chart. She is running sixth all-time. All three could move into the since-1982 top 20.

Free-throw accuracy—Behind Scholtens are Louisiana State's 5-4 Dana Chatman at 83.6 percent, Anja Bordt (5-9) of St. Mary's (California) 83.5 and Foss 83.3. Scholtens now is third on the since-1982 list with her 86.7 percent and likely will finish there, with the others all making the top 15. Scholtens holds the Division I single-game record at 18 straight and is tied for the season record with 45 in a row.

Blocks—Miller is the only current senior who will move into the career blocks list that will be established for the first time at the end of this season. Her 3.48 per-game average likely will be fourth. (It should be noted that blocks, assists, steals and three-pointers have become official NCAA-ranking categories only in recent years; these statistics were not kept at most schools in the pre-1982 period, so there are no all-time lists.)

Assists—Little (5-2) Shanya

Evans of Providence leads at 8.13 per game to 8.05 over Bordt. Evans now is running second and Bordt fourth in career average. In total assists, Evans leads current seniors at 911 and she could become only the second player to reach 1,000. That would put her second to the leader, Penn State's Suzie McConnell, at 1,307.

Steals—Donna McGary, 5-6, of Mississippi Valley is averaging 3.81 per game, third on the list. With a total of 408 to date, she could break the record on 429.

Three-point accuracy—South Carolina's 5-10 Karen Middleton leads at 44.2 percent, followed by Harvard's 5-8 Beth Wombach at 43. That puts them Nos. 4 and 5, respectively, on the chart. Several others could reach the top 10 if they improve by season's end.

Three-pointers made—Portland State's 5-3 Michelle Hughes leads at 2.43 per game, with Middleton's 2.36 next. Both could reach the top five.

He wears a black patch on his uniform with his mother's initials. His aunt Marion, who had arranged his mother's funeral two months earlier, died unexpectedly. An intensely private man, Green talks in hushed tones about his grief.

"When my father (Charles, 36) died the day after Len Bias' death (former Maryland star), it took a toll on me," said the 20-year-old Long Island native and North Carolina State transfer. "But when my Mom died, it was a real shock. She was all I had. Now (with his aunt's death) I'm the only one left to take care of myself. Basketball is all I have. But I know my mother is watching over me." (Dave Torromeo, Iona SID) Bethany's (West Virginia) sophomore Lori Woods of Dillonville, Ohio, knows that Bethany's women's basketball coach, Lisa Campbell-Komara, is in good hands (Lisa and her husband, Joe, are expecting their first child in June). Woods, the school's only tri-sport athlete this year (soccer and softball are the others), recently passed written and practical examinations to become a registered Emergency Medical Technician. Said Woods, "If anything should happen at a game or during practice, I'd be right there to take care of her." [Sue Ryan, Bethany (West Virginia) SID]

Glen Wilkes Jr., women's coach at Rollins, recently got his 100th career victory. His father, Glenn Wilkes Sr., got his 500th win last year. Says the Rollins coach, now 102-28 over five seasons: "My dad says if you stay in one place long enough, you'll eventually win that many games, but you'll also lose quite a few, too." (Fred Battenfield, Rollins SID)

Bowling Green women's coach Fran Voll before playing Central Michigan, top team in the Mid-American Conference: "When you play Central Michigan, it's like a fight—you have to answer a lot of bells, and it's usually a 15-rounder." (Voll's team then posted a 78-66 upset win at Central Michigan February 9.) (Steve Barr, Bowling Green SID)

Danan's return

Miko Danan, Yeshiva's outstanding freshman, went to the Israeli Defense Forces (The NCAA News, January 16), but served only three weeks, then was released, conditional on his immediate return should the situation escalate. The team started 8-3 with him (its best start in more than 30 years), lost four straight without him, and has gone 3-1 since his return. Yeshiva has been swamped with requests from television, radio and print media, plus college newspapers from around the country since his return. (Mike Cohen, Yeshiva SID)

Can you top these?

Beloit's Mike Millen has taken 495 shots from three-point range in his career (making 212) vs. only 128 from two-point range. Can any player top that differential? (Paul Erickson, Beloit SID)

Craig Brown, a 6-3 freshman guard from Steelton, Pennsylvania, scored 13 points in one overtime period (the second), to lead Lon Kruger's Florida team past Mississippi, 91-81, February 2. Can anyone top that? (Joel Glass, Florida assistant SID)

1,000-rebound junior

Not many women in Division III reach 1,000 rebounds for an entire career. But Middlebury's 5-11 Caroline Leary, from Kentfield, California, can do it in this, her junior season. With three games left, she has 957 for her career. The division's top rebounder most of the season, she pulled down an amazing 34—one short of the division record—in a loss to Emmanuel February 9 in a four-team tournament game in New London, Connecticut. "It was an unbelievable performance against taller players," said coach Amy Backus. She had 23 more the next day, pushing her average to 20.2. Leary also leads the team in scoring at 18.5. A week earlier she outrebounded the entire Colby team, 27-26, in a losing cause. (Max Petersen, Middlebury SID)

63-point game

Fort Valley State senior Jackie Givens, the national Division II scoring leader, recently pumped in 63 points vs. LeMoyne-Owen, one shy of the division record. In the process, she set division records for field goals made (26) and attempted (45). With her 37.7 average through February 10, it is quite likely she will break the season record of 32.4. She also leads her team in rebounds, assists and steals. (Russell Boone Jr., Fort Valley State SID)

162, then 187

Troy State's men scored a Division II record 162 points vs. Columbus February 15 (162-130), then came back the next night with an all-time, all-divisions NCAA record of 187 points vs. DeVry Institute of Atlanta (187-117). Troy State broke a flock of Division II and all-divisions one- and two-team records in the second game, including 103 points in a half and 44 three-pointers made in 108 attempts by both teams. Cougars on a tear

The Washington State Cougars (not Washington, as we incorrectly stated in The NCAA News February 6) are competing strongly to become the nation's most-improved team.

"We are really excited out here," says Donna Murphy, basketball sports information director. "It's amazing when you realize we had lost our last 18 games of last season coming in. We had not won since December 29, 1989, and finished last season 7-22. We're alive in this crazy (Pacific-10 Conference) title race and (coach) Kelvin Sampson is the top candidate for conference coach of the year. He has added four junior-college transfers and three freshmen and molded them into a team. It is our best season since 1983 when George Raveling was coach and our attendance is best since then. We have not won a conference title since back in 1950 when Jack Friel was coach."

She adds that Sampson is disturbed by the frequent question: "What is wrong with Arizona?" Sampson says, "Nothing at all is wrong with Arizona—the rest of the Pac-10 simply has become a lot better."

Well, Washington State is 15-8 through February 17. That is an improvement of 11 games (nine more wins and 13 fewer losses is 22; divide by two). It is a six-team race led by 19-6 Radford, up 14 games. Both 21-4 Nebraska and 16-7 Butler are up 12½ games, 15-11 North Texas is up 12 and both Washington State and 13-11 Tulane are up 11. Those are the only Division I teams up more than 10.

Quotes of the week

His friends call him "Rise," for his 40-inch vertical leap, but Sean Green's nickname could be a testimony to his perseverance in the face of personal tragedies. So wrote Rick Remsnyder of the Gannett Westchester Newspapers after the Iona senior's mother and aunt died only a few years after his father passed away. Green, 6-5, has risen

NCAA Record

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

John R. Miltner selected as president at Millikin, effective July 1. He is vice-chancellor for university advancement at UC Irvine. Brother Dietrich Reinhart appointed president at St. John's (Minnesota), effective in June. He is dean of the college at St. John's.

DIRECTORS OF ATHLETICS

Patti S. Helton and Roger E. Mast named at Eastern Mennonite, where Helton will continue to serve as chair of the health and physical education department and head women's volleyball coach. Mast has been serving this year as interim AD and boys' soccer coach at Eastern Mennonite High School, and will now take on duties as men's soccer and women's softball coach at the college in addition to serving as codirector. Steve Sloan selected at North Texas. Sloan, who was AD at Alabama from 1987 to 1989, served during the past football season as offensive coordinator at Vanderbilt. The former Alabama quarterback also has been head football coach at Vanderbilt, Texas Tech, Mississippi and Duke.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Ed Carroll appointed assistant AD for financial affairs at UC Irvine. He previously was AD at Cal State Fullerton, where he had been in the post since 1985. While there, he also served in the posts of associate AD for business affairs and acting director of the Titan Athletic Foundation.

COACHES

Baseball assistants—Former National League most valuable player George Foster, the last player in that league to hit 50 home runs in a season, joined the staff at Sacred Heart. Foster, who hit 52 home runs for Cincinnati in 1977, played on the Reds' world-championship teams in 1975 and 1976 and also played for the New York Mets, San Francisco Giants and Chicago White Sox. Rob Powell named at Dowling. He is a former coach at Old Westbury.

Men's basketball—Bill Mulligan resigned at UC Irvine, effective at the end of the season. Mulligan, who is in his 11th season at the school, had a career 160-154 record at UC Irvine following the Anteaters' 25th game this season. He was Pacific Coast Athletic Conference coach of the year in 1986, and two of his teams appeared in the National Invitation Tournament.

Football assistants—Former North Carolina aide Cliff Lewis named inside linebackers coach at Newberry, which also announced the selection of former North Carolina State graduate assistant coach Tim Bennett as wide receivers coach and recruiting coordinator. Two coaches from the club program at Alabama-Birmingham also joined the Newberry staff—Bogie Wood, who will be running backs coach and special teams coordinator, and Larry Crowe, who will serve as offensive line coach. Remaining at Newberry are second-year aides John McLeod, defensive line coach and administrative assistant to the head coach, and Marc Kirkpatrick, defensive backs coach. Frank Sheptock promoted from linebackers coach to defensive coordinator at Wilkes. He was a three-time first-team all-America linebacker at Bloomsburg before joining the Wilkes staff.

In addition, Jeff Conway hired as offensive coordinator at Missouri Western State, where he also will serve as the team's strength and conditioning coach. Conway, a former aide at Lamar who played at Northwest Missouri State, served last season as offensive coordinator at North Shore High School in Houston, Texas. Bob Cope joined the staff at Southern California as defensive backs coach. Cope, a former head coach at Pacific, has been defensive coordinator and defensive line coach at Kansas State for the past two seasons. He also has been on the staffs at Mississippi and Purdue. Rick Lantz named defensive coordinator at Virginia after serving for the past five years as defensive coordinator and linebackers coach at Louisville. Lantz, who also has coached at Navy, replaces Frank Spaziani, who stepped down after nine years on the Virginia staff, including five seasons as defensive coordinator. Spaziani also has been on the Navy staff.

Women's lacrosse—Sally Dreyer promoted from assistant at Drew, where she has been on the staff since 1989. Dreyer also was a standout field hockey and lacrosse player at the school, winning all-

Men's soccer—Doug Orr resigned after four seasons at Hartford to pursue other coaching opportunities. He guided the Hawks to a 38-35-11 mark during his tenure. Mike Mugavero named interim head coach at Stetson, where he is a former assistant. Mugavero replaces Gary McKinley, who resigned after compiling a 56-47-10 mark at the school since 1985. Roger E. Mast appointed at Eastern Mennonite, where he also will serve as codirector of athletics and coach women's softball. Last season, Mast coached the boys' soccer team at Eastern Mennonite High School to a 14-3-2 record.

Women's soccer—Julio Avila selected for the new varsity program at Bentley, where the team will begin play next fall. Avila, who played at Massachusetts, previously was head men's coach at Massachusetts Bay Community College, and he also has coached at the high-school level. Dan Magner named at Wheaton (Massachusetts), where he assisted with the men's team last season. The former Eastern Nazarene team captain, who also has been on the men's staff at Bridgewater State (Massachusetts), replaces Fred Day, who resigned after seven years at Wheaton. Eileen Richart appointed to head the new varsity program at Temple, where she previously coached the school's club team. She also has been a successful coach at Philadelphia's Archbishop Wood High School. Shannon Higgins promoted from assistant at George Washington, where she joined the staff last year after completing a playing career at North Carolina in which her teams did not lose a game in 95 contests. Higgins, who played on four Division I championship teams at her alma mater, was a finalist for the 1989-90 Honda-Broderick Cup, and she won the 1989 Hermann Award as the top woman collegiate soccer player.

Women's softball—Roger E. Mast appointed at Eastern Mennonite, where he also will be codirector of athletics and men's soccer coach.

Men's and women's swimming and diving—Bella Marlow named for the new program at Wheaton (Massachusetts). The former all-America swimmer at Smith has served as an aide at her alma mater, Boston College, Wellesley and, most recently, MIT.

Men's and women's tennis—Scott Wlodychak appointed men's coach and Kevin McGlynn named women's coach at Seton Hall. Both positions previously were held by Sue Patton, who resigned. Wlodychak is a former head men's and women's coach at Maryland, where he also played, and McGlynn coached boys' tennis at Passaic Valley High School in New Jersey after playing at Upsala.

Men's and women's track and field assistant—Brad Fairchild joined the staff at Ferris State, where he was an all-America hurdler last year.

Women's volleyball—Karla Wolters selected at Hope, where she was field hockey coach before that program was discontinued last fall. Wolters, who was Division III women's volleyball coach of the year in 1986 after leading Calvin to a runner-up finish in NCAA play, will step in temporarily for Donna Eaton, who is leaving Hope for an indefinite time to pursue doctoral studies. Wolters, who coached teams at Calvin to a 289-152 record and seven Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association titles, has been a faculty member at Hope since 1987.

Women's volleyball assistant Jenny McDowell elevated from graduate assistant coach to full-time aide at Georgia, where she also led the Lady Bulldogs to Southeastern Conference titles as a player in 1985 and 1986.

STAFF

Development coordinator John A. Zolikoff selected at Grand Valley State, where he will coordinate the fund-raising activities for the Charles H. Irwin Athletic Fund. Zolikoff, who has been in private business for the past 10 years, is a former wrestling coach at Grandville (Michigan) High School.

Promotions director—Elizabeth B. Shumway appointed at Navy, replacing Tom Harp, who is retiring. Shumway previously was corporate director of marketing and a working partner for The Insiders Guide, Inc., which is published in Annapolis, Maryland.

Promotions and marketing director—Joan C. Garr resigned as women's director of promotions and marketing at Minnesota, effective March 1. Garr came to Minnesota in 1989 after serving on the marketing and promotions staffs at Miami (Florida) and Florida.

Strength and conditioning coach Phil Emery named at Navy after serving as assistant coach at Tennessee for the past four years. Emery, who also has served as strength coach at Saginaw Valley State, replaces Joe Moschetti, who resigned.

ASSOCIATIONS

Michael A. Pirollo promoted from assistant to associate executive director of the Peach Bowl, where he has been on the staff for one year.

NOTABLES

DEATHS

Dr. William "Skip" Hughes, a dentist who served as head men's basketball coach at St. Francis (Pennsylvania) from 1945 to 1966, died February 9 in Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania. During his tenure, he coached the Red Flash to a 293-206-1 record and three appearances in the National Invitation Tournament. He played basketball at Pittsburgh in the 1930s.

Eligibility Appeals Concerning Recruiting Violations

DIVISION I

NCAA Rule(s)	Facts	Recruiting Advantage	Result
B 13.1.1.3	Transfer prospective student-athlete (PSA) (ice hockey) had contact with coaching staff prior to being released from institution in which PSA initially enrolled. PSA participated in varsity football and club-level ice hockey at initial institution and wrote several schools about transferring prior to violation. Initial institution later honored release.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.1.4.3-(f), 13.6.1 and 13.12.1	Head coach (women's swimming) coached PSA's club team during open meet in absence of club coach. Head coach had contact with PSA prior to competition and transported PSA from airport to competition site. PSA had signed National Letter of Intent prior to violations.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.02.4.4 and 13.1.3.9.1	PSA (men's lacrosse) had contact with head coach during dead period. PSA had visited campus the previous weekend and stopped on campus for directions to another institution on first day of dead period. Institution does not participate in National Letter of Intent program.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.02.4.4 and 13.1.3.9.1	PSA (men's cross country) had contact with head coach and remained on campus for one day during dead period; PSA was visiting his sister who was enrolled at the institution. Institution does not participate in National Letter of Intent program.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.6.2.2	During official paid visit, PSA (wrestling) was reimbursed for automobile mileage incurred at a rate greater than provided to institution's personnel. Institution required repayment of the difference ($21.34).	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.7.2	PSA (women's basketball) remained on campus more than 48 hours during official paid visit because her flight was delayed. PSA stayed with student host one additional night. Institution requested repayment of cost for extra transportation to airport.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.7.2	PSA (women's basketball) remained on campus more than 48 hours during official paid visit due to canceled flight.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.1.5.2-(b)	Head coach (women's golf) spoke to PSA's mother during summer competition. Prior to violation, coach was unaware that PSA was the woman's daughter.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.7.4	PSA (women's golf) received one night of lodging at head coach's home during official paid visit because PSA had become ill.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.2.1	PSA (men's basketball) received $10 loan from assistant coach. PSA repaid loan the next day.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.02.4.4	PSA (ice hockey) made official paid visit during dead period. Institution apparently was misadvised by conference regarding dead period legislation. Institution learned of violation on second day and ceased PSA's visit. Neither head coach nor assistant coach were on campus during visit. PSA had not committed to a collegiate institution.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.2.1	PSA (men's basketball) received credit from local travel agency for airline ticket; credit was arranged by athletics department with the understanding that PSA would pay cost of ticket with summer earnings. PSA had signed National Letter of Intent prior to violation and repaid cost of ticket.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.1.2.3-(e)	Enrolled SAs (student-athletes) (football) had in-person contact with PSA at his home. SAs showed PSA per-	No.	Eligibility restored.

B 13.12.1	PSA (women's volleyball) practiced with and tried out for team prior to enrollment. PSA was accepted for fall enrollment, but was not able to register for classes due to overenrollment.	No.	Eligibility restored.

Eligibility Appeals (Other Than Those Involving Recruiting Violations)

DIVISION I

NCAA Rule(s)	Facts	Result
B 16.8.1.2	Transfer student-athletes (SA) (women's swimming) received transportation to open meet from volunteer coach during year in residence. Institution withheld SAs from first intercollegiate competition of 1990-91 season.	Eligibility restored. (Season of competition used per B 14.2.4.1.)
B 15.2.5.4	SA (women's cross country) received $200 scholarship award from institutional booster club. SA repaid award.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.1.1, 12.2.1.1, 12.2.3.2 and 12.2.3.2.4	SA (ice hockey) attended two-week training camp, received expenses and participated in four exhibition games with major junior A team in September 1988. SA attended training camp and received expenses from same team in September 1989. SA did not sign contract or player's card and did not receive remuneration.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first four intercollegiate contests of initial semester of collegiate enrollment.
B 15.1	SAs (various sports) received excessive aid from Pell grants and GSIs because they had not been identified by the financial aid office as SAs.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of excessive aid.
B 16.12.2.1	SAs (various sports) received meals at on-campus facility.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of value of meals.
B 12.1.1	Walk-on SA (men's basketball) participated in four contests during two-day summer tournament and received $143 for place finish. SA was not a member of intercollegiate team at time and reported participation when he joined team. Institution withheld SA from one intercollegiate contest.	Eligibility restored upon repayment.
B 16.10.2.7	SAs received local transportation from academic support-staff member to her home on several occasions; some SAs were friends of staff member's sons.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of cost of transportation.
B 16.12.2.1	SAs (football) had papers typed for them by academic support-staff members. SAs had been injured, and staff thought service was permissible.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of value of benefit.
B 16.12.2.2.2	SAs (football, women's basketball) made unauthorized long-distance telephone calls from academic services office. Academic support-staff member became aware of situation but did not require repayment.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of value of calls.
B 14.2.1.4-(c)	SA (women's volleyball) was unable to attend collegiate institution due to participation with USA national team.	Extension granted for period of time equal to the number of days SA was unable to attend collegiate institution to next opportunity to enroll (approximately one year).
B 12.1.1	SA (women's volleyball) received remuneration from United States Volleyball Association that was greater than actual and necessary expenses for practice and competition with national team.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of excessive expense money.
B 16.12.2.1	SA (women's tennis) received transportation from airport to campus from head coach in automobile leased by athletics department.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of cost of transportation.
B 14.3.2.1	SA (men's cross country and track), a partial qualifier, participated in one open track meet during initial year in residence. Institution later received initial eligibility waiver on SA's behalf.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.1.5.2	SA (baseball) participated in 10 contests while enrolled in less than 12 credit hours.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from the first 10 intercollegiate contests of the 1990-91 baseball season.
B 14.5.2	SA (men's golf) participated in three matches while ineligible under satisfactory-progress requirements because credits earned during summer term were later determined to count toward his major.	Eligibility restored. (Season of competition used per Bylaw 14.2.4.1.)
B 14.01.4.3-(h)	SA (men's cross country) participated in road race under friend's name. SA won $75 but did not accept money. Institution withheld SA from one contest.	Eligibility restored.

Athlete who made it big in college doesn't forget his roots

He recently broke Gallaudet University's scoring record in basketball, and he has a season high of 39 points and is averaging 20 per game. He's on the dean's list and a GTE academic all-America. He has won a gold medal in Olympic-style competition, toured with a U.S. national team and probably should have made the Indiana All-Star team.

He goes home to Indianapolis regularly to give pep talks at his alma mater or help out with summer basketball camps.

His high-school coach calls him "one of the most special kids I've ever been around," while his current coach labels him "an outstanding person and student."

Before you get the wrong idea, Brian Bippus isn't perfect. A hearing impairment at birth ensured that. But he's about as close to perfection as any 22-year-old can be, writes Robin Miller of the Indianapolis Star.

"Brian was an inspiration to everyone here and he still comes back teaming him and pushing him around because he was pretty skinny," said Gallaudet coach Jimmy DeStefano.

DeStefano suggested Bippus hit the weights and gain some pounds.

"He spent the past two summers in the weight room, and it helped him fill out nicely," said DeStefano.

"Best of all, he also played in a summer league at Georgetown University and learned a lot playing with Division I competition."

Stephen Howard

pro basketball, a 3.680 grade-point average in math and science indicates a great future. He's been on the dean's list five times, and he's twice been named for a President's Scholar Award.

"Brian will succeed in whatever he chooses to do," said Kovatch. "He always has."

Players preach against drug use

An hour before he was scheduled to take an English midterm, DePaul University junior forward Stephen Howard was standing on a gym floor in sweat clothes and bouncing a basketball.

Even then, the academic all-American was doing education a service.

"Kids in Chicago need positive role models and guidance at an early age," Howard, a Dallas native, said as he waited to talk to more than 100 fifth- and sixth-graders at Disney Magnet School on the North Side of Chicago. "They need to learn there are two sides to the coin so they know the right way to go."

"I love kids. I have fun with them, and that's why I decided to do this. You have to give something back," he told Toni Ginnetti of the Chicago Sun-Times.

Howard had no trouble with the midterm later that morning and had no trouble delivering to his audience the message of his sponsors, Athletes Against Drugs.

"You're here to learn," Howard said. "Education is important because no one can ever take away your mind. Take pride in yourself and what you can be. I take pride that when I play basketball, I have one of the highest grade-point averages of anyone in the country playing. It's also important to take care of your body. Don't take drugs. Be smart enough not to follow people in gangs."

Senior co-captain Melvon Foster asked for a show of hands as he walked among the children sitting on the gym floor.

"How many of you live on the South Side?" asked Foster. "How many of you live on the West Side? When I was growing up on the South Side, the crime rate was very high and the education rate was very low. I hope that's changing, because the most important thing in life now is getting a degree."

"It doesn't matter if you have a nice car and clothes and money. All that can be taken away from you. But what you have up here (in your head) can't be."

It was easy for Foster to talk to the children, some in the same world in which he grew up.

"I have friends who are in gangs and who dealt with drugs, and I saw what it did," he said before addressing the kids. "They were good basketball players, but they couldn't get over the hump of education. They weren't into school. They thought basketball would get them over, but it didn't."

"I had a lot of friends who were older, who would say, 'Melvon, don't do this (gangs).' It was much more important hearing it from them because you'd think, 'Why shouldn't I? You have the money, the cars, the girls.'"

"They would tell me, 'this won't last forever. We could get stopped by the police tomorrow. It will be all gone, and you spend 10 or 12 years in jail.'"

Disney Magnet draws preschoolers to eighth-graders from Rogers Park to Cabrini Green—perspectives as divergent as those of Howard and Foster.

Foster sat out his freshman year because of Proposition 48 (NCAA Bylaw 14.3) requirements, but he is on target to graduate this spring with a degree in communications.

The Disney students listened keenly to both, one of the reasons DePaul has become an important partner for Athletes Against Drugs.

The Blue Demons are the main attraction in the five-year-old organization's new effort with the Chicago Public Schools and Ronald McDonald Charities to reach fourth- through sixth-graders with the message to stay in school, stay healthy and stay away from drugs.

It was Dwayne Tyus, program director and former DePaul assistant coach, who got the college players involved.

Two earlier clinics, one in October featuring junior forward David Booth, and one in November featuring junior guard Joe Daugherty, drew hundreds of youngsters.

The reception was not different at Disney.

"Say this with me," Foster said. "If I can see it in my mind and I believe it in my heart, I can achieve it."

They said it, then applauded.

Filling the pantry for the hungry

The department of athletics at California State University, Bakersfield, recently collected more than 2,000 pounds of canned food for the people of Kern County during a men's basketball game against Cal State San Bernardino.

For each can of food brought to the game, the admission price was reduced $1. Five cans of food earned a free admission.

The food was collected by the Golden Empire Gleaners for the county's hungry residents. The amount of canned goods collected will supply the organization's stockpile until July.

More than 25 percent of Cal State Bakersfield's season-ticket holders brought at least one can of food and received a 32-ounce Pepsi Cola, courtesy of ARA Food Services.

The school is planning to make the drive part of its annual schedule.

Good sports to give halftime pep talks or help at summer camp," said Bob Kovatch, who coached Bippus at Indiana School of the Deaf from 1983-1987. "But he was more than a great basketball player...he was just a special kid."

"To this day wherever I go, people ask about him."

Before Bippus graduated from high school, his number was retired, and he was named to the deaf all-America team.

Bippus put together an outstanding freshman year at Gallaudet, a college for deaf students. But his sophomore season was unusually unproductive for the 6-6 forward.

"The other schools focused on him after his freshman year, double-

Bippus, who competed on a gold-medal winning deaf Olympic team, returned to average 18 points (on 52 percent shooting) his junior year and has been on a tear this season.

"He has outstanding quickness and strength inside," said DeStefano. "Most 6-5 Division III players are not as quick. Brian plays power forward but he also helps bring the ball up to break the press."

When Bippus surpassed 1,700 points against Marymount University (Virginia), the game was stopped, he received a standing ovation and got a bearhug from DeStefano.

"It's been fun coaching him for four years," said DeStefano, "and we'll really miss him."

Heart problem can elude some tests, study says

School physical exams are not always enough to spot cardiac problems that can cause sudden death in high-school and college athletes, a report says.

"These athletes really should be seen by a physician in sports medicine," said Dr. Francis McCaffrey, a cardiologist with The Medical College of Georgia and coauthor of the report.

Physical examinations performed on athletes in the locker-room atmosphere are "perfunctory and potentially dangerous because they may provide a false sense of security," said the report in this month's edition of the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

An estimated 15 to 20 high-school and college athletes die each year from sudden cardiac death, said Dr. Steven Van Camp, vice-president of the American College of Sports Medicine and a cardiologist who was not involved in the new report.

The report is a review of dozens of previous studies on the issue and related health problems, the Associated Press reported.

Previous studies estimate that five in 100,000 young athletes may have any one of several conditions making them vulnerable to sudden cardiac death, the report said. Ten percent of those, or one in 200,000, will die unexpectedly, often during strenuous activities, it said.

The report said cardiac arrest can be caused by a variety of conditions causing abnormalities in the heart and arteries. Only about 25 percent of athletes who died in this way had symptoms suggestive of a cardiac abnormality, and many of those were misdiagnosed, the report said.

"Often the first sign and symptom of cardiac abnormalities in these athletes is sudden death," McCaffrey said.

The study shows that a student-athlete should undergo an individualized, careful assessment of his history of previous injury and his family's history of cardiac problems, said Dr. Lyle Micheli, director of the division of sports medicine at Boston Children's Hospital.

"This review underlines the need for very careful preparticipation examinations, which, unfortunately, student-athletes in this country often don't receive," Micheli said.

"At the professional level, there are lots of doctors and only a few athletes," Van Camp said. "But at the college and high-school level, often there are hundreds of athletes and only a few doctors, with even fewer trained in sports medicine."

"Thorough exams are needed, not just to find the problems that could place the athletes at risk of dying, but also conditions that could be treated."

"The public needs to understand that this is a problem. It's an important issue, although it doesn't happen often, because few of these students are known to have any type of cardiac condition before their deaths."

Eight women's programs join Mid-Continent

Jerry A. Ippoliti, commissioner of the Mid-Continent Conference, has announced that the eight members of the Mid-Continent Conference will incorporate their women's intercollegiate athletics programs into the conference for the 1992-93 school year.

Institutions that will become members are the University of Akron; Cleveland State University; Eastern Illinois University; University of Illinois, Chicago; Northern Illinois University; Valparaiso University; Western Illinois University, and the University of Wisconsin, Green Bay. Each institution has agreed to abide by a set of stringent grant-in-aid and scheduling requirements that will enhance the strength of the conference's program, Ippoliti said.

"With the addition of the eight institutions and their evident commitment to women's athletics, we are confident our women's conference will eventually be recognized as one of the stronger women's leagues in the nation," Ippoliti said.

Women's programs at Akron, Cleveland State, Illinois-Chicago, Northern Illinois, Valparaiso and Wisconsin-Green Bay were members of the North Star Conference.

Western Illinois and Eastern Illinois women's programs have been part of the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Women's sports currently sponsored by North Star that will carry over are basketball, cross country, softball, tennis and volleyball.

William and Mary to cut four sports

About 100 students, coaches and support personnel will be affected when the College of William and Mary cuts its women's basketball, men's wrestling, and men's and women's swimming programs, officials said.

In announcing the cuts February 12, President Paul R. Verkuil said it was necessary to trim the school's varsity sports programs because of budget constraints.

The cuts, which take effect this fall, are expected to save the school about $300,000, the Associated Press reported.

William and Mary, an NCAA Division I school, will be left with 21 varsity sports.

State legislation relating to athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 33 bills from 19 states. The report includes 22 bills that have been introduced and 11 pending bills on which action has been taken since the last report (see the February 6, 1991, issue of The NCAA News). Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of February 8, 1991. Listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

12 players, three coaches named to football hall of fame

Heisman Trophy winners Steve Owens and Pat Sullivan and former NFL stars Fred Biletnikoff, Bobby Bell, Alex Karras and Kenny Easley

were among the 12 players and three coaches elected to the College Football Hall of Fame.

They were joined by Ed Mari-naro, Hub Bechtol, George Savitsky, L. Parker Hall, James Stillwagon and Wayne Meylan and coaches Tommy Prothro, Allyn McKeen and Dave Maurer. They will be inducted December 10 in New York.

Owens was a University of Oklahoma running back from 1967 to 1969, rushing for 100 yards in 17 straight games and winning the Heisman Trophy in 1969. He then played seven seasons for the Detroit Lions.

Sullivan, an Auburn University quarterback from 1969 to 1971, won the Heisman as a senior and played four years for the Atlanta Falcons.

Biletnikoff and Bell are in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Biletnikoff was a wide receiver at Florida State University from 1961 to 1964 and played 14 seasons for the Oakland Raiders. Bell, a tackle at the University of Minnesota from 1960 to 1962, won the Outland Trophy as the nation's top lineman and played 12 seasons as a middle linebacker for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Karras, a University of Iowa tackle from 1955 to 1957, also won the Outland Trophy and played 12 years for the Detroit Lions before becoming a broadcaster and movie actor.

Fasley played safety at the University of California, Los Angeles, from 1977 to 1980 and set the school record for interceptions with 19. He was also a four-time all-pro with the Seattle Seahawks.

Marinano, a Cornell University running back, led the nation in rushing in 1970 and 1971 and finished second to Sullivan in Heisman voting in 1971.

Bechtoll played end at the University of Texas at Austin from 1944 to 1946; Hall was a University of Mississippi halfback from 1936 to 1938; Savitsky was a University of Pennsylvania tackle from 1944 to 1947; Stillwagon played middle guard at Ohio State University from 1968 to 1970, and Meylan was a University of Nebraska, Lincoln, middle guard from 1965 to 1967.

Prothro coached at Oregon State University from 1955 to 1964 and at UCLA from 1965 to 1970. His college record was 104-55-5 before he moved to the NFL Los Angeles Rams and San Diego Chargers.

McKeen coached Memphis State University from 1937 to 1938 and Mississippi State University from 1939 to 1945. He is Mississippi State's most victorious coach with a 65-19-3 mark.

Maurer coached Wittenberg University from 1969 to 1983, running up a 129-23-3 record and leading his team to two NCAA Division III championships.

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Rider College is a private, non-sectarian, comprehensive institution located on a 340-acre campus in suburban Lawrenceville, N.J., 60 miles south of New York City and 30 miles north of Philadelphia. Approximately 4,300 undergraduates and 1,200 graduate students are enrolled in programs offered through the Schools of Business Administration, Liberal Arts and Science, Education and Human Services, and Continuing Studies. Rider is an NCAA Division I institution and is a member of the East Coast Conference. Men's sports include basketball, wrestling, baseball, swimming, tennis, golf, soccer, indoor and outdoor track and cross country. Women athletes compete in basketball, volleyball, field hockey, softball, swimming and tennis.

Rider seeks an Athletics Director to formulate and implement strategies which will strengthen the athletics program and support institutional goals. The Director is responsible for the development of plans and budgets and for compliance with NCAA, conference and institutional rules and regulations. He or she supervises the intercollegiate and intramural programs, the coaching and support staffs of the department and athletic facilities. The Director is expected to participate in fund-raising, public relations and promotional activities relating to the athletics programs, in conjunction with general institutional programs.

Attractive candidates will possess a Masters degree; significant athletic administration and coaching experience, preferably at institutions with programs and missions similar to those at Rider; strong planning and management skills; program budgeting experience; thorough knowledge of NCAA Division I regulations and compliance requirements; excellent speaking and writing abilities; successful fund-raising experience; commitment to the primacy of the academic mission.

Please send a letter of application addressing the above criteria, a current resume and the names and addresses of at least three references to: Miss Karen Schuessler, Assistant to the President, RIDER COLLEGE, 2083 Lawrenceville Road, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

A review of credentials will begin on March 14, 1991 and the search will conclude as soon after that date as an appointment can be made.

The College is firmly committed to the ideals of diversity and encourages qualified women and minorities to apply.

Commissioner for the College Athletic Conference

The College Athletic Conference (CAC) invites nominations and applications for its first Commissioner. The CAC is comprised of very selective Division III schools in the southern United States. Current members include Centre (KY), Fisk (TN), Millsaps (MS), Rhodes (TN), Sewanee (TN), and Trinity (TX). Membership invitation has been extended to Oglethorpe (GA) and Hendrix (AR) pending NCAA and local campus approvals for the 1991-92 and 1992-93 academic years respectively.

The CAC, founded in 1962, has been restructured to include both women's athletics and an expanded membership. The Conference seeks to hire an individual who is committed to the student-athlete concept of academics first in a competitive athletic environment.

As Commissioner, the successful candidate will be the chief administrator of the Conference. Working with the CAC Board of Presidents, the Commissioner will coordinate the athletic schedules of the member institutions; represent the Conference at regional and national athletic functions; promote the Conference in the local and national media; maintain Conference compliance with NCAA regulations; and work with member institutions' athletic directors to promote men's and women's athletic programs.

He or she must have a bachelor's degree (advanced degree preferred) with experience in athletic and business administration and a willingness to relocate if needed. Some travel required. Position could be constructed as full-time or part-time in accordance with the individual's qualifications, time commitment, and availability. The ideal candidate might be an early retiree from an athletic or academic administrative position. He or she might be an experienced coach, faculty member, NCAA faculty representative, or member of the press. Most likely office locations are Atlanta and Nashville. Salary assumes a part-time or full-time start-up commitment in the 25-30K range, although such is negotiable. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply.

Applications and nominations should be forwarded to:

Disney designers create a new Butler Bulldog

When Butler University administrators decided it was time for a new Bulldog mascot, they turned to the people who set the standard for cartoon costumes—Walt Disney Attractions. Disney's involvement was made possible by Tom Elrod, a Butler alumnus and member of the school's board of trustees who is Disney's vice-president of marketing.

The new Bulldog was introduced to fans attending Butler's December 3 home game against the University of Notre Dame, and the pup apparently inherited some of that famous Disney magic. Through February 4, Butler had not lost a home game with the new mascot on hand.

George Washington University officials have scheduled the men's basketball fan appreciation night for February 27, when the Colonials host St. Bonaventure University in an Atlantic 10 Conference game.

And in honor of first-year coach Mike Jarvis, the game also has been designated "Bald Night." "In honor of coach Jarvis, all bald men and women will be admitted free at the door," said an announcement from the school.

"Baldness will be judged at the discretion of the door attendant but will include bald caps, bathing caps, and any artificial or natural condition of hairlessness," it continued. Jarvis made the unique approach to admission quite simple.

"Show some skin," he said, "and you're in!"

North Carolina State University officials announced February 12 a number of projects to aid the families of U.S. armed forces personnel serving in Operation Desert Storm.

Athletics director William T. "Todd" Turner said the first event was held February 13 when 50 children of service men and women in the Persian Gulf from Fort Bragg attended the Wolfpack's home basketball game against Robert Morris College. A dinner/reception preceded the game, and the event was organized by the North Carolina State Captain's Table and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Briefly in the News

Those two groups are planning a jog-a-thon fund-raiser later this year to benefit families whose regular income has been interrupted by military service.

Also, a student-athlete support group has been established for Wolfpack athletes who would like an opportunity to talk about the war and its effects.

Harriett Crannell remembers the early days of women's college basketball. Now associate athletics director at Millikin University, she coached the school's women's hoop team for its first 16 seasons.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the sport at Millikin, and Crannell recently talked about the early days. She remembered the extraordinary contributions of Vickie Thomas, one of the students who pushed for a women's team on campus.

"One of the best things about Vickie was that she had a car, which made transportation easier," Crannell said. "And Pat McCormick (another member of that first team) had a boyfriend who went with us to all the road games. It paid off one time when we had a flat tire and he changed it."

February 12 marked the 20th anniversary of the program's first varsity game, which the team lost by one point to an AAU team from Urbana, Illinois.

Since that time, Millikin teams have won more than 60 percent of their games and made four appearances in the NCAA Division III postseason tournament. Crannell's record through 16 seasons was 180-103 (.636).

Fitchburg State College women's basketball player Lynn Dorow recently became the school's all-time leading scorer and rebounder, surpassing Chris Page in both categories.

And Fitchburg State ice hockey player Steve Sullivan recently became the school's No. 2 all-time scorer and No. 2 in all-time assists—in both cases, surpassing Chris Page.

No, according to Fitchburg State sports information director David Marsh, Chris Page and Chris Page are not the same person. The women's basketball Chris Page played at the school from 1982 through 1986. The ice hockey Chris Page played from 1983 through 1987.

Disney magic apparently was included in the new mascot uniform, since Butler's basketball team won every home game it played through February 4 with the pup on hand

Division I cross country coaches pick academic team

Chris Nelson of Air Force leads the 16-man all-academic cross country team named recently by the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Coaches Association.

Nelson, who carries a 3.960 grade-point average (4.000 scale) as a junior majoring in mathematics at the academy, finished 29th at the Division I Men's Cross Country Championships last November in Knoxville, Tennessee, where he also earned all-America honors.

The highest finisher at that meet to gain all-academic recognition is Sean Dollman of Western Kentucky, a sophomore who finished sixth. Dollman has a 3.300 GPA as a history and government major.

Other cross country all-Americans who also received all-academic honors are Pat Johnson of Washington, a senior aerospace-engineering major with a 3.840 GPA who finished 25th at the meet; David Warders of Kansas State, a senior accounting major with a 3.600 GPA who was 28th, and John Harmeyer of Ball State, a senior accounting major with a 3.250 GPA who finished 33rd.

Also named to the all-academic team were junior Mike Bennett, Oklahoma State, 3.690 GPA in pre-medicine; sophomore Donovan Bergstrom, Wisconsin, 3.430 in psychology; senior Bob Durtschi, Weber State, 3.310 in computer information systems; senior Carl Hanson, Brigham Young, 3.800 in health sciences; sophomore Kevin Hurd, Iowa, 3.320 in business; junior Doug Hobbs, Brigham Young, 3.610 in zoology; senior Jason Lienau, Fresno State, 3.410 in construction management; senior Derek Mitcum, Wyoming, 3.570 in mathematics; junior David Morris, Montana, 3.480 in computer science; senior Derik Vett, Cal State Northridge, 3.510 in graphic design, and sophomore Duane West, Weber State, 3.630 in electrical engineering.

Team members were nominated by coaches in each of the eight NCAA cross country districts and selected by a vote of the Division I coaches association's executive committee. Nominees must have at least a 3.250 GPA and must have placed among the top 15 finishers at NCAA district meets.

Q What does the NCAA Administrative Committee do?

A The Administrative Committee transacts necessary items of Council and Executive Committee business in the interim between meetings of those groups, and subject to their approval. It consists of the five elected NCAA officers (president, secretary-treasurer, and Divisions I, II and III vice-presidents) and the executive director. The Administrative Committee meets or conducts telephone conferences approximately twice each month, and it meets at least once annually with the officers of the Association's Presidents Commission.
