Firm CEO control a must, Knight Commission says

College presidents must take firm control of their athletics programs because they are so ridden with academic and financial irregularities the problem "can no longer be swept under the rug," the 22-member Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics reported

March 19.

"At their worst, big-time college athletics appears to have lost its bearings," the report said.

"We sense that public concern about abuse is growing. The public appears ready to believe that many institutions achieve their athletics goals not through honest effort, but through equivocation; not by hard work and sacrifice, but by hook and crook."

The report, culminating an 18-month study, was discussed at a news conference in Washington, D.C., by former university presidents Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh of the University of Notre Dame and William C. Friday of the University of North Carolina. They cochaired the commission.

"We have to get across to the athletes themselves that only one out of 100 of them is ever going to get into professional sports," Hesburgh said on ABC's "Good Morning America." He said it must be made clear to athletes that "if you don't make progress toward a degree every semester, you're not going to

Plan is approved for distribution of Division II enhancement funds

The NCAA Division II Championships Committee has approved final plans for the distribution of the Division II enhancement funds that were made available as a result of revenues from the Association's 1991 through 1997 CBS television contract.

A total of $1 million will be made available in 1990-91, $2 million in 1991-92 and $3 million in 1992-93 and for each remaining year of the contract. It is estimated that the funds will be distributed to those eligible Division II member institutions in mid-May.

As previously reported, the committee had determined that 50 percent of the funds will be distributed equally among all eligible Division II member institutions and 50 percent will be distributed based on historical participation in the NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

Funds from the equal-distribution pool will be sent to the chief executive officer of each institution. Directors of athletics and senior women administrators will be notified when equal-distribution funds are sent.

The basketball funds will be distributed according to the number of units earned by a conference's member institutions over a six-year period. The checks will be sent to the conference commissioners.

Following are some pertinent guidelines that will be followed in the administration of the enhancement fund:

- It should be noted that in order to receive funds from both categories, an institution shall be active and eligible for championship competition and shall have declared to participate in all NCAA championship competition listed on the NCAA-NAIA Joint Declaration Form. The committee may grant exceptions only if extenuating circumstances cause an institution to be unable to comply with the established policy. (As of this publication date, 170 institutions were eligible to receive funds.)

- If an institution reclassifies its membership to Division I or III, its funds shall stay with the conference;

Legislation sought to allow athletes to explore drafts

The NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee has voted to forward to the Association's Council for consideration at its April meeting a recommendation that the Council sponsor legislation to the 1992 Convention that would allow underclassmen to be eligible for professional sports drafts and to negotiate (without the assistance of an agent) a contract without losing remaining collegiate eligibility.

The committee also voted to recommend that such legislation be made effective immediately upon approval by Convention delegates.

Currently, baseball and hockey student-athletes can be drafted by professional teams without their consent, while football and basketball student-athletes must declare themselves eligible and, in the process, forfeit any remaining eligibility in their respective sports.

"If this proposal is placed on the Convention docket by the Council, the membership will recognize what it will do for football and basketball," said NCAA legislative assistant Richard C. Perko. "But it will affect all sports. It allows student-athletes to negotiate with the teams that draft them. Under these circumstances, the student-athlete will not lose eligibility until he signs with the team or an agent or has a tryout."

"The committee views this proposal as 'pro-student-athlete' and believes that if the proposal is supported, it will allow the student-athlete to receive an appraisal of his market value before deciding whether to turn pro or return to college."

In top spot, Sweet still sees herself as team player

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News Staff

Two and a half months ago, Judith M. Sweet was elected president of the NCAA. That should be long enough for her to settle into her new position, except "settle" is probably not the most appropriate word. Her athletics director's chair at the University of California, San Diego, hardly has been warm since January 10, when she became the first woman and the first representative of Division III ever elected to the NCAA's highest office.

"That's easy to answer," Sweet said when asked how the first two months of her term have gone. "It's been very busy in a productive way. It's been exciting to be involved with the continued efforts to make intercollegiate athletics the best that it can be within the positive environment of higher education and to do what's right for our student-athletes.

"My top priority (as president) is to work with the membership to determine what is in the best interest of intercollegiate athletics, higher education and the student-athletes," she continued. "Tied in with that, I hope that, collectively, we can scrutinize what we are currently doing and determine where improvements should be made and then have the courage to make those improvements. My goal is to do the right thing and to do it the right way.

"Quite frankly, I don't think it's my place to determine the goals without input from the other members of the Council, the Executive Committee, the Presidents Commission and the membership. It is my belief that the role of the president is to work with the membership to determine what the appropriate agenda should be. I think the NCAA structure allows for that to happen in a very productive way through Council meetings, through Executive Committee meetings and through the annual Convention, and through constant contact and communication with the membership."

It doesn't take long to find out that Judy Sweet is determined. The competitive part of her was forged at an early age in Wisconsin, when she was limited to community recreation programs to satisfy her thirst for competition. "I was in the pre-Title IX era. Consequently, as a participant, my opportunities were very restricted," she said.

"Community recreation programs were the only outlet for girls and women in Wisconsin who had a desire to participate in competitive athletics prior to the early 1970s. With the enactment of Title IX, some new doors opened. My timing was not very good for being a trained competitive athlete, but my timing has been very good for having some meaningful administrative opportunities."

Sweet graduated from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, with a degree in education. Her first teaching position was at Tulane University, where she taught a variety of sports activities and started the first competitive basketball team for women. "We only played in one tournament," she said, "But prior to that, there had been no intercollegiate competitive opportunities for young women on that campus. It was a start."

After Tulane, she went to the University of Arizona, where she did graduate work, taught and was involved in the administration of the Women's Athletic Association. From or if it was an independent, then its credits are applied to the appropriate pool.

- An independent institution will retain all of its units that it previously earned when it joins a conference but will share with the conference the units it earns while a member of the conference.

- No conference will lose all of its units in the basketball pool if it is represented in the tournament by an institution that later is declared ineligible, whereby the number of units would be reduced to one. However, if more than one institution represented the conference, the ineligible institution's units would be vacated.

- If a conference disbands, the member institutions will retain their basketball pool shares.

Following is an estimate of the amount of funds that will be distributed to the Division II membership next May:

(Note: The final amounts to be distributed may vary because some institutions that now are ineligible may become eligible before the distribution of funds.)

Baseball coaches select five for hall of fame

Five coaches have been selected by the American Baseball Coaches Association for induction into the association's hall of fame.

The five inductees are Duane Banks, University of Iowa; Bob Bennett, California State University, Fresno; Cliff Gustafson, University of Texas at Austin; Tom Noland, Lincoln Park (Michigan) High School, and Russ Tiedemann, University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh.

The five coaches will be inducted at the Hall of Fame-Coach of the Year banquet, January 4, 1992, in Dallas.

The ABCA also will present its Meritorious Service award to Frank Torre and Robert E. Smith. Torre, a former major-league star, has been supportive of amateur baseball for many years, while Smith is the president of the International Baseball Association.

Banks is Iowa's all-time winningest coach with more than 600 victories and career victories of more than 700 in 22 seasons. Bennett has won more than 850 games and 12 league championships in his 22 seasons at Fresno State. Gustafson entered the 1991 season as the second winningest active NCAA Division I coach with 1,154 victories at Texas, where he has guided the Longhorns to two national championships.

Noland, the first high-school coaching member of the ABCA, has compiled more than 600 victories in high school and 1,000-plus victories in summer competition. Tiedemann recorded more than 500 victories, including an NCAA Division III championship in 1985, in his 20 seasons at Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

a recommendation. "The committee felt that there were ample means for evaluation in game and practice situations without further interrupting academic life," Perko said. "There also was a general concern that if the committee permitted tryouts, several teams in a league would try out the student-athlete, which would further disrupt academic life."

The committee also met with representatives of Major League Baseball and the National Basketball Association to discuss proposed rules changes. The committee had met with the National Football League the previous week.

In other action, the committee will recommend to NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz that the Exceptional Student-Athlete Disability Insurance program (ESDI) be expanded to include baseball and hockey. The ESDI allows prospective first-round draft selections in the NBA draft and first- and second-round selections in the NFL draft to obtain disability insurance with the NCAA guaranteeing the payments.

Also, the committee voted to seek from the NCAA Executive Committee funding to produce a professional sports guide for student-athletes, similar to the publication "A Career in Professional Sports—Guidelines that Make Dollars and Sense" that formerly was published by the NCAA.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q Many of the lowest-priced airline tickets available today require purchasers to pay a significant penalty when forced to make changes in their travel plans. How does this requirement affect the Association's annual expenditures for travel?

A Due to the significant number of changes made in travel itineraries by student-athletes, coaches and committee members, Worldtek—the NCAA's official travel agency—has been instructed generally not to issue penalty-fare airline tickets. Centralizing the Association's air transportation through Worldtek has allowed unpublished discounts on coach fares to be obtained from many airlines. By issuing discounted coach-fare tickets, the NCAA achieves significant cost savings while still affording travelers flexibility in scheduling.

Legislative Assistance

1991 Column No. 12

Extra benefits—in-room, pay-per-view movies

During its January 31, 1991, conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 16.12.2.1 (extra-benefit rule) and 16.7.2 (team entertainment—film before home or away contest) and determined that an institution may provide expenses for student-athletes to watch pay-per-view movies in the student-athletes' hotel rooms in conjunction with the student-athletes' competition. The committee determined that limitations on the number of movies would be determined at the discretion of the member institution. The committee recommended that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee clarify the provisions of Bylaw 16.7.2 to indicate that all such entertainment must be in conjunction with the student-athletes' home or away-from-home contests, and the entertainment is not limited to the night before the institution's contest (e.g., viewing pay-per-view movies may occur the day before a contest or during the day on an extended road trip when the institution has no scheduled competition the following day). Please note that this interpretation is applicable to enrolled student-athletes (as opposed to prospective student-athletes). Thus, it would not be permissible for a member institution to allow a prospective student-athlete during an official paid visit to watch pay-per-view movies in the prospect's hotel room free-of-charge.

Tryouts with professional teams subsequent to enrollment—Bylaw 12.2.1.2

In accordance with Bylaw 12.2.1.2, subsequent to enrollment, a student-athlete shall not try out with a professional athletics team in a sport during any part of the academic year (i.e., from the beginning of the fall term through the completion of the spring term, including any intervening vacation period) while enrolled in a collegiate institution as a regular student in at least a minimum full-time academic load, unless the student has exhausted eligibility in the sport. The student-athlete may try out with a professional organization during the summer or during the academic year while not enrolled as a full-time student, provided the student-athlete does not receive any form of expenses or other compensation from the professional organization. Thus, if a professional football team administers a tryout (e.g., times the individual in the 40-yard dash, administers strength tests) to a student-athlete who has remaining eligibility during the academic year at any site, the student-athlete is no longer eligible for intercollegiate football competition.

Please note that per Bylaw 12.2.1.4, a tryout with a professional team is not considered to have occurred when a representative of a professional team visits a NCAA member institution during the academic year and evaluates a student-athlete while the institution is conducting a regular practice session, physical education class or off-season conditioning program session that includes physical activities (e.g., speed trials, agility tests, strength tests), provided these activities are normally a part of and take place during regular practice, class or conditioning sessions. In this regard, it would be permissible for a member institution to notify a professional organization of the date on which the timing and testing of student-athletes (as part of the regular practice session, physical education/fitness class, or off-season conditioning program session) is to be conducted. It is not permissible for a professional sports organization to assist in the planning or conduct of these sessions; also, a coach may not test only a select group of student-athletes during these sessions. Further, it is not permissible for a member institution to set aside a day prior to the beginning of spring practice to be utilized as a professional timing and testing day, inasmuch as such an arrangement would be contrary to out-of-season practice regulations and would constitute an impermissible tryout for student-athletes who have remaining eligibility. During its February 28, 1991, conference, the Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 12.2.1.2 and determined that medical examinations (e.g., psychological, eye, hearing) conducted by a professional athletics team would constitute a tryout designed in part to measure the athletics ability of a student-athlete and, thus, would jeopardize the eligibility of those student-athletes with remaining eligibility if conducted during the academic year. The committee noted that a member institution is permitted to conduct these examinations in accordance with Bylaw 16.4.1-(g) and could provide the results to the professional sports organization at the institution's discretion.

Correction

Legislative Assistance Column No. 8, which appeared in the February 20, 1991, edition of The NCAA News, indicated that in accordance with 1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 20, it is permissible for enrolled students (but not student-athletes) to make telephone calls pursuant to an institution's regular admissions program directed at all prospective students. Please note that such a restriction is applicable only in NCAA Division I. In Division II, Proposal No. 20 (as amended by Proposal No. 20-1) permits telephone calls to be made by enrolled students (including student-athletes) pursuant to an institution's regular admissions program directed at all prospective students.

Also, Legislative Assistance Column No. 9, published in the February 27, 1991, edition of The NCAA News, sets forth restrictions adopted at the 1991 NCAA Convention governing Division I playing and practice seasons and coaching limitations in team sports. Please note that the column entitled "Volleyball" does not include the correct dates for the start of practice or first date of competition in men's volleyball. In men's volleyball it is not permissible for a member institution to begin practice sessions or conduct its first date of competition prior to September 7.

In addition, the column entitled "Field Hockey—Maximum Number of Contests or Dates of Competition" should indicate that Division I member institutions are limited to 20 dates of competition (as opposed to contests).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to the legislative services department at the NCAA national office.

play. You've got to be serious about that. If you don't make it, you don't play."

Appearing on the same program, Friday said he did not want to be an ungrateful guest but suggested that "commercial television" has had a huge impact on the commercialization of college athletics and said one of the things the commission recommends is that "presidents sit down and look at their relationship with commercial television."

The 47-page report's recommendations are based on the central theme that college presidents must be in firm control of their athletics departments.

"The president cannot be a figurehead whose leadership applies elsewhere in the university but not in the athletics department," the commission said.

The verbatim text of the introduction to the report follows:

Introduction

At their best, which is most of the time, intercollegiate athletics provide millions of people—athletes, undergraduates, alumni and the general public—with great pleasure, the spectacle of extraordinary effort and physical grace, the excitement of an outcome in doubt, and a shared unifying experience. Thousands of men and women in the United States are stronger adults because of the challenges they mastered as young athletes.

But at their worst, big-time college athletics appear to have lost their bearings. With increasing frequency they threaten to overwhelm the universities in whose name they were established and to undermine the integrity of one of our fundamental national institutions: higher education.

The Knight Commission believes that intercollegiate athletics, kept in perspective, are an important part of college life. We are encouraged by the energy of the reform movement now under way. But the clamor for reform and the disturbing signals of government intrusion confirm the need to rethink the management and fundamental premises of intercollegiate athletics.

The commission's bedrock conviction is that university presidents are the key to successful reform. They must be in charge—and be understood to be in charge—on campuses, in conferences and in the decision-making councils of the NCAA.

We propose what we call the "one-plus-three" model, a new structure of reform in which the "one"—presidential control—is directed toward the "three"—academic integrity, financial integrity and independent certification. With such a model in place, higher education can address all of the subordinate difficulties in college sports. Without such a model, athletics reform will continue in fits and starts, its energy squandered on symptoms, the underlying problems ignored.

This is how these recommendations can help change college sport:

Presidential control

1. Trustees will delegate to the president—not reserve for the board or individual members of the board—the administrative authority to govern the athletics program.

2. Presidents will have the same degree of control over athletics that they exercise elsewhere in the university, including the authority to hire, evaluate and terminate athletics directors and coaches and to oversee all financial matters in their athletics departments.

3. The policy role of presidents will be enhanced throughout the decision-making structures of the NCAA.

4. Trustees, alumni and local boosters will defer to presidential control.

Academic integrity

1. Cutting academic corners in order to admit athletes will not be tolerated. Student-athletes will not be admitted unless they are likely, in the judgment of academic officials, to graduate. Junior college transfers will be given no leeway in fulfilling eligibility requirements.

2. "No Pass, No Play" will be the byword of college sports in admissions, academic progress and graduation rates.

3. An athlete's eligibility each year, and each academic term, will be based on continuous progress toward graduation within five years of enrollment.

4. Graduation rates of student-athletes in each sport will be similar to the graduation rates of other students who have spent comparable time as full-time students.

Financial integrity

1. Athletics departments will not operate as independent subsidiaries of the university. All funds raised and spent for athletics will go through the university's central financial controls and will be subject to the same oversight and scrutiny as funds in other departments. Athletics foundations and booster clubs will not be permitted to provide support for athletics programs outside the administration's direct control.

2. Contracts for athletics-related outside income of coaches and administrators, including shoe and equipment contracts, will be negotiated through the university.

3. Institutional funds can be spent on athletics programs. This will affirm the legitimate role of athletics on campus and can relieve some of the pressure on revenue-producing teams to support nonrevenue sports.

Certification

1. Each year, every NCAA institution will undergo a thorough, independent audit of all academic and financial matters related to athletics.

2. Universities will have to withstand the scrutiny of their peers. Each NCAA institution awarding athletics aid will be required to participate in a comprehensive certification program. This program will verify that the athletics department follows institutional goals, that its fiscal controls are sound, and that athletes in each sport resemble the rest of the student body in admissions, academic progress and graduation rates.

The reforms proposed above are designed to strengthen the bonds that connect student, sport and higher learning. Student-athletes should compete successfully in the classroom as well as on the playing field and, insofar as possible, should be indistinguishable from other undergraduates. All athletes—men and women, majority or minority, in revenue-producing and nonrevenue sports—should be treated equitably.

In order to help presidents put the "one-plus-three" model into effect, the commission proposes a statement of principles to be used as the basis for intensive discussion at each institution. Our hope is that this discussion will involve everyone on the campus with major responsibilities for college sports.

These principles support the "one-plus-three" model and can be employed as a starting point on any campus wishing to take the recommendations of this document seriously. We recommend incorporating these principles into the NCAA's certification process and using that process as the foundation of a nationwide effort to advance athletics reform.

Ideally, institutions will agree to schedule only those colleges and universities that have passed all aspects of the certification process. Institutions that refuse to correct deficiencies will find themselves isolated by the vast majority of administrators who support intercollegiate sports as an honorable tradition in college life.

Kansas Senate committee hears testimony on due-process measure

The NCAA membership of seven Kansas schools could be jeopardized if the legislature enacted a law giving them special protection from enforcement procedures, an NCAA official said March 19.

However, Stephen R. Morgan, associate executive director of the NCAA, said he does not believe Executive Director Richard D. Schultz was making a threat in remarks interpreted by some as warning that Kansas schools could be "kicked out" of the NCAA if such a law were passed.

Morgan appeared before the Kansas Senate Judiciary Committee to oppose a bill that would require the NCAA to observe all due-process rights accorded by the United States and Kansas constitutions in enforcing its rules and regulations.

Also testifying against the measure were Prentice Gault, associate commissioner of the Big Eight Conference, and Richard A. Johannmeier, athletics director at Washburn University of Topeka.

They said they believe the NCAA provides an adequate level of due process now, and that changes are coming that will provide even more.

Among those testifying in support of the bill were former University of Kansas track coach Bob Timmons; Don Yeager, author of the book, "Undue Process, the NCAA's Injustice for All," and University of Denver law professor Burton Brody, the Associated Press reported.

They said the NCAA doesn't provide even the most basic rights of due process, such as the right to confront accusers and the right of the accused to be present at hearings, and that reform will only come through pressure applied by such legislation as Kansas and seven other states have passed or are considering.

They also said Kansas is in a unique position to enforce its legislation because the NCAA has its headquarters in Kansas, in suburban Overland Park.

The committee took no action on the bill.

Nebraska, in the most recent attempt to restrict the power of the NCAA, last month passed a bill that would prevent the NCAA from imposing rules limiting financial aid student-athletes can receive from schools in the state.

In the Kansas legislature, Sen. Dick Bond asked Morgan if comments attributed to Schultz in a recent interview should be taken seriously. He was quoted as saying that NCAA schools in the state could have their memberships terminated if legislation such as that under review is passed.

"Would this bill do that?" Bond asked.

"The concern would be if somehow (the legislation) would make it impossible to process infractions cases against Kansas member schools, and that would make them different from other member institutions," Morgan replied.

"Could the Kansas schools be in jeopardy?" Bond also asked.

"It's possible," Morgan said. "But I think that's some ways away."

Asked by Sen. Wint Winter, chair of the committee, if Schultz was threatening the Kansas schools, Morgan replied: "I don't believe it was a threat. But I do understand the need for not having different sets of procedures for different schools."

Workshops scheduled on graduation forms

In an effort to assist NCAA Divisions I and II member institutions with the initial implementation and completion of the Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form (91-6), the Association will conduct workshops from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the conclusion of the 1991 NCAA Regional Seminars—May 3 at the Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas, Texas; May 10 at the San Francisco Hilton on Hilton Square in San Francisco, California, and May 24 at the Sheraton Crystal City Hotel in Arlington, Virginia.

The focus of the workshops will be to provide a working knowledge of both Federal and NCAA reporting requirements, as well as recommendations for completing the Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form to ensure compliance with NCAA Bylaws 13.3, 18.4.2.2(c) and 30.1. The workshops will include discussion of the October 1, 1991, deadline for adherence to the reporting requirements for Division I member institutions and the July 1993 deadline applicable to Division II member institutions. Given the complexity and importance of the information required for completion of the Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form, the attendance of appropriate personnel from Divisions I and II member institutions is encouraged.

The workshops will be intended primarily for Divisions I and II compliance coordinators, faculty athletics representatives, registrars, directors of admissions, institutional research personnel and other administrators who will be involved in the completion of the Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form. There is no registration fee. Participants should bring a copy of the Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form to the workshop. Division I forms will be mailed March 21, and Division II forms will be mailed in late April.

Compliance coordinators are asked to notify the NCAA compliance services department as to the number of institutional representatives who will be attending the workshops.

Two-day NACDA clinic opens March 31

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) will sponsor its annual Facilities and Fund-Raising Clinic March 31 through April 1 in Indianapolis.

NACDA is presenting the clinic for the 25th year. It will be at the Marten House in Indianapolis, and Butler University will serve as host.

"This program will appeal to any institution, large or small, that wishes to build a new athletics facility or renovate an existing facility on its campus," said Butler athletics director John C. Parry, who will serve as chair for the clinic.

The clinic will feature presentations on athletics-facility projects at Butler, the University of Michigan, Ohio Wesleyan University, Wheaton College (Massachusetts), Wake Forest University and the University of Hartford. The architects who designed those facilities and athletics administrators who raised funds for their construction will be on hand to discuss their roles in the projects.

Also, Bob Bronzan, president of APER Consulting Services of Danville, California, will speak on "Strategies and Tactics for Student Funding of Facilities." In addition, exhibitors will be present to provide information.

The clinic begins at 1:30 p.m. March 31 and concludes with a luncheon April 1. Further information and assistance with registration is available by calling Tim Gleason at the NACDA office, telephone 216/892-4000.

Unisex nicknames one way of skirting gender problem

By Daniel P. Starr

The other day, I got to wondering: Why are our men's sports teams at Canisius College nicknamed the Golden Griffins, whereas our women's teams are called the Lady Griffs?

Somehow, about two decades ago, when women's college teams made their rightful and overdue appearance on the national scene, various colleges must have felt compelled to take the nickname used by the men's teams and then prefix that nickname with Lady.

Why not call all of our teams, regardless of gender, just plain Golden Griffins? Who ever saw a male Griffin or, for that matter, a female Griffin? Most female athletes prefer to be known as women athletes, and most female teams are referred to as women's teams.

For instance, the media refer to the female basketball team as the women's basketball team. The NCAA captions female basketball standings as Women's Basketball, not Ladies' Basketball.

And yet, somehow many teams use "Lady" in the team nickname. If we are to be consistent as well as equal, should we not refer to the male teams as the Gentlemen's teams?

To avoid this inconsistency, should we not use the same nickname, with no gender prefix, for both male and female teams? Some colleges now do that. The La Salle University Explorers are the Explorers, whether a male or a female team. And the Siena College Saints are the Saints, not the Men Saints or the Lady Saints or the Gentlemen Saints, but simply Saints; I mean just good ol' Saints.

Daniel P. Starr

That sounds logical and consistent and nice and neat. But, alas, life is never that simple.

Exceptions would have to be made for those institutions that have a nickname specifically masculine. In those instances, the female teams would have to use an entirely different name or would have to use the female designation of the species.

Thus, Oklahoma State University did the sensible thing. The male teams are the Cowboys. The female teams are the Cowgirls. However, the State University of New York, Buffalo, might have ruffled some feathers had it done this. Its nickname for the men's teams is the Bulls. You can't very well call the female teams the cows, as in, "Look at that big cow over there."

The more I looked into this, the more it became apparent that logic and consistency must go out the window, and unpredictability has to be the order of the day.

The teams at Dartmouth College are known as the Big Green. All teams, regardless of sex, are the Big Green. And all Cornell University teams are the Big Red. Consistent, yes, but not terribly colorful. Now Denison University has the Big Red, but that nickname is just for male teams. The females are the Lady Red. Maybe a little more colorful, but not consistent.

The men at Lubbock Christian University are the Chapparrals. Now, if all the world were the same and consistency prevailed, the females would automatically be the Chapparrals. But the females are the Lady Chaps. So why be consistent or logical? It's lots more fun the other way.

Take the popular nickname the Knights. Nova University of Florida has the nickname, the Knights, for both male and female; not Knights for men and Lady Knights for women—just plain old Knights for all athletes. Bellarmine College also uses the nickname Knights, but only for the male teams. The females are the Belles. That's all right. Geneseo State University College has the Knights for males. What about the females? They are neither the Belles nor Knights, but Lady Knights.

Brooklyn College is in Kings County. The men's teams are the Kingsmen. The women are the Kingwomen. That's logical. Now Queens College (New York) is right next door, in Queens County. Are they the Queensmen and the Queenswomen? No, they are the Knights and Lady Knights. This can be confusing.

Then, we have Belhaven College with its Clansmen. No Clanswomen, but rather the Lady Clans. Incidentally, those are not people with the white sheets—clan in this instance refers to Scottish ancestry.

Belmont College uses the Rebels for men's teams.

So do we have Lady Rebels? No, we have the Rebelettes. That probably makes some sense. Then we have the Acadia University Axemen. Acadia is in Nova Scotia—so axes, trees, lumber, axemen—that's all part of the landscape, and that makes some sense. So do we have the Axewomen? No, the female teams are the Axettes. That's right, like the Radio City Rockettes.

And speaking of Canada, we have the University of Calgary Dinosaurs for the men. No Lady Dinosaurs there; too unladylike. Maybe there never were any lady dinosaurs; no wonder the prehistoric age didn't last. So naturally, the female teams are the Dinnies. What?

Yes, the Dinnies.

Augusta College has the Jaguars and the Lady Jags. And Westmoreland County City College has the Lumberjacks and the Lumberjills. That's kind of clever, like Jack and Jill went up the hill to fetch a pail of lumber, or something like that.

Western Texas College has Westners; that's pretty good. The women, however, speaking of male chauvinism, are the Dusters. Does that refer to housework for women? Only in Texas could they get away with that.

Women, minorities hurt the most by limitations on coaching staffs

Donna A. Lopiano, director of women's athletics
University of Texas at Austin

Sidelines (women's athletics publication)

"...many administrators are concerned that the enactment of coaching-staff limits will hurt minority and women coaches the most. Fewer than five percent of all collegiate coaches are minorities, and fewer than 25 percent of all college coaches are women. It is not unreasonable to assume that the 'last hired will be first fired.'

"Smaller coaching staffs will also reduce the number of entry-level positions currently occupied by or available to women and minority coaches or, at the very least, lock in the current low employment of these groups.

"There is a real need for college presidents to take a close look at this problem. The NCAA must give careful consideration to offering legislation next year that would allow these new coaching-staff limits to be exceeded for controlled-salary entry-level positions restricted to women and minorities, or come up with similar affirmative action legislation to assist member institutions in increasing the number of women and minority coaches in collegiate sports."

Charles M. Neinas, executive director
College Football Association

Chicago Tribune

"We should develop a hybrid between club sports (no scholarships and the team raises its own money) and intercollegiate sports.

"This would reduce expenditures yet still provide the athletes the opportunity to compete. Develop more scholarships on a basis of need. Play a more local schedule.

"I'm just trying to develop a realistic approach to the problem (of rising costs in athletics)."

John David Crow, director of athletics
Texas A&M University

CFA Sidelines

"Anytime anything gets as commercialized as college football is today, the image does change. Unfortunately, it's like any walk of life; you hear about the bad things.

"If a team has 95 players participating in its program as scholarship athletes and one of them does something that's against the law, then it's in the headlines. But if one person from that same team does something outstanding academically, or as far as being a citizen is concerned, there's very little publicity that goes along with that."

Editor & Publisher

An editorial

"The survey of the amount of coverage given to women's sports in four major newspapers over a three-month period in contrast to the amount of space given to male sports is extremely interesting, but, if its intent is to convince sports editors to give more space to women's sports, it is doing it the wrong way.

"We don't think there is any plot to downplay women on the sports pages. Sports editors arrange their coverage and prepare their pages catering to what they believe is the widest reader interest. We agree with Dave Smith, executive sports editor of The Dallas Morning News, who said money should be spent to find out what readers want to read. In other words, if the sports editors are wrong, let's find out.

Opinions

"We need better information so we can do a better job of giving women's sports higher visibility," he said.

"Editors must first be shown there is greater reader interest in women's sports than they currently believe."

John Wooden, former head men's basketball coach
University of California, Los Angeles

The Associated Press

"The NCAA has done a fine job (of policing violations), but it has an impossible task. I feel very strongly that any coach found guilty of illegal recruiting, of trying to buy an athlete, should be banned permanently everywhere from college basketball.

"I don't believe in making deals with the coaches and letting them off easy."

Four-game reduction in ice hockey reasonable

By George W. Schubert

Since the 1991 NCAA Convention, there has been much discussion about the reduction of four men's ice hockey contests during the regular season. I support the reduction in the schedule and provide the following rationale for this position:

1. The number of games scheduled should not be determined on an economic basis, but on educational standards. I understand that institutions will be required to change their budgets due to a reduction in contests; but in most, if not in all, cases, student-athletes will miss fewer classes.

With a 34-game schedule, student-athletes will be required to travel less and will have more time for study and other on-campus activities. This need and desire for less travel and more time for nonathletics on-campus involvement has been overwhelmingly supported by student-athletes who participated in the AIR (American Institute for Research) study.

It is true that allowing a 38-game schedule does not require an institution to schedule 38 games.

If institutions are scheduling contests based on economic issues, then institutions are likely to schedule the maximum number of contests allowed.

2. Most Division I ice hockey institutions participate in postseason play. Therefore, the present 38-game schedule is extended to 40 games or more, again affecting student-athletes and faculty.

3. Many, perhaps most, student-athletes find it difficult to study while on trips. Many student-athletes are extremely tired when they return from a road trip. For some ice hockey teams, the weekend series extends for more than three days.

4. It is my belief that a league can adequately and fairly determine a league champion by playing 32 or fewer league games. With a 34-game schedule, we certainly can provide student-athletes with related educational experiences such as the teaching of ethics, sportsmanship, perseverance, communication, cooperation, teamwork.

5. Some people use the argument that student-athletes in other sports spend more time away from campus than do ice hockey players. Therefore, the number of games and the time ice hockey players commit to that sport should not be reduced.

My response to this thesis is that it does not make it right merely because other sports' team members commit more time to their sports than do ice hockey players.

If that were to be used as the rationale, we could compare the 11-game football schedule to a 38-game ice hockey schedule. What is important is that we link the total commitment of a student-athlete to a particular sport and attempt to do that which is ethical and correct.

NCAA can handle its own reform, Mississippi senator says

Editor's Note: Following are excerpts of remarks by Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Mississippi, that were published in the March 5 Congressional Record-Senate.

During the past several months, considerable attention has been focused in the nation's press on various issues related to the proper role of intercollegiate athletics at our colleges and universities.

Critics have suggested that those institutions are incapable, either themselves or in concert through the NCAA, of taking any serious steps to limit alleged exploitation of athletically talented students, to curb abuses involved in the recruiting of those students, to assure that they are properly integrated into university life and provided with a meaningful opportunity to pursue a serious academic program to graduation, and, in general, to bring intercollegiate athletics more closely under institutional control.

Concerns such as these were, in fact, expressed by some of my colleagues in the Congress during development last session of the student right-to-know legislation, pursuant to which institutions awarding athletically related financial aid are required, beginning in 1993, annually to publish graduation rates for the student body, broken down by race and gender, and for student-athletes, broken down by race, sport and gender.

The NCAA leadership expressed its support early for the concept of this legislation and asked for an opportunity to persuade its members to adopt such regulations in early 1991, but the Congress in its wisdom nonetheless went ahead and passed the right-to-know law late in the session.

I think it is important to note that the NCAA at its recent Convention—its very first opportunity to react to final terms of the new slightly better rate than the student body as a whole.

But in truth, the NCAA's actions on graduation-rate disclosure at its recent Convention were of modest significance when compared with the package of reforms that was adopted by its membership in a variety of other areas. These in-they were accomplished as more important still.

In this respect, he is referring to the fact that the reforms were put into place through the leadership and hard work of the NCAA's Presidents Commission—a semiautonomous group of 44 institutional chief executive officers that enjoys substantial power in the NCAA governance structure.

I am told that this was the NCAA Convention "at which the presidents took charge," developing the principles of reform over a period of several months, mandating the NCAA staff and institutional athletics representatives to draft practically based reform legislation consistent with those principles, and then lobbying their chief executive peers throughout the Association either to attend the Convention themselves—more than 230 (did attend)—or cause their institutional votes to be cast in favor of the reform package. The strategy worked, and the reform package was overwhelmingly adopted.

I am further advised, Mr. President, that the Presidents Commission fully intends to press on with the reform effort this coming year, and that it will next be focusing on proposals to tighten admissions and academic-progress standards requisite for intercollegiate athletics participation eligibility.

The issues inherent in these proposals go to the heart of the perception of exploitation of student-athletes and lack of integration of athletes into the mainstream of academic life....

Perhaps the important message here is that the education community and its leadership have taken some important steps in the past few weeks to reevaluate and restructure the role of intercollegiate athletics and are moving forward to analyze and advance additional proposals in the months ahead.

I firmly believe that the university presidents, in close consultation with intercollegiate athletics administrators, are far better suited than the Congress or another governmental instrumentality to deal with these issues and to define a proper model for intercollegiate athletics in the 1990s and the next century. I congratulate the Presidents Commission and the NCAA membership on the substantial progress they have already achieved and wish for them much success in their continuing efforts....

The image that some have formed of the NCAA as a cadre of coaches and athletics administrators either engaged in the creation of incomprehensible rules or seeking new ways to exploit student-athletes is very wrong. In fact, the NCAA is an association of more than 820 four-year educational institutions, the voting power of which rests, and always has rested, in the hands of the institutional chief executives.

In January, those CEOs decided to exercise that voting power as never before, and we may all hope that they continue in their resolve to participate directly in the process of deciding the course of intercollegiate athletics in the years ahead.

"I firmly believe that the university presidents, in close consultation with intercollegiate athletics administrators, are far better suited than the Congress... to deal with these issues and to define a proper model for intercollegiate athletics in the 1990s and the next century."

Sen. Thad Cochran

law—amended its internal regulations to bring them into conformity with the law as passed, and, perhaps of even greater interest, will begin publishing institutional graduation rates for its largest member institutions a full two years before that step is required by the law.

Without question, the NCAA's actions speak of a willingness by its members to bring into the open possible institutional variances in graduation-rate performance, notwithstanding differing institutional admissions practices and notwithstanding the fact that available historical data indicates that athletes graduate at the same rate as or at a cluded placing limits on playing and practice time for student-athletes, eliminating of athletics dormitories, cutting back of training-table meals for athletes, requiring that athletes complete at least half the credits needed for graduation by the end of the third year, cutting the sizes of coaching staffs and the number of permissible scholarships, and placing substantially more stringent limits on recruiting activities.

Richard D. Schultz, the NCAA's executive director, characterized these reforms as important first steps on the road to creating a new model for intercollegiate athletics, but he regards the means by which

Third Black Athletes Forum scheduled April 5-6 at Howard

The third Annual Black Athletes in America Forum will be April 5-6 at Howard University in Washington, D.C.

Panels will be led by Jerry Tarakanian, head basketball coach at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Clarence "Big House" Gaines, head basketball coach at Winston-Salem State University; Charlie Neal of Black Entertainment Television Sports; Bernadette Locke, assistant basketball coach at the University of Kentucky; Lynette Love, Olympic Tai Kwan Do gold medalist; Clifford Adelman of the U.S. Department of Education; Murray Sperber, author of "College Sports Inc."; Bob Moorman, former commissioner of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and Harold Bell of WUST Radio in Washington.

Two panels—Economics and the Black Athlete, and The Role of the Media—will be held April 5 on the West Campus of Howard, in the university's law school.

Four panels—the Future of Black College Sports, Blacks in Nontraditional Sports, Black Leadership in Sport, and The Black Athlete and College—will be held April 6, with those sessions taking place in the ballroom of the Blackburn Center on the main Howard campus.

"We really are pleased to be back at Howard for the second straight year," said forum coproducer Charles S. Farrell, president of Sports Perspectives International, an athletes advocacy organization, and special projects coordinator at Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society. "Howard's commitment to having these issues addressed is very evident."

Farrell said the forum is intended "to extend what can only be considered the limited dialogue concerning the black athlete in America and the myriad problems facing him and her. It is our belief that if we can discuss openly and honestly problems facing the black athlete, with sports being a microcosm of society, we can resolve some of these problems not only as they relate to the black athlete, but to black society in general."

"Ours is a people forum," said forum coproducer Lee A. McElroy, athletics director at California State University, Sacramento. "We try to get people involved at all levels, but we're particularly interested in reaching our youth, convincing them that a good education is going to provide them with more prolonged success than is dribbling a basketball or carrying a football. Education is what it is all about."

The forum is open to the public, free of charge, and a luncheon is included April 6. A question-and-answer period will be held after each segment, and audience participation is encouraged.

Last year, a national initiative to combat racism through sports was announced at the forum. This year, the inaugural SPIRIT Award will be presented. The award will be presented annually to the individual who most exemplifies and demonstrates dedication to the cause of the black athlete in America.

Additional information on the forum is available from Farrell (telephone 617/265-1651) or McElroy (916/278-7547).

uses Artichokes as the nickname for men's and women's teams. Gee, I think some imagination would have led to the Alicechokes. Art, Alice, get it?

St. Louis University men's teams are known as Billikens. So why not Bettetkins for the women, instead of Lady Billikens?

Los Angeles Mission Junior College lists Free Spirit for both male and female. Probably just as well. It would be kind of tough to use Lady Free Spirits or the Free Spirit Women. That's asking for trouble. Women might object, as they may with the Frank Phillips College of Borger, Texas, whose men's teams are the Plainsmen, and whose women's teams are the Prairie Dolls. Why not rename the men's teams the Prairie Dogs?

Earlham College has the Hustlin' Quakers. Isn't that something of an oxymoron since the Quakers are a nice, peaceful people? Earlham uses the same nickname, Hustlin' Quakers, for the females; now, that may raise a few eyebrows.

The famous University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, teams are the Tar Heels. Now why not the Lady Heels, or the High Heels? Sorry, just plain old tar.

North Carolina Wesleyan College uses Battling Bishops for teams for both sexes. In this modern era, that's OK; some women have made it into the hierarchy. St. Joseph's College (Maine) uses Monks and Lady Monks. Were there actually lady monks? I thought there were abbesses, or something like that.

Speaking of clergy, Nyack College has the Fighting Parsons for the males and Lady Parsons for the females. That's OK, too, because we wouldn't want any fighting lady parsons.

Sometimes, colleges learn by experience. Eastern New Mexico University uses Greyhounds and, for a while, used Greyhoundettes for the women. Must have been too clumsy because a few years ago, the nickname for the women was changed to Zia. (You had to ask; I thought everyone knew that Zia is a symbol used by New Mexico in the state flag. And to think that I always thought Zia referred to Khaleda Zia, the head of government in Bangladesh.)

St. John's University (New York) uses Redmen. But not Redwomen. The nickname for the women's team is the Basketball Express. Is the volleyball team known as the St. John's Basketball Express Volleyball team? Kind of catchy.

How about this one for a trivia question. What's the nickname for the University of California, Santa Cruz? Answer: the Slugs. But that's only for the women. The men are the Banana Slugs.

Enough of this eccentric stuff. Let's end by going with the basics as Centenary College does. The male teams are, simply, the Gentlemen. The Centenary Gentlemen. The female teams are the Ladies. The Centenary Ladies.

Life would be so much easier if logic prevailed. But then again, it wouldn't be as much fun.

Basketball centennial patches are available from federation

Patches commemorating the centennial of basketball can be obtained from the National Federation of State High School Associations for players' and officials' uniforms.

The federation is producing the patches on behalf of five organizations that are cooperating in planning the celebration of the centennial during the 1991-92 season—the Basketball Hall of Fame, USA Basketball, National Basketball Association, NCAA and the NFHS.

The rectangular patches, which can be displayed on warm-ups, jackets or player trunks, include the words "Basketball Centennial 1891-1991" and thenumber 100, in which the zeros are formed by old- and current-style basketballs.

Prices for the patches are $2 each for one to 10 patches, $1.50 each for 11 to 20, $1.25 each for 21 to 100 and $1.10 each for 101 or more. Prepayment is required, and Visa or MasterCard will be accepted for orders totalling $15 or more.

Orders should be sent to the National Federation of State High School Associations, 11724 N.W. Plaza Circle, P.O. Box 20626, Kansas City, Missouri 64195; telephone 816/464-5400. Orders received by May 1 will be shipped by July 1; patches ordered by July 1 will be shipped by September 1, and orders received by September 1 will be shipped by November 1. Orders received after October 1 will be shipped as soon as possible.

News Fact File

Fourteen Divisions II and III institutions currently place one women's sport in Division I. Of those, 10 are Division II institutions and four are in Division III. Each district has at least one except Districts 4 and 5; District 2 has the most with five. The sports involved are field hockey, four; softball, three; soccer and tennis, two each, and basketball, gymnastics and volleyball, one each.

there, she went to UC San Diego.

She got in on the ground floor when women's championships were first conducted under the auspices of the NCAA in 1981-82. She was a member of the Division III Steering Committee in 1982 and joined the Council in 1983. She served as Division III vice-president, then as secretary-treasurer.

Her most visible role, however, may have been as chair of the Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues. Her committee accomplished the impossible and came up with an equitable plan to distribute the $1 billion television contract over the next seven years.

"The way that Judy handled herself in potentially adversarial situations, with people who, perhaps, had a vested interest or didn't agree with the direction the committee was taking, was excellent," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said. "She never loses her composure. She always responds in a very positive way. She did a masterful job, because that was a real challenge."

"The schools and the conferences that had the most to lose, like the ACC and the Big Ten, were willing to give up funds so that this plan would work. She was able to get their support; and that was the thing that really led to the success of the committee."

Sweet takes it in stride. "I think I am a good example of being able to advance through the system and being allowed to take on increased responsibility as I became more familiar with the operations of the Association," she said. "Over the last eight years that I have been involved with the Council, I believe I have learned what is important for the effective operations of the Council and what is the best way of working with the Association."

"She's right on target there," Schultz said. "Judy has been involved with the affairs of the Association for a long time. It has been a step-by-step process. She knows the system well. She understands how the Council and the Executive Committee work, and because of the time she has had to really understand how the Association operates, she is very qualified. That process is what makes her good at what she does."

Although it may be a step-by-step process, it is not an automatic one. Sweet had to prove herself every step of the way. "She earned every bit of the recognition and responsibility she has been given," said Albert M. Witte, a professor of law at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and the immediate past president of the NCAA. "I don't know anybody in the Association who earned it more."

"She had to earn it partly because of some concerns over whether a person with her experience would be sensitive to the important concerns of Division I. By that I mean not so much her gender, but the fact that she comes from Division III."

"Those concerns were not from those who work with her; she gained acceptance immediately there. The more people became involved with the quality of her work and her character, the easier it was for her to gain acceptance."

Although she has been busy, Sweet has enjoyed the first two-plus months. "I hope I don't jinx myself, but so far there have been only high points," Sweet said. "I've enjoyed my involvement with meetings on and off campus, and I have been overwhelmed by the support from friends and colleagues."

One of those colleagues, and friends, is Schultz. "I think Judy is a remarkable person," Schultz said. "I have really been impressed with the way she has conducted meetings. I was impressed with that long before she was president of the NCAA."

"She is very highly qualified for the position."

Witte adds, "Judy is very easy to work with. She has a good sense of humor, yet is very serious minded. She knows how to keep a committee focused on its agenda. And she works very hard."

While Sweet admits she probably is getting more notice as the first woman president of the NCAA, her pioneer status for Division III is equally important to her. Yet she downplays her personal significance. "My sincere belief is that the attention should be focused on the NCAA membership for being willing to do something that hasn't been done in the past."

Her background in Division III also has helped her.

"I think it has helped from the standpoint of being able to identify the variety of responsibilities involved with running an intercollegiate athletics program and having direct experience in meeting those responsibilities. I am not as specialized as I might be if I were on a Division I campus."

"I think there are trade-offs in both situations. Yes, I have a small support staff, which means when I am in San Diego, my days are longer. My staff enthusiastically carries more of the workload when I am not in San Diego. That arrangement seems to be working, as it did during the last two years when I was heavily involved as the secretary-treasurer."

"By necessity, I have become better organized than I was before. I have an organizer for my organizer. I have tried not to let increased responsibilities interfere with my role as director of athletics at the University of California, San Diego. It is important to me that everything works well on this campus. I have been fortunate to have the support of my staff and my supervisors. Without that, it would not have made sense, nor been possible, for me to continue my association with the NCAA."

Sweet has made gains for women's intercollegiate athletics that were not even imagined five years ago. Some of it is a natural progression that is a result of actions set in motion long before her election. But there is no denying the visibility factor of having a woman at the head of what was once considered "man's domain"—intercollegiate athletics.

"It is difficult to quantify," she said. "I think it's fair to say that more people are more aware that women's athletics is an important part of the NCAA. From a visibility standpoint, I think it has benefited women. I also think it has been encouraging to young women to know that there might be some opportunities available to them that, as recently as five years ago, none of us could have dreamed about."

"The fact that I happened to be the first was just a matter of timing. I was in the right place at the right time. There are many qualified women, and Division III representatives, who could have been selected. I don't mind the constant reference to being the first, because I think it makes such a positive statement on the changing attitude and new opportunities within the NCAA. That's an important message I would like the public to be aware of."

"I'm not sure that it's possible to generalize and describe what the personality of the NCAA president should be, but, considering the expectations of many people for a high-profile individual, I would have to say I probably don't fit it," she said. "But, continuing that thought, I recognize the importance of that part of my role—to be visible and to help the general population better understand what the NCAA is, how it operates and what its objectives are."

There is no "next highest" office to which Sweet can aspire. So where does she go when her two-year term is up in January 1993? "I wish I knew the answer," she says.

"Two years ago, I would not have predicted that I would be enjoying the opportunities that I am currently. I don't want to second guess what is going to happen in the future. The most important thing for me right now is to focus on the present and to make sure that my two years as NCAA president are productive. I hope to make a difference in the future of intercollegiate athletics and to make it better as a result of my involvement."

"When my term is over, I hope that I will have the opportunity to continue to be involved with the NCAA and to contribute further to intercollegiate athletics and higher education."

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee:
Tentative conference schedule

1. Confirmed the following dates for conducting Interpretations Committee conference calls: February 28 (Thursday), March 19 (Tuesday) and April 4, 1991 (Thursday). Conferences will begin at 9 a.m. Central time.

Permissible expenses

2. Expenses to participate in noncollegiate, open events. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 16.8.1.2 (competition while representing the institution), 16.8.1.3 (expenses to participate in other competition), a previous committee decision (reference: Item No. 1 of the minutes of the committee's July 23, 1987, conference) and a previous staff interpretation (reference: Item No. 1-h of the minutes of the staff's May 19, 1990, meeting) and agreed that a member institution may provide actual and necessary expenses for a student-athlete to compete in noncollegiate open events (i.e., an event that is not limited only to collegiate competitors or does not involve student-athletes scoring points for their respective institutions), provided the student-athlete is representing the institution in the event (e.g., wearing the institution's uniform); expressed concern regarding an institution's payment of expenses to individual student-athletes (as opposed to the institution's team) to compete in open events (e.g., invitational track meets, the U.S. Open Tennis Championship) except as permitted under 16.8.1.3; recommended that the Council consider defining what constitutes representing the institution in intercollegiate competition.

Summer camps/employment

3. Student-athlete receiving compensation for employment at a member institution's or private camp/clinic that includes room, board and meals in transit to the camp. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 13.13.2.1.1-(b) (employment at camp or clinic) and 16.10.2.3 (summer job) and determined the following:

Conference No. 3
February 14, 1991

a. A student-athlete may receive actual travel expenses (including lodging and meals in transit) from an institutional or private camp/clinic as compensation for employment in that camp/clinic, provided such travel expenses are paid for all employees of the camp/clinic.

b. A student-athlete may receive actual and necessary travel expenses from a camp/clinic (institutional or private) prior to the student-athlete's travel to the camp/clinic, provided such expenses are provided to all employees of the camp/clinic (e.g., prepaid plane ticket, cash advance).

c. Camp/clinic administration (institutional or private) may not provide a cash advance to a student-athlete that exceeds the cost of the actual and necessary travel expenses based in any part on the student-athlete's compensation for actual work to be performed at the camp/clinic.

d. Camp/clinic administration (institutional or private) may not provide a credit card to a student-athlete to use to cover the student-athlete's actual and necessary travel expenses to the camp/clinic.

e. Camp/clinic administration (institutional or private) may provide to a student-athlete employed at the camp/clinic actual transportation to the camp/clinic (e.g., transportation from a member institution's coach or representative of the institution's athletics interests), provided travel expenses are paid for all employees of the camp/clinic.

1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 98
4. Preliminary American College Testing (PACT) plus scores. Reviewed 1991 Convention Proposal No. 98 (as amended by 1991 Convention Proposal No. 98-1) and recommended that the Council consider sponsoring legislation to permit a Division I or II member institution to provide an expense-paid visit to a prospective student-athlete who has presented the institution with a score from a PACT test (i.e., PACT plus) taken on a national testing date under national testing conditions.

b. In Division I sports other than football, the limits on the number of coaches who may contact or evaluate prospective student-athletes off campus at any one time shall be determined on a daily basis (i.e., 12:01 a.m. to midnight); thus, any coaching staff member involved in the off-campus recruitment of a prospective student-athlete (including any travel to or from the site of the recruiting activity) during a calendar day shall be charged for the entire day in the institution's limitation on the number of coaches who may recruit off campus at any one time in that sport.

Kemp pushing for more programs similar to NYSP

A Notice of Funding Availability, which frees $7.5 million on a competitive basis for programs similar to the National Youth Sports Program, is expected to be approved in April, according to Jack Kemp, U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Kemp spoke February 28 in Washington, D.C., at a reception in his honor attended by representatives of 150 colleges and universities.

Secretary Kemp told the group he is trying to encourage a spectrum of private interests—including the professional sports leagues (NFL and NBA), boys' and girls' clubs, and others—to make efforts similar to those of the NYSP and to use and institutions of higher education nationwide. In recent years, more than 65,000 economically disadvantaged young people, ages 10 to 16, have participated in NYSP annually at no cost to them.

In addition to providing opportunities for young people to participate in sports, NYSP provides participants with free medical examinations and follow-up, USDA-approved meals, and instruction on education and career opportunities, health and nutrition, teen pregnancy and AIDS. NYSP also has responded to the national problem of drug and alcohol abuse by devoting special efforts to substance-abuse prevention.

A survey conducted by the NCAA last summer found that more than 80 percent of NYSP programs served children from public housing developments and that more than 20,000 participants were public housing residents.

In his introduction of Secretary Kemp, NCAA Secretary-Treasurer B. J. Skelton said that NYSP, which has been "a model of a well-administered, comprehensive, national enrichment program," has a strong working relationship with public housing at the community level and would like to foster a similar relationship at the Federal level.

Capitol Hill visits

As part of an effort to inform Congress about the value and achievements of NYSP, project representatives of the program have been visiting with their senators and representatives to discuss fiscal year 1992 funding for NYSP.

The visits assumed increased importance this year, since the appropriations process will be required to adhere to new rules, as part of the budget agreement reached last fall.

Under the deficit-reduction law passed in the last Congress, increases in all domestic discretionary spending are capped at a level that this year is just short of a four percent inflation adjustment. Increases in domestic discretionary programs cannot be offset by reductions in domestic entitlement, defense or international programs. The result is that it will be difficult to achieve any real program growth this year in the appropriations process, NCAA officials believe.

NYSP workshops

The recent NYSP workshop drew 200 representatives from 150 institutions participating in NYSP, said Edward A. Thiebe, NCAA director of youth programs.

"That's encouraging, because it means that 50 institutions sent an extra representative at their expense," Thiebe said. "It was a well-received triumph."

Among workshop programs was a presentation by Texas Christian University football coach Jim Wacker on using sports as motivation. Continuing its tradition as a partnership program, NYSP delegates heard remarks from representatives of the United States Tennis Association and USA Today. NYSP presented an award to Rawlings Sporting Goods Company in recognition of its support of NYSP.

Other issues addressed during the workshop included information on ways to prevent the formation of youth gangs, the math and science enrichment program, and the student-athlete sports-card trading program.

Thiebe said the NCAA youth programs staff is accepting applications from colleges and universities interested in participating in the 1992 NYSP.

In addition to providing opportunities for young people to participate in sports, NYSP provides participants with free medical examinations, USDA-approved meals, and instruction on education and career opportunities, health and nutrition, teen pregnancy, and AIDS.

sports to provide alternative activities for young people living in public housing developments. The HUD secretary also said he had "high regard for the NYSP and the valuable services it provides to young people."

Men's Sweet 16 field has traditional look about it

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The 1991 Men's Division I basketball Sweet 16 has a rather familiar, traditional look, with Duke and Arkansas from last year's Final Four, and other long-time powers North Carolina, Indiana, Kansas and Ohio State, plus three Cinderella teams.

Having three teams with double-digit seeds (10 or higher) in the Sweet 16 is not unusual. There were three last year—and in 1987, 1986 and 1985. This time the trio is Eastern Michigan (12), Connecticut (11) and Temple (10).

But it is highly unusual for a double-digit seed to reach the Final Four. Of the 20 double-digit seeds that have reached the Sweet 16 during the 12 years of seeding (before 1979, only conferences were

But remember that it was this system of automatic qualification for conference champions that put the NCAA tournament on top to stay over the National Invitation Tournament in the early 1950s.

Outstanding field

The 1991 Sweet 16 certainly is an outstanding one, with many top coaches and traditional powers.

As the chart on this page shows, this field has reached the Sweet Sixteen 151 times, gone to 59 Final Fours, reached the title game 31 times and won 14 championships.

North Carolina leads with 20 Sweet 16 trips, including an incredible 11 in a row (17 came under coach Dean Smith). Duke is going for an amazing fourth straight Final Four appearance. Six are repeaters from 1990, headed by Nevada-Las Vegas under Jerry Tarkanian, a big favorite to become the first repeat qualify.

In the pre-1979, nonseeding era (when only conferences were seeded, as mentioned), the national polls could be used, but we are not going into that here.

First 15-over-2

This tournament featured the first 15-over-2 major upset in history when Dick Tarrant's Richmond team bounced second-seed Syracuse in an East regional first-round game. That means the two teams were at least 48 teams apart.

Tarrant's 13th-seeded 1988 Richmond team, remember, reached the Sweet 16 with back-to-back upsets of Indiana (4) and Georgia Tech (5).

Using the five-place formula, there were six major first-round upsets in this tournament—one less than the record seven in 1989.

But just like 1989, Cinderella died after the first round.

In the 16 second-round games of this tournament, not only were there no major upsets, the highest seeded team won every game. That's right, every single one.

Even the three double-digit seeds in the Sweet 16 beat a lower seed to get there: Eastern Michigan over Penn State was 12-over-13, Connecticut over Xavier (Ohio) was 11-over-14 and Temple over Richmond was 10-over-15.

But let us not forget that the higher seeds were forced into several upsetting St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), then lost. As mentioned, just one double-digit seed has reached the Final Four (No. 11 Louisiana State in 1986) out of 20 that made the regionals.

In the 12 years, there have been 42 major upsets in the first round, nail-biters and some overtime games.

Before Richmond this year, several No. 14 seeds had prevailed, starting with the 1986 pair of Arkansas-Little Rock and Cleveland State, beating Notre Dame and Indiana, respectively. Cleveland State then went on to the regional, upsetting St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania), then lost. As mentioned, just one double-digit seed has reached the Final Four (No. 11 Louisiana State in 1986) out of 20 that made the regionals.

In the 12 years, there have been 42 major upsets in the first round, seeded—more about that later), only one—Louisiana State (11) in 1986—made the Final Four (where it was handled by eventual champion Louisville, 88-77, in its first game).

Only six of the 20 reached the regional finals, where five lost—St. John's (New York) (10) in 1979, Dayton (10) in 1984, Louisiana State (10) in 1987, and Loyola Marymount (11) and Texas (10) last year.

Thus, Eastern Michigan would become the first 12th seed ever to reach a regional championship game should it upset North Carolina in the semifinal.

The old days

Back in the old days, only conferences were seeded (according to their records in previous NCAA tournaments) and very few conferences held postseason tournaments.

Thus, regular-season conference champions (and postseason winners) knew almost a year in advance exactly where they would be in the bracket and that they would get a first-round bye, putting them in the Sweet 16 without playing a game. Independents had to play in the first round to get to the regional.

A prime example is Oklahoma State, coached by Eddie Sutton, the man chosen to bring back the glory days of the legendary Henry Iba, now 86.

We have read and heard that Oklahoma State is in the Sweet 16 for the first time since 1958 (when Sutton played for Iba).

Not so. Oklahoma State was in the 1965 Sweet 16 under Iba, getting the automatic berth as the Big Eight Conference champion.

In 1958, Oklahoma State had to beat Loyola of New Orleans in the first round to reach the Sweet 16. Why? Because Oklahoma State had dropped out of the Missouri Valley Conference before the 1958 season and would not compete for the Big Eight title until 1959, thus was considered an independent in 1958 and chosen at large. (The field ranged from 22 to 25 teams from 1953 through 1974.)

Another example is Loyola (Illinois), the 1963 NCAA champion. George Ireland's team was 24-2 and ranked fourth in the nation entering the tournament, but as an independent was forced to play in the first round. It played five games en route to the title, while second-place Cincinnati, the Missouri Valley Conference champion, played four.

champion since Indiana in 1976.

Bob Knight, coach of that team and two other champions (1981 and 1987), is on hand. Every team but Eastern Michigan has reached the regionals at least once, most of them often in the 1980s.

Smith's North Carolina teams have not reached the Final Four since winning the championship in 1982, but four times since have advanced to the regional finals—one victory away from the Final Four.

Ohio State, Duke and North Carolina each lost four times in the national finals and Kansas three times, but only Duke has yet to win the championship.

The debate continues as to where to place Nevada-Las Vegas among the top college teams in history, but one thing is certain: A sweep would extend its winning streak to 47—tied for third longest ever.

After the six repeaters from 1990, Indiana, Seton Hall and Arizona all made it in 1989; Kansas and Temple last made it in 1988; St. John's (New York) in 1985; Ohio State and Utah in 1983; Oklahoma State in 1965, and this is Eastern Michigan's first.

Major upset history

First, let us recognize the fact that the top-seeded teams generally dominate the picture.

Since team seeding started in 1979, the 1-2-3 tournament seeds have won nine of the 12 championships. Two titles were won by No. 6 seeds—Kansas in 1988 and North Carolina State in 1983. The major upset champion is Villanova, seeded No. 8 in 1985, when it made its remarkable run to the title, beating seeds numbered, in order, 1-5-2-2-1 its last five games. No other champion has had such a difficult path.

Entering this tournament, the No. 1 seeds (four in each tournament) had a combined winning percentage of .740 (128-45), No. 2 seeds .679, No. 6 seeds .593, No. 3 seeds .574, No. 5 seeds .546 and No. 4 seeds .525. All others had losing marks.

Even so, major upsets provide a lot of fun and excitement. Since the field was increased to 64 teams in 1985, the first- and second-round upsets have increased greatly.

What is a major upset? By our definition, it involves at least five places in seeding, such as 11-over-6, 7-over-2, etc. That means the two teams are at least 16 teams apart in the rankings used for the seeding. Thus, 9-over-8 or 10-over-7 do not

Women's newcomers carrying banner for parity

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

The Sweet Sixteen field for the 10th annual NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship includes a solid representation of the top finishers in the previous nine years of the tournament, but it also could mark a turning of the tide of dominance.

Nine teams are repeaters from 1990, but Connecticut, Lamar and Oklahoma State are making their first-ever appearances in the regionals. Also, a brace of upsets dotted the first and second rounds that Cal State Fullerton, 84-80. Both Texas and Mississippi, which had eight consecutive appearances each, were eliminated in the first round.

In some first-round surprises, Maryland, a 1989 Women's Final Four participant, fell to Holy Cross, 81-74; Rutgers fell to first-time tournament hopeful Toledo, 83-65; 1986 champion Texas was eliminated by first-timer Lamar, 77-63, and No. 2 seed Louisiana State was bombed, 93-73, again by Lamar, on Sunday.

The Southeastern Conference, which has dominated the tournament in victories over the previous nine years of the tourney, has four roads to the Women's Final Four according to seeding, with each team having to meet three No. 1 seeds after facing identical No. 3 seeds following the first and second rounds, for a total of 6. Texas in 1986 had the easiest route, facing the 4-2-4-1 seeds after the first and second rounds.

The No. 1 seeds in 1989 posted a 15-3 record, the best mark ever. The 1983, 1984 and 1990 No. 1 seeds had identical 12-3 records for the second-best mark. The 1990 No. 1 seeds—Stanford (5-0), Louisiana Tech (3-1), Tennessee (2-1) and Washington (2-1)—combined for last year's record.

This illustrates the point that many of the same women's teams are seeded high every year. They are not seeded indiscriminately, however, because their yearly performances have not varied. For example, Virginia in 1986 and Penn State this year (73-71 loser to James Madison as mentioned) are the only No. 1 seeds in tournament history to lose a first-or second-round game and fail to advance.

The lowest seeds to reach the Women's Final Four in tournament history were No. 4 seeds Western Kentucky in 1985 and 1986 and Tennessee in 1986. Even more impressively, at least two No. 1 seeds have made the Women's Final Four every year except 1985, and five Women's Final Fours were represented by only No. 1 and No. 2 seeds (1983, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990). Last year, No. 1 seeds Stanford and Louisiana Tech and No. 2 seeds Auburn and Virginia were in the semifinals.

Teams that have gotten the most No. 1 seeds in the 10 years of seeding are Louisiana Tech with seven, Tennessee with five and Southern California and Texas with four each. Old Dominion, Long Beach State, Georgia and Auburn all have garnered three.

Thirty teams in women's history have won first-or opening-round games in their first appearance in the tournament since 1983 (all first-round winners in 1982 were in their first appearance). Four of those teams—George Washington, Lamar, Southwest Missouri State and Toledo—came in this year's tour-namment. Eight teams did it in 1983, the best performance by first-time tournament teams in the 10-year history of the tourney.

As mentioned, Lamar, seeded No. 10, has a chance to make tournament history in the regional semifinals and finals after knocking off first, No. 7 seed Texas, and then No. 2 seed Louisiana State.

Only seven teams have been seeded lower than No. 3 and advanced to the regional finals (or one win away from the Women's Final Four). Only two of those—Arkansas, a No. 7 seed in 1990, and Penn State, a No. 5 seed in 1983—were seeded below No. 4. That makes Arkansas' 1990 trip the farthest any team seeded below No. 4 has advanced in the first nine years of the tournament.

Lamar could surpass that with a victory in the regional semifinals over No. 3 seed Arkansas. As mentioned, Western Kentucky in both 1985 and 1986 and Tennessee in 1986 made it to the Women's Final Four, and all three teams were seeded No. 4.

Because the women seed only 12 teams in each region, a defeat by a lower seed would be considered an upset only if there are four or more seeds between the two teams.

Arkansas, No. 7 seed last year, first downed No. 2 Georgia and then whipped No. 3 Stephen F. Austin before losing to top-seeded eventual national titlist Stanford. In 1986, No. 8 James Madison handed No. 1 seed Virginia a 71-62 defeat for the widest margin between seeds.

No. 8 seed James Madison continued its upset-minded ways this year by shocking No. 1 seed and top-rated Penn State in the second round. No. 10 seed Vanderbilt, playing under newly-appointed coach Ada Gee, dropped No. 2 seed Purdue, 69-63, also in the second round.

The winner of the East regional will be a first-ever Women's Final Four participant because none of the teams—James Madison, Clemson, Connecticut or North Carolina State—has made the national semifinals.

Also, the Southeastern Conference has had at least one team in the Women's Final Four every year of the championship.

Winning streaks

Long Beach State has the longest current winning streak at 16 games, with Arkansas next at 11.

Basketball notes

could spell more parity in women's basketball.

For the first time in tournament history, the top-ranked team in the polls—Penn State—was upset, 73-71, by James Madison in its first tournament game, and several former championship teams had quick exits. Only one other No. 1 seed in history lost its first tourney game—Virginia in 1986—also to James Madison!

Five of the eight teams that have won championships, along with three of the six second-place teams, are out of the field. Defending champion Stanford stayed in the field with a 91-67 victory over Cal State Fullerton. The only other former titlist still remaining is Tennessee.

Only one college—Tennessee—has made all 10 Sweet Sixteens in history. Louisiana Tech, which had made the first nine in a row, was bounced out in the first round by teams remaining in the field. Unfortunately for the SEC, three of those—Tennessee, Auburn and Vanderbilt—are in the Mideast region, which means only one could advance to the Final Four. The other SEC team, Georgia, is in the West region. The Atlantic Coast Conference is next with three teams—Clemson, North Carolina State and Virginia—remaining.

Women's top seeds dominate

There have been no real surprises in seeding since the women's tournament began in 1982. Since seeding started, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won every championship. Last year, Stanford, the No. 1 seed in the West region, whipped a 9-5-7-2-2 seed combination en route to the title. Only Tennessee in 1987 and Louisiana Tech in 1988 were not seeded No. 1 and went on to the championship.

Louisiana Tech in 1988 and Tennessee in 1987 had the toughest 34 in the second and just a relative handful in the regionals and Final Four, as the list shows. On a percentage basis, there have been more in the second round (18.3 percent of 208 games) than in the first (13.8 percent of 304; deducting the eight first-round games in the 40-team 1979 tournament, when no major upsets were possible because all first-round games involved seeds No. 10 vs. 7 and 9 vs. 8). The list shows the number of games in the first and second rounds each year and includes all major upsets from the first round through the championship game.

Scoring up, but...

So far in this tournament, scoring is up a tiny bit over last year's tournament at the same stage.

The figure for the first 48 games is 146.75 (both teams combined) vs. 146.35 a year ago.

Now the other shoe drops. Last year, regional scoring (12 games) reached 166.2 (highest since tourney expansion started in 1975).

Then, Final Four scoring (three games) hit a blazing 175.67—highest since the all-time-record 184.25 in 1965 and third highest ever behind the 179 in 1964 (those two years produced the first two titles for John Wooden's high-scoring UCLA teams).

That raised last year's final average for all 63 tournament games to 151.5, up over 1990's 150.1 but down a bit from the previous three years back through 1987, first year of the three-point goals universal use.

Introduction of the 45-second clock in all games in 1986 produced a huge jump to 143 from the 127.4 in 1985.

Then, the three-pointer moved it up to 154.56 in 1987, 154.63 in 1988 and 158.13 in 1989.

The all-time tournament high is 172.59 in 1970 (for 29 games).

Close games down

Close games—that is, those decided by three points or less or in overtime—are down from last year's record high.

There have been only eight such games vs. 17 at this point last year, although the current average winning margin is much closer to last year—12.2 now vs. 10.1 in 1990. In several games during this tournament, the teams were two or three points apart in the final minute before free throws increased the winning margin.

The 1990 tournament produced an amazing 24 close games (as defined above).

Conference leaders

Four conferences in this tournament have produced nine teams in the Sweet 16 and have won 26 of the 48 games.

The Big East Conference (9-4 so far) has three teams in the regional field. Two teams each come from the Atlantic Coast Conference (7-4), the Big Ten Conference (6-3) and the Big Eight Conference (4-1). The Big Eight's .800 winning percentage leads this group.

The other seven teams come from seven conferences producing one each. They are the Southwest Athletic Conference (3-1), Western Athletic Conference (3-2), Atlantic 10 Conference (3-2), Pacific-10 Conference (3-3), Mid-American Conference (2-0), Big West Conference (2-1) and Southeastern Conference (2-4).

Four conferences have one victory each—Missouri Valley, Midwestern and Colonial, all 1-1, and the Metropolitan (1-2).

Fifteen other conferences and one independent team finished a combined 0-18.

Maglischo gets swim coaching mark

Ernie Maglischo became the most victorious coach in Division II men's swimming championships history March 16 as he led the Cal State Bakersfield Roadrunners to the school's sixth consecutive NCAA team title. The Roadrunners scored a record 853½ points and defeated runnerup Oakland by more than 200 points. The March 13-16 finals were hosted in Brown Deer, Wisconsin, by Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Maglischo has won 10 Division II championships, including three with Cal State Chico and one with Oakland. Entering the 1991 finals, he was tied with Pete Accardy of Cal State Northridge, which moved to Division I this season. Maglischo was named Division II men's swimming coach of the year.

The Roadrunners won six individual crowns, plus two of the five relays. Oakland won the other three relays and four individual events, including three by Doug Allen, who was named Division II men's swimmer of the year.

Clarion's Dave Hrovat was named Division II men's diving coach of the year, and Mark Hairston of Oakland, who won the one-meter diving competition and placed fifth in the three-meter diving event, was named Division II men's diver of the year.

Peter Kladiva of Cal State Bakersfield won the 50- and 100-yard freestyle races, and though neither was in meet-record time, he now owns records in both events. He broke Hilton Woods' record in the 50-yard freestyle trials and did the same to Eric McIlquham's mark in the 100-yard freestyle trials.

Richie Orr of Oakland also was involved in two record-setting performances. He broke Brady Stauffer's 100-yard backstroke record in the trials and was part of Oakland's winning 200-yard medley relay. It was the third year in a row that Oakland's relay team set a record.

Brady Stauffer of Shippensburg won the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events, the latter in record-setting time. He broke his own two-year-old mark. Stauffer defended individual championships in both events.

James Hassett of Cal State Bakersfield won the 200- and 500-yard freestyles. Kristian Bruggert of Cal State Bakersfield defended his crown in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Andrew Bures of Cal State Bakersfield, who made a splash in his first season last year by winning four events, did not win any of the four this year, but he did get three second-place finishes. He placed seventh in the 500-yard freestyle and claimed second in the 1,650-yard freestyle, the 200-yard butterfly and the 400-yard individual medley.

World's best are set to swim at I men's championships

Many of the finest men's swimmers in the world will compete in the 1991 NCAA Division I men's swimming and diving championships.

Take a look at a list of some former (and, probably, future) Olympians who will be swimming in the meet. Anthony Nesty, a 100-meter butterfly gold medalist from Surinam at the 1988 Olympics, currently swims for Florida. Artur Wojdat, who won the bronze medal while swimming the 400-meter freestyle for Poland, swims for Iowa. Sergio Lopez, who won a bronze medal in the 200-meter breaststroke for Spain, swims for American.

What about Americans? Arizona State's Troy Dalbey and Texas' Shaun Jordan were members of the gold-medal-winning 800- and 400-meter freestyle relay teams, respectively. Southern California's Dave Wharton won a silver medal in the 400-meter individual medley (IM). Mike Barrowman, who swims for Michigan, finished fourth in the 200-meter breaststroke and since has broken the world record three times.

While the meet will have a vast array of individual talent, the team competition shapes up as a three-team race. Three-time defending champion, Texas; Stanford, which won the previous three titles before the Longhorns, and perennial challenger Southern California all appear ready to stake their claims on the championships trophy.

Texas is the favorite among the three, if you listen to Southern California coach Peter Daland. "Texas has a one out of two chance of winning," he said. "Stanford and we are about one out of four."

For Texas to come through, coach Eddie Reese must get good point

production out of the freestyle sprints, the relays and the diving pool. Jordan may be most famous for swimming most of the anchor leg of a 400-meter relay in a meet as a freshman without the benefit of a suit. (The pool announcer noted, "Now swimming in the white suit for Texas...") But Jordan and Doug Dickinson should garner a lot of points in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles and the 100-yard butterfly for the Longhorns.

Reese is counting on Adam Worth in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles and the 200-yard IM. Ethan Saulnier (500- and 1,650-yard freestyles), Matt Stahlman (200- and 400-yard IMs) and Jeff Thibault (100- and 200-yard backstrokes) all have provided Reese with good thoughts going into the meet. "I also have about eight other guys who have done a great job and should swim well," Reese noted.

Jason Rhodes and Brandon Gardner are Longhorns who should score big points in diving. Rhodes scored in the top eight in all three events last year and Gardner scored 10 points in his freshman year. Reese is looking for more production from each.

"The key to depth is scoring points. It doesn't do you any good to have a lot of swimmers if they don't score points," Reese said in downplaying the favorite's role. "I don't believe that there ever will be a time when a team goes in as a hands-down favorite. We're one of the top three."

Southern California has been at or near the top of the polls all season, but a fourth-place finish at the Pacific-10 Conference meet brought speculation about the Trojans' vulnerability. Daland has not had a meet this year where his 11 swimmers who have qualified for nationals have all swum. And Daland is not sure that 11 swimmers can score enough points to overtake Texas and Stanford.

"It will be extremely tough for us to win because we have a small team," he said. "We have two swimmers who are injured right now. Both will swim at the nationals, but they may not be 100 percent. Gary Anderson, an all-around performer for us, has a bad back. Greg Larson, our co-captain, was involved in a car accident in which he got banged around. He hurt his whole upper body."

Daland's best is Wharton. Wharton won the 200- and 400-yard individual medleys last year and finished fourth in the 200-yard butterfly. Wharton's six individual championships are best among active swimmers. Eric Ran is back after scoring in the 100-yard freestyle and butterfly events last year for Southern California. Bjorn Zikarsky finished fifth and seventh, respectively in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles last year.

Brian Early is the only Trojan diver to qualify, but Daland expects him to gain points in all three diving events.

Stanford won the men's championship of the Pac-10 for the 10th consecutive year. "We were not real good during the dual meet season so we had to swim fast somewhere along the line," said Stanford coach Skip Kenney. "We couldn't just swim through the conference meet after going 2-6 in dual meets. Now I hope the Pac-10 wasn't the only place where we swim fast."

Jeff Rouse is the Cardinal's big gun. "He won a world championship (in the 100-yard backstroke in Perth, Australia, in January), so you always have to count on him," Kenney said. "We don't know at what level he will be, though." Rouse broke his wrist and was in a cast until (expected March 16).

Stanford also has an impressive freshman class with five swimmers who, using their best times while in high school, would have scored points at the Division I championships last year. Tyler Mayfield, in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes; Derek Weatherford, in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes and the 200- and 400-yard IMs; Ed Parenti, in the 200- and 500-yard freestyles and the 200-yard butterfly; Brian Retterer, in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes and sprint freestyles, and Trip Zedlitz, in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes, the 200-yard IM and the 100-yard butterfly, give Kenney some inexperienced yet solid depth. "They have some growing up to do," Kenney said. "If they can swim confidently like they did at the conference meet, they will be real good."

Still, Kenney doesn't see it as a three-team race. "I haven't seen us in that category all year," he said. "We have struggled with injuries. Normally, you look around and see where you stack up. This year hasn't been one of those years. We have just tried to get better each week."

"We were looking to be fourth through seventh. Now I would like to be somewhere around third. I appreciate those other coaches trying to take the pressure off of themselves. But those two (Texas and Southern California) are clearly the favorites."

Championships Profile

Event: Division I men's swimming and diving.

Fields: The field for the championships will be determined through qualifying standards set by the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee and approved by the Association's Executive Committee.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: Texas earned its third straight title with an 83-point victory over runnerup Southern California. It was the widest margin of victory since 1985 when Stanford scored 101½ more points than runnerup Florida. It was the third time in four years that Southern California has finished second.

Schedule: The meet will be hosted by the University of Texas at Austin, March 28-30.

The NCAA News coverage: Championships results will appear in the April 3 issue of The News.

Contenders: Texas, Southern California and Stanford.

Championships notes: Ohio State leads with 11 team championships, followed by Michigan with 10 and Southern California with nine. However, it has been 14 years since any of the three has won. Southern California last won in 1977, its fourth championship in a row. Ohio State last won in 1962, one year after Michigan's last crown. Michigan's 10 titles do not include the seven unofficial championships won between 1924 and 1936, when no team points were officially given. The Wolverines won the last three years before team points were awarded and then won the first five years of official team competition.... Ohio State and Michigan are tied, not only with the most individual swimming titles, but the most individual titles won in any sport, with 116. Oklahoma State is next on the list with 109 wrestling titles.

Oakland women defend title, prove 1990 was no fluke

Oakland women swimmers proved 1990 was no fluke by scoring a record 566½ points and winning their second straight Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 13-16 in Brown Deer, Wisconsin. The 1991 finals were hosted by Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Oakland won the closest meet in Division II history by four points last year after winning the 400-yard freestyle relay in the last event of the meet. This year, the Pioneers didn't wait until the last event to sew up the championship. They took the lead early and never looked back, ultimately finishing with a 162½-point margin over runner-up Florida Atlantic. It was the widest margin since Cal State Northridge's 166-point victory over Tampa in 1988 and the second largest ever in the meet.

Kirsten Silvester of Northern Michigan dominated the meet on an individual basis, much in the same way as she did last year. She successfully defended all four of her 1990 championships (200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyles and the 200-yard butterfly). She also anchored two winning relay teams, something she did not accomplish last year. Silvester, just a sophomore, is second in all-time individual championships in Division II women's history. Only Ann Wycoff of Army, with nine, has more individual crowns in her career. Silvester once again was named Division II women's swimmer of the year.

Her coach, Anne James, was named Division II women's swimming coach of the year for leading the Wildcats to third place behind Oakland and Florida Atlantic.

Kim Dornburg of Air Force was named Division II women's diver of the year after winning the one-meter title with 368.60 points, .50 better than Stacia Johnson of Navy. In the three-meter finals, Dornburg finished second to Johnson. Navy coach Joe Suriano was named Division II women's diving coach of the year.

The only other multiple winners were Lisa Guilfoyle of Oakland, who won the 50- and 100-yard freestyles, and Noemi Lung of Florida Atlantic, who won the 200- and 400-yard individual medleys. Jennifer Kleeman of Northern Michigan defended her 100-yard backstroke title, and Carolyn Bentley of Cal Poly San Luis Obispo defended her 200-yard breaststroke title.

Led by nine finalists, Hawkeyes capture title

Haven't we been here before?

With nine wrestlers, including two individual champions, carting away all-America honors, Iowa, which last claimed (and hosted) the Division I Wrestling Championships in 1986, stands where it stood five years ago—at the top of collegiate wrestling with plenty of elbow room.

In '86, the Hawkeyes, who won nine straight team titles from 1978 through 1986, ran up a record 158 points—exactly the total coach Dan Gable's squad would have scored this year, had the hosts not lost a team penalty point.

No matter; the host's total of 157 easily outdistanced Oklahoma State (108½), which had won the past two years. Penn State finished third with 67½. Those three teams, each of which had qualified all 10 wrestlers, had secured their places before the finals began. Rounding out the top ten were Ohio State (56¼), Iowa State (51¼), West Virginia (48¼), Purdue (39¼), Minnesota (39), Cal State Bakersfield (38½) and Nebraska (38).

Although the meet was a virtual runaway, Iowa, with six finalists, including representatives in each of the first three weights, could have steamrolled its way to the point record had the Hawkeyes won those lower weights. Instead, the team and the home crowd had to postpone all celebrations until the 134-pound match's conclusion.

At 118 pounds, Penn State's Jeff Prescott, who was named the tournament's outstanding wrestler, opened the finals by dominating the Hawkeyes' Chad Zaputitl, 14-0.

At 126 pounds, Terry Brands of Iowa became the first of two defending champions to lose in this year's finals, as Nebraska's Jason Kelber posted a 10-5 win. Brands refused to shake Kelber's hand after the loss, his first to a collegian this year. The Hawkeyes consequently were penalized what proved to be an infamous team point.

Terry's twin brother, Tom, also a defending national champion, earned Iowa's first individual title with a 5-3 win over Oklahoma State's Alan Fried at 134 pounds.

The Hawkeyes sent another wrestler to the mat at 142 in Troy Steiner, but top-seeded Scott Collins of West Virginia came away with the win, 8-7. The second period ended 6-6, a tie that Collins broke with 40 seconds left in the match with a take-down. Steiner's seventh point came on an escape with one second left. With the win, Collins became the first Mountaineer to win an individual title in NCAA wrestling history.

Perhaps the best match of the finals came at 158 pounds, when Oklahoma State's Pat Smith, the defending champion, edged Iowa's Tom Ryan, 7-6. The match was tied at three at the end of the first period, then at five at the end of the second. Ryan was down to start the final period, escaping immediately to take a one-point lead. With 35 seconds left, Smith scored a double-leg takedown to take the lead, then rode Ryan until the horn. The win eliminated Iowa's chance for setting a new team record.

Pat's championship capped a historic week for the Smiths. His brother, John, a former two-time NCAA champion, was named the winner of the Sullivan Award as the country's top amateur athlete days before the championships.

Iowa got its second, and final, title of the night when Mark Reiland pinned Ohio State's Kevin Randleman at 4:59. No other team had more than one champion.

At heavyweight, top-seeded John Llewellyn of Illinois downed defending champion Kurt Angle of Clarion, 6-3.

In all, seven top seeds won championships. Only two top seeds didn't make the finals. One of those two was four-time Division II champion, 167-pound Dan Russell of Portland State, who placed fourth. Division II wrestlers will not be eligible for the Division I championships next year, a rule that makes Russell the NCAA's last multidivision all-America wrestler.

Not even a major upset keeps Kenyon from eighth crown

In spite of suffering a major upset in the Emory University pool during the March 14-16 Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships, Kenyon's Ladies and coach Jim Steen had little trouble in earning their eighth consecutive team championship.

Kenyon suffered its first loss in the pool in a relay race in six years, when UC San Diego nipped the Ladies by .22 seconds in the 800-yard freestyle relay. (Note: St. Olaf won the 200-yard medley relay last season, but only after Kenyon's team was disqualified.) UC San Diego's Catherine Capriles outspurred her counterpart from Kenyon to touch the wall in 7:41.67.

But the extra four points earned with the relay victory was not nearly enough for the Tritons to overtake the Ladies, who scored 661½ points, the most points in five years. The victory was enough to secure Steen honors as Division III swimming coach of the year.

UC San Diego, which was the runner-up for the fourth consecutive year, scored 466 points—the most ever for the second-place team.

Kenyon's Kateri Mathews was named the Division III swimmer of the year in the meet on the basis of two firsts (100- and 200-yard freestyles) and a second (200-yard individual medley). Mathews also swam legs on all four Kenyon relays that took first place.

Allegheny diver Melissa Moody was named Division III diver of the year. Moody set a meet record in the three-meter diving with 462.70 points, which eclipsed the four-year-old record of Elizabeth Olson of Colorado College by 10.10 points. Moody also finished fifth in the one-meter diving with 337.85, 24.10 behind Patricia Althoff of Williams. Williams placed three divers in the finals in the one-meter event and four in the three-meter finals, which earned coach Mandy Glenner Division III diving coach-of-the-year honors.

Capriles, of UC San Diego, repeated her championships in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events. Lynne Cassidy, Gettysburg, was the only other repeat champion. Cassidy defended her 500-yard freestyle championship.

Kenyon dominated the meet with 11 individual crowns (counting relays) in 20 events.

Pointers defeat rivals for III hockey crown

By Ed Weaver
Special to The NCAA News

A third straight NCAA Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship trophy seemed out of reach for Wisconsin-Stevens Point at mid-season. However, the Pointers returned home from Elmira, New York, with that prize as they defeated rival Mankato State, 6-2, March 16 in the title game.

"Three national championships in a row, it's pretty unbelievable," said Wisconsin-Stevens Point coach Mark Mazzoleni.

All-America Paul Caufield scored his 39th goal of the season for the Pointers, extending both his school single-season record for goals and his career-goals record (98). Five other Pointers scored as Wisconsin-Stevens Point took command midway through the second period and won going away.

This was the first year for a four-team, single-elimination format for the semifinals and championship. Wisconsin-Stevens Point defeated Babson, 5-2, and Mankato State defeated host Elmira, 7-3, to get to the championship game. In the third-place game, Babson defeated Elmira, 3-2.

Mazzoleni noted that in the past three championship seasons, the Pointers have had only minor injuries, and he praised his players' dedication.

"We have never had an injury that took us out," said Mazzoleni. "We have a great strength program. They're strong kids, and they pay the price. They do the weights, the films and their off-season program, which is demanding. It's total dedication."

"We tell them, if you don't pay the price, don't expect to win."

The teams played a tight-checking, defensive first period, which ended scoreless.

At 3:40 of the second period, Mark Strapon stole the puck deep in the Mankato State zone to the right of Mavericks goalie Glen Prodahl. He faked a move to the right, then beat Prodahl to the short side. Wisconsin-Stevens Point goalie Todd Chin gave up a rare rebound less than one minute later, and Mankato State's Rob Thompson made him pay—flipping the puck over Chin's glove to tie the game, 1-1.

seven minutes into the second period, as Marshall's wrist shot put the Pointers ahead. Todd Tretter then rifled a rebound past Prodahl at 10:03 and the Pointers led, 3-1, after two periods.

Despite the fact that the Mavericks are not a high-scoring team, Caufield said, they are a strong third-period team. "But we didn't want to let them do that. We wanted to skate hard, and we knew the goals would come."

Al Bouscher, Caufield and Sean Marsan scored third-period goals for Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

When asked about the possibility of winning a fourth straight NCAA championship next year, Caufield was not ready to think about it. "I want to savor this one. We'll think about next season in August."

Women win rifle titles

Women dominated individual competition March 15, and West Virginia won its fourth straight team title March 16 at the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championships, which were hosted by Army.

For the second time in the past three years, women swept the individual championships. UTEP's Soma Dutta took the smallbore crown with an 1,171 (1,200 is perfect), and West Virginia's Ann Pfiffner claimed the air-rifle title with a 391 (400 is perfect).

And although scores in the individual and team matches were comparable to those fired in past championships, Dutta was the only competitor this year to fire one or more perfect targets (i.e., 100 points scored on the 10-shot targets used in the championships). During the prone portion of the individual smallbore match March 15, she fired four perfect targets—and the resulting score of 400 made the difference as she earned UTEP's first title of any kind in the rifle championships.

Pfiffner's air-rifle crown was the 10th individual title earned by a Mountaineer shooter in the 12-year history of the championships. West Virginia also now owns seven team championships—two more than the other team champions combined.

Mountaineers top all-Americas

1991 NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle team champion West Virginia dominated the smallbore and air-rifle all-America teams announced March 16 by the National Rifle Association.

NRA officials and the all-America selection committee meet annually at the site of the NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships, where all-Americas and other award winners are honored at a dinner following completion of the championships.

Four of the five West Virginia shooters who led the school to its fourth straight NCAA team title—individual air-rifle champion Ann Pfiffner, Gary Hardy, Pamela Stalzer and Garrett Smith—were named to both first teams, and the fifth—Tim Manges—was named to the smallbore first team.

Individual smallbore champion Soma Dutta of UTEP also was named to both first teams, as was James Meger of Air Force. Alaska-Fairbanks, with three shooters named to one of the NRA first teams, was second behind the Mountaineers in the number of first-team honorees.

Following is the complete NRA all-America list.

Pioneers cap first tournament visit with victory

Wisconsin-Platteville lived up to its nickname of Pioneers by capturing the Division III Men's Basketball Championship in its first tournament appearance, defeating Franklin and Marshall, 81-74, March 16 in Springfield, Ohio.

The championship game was a see-saw battle. The turning point came in the second half. With 6:57 remaining, the Pioneers took a 62-55 lead on a three-pointer by Robby Jeter.

"It really helped," coach Bo Ryan said. "We went from a slight let-down to a positive."

Ryan also noted the impressive defensive effort of his team. The Pioneer press helped create 23 turnovers.

I didn't think we would force that many turnovers, he said.

Franklin and Marshall junior cocaptain Chris Finch admitted that the press wore his team down, mentally more than physically.

"The mistakes we made came at bad times," he said. "We didn't attack (the press) as we should have."

Each team had four players in double figures, and both hit more than 50 percent from the field. Senior Shawn Frison led the Pioneers with 20 points. Franklin and Marshall's David Wilding led all scorers with 25 points. He also was the games top rebounder with 11.

The second-place finish was the best ever for Franklin and Marshall. The Diplomats finished third in 1979.

Otterbein defeated Ramapo, 113-84, in the third-place game. Otterbein coach Dick Reynolds, in his 19th season, saw his team earn its best finish in the NCAA tournament since a fourth-place standing in 1981.

Frison of Wisconsin-Platteville was named the tournament's most outstanding player. Teammate Jeter also was an all-tournament team selection. Others included Will Lasky and Wilding of Franklin and Marshall, and James Bradley of Otterbein.

Tommies make most of first finals trip

St. Thomas (Minnesota) won its first Division III Women's Basketball Championship March 16, defeating Muskingum, 73-55.

In five other tournament appearances, the Tommies never advanced beyond the regional rounds. In 1990, they suffered an 81-77 overtime loss to Concordia-Moorhead. Muskingum also reached the semifinals and final for the first time in four tournament appearances.

Sophomore Laurie Trow of St. Thomas (Minnesota) was the top scorer in the game with 33 points. She shot a sizzling 14 of 16 from the floor. Teammate Tonja Englund was another key performer, grabbing 15 rebounds and dishing out seven assists.

Defensively, the Tommies held Muskingum to 28 percent shooting from the field.

PSA signed National Letter of Intent prior to violations.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.1.2.1 and 13.1.2.4-(a)	Faculty member accompanied assistant football coach on recruiting visit to home of PSA.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.2.1, 13.2.2-(h), 13.5.1 and 13.6.1	Immediately prior to enrollment, PSA (ice hockey) received seven days lodging at head coach's home, two nights lodging at an apartment owned by the coach, and occasional meals and local automobile transportation. PSA received round-trip automobile transportation from head coach from campus to coach's boat where PSA signed National Letter of Intent prior to violations.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.02.4.4	PSA (men's basketball) made official paid visit to campus that extended into dead period. PSA's father had rescheduled visit so he could transport PSA to campus. PSA also wanted to attend a class during visit.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.1.1.1, 13.1.5.2-(c) and 13.2.1	PSA (ice hockey) was contacted on several occasions at competition sites. Immediately prior to enrollment, PSA received free ice time at conclusion of head coach's ice hockey camp. PSA did not receive any other scholarship offers.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.12.2.3	During the fall, transfer PSAs (baseball) worked out on occasion at institution's practice facilities; PSAs did not practice with team and were not evaluated by coaching staff. PSAs had signed National Letters of Intent, had been admitted to the institution and began attending classes in January.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.2.1, 13.5.1, 13.6.1 and 13.12.1	Immediately prior to enrollment, head coach (ice hockey) provided transportation to PSA round trip from campus to coach's boat where PSA was entertained. PSA received free ice time at conclusion of coach's ice hockey camp. PSA signed National Letter of Intent prior to violations.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.7.2	PSA's (women's track) official paid visit exceeded 48 hours because of circumstances beyond the control of the PSA and institution.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.1.2.1	Volunteer football coach contacted PSAs at off-campus site.	No.	Eligibility restored.	DIVISION II
B 13.11.1	Student-athlete (SA) commented publicly about PSA's (women's swimming) recruitment to a newspaper reporter.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.02.4.4	PSA (women's basketball) made two-hour unofficial visit to campus during dead period. Institution was not recruiting PSA at time of visit.	No.	Eligibility restored.
B 13.02.4.4	PSA (men's basketball) made official paid visit that extended into part of dead period. PSA had rescheduled visit due to conflict with high-school scrimmage.	No.	Eligibility restored.	B 13.1.5.2	Women's head volleyball coach had contact with PSA's mother during PSA's participation in high-school volleyball tournament. PSA no longer is being recruited by other institutions.	No.	Eligibility restored.
				B 13.2.1, 13.6.1 and 13.7.2	During March 1990, PSA's (women's basketball) official paid visit exceeded 48 hours. Head coach provided lodging in his home after 48-hour period had expired and then transported PSA to site of a high-school basketball tournament, which both had planned to observe. SA reported violation after rules review at team meeting. PSA verbally committed to attend institution prior to violations, and no other institution had offered financial aid.	No.	Eligibility restored.
				B 15.01.5-(a)	Student-athlete (SA) (men's basketball) received scholarship check while enrolled in less than 12 credit hours; institution asked for repayment, which the young man did not make until two years later.		Eligibility restored upon repayment and after SA was withheld from next intercollegiate contest of 1989-90 season.
				B 16.12.2.3-(c)	SAs (football) drove academic-support-staff member's car across campus on 10 occasions to building where staff member had late-night class; SAs did not use car for personal use.		Eligibility restored.
				B 12.1.1-(a)	SA (women's volleyball) won $230 for participation in three-day summer tournament. SA believed she could accept prize money that was less than expenses incurred. Institution required repayment.		Eligibility restored.
				B 14.5.2	SA (men's golf) participated in two matches while ineligible under satisfactory-progress requirements; SA had earned summer credits that were not added to his transcript until after he participated.		Eligibility restored.
				Former Bylaw 5-1-(j). [In 1986, the Eligibility Committee was given the authority to consider on a case-by-case basis instances in which partial qualifiers per B. 5-1-(j)-(2) could return to the institution financial aid received for the 1986-87 academic year to avoid the loss of a season of competition.]	In 1986, SA (men's track) was not informed of his options as a partial qualifier to receive or not receive institutional financial aid during initial year of enrollment. Receipt of aid resulted in three seasons of competition, nonreceipt of aid resulted in four seasons of competition. SA accepted aid during first year of enrollment.		Fourth season of competition granted upon repayment of aid received during 1986-87 academic year.
				B 14.8.5.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in two contests in a non-sanctioned summer league. SA erroneously believed league had been approved but had not sought written approval prior to participation. SA immediately contacted athletics department upon learning of violation. Institution withheld SA from two exhibition contests.		Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first intercollegiate contest of 1990-91 season.
				B 14.6.6	Transfer SA (men's lacrosse) participated in entire season during year in residence. Institution believed SA was immediately eligible because previous institution did not sponsor lacrosse.		Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first 15 contests of 1990-91 season or for the 1991-92 season after being withheld from the entire 1990-91 season.

Lehigh plans non-need grants for wrestlers

Lehigh University will begin offering full grants-in-aid in wrestling that are not granted solely on the basis of demonstrated financial need.

Lehigh trustees approved a change in the university's policy that made grants available only on a need basis, on the condition that funds from the university's general scholarship fund that currently are used for need-based grants be replaced with endowment funds raised specifically for wrestling.

The first two wrestling grants not based on need will be awarded for 1991-92. A maximum of eight such grants was authorized, permitting the wrestling program to recruit two new student-athletes in each of the next four classes without regard to financial need.

"The plan provides for no increase in annual financial aid support for scholar-wrestlers as increases in scholarship endowments are sought," said Peter Likins, Lehigh president. "Guided by NCAA limitations on total scholarship aid to recruited student-athletes in any sport program, increases in endowment support for wrestling will actually free up money that will be used for our general scholarship needs."

School officials said freeing up the general scholarship funds is important because Lehigh has committed itself to meeting full scholarship needs of any qualified freshman admitted to the university.

Officials also said that Lehigh's membership in the Patriot League, which permits only need-limited aid to student-athletes, will not effect the plan because wrestling is not a league sport.

Clemson's Davis proves he's more than a basketball coach

In his three-plus years as head coach of the Clemson University women's basketball program, Jim Davis has given a lot.

He has given plenty to his program, rebuilding the Lady Tigers to three straight NCAA tournament bids and two trips to the Sweet 16.

Off the court, Davis also has been a giver, giving to what he calls his "special friends."

Whitmire, who lives in Hendersonville with his father, a retired junior high principal, attended most of the Lady Tiger home games. His seat was directly behind the Clemson bench, where you would expect a No. 1 fan to sit.

summer, and Tom will be helping us in camps again," Davis said. "Tom is an athlete himself. He won a gold medal in swimming in the National Special Olympics."

Another of Davis' special friends was 30-year-old Dean Hollis, a stu-

"He went to the doctor when he returned home and was diagnosed with acute leukemia.

"He had a bone-marrow transplant, and he and his wife had incurred so many hospital bills. They had a little rental house beside the house they lived in, and they were going to fix it up and try to sell it to cover some of their medical expenses. We went up to Murfreesboro last summer and put vinyl siding on the house to try and increase the value of it."

A lot of people think there's something special about Davis.

Just ask the Lady Tigers.

Then ask those related to his special friends.

SWC teams show championship form

All nine Southwest Athletic Conference men's basketball teams were praised in a recent editorial in The Dallas Morning News for their work with Dallas elementary schools.

Predominantly minority elementary schools were adopted in hopes that many of their at-risk pupils could be saved from falling through the cracks.

The three-point outreach program involves the university administration, team and coaches, and Dallas area alumni from each conference school.

The Three-Point Play, as it is called, was started in November in conjunction with the start of the basketball season. The idea is to emphasize to the youngsters the importance of staying in school and getting an education, as well as giving the youngsters positive role models.

The newspaper editorial said, "The zeal with which the SWC schools have accepted their challenge was demonstrated" when the teams arrived for the postseason tournament.

Teams fanned out across the city to their respective schools. The directors of athletics, coaches and players spent at least two hours stressing the message of achievement through education and shared their experiences about what it took for them to get where they are.

"But, most importantly, their presence demonstrated that they care about these students," the editorial said.

As a result of the program, the editorial stated, "many at-risk youths in our city are on their way to becoming winners."

Kentucky aids Olympic effort

More than 100 University of Kentucky basketball legends gathered in Lexington late last month to pay tribute to Kentucky's past Olympic greats and raise funds for tomorrow's Olympic hopefuls.

The athletes joined more than 1,000 Wildcat fans at the "Legends Luncheon," the second of two university fundraisers geared toward raising money for the United States Olympic movement.

Harvey W. Schiller, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, accepted a check for $50,000, the proceeds from the luncheon.

Including money raised in two Blue-White scrimmages last November, the University of Kentucky Athletic Association's total contribution to the USOC totaled more than $100,000. "It's the single largest donation from one organization," said Schiller.

Schiller suggested that the money would be used in meeting such USOC expenses as travel, equipment and uniforms, or would be applied to the cost of a proposed renovation to the United States Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Nine Kentucky letter-winners who participated in past Olympic games were honored at the luncheon, including the starting five from Kentucky's 1948 NCAA championship team, which was selected to participate as a unit in the Olympics in London that year.

Good sports

"I got to know Tom last summer during our team camp," said Davis.

"Tom worked for us last summer, and he worked like a Trojan. He really was happy because he was a part of something. I've got a strong feeling about the young man."

During the summer, Whitmire and his father live on Hartwell Lake, near Marin Creek Landing.

"They'll move down in the dent assistant coach for Davis at Middle Tennessee State University. Hollis died February 9 after losing a battle with leukemia.

It was a difficult loss for Davis, who did some work last summer for Hollis to help him pay some medical bills.

"Dean was here helping us with basketball camp and had all kinds of physical problems," Davis said.

Eligibility

B 16.02.3 and 16.12.2.1	SA (football) purchased four complimentary admission tickets from assistant coach for less than face value. Coach was unaware that sale of tickets was impermissible. Institution required SA to reimburse face value of tickets to coach.	Eligibility restored.
B 16.5.2, 16.12.2.1 and 16.12.2.2	SA (softball) received automobile transportation on two occasions, one night's lodging and use of telephone from institutional employee.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first intercollegiate contest of 1990-91 season and upon repayment of transportation costs.
B 14.8.5.2	SA (women's basketball) participated in one day of non-sanctioned three-on-three summer tournament. Head basketball coach gave SA permission to participate in tournament.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.3.1.2	SA (men's basketball) received meal from agent. SA repaid cost of meal and did not enter into any agreement with agent regarding current or future representation.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.6.4.1.2 and 14.13.4.3	Transfer SA (men's golf), who was not a qualifier, participated in three contests during the year in residence.	Eligibility restored. (Season of competition used per B 14.2.4.1.)
B 14.6.1.2 and 14.13.4.3	Transfer SA (men's golf), who was not a qualifier, received $1,000 in aid during year in residence. Institution canceled aid and required repayment.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of aid.
B 16.8.1.2	SA (baseball) received travel expenses while ineligible. SA repaid cost of travel.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.8.5.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in sanctioned summer tournament without written permission from institution.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.8.5.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in one contest in sanctioned summer league without written permission.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.6.5.1	Transfer SA (men's track) participated in one contest during year in residence.	Eligibility restored. (Season of competition used per B 14.2.4.1.)
B 14.8.1	SAs (ice hockey) participated in tryouts and competition with national team prior to receiving required NCAA Council waiver. Waiver was retroactively granted.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.2.1, 12.2.3.2, 12.2.3.2.4 and 12.2.5.1	SA (ice hockey) signed an agreement with major junior A ice hockey team in May 1990. SA also attended training camp for more than 48 hours, received expenses and participated in four exhibition games during this period.	Eligibility not restored.
B 16.8.1.2 and 16.8.1.2.1	SA (women's tennis) received travel expenses prior to being certified eligible for travel and competition. SA repaid cost of travel.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.1.1-(a), 12.1.2-(k) and 14.01.2	In August 1990, SA (men's basketball) won $1,000 cash prize in slam-dunk contest. SA was enrolled at institution, but was not a student-athlete. SA subsequently was asked to try out for team and institution advised SA to donate prize to charity, which he did. In fall of 1990, SA received travel expenses prior to restoration of eligibility.	Eligibility restored.
B 16.12.2.1	SA (men's basketball) received local automobile transportation from athletics department employee. SA repaid cost of transportation.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.8.5.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in 10 contests in non-sanctioned summer league.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first five regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests.
B 14.3.2.2.1 and 14.13.4.3	Foreign SA (women's track), a nonqualifier, received one semester of athletically related aid during her initial year in residence. Institution erroneously believed SA met core curriculum requirements. SA repaid aid.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.3.2.1.1 and 14.13.4.3	SA (women's track), a partial qualifier, received athletically related aid during her initial year in residence. Institution erroneously believed ACT score was achieved on non-enhanced version of test. SA repaid aid.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.5.1.2	SA's (women's track) photograph appeared in commercial ads and posters. Caption published with SA's photographs did not contain language agreed to by young woman. Institution requested commercial agency to stop all advertising.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.2.4.2	SA (men's tennis) applied for acceptance in professional team tennis league to participate after SA completed final season of competition. SA was a senior and believed his application would not affect remaining eligibility because structure of league required tennis SAs who were seniors to submit application prior to completion of NCAA tennis competition. Organization returned unopened application at SA's request. Institution withheld SA from one contest.	Eligibility restored.
B 12.1.2-(d) and 12.1.2-(k)	SA (women's gymnastics) participated in gymnastics documentary film while in high school. SA's club team received payment for members' participation in film. SA did not personally receive remuneration and film was not released for distribution.	Eligibility restored.
B 15.1.1-(a)	SA (men's track) was employed during academic year while receiving full grant-in-aid. SA competed in one contest. Institution withheld SA from two contests.	Eligibility restored upon repayment of excess aid.
DIVISION II
B 16.12.2.1	SA (women's gymnastics) received free housing from head coach during summer term. SA reported violation and repaid value of housing.	Eligibility restored.
B 14.1.4.1	SA (women's swimming) participated in seven contests during 1989-90 season while enrolled in intercollegiate's extension program. Enrollment in program did not constitute regular enrollment. SA's official transcript did not indicate courses were part of extension program.	Eligibility restored after SA withheld from first seven regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests of 1990-91 season.
B 14.6.6	Transfer SA (football) participated in four contests during year in residence; SA had not earned associate's degree.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first four regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests of 1991-92 season. (Season of competition used per B 14.2.4.1.)
B 14.8.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in one outside basketball competition in local tournament.	Eligibility restored after SA withheld from next regularly scheduled intercollegiate contest.
DIVISION III
B 16.12.2.1	SA (men's soccer) received free housing for one semester from nonathletics department administrator. Institution required repayment of value of housing.	Eligibility restored upon repayment and after SA is withheld from 10 percent of regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests (two competitions).

Committee fears legislation has created potential for abuses

Members of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism are not sure the Division I members whose votes adopted 1991 Convention Proposal No. 46-3 understood the amendment-to-amendment's effect on legislation intended to assure that an institution meets a minimum financial aid commitment for membership in Division I.

"Members of the committee expressed concern that adoption of Proposal No. 46-3 creates a loophole that could lead to potential abuses of the legislation," said David A. Knopp, NCAA director of compliance services and a staff liaison to the committee. "For that reason, the committee directed that information be published in The NCAA News to make Division I institutions aware of these concerns."

Knopp said members of the committee expressed concern that adoption of Proposal No. 46-3 might dilute the effect of the original legislation, which sought to use only athletics aid as the basis for determining adherence to minimum requirements for Division I membership. Passage of Proposal No. 46-3 amended the legislation so that the determination of adherence to financial aid minimums is to be made on the basis of countable financial aid, which includes all institutional aid (including nonathletically related aid).

"The committee's rationale for suggesting that the amendment dilutes Proposal No. 46 is," Knopp explained, "that under the current definition of countable financial aid, an institution could provide to a student-athlete as little as an athletics grant covering the cost of books, and that student-athlete's entire institutional financial aid package then could be counted toward meeting Division I minimums."

"Institutional grants, government grants institutionally administered and on-campus employment earnings during term time could be counted, among other elements," Knopp said. "Institutions easily could meet financial aid requirements without a significant commitment to the provision of athletics aid."

"Committee members believe a significant financial commitment was intended through the development of Proposal No. 46, and the committee is concerned that, as adopted by the 1991 Convention, the legislation may not accomplish its intended purpose."

Knopp said that during the debate on Proposal No. 46 and its amendments at the 1991 Convention, speakers rising in support of Proposal No. 46-3 spoke of additional administrative burdens that would be encountered in tracking athletics aid when institutions currently are required to monitor countable financial aid on the NCAA Squad List.

"The Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism is interested in making it clear that no such administrative burden would have been created," Knopp said.

"It was the committee's position that the current NCAA Squad List already requires the tracking of both countable and athletics aid. The squad list contains columns for monitoring separately each type of aid and, in most cases, institutions find it much easier to determine and monitor athletics aid because of its simpler definition."

Knopp said committee members are hopeful that their perception regarding Division I members' understanding of Proposal No. 46 as amended is accurate, and that pointing out the potential for abuse will lead to support for changes to be developed for consideration by the 1992 Convention.

"The committee is hopeful that there will be support for its request that the NCAA Council develop a proposal for the 1992 Convention that will, in effect, resubmit 1991 Proposal No. 46-4," he explained. Proposal No. 46-4 was a Council-sponsored amendment-to-amendment that would have clarified the definition of athletics aid for purposes of determining financial commitment for Division I membership as unearned, nonrepayable, athletically related financial aid administered and awarded by the member institution (including the department of athletics), and based on athletics ability.

"What this would do is remove the opportunity for institutions desiring to meet Division I membership requirements to include nonathletically related aid in determining where they stand compared to the minimums," Knopp noted.

The committee's recommendation will be reported to the Council for consideration during its April meeting.

Committee seeks role in adjusting inflationary rate for financial aid

Although members of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism spent a significant portion of their February 25-26 meeting in Key West, Florida, discussing the implications of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 46 (as adopted with amendments by Division I members in Nashville), they also reviewed and took action on several other issues.

Paramount to the committee's discussion of Proposal No. 46, which is intended to assure that an institution meets a minimum financial aid commitment for Division I membership beginning in September 1994, is a concern that the legislation (as amended by Proposal No. 46-3) was diluted and now poses the potential for abuse of its original intent (see story above).

In other action related to Proposal No. 46, the committee voted to request that it be designated by the NCAA Council as the body responsible for determining annually the inflationary figure to be used in adjusting the amounts used in meeting the minimum aggregate financial aid expenditure option of this legislation, which seeks to establish minimum financial aid commitments for Division I membership.

Several other issues, including additional pieces of 1991 Convention legislation, received committee scrutiny and resulted in a number of actions. Among them:

- The committee voted to request that the Council incorporate into the NCAA Manual official definitions of countable financial aid and athletics aid.

- The committee reviewed a draft of legislation developed by the Association's Professional Sports Liaison Committee as a result of the passage of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 68, a resolution directing the two committees to prepare for the 1992 Convention legislation necessary to permit student-athletes to enter a professional draft without immediately foregoing all intercollegiate eligibility in that sport.

The committee voted to forward the draft to the Professional Sports Liaison Committee with requests that:

a. Language be added to require student-athletes who enter a professional draft to declare within 30 financial needs. Proposal No. 88 directed the committee to conduct this study and develop legislation, if appropriate, for the 1992 Convention to provide additional financial aid for such student-athletes.

- After reviewing 1991 Convention Proposal No. 87, which amended NCAA legislation to permit use by student-athletes of a "needy student-athlete fund" to be set up using funds generated by the NCAA's new television contract with CBS, the committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Council or NCAA Executive Committee that legislation or administrative procedures be developed to ensure that student-athletes who do not qualify for Pell grants (e.g., international student-athletes) have access to the funds.

The committee also voted to request that the Council sponsor legislation to the 1992 Convention that would permit member institutions to cancel immediately financial aid awarded to a student-athlete who voluntarily withdraws from a sport prior to the institution's first competition in that sport.

A full report of the committee's actions will be made to the NCAA Council at its April 3-4 meeting.

Binders available

Readers of The NCAA News are reminded that binders, which provide permanent, convenient storage of back issues of the paper, are available from the publishing department.

Each of the rugged, vinyl-covered binders holds 23 issues of the News. They may be purchased for $10 each, or two for $19. Orders should be directed to the circulation office at the NCAA (913/339-1900).

Minimum financial aid commitments for Division I membership is goal of 1991 legislation days of that draft their intent to retain athletics eligibility in that sport.

b. Language be added to permit student-athletes (while enrolled full-time during the academic year) to try out with a professional team one time per year per sport and receive reimbursement for expenses from the professional sports organization as long as the tryout is not conducted during the institution's competitive season in that sport.

- In response to the passage of 1991 Convention Proposal No. 88, the committee voted to direct the national office staff to develop a survey instrument to be used in gathering data regarding Division I student-athletes who receive full grants-in-aid but still have unmet

286 receive grants after aid expires

Grants to 286 student-athletes have been approved in the three years since the inception of a program to provide funds for undergraduates who have exhausted institutional financial aid opportunities, according to information reviewed by the Special NCAA Committee on Grants to Undergraduates during its March 4-5 meeting in San Diego, California. Those 286 recipients represent 106 universities.

The two-day meeting provided updates to the committee for use in determining future grantees. The committee also voted to recommend that the program name be changed to NCAA Degree-Completion Program.

Other business included the suggestion that grantees be required to perform community service weekly. National office staff members present were directed to study the logistics of the suggestion. It also was noted that the grants awarded in 1990-91 totaled nearly $500,000. Committee chair Don A. Aripoli of the University of Arizona suggested that the June 1991 awards total $430,000, leaving approximately $100,000 for the October awards. The committee is able to project $30,000 in refunds of unused funds from the experience of the past three years.

"The work of this committee is going extremely well. The program has been unusually successful in meeting its objective of providing funds to enable student-athletes who had exhausted their opportunities to receive funds to finish their degrees," Aripoli said. "The committee is doing just what it was intended to do, and that is to make sure the funds are available to help take away the financial burden that would prevent student-athletes from otherwise completing their degrees."

In noting the nearly 90 percent success ratio of grantees finishing their degrees, Aripoli said, "We believe the athletes are appreciative of the opportunities this committee has provided, based on their comments to us."

Academic guide available in May

The NCAA Foreign Student Records Consultants met March 9-10 in Carmel, California, to discuss the NCAA Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletics Eligibility. The 1991 edition will be available in May, with the academic standards effective August 1, 1992.

The consultants discussed the fact that the NCAA Executive Committee has approved the distribution of an additional copy of the guide to each institution's international admissions officer.

The consultants approved new academic standards for Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Romania, which will be added to the next edition of the guide. The outlines were revised for Argentina, Australia, Cyprus, Finland, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Morocco, Taiwan, Turkey, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

Additionally, the consultants noted that the proposed revision of the Association's initial-eligibility legislation pursuant to 1991 Convention Proposal No. 58 may require the consultants to revise significant portions of the guide.

Lowell ice hockey is given two-year probation

I. Introduction.

This case was the result of a self-report by the university. In March 1990, the university's president met with the parents of several student-athletes concerning potential violations of NCAA legislation. The president immediately created a committee to examine these matters. Working arduously and conscientiously without constraints, this committee (chaired by the faculty athletics representative) heard testimony from a variety of persons, including students, parents and representatives of the ice hockey program, before submitting its report to the president. On July 24, 1990, the university reported a number of violations of NCAA legislation in its ice hockey program to the NCAA enforcement staff. This report and subsequent investigation by the institution, combined with several interviews conducted by the NCAA enforcement staff, comprised the primary sources of information concerning the case. The enforcement staff issued an official inquiry October 22, 1990, and the university submitted its response to the committee December 4, 1990. A prehearing telephone conference with the university was held January 15, 1991, and a hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions occurred February 1, 1991. The head ice hockey coach also submitted a response to the official inquiry and participated in the committee hearing.

The current structure of the University of Lowell is the result of a recent merger of two colleges into a university. In this merger process, an attenuated and ineffectual athletics-department administration oversaw an intercollegiate athletics program that presently competes in all three NCAA divisions. Most of its teams compete in Division II; its football team competes in Division III, and its ice hockey team competes in Division I. Just as the university had moved to university status through the merger, so the ice hockey team moved from club sport status to Division I. Within a few years, the team was competing in conference postseason play and the Division I Ice Hockey Championship, and had become a major focus of community attention for the institution. In such circumstances, the ice hockey team (the university's premier competitive team) came to operate without administrative supervision prior to the arrival of a new director of athletics in August 1987.

The principal violations in the case stemmed from extra benefits provided enrolled student-athletes by a representative of the university's athletics interests (who also was a business partner of the head ice hockey coach, a part-time member of the university's intramural staff and the operator of a concessions stand at home ice hockey games whose profits went to the ice hockey team booster club). The representative and the head coach owned apartment units, and it was in these apartments (which were operated by the representative) that several members of the ice hockey team resided at rental rates substantially below the going rate in the area. In one instance, a team member stayed rent-free in an apartment for several months.

On one occasion, which over time rose to the level of "team folklore," the coach waved cash in the locker room between periods of an important game, promising the team members money for a party if they won the game. They won, and he gave them the money for the party.

A theme of ignorance of the rules, ignoring the rules, and a disdain for seeking information about the rules by the head coach was evident throughout the findings. The results were numerous violations of NCAA recruiting and extra-benefit legislation. What particularly concerned the committee was the coach's plea of not knowing the recruiting and extra-benefit legislation, even though at one time he was a member of the NCAA Ice Hockey Committee. The coach made himself familiar with the current rules of ice hockey, but not the current rules governing recruiting and extra benefits.

Once the president became aware of potential violations, he moved with dispatch, established a faculty committee to investigate the matters, relied on its thorough investigation that found violations had taken place in the ice hockey program, and reported the findings to the NCAA enforcement staff. A cooperative investigation followed. The head coach was permitted to submit his resignation effective with the end of the 1990-91 season. Throughout this period, through the efforts of the director of athletics and the faculty athletics committee, the president continued to strengthen his control over the program and submitted to the NCAA Committee on Infractions a report on a number of administrative actions he had taken to reinforce institutional control and to provide for an ongoing compliance and rules-education program.

The committee determined that this case involved major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. Because of the findings, the committee normally would be required to impose at least the following penalties, which are among the minimum penalties for a major rules violation: a two-year probationary period; elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits related to the sport for at least one year; elimination of off-campus recruiting for the sport for at least one year; loss of postseason competion and television appearances for at least one year, and possible termination of the employment of staff members involved in the violations. Under the terms of NCAA legislation that established the minimum penalties, however, the Committee on Infractions may impose lesser penalties if it determines that the case is "unique."

Ordinarily, unique circumstances that would justify relief from the Association's mandatory minimum penalties would include such factors as: prompt detection of violations; thorough investigation and reporting of violations to the NCAA; cooperating in the processing of the case, and the institution's initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions (including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that the institution will comply with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance in the future).

A number of factors led the committee to find that this case was unique and to impose penalties that differed from the list of minimum penalties set forth in NCAA legislation. These factors were: a complete self-report of violations based upon information developed by the institution; the prompt, thorough and conscientious investigation by the university's special investigating committee; the changing of university administrative personnel responsible for the violations at the earliest possible moment within the personnel constraints set forth in the merger creating the university; the appointment of a director of athletics with full and unambiguous responsibility for the administration of the intercollegiate athletics program; the establishment of a faculty athletics committee with clear responsibility for advising the president and director of athletics on policy and practice, and the appointment of a faculty athletics representative whose role in the investigation and subsequent matters represents the very best qualities one expects from a faculty representative. The total of these actions by the University of Lowell under the direction of the president impressed the committee as being what the Association means by the principles of cooperation set forth in Bylaw 19.01.2.

Nevertheless, the serious nature of these major violations reported and found required that the penalties be imposed. Therefore, the penalties adopted by the Committee on Infractions as set forth in Part III below include: a two-year period of probation with monitoring reports and a one-year prohibition concerning postseason play in ice hockey. The committee, in recognition of the university's cooperation as set forth above, has not imposed penalties relative to limitations on official visits, off-campus recruiting and athletically related financial aid.

The committee also has required that for the next five years, the head ice hockey coach who was found to have violated the Association's principles of ethical conduct and any NCAA member institution, including the University of Lowell, that might wish to employ him in any athletically related capacity be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions to consider whether that member institution should be required to limit that person's athletically related duties at the institution for a designated period.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by committee.

A. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.1]

During the 1987-88 and 1988-89 academic years, three student-athletes rented off-campus apartments owned by the head ice hockey coach and a representative of the university's athletics interests (and operated by the representative) at rental rates that were substantially below normal rates for comparable apartments; further, one student-athlete received lodging at no cost to him or his family. Specifically:

1. During the 1987-88 academic year, a student-athlete resided in an apartment and paid rent totaling $650 for a nine-month period, which was substantially lower than the prevailing rental rates of $2,100 in the area at that time and lower than the $1,750 figure specified by the terms of the rental agreement. During the 1988-89 academic year, the young man paid a total of $1,694 for a nine-month period, which was substantially lower than the prevailing rental rate of $2,100 in the area at that time and lower than the $1,850 figure specified in the terms of the rental agreement.

2. During the period May through June 1987, with the head coach's assistance and approval, another student-athlete resided in an apartment and was not required to make any rental payment while he attended a university summer session.

3. During a six-week period in the summer of 1987, a third student-athlete resided in an apartment and paid $50, an amount that was substantially below the prevailing rate for comparable apartments in the area during that period.

B. [NCAA Bylaws 13.2.1, 13.2.2-(h) and 13.6.1]

From late August through early September 1987, the head ice hockey coach provided occasional meals, local automobile transportation and lodging in his home (and in an apartment he owned) to two prospective student-athletes for an approximate two-week period while the young men were attending a late-registration period before moving into university housing for the beginning of fall classes.

C. [NCAA Bylaws 13.01.2, 13.2.1, 13.5.1, 13.6.1 and 13.6.2.8]

In late August or early September 1986, 1987 and 1989, during the late registration prior to the beginning of fall classes for the 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1989-90 academic years, the head ice hockey coach provided round-trip automobile transportation between the university and Gloucester, Massachusetts (a round-trip distance of approximately 80 miles), for numerous prospective student-athletes where these prospects were entertained on the coach's boat. The coach also entertained the parents and a family member of two prospective student-athletes on his boat.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2]

On November 22, 1986, during an ice hockey game in Tully Forum (the university's home arena), the head ice hockey coach displayed cash to several members of the university's ice hockey team, promising them the money for a party if they won the game. Subsequently, he gave $100 to $200 cash to the ice hockey team manager while in the team's locker room after the game in order to finance a party for the ice hockey team members.

E. [NCAA Bylaws 13.02.2, 13.1.1.1 and 13.1.5.2]

In October 1988, the head ice hockey coach contacted a prospective student-athlete in person, off campus for recruiting purposes at an ice hockey tournament. This contact with the prospect occurred in a hallway outside the team locker room while the young man still was in uniform.

F. [NCAA Bylaw 16.2.2.5]

During recent academic years, the head ice hockey coach arranged for numerous student-athletes in the sport of ice hockey to receive press passes in order to attend professional ice hockey contests at no cost to the young men.

G. [NCAA Bylaw 13.5.1]

During the 1986-87 academic year, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, the head ice hockey coach entertained the young man and his father for a meal at a restaurant in the young man's home town.

H. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.1]

On several occasions during the 1986-87 through 1989-90 academic years, the head ice hockey coach permitted a student-athlete to utilize the head coach's office telephone at Tully Forum to make personal, long-distance telephone calls at no cost to the young man.

I. [NCAA Bylaw 10.01.1]

The former head ice hockey coach involved in this case failed to deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that the head coach's involvement in the findings made by the committee in this infractions cases demonstrates a knowing and willful effort on his part to conduct the university's ice hockey program contrary to NCAA legislation. The committee finds this particularly distressing because at one time, the head coach had been a member of the NCAA Ice Hockey Committee.

J. [NCAA Constitution 2.1]

The university failed to maintain institutional control over its ice hockey program in that it did not provide effective administration of the athletics department prior to August 1987 and maintained no ongoing rules-education, compliance, or monitoring programs.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For the reasons set forth in Parts I and II of this report, the NCAA Committee on Infractions found that this case involved several major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2, as adopted by the Association's membership, requires prescribed minimum penalties, "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons," that include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic, in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The committee has determined that this is a unique case for reasons set forth in Part I above and shall not be subject to the full range of penalties required by NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2.

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Council subcommittee action in the event of an appeal by the university to the Council, it being understood that should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Further, the University of Lowell shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

B. On or before December 31, 1991, and December 31, 1992, the university shall submit to the committee and the NCAA enforcement staff written reports on the development of a rules-education and compliance-monitoring program for the university's intercollegiate athletics program. It also shall report on the degree to which that has unified its intercollegiate programs under the direction of the director of athletics and whether clear lines of authority to the president have been achieved.

The university also shall conduct an institutional self-study concerning the institutional and financial resources (including staff and administrative support) necessary to continue participation at the Division I and Division II levels in light of actions by the 1991 NCAA Convention setting forth additional division requirements.

C. The institution's ice hockey team shall end its 1991-92 season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in any postseason competition and may not take advantage of the exceptions to the limitation in the number of contests that are provided in Bylaws 17.10.5.2-(d), (e), (f), (g), (i) and (k).

D. After review of the mitigating factors described elsewhere in this report, the committee suspended action that would have prohibited the university from providing any expense-paid visits to the institution's campus for prospective student-athletes in the sport of ice hockey during the 1991-92 academic year.

E. After review of the mitigating factors described elsewhere in this report, the committee suspended action that would have prohibited all off-campus recruiting activities in the sport of ice hockey during the 1991-92 academic year.

F. After review of the mitigating factors described elsewhere in this report, the committee suspended action that would have required the university to reduce its grants-in-aid in the sport of ice hockey by two during the 1991-92 academic year.

G. If the university had not taken steps leading to the resignation and reassignment of the head ice hockey coach, the institution would have been required to show cause in accordance with Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1) why it should not be subject to additional penalties if it had failed to take appropriate disciplinary action against him.

H. The university shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices are in compliance with all requirements of NCAA regulations.

I. Due to his involvement in certain violations set forth in Part II of this report, the former head ice hockey coach shall be informed in writing by the NCAA enforcement staff that in the event he seeks any athletically related position at any NCAA member institution during the next five-year period (i.e., March 19, 1991, to March 19, 1996) or should the University of Lowell wish to reassign him to any duties related to the university's intercollegiate athletics program, both the institution and the former coach shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the member institution for a designated period.

(NOTE: Should the University of Lowell appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Bylaw 32.8.5. A copy of the committee's report would be provided to the institution prior to the institution's appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by Bylaw 32.8.6, would be released to the public.

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed; further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Finally, should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.)

Reports to: President (elected volunteer), VMI Keydet Club

Responsible for:

1. Creating, directing and conducting effective Keydet Club fund-raising programs, under the auspices of the VMI Development Board, to support the VMI athletics scholarship program, including annual giving, endowment gifts, corporate (including matching) gifts, foundation grants, planned giving and reunion funds.
2. Overseeing the administration of all Keydet Club funds, pledges, contributions, donor receipts, acknowledgments and recognition, and the keeping of the records of the Keydet Club.
3. Coordinating and supervising the expenditure of Keydet Club funds, and the keeping of such records as are necessary to show their direct relationship with contributions to avoid conflict with IRS, NCAA, Conference and Institute rules and regulations.
4. Monitoring the management of the assets and liabilities, and the investment policy and procedures for the endowment funds of the Keydet Club which are administered by the VMI Investment Committee.
5. Managing the Keydet Club staff.
6. Serving as liaison and coordinator between the Keydet Club and the staff and committees of the Institute (Director of Conference and Athletic Council), Alumni Association, Foundation and Development Board.
7. Organizing and coordinating all events and activities of the Board of Governors, its committees, and the members of the Keydet Club.
8. Keeping the officers and governors apprised with monthly reports on the progress of the programs and activities of the Keydet Club, its executive vice-president and staff.
9. Publishing and distributing the Keydet Club News to members, and
10. Promoting membership growth and ever closer cooperation and understanding of the athletics scholarship program at VMI among the faculty, staff, cadets, alumni, business community and the public.

Southwestern University is seeking candidates for a newly created, 12-month contract position as an athletics trainer and cross country coach to begin before July 1, 1991. Responsibilities include serving as head trainer for the athletics program and cross country coach for men and women; teaching athletics training courses required within the athletics trainer curriculum; and performing various athletics training and coaching duties. A master's degree with a major or emphasis in Physical Education, Kinesiology, Sports Medicine, or a related field of study; certification by the National Athletic Trainers Association; eligibility to be licensed by the State of Texas; and experience as a cross country coach and/or background as a competitive runner are required. By Fall 1991, Southwestern will have eight NCAA Division III intercollegiate sports. The University now has six active sport clubs, and 80 percent of the student body is involved in intramural activities.

Southwestern University is a selective undergraduate institution committed to broad-based liberal arts and sciences education. Affiliated with the United Methodist Church, it has more than 1,200 students and a history of stable enrollment. Southwestern's endowment of more than $126 million ranks among the highest per student of undergraduate institutions in the country. The University is located in Georgetown, Texas, 28 miles north of Austin, the state capital and site of The University of Texas.

Please send a letter of application, curriculum vitae, and three current letters of reference to: Athletic Trainer and Cross Country Coach Search Committee, Southwestern University, P.O. Box 770, Georgetown, TX 78627-0770. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Southwestern University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer.

BAAD news is good news at Ohio State University

Ohio State University student-athletes have formed BAAD—Buckeyes Against Alcohol and Drugs. School officials announced recently that 45 Ohio State student-athletes representing 19 varsity teams and Ohio State cheerleaders already have volunteered for the program.

Information on BAAD is available from Ohio State at 614/292-2681.

Scot Dapp of Moravian College's athletics department wants to know who the youngest head coach in an NCAA sport is. He believes Moravian wrestling coach Jay Weiss, 22, may be.

Weiss, an alumnus of Franklin and Marshall College, recently completed his first season as the Greyhounds' wrestling coach. His team finished 11-4-2, and junior Dave Yonney finished third in the Division II championships at 150 pounds—the highest finish ever for a Moravian wrestler.

Is any NCAA head coach (in any sport) younger than Weiss?

Calvin College student-athletes and staff members recently participated (for the fourth straight year) in Lift America, a fund-raiser sponsored by Special Olympics and the National Strength and Conditioning Association. More than $2,300 was pledged by Calvin lifters' sponsors.

Five University of Illinois, Champaign, football players recently visited inmates at the Hill Correctional Facility, a medium-security prison in Galesburg, Illinois. "I thought it would be something different for the inmates," said Early Laster, an assistant warden at the facility. His son, Tony, is an Illinois offensive tackle and made the trip with teammates Sean Streeter, Tim Simpson, Howard Griffith and Romero Brice.

"My dad says about the only time the prison is calmed down and 'under control' is when our games are on TV," the younger Laster said.

"It was a learning experience for both sides," Griffith said of the visit. "There are (inmates) who are concerned about their education and are trying to (put) their destiny in their own hands."

University of Delaware men's basketball players, joined by head coach Steve Steinwedel, recently visited adolescents at the HCA Rockford Center, a private psychiatric hospital in Newark, Delaware. According to Julie Griffin, a staff member at the facility who organized the appearance, Delaware players had a big impact.

"The players talked to the kids," Griffin said, "and they played basketball on mixed teams (student-athletes and patients). When (the student-athletes) were leaving, one boy ran out into the hall to give some of them a hug. That's the kind of impression they made."

"It was quite a risk for the boy to take," Griffin added, "since he knew he was only allowed to stay in a certain area. Later, the kids sent the team cards and cookies."

A sports and special-events marketing and sponsorship seminar has been scheduled for July 14-18 by the University of California, Berkeley, extension service.
