Full agenda awaits committee

One of the most varied agendas in recent history awaits the NCAA Executive Committee, which will meet May 6-7 in New Orleans, Louisiana. Often, this spring meeting finds the Executive Committee faced with mostly sports-committee-related business—not so this year.

Certainly, recommendations from several governing sports committees will be reviewed and acted upon. But many other areas of discussion also will be included in the meeting. Among them:

- A report from an ad hoc group looking at the feasibility and desirability of developing more flexibility in playing rules to accommodate the differences in the Association's membership divisions.

- Additional review of a change in the width of football goal posts

Council urges active response to state legislature challenges

The NCAA Council has voted unanimously that the Association should continue to respond actively to state and Federal legislative challenges regarding NCAA procedures and regulations.

In its spring meeting April 15-17 in Kansas City, Missouri, the Council received a detailed report from Executive Director Richard D. Schultz on the Association's governmental affairs, including a review of recent initiatives in various state legislatures to challenge procedures and regulations adopted by the NCAA membership.

With no votes in opposition, the Council adopted a motion directing Schultz to continue to respond firmly to such challenges. It also urged that the Council and the membership be kept informed of developments in these areas.

In other major issues at the spring meeting, the Council generally expressed support for the steps to strengthen academic requirements for initial and continuing athletics eligibility, at least in Division I, as developed by the Academic Requirements Committee for consideration by the Presidents Commission. The Council also spent considerable time on proposals that would establish a Division I-AAA football classification.

Academics

The Council's actions regarding academic requirements will be reported to the Presidents Commission for consideration in its June 25-26 meeting.

Essentially, the Council supported the Academic Requirements Committee's recommendations to date, as follows:

Initial eligibility: The Council supported an increase from 11 to 13 in the number of required core courses, with the additional courses to be in English, math, or natural or physical sciences. It also supported an increase from 2,000 to 2,500 in the core-curriculum minimum grade-point average if such an increase is part of an indexing formula.

The Council recommended that the Academic Requirements Committee attempt to develop an index somewhat broader than the one requested by the Presidents Commission (700 SAT and 2,500 core GPA through 900 SAT and 2,000) but not as broad as another suggested alternative (400 SAT and 3,250 GPA through 1,300 SAT and 1,000 GPA).

Continuing eligibility: The Council generally favored all of the Academic Requirements Committee's proposed changes in academic requirements for continuing eligibility, as reported in the April 3 and 10 issues of The NCAA News, with these additional actions:

It believes the requirement of

Division I nonscholarship football raises concerns in other divisions

By Timothy J. Lilley
Managing Editor, The NCAA News

Multidivision classification may be history, but Division I nonscholarship football is here to stay. What remains to be seen is if—and if so, where—it ends up within the NCAA's governance structure.

And where Division I nonscholarship football ultimately lands will determine its impact—positive and/or negative—on Divisions I-AA and II football.

That, in essence, is the premise under which the NCAA Council Subcommittee to Develop a Division I-AAA Football Classification has been operating. And in the face of concerns raised during the April 15-17 Council meeting by the Division II Steering Committee in response to draft proposals developed by the I-AAA subcommittee, the subcommittee is intent on making the Association's membership aware of all the possibilities for Divisions I and II members who want to field football teams with a Division III-like approach.

"The issue is where you want to put those institutions whose football programs have been displaced by action to eliminate multidivision classification," said R. Elaine Dreidame of the University of Dayton, who is chairing the I-AAA subcommittee. "Our hope is that the subcommittee's work will result in proposals that will facilitate keeping administration of competitive opportunities for these programs under the NCAA umbrella, which mitigates the concerns of all divisions.

"Also," Dreidame added, "this legislation would deter upward movement of Division II schools (i.e., institutions would be required to have been members of Division I for at least eight years)."

Each division steering committee reviewed separately the subcommittee's work to date during the recent Council meeting. Divisions I and III representatives were supportive, but Division II concerns have led to development of a survey on the issue of I-AAA membership classification.

Limitations are sought on bowl 'tie-ins'

The NCAA Council will be asked to sponsor a proposal at the 1992 Convention that would place limits on "tie-in" arrangements for football bowl games.

The Postseason Football Subcommittee of the NCAA Special Events Committee will ask the Council to support legislation that would permit bowl games to reserve automatic berths only for conference champions and independent teams. The legislation would specifically prohibit a bowl game from reserving a berth for any team in a conference other than the league's champion.

Members of the subcommittee, who met for their annual spring meeting April 15-18 in Orlando, Florida, also agreed to ask the Presidents Commission to endorse those limitations in concept until they can be formally enacted by the Association.

membership.

Subcommittee members unanimously voted to seek the limitation because they believe that agreements reserving a berth for any team from a conference other than its champion—for example, a league runner-up—are not in the best interest of college football or postseason bowl games.

The subcommittee also recommended recertification for 17 of the 19 bowl games that were certified for Division I-A football teams last season.

One of last season's games, the All American Bowl in Birmingham, Alabama, did not apply for recertification for next season. Also, the subcommittee delayed recertification of the Poulan/Weed Eater Independence Bowl in Shreveport, Louisiana, and gave that game's organizers an August deadline for providing a date and kickoff time for the contest and evidence of an agreement to televise the game.

A complete list of games recommended for recertification will be published in next week's issue of The NCAA News.

The subcommittee also made several other recommendations to the Council. Among those is a request that the Council review current legislation permitting conferences with 12 or more member institutions to divide into divisions and hold a championship game involving division winners, taking into consideration such games' potential impact on bowl games.

The Council also was asked to approve amendments to Bylaw 30.8 as follows:

- To prohibit a school from taking a ticket allocation of greater than one-sixth of the total seats in the stadium for a bowl game that paid less than $1 million to participating teams the previous year, unless the school receives approval from the Postseason Bowl Subcommittee. The purpose of the amendment is to prevent schools from "buying" a bowl bid. In seeking approval, the school also would be required to provide a statement from its chief executive officer pledging that the tickets will be sold at face value to constituents of the institution.

- To require that the sponsoring agency of a bowl game sell at least 50 percent of the total number of tickets for the game, unless the game is a sellout and adherence to that policy would not permit the bowl game to accommodate the successfully completing at least eight hours per term should apply to eligibility for both practice and competition, rather than competition only.

It is asking the Academic Requirements Committee to review the possible need for an exception to the proposal that nonqualifiers and partial qualifiers who attend a two-year college must fulfill a year of residency before becoming eligible at an NCAA member institution.

Members of the Council suggested that an exception might be desirable for students posting outstanding academic records at the two-year college. It also asked that the position of the new Two-Year College Relations Committee, which does not favor the proposal in general, be considered by the Academic Requirements Committee.

The full Council narrowly defeated a motion to support the Academic Requirements Committee recommendation as presented, although a straw vote of Division I Council members favored it by nearly a 2-to-1 margin.

Meanwhile, the Division II Steering Committee reported that it would conduct its own study regarding the desire to change academic requirements in that division, especially those dealing with continuing eligibility.

In another action, the Council directed the Administrative Committee to consider how best to pursue the possibility of the NCAA establishing an initial-eligibility clearinghouse, as recommended by the Academic Requirements Committee.

The Council and division steering committee discussions of the feasibility of a Division I AAA football classification made it clear that while Divisions I and III generally support some type of low-cost football alternative, Division II continues to wrestle with the issue.

This topic is reviewed in detail in a separate article in this issue of The NCAA News, including the Division II Steering Committee's plans for a survey of that division's membership.

The Council generally agreed that the Council subcommittee dealing with the issue should continue to work on the available alternatives, with additional advice from Division II representatives, and that the matter also should be presented to the Presidents Commission for its review in June. Thus far, the Commission has not been involved in the matter except to support the concept of eliminating multidivision classification wherever possible.

Among the other major actions in the Council's April meeting were these:

- The Council agreed to sponsor legislation for the 1992 Convention to specify that for purposes of meeting the new Division I financial aid membership criteria, an institution could count only unearned, nonrepayable financial aid awarded and administered by the institution (including the athletics department) and based on athletics ability. This approach—consistent with the unsuccessful Proposal No. 46-4 at the 1991 Convention—was recommended by the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism.

- The Council generally supported the Professional Sports Liaison Committee's recommendation for legislation to permit a student-athlete to enter a professional draft without immediately forfeiting all collegiate athletics eligibility. It was agreed that the draft legislation in this regard would be tightened and reviewed again in August.

- The Council approved a staff suggestion that a Council subcommittee be established to assist the compliance services department in developing the certification concept, including the interim report that will be presented to the 1992 Convention and the final report to the Council and Presidents Commission prior to the 1993 Convention.

- It supported several actions in the interest of gender equity, including legislation requiring that a woman be among an institution's four official delegates to an NCAA Convention if the institution fills all four of those positions. Among other actions in this area, the Council approved development of a membership survey to gather data regarding gender-equity factors.

- The Council voted to sponsor legislation at the 1992 Convention to establish somewhat earlier deadlines in the Association's legislative calendar, effective after the 1992 Convention. Those dates were approved earlier by the Council as noncontroversial amendments but then were held in abeyance for this year at the request of certain member conferences.

The minutes of the Council's April meeting, containing all actions taken by the group, will appear in a May issue of The NCAA News.

Legislative Assistance

1991 Column No. 17

During its April 15-17 meeting, the NCAA Council reviewed the Interpretations Committee minutes from conferences 1 through 5 and issued the following interpretations related to new legislation proposed at the 1991 NCAA Convention:

Proposal No. 20 [Bylaws 13.1.1.1, 13.1.2.3-(e)-(1) and 13.1.2.4-(b)]—Telephone calls and contacts (Divisions I and II (Effective July 1, 1991))

(a) In Divisions I and II, institutional staff members may receive telephone calls placed by prospective student-athletes at the prospect's expense at any time and there are no restrictions governing the content of the conversation during such calls between the prospect and the institutional staff member.

(b) It is permissible for a member institution to utilize a toll-free (e.g., 1-800) number to receive telephone calls from prospective student-athletes, provided such calls are placed subsequent to July 1, following completion of the prospective student-athlete's junior year in high school; further, as a courtesy, institutional staff members may respond to calls on the toll-free number initiated by prospects prior to July 1 following completion of the prospect's junior year in high school, provided the conversation does not include information that would initiate the recruitment of the prospective student-athlete or information related to the institution's athletics program (e.g., a staff member may explain the current NCAA legislation governing telephone calls or refer the prospective student-athlete to the admissions department). [This interpretation reverses a previous Interpretations Committee decision (reference Item No. 2-b of the committee's March 19, 1991, conference).]

Proposal No. 23 (Bylaw 13.4.1)—Recruiting materials (Divisions I and II) (Effective August 1, 1991)

(a) The restrictions in Division I governing institutional stationery, note cards and press releases (e.g., one color of print, single university logo) and the restrictions in Divisions I and II governing postcards (i.e., blank cards issued by the U.S. Postal Service) and athletics publications (i.e., institutions may produce a media guide or recruiting brochure, but not both) would not be applicable to member conferences. Please note that member conferences may not provide any printed materials to prospective student-athletes other than drug-education information (through brochures, not posters) and NCAA educational publications (e.g., Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete). In addition, the Division I Steering Committee recommended that proposed legislation be reviewed by the Council during its August meeting to prohibit conferences from any communication with prospective student-athletes (including the provision of any printed materials). [This interpretation reverses previous Interpretations Committee decisions (reference Item No. 5-b of the committee's January 31, 1991, conference, and Item No. 4-b of the committee's March 19, 1991, conference).]

(b) The restriction prohibiting photographs of enrolled student-athletes and other "promotional material" on institutional stationery would not preclude a member institution from highlighting on the stationery factual statements regarding a specific team's accomplishments (e.g., national championships, conference championships, bowl games). [This interpretation reverses a previous Interpretations Committee decision (reference Item No. 5-f of the committee's January 31, 1991, conference).]

(c) It is not permissible for a member institution to send telegrams to a prospective student-athlete. [This interpretation reverses a previous Interpretations Committee decision (reference Item No. 4-c of the committee's March 19, 1991, conference).]

(d) The restriction that a member institution may produce only one athletics publication per sport (i.e., recruiting brochure or media guide, but not both) would not preclude a member institution from producing a postseason media publication or additional publications that are considered addenda to the regular-season media guide (e.g., preseason media guide, spring football guide), with the understanding that such publications may not be provided to prospective student-athletes.

Proposal No. 32 (as amended by 32-1) [Bylaw 16.8.1.2.1]—Expenses for competition (Effective August 1, 1991)

In accordance with Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial amendment), the Council amended 16.8.1.2.1.1-(b) to indicate that travel-expense restrictions that would preclude a team (or individual) from departing no earlier than 48 hours prior to the competition and returning to the campus within 36 hours after the competition would not be applicable to regular-season competition that takes place during the institution's summer vacation period; in related matters, the Council utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 to exempt from the travel-expense restrictions those expenses incurred during regular-season games in a foreign country (i.e., competition in one or more foreign countries on one trip during the prescribed playing season that may not occur more than once every four years).

Proposal No. 37 (Bylaw 11.7.5.1)—Coaching duties—off-campus recruiting (Division I only) (Effective August 1, 1991)

In Division I sports other than football, the limit on the number of coaches who may contact and/or evaluate prospective student-athletes off campus "at any one time" shall be based on the actual number of coaches who are involved in recruiting activities off the member institution's campus "at any one time" (and not based on the number of coaches who are involved in off-campus recruiting activities during a calendar day). Once a coaching-staff member returns to campus from a recruiting trip, it would be permissible for another authorized coaching-staff member to depart the campus on a recruiting trip. [This interpretation modifies a previous Interpretations Committee decision (reference Item No. 7-b of the committee's February 14, 1991, conference).]

Proposal No. 98 (as amended by 98-1) [Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3]—Official visit—ACT or SAT score (Divisions I and II) (Effective August 1, 1991)

The Council utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to amend Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3 to indicate that a Division I or II member institution may provide an expense-paid visit to a prospective student-athlete who has presented the institution with a score from a PACT test (i.e., PACT plus) taken on a national testing date under national testing conditions.

Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1—Enrolled student-athletes—summer financial aid (Division I only)

The Council, during its April 15-17, 1991, meeting, reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1, which indicate that an enrolled student-athlete may receive financial aid to attend an institution's summer term or summer school only in proportion to the amount of athletically related aid received by the student-athlete from the institution during the previous academic year. The Council utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to amend Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1 to indicate that a nonqualifier or partial qualifier may receive athletically related financial aid to attend an institution's summer term or summer school subsequent to the first academic year in residence under the following conditions:

(a) The student-athlete has satisfied the NCAA satisfactory-progress requirements and, thus, would be eligible for competition for the succeeding year (i.e., the student-athlete must have successfully completed 24 semester hours or 36 quarter hours during the previous academic year and have a grade-point average that places the student-athlete in good academic standing at the institution);

(b) The student-athlete has been awarded athletically related financial aid for the succeeding academic year, and

(c) The student-athlete receives athletically related financial aid to attend the institution's summer term or summer school only in proportion to the amount of athletically related financial aid the student will receive for the succeeding year.

The Council also utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial legislation) to amend Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1 to indicate that once a student-athlete has exhausted his or her eligibility, an institution may award financial aid to attend the institution's summer term or session that exceeds the proportion of athletically related aid received by the student during the previous academic year, provided the student-athlete is enrolled in courses that will allow the student-athlete to graduate at the conclusion of that summer term.

that is scheduled to take effect this fall.

- A report by the Special NCAA Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues.

- A review of data developed on the amount of class time missed by student-athletes participating in NCAA postseason play-offs.

Several general NCAA committees also have prepared reports for review and possible action by the Executive Committee.

Among them are reports from the Association's Basketball Officiating Committee, the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, the Two-Year College Relations Committee and the Professional Sports Liaison Committee.

Also to be considered is a report from the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, a part of which includes a request for approval of the publication of student-athlete supplements in The NCAA News twice annually.

Governing sports committees will get their share of Executive Committee attention, as almost 20 reports from governing sports committees have been included on the agenda. Most Executive Committee actions will concern requests for adjustments in championships schedules and for automatic qualification to future tournaments.

fication that is being sent to Division II members.

Challenges to II

"First and foremost among the concerns raised in the steering committee meeting was the feeling that the proposals for I-AAA football and their ramifications present challenges to the integrity of Division II," said Anthony F. Ceddia, president of Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania and NCAA Division II vice-president who presided over the Division II Steering Committee session earlier this month.

Ceddia said the survey is intended to solicit from Division II members input regarding the concepts being explored by the I-AAA subcommittee. Among them—and an element of the I-AAA proposal reviewed this month by the Council—was a resolution calling for development of an exception provision that would permit a one-game play-off involving nonscholarship Division II football programs—in effect creating a Division II-AAA classification, at least for championship purposes.

"There are 11 programs in Division II that have had their football programs in Division III," said former Council member and Division II vice-president Howard "Bud" Elwell of Gannon University, who is serving as a consultant to the I-AAA subcommittee. "It has been suggested that the possibility of another classification within Division II might cause some institutions to opt for that less-costly program if they have the opportunity."

Why bother II?

Why worry about Division II? Isn't this only about a Division I classification?

What it's about is the elimination of multidivision classification for programs, which was approved by the membership at the 1991 Convention in Nashville. That, and what will happen to those schools in Divisions I and II that have sponsored Division III football programs for some time.

A quick read of information published previously in The NCAA

Among those attending the April 18 meeting of the NCAA Council Subcommittee to Develop a Division I-AAA Football Classification were, from left, Thurston E. Banks, Tennessee Technological University; Victor A. Buccola, Western Football Conference;

Thomas Iannacone, University of San Diego; Howard "Bud" Elwell, Gannon University, and Jerry M. Hughes, Central Missouri State University.

News (see the February 20, 1991, issue) and of the proposals developed by the I-AAA subcommittee reveal a couple of things:

- Directly affected by elimination of multidivision classification is a relatively small number of Divisions I and II members.

- Finding a suitable "home" for those members within the Association's governance structure—including the provision of appropriate competitive and championships opportunities—potentially could have a profound impact on Divisions I and II.

And because of the nature of the legislation necessary to create a I-AAA classification, each membership division (i.e., I, II and III) must approve any resulting proposals by a majority during their respective Convention business sessions. Concerns by representatives of any division—in this case, Division II—could mean difficulty for the subcommittee as it attempts to complete its business.

No sales pitch

"One thing the subcommittee wants to make clear is that communicating with the membership through The NCAA News like this is not an attempt to make a quick sales pitch for our proposals," Dreidame said. "It is our belief that those non-Division III members who wish to operate football programs that offer only need-based aid and with coaching limitations

See Division I, page 5

To Date

Here is what's happened so far this year regarding Division I-AAA football:

- The 1991 Convention adopts Proposal No. 54, a resolution authorizing a Council subcommittee to develop legislation for the Council to sponsor for the 1992 Convention that would, if adopted, create a Division I-AAA football classification. It would include need-based aid only and tough full-time coaching limitations and would provide a cost-containment alternative for Division I members interested in sponsoring varsity football.

- The Council Subcommittee to Develop a Division I-AAA Football Classification, which was appointed and had its first meeting in the fall of 1990, meets again and develops proposals for review by the steering committees and Council in mid-April.

- The Divisions I and III Steering Committees endorse the I-AAA subcommittee's proposals, but several concerns are raised by the Division II Steering Committee—which directs that a survey be conducted among Division II members to obtain their input regarding various elements of the AAA classification issue.

The Proposals

Here are highlights of the proposals developed by the Council Subcommittee to Develop a Division I-AAA Football Classification. Although no official titles have been assigned, the proposals are lettered alphabetically for the purposes of this report:

A. The proposal makes the necessary legislative changes to create a Division I-AAA football classification. It also gives Divisions I-A and I-AA members rescission authority over I-AAA football legislation. (Note: The I-AAA subcommittee intentionally has chosen not to propose rescission authority in Divisions I-A and I-AA football matters.) It also establishes eligibility requirements for Division I-AAA student-athletes and proposes an exception to multidivision classification prohibitions for those Division I members west of the Mississippi River to continue sponsoring Division II football because of the geographical difficulty in scheduling either Divisions I-AA or I-AAA opponents.

B. This proposal sets parameters for Division I-AAA football programs. Among them are a limit of three full-time coaches, financial aid guidelines exactly the same as those for Division III members, prohibition of spring practice in Division I-AAA and a 10-game regular-season maximum.

C. This proposal creates a Division I-AAA football championship and a governing sports committee for administrative purposes. It outlines championships-eligibility requirements, including mandates that institutions wishing to sponsor I-AAA football must have been Division I members for at least eight years and that I-AAA institutions schedule at least half of their regular-season games against teams in Divisions I-AA and I-AAA. It also proposes a traveling party the same size as that currently in effect in Division III.

D. To accommodate the Division II programs displaced by elimination of multidivision classification, this proposal establishes an exception provision that would permit a one-game championship in Division II for those programs that had been sponsoring Division III football. It also proposes a five-year freeze on any reduction in the number of teams selected to participate in the Division I-AA postseason tournament.

Exit interviews for senior athletes are worthwhile

By John E. Burns
Assistant Director of Athletics
Furman University

I have just finished the exit interview process with graduating senior athletes and can say, with great conviction, it was well worth doing.

Without exception, those student-athletes who attended the interview sessions were enthusiastic about the opportunity and encouraged that the athletics department would open itself up to this kind of self-examination.

The student-athletes had an opportunity to express their feelings about their athletics experience; talk about time demands on athletes; evaluate their coach or coaches; reflect on changes the NCAA has proposed, as well as changes they would like to see, and to talk, in general, about what was good and what was bad about being an athlete at Furman University.

Discussion was meaningful, sometimes very personal, often emotional, and on occasion critical, as the athletes realized this was their opportunity to make an even larger contribution to the university than what they might have made on the playing field.

We frankly did not know what would happen when we began this process. When the NCAA passed legislation (Proposal No. 19, effective August 1) that "exit interviews" were to be conducted with graduating senior student-athletes, our first thought was... "just another thing to work into an already crowded spring schedule." It wasn't met with overwhelming enthusiasm as we discussed this requirement in staff meetings, for like in most athletics departments we all had several different duties as it was, and who would do these interviews was a subject of some debate. As director of compliance, it seemed to fit within my area of responsibility, and so, much to the relief of the rest of the staff, it was agreed I would take "exit interviews" as my project.

We decided to have our exit interview in two parts: The first would be to send each graduating senior athlete an "evaluation form" (which need not be signed) to complete before they came to the interview; and secondly, to conduct group exit interview sessions in an informal setting with a few discussion questions to help guide and initiate discussion.

By having time to complete the evaluation form in the privacy of their dorm rooms or apartments, student-athletes, it was hoped, would do a better job of answering all the questions and put more thought and care in their answers. Since the form did not need to be signed athletes could say what they truly felt; and except for the sport they participated in, no one would know who said what.

We chose three dates for the group interviews that did not conflict with late classes or spring sports contests and sent the evaluation form, along with a letter explaining what the exit interviews were all about, to all graduating senior student-athletes. We followed that with a meeting with all coaches to explain what this project was about and to ask their cooperation in encouraging their sports' seniors to attend.

Designing the evaluation form was probably the most difficult part of the task. Wright Waters, commissioner-elect of the Southern Conference, was a great help as we struggled with what questions to ask and in what type of format, so that the student-athletes would not feel overwhelmed when they got the form. We wanted questions that would be of interest to student-athletes, presented in such a way that they would answer them and give us meaningful feedback.

With no model form to work from, we decided on a combination of "check the appropriate answer," "yes and no," "rate from 1 to 5" and "essay" questions. We developed 15 questions, some with more than one part, that addressed the four areas suggested in the legislation and kept the form to four pages. It is very gratifying to say that we got an 86 percent response from the mailing; and of those who signed to attend the group interview sessions, 96 percent attended.

If schools have not already done so, I would suggest, based upon our success, that they put plans into motion now to have exit interviews.

We have learned a lot from the responses on the evaluation form and even more from the personal discussions during the group interviews.

Once we have compiled all the data from the forms and the personal comments, we will know if Furman University's intercollegiate athletics program, as seen through the eyes of those who have experienced it, is responsive to the needs and interests of student-athletes. It is an investment of time that will pay big dividends in years to come, I believe.

Women's basketball trends cause concern

By Christine H. B. Grant
Director of Women's Athletics
University of Iowa

I was gratified with the attention women's basketball and women's athletics in general received from the coverage of the NCAA championships. As much as I enjoyed the spectacle and the fine performances, the final games confirmed my impatience with two trends in the sport.

First, women's basketball is going the way of some men's teams in emphasizing brawn over brains, physical intimidation over finesse. I believe basketball is a beautiful game when played as the noncontact sport it was conceived to be. The physical post play and hand checking so evident in the semifinal games retard the flow and diminish that beauty to the point of ugliness. In order to restore an emphasis on movement, strategy and skill, I favor officials clamping down on physical contact from the beginning of games, if necessary by calling simultaneous fouls on the two "pushing parties."

My second complaint is with the proliferation of fouls in the final few minutes of close games. In order to regain control of the ball, teams intentionally foul with little fear that referees will award two shots and possession. The practice is universally accepted since it often accomplishes its purpose. I see two arguments in favor of eliminating intentional fouling as a strategic tool: 1. Well-played, active games no longer would be brought to grinding halts with the final two minutes stretching out interminably. 2. We no longer would be sanctioning fouling as a positive, useful act. Fouling is illegal and, in my opinion, unethical when done deliberately.

We give a double message when we teach it as a strategy, and double messages are educationally unsound. In my view, this message goes against the ethical foundation sport should provide for our athletes. One solution to end-of-game fouling is to award the fouled team the choice of possession or free throws; a second alternative is to give one free throw plus possession for the final few minutes.

These objections could be viewed as arising from an old-fashioned, out-of-touch point of view. I prefer to think they support a 21st century concept of what sport was meant to be, can be, but has yet to become.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I was a little surprised at the tone of the article in the March 30 issue of The NCAA News with regard to Convention Proposal No. 46-3.

The Patriot League (and I personally) were in strong support of this concept, believing deeply that an institution's commitment to intercollegiate athletics is measured across a much larger spectrum than just "athletics aid."

All Patriot League institutions and many other institutions across the country make a tremendous commitment to their intercollegiate athletics program through the countable-aid concept through the support of their extremely broad-based programs.

I believe the article does a great disservice to many of us. I am surprised that Mr. Knopp would request such a one-sided, biased view of the issue.

I believe when the membership voted that there was no confusion and that a great deal of discussion occurred on the floor prior to the final vote.

I would again express my disappointment in the way the News and the NCAA hierarchy has handled this issue.

Remarks before Knight Commission

"I think that the time right now is the best that I have seen in my tenure (as a conference commissioner) of having changes made."

"And that's why I think this commission, along with the other groups working with this commission, in my judgment will make this the most exciting year we've had in a long time, if we can just draw a consensus."

Mike Jarvis, head men's basketball coach
George Washington University

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

"If enough of us (black coaches) can do well, we can turn it around. I don't have to accept or like what's going on. Unless you're a black coach, no one knows what it's like. We can't go out and crusade. We have to set an example and be a role model."

John Silber, president

The Boston Globe

"Any self-respecting university should have taken these steps (recommended by Knight Commission) long ago. This is a step in the right direction, but the schools that will be impressed by it are already conforming to it. For the others, there is no inducement in doing so until a fair and equitable method is devised to divide up the millions of dollars from championships. "I accuse the major universities of being farm teams for professional sports.

"I say we should turn the game back to the students. The coaches can coach all they want, but when the game starts, the coach should be up in the bleachers watching. He cannot call plays in. Then, we'll find out how good the kids are."

"But the girls do some thinking about whether they really want to go to Division I or not. If they feel like they'll be more comfortable playing at a Division II school, they don't care; they'll just go to the Division II school if they get the school they want."

No deaths result from football play

No deaths occurred during the 1990 high-school and college football seasons that were directly attributable to injuries suffered on the field, according to a study conducted at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

It was the first time in the 60 years that records have been kept that no deaths were reported, the study said. There were six deaths indirectly connected with football during the 1990 season, according to the study.

"This is pretty amazing when you consider that in 1968, 36 young men died from playing football," said Frederick O. Mueller, professor of physical education at the university.

Mueller directs the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injuries, located on the North Carolina campus. Each year, the center issues reports on deaths and severe injuries from amateur and professional sports.

Reports are based on newspaper stories that come to Chapel Hill from around the United States, along with information from the NCAA, the National Federation of State High School Associations and about 150 volunteers who monitor sports accidents in their states.

"We've always talked about getting fatalities down to zero, but we weren't sure that it would ever happen again because of the nature of the game, the contact, the hard hitting, and players getting bigger and faster," Mueller told the Associated Press.

Of six deaths indirectly related to football, three were at the high-school level and three were at the college level, he said. Heart failure was the cause of two of the high-school and one of the college deaths.

In addition, a high-school player died following an asthma attack and a college student died of heatstroke. One college student's death appears to be related to sickle cell anemia, the study said.

Those fatalities were not listed as football deaths because they did not result from on-field injuries and could have occurred during any vigorous activity, Mueller said.

There also were about a dozen cases of permanent paralysis.

"Now that fatalities appear to be under control, we are still worried about the permanent-disability injuries," Mueller said. "In about 75 percent of the cases, these occur when a defensive back makes a tackle in the open field. He lowers his head at the last second and makes contact with the top of his head."

The impact puts tremendous force on the player's spinal cord and can dislocate or fracture vertebrae, Mueller said.

Mueller attributed the decrease in deaths to rule changes adopted in 1976 that prohibited using the head as the initial point of contact during blocking and tackling.

are going to do that—even if it means developing the kind of competitive opportunities they're looking for outside the NCAA.

"We prefer that things not progress in that fashion," she added. "Developing the appropriate classification within the NCAA structure will mean that the membership can control the parameters and the extent of any negative effects that might be felt on bordering subdivisions."

Dreidame said the subcommittee will review the results of the survey authorized by the Division II Steering Committee and is soliciting input from all member institutions. Correspondence should be directed to Dreidame at Dayton or to Richard J. Evrard, director of legislative services and staff liaison to the subcommittee, at the NCAA national office.

The subcommittee also will solicit input from members during the upcoming convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA).

"We will have an open session and round-table sessions at NACDA," she explained, "and we have scheduled a meeting immediately following that convention. We hope to reach consensus on proposals that will be forwarded to the Council and to the NCAA Presidents Commission for consideration and sponsorship for the 1992 Convention."

Comments on I-AAA Football

Following are comments regarding Division I-AAA football from some of those involved in the issue.

R. Elaine Dreidame, University of Dayton: "Division I nonscholarship football is not going away. The question at this point is whether NCAA members want to control how it's set up."

Douglas T. Porter, Fort Valley State College: "Division II conferences and their commissioners are concerned that their members might opt for a low-cost approach to football sponsorship if it were available. And as a result, those conferences could lose members."

Walter Reed, Florida A&M University: "There is a place for those (Division I) schools (that would make up a Division I-AAA football classification) in Division I-AA. The current Division I-AA championship is attractive, and I don't feel they'd bring down the competitive level of the division."

James Jarrett, Old Dominion University: (Note: Jarrett has been involved in efforts to develop a I-AAA football classification since the earliest stages.) "We were concerned that schools (entering Division I-AA with a cost-containment approach to football sponsorship) would have a very major impact on Division I-AA football. We wanted an alternative for those (Division I members) who wanted cost-containment football. The important thing is, let's not disenfranchise the current I-AA approach (by lowering scholarship and coaching-staff maximums)."

Matador volleyball coach is preaching mental toughness

Cal State Northridge men's volleyball coach John Price has a contender on his hands. His third-ranked Matadors are strong and talented—physically. It's the mental toughness that Price has preached to his squad this season.

"About a month ago, we made the decision to work on one aspect of our game," Price said. "That turned out to be the mental part of the game. We knew that if we were going to make the big jump, it had to be done by supporting each other. Mentally, we've made really big strides as far as playing together. At the beginning of the year, we were playing purely on talent. Now we're playing together."

Playing purely on talent might be sufficient for some teams, but not for Cal State Northridge, which plays in the intensely competitive Western Intercollegiate Volleyball Association. The Matadors face the likes of defending national champion Southern California, UCLA and Long Beach State on a weekly basis.

It took a fifth-game loss to Southern California in the conference tournament last year to convince the Matadors they were for real. In turn, they've spent the 1991 season convincing opponents of the same.

"We finally feel like we've broken through some barriers," Price said.

Those barriers include beating UCLA for the first time this season. But probably the most significant boost to the Northridge program came with the loss to Southern California at the end of last season.

"That match was the turning point. We've got all six starters back from that team," Price said.

Northridge's offensive strength centers around senior Neil Coffman and sophomore blocker Coley Kyman. Coffman, a 6-3 left-side hitter, is third in the nation with 6.3 kills per game. He has registered 565 total kills and is hitting .359. Kyman, a 6-6 middle blocker, is first on the team in blocks with 29 solos and 140 assists and second with 485 kills. Sophomore setter Matt Unger is averaging 16.5 assists per game. The Matadors are 20-6 through 26 matches, second to UCLA in the DeGroot Division of the Western Intercollegiate Volleyball Association.

As Price worked to improve his team's mental state this year, he might have drawn from his experience as a coach. Price took over the Northridge program at age 26 with limited playing credentials and even less coaching experience. Competing against the nation's top coaches has been nothing but a benefit for Price. His teams have improved consistently in each of his six seasons, capping that success this year with the highest national ranking in school history.

Price is the first one to say that his team is grateful to be in a position to make its first NCAA tournament appearance. "We appreciate where we are more than anyone else," he said. "Win or lose, we're going to enjoy this experience."

While the Matadors have found themselves contending for a berth in their first championship, they have their work cut out for them. Standing in the way is defending national champion Southern California. The Trojans return just about everyone from their 1990 national-championship team. Just about everyone includes tournament most valuable player Bryan Ivie. The 6-7 senior hitter paces Southern California with 6.9 kills per game. Through 24 matches, he has recorded a team-high 612 kills in 1,070 attempts (.455) and added 35 service aces. Ivie is just as formidable defensively. He leads the Trojans with 27 solo blocks and 137 assists.

The Trojan attack does not stop with Ivie. Sophomore Jason Perkins and seniors Nick Becker, Leon Devaney and Kevin Shepard have contributed to a Southern California team that won its first 22 matches of the season. Perkins leads the squad with a .510 hitting percentage (311 kills in 482 total attempts). Becker is second on the team with 379 kills and 180 digs. Devaney is second in kills with 375, an average of 4.5 per game. Shepard, hitting .492, has added 190 kills and 19 aces. The Trojans have improved depth with the return of hitter Jen-Kai Liu, back from an injury, and the addition of freshman middle blocker Pat Ivie. Southern California is hitting .405 as a team.

Second-ranked Long Beach State also will be battling for the WIVA's automatic berth or the one at-large spot in the championship. The 49ers, who lost to Southern California in the title game a year ago, have lost only three matches this season. Two of those losses have been to the Trojans. Coach Ray Ratelle has a squad dominated by sophomores and juniors.

Hitter Brent Hilliard paces Long Beach State with 628 kills through 28 matches. Despite being in only his second season, Hilliard, a 6-5 sophomore, is the second-leading hitter in school history. Hilliard's battery mate is sophomore setter Jason Stimpfig. The 6-1 Stimpfig averages 15.2 assists per game. Senior middle blocker Brett Winslow is second on the squad with 403 kills and a hitting percentage of .447. Winslow paces the team defensively with 28 solo blocks and 93 block assists.

Several teams from the Midwest and East regions will try to end the West Coast's string of championships. Possibly the top East Coast contender is Penn State. The Nittany Lions are 25-4 and ranked fourth in the coaches' top 20 poll. Coach Tom Peterson's team is led by a pair of outside hitters in Jorge Perez and Charlie Bertran and middle blocker Ramon Hernandez. Perez, a 6-2 senior, has recorded 513 kills, first on the team, and is hitting .370. Bertran has contributed with 441 kills (.281) and a team-high 254 digs. Hernandez, a 6-3 freshman, leads the squad with 25 solo blocks and 94 assists.

Penn State's four losses have come to Southern California, San Diego State, Long Beach State and Cal State Northridge. The Nittany Lions will be challenged in the East by George Mason and Rutgers-Newark.

The Midwest representative in the championship might be a new face to the tournament. Indiana/Purdue-Fort Wayne, a team that has never reached the final four, is currently ranked 10th with a 16-8 record. The Mastodons are led by senior Fred Malcolm. The 6-4 hitter is among the nation's leaders with 813 kills through 24 matches. The Mastodons will face challenges from traditional powers Ball State and Ohio State.

Contenders: Southern California, Long Beach State, Cal State Northridge, Penn State, Indiana/Purdue-Fort Wayne.

Championship notes: Despite its absence from the 1990 tournament, UCLA has made the most championship appearances. The Bruins are 36-3 in their 15 appearances, good for a winning percentage of .923. UCLA and coach Al Scates have claimed 13 titles. West Coast teams have claimed all 21 championship matches, while Ohio State and Penn State are the only non-West Coast teams to reach the final match. The 1991 tournament marks the first time the Men's Volleyball Championship will be held in Hawaii. The 1989 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship was played in Honolulu. Eleven of the 12 teams that participate in the Western Intercollegiate Volleyball Association are ranked in the Tachikara coaches top-20 poll.

Old Beach Boys tune could be theme for this tournament

The lyrics "I wish they all could be California girls" had nothing to do with sports when they were written, but they certainly apply to this year's Division II Women's Tennis Championships.

With two Cal Polys—San Luis Obispo and Pomona—and UC Davis occupying the top three spots in the Volvo/ITCA rankings, the Beach Boys' version of bliss seems to be at hand.

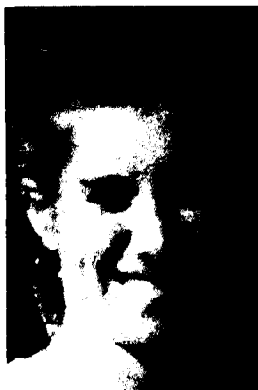

It wasn't always this way. From 1986 to 1989, the tournament trophy's residence was pure mid-America—Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, to be exact. UC Davis, however, took the title west last year, and west it appears destined to remain.

At Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, which finished third in 1990, first-year coach Kevin Platt, who led the SLO men to a national championship last season, looks to add a women's trophy to the college's tennis laurels.

The Mustangs, ranked No. 1, have hung around the championship neighborhood the past two years, but haven't been able to get past UC Davis in the tournament either time. Platt's troops did beat UC Davis, 5-4, in February, but San Luis Obispo also owned regular-season victories over Davis in 1989 and 1990.

With a lineup that has seven of nine entries nationally ranked, this could be SLO's year. Only one new player has cracked the top six, freshman Julie Ciancio, who plays No. 6 singles and teams with all-America Vicki Kanter at No. 1 doubles, a combination that's ranked fourth nationally. In singles, Kanter is ranked sixth. No. 2 singles player Debbie Matano, an all-America in both singles and doubles last year, is ranked eighth nationally. Two other Mustangs, junior Erin Green and Debbie's sister, Tracy Matano, are ranked 23rd and 25th, respectively. In addition to the No. 1 doubles combination, both the No. 2 and No. 3 entries are ranked in the top 20.

Obviously, lack of talent isn't a concern for Platt, so he has concen-point to a new nemesis—both came at the hands of Cal Poly Pomona, the nation's third-ranked team.

Pomona (17-5), last year's runner-up, is without 1990 singles finalist Julie Slattery, who was lost to academic woes at the beginning of the season, but the Broncos have overcome a shaky 3-3 start to rise to national contention. Among those three early losses were a 6-3 loss to SLO and a 8-1 trouncing by Davis. Since then, Pomona has beaten SLO twice and turned the tables on Davis, 6-3.

Pomona Coach Ann Lebedeff said the early losses were the result of working out the kinks in a new lineup and "playing tentatively and scared." Two junior college transfers, Cindy Hurler and Cindy Laird, had replaced Slattery and 1990 No. 5 singles player Shelley Breeden, and being new to the Davis and SLO rivalries, they weren't ready for the intensity.

Event: Division II women's tennis.

Defending champion: UC Davis.

Only two other teams, Cal State Northridge and Tennessee-Chattanooga, have won the championships, which enter their 10th year. The 1990 tournament featured a record 18 tiebreaker sets—one of them in three days of team play. For the first time, the top four seeded teams will automatically qualify three players for the singles field of 32. Given that, the dual-match results (11-2 with two matches remaining) are even more impressive. The Mustangs' two losses, however, could

Alabama wins NCAA gymnastics title with record score

Tournament host and 1990 runner-up Alabama scored a meet-record 195.125 points to unseat defending champion Utah (194.375) and claim the team championship at the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships, held April 19-20. The old record was 194.900, set last year by Utah.

The Crimson Tide last won the team championship in 1988. In the meet's 10-year history, Georgia, the 1987 and 1989 champion, is the only other team to have won. Utah has won six times.

Coach Sarah Patterson's Crimson Tide, which entered the meet as the top seed, won three of the four events April 19 on the way to its record score, claiming the vault (49.075), beam (48.675) and floor exercise (48.800). Alabama finished third in the uneven bars (48.575), an event won by Georgia with a score of 49.025.

In the individual all-around, which also was held April 19, Georgia dominated. Bulldog freshman and 1988 Olympian Hope Spivey, who hadn't competed in the all-around for much of the year because of injury, scored a 39.525 to unseat defending champion Dee Dee Foster of Alabama (39.425). Another 1988 Olympian, Utah's Melissa Marlowe, finished third (39.175), followed by teammate Kristen Kenoyer (39.100), who was third last year.

Foster suffered a tendon injury in her hand during the individual-event preliminaries April 19, preventing her from competing April 20.

Spivey came back with a big day April 20, winning the floor exercise, tying Arizona's Anna Basaldua for first in the vault, and placing third in the balance beam. In the floor exercise, Spivey scored a 9.950 to pace a field that included defending champion Joy Selig of Oregon State (tied for third, 9.850). Florida's Pam Titus was second (9.875).

Spivey's teammate, Kelly Macy, won the uneven-bars title, scoring a 9.900 to beat Southeastern Conference rival Christina McDonald of Florida and Oregon State's Chari Knight, both of whom scored 9.850.

Team champion Alabama got its only share of an individual title from Gina Basile, who scored a 9.875 on the balance beam to tie Marlowe. Defending champion Selig didn't make the finals.

In championships history, Georgia moved into second place on the all-time individual champions list with nine. Utah leads with 10. Basaldua's vault championship was Arizona's first.

Sooner men set meet and school records, win gym crown

Oklahoma scored a meet- and school-record 288.025 points to runner-up and host Penn State's 285.500 to claim the third national championship in team history during the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships, held April 18-20.

The Sooners' 2.525-point winning margin was the meet's largest since 1984, when UCLA defeated Penn State, 287.300 to 281.250.

En route to the team title April 19, the Sooners also set a school record on the rings with a 48.950, the second highest total in meet history. In addition, Oklahoma won three other events: floor exercise (team season-best 48.125), vault (team season-best 47.900) and parallel bars (47.475). UCLA had the highest score in the horizontal bar with a 48.975. Penn State was the top team in pommel horse (47.150).

Victorious coach Greg Buwick, who won his first national team title in his seven years at Oklahoma, said the pommel horse was a key to his team's win. The Sooners performed well in the event, a Nittany Lion stronghold, scoring a 47.550 to rank a close second behind Penn State's total.

"After the first event (pommel horse), I didn't really care if we were ahead or behind," he said. "We were just going to go out and do our best. We have a motto: 'It's not over 'til we hang the last dog.'"

Penn State coach Karl Schier said he felt good about his team's overall showing.

"I feel like my team did as well as they could almost possibly do," he said. "I only saw one possible flaw in their (Oklahoma's) routine the entire event."

"The profile of the meet had to go in such a way that we had to have a substantial lead at the midpoint (Oklahoma led after three events, 144.200 to 143.550). We knew Oklahoma comes on really strong at the end of a meet."

In the individual competition April 20, Minnesota's John Roethlisberger, who was battling a virus, became the first Golden Gopher since 1942 to claim the all-around title, and the first champion his father, Fred, has had in 20 years of coaching at the university.

"I had problems breathing, but you don't realize it when you're competing. It doesn't affect your performance," the newly crowned sophomore champion said. "When you sit down, you notice it."

"My dad's never had an NCAA champion, so it makes me feel good to be able to help him out."

The younger Roethlisberger scored 115.450 to best UCLA's Scott Keswick (114.675) and Stanford's Jair Lynch (113.925). He also tied Keswick for the parallel bars championship, scoring a 9.7500.

Although Oklahoma beat Penn State for team honors, the Nittany Lions gave their home crowd plenty to cheer about in the individual-event championships, as Penn State claimed three titles. That performance improved Penn State's total of all-time champions to 42, passing Illinois (40) to move into first place.

Penn State senior Mark Sohn sealed his place in gymnastics history, scoring a perfect 10 on the pommel horse in front of his home fans to become the second man in NCAA history to win an event four straight years. New Mexico's Chad Fox, who won the vault from 1986 through 1989, was the first. The perfect score was Sohn's third of the season and the fourth of his career.

Sohn's teammate, Adam Carton, won the vault (9.7500) and unseated defending rings champion and teammate Wayne Cowden by scoring a 9.9000, becoming the first Nittany Lion to double in the championships since Mike Jacobson won the all-around and horizontal bars in 1965.

UCLA had two individual champions, Keswick and Brad Hayashi, who won the floor exercise (9.8750). New Mexico's Luis Lopez won the horizontal bar with a 9.8500.

Johnson ends two-year run with several awards

By James M. Van Valkenberg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Larry Johnson ended a remarkable two-year run at Nevada-Las Vegas as the most-honored player in NCAA men's basketball this season, winning four of the six major national player-of-the-year awards.

But the honor he wanted most eluded him in the fading seconds at Indianapolis, when Duke edged Nevada-Las Vegas, 79-77, in the national semifinals. Duke then beat Kansas for the national crown, and the most outstanding player award went to Duke's 6-11 Christian Laettner.

Johnson, a 6-7, 250-pounder, passed up a professional contract a year ago to return for his senior season, hoping to lead the Runnin' Rebels to a second straight championship. When Johnson and his teammates reached the Final Four with a 45-game winning streak, fourth longest in Division I history, they had a chance to become the first unbeaten national champion since Indiana in 1976 and the first repeat champion since UCLA in 1973.

Johnson and his teammates had to settle for a 34-1 record — still the best since Indiana's 32-0 in 1976.

The other two player-of-the-year awards went to Shaquille O'Neal, Louisiana State's impressive 7-1 sophomore. Johnson won the Wooden, Naismith, Eastman (National Association of Basketball Coaches) and U.S. Basketball Writers Association awards. O'Neal took the Rupp (Associated Press) and United Press International awards.

Wooden voting

Johnson finished 257 points above O'Neal, 1,646 to 1,389, in the Wooden Award voting. Then came Johnson's teammate, Stacey Augmon, at 1,156; Georgia Tech's Kenny Anderson, 717; Syracuse's Billy Owens, 621; Laettner, 385; Ohio State's Jimmy Jackson, 362; Michigan State's Steve Smith, 222; Providence's Eric Murdock, 194, and Arkansas' Todd Day, 132.

Johnson is the only player in the country to shoot above 60 percent from the field and above 80 percent in free throws this season, combined with above 10 rebounds per game and above 20 points per game. His figures are 66.2 percent (eighth nationally), 81.8 percent, 10.9 and 22.7, respectively. In addition, he had 104 assists, 36 blocks, 74 steals in 35 games and was 17-for-48 in three-pointers.

O'Neal is the national rebounding champion at 14.7 (highest since the 14.8 by Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State in 1985), and seventh in scoring at 27.6.

Little-guy awards

Now for the three little-guy

Basketball notes

awards. Two go to East Tennessee State's 5-7 Keith Jennings, the national champion in three-point accuracy at 59.2 percent and career record-holder at 49.3 (plus second in career assists and fourth in career steals). He took the Steitz Award for three-point shooting and the Frances Pomeroy Naismith Award for the nation's most outstanding senior under six feet.

Chris Corchiani of North Carolina State, assists champion at 9.6 per game and the all-time career leader at 1,038, won the Maravich Award for playmaking.

Johnson, O'Neal, Anderson and Owens are unanimous choices for consensus all-America. Jackson was the fifth first-teamer. The first-team votes he did not receive went to Augmon and Smith, who made second-team consensus, as did Laettner, Jennings and Murdock.

The Wooden Award, by the way, unlike the others has a minimum grade-point average requirement of 2.000 (4.000 scale). Winner Johnson was far above that, with slightly more than 3.500 for the fall semester, making the dean's list, while teammate Augmon was a little above 3.100.

The Wooden voting is by 1,000 media members picked by a blue-ribbon panel of experts (including many former coaches) in every region. It is administered by the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The 10-man to be exact, 64.3, 11.2 and 21.6. But since he was a junior-college transfer, his career is two seasons. Only three players in history, all seven-footers, combined 60 percent, 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds. UCLA's Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar), shot 63.9 in a three-season career 1967 to 1969 (88 games to Johnson's 75) while scoring 2,325 and taking down 1,367 rebounds. The others played four years. They are Navy's David Robinson — 61.3, 2,669 points and 1,314 rebounds over 127 games (1984 to 1987) — and Georgetown's Patrick Ewing — 62.0, 2,184 and 1,315 in 143 games (1982 to 1985). Only one other player came close — Kansas' Danny Manning at 59.3, 2,951 and 1,187 over 147 (1985 to 1988).

Johnson's 64.3 is higher than anyone in the above group, while his rebounding and scoring averages trail only Jabbar's 15.5 and 26.4. Ewing (and Manning) finished below 10 rebounds per game.

Several other seniors finished high on the all-time career charts. Three set career records. Murdock's 376 steals is one. The record numbers by Jennings and Corchiani already have been mentioned. Corchiani also reached sixth in total steals.

Four joined the select list of players surpassing both 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds. They are: Augmon at 2,011 and 1,005; Missouri's Doug Smith 2,184 and 1,053; Creighton's Bob Harstad 2,110 and 1,126, and Delaware State's Tom Davis 2,274 and 1,013. Two others with less than four seasons like Johnson (but with less publicity) also reached 60 percent and average 20 points per game for his career —

Staley, Scholtens finish careers with many honors

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

Virginia junior Dawn Staley and Vanderbilt senior Wendy Scholtens are the most honored players in women's basketball for 1991.

Staley, who led the Cavaliers to the NCAA Division I championship game, swept two of the three top individual honors — the Naismith Trophy and most outstanding player award of the Women's Final Four. Scholtens turned in one of the most outstanding careers in NCAA women's basketball history by placing fourth or higher among 1991 seniors in six different statistical categories. Tennessee's Daedra Charles captured the other women's award — the Wade Trophy.

Scholtens, who led Vanderbilt into the Division I sweet-16 round, topped all 1991 seniors in both career points (2,602) and career free-throw percentage (.868). She was second in career rebounds (1,272), third in career-rebounding average (10.4) and fourth in both career-scoring average (21.3) and career field-goal percentage (.579).

Staley, a 5-6 guard, is one of four repeaters on the 10-player Kodak all-America first team and is one of five players also selected for the first team chosen by the U. S. Basketball Writers Association. The other three Kodak repeaters were Tennessee's Charles, Auburn's Carolyn Jones and North Carolina State's Andrea Stinson. The other four players who made both teams were Louisiana State's Dana Chatman, Cal State Fullerton's Genia Miller, Arkansas' Delmonica DeHorney and North Carolina State's Stinson.

and 20 points per game. They are Cal State Fullerton's 6-3 Miller, 60.1 in shooting, 12.3 in rebounding and second in the nation in scoring at 29.4, and Maine's 6-1 Rachel Bouchard, 60.9 in shooting, 11.0 in rebounding and 23.5 in scoring.

Mercer's 6-3 super-sophomore, Andrea Congreaves, barely missed the select group with 63.3 shooting, 9.7 rebounding and 24.5 scoring. Other all-around performers in 1991 were Central Florida's 6-3 senior Tari Phillips with 51.7, 12.4 and 25.3; Grambling's 6-4 senior Iarcha Hollis with 57.7, 15.3 and 25.1; Campbell's 6-0 senior Tammy Brown with 59.8, 9.7 and 23.9; Georgia Southern's 6-1 senior Tracy Wilson with 56.3, 11.4 and 22.6, and Colgate's 5-11 senior Suzanne Bowen with 58.3, 9.2 and 22.0.

The other three first-teamers on the Kodak team were Connecticut's Kerry Bascom, Purdue's Joy Holmes and Stanford's Sonja Hen-

Other individual leaders

Individual season records were set in field-goal shooting, free-throw shooting and three-point field-goal shooting. Tennessee Tech 6-2 senior Renay Adams set a new standard in field-goal percentage with a .717 mark, hitting 185 of 258 shots from the floor. Delaware 5-6 junior Linda Cyborski set a record in free-throw percentage (.937), hitting 74 of 79 charity shots. Alabama State 5-7 junior Lisa McMullen set records for most three-point field goals made in a season (126) and most made per game (4.5).

Drake 5-10 senior Jan Jensen topped the nation's scorers, averaging 29.6 points; shot 57.2 from the floor, and grabbed 8.6 rebounds per outing. She also made the academic all-America team for the second consecutive year and was selected academic all-America of the year for the university division. She also was awarded an NCAA postgraduate scholarship in 1991.

Other seniors with individual statistical championships this year include Grambling's 6-4 Hollis in rebounding at 15.4 (she also was seventh in scoring at 25.1) and Wyoming's 5-7 Krista Treide in three-point field-goal percentage (50.9), hitting 57 of 112 from long range.

The other three individual championships include the only repeat winner from 1990 — Florida A&M 5-7 junior Shelly Boston in steals (5.1 per game). She deserves special mention because, with 406 steals in three years, she should break the career record of 429 by Alabama State's Neacole Hall early next season. Monmouth (New Jersey) 6-3 junior Suzanne Johnson captured the blocked-shots title, averaging 5.1 per game. Only one freshman won an individual title — Kent's Michelle Burden in assists, at 10.1 per game.

Eight players shot at least 50 percent from the field and 80 percent at the free-throw line and scored 20 per game. They are: Drake's scoring leader Jensen, 57.2, 82.6 and 29.6; Northern Illinois' Lisa Foss, 50.7, 84.6 and 24.4; Georgetown's Kris Witfill, 50.1, 81.7 and 22.6; Vanderbilt's Scholtens, 55.5, 87.2 and 21.4; Indiana State's Julie Lein, 50.4, 85.1 and 21.2; Auburn's Jones, 50.3, 83.0 and 20.5; Butler's Julie Von-Dielingen, 53.4, 84.4 and 20.2, and Connecticut's Bascom, 52.3, 83.7 and 20.0.

Career leaders

On the career charts, Vanderbilt's Scholtens made the most impact by reaching third all-time in free-throw shooting at 86.7 percent, while St. Mary's (California) 5-8 Anja Bordt now is 12th on the same list at 83.6.

Louisiana State's 5-5 Chatman finished 20th at 82.7.

Tennessee Tech's Adams has moved to sixth on the career field-goal accuracy list at 64.4 percent, and she is third among players since 1982. Arkansas' DeHorney now is 18th at 60.9, and Wake Forest's Jenny Mitchell is 21st with a career mark of 60.7. In career scoring, Scholtens' 2,602 points is 32nd on the all-time list, while Grambling's Hollis climbed to 17th on the scoring average list at 24.2 per game and fifth on the list for players since 1982.

Hollis played only 85 games at Grambling but averaged 13.9 rebounds per outing, good enough for 10th on the all-time average list and third for all players since 1982. Maine's Bouchard finished 34th on the career-rebound-average list at 11.9.

Providence's 5-2 Shanya Evans turned in the second-most career assists with 987 (trailing only Penn State's Suzie McConnell's 1,307) and finished third in career assist average at 8.2, while St. Mary's (California) Bordt now is fourth at 8.1. Cal State Fullerton's Miller moved atop the career charts in blocked shots with 428 to pass Oregon's Stefanie Kasperski (402), and in average per game at 3.6.

Mississippi Valley's Donna McGary tops the all-time steals list with 425, but, as mentioned, Florida A&M's Boston has 406 with a year remaining in her career. In career steal average, Southwestern Louisiana's Kim Perrot (421 career assists) leads at 3.8 per outing.

In three-point shooting, South Carolina's 5-10 senior Karen Middleton has moved to fourth on the career percentage list at 44.5, while Davis and SLO), the kids surprised me," Lebedeff said. "We knew we needed to prove that we could live up to our potential. Those matches in February showed us where we needed to be."

Pomona has a senior-dominated lineup led by three all-America players in Onnaca Heron (No. 1 singles), Donna Ewing (No. 3 singles) and Cindy Hamnquist (No. 5 singles). Heron is ranked fourth in singles, while senior Hurzeler is ranked fourth and Ewing is ranked 29th. Hurzeler teams with Ewing at No. 1 doubles to form the nation's second-ranked combination. Heron and Hamnquist, the Broncos' No. 2 doubles team, are ranked seventh. Another senior Ewing, Donna's sister, Diane, plays No. 4 singles and teams with Laird at No. 3 doubles. All those seniors have given Pomona a sense of urgency this season.

Hamnquist, whom Lebedeff called the team spokesperson, has given the Broncos the battle cry. "This is our year or we don't have a year."

UC Davis (18-4 with three matches remaining) already may have had a year of its own in 1990, but that doesn't mean it wants the 1991 crown any less. Winner of 118 consecutive Northern California Athletic Conference matches, Davis is led by 1989 all-America performers, seniors Alison Vidal and Reagan Solt, who combine to form the nation's top-ranked doubles team. Individually, Vidal is ranked second in singles, while Solt, who plays No. 3, is ranked 16th. At No. 2 singles, junior Christy Pohl is ranked 13th. She teams with freshman Leslie Cavanaugh at No. 2 doubles to form the nation's sixth-ranked tandem. Not surprisingly, coach Pam Gill-Fisher said that her team's strength is depth.

"We don't have a weak spot in our lineup," said the Davis coach.

Both Polys are also deep, but Davis has two things those teams don't—the home-court advantage and the experience of already having proven itself under tournament pressure. The Gold River Racquet Club isn't technically Davis' home court, but Gill-Fisher said she expects a partisan crowd, which can only help Davis' chances. Even more important is the fact that Davis learned last year that "it's never over until it's over," according to Gill-Fisher. Davis was down, 4-2, after singles in the semifinals match with SLO last year, but swept doubles to advance to the finals, where Davis beat Pomona, 5-3.

Usually, when three teams play each other as often as these three California teams do, regular-season results should indicate how the tournament will go. This year's dual results do nothing but muddle the picture more. To review, SLO owns a 6-3 win over Pomona and a 5-4 victory over Davis. Davis has beaten Pomona, 8-1. Pomona has won, 6-3, over Davis and 5-4 over SLO.

One person who hopes all this West Coast talk amounts to nothing more than California dreamin' is Ron Elston, fourth-ranked Abilene Christian's first-year coach. Whereas the California teams are strong from top to bottom, Elston said his team's strength lies in his two top singles players and his No. 1 doubles team. All-America Michelle King is ranked third, while Denise Hauer is ranked 15th. The top doubles combination of King and Lara Mahaney is ranked third.

"I feel like the top three teams are deeper than we are," Elston said. "We are strong at one and two singles and at one doubles, but after that the other teams' depth overtakes us."

"In order to beat those teams, three and four singles would have to play solid as would two and three doubles."

Not that those players are slouches. Mahaney, who plays No. 3 singles, is ranked 31st, while No. 4 player Chris Chincholo is ranked 38th.

Abilene Christian (13-4) had a trial California run earlier this month when the Wildcats traveled to Pomona's tournament to take on fifth-ranked Cal State Bakersfield and eighth-ranked Cal State Los Angeles, among others. Playing without Hauer, Abilene Christian lost to Bakersfield, 5-4, and beat Los Angeles, 6-3.

cisco. The Broncos finished fourth among Division I teams in winning percentage at .903.

Mercer, 18-9, was second most improved team, up 13½ games, followed by 15-11 Oregon State, up 12½, and 19-8 Coppin State, 22-7 Creighton and 17-12 Kent, all tied at 11. Others, in order, were 29-3 Western Kentucky at 10½, 20-8 Marshall at 10, 21-8 Michigan State and 20-10 South Carolina State, each at 9½ games' improvement.

Women's trends

Scoring rose to an all-time high of 140.92 (per game, both teams combined) in 1991. Even though two-point field-goal shooting was up slightly, from 43.4 percent last season to 43.5 percent this year, overall field-goal shooting was down from 42.4 to 42.1. The reason seems to be the increased use of the three-point shot even though three-point shooting percentage declined.

The 283 Division I women's teams averaged 16.6 three-point attempts per game, both teams combined, compared to only 13.2 attempts a year ago. Three-point field goals made jumped from 4.4 in 1990 to 5.4 this season. The three-point field-goal percentage fell from 33.2 percent to 32.6 percent in the same period.

Free-throw shooting percentage also jumped from 66.9 last year to 67.2 in 1991, and free-throw attempts and free throws made also were up. Overall field-goal attempts also were up from a year ago, 125.1 to 127.6.

Division II leaders

Fort Valley State senior Jackie Givens set a record for points scored in a season with 1,075, and her 38.4 scoring average also is an all-divisions record. She broke the former Division II record of 32.4, set by Johnson Smith's Kim Brewington in 1990, and she shattered the all-divisions record of 34.3, set by Division III Buena Vista's Jeannie Demers in 1987. Demers set her record before the three-point era began. Givens hit 120 three-point field goals in 1991.

Two other individual records were set in 1991 besides Givens' scoring standard. West Texas State's Darla Leavitt was the only freshman to win an individual category by setting a record in field-goal percentage, hitting 67.4 percent to eclipse the 67 percent set by Morris Brown's Jackie Andrews in 1983. Two other players would have been Nos. 1-2 and would have set a season record in field-goal shooting, but both were ineligible for the national rankings. Oakland City's Dalonda Newton, at 72.9 percent, would have been the all-time season leader, and Pfeiffer's Marsha Long, at 70.9 percent, would have been second.

The other record to fall was in assists, as Albany State (Georgia) sophomore Selina Bynum averaged 10.4 per game to surpass 9.4 set last year by St. Joseph's (Indiana) Jennifer Radosevic.

Givens also captured another individual statistical title in 1991—most three-point field goals made per game with 4.3. She joined two other seniors who won individual titles. The others were Alaska-Anchorage's Greta Fadness in three-point shooting with a 49.6 percentage and St. Anselm senior guard Kerri Lang in free-throw shooting at 90.2 percent. The other individual title was won by Savannah State junior Mabel Sanders in rebounding at 14.5 per game.

Lang takes over as the top women's free-throw shooter in NCAA history. Her career free-throw shooting percentage is 87.648 to edge out Washington's Karen Murray of Division I, who fashioned a career percentage of 87.622 from 1981 to 1984.

Lang made 369 of 421 career charity shots and, in 14 career play-off games, she hit all 53 free-throw attempts. Her best streak was 44 consecutive free throws, and she finished second in free-throw shooting in both 1989 and 1990 before winning the individual title in 1991 with a 90.2 percentage.

West Texas State dominated the team picture with three statistical titles and was the only multiple-category winner. The Lady Buffs were team champions in field-goal shooting at 51 percent; in scoring defense, allowing only 49.7 points per game, and set a record in scoring margin at 36.7 to eclipse the 33.6 set by Hampton in 1988. The Lady Buffs also finished sixth in scoring at 86.3, fourth in won-lost at 30-2, seventh in field-goal defense at 34.8 percent, fifth in free-throw shooting at 73.2 percent and 17th in rebound margin at 8.1.

The other team records set were by Albany State (Georgia) in field-goal defense at 32.3 percent to break the mark of 33.3 set by New Haven in 1985, and by Clarion in three-point field goals made per game at 9.9 to surpass 8.2 by Keene State in 1988.

The other team winners were Augustana (South Dakota) in free-throw shooting at 75 percent, St. Joseph's (Indiana) in rebound margin at 14.0, Jacksonville State in scoring at 92.7, Fort Hays State in won-lost record at 34-2 and Alaska-Anchorage in three-point percentage at 42.1.

On the career charts, only three players reached the coveted 2,000-point/1,000-rebound club in 1991. Added to the list were Minnesota-Duluth's Dina Kangas with 2,810 points and 1,320 rebounds, West Georgia's Velisa Levett with 2,192 and 1,011, and Tuskegee's Cheryl Brown with 2,089 and 1,120. Four other players scored at least 2,000 career points, including Fort Hays State's Annette Wiles (2,407), Fort Valley State's Givens (2,262), Jacksonville State's Dana Bright (2,128) and Norfolk State's Tracy Saunders (2,084).

Minnesota-Duluth's Kangas moved into second place in career points and has the most points for all players since 1982. Her 22.7 career scoring average is ninth among all-time women's players, while Givens' 21.1 now is 15th. Wiles now is eighth in career field-goal shooting at 58.4 percent, and Givens is 12th at 57.6.

Alaska-Anchorage's Fadness will be first on the initial career three-point shooting chart, hitting 164 of 353 for 46.5 percent, followed by Missouri Southern State's Terri Haynes at 42.2 percent. Keene State's Mary Nesbit will top the first career three-pointers-made-per-game chart at 2.9.

Division III leaders

Only one individual season record was set in the division, by Wisconsin-Stevens Point senior Kate Peterson in three-point field goals made per game with 3.85. Second-place finisher Brenda Straight of Nebraska Wesleyan also broke the old record of 3.6, averaging 3.846 per game.

In scoring, Grinnell senior Missy Sharer, the 1991 champion, averaged 33.1 points per game, third best all-time, and second-place finisher Ann Gilbert of Oberlin followed her championship a year ago with a 31.2 norm, fourth highest ever.

Lake Forest sophomore Anne Bennett captured the free-throw shooting title at 90.2 percent, second best ever, and Middlebury junior Caroline Leary won the rebounding crown with 20.1 per game, third all-time.

Other individual winners were Nichols junior Linda Rose in field-goal shooting at 64.1 percent, Christopher Newport freshman Karen Barefoot in assists at 9.8 and Rhodes junior Ellen Thompson in three-point shooting at 52.6 percent. Juniors won three of the seven categories, while seniors won two. Barefoot was the only freshman winner.

Nebraska Wesleyan and Albertus Magnus each won two team statistical categories. Nebraska Wesleyan set a record in capturing three-point field goals made per game at 7.8, besting its own mark of 5.1 from last year. Albertus Magnus set the only other record in field-goal percentage defense at 29.2, surpassing the 30.8 set in 1986 by St. Norbert. Nebraska Wesleyan also won the scoring title at 88.5, and Albertus Magnus took the scoring-defense title, yielding only 46.1 points per game.

Other team winners were Rhodes in three-point shooting at 50 percent, Illinois College in field-goal shooting at 50.4 percent, Allentown in free-throw shooting at 76.7 percent, UC San Diego in rebound margin at 17.2, Roanoke in scoring margin at 28.1 and St. Thomas (Minnesota) in won-lost at 29-2.

In career figures, only one player, William Paterson's Michelle Jones, reached the 2,000-point plateau. The 5-6 senior finished with 2,048 points for 18th on the all-time division list. She also is the career leader in both three-point shooting categories, at 2.6 per game and 41.8 percent. Scoring leader Sharer does have the third-best all-time scoring average at 26.9.

Carri Metzler's (St. Norbert) 57.4 percent is fifth highest ever in field-goal percentage, and Concordia-Moorhead's Michelle Thykeson is 10th at 56.3. Sharer also was close to the all-time division best in free-throw shooting at 83.0 percent, just hundredths behind the leader, Tammy Anair of Southern Maine. Lake Forest's Jill Morrison, at 81 percent, will be fourth on the same list.

Buffalo State's Arlene Eagan is now 11th on the rebounding list at 13.0, and her 1,419 career rebounds is second all-time to Bishop's Tina Shaw (1,452).

News Fact File

There are 99 separate membership positions in the NCAA administrative structure—the five elected NCAA officers, nine other members of the Executive Committee, 41 other members of the Council and 44 members of the Presidents Commission. Currently, those 99 positions are held by individuals from 95 different members (institutions or conference offices). In other words, more than 10 percent of the total membership has direct representation in the NCAA administrative structure. The only members with more than one position are the University of California, Los Angeles (Division I Vice-President Douglas S. Hobbs and Chancellor Charles E. Young, Presidents Commission); California State University, Long Beach (associate athletics director Kay Don on the Council, President Curtis McCray on the Presidents Commission); the University of Mississippi (Chancellor R. Gerald Turner is chair of the Presidents Commission and athletics director Warner Alford is on the Council), and the University of Northern Colorado (President Robert Dickeson on the Commission and AD Robert A. Oliver on the Council).

Other career leaders

Fifteen Division I seniors topped 2,000 career points, making 272 in history. Some already have been mentioned, but here is the complete list in order:

Bradshaw 2,804, Temple's Mark Macon 2,609, North Carolina State's Rodney Monroe 2,551, Marshall's John Taft 2,332, Iuzzolino's teammate Joe Anderson 2,301, Southwestern Louisiana's Kevin Brooks 2,294, Siena's Marc Brown 2,284, Delaware State's Davis 2,274, Michigan State's Smith 2,263, Memphis State's Elliott Perry 2,209, Missouri's Smith 2,184, Harstad 2,110, Loyola's (Illinois) Keith Gales 2,026, Murdock 2,021 and Augmon 2,011.

Using per-game averages to include two- and three-season careers, 13 seniors reached 20. They are Bradshaw 25.3, Gales 24.7, Davis 23.9, Taft 21.8, Johnson 21.6, Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck's Desi Wilson 21.4, Gatling 21.3, Bethune-Cookman's Clifford Reed 21.2, Coppin State's Reggie Isaac 21, Macon 20.7, Vandiver 20.6, Monroe 20.6 and Isaac's teammate Stewart, 20.

Six seniors topped 1,000 rebounds, led by Clemson's Dale Davis at 1,216. Next are Harstad 1,126, Doug Smith 1,053, Stewart 1,052, Tom Davis 1,013 and Augmon 1,005. Rounding out the top 10 are Ohio State's Perry Carter 989, Northern Illinois' Donnell Thomas 984, Northeastern's Steve Carney 971 and Vandiver 962.

In average, it is Stewart 11.6, Johnson 11.2, Tom Davis 10.7, Vandiver 10.6, Austin Peay's Tony Brown 10.3, Georgia State's Chris Collier 10.3, Gatling 10.1 and Dale Davis 10 (no others above nine).

In field-goal accuracy, Stewart at 64.6, Johnson at 64.3 and Florida's Dwayne Davis at 64.1 reached Nos. 9-10-11, respectively, on the all-time chart. Other seniors above 60 Kansas' Mark Randall at 62 (the chart cuts off at 62.1), Iowa State's Victor Alexander 61.1, Gatling 60.6, George Mason's Robert Dykes 60.4 and West Virginia's Chris Brooks 60.2. Rounding out the top 10 are Princeton's Kit Mueller 59.5 and Southern-Baton Rouge's Robert Youngblood 58.9.

The top senior in career free-throw accuracy is New Mexico's Rob Robbins with 88.79 percent, edging him into 10th place all time. Pittsburgh's Jason Matthews barely shaded Iuzzolino, 87.774 to 87.773, and they rank 19-20 all time.

The explosion in three-point shooting is indicated by the fact that 26 seniors reached 200 career three-pointers made one more than in the last four seasons combined (this was the fifth year of universal use). Monroe's 322 leads current seniors and is third on the career list, while Alabama-Birmingham's Andy Kennedy (318 and 87.2 in free-throws), Texas-Arlington's Willie Brand (290), Vanderbilt's Scott Draud (288) and Duquesne's Tony Petrarca (287) rank 6-7-8. In three-pointers made per game, Kennedy (3.35) reached fourth and Kansas' Terry Brown (2.86) 10th (with three more in the top 20). Jennings, as mentioned, set a career accuracy record at 49.3 percent. Iuzzolino's 51.2 is higher, but he made 199, one short of the minimum.

Wisconsin's Tim Locum reached third at 47.2 percent, Monmouth's (New Jersey) Dave Calloway fifth at 45.9 and Matthews sixth at 45.7 (with five more in the top 20).

In assists after Corchiani's record 1,038, Jennings (983), Nevada-Las Vegas' Greg Anthony (950) and Siena's Brown (796) reached Nos. 2-4-16, respectively. In average, Corchiani (8.37), Jennings (7.74) and Anthony (6.88) ended up Nos. 3-7-15.

In steals after Murdock's record 376, Jennings (334), Anthony (329), Corchiani (328), Perry (304) and Macon (281) reached Nos. 4-5-6-8-16, respectively (with two more in the top 20). In average, Murdock (3.21), Corchiani (2.65) and Jennings (2.63) reached Nos. 3-11-12, respectively (with two more in the top 20).

In blocked shots, Georgetown's 7-2 Dikembe Mutombo reached fourth at 354 and New Mexico's 7-2 Luc Longley ninth at 336. In average, Stetson's Lorenzo Williams at 3.71 and Mutombo's 3.70 rank Nos. 2-3, respectively, behind Robinson's record 5.24. Fordham's Damon Lopez (2.77) reached seventh, with Longley (2.54) 12th and Maryland's Lewis (2.52) 13th.

Team leaders

Nevada-Las Vegas dominates in team statistics championships, with three titles and high ranking in five other categories. The Runnin' Rebels are first in scoring margin at 26.7 (fourth highest ever), in field-goal accuracy at 53.5 percent (nudging Indiana's 53.4) and in won-lost percentage at 97.1 on 34-1 highest since Indiana's perfect 32-0 in 1976 and highest by any team with one loss.

At the other end of the court, Nevada-Las Vegas permitted opponents to shoot only 39.96 percent from the field, seventh this season and 12th all time. Only Duke's national champions topped 50 percent all season against its defense. Offensively, Nevada-Las Vegas was fourth in scoring at 97.7, fourth in rebound margin, 12th in three-pointers made per game and 14th in field-goal accuracy (see tables for figures).

Both 34-4 Arkansas and Nevada-Las Vegas led with 34 wins. The other 30-game winners were 32-7 Duke and 30-4 Utah.

Georgetown set the only all-time season record for 1991, allowing 36.8 percent in field-goal percentage defense, led by its twin shot-blocking towers, 7-2 Mutombo and Alonzo Mourning. That broke its national mark of 37 last season. Sub-40 percent shooting has been accomplished only 12 times, as mentioned, with Georgetown doing it five times.

Another perennial defense champion, Princeton, did it again in scoring, this time with a flourish, as its 24-3 team permitted only 48.9 points per game—lowest since Fresno State's 47.1 in 1982, and 12th lowest in history. Pete Carril's teams have won three defensive crowns in a row, six in the last 10 years and nine since 1976. Northern Illinois was a distant second this season at 57.5.

Southern-Baton Rouge took the title in scoring offense, 104.4 to 103.6, over defending champion and record-holder Loyola Marymount. Arkansas was third in scoring at 99.6 and ranked second in scoring margin as well.

New Orleans is the champion in rebound margin at 9.3, well above Murray State's second-place 8.7. The free-throw accuracy crown goes to Butler at 78.6 percent, well above Monmouth's (New Jersey) second-place 77.1.

Wisconsin-Green Bay wins the title in three-point accuracy at 46.4 percent, while in production, Texas-Arlington barely won, 9.14 to 9.12, in three-pointers made per game over East Tennessee State.

Most-improved teams

The 1991 season produced six teams that improved at least 11 games, two more than ever before. Radford leads the list at 15 games (22-7 vs 7-22), tied for fifth highest since this compilation began in 1974.

The previous high of four teams up at least 11 games happened three times—in 1974, 1979 and 1986. The record of 16½ games was set by North Carolina A&T in 1978 (20-8 vs. 3-24; 17 more wins and 16 fewer losses is 33, divide by two) and tied by Murray State in 1980. North Texas was up 16 in 1976. Radford joins Tulsa in 1981 and Utah State in 1983 at the 15-game level.

Nebraska is next at 13 (26-8 vs 10-18); both 30-4 Utah and 17-13 North Texas ended at 12, then 18-11 Butler at 11½ and 15-13 Tulane at 11.

Division II leaders

Seniors won four of the seven individual statistics championships in Division II and no non-three-point season or career records were set. Most of the records are lofty, since the division goes back to 1957—only nine seasons from the start of Division I individual marks.

The junior champions are Bellarmine's Tom Schurfranz in field-goal accuracy at 72.3 percent—seventh highest on record—Shaw's Sheldon Owens in rebounding at 12 per game, and South Dakota's Ryun Williams in free-throw accuracy, 91.20 to 91.18 for Lenoir-Rhyne's Jody Petty in the tightest finish of 1991.

Senior champions are Gary Mattison of St. Augustine's in scoring at 29.5 per game, Adrian Hutt of Metropolitan State in assists at 10.2 per game, Scott Martin of Rollins in three-point accuracy at 56.7 percent (sixth highest on record) and Shawn Williams of Central State (Oklahoma) in three-pointers made per game at 4.4 (third highest).

On the career charts, the seniors who reached 2,000 points are Slippery Rock's Myron Brown at 2,619, Kentucky Wesleyan's Corey Crowder (2,282), Fort Valley State's Julius Fritz (2,275), Bridgeport's Lambert Shell (2,221), Tampa's Bryan Williams (2,195) with teammate Drexel Deveau (2,013), and North Dakota's Dave Vonesh (2,052).

The top senior rebounders are Regis' (Colorado) Darron Greer (10.7), Shell (10.4) and Vonesh (9.9), who leads in total rebounds at 1,221. Chapman's Roger Middleton reached eighth on the all-time list in career field-goal accuracy at 65 percent.

The only career record came in three-point accuracy, where season champion Martin ended with a record 51.3 percent (minimum 200 made). In career three-pointers made, Tampa's Williams (303), Northeast Missouri State's Steve Schieppe (300) and Indianapolis' Kyle Persinger (247) ended Nos. 3-4-tie 10, respectively, on the career chart. On a per-game basis, Central State's (Oklahoma) Williams (3.72) and Schieppe (2.86) ended Nos. 2-8, respectively.

Southwest Baptist is the only double champion in the team rankings, winning in field-goal percentage defense at 39 percent and in won-lost percentage at .906 on 29-3. The division's national champion, North Alabama, tied for third at 29-4.

Troy State is the scoring offense champion at 108.6. Ashland, second at 99.8, won in scoring margin with 21.6. South Carolina-Spartanburg, 26-3, is the field-goal accuracy champion at 56.6 percent. Minnesota-Duluth, second at 55.2, is the champion in scoring defense at 59.3.

California (Pennsylvania) is the winner in rebound margin at 12.6. Lenoir-Rhyne won in free-throw accuracy at 78.2 percent. The only season records came in three-point shooting. Rollins shot a record 47.5 percent from three point range (minimum 200 made; Rollins made 278). In three-pointers made per game, champion Hillsdale averaged a record 11.8, Troy State 11.6 and the next two teams also smashed the former record of 10.4.

Remarkably, two juniors reached 2,000 career points—Pfeiffer's Tony Smith at 2,297 and Morehouse's Harold Ellis at 2,215.

Division III leaders

Records are getting much tougher to break in 18-year-old Division III, but seven team and individual season records were set, and three did not involve three-point shooting.

Andy Enfield of Johns Hopkins shot a record 95.3 percent in free throws. Chris Jans of Loras made a record 133 three-pointers and averaged a record 5.3 per game. Both are seniors. The only other senior champion is Capital's Scott Baxter in field-goal accuracy at 72.6 percent.

The other four individual crowns went to juniors. Andre Foreman of Salisbury State took the scoring title at 31.5, Hamilton's Mike Smith is the rebound champion at 16.1 per game, Coe's Eric Johnson is the assists winner with a 9.9 average and Alma's Mike Bachman led in three-point accuracy at 60.5 percent.

On the career charts, Christopher Newport's Lamont Strothers reached third in total points at 2,709 and Kean's Herman Alston ended up ninth at 2,457. Other seniors above 2,000 points are Waldemar Sender of Southeastern Massachusetts at 2,281, Dean Cook of Wisconsin-River Falls 2,229, Leon Hill of Emory & Henry 2,153 and Enfield 2,025.

NCAA seminar is June 2-4

Registrations are being accepted for the June 2-4 NCAA Professional Development Seminar at the Omaha (Nebraska) Marriott Hotel. Representatives of NCAA member institutions who mail their registrations by May 1 can receive a $30 discount off the regular registration rate.

Hotel reservations also may be made for the discounted rate of $70 per night, if reservations are made by May 10.

The seminar will include sessions on organizing a successful athletics department; commercial involvement in athletics programs in the 1990s; effective time management; organizing special events at sporting events; high-impact, low-budget promotions; steps for intercollegiate licensing, and radio and television technology.

Yeshiva's Jon Rosner leads all seniors in career rebound average at 12.3. Baxter (64.6 percent) reached fifth and Mike Johnson of Wisconsin-Eau Claire (63.2) ninth on the field-goal accuracy chart. In free-throw shooting, Enfield set a career record of 92.5 percent, while Eric Elliott (86.8), Johnson (86.6) and Jeff Thomas of King's (Pennsylvania) at 86.2 finished Nos. 6-7-9, respectively, in the career table.

The 1991 seniors rewrote the career top 10 in three-pointers made, with Scott Lamond of Gettysburg scoring a record 278. Jerry Junius of Allegheny (275) is second; David Byer of Salisbury State (251), Troy Greenlee of DePauw and Mario Pritchett of Shenandoah tied for seventh at 232, and Westfield State's Jim Bruno is 10th at 231. In made per game, Junius (2.96), Lamond (2.90), Pritchett (2.76), Jans (2.642) and David Miller of King's (Pennsylvania) at 2.639 rank Nos. 2-3-4-5-6, respectively. In accuracy, Greenlee is third at 49 percent and Pritchett fifth at 48.2.

Hamilton won four team statistics titles and set one of the two non-three-point season records with its rebound margin of 17 per game. The other went to Redlands in scoring offense at 104.8 per game. Hamilton's other crowns were in field-goal percentage defense at 38.3, scoring margin at 23.6 and won-lost percentage at .963 on 26-1. The division championship was won by 28-3 Wisconsin-Platteville; Hamilton did not compete in the tournament under conference policy.

Otterbein won in field-goal accuracy at 53.9, Wartburg in free-throw accuracy at 79.5, Ohio Northern in scoring defense at 55.9, and Ripon in three-point accuracy at 46.5, and Redlands became a double champion by scoring a record 11.8 three-pointers per game while making a record total of 307.

Scoring champion Foreman performed a rare feat by reaching 2,000 career points as a junior—2,193, to be exact.

The seminar begins Sunday, June 2, with registration and a welcome reception. Seminar participants will attend session four of the 1991 NCAA College World Series at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. The seminar will involve full-day activities June 3 and 4.

Registration is $165 for NCAA members if the reservation form is postmarked by May 1. Regular registration is $195 and late registration is $225. Non-member registration is $295. If three or more representatives of the same NCAA member institution register, each may register for $175.

Registrations should be mailed to P.O. Box 3071, Lexington, Kentucky 40596. Checks should be made payable to "NCAA Professional Development Seminar."

CORRECTION

In an article regarding secondary violations that appeared in the April 17 issue of The NCAA News, it was reported erroneously that the head men's basketball coach at Georgia Southern University contacted a prospect during a quiet period and, as a result, received institutional penalties that were accepted by the NCAA. It should have been reported that it was an assistant basketball coach rather than the head coach who was involved.

Officiating panel backs required clinics

The NCAA Basketball Officiating Committee voted April 11 to recommend to the Association's Executive Committee that the attendance requirements and penalty structure relating to the regional officiating clinics remain the same.

All Division I supervisors of officials (or the conference administrator responsible for basketball officiating), conference game officials and a full-time member of each Division I member's basketball coaching staff are required to attend one of the NCAA regional officiating clinics held annually in the fall.

The committee, which met in Chicago, reaffirmed the current penalty structure for noncompliance with the attendance requirements, but added that there should be an escalated system for conferences or individuals who repeatedly are in noncompliance and that conferences should be encouraged to assess penalties that appropriately correlate with the offense.

The committee also is seeking direction from the Executive Committee as to specific ways in which Divisions II and III can benefit more from the officiating-improvement program. It is the sense of the committee that these divisions serve as a feeder system for Division I. Currently, rules and clinic videotapes are provided to conferences in these divisions, and one representative of each Division II or III conference can attend a regional clinic.

The committee supported a recommendation from the National Association of Basketball Coaches officiating committee that Division I men's basketball officials work no more than four games in a week. This recommendation will be forwarded to the appropriate NCAA committees for consideration.

The committee continues to support the elimination of split officiating crews for men's and women's basketball. The committee voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that a solid crew from one of the two conferences of the participating institutions or a solid independent crew from a conference that does not have an institution participating in the game be considered in place of a split crew.

The committee reaffirmed its strong support of keeping conversation between coaches and officials to a minimum during games and directed that guidelines be developed for administering the bench-decorum and no-conversation rules. Existing guidelines regarding the bench-decorum rule will be solicited from conferences.

In other actions, the committee will recommend to the Collegiate Commissioners Association that the primary analyst team (play-by-play and color analyst) for a conference's syndicator be invited to attend a regional clinic and that there be a joint business session of men's and women's basketball supervisors of officials during the September 14-16 meetings of the respective groups. A recommendation that conference-grant funds could be utilized for the experimentation of three-person officiating crews in connection with women's basketball was denied, and the rotation of the West Coast women's clinic site among Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco was approved. The 1991 clinic will be conducted in Denver.

Beginning with the 1991 fall season, Lehigh University will field a women's soccer team that will compete in the Patriot League.

Women's soccer will become the 23rd intercollegiate sport at the university and the first to be added since women's indoor track and field began during the 1987-88 season.

Lehigh will be one of six schools competing in the Patriot League, with the U.S. Military Academy, Bucknell University, Colgate University, College of the Holy Cross and Lafayette College.

Georgia Athletic Association 'adopts' elementary school

The partnership between the University of Georgia Athletic Association and the Barrow Elementary School of Athens, Georgia, became official recently when representatives of the two organizations signed "adoption papers" as part of the Clarke County School District's Adopt-A-School Program.

The Clarke County School District's Adopt-A-School Program is a reciprocal agreement by which Clarke County schools become partners with the private sector.

An assembly, complete with songs and rap cheers by students, was held at the school in conjunction with the official signing, and several members of the Georgia Athletic Association attended, along with teachers, students and administrators from Barrow School, which is across the street from the athletics department's Butts-Mehre Heritage Hall on the Georgia campus.

"We're extremely happy to be partners in education with Barrow School," said Vince Dooley, Georgia's director of athletics. "Personnel at the Georgia Athletic Association are eager to participate in this great venture, and I'm confident that people on both sides will benefit from this association. We have the tremendous opportunity to encourage, share and care for one another," Dooley told Jeff Hundley of the Georgia sports information staff.

With the adoption, the association has pledged to join the Georgia Power Company, a 1986 adopter of Barrow, in the voluntary support of various programs and activities at the school. Athletics association employees will have the opportunity to become involved with students in the classroom and to serve as mentors outside the school setting or to assist with a variety of special school projects.

"The opportunities are endless," Barbara Wright, school principal, said. "This partnership can go as far as we want to take it. Time is really the only thing that can limit what we're able to do together."

Vince Dooley, director of athletics at the University of Georgia, and some of the pupils from Barrow Elementary School in Athens, Georgia, take the pledge of adoption

In the effort to organize its volunteer effort, the athletics association has formed a coordinating committee.

Ties between the athletics association and Barrow School actually date back more than 50 years. Current Georgia assistant athletics di-ciation's coordinator for student-athlete development and placement.

"I'm overwhelmed by the history we share with Barrow," Dooley said. "Given that Dan Magill attended school here and the fact that I've seen more than 25 years worth of students come through this school, we've got some deep roots.

Good sports

rector Dan Magill was once a student there and recently was the honored speaker at dedication ceremonies for the school's new physical education complex. Bulldog assistant football coach Willie McClen-don has two sons, Brandon and Bryan, attending the school; and Harry Sims, a fifth-grade teacher at Barrow and a former Georgia track and field athlete, is the nephew of Hornsby Howell, the athletics asso-

"More than history, however, we share the deep belief in the importance of education. Also, we share in wanting to make the Athens community the best place in the world to live."

This freshman doesn't fit mold

Phillis Woods isn't the average college freshman tennis player. For openers, she won her first 11 singles matches.

More important, she brings tournament-seasoned experience to the Missouri Southern State College team after winning the city singles championship in Tulsa.

And, unlike the average freshman, Phillis Woods is a 52-year-old mother of three and a grandmother of two.

After a match April 21, Phillis is 16-3 in singles and 14-4 in doubles.

Woods resumed her college education last fall after she and her husband, Rod, moved to Joplin from Kansas City, Missouri.

"I had attended a few semesters at Tulsa Junior College, but we've been moving around the last five or six years, and I had to put my education on hold," she explained. "When we moved to Joplin, I saw an opportunity to pursue my education and hopefully become an RN (registered nurse)."

Her introduction to college tennis happened by accident.

"My husband always enjoyed my playing in tournaments and went to as many as he could," Woods said. "I hadn't played the last five years, but when we moved to Joplin he suggested I try to get my tennis skills back," she told Wendell Redden, sports editor of The Joplin Globe.

Woods wasn't a full-time student in the fall and couldn't participate in Missouri Southern's fall matches.

But Southern's No. 5 singles player has fulfilled her academic requirements this semester and is eligible for collegiate competition.

And she's having a ball.

"It's a lot of fun and so interesting in that a lot of the girls (her opponents) don't know what to expect when we walk out on the court. Some get frustrated when things don't work out for them and end up beating themselves.

"Most of my opponents are very receptive. One said she'd want her mom to do the same thing."

As for her own teammates, Woods said, "they treat me just like one of the girls, no special treatment because of my age. I really enjoy the structured activity of a college tennis program. It's easy to be motivated when you're working toward goals."

"Phillis is an ideal person to coach," said coach Georgina Bodine. "She's willing to do anything I ask and she's very dedicated and very confident on the court. That trait shows through to her opponents.

"She's not a power player; she doesn't have the big, power serve, but she can place the ball where she wants it, and she's in good physical condition. She can play three sets and not tire."

Woods' love of tennis wasn't forced on her three children.

"None of them has played, but they're very supportive of everything I do and have told me how proud they are of me," she said.

A little move is big news for former NCAA president Cross

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News Staff

Harry M. Cross has moved.

That might not be earth-shattering news about most people. And when you consider that the move covered less than a block, it really seems insignificant. But then, Harry and Lynn, his wife of more than 55 years, lived 40 years in the same Kirkland, Washington, house which is why a move, albeit a small one, is big news.

Cross was NCAA president in 1969 and 1970. He was the first and only president who was not previously a member of the Association's Council. He served in capacities of national scope with the NCAA from 1964 through 1982, all while faculty athletics representative for and law professor at the University of Washington.

Stability defines Cross.

"We moved around the corner, in a sense," he said. "We are still in the corner of the tract where our house was. Now, where it was are condominiums, townhouses and apartments. We just moved six or seven hundred feet, but we've moved. The putting green and flower beds are parking lots now."

Cross' first experience with the NCAA was as a member of the Constitution and Bylaws Committee in January 1964. He served four years, the last three as committee chair. In May 1964, he was named to the Nominating Committee. He served for three years, and then again in 1980-81.

He chaired five different committees, including three while he was NCAA president. In total, he served in 18 positions with the NCAA, as an officer or committee member.

Peaceful presidency

"We had two pretty peaceful years (as president)," he said. "Some of the changes that are occurring now, in terms of recruiting, really started while I was president, behind the Special Committee on Financial Aid, of which (former Boston College athletics director and NCAA president) Bill Flynn was the chair."

During his presidency, Cross was involved in the first major revision of the NCAA Manual. "I don't recall too much about it, other than the fact that it took an awful lot of work putting it together," he said. "We did pretty much the same thing as they did recently. We tried to put things into a more orderly fashion. We brought in things that were not previously in the Manual — interpretations and things that were just as binding for the membership."

But other than as president, Cross probably is best known for his days with the Committee on Infractions. And he is not the least bit afraid to acknowledge that service. "I'm not uncomfortable with anything I did with the NCAA," he said. "My most active involvement was with that committee, so it's only natural that it would be the most vivid memory."

When Cross first started with the Committee on Infractions, it was a three-man committee that also had responsibility for investigations. He was part of the movement away from that responsibility. "At that time, the committee theoretically did the investigating. (Former NCAA enforcement director) Art Bergstrom did quite a bit of it, and Warren Brown was the only hired investigator. We used to get onion-skin copies of Warren's or Art's interviews.

"I had a lot to do with the change of its procedure. It moved from being an investigative body to being a quasi-administrative and quasi-judicial body. It has changed some more since then, but that was anticipated with the first movement. The recommendation came from the Council. We then had general supervision of the investigation, but not the day-to-day knowledge."

Off the mark

Noting the attention currently being paid to the enforcement process and the various state legislatures' actions regarding due process, Cross thinks the criticisms are out of line. "I think they (the states enacting legislation to ensure due process) are off the mark," he said. "The due process that they are referring to, the confrontation of witnesses, is essentially a criminal-law concept. This is not a criminal procedure.

"The basic concept of due process is fairness and the person having the ability to know the charges and have an opportunity to answer."

Bowl association sets team-selection procedures

The 18 members of the Football Bowl Association unanimously have adopted formal procedures for the establishment and enforcement of invitation dates for bowl games.

Under the procedures:

- No member may extend an offer to or make an agreement with an institution or its representatives prior to 3 p.m. Eastern time on the first Sunday after the third Saturday in November.

- Failure to abide by the restriction shall result in a fine of 10 percent of the offending bowl game's remittance to the participating institution in that year's game, up to a maximum of $250,000. Other sanctions could be imposed if warranted.
- All investigative hearings and disciplinary considerations would be administered by outside, independent agencies. An outside, independent investigator would process all allegations (which must be placed in writing) by an association member. Upon completion of the investigation, the findings would be submitted to an independent, outside body for hearing.

At the hearing, the accused bowl would be accorded all rights of due process.

Any appeal of the findings would be heard by the association's executive committee.

"This action clearly illustrates the cooperative atmosphere which surrounded our meetings this week," said Football Bowl Association chair Steve Hatchell, executive director of the Federal Express Orange Bowl, who announced the procedures at the end of those meetings April 18 in Orlando, Florida.

"We will do our part to ensure the integrity of this process and would also request the institutions and the conferences to do likewise.

"We feel strongly that the bowl system has served college football well in the past and will continue that tradition in the future," Hatchell said.

The association met in conjunction with the annual spring meeting of the NCAA Postseason Football Subcommittee (see accompanying story), which, as a result of the association's action, decided not to act at this time on two proposals to establish a "draft system" for placing NCAA member institutions in bowl games.

A subcommittee of the subcommittee had developed proposals under which (1) the bowls would select, one by one in predetermined order, teams to participate in the games and (2) teams would select the bowl. However, the Postseason Football Subcommittee opted only to receive those proposals without action, in order not to interfere with the Football Bowl Association's new procedures.

During their meetings, bowl association members also:

- Updated the association's operating procedures manual, which is included in the NCAA Postseason Football Handbook.

- Elected John Bell, executive director of the Mazda Gator Bowl, to a three-year term as chair, replacing Hatchell, who completed his three-year term.

Limitations

ticket needs of participating teams.

- To prohibit the sponsoring agency of a certified bowl game, under Bylaw 30.8.17(f), from changing the site of the game without the approval of the Postseason Football Subcommittee. The bylaw already prohibits changes in the name, date and time of a game once it has been certified.

The subcommittee also recommended that Bylaws 16.1.4.2.1 and 16.1.4.2.2 be amended at the 1992 Convention to permit providing "separate" awards with a total maximum value of $300 to student-athletes who participate in a certified bowl game. The bylaws currently permit the presentation of such awards only to participants in NCAA championship events.

Another area of concern at the subcommittee's meeting was officiating. Among other actions, the subcommittee endorsed an agreement among seven bowl games with tie-ins to conferences that will ensure the presence of neutral officiating crews at those games, including — for the first time — the Rose Bowl.

The Southwest Athletic, Southeastern, Big Ten, Western Athletic, Big Eight and Pacific-10 Conferences will provide crews on a rotating basis for those games, which also include the Florida Citrus, Mobil Cotton, Fiesta, Thrifty Car Rental Holiday, Federal Express Orange and USF&G Sugar Bowls. Should the recently expanded Big East Conference obtain a tie-in agreement with a bowl game, its officials also could join the rotation.

Under that plan, the Rose Bowl no longer would use a split Big Ten/Pacific-10 officiating crew, as it had in the past under Bylaw 30.8.8. That bylaw prescribes that officiating crews will be drawn from the participating conferences for a "closed" game in which those conferences, rather than the bowl's sponsoring agency, select the game's participants.

In a related action, however, the subcommittee denied a request from another "closed" game, the California Bowl, to employ neutral officiating crews. In denying the request, the subcommittee cited a number of other exemptions from bowl regulations that already have been granted for the game.

Members of the Football Bowl Association, during their own meeting in Orlando (see accompanying story), met with the Postseason Football Subcommittee and agreed in principle to a set of proposed guidelines that would govern the reporting of financial information by the bowl games.

The guidelines, which are expected to be completed at the subcommittee's June meeting, would be implemented for the 1992-93 bowl season. The purpose is to ensure that every bowl reports the same financial information in such categories as income, merchandise, tickets, letters of credit, membership fees, title and corporate sponsor income, and other categories as defined in the guidelines.

In other business, the subcommittee:

- Reaffirmed, under Bylaw 30.8.2, that the requirement for a team to win a minimum of six games against Division I-A opponents will be implemented this year. The action came in response to a request from a few member institutions to delay implementation of the requirement.

- Reaffirmed, under Bylaw 31.5.1, that each participating institution's share of the gross receipts from a bowl game shall be equal.

The subcommittee also heard reports on the current Internal Revenue Service case involving the Mobil Cotton and John Hancock Bowls and on potential conflicts between bowl games and the National Football League schedule in 1994 and 1995. On the matter of the scheduling conflicts, the subcommittee will investigate whether television networks' contracts to broadcast NFL games will require any bowl games to renegotiate television contracts.

Information about pay-outs from 1990-91 bowl games also was provided to the subcommittee. Last season, the 19 bowl games paid a total of $62,678,362 to the participating institutions (compared to $58,440,760 the previous year), for an average of $1,649,431 per institution. The bowl games grossed $80,352,278, compared to $79,984,824 the previous year.

Chicago basketball player and Iowa track athlete named Byers Scholars

A men's track and cross country athlete and a women's basketball player are the Walter Byers Scholarship Committee's choices as this year's Byers Scholars.

J. David Brown of the University of Iowa and Kristin E. Maschka of the University of Chicago will receive the scholarships, which are worth $10,000 each. Brown and Maschka were among six finalists who were interviewed by the committee April 23 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The Byers scholarships were established in 1988 to recognize the contributions of the former NCAA executive director by encouraging excellence in academic performance by student-athletes.

Award recipients are required to have a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale); show evidence of superior character, leadership and community service, and demonstrate that participation in athletics has been a positive influence on personal and intellectual development, among other qualifications.

The committee considered 52 applicants for the awards.

Following is a look at the 1991 Byers Scholars and their accomplishments:

J. David Brown

Brown entered his final semester at Iowa with a 3.950 GPA as a global studies and Russian major.

As a four-year letter winner in cross country and team cocaptain during his senior season, Brown capped his career in that sport last fall by finishing 18th in the Big Ten Conference championships and 22nd out of 215 competitors in NCAA regional competition. A year earlier, he was honored as the Hawkeyes' outstanding cross country runner. In track, Brown has competed in the mile, 3,000-meter run, 3,000-meter steeplechase and 5,000-meter run.

Kristin E. Maschka

Academically, the four-time Big Ten cross country all-academic team member has been a Rhodes Scholarship regional finalist and Truman Scholarship finalist. Three times, he was honored for completing two consecutive semesters with a 4.000 GPA, and he also has been named to the dean's list at Iowa seven times.

Outside of the classroom, he has been a violinist in the University of Iowa Symphony and also played in the professional Quad City Symphony. In addition, he was politically active in the 1988 Presidential campaign of George Bush.

Brown's postgraduate plans include pursuing a doctorate in economics, leading to a research career focusing on the economy of the Soviet Union.

Kristin E. Maschka

Maschka is an honors major in the history, philosophy and social studies of science program at Chicago, where the senior holds a 3.809 GPA.

She has been honored as a women's basketball player of the year in the University Athletic Association, where she also has been a repeat first-team all-conference selection. Maschka also has received first-team all-America recognition from the American Women's Sports Federation.

Maschka is a recipient of Chicago's Ann B. Wilson Scholarship, a four-year, full-tuition award that is awarded to a woman athlete who qualifies for a College Honors Scholarship at the school. Last year, she was a Rhodes Scholarship regional finalist.

As an officer in the university's Women's Athletic Association, she has helped direct the organization in its charity efforts for the local Special Olympics. In addition, the women's basketball team that Maschka has cocaptained for the past two seasons works with Thousand Points of Light, an organization that provides positive role models for the children of Chicago's inner city.

Maschka, whose academic work as an undergraduate has centered on the subject of medical ethics, plans to pursue a doctorate.

Conference signs new TV contract

The Mid-Continent Conference and SportsChannel-Chicago have reached agreement on a new three-year deal that will significantly enhance the conference's exposure on SportsChannel.

The agreement includes telecasting the Mid-Continent basketball game of the week and the conference basketball tournament semifinals. Additionally, Mid-Continent regular-season and championship events in soccer and baseball will be telecast.

SportsChannel will continue to broadcast SportsCheck, the weekly half-hour talk show produced by the conference. SportsCheck is hosted by Sports Illustrated senior writer Rick Telander. Basketball coaches' shows produced by Mid-Continent member institutions will also be broadcast as part of the agreement. In total, more than 175 Mid-Continent programs will be broadcast yearly.

NCAA promotes Mitchell to assistant executive director

Nancy L. Mitchell, a member of the Association's legislative services staff since 1985, has been named assistant executive director for legislative services.

She replaces William B. Hunt, who left the NCAA to pursue other opportunities.

A 1979 graduate of the University of Kansas, Mitchell also earned a law degree from Kansas in 1985.

While in law school she served as a student director for Douglas County (Kansas) legal aid and as a clerk for the Kansas Board of Regents' general counsel.

Mitchell joined the national office staff as a legislative assistant and was promoted to director of legislative services in June 1987.

During that time, she also served as staff liaison to the Special NCAA Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification.

Mitchell also has worked with the Association's Academic Requirements Committee, the Presidents Commission Division III Subcommittee, and the Division III Steering Committee of the NCAA Council.

Triple plays not so unusual at Georgia Southern

Baseball triple plays are rare at any level of competition -- unless, it seems, you happen to play at Georgia Southern University. Eagle players already have turned two triple plays this month!

During an April 1 game against Armstrong State College, right-fielder Todd Greene handled a routine fly ball and threw to third baseman Kevin Hallman, who tagged a runner trying to advance before throwing to second, where Chad Sumner was waiting to nail another runner attempting to advance.

Then, April 15, with Charleston Southern University runners on first and third, Hallman grabbed a line drive, tagged third to double up that base runner and threw to first, where Mike Yuro was waiting to apply the tag. Hallman, then, was responsible for half the outs recorded in this different kind of "triple-double."

Stetson University's women's golf program recently received $5,000 for use in funding scholarships from the Ladies Professional Golf Association. The money was part of more than $40,000 raised by the LPGA Solheim Cup, the first trans-Atlantic women's professional team match-play event.

Men's soccer teams from Rutgers University, New Brunswick (1990 Division I finalist), and Glassboro State College (1990 Division III champion) met recently in an unofficial state championship. Rutgers won, 3-0, but the real winner of this benefit fund-raiser was South Jersey Youth Soccer, which received the more than $1,800 raised during the contest.

Albion College recently hosted "A Weekend with Ike," a tribute to Albion alumnus Elkin "Ike" Isaac. Isaac played football and basketball at the school and, after graduating in 1948, coached four sports there. He left in 1975 to become athletics director at the University of the Pacific and, following retirement in 1984, moved to Kalamazoo, Michigan, where he now resides.

Troy State University officials recently retired the No. 25 jersey worn by former baseball player and coach Chase Riddle. Special ceremonies honoring Riddle were held prior to Troy State's April 13 double-header with Jacksonville State University.

A membership directory now is available free from the U.S. Tennis Court and Track Builders Association, which is headquartered in Baltimore, Maryland. Complete listings of tennis court and track builders are included. For a copy, contact the organization at 720 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21230 (telephone 301/752-3500).

Daniel E. Doyle Jr., founder and executive director of the Institute for International Sport at the University of Rhode Island, has developed the World Scholar-Athlete Games, which have been scheduled for June 1993. Scholar-athletes from 125 nations will compete on international teams in basketball, soccer, volleyball and tennis.

University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, officials recently dedicated the newly renovated track and field facility at the school, when the track was named in honor of former cross country and track athlete Irwin "Ike" Belk. The $1.6 million renovation project was completed last fall.

About $100,000 was raised recently during the 1991 edition of Idaho State University's annual Bengal Foundation auction.
