FTC probe leads to far-reaching TV subpoenas

The NCAA and Division I-A member institutions and conferences are targets of subpoenas seeking information on television contracts as a result of the Federal Trade Commission's efforts to prove that a five-year, $300 million TV pact between the College Football Association and Capital Cities/ABC violates Federal antitrust laws.

In addition, the FTC has subpoenaed a wide variety of additional documents from Division I-A schools that belong to the CFA, including financial records and information about coaches' contracts and graduation rates, and also has requested explanations of how football programs at those schools fit into the educational objectives of athletics programs.

FTC attorneys have argued during proceedings in the CFA case that major-college football programs are operated for commercial rather than educational objectives and therefore are subject to antitrust laws despite the CFA's nonprofit status.

In the NCAA subpoena, which was served on behalf of Capital Cities/ABC for the preparation of its defense, the FTC requested information on:

- Contracts providing for the purchase of rights to televise any two or more athletics contests (in any sport).

• Agreements permitting any party to choose for telecast any of two or more athletics contests.

• Agreements permitting the telecast of a single athletics contest and restricting or limiting the ability of the rights seller to make additional sales or rights for telecast.

The FTC's subpoena covers TV contracts from January 1, 1985, to the present.

The subpoena also requested any document describing rules, policies and procedures established by the NCAA to control the scheduling of football contests or changes in schedules. In response, the NCAA has disclosed the fact that it currently has or has had television agreements as described in the subpoena with CBS-TV and ESPN (a subsidiary of Capital Cities/ABC) and has provided the dates of those pacts, said John J. Kitchin of Swanson, Midgely, Gangwere, Clarke and Kitchin, the Association's legal counsel.

The NCAA also has provided copies of every edition of the NCAA Manual published since 1985 to demonstrate that the Association has no rules or policies regarding football scheduling outside of those in Bylaw 17 relating to the length of playing and practice seasons.

Subpoenas issued to the 64 Division I-A schools that are CFA members seek significantly more information covering the years 1980 to 1990.

The FTC requested that those schools provide, by May 17, such information as the identification of telecasters purchasing rights to football contests; the entities that sold those rights; the number of games purchased by telecasters and the amounts paid; the date, time and home team for each of those televised contests, and data on TV audiences and ratings for those telecasts.

The subpoenas also request:

- Any documents relating to television agreements between schools and telecasters for college basketball contests.

• Documents pertaining to changes or proposed changes in conference membership.

• Financial data, including documents pertaining to expenses and revenues of football programs and revealing all sources of funding for the operation of such programs.

• From state institutions, information on whether a legislative body or other state agency permits the use of state or university funds for athletics.

• Information on corporate sponsorships and other promotional activities.

• Information on commercially sponsored radio programs involving

Only 27 of 6,229 fall drug tests positive

Including year-round drug testing in Division I football and tests conducted during fall 1990 NCAA championships, 27 of the 6,229 student-athletes tested (0.4 percent) were declared ineligible after yielding positive results. Information on the football and fall-championships tests was released by the Association's sports-sciences staff.

In the new year-round NCAA drug-testing program for Division I football, 18 of the 4,383 student-athletes tested were ruled ineligible for failure to appear for a scheduled drug test. Including the "no-shows," 0.5 percent of those selected for testing were ruled ineligible. Of that group, 17 tested

Two appointed to Commission

Chief executive officers of Florida Atlantic University and Mississippi Valley State University have been appointed to serve on the Association's Presidents Commission.

Florida Atlantic President Anthony James Catanese has been named to a Division II position on the Commission, replacing Bruce A. Samson, who is retiring as president of the University of Tampa. Catanese will serve the remainder of Samson's term, which expires in January 1994.

Mississippi Valley President William W. Sutton has been appointed to a Division I-AA at-large position on the Commission, replacing Joseph B. Johnson, who is leaving Grambling State University to become president of Talladega College in Alabama. Sutton will serve the remainder of Johnson's term, which expires in January 1993, and then will be eligible for reelection.

Transplanted Texan tracks trends in college-sports finance

By Martin T. Benson
The NCAA News Staff

The scene: a home on 45 acres. The owner calls it a ranch. A few ponds—well-stocked with bass and catfish—dot the property.

The proprietor, Mitchell H. Raiborn, pulls on his work clothes—jeans, a shirt and one of his four pairs of Tony Lama cowboy boots—and departs on the 25-mile drive to his office in Peoria, Illinois.

Not everyone who works in Peoria—the reputed seat of normalcy in the United States—dons clothes like these for work. If some do, chances are they can't legitimately attach the letters Ph.D and CPA to their names the way this transplanted Texan can.

It's also a safe bet none of them can talk high finance like Raiborn, a Bradley University accounting professor. Usually, however, when a Texan talks big money, he's talking about oil. When Raiborn speaks high finance, he's talking about something else near and dear to Texans' hearts: college sports.

Since 1969, Raiborn has conducted research for an NCAA publication entitled "Revenues and Expenses of Intercollegiate Athletics Programs." The publication originally was part of Raiborn's Ph.D. dissertation, and the current volume contains an analysis of college athletics spending trends over the past five years.

As a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Missouri, Columbia, in 1969, Raiborn got hooked up with the study indirectly through Arthur Nebel, then dean of the college of community and social services. Nebel was serving on a committee that was looking at the rising cost of college athletics, but that committee was having a hard time because no research had been conducted on the subject.

Nebel took the idea back to campus and presented it to Joseph Silvoso, one of Raiborn's accounting professors.

"He (Silvoso) stopped me in the hall one day and said, 'Raiborn, do you have any interest in intercollegiate sports?'"

Raiborn answered in a way that would do his alma mater proud.

"I said I was a graduate of the University of Texas, so that made me a Longhorn fan. He took that as a sign that I was interested."

Silvoso took the news to Nebel, who interviewed the prospective author.

"He was probably concerned with my Texas accent and whether I knew the English language, so he wrote down a sentence and said, 'Mr. Raiborn, can you identify the antecedent of the demonstrative adjective in this sentence?'"

Raiborn could, and he got the job.

Though the latest edition of the study—77 pages of numerical tables and analyses—is extensive, Raiborn said it pales in comparison with the initial publication. The original was so big (407 pages), in fact, that the author certainly didn't plan on repeating the process in the near future. Doing it for 21 straight years? Well, that wasn't a consideration.

A massive work

"In all honesty, the first study was of such massive proportions that just seeing the light at the end of the tunnel was a miracle," he said, pointing out that he never would have been able to complete the job with-

Subpoenas issued to Division I-A schools that are not CFA members asked only for information about television contracts.

According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, the CFA's legal counsel in the case advised the association's member institutions to object to portions of the subpoenas.

The attorney, Lewis A. Engman, a former chair of the FTC, told the Chronicle that the subpoenas ask for information that is "irrelevant" to the issues in the commission's antitrust investigation. "They have raised some of these issues to muddy up the water," he said.

But other legal authorities, while agreeing that even a ruling that the CFA is a commercial venture would set little if any legal precedent, told the Chronicle that such a ruling could haunt college athletics.

"If the FTC found on this issue, there would be for the first time an official government finding that the commercial activities of college sports predominate over their educational aspect," said John C. Weis-tember to charge the CFA, ABC and ESPN with violations of antitrust law. The case will be heard by an administrative-law judge in Washington, D.C., later this year.

In March, the CFA argued in a motion to dismiss the case that the FTC has no jurisdiction over the association because it is a nonprofit organization formed for the purposes of education and the support of amateur sports.

However, FTC attorneys have argued in response that nonprofit out the help of Associate Executive Director Louis J. Spry. "I didn't foresee repeating it at the time. I hoped it would be a lasting contribution."

Obviously, some of the information in that first study hasn't been repeated, which accounts for the greatly reduced size of more recent reports.

Raiborn gets his information for the study from anonymous questionnaires from member institutions that are identified only by division. The book's chapters include "Analysis of Revenues," "Analysis of Expenses," "Revenue and Expense Relationships," and two appendices—one that contains the questionnaire and the other a table listing the responses gained.

The book appears overwhelming, but, in these budget-cutting days, the subject is of great interest. Perhaps even more contemporary, Raiborn said, is a booklet for which the original study was the basis: "Financial Reporting and Control of Intercollegiate Athletics—Management Techniques and Cost Control," which was published in 1974.

"I would hope that institutions that seized upon that document back then are better off now than those that didn't," Raiborn said.

One of the goals of the study at its outset was to find significant cost factors that explained the rising-cost trend. What Raiborn found didn't surprise him. The factor most correlative with operating expenses was revenues; that is, when revenues increased, so did costs. Unfortunately, when the revenues decreased, the costs didn't follow suit. In the early 1970s, there was a growth period when revenue increased at a greater rate than costs. That "extra" money was spent to enhance or add programs. That period was short-lived, and colleges now are paying the price.

In January 1988, in a speech Raiborn gave at the Presidents Commission National Forum at the 82nd annual NCAA Convention in Nashville, Tennessee, Raiborn pointed out that the increase in revenues was declining in relation to the rising cost, which he said was inconsistent with what many people thought because of the heightened public awareness of collegiate sports.

Not surprising

Raiborn said the situation many athletics departments find themselves in isn't surprising, given the history of other nonprofit organizations (like colleges) that have revenue-producing bodies within them.

"If you don't have control of costs, it's not surprising that there are budget problems when revenues increase," he said. "Revenue production creates resource problems. Those millions of dollars will be spent by whatever department produced them."

"Say the accounting department for some reason generated a million dollars. We would probably want to spend that money on the accounting department, and I'm not sure that kind of thinking is wrong."

For the most part, Raiborn prefers to let people draw their own conclusions from the data he's gathered, but, he said, "when you're talking about something I love as much as this, you've got to slip in an opinion every now and then."

Some may think that the more you know about how college sports are financed and the total costs involved, the less you would approve of them. An argument could be made that Raiborn knows more about the subject than anyone else, and he is an ardent supporter.

He said he once worked for an academic vice-president who was serving as interim president of the university at that time, and who also was a former college football player. One day, the former athlete you're going to have it. Those who believe it's all worth it are on the right side of the ledger."

As for those who accuse college athletics of being a case of the rich getting richer and the poor getting poorer, Raiborn's answer is guilty as charged.

"I'm not much of a critic of the fact that the pursuit of excellence brings revenue with it. That's the challenge of working in a free-market system," he said. "If we didn't have that, the alternative would be to make everyone have the same amount of revenue. I'm not sure what the sociopolitical name for that is, but I don't like it."

What Raiborn does like is teaching and studying accountancy. He said those who accuse the profession of being dry don't know enough about it.

Misconceptions

"In a sense, it's a misconception that we ride herd on mountains of numbers," he said. "Accountancy is more concerned with how do we measure cost, and how do you manage an organization. How people take this information and use it is interesting."

He said one of the most enjoyable parts of his job, in addition to being able to wear jeans and cowboy boots to work, has been working with the NCAA and getting to know the people at the national office.

Raiborn never was talented enough to participate in collegiate sports, though he did play high-school football and baseball. When he plays in Peoria, the National Rifle Association member enjoys hunting quail, duck and geese; trap shooting; snow and waterskiing, and removing some of the fish from the ponds on his ranch.

Although he has lived in Illinois for 11 years, Raiborn also has taught at Texas Tech University, Southern Methodist University, Louisiana State University and Missouri. Despite those many stops, he still considers himself a Texan.

"I'm a Longhorn fan. Once a Longhorn fan, always a Longhorn fan," he said. "I haven't seen them play (live) since 1984. I miss it a lot, and pretty soon I'm going to have to cure that."

told Raiborn that he was at a loss to see what value a sports program was to anybody.

"I thought, 'What a strange thing to say,'" Raiborn said. "Opinions do vary, but mine is entirely pro. I'm for an athlete being able to rise to the highest level he can, if that's what the person wants."

Sports are worth it

"The value of intercollegiate sports to the direct participants and the society at large is worth the monetary support. What the participants learn is a unique educational experience. To the nondirect participants, sports have a great entertainment value. We're a supply-and-demand-oriented society. If people want athletics competition and participants want to have it, then tart, a professor of law at Duke University.

"That could have ramifications in areas like state tax law and workmen's compensation, where the business aspects of college sports have always been played down," he said.

The subpoenas were the latest actions in proceedings dating back to February 1990, when the FTC formally began its investigation of the television contracts of the CFA and its member institutions.

That led to a 4-1 vote by the commission's members last Sep-status alone does not protect an organization from the commission's jurisdiction and that the true test is whether a nonprofit group is a charity or a business enterprise. The FTC claims that the CFA's efforts in pursuit of television revenues are far more extensive than its charitable activities.

The attorneys also argued that major-college sports programs, many of which operate independently from their universities, operate much like "independent business enterprises."

1991 Column No. 21

Noncountable athletically related activities—drug education

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 17.1.5.1, a student-athlete's participation in countable athletically related activities is limited to a maximum of four hours per day and 20 hours per week (see Bylaw 17.1.5.1.1 for golf practice-round exception). It should be noted that per Bylaw 17.02.1.2-(e), meetings with coaches on nonathletics matters are not counted in the daily and weekly limits and, thus, may occur at any time during the playing season (including the required day off) and at any time outside of the institution's playing season. In this regard, meetings with coaches on nonathletics matters would include meetings or sessions with student-athletes for the purpose of drug education.

Summer basketball—player limitations

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 30.13-(e), all Divisions I and II players must limit their summer basketball competition to one team in one NCAA-sanctioned league. Each team may include on its roster not more than one player with intercollegiate basketball eligibility from any two-year or four-year college. If a student-athlete (two-year or four-year college student-athlete) is transferring and has been officially accepted for enrollment in a second institution, and if the previous institution certifies that the student has withdrawn and does not intend to return to that institution for the next term, the student-athlete would be countable on the summer-league roster as a representative of the second member institution. Under such circumstances, written permission to participate in a sanctioned summer league must be obtained from the member institution to which the student-athlete is transferring. Finally, because there are no restrictions on the participation of Division III student-athletes in outside basketball competition during the summer, there are no limits on the number of student-athletes from any one Division III member institution who may participate in an NCAA-sanctioned or nonsanctioned summer basketball league.

Correction—NCAA Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that Legislative Assistance Column No. 17 (April 24, 1991, edition of The NCAA News) incorrectly indicated that the effective date of Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3 (1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 98 as amended by Proposal No. 98-1) is August 1, 1991. The correct effective date of Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3 is August 1, 1992. Thus, during the 1991-92 academic year, Divisions I and II member institutions may continue to provide an expense-paid visit to a prospective student-athlete who has not presented the institution with a score from a PSAT, an SAT or an ACT taken on a national testing date under national testing conditions.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Hockey rules committee acts to stop interference

It might take a few years, but the NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Rules Committee is determined to eliminate interference in college hockey through a stronger emphasis on existing rules.

At its May 14-17 meeting in Palm Springs, California, the committee centered its 1991-92 points of emphasis around interference—especially hooking and holding.

"A major concern of the committee, as well as the hockey coaches, is the amount of interference we are seeing in the game," said Sidney J. Watson, committee chair and director of athletics at Bowdoin College.

The committee is concerned that speed and skating are disappearing because of the action away from the puck.

"We are trying to put the skill back in the game," said Paul J. Duffy, secretary-rules editor and head men's ice hockey coach at Geneseo State University College.

The committee also will include coaches' conduct and contact with the goaltender as points of emphasis for the coming season.

Said Watson, "We have a feeling that bench decorum needs to be improved in some areas, and we have addressed it as a point of emphasis."

The committee made several recommendations that require Executive Committee approval, most notably that a half-shield face mask, recently approved by the Hockey Equipment Certification Council, be allowed for intercollegiate competition.

The committee voted to recommend that the mouthguard remain a mandatory piece of protective equipment if the half-shield face mask is approved by the Executive Committee. However, if the proposal is rejected, the committee will recommend optional, instead of mandatory, use of the mouthguard.

With regard to overtime third-place tournament games in the regular season, the committee voted to recommend that a five-minute overtime period be played after a three-minute intermission. This is the same procedure used during non-tournament regular-season contests.

Other changes

Other rules changes and administrative items approved for 1991-92:

● Rule 1-3 was revised to read: "The goal posts shall be kept in position by magnets, metal rods, pipes or similar means affixed in the ice or floor. It is recommended that the goal posts be affixed with a release-type fixture."

● Rule 2-2-d was added so that the captain of each team will meet with the referee prior to the start of a game.

● Rule 2-5-a was altered so that goaltenders leaving the ice do not have to be in bodily contact with the boards before a substitution can be made. The wording was revised to read "the goalkeeper is at the players' bench and out of the play."

● A new paragraph was added to Rule 6-9-c to read: "If a player of the defending team deliberately displaces the goal, and, in the opinion of the referee, the puck would have entered the goal had it not been displaced, a penalty shot/optional minor penalty shall be assessed."

● Rule 6-17-a was altered so that play will not be stopped for any hand pass by players in their defensive zone.

● A new paragraph was added to Rule 6-23 to read: "Last contact with the puck must be made completely over the center red line to nullify icing."

● Note 3 after Rule 6-25-b was revised so that if fans throw objects on the ice after a warning, a bench minor penalty may be assessed against the offending fans' team for delay of game. At the discretion of the referee, a warning may be issued prior to the game.

● A paragraph was added to Rule 6-28-1 to read: "When both teams are to leave the ice through a common exit, the team whose players' bench is closest to the exit shall leave the ice first. For a violation of this rule, a bench minor penalty shall be assessed."

Sutton

Since assuming the Mississippi Valley State presidency in July 1988, Sutton has overseen a multimillion-dollar renovation of the school's physical plant. During the same time, the school's fiscal deficit has been reduced by 65 percent. And since fall 1989, enrollment has increased in excess of 10 percent.

A graduate of Dillard University, he earned a master's degree and a doctorate from Howard University. He also has studied at several other universities and at the Marine Biological Laboratory in Woods Hole, Massachusetts.

A faculty member at Dillard from 1959 through 1979, Sutton advanced from instructor to full professor and chair of the division of natural sciences. He left his alma mater in 1979 for Chicago State University, where he served until 1985 as academic vice-president and provost and professor of biology.

In 1985, Sutton was named vice-president for educational and student services at Kansas State University, where he also was a tenured professor of biology. He left the school to assume the Mississippi Valley State presidency.

Sutton has served as a consultant to the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation, the U.S. Department of Education and the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. He also has served since 1974 as chairman of the national advisory council of the Sixteen Institutions

Health Sciences Consortium of North Carolina and Virginia.

In 1976, Sutton was named outstanding alumnus by Dillard. He also received the Silver Beaver Award for outstanding service to the Boy Scouts of America. His alma mater honored him again with its Distinguished Achievement Award, and he was awarded an honorary doctor of laws from the school this year.

Roethlisberger is named Byers Scholar

Because of a previous recipient's inability to accept the award, a University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, woman gymnast has been named to receive one of this year's Walter Byers Scholarships.

Marie L. Roethlisberger, who was one of six finalists for the Byers scholarship this year, will replace Kristin E. Maschka, a softball player at the University of Chicago, as recipient of the $10,000 award. Maschka is unable to accept the scholarship because she has been awarded a National Science Foundation fellowship. Her acceptance of that fellowship prevents her from accepting educational funds from another source.

Roethlisberger joins J. David Brown, a track and cross country student-athlete at the University of Iowa, as this year's Byers Scholars. Brown's selection was announced in April.

An honors biochemistry major at Minnesota, Roethlisberger entered her final semester at the school with a 3.690 grade-point average (4.000 scale)

Representing the Golden Gophers, Roethlisberger has scored a couple of firsts—as the school's first female national champion in any sport and as its first recipient of an NCAA Top Six Award. She won the uneven-bars title at the 1990 National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships, then spoke on behalf of her fellow Top Six Award recipients at the honors dinner during the 1991 NCAA Convention in Nashville.

Roethlisberger, who experienced a complete loss of hearing in her left ear and a partial hearing loss in her right ear as the result of a bout with spinal meningitis while an infant, also received the first Honda-Broderrick Inspiration Award in 1989.

While excelling in gymnastics and academics, Roethlisberger also has been involved in community-service activities. She has visited grade schools as a participant in Minnesota's "Just Say No to Drugs" program; has been a speaker on goal-setting, motivation and gymnastics at high school gymnastics banquets and club exhibitions; served as a peer mentor in the university's College of Liberal Arts, and worked as a volunteer at Ronald McDonald House.

She has been accepted to enter the University of Minnesota, Duluth, school of medicine this fall.

positive for anabolic steroids and one tested positive for furosemide, a diuretic. Of those 17, nine tested positive for nandrolone, four for a testosterone/epitestosterone ratio greater than six to one, three for boldenone and one for methyltestosterone.

Ten additional Division I football student-athletes tested positive for banned substances during the regular season but were able to document medical justification or were not ruled ineligible pending the results of follow-up, short-notice testing.

In the testing of 1,846 student-athletes at the 1990-91 fall championships, including postseason football bowl games, two student-athletes (one in Division I football and one in Division III football) were ruled ineligible after testing positive—one for THC (marijuana) and the other for nandrolone, an anabolic steroid. One Division I football player was ruled ineligible for failure to appear for a scheduled drug test.

Five other postseason drug tests yielded positive results, but those student-athletes were able to document medical justification or successfully appealed the results and therefore maintained eligibility or were not ruled ineligible pending the results of follow-up, short-notice testing. Three in that category tested positive for a testosterone/epitestosterone ratio greater than six to one, one for probenecid (a urine manipulator) and one for nandrolone.

In the fall of 1989, before year-round Division I football tests were done, the ineligibility rate was 0.7 percent, with 12 student-athletes declared ineligible for testing positive and one for failure to appear for a scheduled drug test.

In the fall of 1988, the ineligibility rate was 0.8 percent (13 positive tests), and in the fall of 1987, 1.3 percent (20 positive tests).

In the NCAA drug-testing program, student-athletes are required to sign a statement of drug-testing consent before they can be certified as eligible for postseason competition by the institution. All participants in NCAA fall championships were subject to drug testing, although testing was not conducted at all postseason events.

The accompanying chart provides drug-testing results, both for those postseason events at which drug-testing was conducted and for the year-round Division I football tests.

Run for cover: Politicians are in a sporting mood

By Jonathan Rand

When politicians get involved in regulating sports, run for cover.

The NCAA should shudder, consequently, now that several state legislatures have painted it with a bull's-eye.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court in 1988 ruled that the NCAA was not obliged to provide constitutional due process to schools under investigation for rules violations, it did not preclude similar demands by state governments. Among 10 states that have introduced due process bills, Nebraska and Nevada have passed them, and one in Kansas has passed the Senate.

These bills generally would require NCAA investigations to guarantee schools the same rights allowed in state administrative courts. While the NCAA's enforcement process could stand refinement, state bodies will only legislate a cheater's paradise.

The NCAA enforcement process already is missing a lot of teeth. Potential witnesses routinely can refuse to cooperate with investigators, and the infractions committee, which conducts hearings, often is unwilling to impose even minimum

"If you were to make us an agency that has subpoena power and the authority to wiretap and put people in jail for perjury, the procedures being talked about would make more sense," said S. David Berst, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement.

Many legislators opportunistically are seizing a no-lose issue. The won-lost record of State U. is much more important to voters than is the NCAA.

prescribed penalties. Due process bills would further weaken the process.

While schools would gain more legal clout, investigators and the infractions committee still would lack police powers. A high-school coach or booster asked to spill the beans can tell the NCAA to get lost.

Berst sees his opponents as boosters merely trying to frustrate NCAA scrutiny.

"For several years, the issue was 'Is anybody going to do anything about the athlete?'" Berst said, referring to concerns about pay for play.

"That view has switched to politicians saying, 'The NCAA may put our institutions on probation, so let's put up obstacles.' We look at it as an effort at hamstringing enforcement."

Many legislators opportunistically are seizing a no-lose issue. The won-lost record of State U. is much more important to voters than is the NCAA.

There are, to be sure, legitimate criticisms of NCAA enforcement, although the gripe that schools cannot cross-examine their accusers is overblown. Schools get copies of investigators' interviews and ample time to respond.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz recently appointed a 10-member committee to review the enforcement process. The NCAA had better come up with some improvements because state legislation will turn its enforcement process into a joke. Imagine investigators trying to follow 50 sets of rules.

Then, the NCAA might as well tell schools that anything goes. Then, the same politicians alleging dirty pool by the NCAA would complain that college athletics are so disgracefully corrupt they cry out for Federal regulation.

Knight report is really saying 'do the right thing'

Judith M. Sweet, NCAA president and director of athletics

"What's being said (in the Knight Commission report) is, we need the right people in the right places doing the right things in the right ways. . . . We keep score, and unfortunately, that gets in the way of making the right decisions."

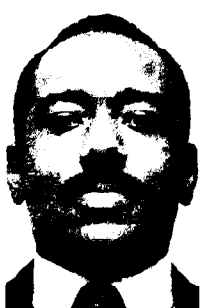

James J. Whalen, president
Ithaca College
The Ithaca College News

"I'd like to make a point that I think is tremendously important that I tried very hard to get into the Knight Commission report. The point is this: The NCAA is not an enemy.

"The NCAA is a group of college and university presidents

Mike Garnes, chief executive officer
Intercollegiate Athletics Consultants

"It's not the NCAA's job to clean up college athletics alone. The commitment has to come from the institutions, and the problem is that they don't get involved until their heads are on the chopping block."

Frank Deford, editor and publisher

From a column in The National

"The scandal that is college athletics has been under the dominion of the (college) presidents for almost a century, since Theodore Roosevelt obliged them to form and run the NCAA. Surely, by now, it must be painfully obvious that the one group that can't handle college athletics is college presidents."

Tom McMillen, U.S. Congressman
State of Maryland
The National

"The (college) presidents simply can't gain any control (of intercollegiate athletics) as long as these great sums of money are washing into the system. There are too many vested interests now, too much pressure. We desperately need a new model.

"The NCAA can no longer be counted on. It's lost its monopolistic position. Notre Dame and the CFA have chipped away at it, and now, the super conferences also are on the horizon.

"The only leverage the NCAA still has left is the money from its basketball tournament. So, who is in control at all? The situation is growing worse than ever, and, frankly, at the same time, democracy is not needed here."

Walter Byers, former executive director
NCAA
The Topeka (Kansas) Capital-Journal

"I don't see anything wrong with the public's acceptance of big-time college sports. The only thing wrong is the reluctance of college management to deal with the circumstances of the day in a rational manner.

"I don't think the NCAA has any business but to provide increased competitive opportunities for young people, and I frankly don't think the colleges have done as good a job as they should be doing considering the amount of revenue generated.

"Now, the average sports fan may not find this exciting, but I think it's important. Football, enforcement and the Final Four are the NCAA's showcase activities that get enormous attention, but how much do they really benefit the youngsters playing intercollegiate athletics?"

"And they're talking now about not having enough money, about having to shrink competition, when there are other ways to cut the fat out of budgets. I just don't think that pleading poverty is a good excuse any more."

Richard D. Schultz, executive director
NCAA
Houston Chronicle

"I thought we would create an appropriate committee (to review the NCAA's enforcement process) so it didn't look like an in-house deal. This was planned last summer.

"In Nebraska and Nevada, their laws allow someone to sue the NCAA if a school is kept off television. If these passed in four or five states, it would be difficult to apply our rules uniformly. You'd have to treat the school in one state differently from another.

"We don't think the laws are required. A lot of the legislation comes out of emotion. Most of it comes from states where there's been an NCAA infraction."

"She earned the gold by reminding all of us that some college athletes are still competing because of the challenge, not for a victory at any cost, and also not for a professional contract.

"The NCAA is saying the results are official because all coaches signed them after the meet. The gold is hers, by NCAA standards, and she also deserves it for impulsively restoring sportsmanship to the sports pages. If that isn't worth a gold medal, nothing is."

If the regents or the trustees of the big universities — particularly the state universities — say they are not going to go along with that or that they'll follow some but not all of it, then I think we will continue to see some of the same problems we are seeing now."

Illinois 'political folly' may set the stage for a court battle

By Ed Sherman
The Chicago Tribune
Excerpted from a commentary

If the politicians in Springfield continue their political folly and pass legislation setting down rules for NCAA investigations, the state of Illinois probably will find itself in court.

Such an exercise will cost the state, the school involved and the NCAA money. Once again, the only winners will be the lawyers.

Illinois' House recently passed a bill requiring the NCAA to follow due process requirements in its investigations of state schools. The measure now moves to the Senate.

The NCAA hopes the bill dies there, and it plans an intense lobbying effort in the Senate to make sure it does. But if it doesn't, the NCAA is making noises about testing the constitutionality of the measure in court—not only in Illinois, but also in Nevada and Nebraska, where similar bills have been passed.

At issue is whether a state can regulate a national organization, one that is voluntary to boot. The Supreme Court, in the Jerry Tar-kanian case, ruled that the NCAA wasn't a state actor, and, as a voluntary organization, it had the right to discipline its own members as it sees fit.

From a practical standpoint, the Illinois bill would cause havoc within the NCAA. If every state passes the bill, the NCAA might find itself having 50 different sets of regulations for conducting an investigation.

Richard R. Hilliard, a director of enforcement, says if the Illinois bill is applied, the NCAA never would be able to process a case in Illinois.

He stresses that the NCAA meets many aspects of the Illinois bill, with the main exception: There's no cross-examination of the accuser in a courtroom-type situation.

Without subpoena power, Hilliard says, the NCAA couldn't compel a witness to appear.

"Suppose we had an individual from Wisconsin who had information related to a school in Illinois," Hilliard said. "He's not going to appear in an Illinois court (without a subpoena). This bill would cripple the enforcement process."

Hilliard isn't saying the NCAA enforcement is perfect. Hardly. The NCAA recently set up a committee to examine the department's procedures.

"You need to have uniform regulations," Hilliard said. "If you want to change it, you should change it from within. If it can't hold up to scrutiny, it should be changed."

Jean Ponsetto, DePaul University associate athletics director, made the same argument during a House hearing. She told the House that DePaul wasn't in favor of the bill.

In fact, none of the 38 state schools that would be affected supports the measure—including the University of Illinois, Champaign.

"Doesn't that say something?" said Ponsetto, who testified against the bill in Springfield. "It really speaks to the issue. To me, it was really bizarre."

Big Ten exits Big Monday lineup

By Larry Gallup

ESPN and the Big Ten Conference made it official recently. Big Ten basketball games will leave the cable channel's Big Monday lineup and their 8:30 p.m. Central time slot—and move to Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m.

The new schedule puts the Big Eight Conference in the Big Ten's old Monday slot, between the Big East Conference and the Big West Conference. Southeastern Conference games will follow Big Ten games on Tuesdays. Big Ten games will continue to be among ESPN's various Thursday night games.

The Big Ten requested a move from Monday nights, when, its games often wouldn't end until 10:30, 11:30 in the Eastern time zone.

Steven
C.
Beering

"The (Big Ten) council of presidents believes the management of TV properties must be consistent with efforts to provide an atmosphere conducive to the academic achievements of our student-athletes," said Steven C. Beering, Purdue University president and the council chairman.

The University of Wisconsin, Madison, athletics department agrees wholeheartedly with the move, according to associate athletics director Jim Bakken.

"If you use the notion that we're concerned about student-athletes and getting them back as quickly as possible (after a game), I see it as very positive," he said.

As a result, the Big Ten has agreed to "financial adjustments," according to conference Commissioner James E. Delany. That'll mean less money for each school, although spokesmen for both ESPN and the Big Ten refused to give financial details.

With more competition on Tuesday nights, Big Ten games might not draw as well in the ratings as they did on Monday nights. That would mean less money for ESPN and, as a result, less money for Big Ten athletics departments and less exposure for its basketball programs.

"I think the 6:30 time slot will be positive for us in a lot of ways," Wisconsin coach Steve Yoder said. "The only drawback I could see would be the unknown about the ratings."

The Big Ten also agreed to extend ESPN's contract to televise the conference's basketball and football games two years, through the 1996-97 season.

"We requested some accommodations in return (for the move) and that meant going with a (longer) multiyear deal," ESPN spokesman Curtis Pires said.

Consider the irony

By Ed Fowler
The Houston Chronicle
Excerpted from a column

What a lovely irony we find in the wave of anti-NCAA legislation sweeping the country.

All the NCAA ever tried to do was enforce a system in which its member schools, and itself, of course, got to keep all the loot. Now, those schools and their lawmaking boosters are going gung-ho on end runs in a bid to give some away.

That's what's behind legislative efforts aimed at frustrating the NCAA's efforts to levy sanctions. Many of those who introduce anti-NCAA bills couch their intentions in terms of high-minded principles such as observing due process.

What they're really out to do is castrate the NCAA's enforcement powers in their states.

The NCAA has acted on the suspect assumption that most of its members want the rules enforced. Rudy Davalos, athletics director at the University of Houston, says such is the case. If so, however, why the spate of legislation designed to strip the organization of its teeth?

At least nine states in which schools have been hit with NCAA sanctions recently have enacted bills or are taking legislative action to make the NCAA check its gun at the state line.

For the most part, they require the NCAA to observe due process of law when investigating alleged violations of its rules by schools within those states. These measures became necessary when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled, on a 5-4 vote in 1988, that the NCAA is not bound by due process as mandated by the Constitution. That ruling came in the case of Jerry Tarkanian, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, basketball coach.

Enter grandstanding politicians. The bottom line of these measures is that they allow schools in those states to cheat with impunity. With its meager enforcement resources, the NCAA won't be able to punish future violations when held to procedures used in courts of law.

The laws also create a problem of uniformity for the NCAA. It will be left with one set of rules for schools in states that have such laws and another for those in states that don't.

The NCAA has formed a committee to study its disciplinary system. Richard D. Schultz, the executive director, insists the idea behind it was hatched before the legislation craze and does not come in reaction to it.

Whatever, the way the body polices its members is in a state of flux, and it's hard to see at this reading how college sports will be the better for whatever develops.

Academic achievements of student-athletes are reported

Editor's note: The NCAA News regularly receives reports from member institutions and conferences regarding outstanding academic performances turned in by student-athletes. Following is a summary of reports received in recent weeks.

Conferences

Leading the Missouri Valley Conference all-academic men's basketball team are Dale Ribble of Southwest Missouri State University (3.870 grade-point average in business administration) and Paul Guffrovich of Wichita State University (3.810 in business administration).

Sixty-seven student-athletes—34 women and 33 men—have been named to the Southeastern Conference's all-academic swimming teams. All are at least sophomores who have maintained GPAs of at least 3.000 for the past year or throughout their careers. University of Georgia student-athletes claimed 13 spots on the teams (six women and seven men)—most of any SEC member.

Twenty-five student-athletes recently were named to the all-academic team selected by the Upper New York State Collegiate Swimming Association. The 25 men combined to produce an aggregate GPA of 3.515 and were led by Matthew Mitchell of Clarkson University, who had a 4.000 GPA. Hartwick College's Eric Muth was named to the team for the third straight year.

Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference officials have announced that 280 student-athletes were named to the league's academic honor roll. All of those recognized compete in a league-sponsored sport and earned cumulative GPAs of at least 3.250 through a minimum of three semesters as of April 1.

Senior Steven DeRose of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, leads the Atlantic 10 Conference's all-academic men's tennis team. He has a 3.700 GPA in journalism. Leading the women's all-academic tennis team is Cindy Barber of Temple University. She has a 3.610 GPA in international business administration. Leading the Atlantic 10's all-academic men's golf team is sophomore John Yuncza of St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania), who has a 3.860 GPA in financial management. Seventeen student-athletes were recognized by the league on the three teams.

Southeastern Conference officials have announced all-academic teams in men's tennis, women's tennis and women's golf. Seventy-five student-athletes were named to the teams, and two of them own 4.000 GPAs—men's tennis players Tommy Alfano (a senior psychology major) of the University of Mississippi, Al Parker (a senior finance major) of the University of Georgia and Sammy Stinnett (a junior finance/accounting major) of the University of Kentucky.

Twenty-nine student-athletes have been named to the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference's all-academic baseball (15 honored) and women's softball (14) teams. Saginaw Valley State University's Brian Miller (4.000 GPA) and Lori Sleeman of Wayne State University (Michigan) (3.897 GPA) led the squads.

Members of the Eastern College

Athletic Conference Division II track coaches association have selected 29 student-athletes to receive academic awards. All of those honored are at least sophomores with cumulative GPAs of at least 3.500.

Pat Helmuth of Mount Union College and Kate Titus of Muskingum College have been named the top men's and women's scholar-athletes, respectively, in the Ohio Athletic Conference. Helmuth has a 3.926 GPA in accounting, and Titus has a 3.440 GPA in history.

Institutions

John Kean, sports information director at the University of Missouri, Rolla, reports that 74 of the school's student-athletes have cumulative GPAs of at least 3.200 through the fall semester. Included in that group are 36 student-athletes with cumulative GPAs of at least 3.500. Six have cumulative GPAs of

4.000. "Most significant about this is the fact that we're an engineering school," Kean said. "Only about a dozen student-athletes have majors that are not directly related to engineering, and they are in fields like chemistry and physics."

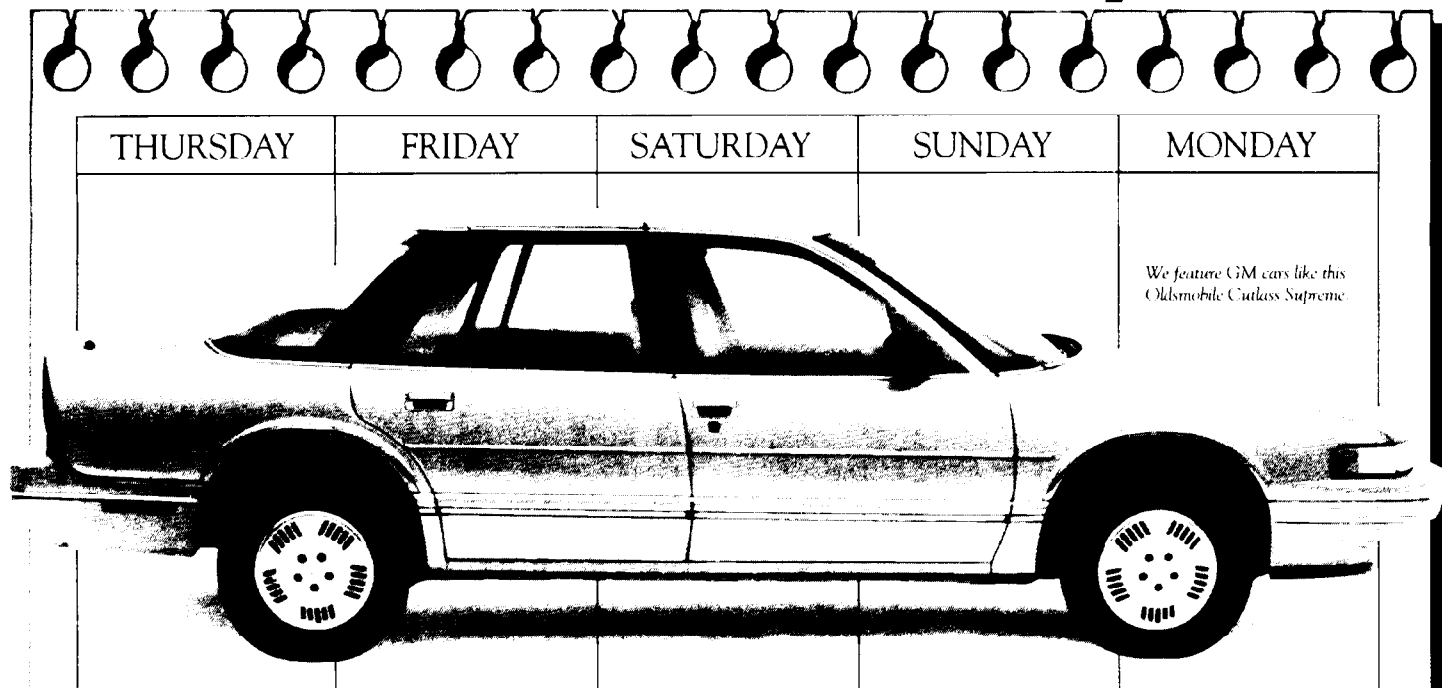

During the winter quarter at Northwestern University, 184 student-athletes earned GPAs of at least 3.000—including 64 who earned GPAs of at least 3.500. Fifteen of them had 4.000s.

During the University of Georgia's recently completed academic quarter, 153 student-athletes—110 women and 43 men—earned GPAs of at least 3.000. The men's tennis and women's golf teams earned the top combined GPAs with 3.010 and 3.100, respectively.

Initial-eligibility appeals

Following is a report of actions taken by the NCAA Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers. The report includes actions taken since the last summary was published. It appeared in the November 19, 1990, issue of The NCAA News.

The subcommittee: Considered the following test-score waiver requests:

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.350, an overall grade-point average of 2.540, and ACT scores of 6 (former version), 14, 14, 23 and 21 (enhanced version). The student-athlete's final score (21) was achieved on a nonnational-testing date under private-testing conditions arranged by ACT officials to confirm her February 19, 1990, score of 23. After she failed to respond to several requests from ACT officials for an explanation of handwriting discrepancies in her previous examinations, ACT officials canceled her scores of 23 and 21. The member institution believed the evidence they compiled indicated that she was the individual who took the residual test and requested that the subcommittee approve a test-score waiver application to permit the certification of the student-athlete based upon the scores achieved under the later examination. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that the identity of the individual who took the residual test is an issue to be resolved solely between the student-athlete and ACT officials. The subcommittee further determined that it would not consider ACT scores that have been canceled by ACT officials and, until she receives a valid ACT score, there is no test score upon which the subcommittee could grant a test-score waiver.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable German secondary credentials and an SAT score of 870 achieved subsequent to the July 1 test-score deadline. The student-athlete attended a foreign collegiate institution for one year (1988-89) before transferring to the member institution. The member institution requested that the subcommittee waive the normal waiver-application deadline (October 1, 1989) due to delayed interpretive issues regarding the student's seasons of competition and the then newly revised 20-year age rule (Bylaw 14.2.4.5). In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it would not consider a waiver application submitted after the application deadline. The subcommittee further noted that it is a member institution's responsibility to know the NCAA policies governing initial academic eligibility and to identify in a timely fashion any academic deficiencies that may prevent a recruited student-athlete from fulfilling the initial academic eligibility requirements of Bylaw 14.3.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented strong academic credentials from New Zealand and an SAT score of 1,010 achieved subsequent to his initial collegiate enrollment. He attended, for one semester, a collegiate institution in New Zealand that did not sponsor his sport. The subcommittee approved the application based upon the new policy for recruited foreign student-athletes. Thus, the subcommittee concluded that the student-athlete shall be ineligible for athletically related aid, practice and competition prior to his completion of one academic year in residence pursuant to Bylaw 14.6.1.1. Beginning with the subsequent academic year, he shall possess four seasons of competition pursuant to Bylaw 14.2. Further, the subcommittee noted that inasmuch as he already has completed one semester in residence at a collegiate institution that did not sponsor his sport, this approval would be contingent upon his fulfillment of one additional semester in residence at the member institution, thereby completing a full academic year in residence pursuant to Bylaws 14.02.10, 14.3.4.1 and 14.6.1.1.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable Swedish secondary credentials; SAT scores 680, 570 and 740 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline, and an ACT score of 18 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's recruited status; her repeated failure to complete the ACT or SAT successfully prior to the July 1 deadline, and the more restrictive review standard for recruited foreign student-athletes.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable German secondary credentials and an SAT score of 950 achieved subsequent to the July 1 test-score deadline. The student-athlete attended a foreign collegiate institution for one academic year (1988-89) before transferring to the member institution. The member institution requested that the subcommittee waive the normal waiver-application deadline (October 1, 1989) due to delayed interpretive issues regarding the student's seasons of competition and the then newly revised 20-year age rule (Bylaw 14.2.4.5). In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it would not consider a waiver application submitted after the application deadline. The subcommittee further noted that it is a member institution's responsibility to know the NCAA policies governing initial academic eligibility and to identify in a timely fashion any academic deficiencies that may prevent a recruited student-athlete from fulfilling the initial academic eligibility requirements of Bylaw 14.3.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented acceptable Swedish secondary credentials and an SAT score of 770 achieved subsequent to the July 1 test-score deadline. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable

Included in this report are requests for 50 waivers of NCAA initial- eligibility rules

German secondary credentials and no test score. The approval of her application was contingent upon her successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national-testing date under national-testing conditions and the fulfillment of her initial academic year in residence.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented acceptable German secondary credentials and an SAT score of 810 achieved after the July 1 deadline. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted her nonrecruited status.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable British secondary credentials and an SAT score of 960 achieved subsequent to the July 1 test-score deadline. The approval of the student-athlete's application was contingent upon his fulfillment of his initial academic year in residence.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable secondary British credentials and no test score. The approval of the student-athlete's application was contingent upon his successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national-testing date under national-testing conditions and the fulfillment of his initial academic year in residence.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented acceptable secondary credentials from Gambia and no test score. The approval of the student-athlete's application was contingent upon his successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national-testing date under national-testing conditions.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable West German secondary credentials and an SAT score of 900 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline. The approval of the student-athlete's application was contingent upon the fulfillment of her initial academic year in residence.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented acceptable secondary credentials from Greece and no test score. The approval of the student-athlete's application was contingent upon his successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national-testing date under national-testing conditions.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable South African secondary credentials and an SAT score of 760 achieved one month after her high-school graduation. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted that the student-athlete took the first available SAT offered in South Africa following her graduation, and that the examination took place during the same semester during which she completed her secondary studies.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 18½ core-course credits with a 3.020 grade-point average and an ACT score of 14. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status. The approval was contingent upon the student's successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national-testing date under national-testing conditions.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.500, and ACT scores of 17, 13, 24 and 17. ACT officials questioned the student-athlete's score of 24, and he scored 16 on a private retest. Based upon the student-athlete's score of 16, the ACT officials canceled his score of 24. The member institution requested approval to combine the subscores of the student-athlete's private retest with the subscores of a test taken on a national testing date. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it has approved the use of a passing score achieved on a retest that confirms or replaces a prior examination achieved on a national testing date; however, the subcommittee has not approved the use of combined subscores from a retest with the subscores from a test taken on a national-testing date. The subcommittee further noted that inasmuch as the student-athlete is a recruited student-athlete, his case is subject to the subcommittee's more restrictive review standards.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a 3.040 grade-point average and an ACT score of 17. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status. The approval of the application was contingent upon his successful completion of the ACT or SAT on a national testing date under national testing conditions.

- Denied the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 3.050, and SAT scores of 650, 640 and 660 with a composite score of 690. - Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable Czechoslovakian secondary credentials and an SAT score of 870 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline. The member institution requested that the subcommittee waive the application of the new policy for foreign recruited student-athletes who achieve the qualifying ACT or SAT score subsequent to the July 1 deadline based upon the fact that the institution was not given adequate notice of the new policy. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it is an NCAA member institution's responsibility to know the NCAA policies governing initial academic eligibility and to identify in a timely fashion any deficiencies that may prevent a recruited student-athlete from fulfilling the academic eligibility requirements of Bylaw 14.3. The subcommittee further noted that sufficient notice of the more restrictive review standard for recruited foreign student-athletes was given to each member institution, inasmuch as it was approved by the NCAA Council in January 1990, published in the April 25, 1990, edition of The NCAA News and included in the waiver-application instructions, which were mailed to every member institution on August 30, 1990.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable German secondary credentials and an SAT score of 1,040 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline. - Denied an immediate waiver of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable French secondary credentials and an SAT score of 770 achieved subsequent to the July 1 test-score deadline. The member institution requested that the subcommittee waive the application of the new policy for foreign recruited student-athletes who achieve the qualifying ACT or SAT score subsequent to the July 1 deadline, based upon the fact that the institution was not given adequate notice of the new policy. In its denial of the request for an immediate waiver, the subcommittee noted that it is an institution's responsibility to know the NCAA policies governing initial academic eligibility and to identify in a timely fashion any deficiencies that may prevent a recruited student-athlete from fulfilling the academic eligibility requirements of Bylaw 14.3. The subcommittee further noted that sufficient notice of the more restrictive review standards for recruited foreign student-athletes was given to each member institution, inasmuch as the policy was approved by the NCAA Council in January 1990, published in the April 25, 1990, edition of The NCAA News and included in the waiver-application instructions, which were mailed to every member institution on August 30, 1990. Finally, the subcommittee noted that the student-athlete will be eligible to compete, practice and receive athletically related aid following her completion of one academic year in residence at the member institution.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented acceptable Bulgarian secondary credentials and no test score. The student-athlete attended a foreign collegiate institution for one year (1989-90) that did not sponsor her sport before transferring to the member institution. The institution requested that the subcommittee waive the application deadline based upon her status as a defector and the fact that she was unaware of the NCAA's initial-eligibility requirements until after she defected and was recruited. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it would not consider waiver applications submitted after the application deadline.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented acceptable Swedish secondary credentials and an ACT score of 24 achieved subsequent to the July 1 deadline. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status.

Considered the following core-course waiver applications:

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented nine core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.940, an overall grade-point average of 3.000, a General Education Diploma (GED) with a score of 66 and an SAT score of 1,000. The student-athlete lacked one core-course credit in science, one-half core-course credit in English and one-half core-course credit in social science. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student's high SAT and GED scores, and her nonrecruited status.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 6½ core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.380, an overall grade-point average of 2.330 and an SAT score of 1,160 achieved under conditions to compensate for his learning disability. The student-athlete lacked two core-course credits in mathematics, one core-course credit in natural science and one-half core-course credit in social science. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted the marginal nature of the student's secondary credentials, his recruited status and the more restrictive review standards applicable to recruited student-athletes.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented Jamaican secondary credentials and an SAT score of 1,140. She lacked one core subject pass in social science. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted that the 1990-91 academic year is the first year during which the core-course distributional requirements are applied to foreign secondary credentials.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented British and domestic secondary credentials and an SAT score of 810 with an English subscore of 390. The student-athlete lacked one subject pass and one-half core-course credit in English. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's good overall academic record. The subcommittee further noted that the 1990-91 academic year is the first academic year during which the core-course distributional requirements are applied to foreign secondary credentials.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented secondary credentials from New South Wales and an SAT score of 1,000. The student-athlete lacked one core subject pass in natural science. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted his good overall academic record and the fact that the 1990-91 academic year is the first year during which the core-course distributional requirements are applied to foreign secondary credentials.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 10 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.500, and SAT scores of 680 (verbal subscore of 330), 640 (verbal subscore of 280) and 790 (verbal subscore of 400). She lacked one core-course credit in English. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status and her English SAT subscores.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 10½ core-course credits with a grade-point average of 3.740, and SAT scores of 1,370 and 1,270. The student-athlete lacked one-third core-course credit in social science. - Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 10½ core-course credits with a 2.760 grade-point average and an SAT score of 1,020 with a mathematics subscore of 530. The student-athlete lacked one-fourth core-course credit in mathematics. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's high mathematics SAT subscore.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 10 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.750 and an SAT score of 820. The student-athlete lacked one core-course credit in natural science. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted her nonrecruited status.

- Denied the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 1.630 and an ACT score of 20. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that the student-athlete did not meet the threshold review criteria for a core-course waiver.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 1.950, an overall grade-point average of 1.140 and an SAT score of 1,030 achieved subsequent to military service. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status, unique background, academic maturity during and subsequent to his military service, and his strong SAT score.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 1.720, an overall grade-point average of 1.390 and an SAT score of 1,160. The student-athlete's high school claimed that a grade-point average of 1.5, based upon its grading scale, would be approximately 74 percent at other area high schools. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted his recruited status and the fact that his credentials did not meet the threshold review criteria for a core-course waiver as printed in the waiver application. The subcommittee further noted that it cannot consider the putative quality of instruction among the nation's various high schools.

- Denied the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 13 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 1.880, an overall grade-point average of 1.920, and SAT scores of 830 and 930 with a composite score of 930. The applicant member institution stressed the student-athlete's troubled family history. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that the student did not meet the threshold review criteria for a core-course waiver. The subcommittee further noted the marginal change in his academic performance after being placed in a more stable home environment.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 10 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.550, an overall grade-point average of 2.680, and ACT scores of 17 and 21 with natural science subscores of 16 and 21. The student-athlete lacked one core-course credit in natural science. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student's strong ACT natural science subscore.

- Denied the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a 2.090 grade-point average, and SAT scores of 650, 600 and 740 with mathematics subscores of 340, 330 and 400. The student-athlete lacked one core-course credit in mathematics. The member institution requested that the subcommittee consider the fact that the student and the member institution were misinformed regarding the use of a mathematics course taken during the summer following the student's high-school graduation to meet the core-course requirements of NCAA Bylaw 14.3. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted that it is a member institution's responsibility to know the NCAA policies governing initial academic eligibility and to identify in a timely fashion any deficiencies that may prevent a recruited student-athlete from fulfilling the academic eligibility requirements of Bylaw 14.3. The subcommittee further noted that sufficient prior notice existed that summer-school courses may not be utilized subsequent to a prospective student-athlete's eighth semester in high school, inasmuch as the interpretation, which was first approved by the Council in April 1986, was published in the July 7, 1986, Legislative Assistance Column, 1990 NCAA Convention Program, the 1990-91 NCAA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete and in previous editions of the guide.

Considered the following core-course and test-score waiver applications:

- Denied the application of a recruited foreign student-athlete who presented four acceptable academic subject passes on the GCE/GCSE and an SAT score of 690. The student-athlete lacked one acceptable subject pass on the GCE/GCSE. The member institution requested that the subcommittee consider the fact that the student-athlete was awarded 60 semester hours of transferable degree credit based upon the course work completed in the British-patterned BTEC program. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted the February 1990 ruling by the Association's foreign student records consultants that enrollment in the first level or the national level (as opposed to the higher national level) of the BTEC program constitutes secondary, rather than collegiate, enrollment. The subcommittee further noted the student-athlete's recruited status and his failure to complete successfully the SAT examination.

- Denied the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 10 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.000, an overall grade-point average of 2.470 and a nonstandard ACT score of 17 with a mathematics subscore of 16. The student-athlete lacked one core-course credit in mathematics. In its denial of the application, the subcommittee noted the marginal nature of the student's overall academic record.

Considered the following graduation-waiver applications:

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 2.090, a GED with a score of 54.4, and SAT scores of 770 and 860. The student-athlete did not meet the requirements of Bylaw 14.3.5.3.4 inasmuch as he received his GED prior to one year following the graduation of his high-school class. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted that the student-athlete shall be ineligible for athletically related aid, practice and competion prior to his fulfillment of an academic year in residence pursuant to Bylaws 14.02.10, 14.3.4.1 and 14.6.1.1. Beginning with the subsequent academic year, he shall possess four seasons of competition pursuant to Bylaw 14.2.

- Approved the application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented 11 core-course credits with a 3.150 grade-point average and an SAT score of 900. The student-athlete enrolled in the member institution five days prior to his high-school graduation. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's nonrecruited status and his strong secondary academic credentials.

- Approved the application of a recruited student-athlete who presented 13.25 core-course credits with a grade-point average of 3.283 achieved through home schooling and an ACT score of 28. In its approval of the application, the subcommittee noted the student-athlete's exceptional home-schooling credentials and high ACT score.

Also, the subcommittee considered and approved the graduation and core-course waiver application of a nonrecruited student-athlete who presented an SAT score of 740 and a GED with an average score of 53 achieved within one year after the graduation of his high-school class. The member institution had been unsuccessful in obtaining a copy of the student-athlete's secondary credentials from South Africa. The subcommittee's approval of the application was effective following completion of his initial academic year in residence, and was contingent upon the member institution submitting documentation indicating sufficient efforts in trying to obtain his secondary credentials.

St. John's University (New York) baseball coach Joe Russo (left) and men's basketball coach Lou Carnesecca both earned their 500th career victories this year. Russo reached the milestone April 11 with a 9-4 victory over Queens College (New York), and Carnesecca got No. 500 when his Redmen defeated Seton Hall University February 2 in a Big East Conference game.

State legislation relating to athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect or is otherwise of interest to the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 29 bills from 15 states. The report includes nine bills that have been introduced, and 20 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (see the May 1, 1991, issue of The NCAA News). Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of May 3, 1991. Listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in this report by subject:

Due process	5
Anabolic steroids	4
Gambling	4
Coaches' retirement trust	3
Trainers	3
Wrestling	3
Athlete agents	2
Scalping	2
Miscellaneous	3

Two bills have become law since the last report, one on anabolic steroids and one on wrestling.

Six state legislatures—Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Montana, North Dakota and Washington—have adjourned their 1991 sessions since the last report, bringing to 16 the number of state legislatures that have adjourned. In Washington, bills will carry over to 1991. In the remaining five states, pending bills died at the conclusion of the session if they had not been cleared for the governor's signature.

Desert Storm POW was varsity gymnast at Navy

Remember Jeffery Zaun, the U.S. Navy pilot who was one of the first American prisoners of war captured by Iraqi forces during Operation Desert Storm?

He was a varsity gymnast at the U.S. Naval Academy, according to research conducted by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA).

NACDA surveyed more than 1,300 institutions and has compiled a list of 318 men and women from 137 institutions who served during Desert Storm and who are current or former student-athletes.

Five NCAA records were set and another was tied May 11-12 when Creighton University and the University of Utah needed 56 innings in two games to decide the Western Athletic Conference women's softball championship.

They played twice. Creighton won the first game, 1-0, in a record 31 innings to force game No. 2, which started at 12:45 a.m. Sunday.

Utah won that contest and the title, 4-3—in 25 innings! "We say put it all out on the field and leave exhausted," said Creighton coach Mary Higgins. "I didn't think it would come quite to this."

Fans attending the Patriot League track championships May 3-4 at Bucknell University undoubtedly enjoyed the live broadcast of the action provided by WVBU-FM. Believed to be the first of its kind, the broadcast was aimed at spectators and included interviews, analysis, and calls of the races and field events.

Eve Atkinson, athletics director at Lafayette College, recently presented her doctoral-dissertation research at a sports-medicine symposium at the University of Kentucky. Atkinson presented "A Case Study of Cocaine Usage by Student-Athletes at NCAA Division I-A Universities." She will receive her doctorate (in sports administration) May 23 from Temple University.

Atkinson has served on the NCAA Council and the Association's governing sports committee for swimming.

Officials with the U.S. Baseball Federation have announced a contest to design a logo for the USA Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame. In addition to the obvious recognition, the winner will receive a cash prize and an all-expenses-paid trip to Millington, Tennessee (national training site of the U.S. baseball team and future home of the hall of fame), to unveil the logo.

Entry deadline is October 1. Additional information and entry forms may be obtained by contacting B'Lou Carter, USA Hall of Fame Committee, 4880 Navy Road, Millington, Tennessee 38053 (telephone 901/872-7228).

More Coaching Milestones: St. Olaf College baseball coach Jim Dimick earned career victory No. 500 recently when his team defeated Macalester College, 4-1. Dimick has been St. Olaf's head coach since 1968.

Aurora University women's softball coach Sam S. Bedrosian earned career victory No. 300 April 19 when his team defeated Wheaton College (Illinois), 10-0. "All that 300 wins means is that you're getting old," said Bedrosian, who also is Aurora's athletics director.

New Jersey Institute of Technology baseball coach Gene Schmid earned career victory No. 300 May 2 when his team defeated Hunter College, 12-3, in the final game of the season.

James A. Marchiony

Rockford College baseball coach Bill Langston earned career victory No. 200 last month when his team defeated the University of Chicago, 9-2. In 11 seasons, his overall record is 203-185.

Bowdoin College women's lacrosse coach Sally LaPointe recorded career victory No. 100 when her team took a 10-9 decision over Bates College. LaPointe, whose career record now stands at 100-76, is the only coach in the sport's history at Bowdoin.

University of Akron baseball coach Dave Fross earned career victory No. 500 recently when the Zips defeated Malone College (Fross' alma mater), 9-3.

When the University of Northern Iowa men's tennis team defeated Graceland College, 6-3, earlier this year, head coach Pete Mazula earned career victory No. 600. This is his 27th season at the school.

Springfield College recently took the team crown at a national gymnastics championships meet sponsored by the U.S. Gymnastics Federation. The Chiefs finished second in the meet four of the past five years.

Nine players were all Iona College women's softball coach Linda Glum could field recently for a twin bill against St. Francis College (New York), but the Gaels won both games.

Briefly in the News

Lillian Cowing earned both victories on the mound, and infielder Toni Ann Plati played both games with an abscessed tooth. "Toni Ann was feeling nauseous between innings and looked like a sad puppy dog at second base," Glum said.

Aaron Marcarelli, a senior member of the California State University, San Bernardino, baseball team, got married last August. He and Sharon, his wife, attend classes, and Sharon works in a campus office.

"Sharon really helps out a lot," said Aaron. "She's there for me when I need someone; she knows that baseball is important to me. I'm really blessed to have someone like that."

Runner caps comeback in championship style

The pain was excruciating. Jennifer Lanctot ran until she could run no more. She climbed the charts of the best middle-distance runners on the East Coast and then injury knocked her down.

But Lanctot, a fifth-year senior at Boston U., is now preparing for the 800- and 1,500-meter runs at the Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Oregon. She's also the reigning Division I mile champion indoors, a big achievement, in that she is the first Terrier to win an individual chamreally well and an injury set me back," she said. "It showed me that I had the potential. I knew that I could do it and knowing that is what kept me going."

Her comeback amazes her coach, Bruce Lehane, the head cross country and distance coach at Boston U. "She didn't run cross country the fall after her surgery," he said. "We started her again in February and right then I was amazed. She made it to nationals that first spring. She was not in very good shape but she went to the indoor and outdoor national championships."

Her comeback was not complete. She finished last in her heat in both meets. But she kept pushing herself. By the fall of 1990 she earned all-America status in cross country. And heading to the 1991 indoor championships in Indianapolis, she felt confident that the long road back was almost complete.

"I went in with such a different attitude than in the past," she recalled. "I went in with the feeling that I was just as good as anyone else. I was very confident and that was a big factor. In the past I had been content just being there."

Lehane said they had an eerie feeling before that meet. "We laughed on the way to this year's nationals," he said. "She had never made a final but we both had her as the favorite to win the mile. We wondered if we were crazy. As it turned out, we weren't."

Now, Lanctot is confident that she is one of the premier runners in the country. "I expect to go for the win," she says of her plans at Oregon. "It's going to be a good field. I want to go hard. I was playing with the idea of running both (the 800 and 1,500). If I run just one it will be the 1,500. Unfortunately the 800 is first, pionship in any sport. It's even bigger considering that less than two years ago she had an operation on both of her feet.

Lanctot suffered from plantar fasciitis, a problem with the arches in her feet. "I got it from running on a lot of roads," she said. "It started in the fall of 1988. I got through cross country, but I had trouble getting through the indoor and outdoor seasons. I tried to cut back on training but rest didn't help."

In June 1989, Lanctot underwent surgery. "It was always very painful. I finally decided that either I would have to have surgery or I would never be able to compete at the level that I wanted to. I couldn't train the way I wanted to or needed to."

Lanctot had some success in her career before the foot problems. She won two 800-meter titles at the Eastern College Athletic Conference championships. But she never made the next step up because of injury. "I had spurts in the past when I did

Championships Profile

Event: Division I men's and women's outdoor track and field.

Fields: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved qualifying standards that allow filling the fields to a maximum of 388 male student-athletes and 280 female student-athletes.

Automatic qualification: None.

Defending champions: Louisiana State claimed its second straight men's championship and its fourth straight women's championship.

Schedule: The University of Oregon will host the championships May 29-June 1.

The NCAA News coverage: Championships results will appear in the June 5 issue of the News.

Television coverage: CBS tentatively has scheduled a broadcast of highlights of the championships for 4 to 6 p.m. Eastern time June 16.

Contenders: In the women's championships, Louisiana State, Texas and Villanova. In the men's championships, Tennessee, Washington State, Arkansas, Baylor and Brigham Young.

Championships notes: If pre-meet performances hold true, 1991 will mark the end of a remarkable streak. In 1980, Carl Lewis of Houston won the long jump and at least one Cougar has won an individual title every year since. No Cougar is favored to win this year... Louisiana State, which has won the last two men's team championships, has no individual qualified with a time or distance that would place him higher than sixth place... Villanova has no automatic or provisional qualifiers in any event other than the 800-, 1,500-, 3,000- or 5,000-meter runs. But the Wildcats should run wild in those events, with two probable point-winners in each event, and Sonia O'Sullivan the favorite in the 1,500 and 5,000.

I would have liked to run the 1,500 and see how I felt. I will at least run the 1,500, maybe both."

After the NCAA meet, Lanctot will train for the TAC (The Athletics Congress) championships, with hopes of making the U.S. team for this summer's world championships. "I hope to end the season at the TAC meet and run a sub-4:10 mile. I would like to race over in Europe. I'm on a roll now and I want to keep going."

All pain free, of course.

Men's championships

It is very conceivable that with three events remaining in the men's competition, Tennessee may find itself with only half as many points as another contender, Washington State, yet still emerge as team champion.

The first of those final three events is the 1,500-meter run in the decathlon. Tennessee's Brian Brophy and Aric Long are favored to cross the finish line with enough points to claim first and second in the decathlon. Those 18 points would draw Tennessee to Washington State's doorstep.

The next event is the 5,000-meter run and again, Tennessee should score well in an event where the Cougars have only an outside shot. Todd Williams has turned in the third-best time in the nation so far for the Volunteers.

Meanwhile, Washington State's Samuel Kibiri has achieved the provisional qualifying standard, but with a field size of 18, his 17th-best time leaves him perilously close to missing the field. If the times are an accurate predictor, Williams could give Tennessee another six points and the lead with one event remaining.

Neither team has achieved the provisional standard in the final event, the 1,600-meter relay.

Overall, the 70th annual men's championships shape up as a wide-open affair, with Auburn the only team with season-best performances in more than two events. The Tigers have Seymour Fagan as the fastest qualifier in the 400-meter dash and Samuel Matete in the 400-meter hurdles, and also have the fastest 1,600-meter relay team.

Arkansas (with Reuben Reina in the 1,500-meter run and Brian Wellman in the triple jump), Brigham Young (Frank Fredericks in the 100- and 200-meter dashes) and Tennessee (Brophy and John Richardson in the javelin) are the only teams with two event favorites.

Individually, Fredericks is one of two sprinters who has achieved the automatic qualifying standard in the 100-meter dash and is the only one to qualify automatically for the 200-meter dash. He could earn 20 of Brigham Young's projected 31 points.

Mark Croghan of Ohio State is the fastest qualifier in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, where he is defending champion. John Trautmann of Georgetown is less than three seconds behind Iowa State's Jonah Koech in the 5,000-meter run. With Williams of Tennessee only another two seconds back, the 5,000 should be a highlight.

Istvan Bagyla of George Mason continues to soar over the competition in the pole vault. Bagyla became the first collegian to clear 19 feet when he vaulted 19-0 $\frac{3}{4}$. Nobody has beaten him in national-championships competition in the last two years.

Women's championships

Louisiana State could be the freshest champions ever.

The Tigers, winners of four straight women's titles, could score in the neighborhood of 80 points in the running events alone without anyone running farther than 400 meters. Esther Jones looks ready to defend her 100- and 200-meter dash titles and Mary Cobb, the 55-meter hurdles champion indoors, and Dawn Bowles stand one-two in the 100-meter hurdles. With the best time and the third-, fourth- and sixth-fastest times this season in the 100 meters, the Tigers also understandably are favored in the 400-meter relay.

The Tigers also can expect some points in the field events. Camille Jackson has the third-best triple jump and Sharon Jaklofsky is third in the heptathlon. Two other Tigers have achieved the provisional standard for the heptathlon.

With the depth that coach Pat Henry has on his squad, the Tigers are expected to easily take their fifth

Penn State launches drive

Pennsylvania State University has launched a campaign to raise $20 million in private funds that will help build the school's new Academic/Athletic Convocation and Events Center.

The funds will be added to $33.8 million authorized by the state legislature for the facility, which will cost between $50 million and $55 million.

A construction schedule will be determined after an architect is appointed for the project.

team title. "I think the opportunities are there for our track people to do real well," Henry said. But he would not guarantee a victory.

"I don't think the NCAA championships is a meet that you can sit down and figure points. We try and go in and have our athletes ready to do the best they can do. We have to rely on our sprints and hurdles and we hope to have two multievent athletes."

Texas and Villanova should battle for second place. Texas has no top qualifiers, but Carlette Guidry has the second-best times in the 100- and 200-meter dashes. The Longhorns also have the second-best qualifying times in both relays.

Villanova, meanwhile, relies solely on the middle distances. The two-time defending cross country champions have all their qualifiers in events ranging from 800 to 5,000 meters. Sonia O'Sullivan has the best time in the 1,500 and the 5,000.

Maicel Malone of Arizona State is favored to repeat as the 400-meter dash champion.

Tracie Millett of UCLA should garner some points for the Bruins in the throws. She has the best discus throw by 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ feet. Millett has thrown the discus 184-1, an improvement over her winning toss of a year ago.

cility that Penn State has needed for many years and will be used for commencements, professional conferences, student/parent gatherings, large-scale entertainment events, intercollegiate athletics and many other purposes," said Penn State President Joab L. Thomas.

Once in operation, the center is expected to host more than 200 events annually that will attract about 1.25 million spectators.

Penn State already has received about $3 million in commitments for donations to the project.

Sidelined Stanford player beats illness for title

Rainy days and Mondays always may have gotten the late Karen Carpenter down, but during the Division I Women's Tennis Championships the once dreary combination was more welcome to Stanford's Sandra Birch than California sunshine.

Because of a stomach virus she thinks she got by eating a bad piece of swordfish, Birch, who was the top seed in singles and had won the individual championship in 1989, couldn't play much of a role in the team tournament for the Cardinal.

Fortunately, it didn't matter. Powered by a deep lineup, Stanford won its sixth straight national team championship without a victory from its best player and became the first host to win the 10-year-old tournament, defeating UCLA, 5-1, in the final.

The final was the only match in team competition in which Birch was and sidearm at times. She was beaten, 7-5, 6-1, by Kimberly Po, the 17th-seeded singles player. The rest of Stanford's lineup—1990 singles champion Debbie Graham, 1990 doubles champion Teri Whittingler, Heather Willens, Laxmi Poruri and Kylie Johnson—won its singles matches, giving the Cardinal another national crown.

The singles tournament was scheduled to start the next day, but Birch wasn't sure she would be able to make it. That Monday morning, however, she awoke to the welcome sight of rain, and decided a little rest was all she needed.

"It was a Godsend to me," she said.

In a match that originally was scheduled for the morning, Birch downed Tennessee's Mandy Wilson in the first round, 7-6, 6-2, that afternoon. Fatigue became a factor during her next match of the day against Florida's Jillian Alexander. After Birch had won the first set, 7-5, she fell behind, 0-1, in the second set, but the heavens opened up again, postponing the match until the next day. The Stanford senior eventually rallied for a 6-4 win to advance to the third round.

After beating San Diego's Tonya Fuller and Kansas' Eveline Hamers to earn her third straight trip to the semifinals, a stronger Birch faced a rematch with Georgia's McCarthy. This time she was strong enough to go the distance, toughing out a 4-6, 6-2, 6-3 victory to make the finals. Then, she defeated California's sixth-seeded Lisa Albano, 6-3, 6-2, to become the second player in the championships' history to win two singles titles. Stanford's Patty Fendick, who won in 1986 and 1987, was the other.

In the doubles tournament, second-seeded Alexander and Nicole Arendt of Florida defeated top-seeded Po and Stella Sampras of UCLA, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (10-8), in a match that was forced indoors by rain. Po and Sampras advanced to the finals with a victory over Whittingler and Poruri, denying Stanford a chance to sweep the team, singles, and doubles titles for the second straight year.

In addition to its string of team

After illness prevented her from playing much of a role in Stanford's sixth straight team championship, Sandra Birch recovered—with help from a couple of rain delays—to capture the school's seventh singles crown. The title was Birch's second in three years.

able even to finish play. But thanks in part to some timely rain, Birch was able to shine in the singles championship.

A few days earlier, while her teammates were dumping San Diego State in the first round May 9, Birch was so sick that she had to be fed intravenously because she couldn't keep down solid food. On May 10, she was penciled in to play No. 1 doubles against eighth-seeded Arizona, but because her teammates swept singles, she was spared.

By the time the semifinal match against third-seeded Georgia rolled around May 11, Birch was able to play, so coach Frank Brennan gave her the nod at No. 1 singles. The gritty senior won her first set against the Bulldogs' Shannan McCarthy, the eighth-seeded singles player, 6-4, and was tied, 3-3, in the second when Brennan retired Birch because her teammates already had clinched the contest.

The next day against UCLA, which had surprised top-seeded Florida, 6-3, in the semifinals, Birch was so weak that she served underhand titles, Stanford has won seven singles titles—including the last three—and three doubles titles. Also, Cardinal coach Brennan now has collected eight team titles at Stanford.

Virginia outlasts Terps for first championship

Virginia won its first National Collegiate Women's Lacrosse Championship May 19, defeating Atlantic Coast Conference rival Maryland, 8-6.

The Cavaliers jumped out to a 5-0 lead, but Maryland got back to within two at the half. With 19:52 remaining, Betsy Elder's goal for the Terrapins tied the score.

"I said to myself when it was 5-5 that 'This is a test,'" Virginia coach Jane Miller recalled.

Her team passed the test when Erin Stewart broke the tie with 17:22 to play. Junior Jenny Slingluff and freshman Cherie Greer scored Virginia's final two goals. Both had three goals in the game. Michele Uhlfelder scored three goals for Maryland and goalkeeper Mandy Stevenson made 16 saves.

"It's a special feeling no matter who you beat," Slingluff said about the title. "As a team, we've supported each other all year."

"I feel this is actually a better team than the one that was runner-up last year," Maryland's Uhlfelder said. "We created a deep hole to recover from after spotting Virginia the 5-0 lead. A couple of times this season, we've faltered early and been able to recover in time, but we didn't today."

In semifinal competition, Uhlfelder scored in overtime to give Maryland a 4-3 victory over New Hampshire. The win put the Terps in the championship game for the fifth time—the most title-game appearances by a team.

Slingluff scored five goals and had an assist to help Virginia to a 10-5 victory over Penn State in the other semifinal game.

Virginia ended the season with a 17-1 record and a 12-game winning streak. Maryland finished at 14-3.

Slingluff and Uhlfelder were named the most outstanding players on attack. Robyn Nye of Virginia and Karen Hoysted of Penn State received the same honor as mid-fielders. Stevenson and Kierstin Coppola of New Hampshire earned top honors on defense.

Trenton State captures year's second crown

Host Trenton State defeated Ursinus, 7-6, to win its fourth Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship May 19.

The title was the second of the academic year for coach Sharon Goldbrenner, who guided the Lions' field hockey team to a title last fall.

Kerri Perinchief scored two goals and Cheryl Guerriero scored one in the second half to give the Lions a 7-4 lead with 4:46 left. However, Toni Wenger of Ursinus scored twice to bring her team back within one with 24 seconds to play. On the ensuing draw, Guerriero recovered the ball and Trenton State maintained possession until time ran out.

"In the first half, we weren't finishing off our plays very well," Goldbrenner said. "In the second half, we simply executed much better. But even the three-goal lead with less than five minutes to go was not enough against Ursinus, it never is."

"No matter what, when we play Ursinus, someone comes back," Trenton State's Heidi Schwartz said. "There's no greater competition for us than playing them in the national title game." The two teams have played for the championship five times in seven years.

Perinchief and Guerriero ended the day with three goals apiece and Wenger topped Ursinus with two.

In semifinal action, Ursinus handed Franklin and Marshall its first defeat of the year, 7-3. Perinchief and Guerriero each scored three goals as Trenton State defeated William Smith, 11-8.

The most outstanding players were: Attack — Guerriero and Melissa Crowley of William Smith; midfield — Perinchief and Jenn Harpel of Ursinus, and defense — Gina Carey, Trenton State, and Amy Ward, Ursinus.

Hobart wins 12th straight

The road to Hobart's 12th straight Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship title was not an easy one.

The Statesmen defeated host Salisbury State, 12-11, but needed approximately 24 hours and four buses to make the trip to Maryland for the game. Two buses broke down and a third was used on an interim basis. Once the Statesmen arrived, they did what they do best—won a championship.

Hobart trailed, 2-0, in the first period, then reeled off four straight goals to lead, 4-2, in the second.

Championship Results

Rusty Pritzlaff and Kevin Hohner then scored for Salisbury State for a tie at the half.

Hobart scored four goals in the first nine minutes of the third period and held Salisbury State scoreless to take its biggest lead of the game. The Sea Gulls got back to within one on a goal by Rick Berkman with 9:44 remaining in the game, but Hobart answered with two goals in a little more than three minutes.

Tim deLoe had three goals for Hobart and four players had two apiece. Eric Ungleich, Regi Scales and Kevin Hohner had two goals each for Salisbury State. Hobart goalie James Gracey made 20 saves.

The shots were fairly even, with Hobart taking 39 to 36 for Salisbury State, but the Statesmen had an 83-60 edge in ground balls and controlled 17 of 27 face-offs.

Hobart has won every Division III men's lacrosse title since the championship began in 1980. The Statesmen came into this year's championship with a 5-6 record, but only one of those losses was to a Division III opponent. Salisbury State became the fifth different team to finish second to Hobart.

Coach notches another II men's tennis victory

The most-victorious coach in Division II men's tennis history has put another notch in his racket.

With Rollins' 19th victory of the season and coach Norm Copeland's 657th career victory, the Tars claimed their third national championship May 13, defeating defending champion Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, 5-3, in the final at Central State (Oklahoma).

Rollins, which last won the team championship in 1972, when the Tars were co-champions with UC Irvine, downed Bloomsburg, 5-2, in the first round and advanced to the title match with a 5-4 victory over UC Davis, last year's runner-up. The two California teams were Rollins' first West Coast opponents of the singles title, but the school has yet to win team honors.

Segesta also was a singles finalist, but fell to Armstrong State's Pradeep Raman, 6-3, 6-4. Raman also had made the doubles semifinals with teammate Mark Beyers.

Raman's win in the finals marked the first time Armstrong State has won a national title.

the season.

The Tars, who returned their top six players from last year, dropped matches at Nos. 1 and 2 singles in the final, but swept Nos. 3 through 6. At No. 3, Paul Lennix won in straight sets over Cal Poly SLO's Max Allman, 7-5, 6-3, and No. 4 Mike Hernandez won 6-3, 6-4. Tim Van Laere and Louis Adesso each won in three sets.

In doubles, Brett Field and Darren Price, the only Rollins players to lose in singles, scored a 7-6, 6-2 victory over the Mustangs' Eric Sasao and Alex Havrilenko at No. 1.

In individual play, the only representatives of either team finalist to make the semifinals were Marc Olivier and Max Allman, the No. 2 doubles team from Cal Poly SLO. In the semis, they lost to eventual champions Mark Segesta and Dave Allen of UC Davis, 7-6, 6-3.

The UC Davis duo clinched the doubles title with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Michael Garnett and Jonathan Howes of Jacksonville State. It was the Aggies' first doubles crown. In 1976, UC Davis' Tim Monroe won

Kalamazoo netters snare team, singles titles

Led by sophomore singles champion Lew Miller, Kalamazoo won three straight matches to extend its dual-match winning streak to 23 and capture its third Division III men's team tennis title in six years.

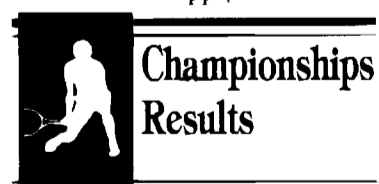

The Hornets, under 33-year veteran coach George Acker, opened the tournament with an 8-1 victory over Gustavus Adolphus May 13 after receiving a first-round bye as the top seed. Kalamazoo followed with a 6-3 victory over host Claremont-Mudd-Scripps the next day, then downed second-seeded UC Santa Cruz, 7-2, in the final May 15.

Earlier this season, the Hornets had beaten the Banana Slugs, who finished as runners-up for the second straight year, by a 6-3 count. This time around, Kalamazoo took four of six singles matches, as No. 1 player Miller, No. 2 Jeff Fieldhack, No. 3 Doug Keen and No. 6 Greg Wood posted victories. Then, the Hornets swept doubles, but two of three matches were tight. Fieldhack and Keen pulled out a 7-6 (9-7), 6-4 victory over Eric Oehlschlager and Lance Kronberg at No. 1, and Jim Osowski and Greg Wood needed three sets to dispose of Morgan Shepherd and Andre Herke, 7-6 (7-2), 3-6, 6-1.

The team championship was a championships-best fifth for Kalamazoo, which also won the tournament in 1976, 1978, 1986 and 1987. The Hornets have finished second twice. Swarthmore, which took last year's title, has won four times.

Through the team tournament, Miller won all but one of his singles sets and teamed with John Ray-Keil to win all three of their No. 2 doubles matches in straight sets. He defeated eventual singles semifinalist Ryan Scanse, 6-0, 6-2, in the Hornets' win over Gustavus Adolphus. In the match against Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, Miller defeated Lance Au, who was part of the 1988 champion doubles team, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3, in a preview of what was to be the singles final.

In the singles tournament, Miller, who began last season as Kalamazoo's No. 6 player, breezed to the semifinals with straight-set victories over Tomi Huhtamaki of Averett, Pomona-Pitzer's Ed Kim, Washington and Lee's William Meadows (a 1990 doubles champion) and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps' Ryan McKee. The third-seeded Miller needed a third set against second-seeded Gavin O'Connell of Emory in the semifinals, but pulled out a 6-1, 6-7 (1), 6-1 victory. Miller then returned to his straight-set ways against fourth-seeded Au, walking away with a 6-2, 6-1 victory and the individual title.

Miller's victory gave the Hornets a tournament-best four singles championships—their first since 1986. Other Kalamazoo winners have been Tim Corwin (1986), Chris Burns (1980) and Chris Bussert (1978).

In doubles, Dave Jussila and Ryan Skanse of Gustavus Adolphus downed Andy Dailey and Steve Tignor of Swarthmore in the final, 2-6, 6-3, 7-6 (4). The Gusties now lead in all-time doubles champions with four, followed by Kalamazoo and Washington and Lee with three. Washington and Lee had won the doubles title the past two years.

Pitcher powers Central (Iowa) to softball title

Junior Jamie Mahnke pitched three complete games, including a five-hitter in the final, to lead Central (Iowa) to its second Division III Women's Softball Championship in four years. The Flying Dutch defeated Eastern Connecticut State, 4-0, for the title.

Mahnke, a right-hander, struck out eight batters while walking only two in the championship game. Her teammates provided the offense, scoring one run in the third when Heather Reedy sacrificed to move Tera Twit to second base and Twit scored on Warrior third baseman Diana Pepin's wild throw to first.

Errors again cost Eastern Connecticut State in the fourth inning, as Central (Iowa) scored twice on three Warrior miscues. The Flying Dutch added an insurance run in the fifth inning, while Mahnke preserved the shutout.

Central (Iowa) gained a berth in the final with victories over Eastern Connecticut State (2-1) and top-seeded Trenton State (2-1). Mahnke tossed a two-hitter against the Warriors in the first game. She gave up nine hits to Trenton State, but the run she gave up was the only earned run she yielded in the 21 innings she pitched during the tournament.

Central (Iowa), which won its first championship title in 1988, ended the year with a 42-6 record. The Flying Dutch finished the season winning 16 of their last 17 contests. Eastern Connecticut State finished the year with a 34-14 record.

The all-tournament team consisted of Mahnke (pitcher), Christi Van Werden (second base), Julie Nelson (shortstop) and Twit (outfield), Central (Iowa); Jodie Joostberns (first base) and Jackie Krombeen (catcher), Hope; Michelle Carlson (third base) and Patti Kinghorn (outfield), Trenton State; Dawn Walmsley (outfield), Kris Mach (at large), Brigitte Raczkowski (at large) and Donna Poyant (pitcher), Eastern Connecticut State, and Amy Mitchell (designated player), Luther.

Sophomore pitcher Julie Krauth contributed both on the pitcher's mound and at the plate to carry Augustana (South Dakota) past Bloomsburg, 3-2, in 10 innings at the NCAA Division II Women's Softball Championship May 17-19 in Midland, Michigan.

The title was the first for the Vikings as they swept through the bracket with victories over Bloomsburg (3-1) and top-ranked Portland State (3-2, 16 innings) to set up the championship final with the Huskies. Bloomsburg came back from its first loss to Augustana (South Dakota) to defeat Southeast Missouri State, 9-4, and Portland State, 5-2 in nine innings, and gain its spot in the final game.

"It's a dream of a lifetime just to come to the final four," Augustana (South Dakota) coach Sandy Jerstad said. "To win the championship and take it home to our community, it's almost too much."

"We got defensive plays when we needed them, we got hits when we needed them, and the pitching was sensational. There were four great teams here. They were all just super. I thought the play was just excellent," Jerstad added.

Krauth allowed three hits through the first five innings of the final. She drove in the Vikings' first run with a double in the third inning and went on to score in that inning. Bloomsburg fought back to tie the game in the seventh inning, scoring two unearned runs as a result of two Viking errors. The score remained tied until the 10th inning, when Krauth, who led off with a walk, came around to score the winning run on a two-out single by Kim Kouri. The ball glanced off second baseman Julie Wolfe's knee and dropped safely for a hit.

Krauth finished the season with a 28-2 record, allowing seven hits in the game while striking out six and walking just one batter. Bloomsburg's Heather Young (21-5) took the loss, giving up seven hits in eight innings.

"I thought we showed a lot of heart not only coming back through the loser's bracket, but again today coming from behind in the seventh," Bloomsburg coach Jan Hutchinson said. "We got two outs in the 10th, but had a tough break with that shot off Julie's knee. But that's tournament play. It comes down to a break, and they got one first. It can't get closer than this. They're a very good team and so are we. We had seven losses this season, four of them to that team."

Augustana (South Dakota) finished the year with a 61-4-1 record, while the Huskies ended the season with a 41-7 slate.

Krauth was named the tournament's most valuable player. Joining her on the all-tournament team were teammates Kouri (shortstop), Ferris Grund (first base), Kim Sudbeck (outfield) and Kathy Orstad (outfield); Wolfe (second base), Jean Buskirk (outfield) and Lori Shelly (designated player) from Bloomsburg; Michelle Hughes (shortstop), Cynthia Macom (outfield), Cathy Eason (outfield) and Kristin Jacobs (pitcher) from Portland State, and Karen Hudson (third base) from Southeast Missouri State.

Buckeyes are billed $300,000 by the IRS

Ohio State University's athletics department is being billed $300,000 by the Internal Revenue Service for $1 million in revenues generated by selling advertisements on the Ohio Stadium scoreboard.

Janet Achterman, university controller, told United Press International the IRS first informed the school last fall that scoreboard income would be classified as unrelated business income and be subject to corporate tax.

The school agreed to pay $50,000 in taxes for 1985, 1986 and 1987, $193,000 for 1988 and $250,000 for 1989.

"Obviously, we believe in paying taxes if taxes are due," Achterman said. "But we want to be sure that we are looking at all the issues."

"The agents we were dealing with during our settlement conversations told us that case did not apply," Achterman said. "And we understood that other large schools with similar advertising income had paid tax on that income; so we agreed to settle."

"But there is a lot of disagreement now -- not only at Ohio State, but at other Big Ten Conference schools and throughout the NCAA -- over applicability of the tax law to this kind of income."

The six main advertisers pay $137,500 a year for their spots on the scoreboard.

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. Please direct any inquiries to The NCAA News at the NCAA national office.

Q Can an athlete who is not yet enrolled in college appear on a broadcast commercial as an extra and have the payment for services (as required by the Screen Actors Guild) donated to the national governing body of the athlete's sport, or to the member institution's club at which that athlete trains, and still protect the individual's NCAA eligibility?

A NCAA regulations preclude a student-athlete, upon enrollment in a collegiate institution, from promoting or endorsing a commercial product or service without jeopardizing the individual's athletics eligibility. Prior to enrollment in a collegiate institution, it would be permissible for a student-athlete to be involved in promoting or endorsing a commercial product or service. It is the legislative services staff's opinion, however, that in accordance with NCAA amateurism regulations, the receipt of compensation for an appearance in a commercial activity would jeopardize the individual's eligibility in a particular sport if the individual is performing an athletics skill or has been chosen for the commercial activity based on the individual's athletics reputation in a particular sport.

In addition, it is also the legislative services staff's opinion that it would not be permissible for any organization or agency (e.g., governing body, charity) to receive funds as a direct result of the individual's performance in the commercial. Thus, it would not be permissible for the Screen Actors Guild to make a contribution directly to the United States Gymnastics Federation without jeopardizing the individual's eligibility for intercollegiate gymnastics competition if the contribution is a direct result of the individual's performance in the commercial.

The NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism reviewed this issue and determined not to sponsor legislation to allow an outside organization to provide a cash award to a student-athlete's institution or a charitable/educational organization based on the student-athlete's athletics participation, even if it is made clear prior to the event that the award is not intended for the student-athlete. Please note that NCAA regulations do not preclude an outside agency from making donations to national governing bodies, charities or other agencies, provided such donations are not directly related to an individual's athletics participation or reputation.

1991 Corbett Award given to Joe Kearney

Western Athletic Conference Commissioner Joseph L. Kearney has been chosen by the officers and executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) as the recipient of the 25th James J. Corbett Memorial Award.

The award is presented annually to the collegiate athletics administrator who "through the years has most typified Corbett's devotion to intercollegiate athletics and has worked unceasingly for its betterment." Corbett, athletics director at Louisiana State University, was NACDA's first president in 1965. He died in 1967.

"The Corbett Award, to me, is the most meaningful recognition that one can receive in athletics administration," said Kearney. "To be asked by one's peers to join a roster of men I have long admired and respected is both a proud and happy day. It also brings to bear an awareness and a thankfulness for all of the great staff and coaches that I have had the privilege of working with. In many ways, they share in this high honor."

Kearney was named the fourth commissioner in WAC history July 1, 1980. In nearly 11 years on the job, Kearney has directed the conference to new levels of excellence.

A few examples:

- The WAC gained its first national-television basketball package and first-ever $1 million regionally syndicated basketball TV deal.

- A record number of teams have participated in postseason play in football and basketball, with home attendance reaching an all-time high in both sports.

- Since the conference was

formed in 1962, 25 of the WAC's 40 football bowl appearances have come during Kearney's tenure.

He was on NACDA's executive committee from 1981 through 1985. Currently, he serves as president of the Collegiate Commissioners Association; NCAA representative to the United States Olympic Committee's executive board, and chair of the NCAA Olympic Sports Liaison Committee.

Prior to joining the WAC, Kearney was director of athletics at the University of Washington (1969 to 1976), where he served as a special delegate to Congress and the office of Health, Education and Welfare on the topic of Title IX.

He moved on to head the athletics department at Michigan State University, where the Spartans won Big Ten Conference titles in football, baseball and basketball in 1978-1979, with the basketball team going on to win the state of Michigan's first national basketball championship.

Kearney also had a brief stint as AD at Arizona State University immediately prior to joining the WAC.

Rider joins league

The Northeast Conference will expand its membership to 10 schools with the addition of Rider College, effective July 1, 1992.

Until that time, Rider will continue to compete in the East Coast Conference, where the school has been a member since the league's formation in 1974.

Rider, like other members of the Northeast Conference, is a private school and competes in NCAA Division I-AAA.

"Rider College is a natural and ideal addition to the Northeast Conference," said NEC Commissioner Chris Monasch, who added that the school's "commitment to quality education and a broad-based athletics program" is similar to that of other conference members.

"Expansion was not a pressing necessity for our conference," he added. "The opportunity, though, to add an institution of Rider's quality was one our presidents felt we could not pass up."

Augsburg player's talents are appreciated by many

By Gene McGivern

People appreciate Shannon Solem.

Her college softball coach likes how the junior pitcher stays calm in pressure situations. Her family is proud of the way she juggles academics, softball and two jobs to help pay for her private-college education.

And in her job at a group home for mentally handicapped adults, her pals like how she brightens their weekends.

It's a nice balance between the field of dreams and the field of reality.

Solem, who shares the No. 1 pitching role at Augsburg College, appropriately is an education major and carries a 3.200 grade-point average (4.000 scale). She's learning and teaching something all the time at the Minneapolis school.

In softball, her lessons of the previous two seasons have paid off thus far in 1991 with an 11-7 record, six saves, a 2.64 earned-run average, 69 strikeouts and 43 walks in 122 innings pitched.

Off the diamond, Solem learns a lot about people and life in her work as a counselor for Outreach group homes. Outreach runs six Twin Cities-based residential homes, where groups of mentally handicapped adults reside. Solem is in her fourth year at Outreach, where she devotes up to 20 hours a week during softball and more than 30 hours a week in the offseason.

"There's a lot of responsibility, but it doesn't seem like it because you're having fun," Solem said of her counseling duties. "The biggest thing you need to develop is patience. Once in a great while it can be frustrating because of behavior problems, but I always enjoy going to work. The residents do get really close to you, and they depend on you. I work with all adults, and the important thing is that you have to treat the residents like adults instead of kids."

A typical day at Outreach involves helping prepare meals, coordinating work chores and taking the group or individuals on outside activities. "One woman I think is really cute, and I enjoy going out for pie with her," Solem said. "Summer is really fun because there's more going on, like concerts and events. We try to get them out in the community rather than just sitting around the house. Many of them are preparing to live on their own."

Solem began her academic career as an international business major, but changed her emphasis to elementary education and special education—in part because of her counseling experience. "I don't think money is as important to me now in my career planning," Solem said. "I think it's more important that you enjoy what you do to make your money."

Solem's community interest isn't limited to her counseling job. She also coordinates volunteers from the college who go out into the community and tutor Twin Cities elementary and junior high school students.

"If I'm not busy, I'm less productive," Solem said. "It seems like when my time is limited, I use it wisely."

McGivern is Augsburg's sports information director.

Augsburg College student-athlete Shannon Solem spends time regularly with these Outreach home residents and their roommates. She helps prepare meals, coordinates around-the-house work assignments and escorts residents to outside activities.
