Presidents Commission to consider reform issues

Proposals to strengthen academic requirements for athletics eligibility and a thorough review of the report of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics are the major reform issues on the agenda for the June 25-26 meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission in Kansas City, Missouri.

The meeting is the Commission's final gathering before the August 15 deadline for it to submit legislation for action at the 1992 NCAA Convention. It is likely that the Commission will authorize its officers to make final decisions regarding legislative submissions, thus permitting consultation with the officers of the NCAA after the Council's summer meeting.

In the June 25 session, Commission members will discuss the Knight Commission report—issued in March—with the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame and cochair of the Knight group, and

R. Gerald Turner

Creed C. Black, president of the Knight Foundation.

The Commission already adopted a formal statement in its spring meeting expressing appreciation for the Knight report and pledging to examine it in detail in this summer meeting.

In the June 26 portion of its meeting, the Commission will receive revised legislative recommendations from the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee. Committee Chair Lorna P. Straus, University of Chicago, and committee member Jerry L. Kingston, Arizona State University, will present the recommendations to stiffen NCAA academic requirements for athletics eligibility.

The Commission then will make at least tentative decisions regarding the academic legislation that it will sponsor for vote at the January 1992 Convention.

Visitors

In addition to Hesburgh, Black, Straus and Kingston, the Commission will entertain other visitors in this meeting.

At the Commission's June 25 dinner, the group will continue its pattern of inviting representatives of various constituencies to discuss matters of mutual interest. This year, the invitation goes to six athletics administrators, three men and three women.

Attending the dinner will be Joan C. Cronan, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Kay Don, California State University, Long Beach; Robert E. Frederick, University of Kansas; E. Kaye Hart, Utah State University; James L. Jones, Ohio State University, and Jack Lengyel, U.S. Naval Academy.

Also attending the Commission meetings will be its two consultants, Wilford S. Bailey, former NCAA president, and John W. Ryan, who served as the Commission's first chair in 1984-1985.

Tigers, Bruins win three titles each

By David D. Smale

The Lions were missing, but the Tigers and the Bears okay, the Bruins had reason to celebrate in 1990-91.

Championships in new sports brought success to the Louisiana State Tigers and the UCLA Bruins as each won three team titles in 1990-91, more than any other school in any division.

The Tigers took gold in women's indoor and outdoor track, two sports in which they have tasted success in the past. But a championship in baseball on the final day of NCAA competition for the year gave the Tigers their first diamond crown and a share of the claim to be the best college program.

"We have always felt we were one of the best programs. I guess things have to fall into place for you to win three titles," Louisiana State athletics director Joe Dean said. "This year, every one of our 18 programs was ranked in the top 20, with the exception of football. It was icing on the cake to win the College World Series."

"Winning in women's (indoor and outdoor) track was great, too; That's five straight years (outdoors, three in the last five years indoors).

Joe Dean

Our people are spoiled thinking the women are supposed to win it every year.

"It is meaningful when you have young people who try so hard. We have good teachers (coaches) here. We're very proud of them."

The Bruins also won three national championships. But none of the championships occurred in the sports in which UCLA previously has dominated. The Bruin men have won 15 tennis, 13 volleyball and 10 basketball championships. The women have won six softball championships.

The UCLA men won their second soccer championship with a 1-0, four-overtime, penalty-kick victory over Rutgers. The Bruin women won their second volleyball title with a three-game sweep past Pacific and their first golf title on the first hole of sudden death against San Jose State.

"I'm very proud of the student-athletes and coaches who were able to bring championships to UCLA in three different sports this year," UCLA athletics director Peter T. Dalis said. "I'm particularly pleased because they worked so hard. Obviously, the ultimate goal is to bring the championship home, and they did that."

"Our academic and athletics prowess is extremely important to all of us at UCLA. Winning championships signifies the kind of excellence we all try to approach in our mission at UCLA."

The UCLA charge led a California gold rush that produced 12 national championships—double the number of the next closest state, Wisconsin.

While the Tigers and Bruins were establishing themselves as the nation's most successful, numerous other schools had years that were nearly as impressive. Thirteen schools each won two national titles, with three winning two men's titles, three winning two women's crowns and seven winning one of each.

Some streaks continued in 1990-91, and others ended. Hobart men's lacrosse, Kenyon men's and women's swimming, Arkansas indoor track, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo cross country, Cal State Bakersfield men's swimming, North Carolina women's soccer, West Virginia rifle, Texas men's and women's swimming, Louisiana State women's outdoor track, and Stanford women's tennis each added to impressive dossiers of championships.

Meanwhile, one of the most celebrated streaks was happily ended by the Duke men's basketball team.

Some individual champions also continued dominance in their respective sports, while new stars were born in other events. The 1990-91 academic year celebrated the 10th anniversary of women's championships under the jurisdiction of the NCAA and the Association began the first year of a seven-year, $1 billion television contract for coverage of the Division I men's basketball tournament and other events.

It was a great year to be involved in college athletics. Hold on for a whirlwind tour of many of the high-

Hearings begin

Federal hearings into the reform of college athletics began today (June 19) with testimony presented before the Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitive Subcommittee of the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee. Congressional hearings on college athletics are expected to continue throughout the summer.

Also today, Tom McMillen, a Democrat from Maryland and member of the subcommittee, was expected to announce his sity of Texas at Austin; Kenneth Boyle, a trustee of the University of Illinois, Champaign; Frank McGarr, a retired Federal judge who practices law in Chicago; Don Yeager, author of the book "Undue Process," and Creed C. Black, president of the Knight Foundation, whose Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics recently released its report on the need for reform in college athletics.

Among those scheduled to testify before the subcommittee were Florida state legislator James E. King Jr.; Jerry Tarkanian, head men's basketball coach at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Wint Winter Jr., a Kansas state legislator from Lawrence who introduced due-process legislation in that state, and Burton Brody, professor of law at the University of Denver.

Also expected to testify were Donna A. Lopiano, director of women's athletics at the Univer-Cardiss Collins. Other Democrats on the subcommittee are Peter H. Kostmayer, Pennsylvania; Henry A. Waxman, California; Rick Boucher, Virginia; Jim Cooper, Tennessee; Terry Bruce, Illinois; Roy Rowland, Georgia; Thomas Manton and Edolphus Towns, New York, and McMillen.

Republican members of the subcommittee include Alex McMillan, North Carolina; Michael Oxley, Ohio; Michael Bilirakis, Florida; Joe Barton, Texas, and Fred Upton, Michigan.

Legislative deadline is less than two weeks away

Member institutions and conferences must submit legislative proposals for the Association's 1992 Convention by July 1. This is the second year for the revised legislative calendar approved by the membership with adoption of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 68.

Here is a brief summary of information needed to file amendments by the deadline (Note: Questions regarding any aspect of the legislative calendar should be directed to Daniel T. Dutcher, legislative assistant, in the Association's national office):

- Eight sponsors are required for proposals from the membership.

- Each proposal must be signed by the chief executive officer of every sponsor or by the CEO's designee. CEOs must notify the Association's national office in writing if and to whom they delegate this responsibility.

- Proposals from voting member conferences must be signed by the league's CEO on behalf of at least eight members who wish to sponsor the proposal.

- Each proposal must be accompanied by a statement of rationale not to exceed 200 words, and the name of the sponsors' primary contact person must be included.

- Proposed amendments that are in proper form (e.g., with the necessary signatures) will be accepted by

Properly prepared proposals will be accepted by fax in the legislative services department (fax number 913/339-0032) until 5 p.m. Central time July 1

fax. Those filing proposals in this manner should do so through the legislative services department (fax number 913/339-0032) no later than 5 p.m. (Central time) July 1.

Between July 1 and July 15,

NCAA staff members and the Legislative Review Committee will develop final language on proposed amendments. Proposals will be published and distributed to the membership by August 1.

Any time between July 1 and September 1, sponsors may submit amendments-to-amendments that may alter in any germane way their initial submissions.

From September 1 through October 15, "regular" amendments-to-amendments (i.e., those that may not increase the modification of a proposal) may be submitted. Amendments-to-amendments require eight sponsors.

August 15 is the deadline for legislative proposals submitted by the NCAA Presidents Commission and the Council.

Also under the calendar, the Council (by two-thirds vote) may submit amendments-to-amendments and resolutions up to the Convention itself. Such submissions must be distributed to the Convention delegates at the business sessions.

Legislative Assistance

1991 Column No. 25

Correction—satisfactory progress (Division II only)

1991 Legislative Assistance Column No. 23 (June 5, 1991, issue of The NCAA News) indicated that a student-athlete who first enters a Division II institution subsequent to the 1990-91 academic year must achieve the specified cumulative minimum grade-point averages set forth in NCAA Bylaw 14.5.2.1.2 in all grades earned at the certifying institution and in all grades earned at all collegiate institutions. Please note that student-athletes who first enter any collegiate institution, as opposed to only those student-athletes who enter a Division II institution subsequent to the 1990-91 academic year, must achieve the specified cumulative minimum grade-point average set forth in Bylaw 14.5.2.1.2 in all grades earned at the certifying institution and in all grades earned at all collegiate institutions.

Evaluations

During its May 15, 1991, conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.6 (limitation on number of evaluations) as they relate to a situation in which a member institution's coach who previously has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions wishes to attend an event in which the prospective student-athlete is competing to evaluate other prospective student-athletes, and determined the following:

1. In team sports, an institution would utilize an evaluation for each prospect participating in a contest that is observed by the member institution's coach; thus, an institution's coach who previously has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions may attend a multiteam competition (e.g., basketball tournament) in which the prospective student-athlete is competing in order to evaluate other prospective student-athletes, provided the coach does not observe the contest in which the prospect who previously has been evaluated on four occasions is a participant.

2. In individual sports, the institution would utilize an evaluation for each prospect participating at any time on a given day in a competition; thus, a member institution's coach who is attending a competition in an individual sport (e.g., track meet, swimming meet, tennis match) on a specific day would utilize an evaluation for all participants in the competition on that day. Therefore, a member institution that has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions may not attend a day of a competition in which that prospective student-athlete is competing in order to evaluate other prospective student-athletes; however, it would be permissible for that coach to attend another day of the competition, provided the prospective student-athlete who previously has been evaluated on four occasions is not a participant during that day.

Please note that the limitations on the number of evaluations (four) apply only during the academic year. Outside the academic year, there is no limit on the number of times a prospective student-athlete may be evaluated by an institution, provided such an evaluation occurs during an applicable contact or evaluation period in the sport.

Summer financial aid—effect of Pell Grant funds

During its May 15, 1991, conference, the Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1, which indicate that an institution may provide financial aid to a student-athlete to attend the institution's summer term only in proportion to the amount of athletically related financial aid received by the student-athlete during the previous academic year, and determined that an institution that provides a student-athlete a full athletics grant during the academic year, but is required to reduce the grant in accordance with Bylaw 15.1.3 (reduction when excess aid is awarded) because the student-athlete is receiving Pell Grant assistance or other noninstitutional assistance, would be permitted to provide the student-athlete full athletically related aid to attend the institution's summer term.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

I-A directors like three proposals

The Division I-A Athletic Directors Association announced June 11 that it will support three pieces of legislation for presentation at the 1992 NCAA Convention in Anaheim, California. The announcement came at the 26th annual convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA).

The proposals will:

- Recommend one head coach, nine full-time assistants and two graduate assistant coaches in the sport of football.

- Recommend that conference votes be eliminated at the NCAA Convention.

- Recommend that voting on NCAA legislation occur every other year.

"Our rationale for the 1-9-2 coaches formula is that it is more cost-effective and has better institutional control than the 1-8-4 (head, assistants, restricted-earnings coaches) format," said Jack Lengyel, chair of the Division I-A Athletic Directors Association and athletics director at the U.S. Naval Academy. "Each institution can save approximately $10,000 and have better institutional control and accountability."

With regard to the second piece of legislation, Lengyel said, "I don't know of an organization that has people allowing additional voting, and in our organization right now, the conferences have an additional vote. One vote seems a logical and realistic approach to voting in the NCAA."

"Hopefully, we can get more continuity into our legislative process by voting every other year," Lengyel continued. "The off-year (when NCAA legislation would not be voted on) would be utilized for presenting and reviewing legislation by the various constituencies involved so we would be able to do the fine-tuning prior to voting in the legislation. This will present an opportunity for more thoughtful, carefully worded legislation."

Coaches advised of possible violations

With the opening of the first National Football League training camp less than three weeks away, the NCAA is advising college coaches that they will be acting contrary to NCAA legislation if they receive compensation or expenses for attending a camp as part of the NFL's Minority Coaches Fellowship Program.

Under the program, minority coaches gain experience working with NFL teams during preseason training camps, frequently handling duties normally assigned to assistant coaches. The NFL teams normally pay the college coaches a stipend for a month or more of their services.

However, such payment is in violation of Bylaw 11.3.3.1, which states that athletics staff of a member institution "shall not accept compensation or gratuities for representing a professional sports organization as a coach or scout...or for the performance of other services that involve the observation of or contact with athletics talent."

The legislation does not prevent a coach from attending or coaching at a training camp if he receives no compensation and pays his own expenses, including meals and lodging.

The NCAA's position does not signal a lack of support for the goals of the program, according to legislative assistant Richard C. Perko.

"The Professional Sports Liaison Committee supports opportunities for minorities in all aspects of athletics and hopes a way can be found to bring the program in line with NCAA legislation," said Perko, a staff liaison to the pro-sports committee.

The Professional Sports Liaison Committee began discussions with the NFL on this issue nearly one year ago. Currently, the Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee—at the direction of the NCAA Council—is working with the NFL to develop a way for the program to continue without having money go directly from the league or teams to the college coaches.

Questions regarding participation in the Minority Coaches Fellowship Program should be directed to the legislative services department at the NCAA national office.

News to publish every two weeks

This issue of The NCAA news completes the weekly publication schedule for 1990-91. The News will be published biweekly throughout the summer.

Issues will be published July 3, 17 and 31 and August 14 and 28. The weekly schedule for 1991-92 will begin September 9 with the first of 13 Monday issues that will be published during the college football season.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant in the NCAA office, no later than July 3.

Division I Men's Basketball: Replacement for Chalmers W. Elliott, University of Iowa, retiring. Appointee must be a Division I men's basketball representative.

Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee: Replacement for Eugene F. Long, retired from Hamilton College. Appointee must be a Division III representative of men's track.

Survey says yes to I-A playoff and no to athlete payments

More than 70 percent of the respondents to a Sports Illustrated survey on America's current view of sports do not believe that paying student-athletes will help clean up college athletics. Almost the same number also told the magazine they would like to see a playoff in Division I-A football.

According to United Press International, the sports weekly received responses from 2,320 Americans to a questionnaire dealing with such issues as athletes' salaries, pay-per-view events, drugs in sports and women reporters in men's locker rooms.

Professional football appears to be pulling away from Major League Baseball as the nation's favorite sport. In a poll taken by Sports Illustrated five years ago, football held a one-point margin over baseball. Currently, football has a much greater lead, with 60 percent preferring the NFL, while 52 percent went for baseball.

While interest in professional basketball is growing, the sport needs more runners needed

Officials with The Athletics Congress are looking for two men to compete in the 1991 World University Games Marathon, which will take place July 21 in Sheffield, England.

Prospective competitors must:

- Be U.S. citizens.
- Be at least 17 and not older than 27 as of January 1, 1991.
- Be full-time students (undergraduate or graduate) at a certified junior college, college or university. 1990 graduates also are eligible.

Those interested in being considered for one of the two spots should contact Basil Honikman, 915 Randolph, Santa Barbara, California 93111 (telephone 805/683-0408 or 683-5868; FAX 805/967-5958).

ketball has been on the rise in the last five years, it is ranked fifth, with college football and fishing ranked higher. College basketball, boxing, bowling, auto racing and hunting rounded out the top 10.

No TV glut

Surprisingly, Americans do not seem to be bothered by an apparent glut of sports on television. Overall, women weren't more likely than men to say there are too many televised sporting events, but women were more likely to believe pro and college football are overexposed and twice as likely as men to feel that too many boxing matches are televised.

More than four out of 10 people are concerned about sports moving from regular television to cable, yet two out of three people would be willing to pay to watch some sports events on pay-per-view if that was the only way to see them.

Not surprisingly, more than 60 percent of Americans polled think professional athletes are overpaid—with 72 percent saying baseball players are overpaid. In comparison with pro baseball, football and basketball players, hockey players were is apparently an issue of great concern to Americans—with 90 percent surveyed indicating concern about professional athletes' use of illegal drugs. The public heavily (85 percent) favors random drug-testing of professional athletes.

In response to a recent controversy, Americans expressed opposition to allowing journalists access to dressing rooms of athletes of the opposite sex. The public's objections apply equally to female journalists in male locker rooms and male journalists in female dressing rooms. The survey showed 68 percent opposition either way.

Finally, there has been an increasing movement in the last few years to reevaluate the way the nation's No. 1 college football team is determined. Americans favor, by a margin of almost 3-to-1, having a playoff series of leading college football teams after the bowl games. College football fans support the playoff series 70 percent to 21 percent. Nonfans offer 53 percent support for the playoffs.

50 summer basketball leagues are approved

An additional 50 summer basketball leagues have been approved for student-athlete participation, bringing to 316 the number that have been certified by the NCAA Council.

Other lists of approved summer leagues appeared in the April 10, April 17, April 24, May 8, May 22, June 5 and June 12 issues of The NCAA News.

Questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer leagues should be directed to Robert A. Burton, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

$licing the pie

By Bernie Wilson

Southeastern Conference Commissioner Roy F. Kramer thinks the larger Division I schools deserve a big slice of the NCAA's $1 billion basketball pie.

Jeffrey H. Orleans, the Ivy Group's executive director, warns that the government could be after a piece, too.

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, meanwhile, reacted philosophically to the June 10 debate at the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

"I've often wondered if there would be as much discussion and debate if we'd have settled for $900 million, because $1 billion has such a unique ring," said Sweet, the athletics director at the University of California, San Diego.

Kramer argued that a certain number of teams and conferences helped build the tournament into a premier event and should benefit accordingly.

"I think we must remember, and remember from day one, that this is a Division I tournament," he said. "The billion dollars was created by the Division I membership, and by and large, that money needs to be distributed based on the commitment the member institutions have to the criteria we have set for Division I."

"In large measure, we have taken the step that we said we were going to take from day one, and that is to distribute the money back to the individual member institutions not based among all member institutions."

That phrase "carries the seeds of real danger for those of us in intercollegiate athletics, all through Division I and in all three divisions," Orleans said.

"My concern is that if we as an association are viewed as being capitalists—foremost—there are plenty of people in the Congress and the executive branch and in all sorts of state and local governments who will treat us as capitalists. And if they treat us as capitalists, they will tax intercollegiate revenues in ways that have never happened before—and they will regulate intercollegiate athletics in ways that have never happened before."

Governments could hit athletics in a number of ways, from taxing sponsorship revenue and grants-in-aid to yanking state funding, Orleans said. He contended that by the time the distribution is made, the 100 largest Division I schools will have netted about two-thirds of the payout.

"The important signal to send is that the Association says if it's on a single free throw or on a single outcome of a last-second, overtime game, but rather on a broad-based basis and on the total historical contribution of that conference to the NCAA basketball tournament," Kramer said.

The revenue is to be shared "equitably, though not equally, money that comes from the Association because of a Division I tournament, then it goes to Division I members, period," Orleans said.

"I'd rather be a socialist than to be taxed to death."

Letter to the Editor

(Editor's Note: Former student-athlete Carlene M. Flibotte recently contacted The NCAA News to request publication of the following letter to the Association's membership.)

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the NCAA for enabling me to continue my education. It is only through the receipt of this (women's enhancement) postgraduate scholarship that I am able to attend the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, in pursuit of my master's degree in sports management. I am excited about the prospect of participating in such a high-quality program and look forward to the challenge that lies ahead. Once again, thank you. The NCAA has made it all possible.

Compliance, coaching must mix

By Britton Banowsky

At a recent Southland Conference coaches meeting, I had an experience that caused me to wonder. The coaches all seemed to be giving me the same peculiar look as I shared with them my suggestions as to the most effective way to document compliance with 1991 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 38.

The recommended procedures were passed around the table. The look continued.

Finally, the silence was broken by a courageous coach. "Are you serious?" he asked.

The discussion quickly focused with several others in the room openly questioning the need to document the number of hours student-athletes spend in "countable athletically related activities." It soon became clear that the broader issue on these coaches' minds is the intrusion of compliance procedures on their roles as coaches.

I doubt these coaches are unique. I can only imagine that coaches and administrators nationwide are beginning to ask themselves these same questions:

• How many more rules will be passed?

• How many more procedures will be created for us to follow?

• How can I be expected to coach my teams successfully when I have to spend so much time filling out forms?

• Where will this compliance thing end?

I empathized with them, and my immediate reaction was to say "never mind," collect my handouts and move on to the next topic. I knew, however, that there was a fundamental issue that had been touched by the discussion that needed to be addressed: Is there justification for the compliance movement and continued utility for this work?

The starting point for the justification lies in the inherent educational purpose for the existence of

Give women's sports some ink

"I believe it is the media's responsibility to engage in some affirmative action here and give more space to women's athletics—especially on the collegiate level. That should include features, advances and game stories—and not just a line of agate in the calendar of events and a box score the day after.

"No one is asking for or expecting equal coverage. The interest in men's athletics is overwhelming and deserves considerable media attention, but women also provide quality sports entertainment in everything from swimming, golf and volleyball to gymnastics, track and tennis.

CEOs can't call the shots without making some news

By Dan Langendorf
Dallas Times Herald

Southwest Athletic Conference presidents say they prefer that their names remain out of sports pages. But when you are running the conference, that is unavoidable.

Texas A&M University President William H. Mobley knows the dilemma firsthand. He missed his first commencement exercise at Texas A&M in August 1988 because he was in Syracuse, New York, meeting with the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

After that matter was resolved and Texas A&M's football program was placed on two years' probation for rules violations, Mobley figured he was through being in the sports pages. But that fall, a former football player alleged that athletics director and football coach Jackie Sherrill had violated NCAA rules.

Suddenly, Mobley was back in the sports pages. He was caught in the middle of a power struggle with certain board of trustees members who wanted Sherrill to stay. Mobley, however, had his way, and Sherrill eventually resigned.

Robert
W.
Lawless

"It was clearly tense that first year," Mobley said. "Nothing in my previous experience had prepared me for the intensity of the Jackie Sherrill situation. I learned a lot through it."

The lesson, Mobley said, is that athletics "is not something that comes and goes. It requires constant attention."

Presidents have been discovering this the past several years. Highly publicized scandals, such as the ones in the SWC in the 1980s, forced presidents to wake up and take control. At first, it was a matter of making sure their schools were in compliance with NCAA rules. Now, it is out of necessity.

The importance of presidential involvement was cited by the Knight Foundation, which recently commissioned a study of intercollegiate athletics. As part of its proposed reforms, the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics noted that the presidents are the first step toward stopping the abuses in college sports.

William
H.
Mobley

"Athletics left unattended can become larger than life," Texas Christian University Chancellor William E. Tucker said. "Unless athletics is seen within the perspective of the totality of the university, it takes on a life of its own and becomes a self-standing enterprise instead of a facet of the university."

Conference presidents now assert control once delegated to athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives. Last summer, SWC presidents initiated changes to the league's bylaws to give themselves, instead of faculty reps, the final say in conference matters.

"Athletics has progressed in such an autonomous state for so long that certainly it is the president's responsibility to get in there and run it as the NCAA bylaws indicate," Texas Tech University President Robert Lawless says.

The presidents' role, however, has gone far beyond complying with NCAA bylaws. Presidents are running their conferences. Big Ten Conference presidents, for example, invited Pennsylvania State University into the league without the knowledge or consent of its athletics directors and coaches.

"For the presidents to start to make decisions related to major athletics matters without having advice and counsel of the athletics director and faculty reps would be sheer folly," University of Texas at Austin President William H. Cunningham said. "But at the same time, the presidents will be held responsible for the action of the Southwest Conference, so the presidents better be involved in the decisions. The presidents will make the major policy decisions."

Because of their increased involvement, presidents are looked upon as being evil. They fight the perception held by many coaches, athletics directors and fans that they don't care about athletics.

"I think it is accurate to say that none of us are former pro players," said Lawless, who heads the College Football Association's board of directors. "(But) we have an appreciation for athletics. I don't think we are stereotypical people who were nerds all through school who never had any inkling to do anything athletic. Heck, I played competitive softball until I was 46."

intercollegiate athletics. As we all know and are constantly reminded, the foundation upon which intercollegiate athletics was built is our system of higher education. Higher education is a fundamental component of our society, representing integrity, edification, truth, positive values and the highest of ideals. We respect higher education for these attributes and consider it news when its conduct is not reflective.

The NCAA espouses these same ideals and values. For example, reading the principles for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics, as set out in the NCAA constitution, would lead one to believe that athletics among NCAA members is operated in harmony with these ideals. It tells us that the basic purpose of the NCAA is to "maintain intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of the educational program and the athlete as an integral part of the student body and, by so doing, retain a clear line of demarcation between intercollegiate athletics and professional sports." The constitution goes on to describe the principles of institutional control, rules compliance, student-athlete welfare and ethical conduct.

Of course, reality provides a different picture. Intercollegiate athletics, particularly at the Division I level, remains driven by entertainment motives.

Where did these principles go as "big time" athletics moved in the direction of the billion-dollar TV contracts, bowl games, lavish practice and playing facilities, and exorbitant travel spending?

The public noted a degree of inconsistency between the educational values inherent in higher education and the value of a Thursday night football game on ESPN. The imbalance became so noticeable that the public perceived intercollegiate athletics as a sham of higher education.

The term "student-athlete" was considered an oxymoron.

When the entertainment values of intercollegiate athletics and the educational values conflicted, the former consistently took precedence. Higher education had lost some credibility because it had decided the principles and the legislation built on those principles were not as important as the glamour and the revenue.

The reaction to this problem of priorities came in many forms. We enhanced our enforcement resources to deter and penalize the disobedient. The NCAA Committee on Infractions emphasized the principle of "institutional control" to establish a broader analysis of an infractions case.

And the presidents of member institutions, in spite of the diversity, reached consensus on a great variety of reform issues.

As a direct result of these and other reactions, the compliance movement was created. Senior administrators were designated compliance coordinators to perform the task of establishing the control envisioned by the constitutional principles and the expressions of the Presidents Commission and the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

These compliance coordinators are the individuals responsible for building upon the foundation established since 1985 by the Presidents Commission. This framework necessarily involves enhanced rules-education efforts, creating procedures to systematize an institutional compliance program and, yes, creating forms to document the institution's compliance efforts.

The legislation is there. A significant part of the compliance movement involves the development of effective ways to deal with the legislation.

Compliance assists institutions in ensuring that the rules are respected and obeyed and ensuring that the institution's educational obligations to each student-athlete are fulfilled. The role compliance plays is critical. It is charged with returning athletics to a position where the balance between the competing values is appropriate. The plan is to restore lost integrity and to restore the public's confidence in higher education in the context of intercollegiate athletics.

Unfortunately, many of the coaches are caught in the middle because, for the most part, their performance is evaluated primarily on how many games they win. As one head football coach once told me, "until I am evaluated on things other than Ws, I will make my decisions based on whether I stand a better chance of winning."

There are no simple answers to the coaches' dilemma. However, as I shared with them at the meeting, I am confident that until a majority of people believe that intercollegiate athletics is in control, there will be a need for compliance.

Baseball academic all-America team announced

A Mississippi State outfielder and a Rose-Hulman shortstop head this year's 1991 GTE academic all-America baseball teams.

Joey Hamilton, a senior at Mississippi State, is the GTE baseball academic all-America of the year for the university division, and senior Kevin Kluemper of Rose-Hulman was awarded the same honor in the college division. The honor goes to athletes who best represent the qualities of an academic all-America.

Hamilton batted .315 this year to lead Mississippi State to a 42-21 record. The mechanical engineering major carries a 3.840 grade-point average (4.000 scale).

Kluemper, who has a 3.810 GPA in mechanical engineering, batted .420 with 23 runs batted in with only 100 at-bats.

Other notable selections for the teams include sophomore Kennie Steenstra, a Wichita State pitcher who led the Shockers into the College World Series with a 15-0 record, and Doug Glanville, a junior outfielder at Pennsylvania who batted .414 with six home runs and 36 RBIs in only 35 games.

Purdue placed two players on the university-division first team — outfielder Craig Robertshaw and designated hitter Dave Barrett.

Four make GTE hall of fame

Four former college football standouts, including a Heisman Trophy winner, are the newest members of the GTE Academic All-America Hall of Fame.

Joining the 20-member hall of fame are Terry Baker, a Heisman-winning quarterback at Oregon State University in 1962; Joe Holland, an all-East running back at Cornell University in the late 1970s; David Joyner, an all-America football tackle and wrestling all-America at Pennsylvania State University in the early 1970s, and Brock Strom, an all-America tackle at the U.S. Air Force Academy in the late 1950s.

After a professional football career that ended in 1967, Baker became an attorney in Portland, Oregon, and currently chairs the school board in Lake Oswego, Oregon. Holland, who holds a law degree from Harvard University, lives in New York City's Harlem section, where he is a businessman and is active in community affairs.

Joyner is a physician who serves on the staffs of three Pennsylvania hospitals, and he also held medical appointments with the U.S. Olympic Committee. Strom, who won two Distinguished Flying Crosses and two Bronze Star medals as a senior navigator in Vietnam, recently retired from the Air Force after serving as head engineer for a navigation satellite system that was used to pinpoint bombing targets during Operation Desert Storm.

Ford Center program is 'a powerful experience'

By Rick Kaplan

The athletics director of the University of Kansas recently checked into the Betty Ford Center.

Robert E. Frederick doesn't have a drug or alcohol problem. He was at the rehabilitative clinic to observe the center's treatment program.

Frederick and five other college sports officials and coaches recently spent three days following the schedules of Betty Ford Center patients. They sat in on group therapy, lectures, individual sessions, meals and physical exercise.

"It's been a very powerful experience emotionally," Frederick said. "It has heightened my consciousness of the treatment possibilities. It has touched my life."

The athletics administrators were participating in the NCAA/Betty Ford Center Alcoholism and Drug-Addiction Awareness Program which began in April. Administrators from every NCAA member institution are expected to go through the three- to five-day program.

The program's objective was to heighten awareness about alcoholism and addiction treatment.

"Programs like this are important to change attitudes that have been set in the past," said Bruce Dick, director of sports medicine at the University of Connecticut. "When you get two big forces behind an effort like the Betty Ford Center and the NCAA, you can effect change.

Robert E. Frederick

"This could be an important first step toward what I hope is a solution to one of the biggest problems facing student-athletes."

Viewing the recovering addicts firsthand gave the administrators insight into the effects of alcoholism and drug problems.

"When you see the personal side, you can understand that it is a disease," said Timothy J. Dillon, director of athletics at the University of North Carolina, Asheville. "I'm married and have children. It's foolish to think I could go through life without my kids or their friends being touched by alcoholism. It will help me deal with the problem when I know it's not just a matter of lack of will power, it's a disease."

The Betty Ford visit will help not only in Dillon's personal life, but on campus, too.

Timothy J. Dillon

"This experience will help in detection, working day to day with the student-athletes," Dillon said. "It will also help when (recovering addicts and alcoholics) come in to people like me and apply for a job. I have a better understanding of the process that they've gone through—the hurt, the pain, the anger, the fear—to get back to the point of applying for a job."

The program also convinced the administrators that the surveys are correct—alcohol and drug problems affect every class of people.

"The problem is there with college athletes because it is there with everyone," said Andrea Wickerham, assistant athletics director at Harvard University. "It doesn't matter how old or young; whether you are black, white or Hispanic, male or female. The students, coaches and administrators are a part of society. The campus is just a smaller part of the society we live in."

Because of the high profile of college athletics, the drug or alcohol problems of coaches and athletes are highly publicized. The cocaine-related death of University of Maryland, College Park, basketball player Len Bias and the drug arrest of Cleveland State University basketball coach Kevin Mackey gained national attention.

"Those cases gain attention, but they don't change attitudes," Dick said. "Attitude changes go much deeper. You have to look at each individual's family structure, values, community norms. We try to melt all that into one pot and come up with a structure."

The administrators left the Betty Ford Center with different views on how to incorporate their new rehab education at their universities.

"Classroom lecture isn't going to do it," Dillon said. "At UNCA, we are trying to think of other ways to get the message across. We had a BYOB party—bring your own banana. We got students and student-athletes to understand that there are activities you can partake in other than slugging down a beer."

"We brought in Ben and Jerry's ice cream and made banana splits. There was a projector with a (drug-awareness) film going, and there were some pamphlets, but it wasn't a hard sell. All the walls go up when you try a hard-core sales pitch."

The experience at Betty Ford has convinced Frederick to seek more drug education on the Kansas campus. But not all of the program's participants were convinced they could cause changes based on their week at the center.

"This program was designed for decision-makers," said Harvard's Wickerham. "I think it's wonderful that the athletics director from an institution like Kansas is here."

"But I don't know if my athletics director will understand what I went through when I get back. I can say what I saw, but you can't appreciate it unless you were here."

North Carolina-Asheville's Dillon agreed.

"Someone has to make the final decision that, yes, we will spend money and time on drug and alcohol education," he said. "You can read about it in a book or see it in a film, but unless you are standing around a group of people you barely know, listening to them, asking them questions about their lives, you don't understand."

"We need more of our colleagues to go through programs like this. Until that happens, we will continue to have problems."

Near-fatal drunk-driving crash forces athlete's change

By Pamela Close

Everyone always says to "be yourself."

Last year's captain-to-be of Eastern Connecticut State University's men's basketball team is no different.

He says it's a simple rule of life—one that he wished he had paid more attention to before the drunk-driving accident last Labor Day weekend that almost ended his life.

James Riley had been drinking heavily that day. He said it wasn't a day very different from others.

"I'm from a very small town where everyone knows everyone," he said. "Well, I was the big sports hero. I had an image to portray. I had to go out and party, and show off and raise hell. I thought it was expected."

And that's just what he did, even though he said he had plans not to drink anything that day. "That idea didn't last long," he said. After a family picnic, Riley went with some friends to a local bar and then to his girlfriend's house. He left there "very intoxicated," he said.

About a mile from home, police estimated the car he was driving hit a stone wall at 90 miles per hour bounced and hit a tree at 75 miles per hour. Riley was partially thrown from the car.

"I don't know how I lived," he said. Although he sustained no internal injuries, Riley was hospitalized with a leg broken in five places; a jaw broken in three places; a broken collarbone, and a ripped ear.

When Riley arrived at the hospital, immediate care was given without any pain medication because there was too much alcohol in his system. "I can't even imagine how they sewed my ear on without any painkillers," he said.

Riley spent the first five days following the accident in intensive care. He said no one expected him to make it.

"My family even had all my friends come to see me," he said. "They thought it'd be everyone's last chance." But Riley recovered, and after about two weeks was released with a wired jaw; a pin in his leg, and stitches and staples all over his body.

Riley said he doesn't remember a thing about the hospital stay or the following week. He lost all short-term memory for that time period.

"All this information that I've told you now is what I've gathered from people. I don't even know what I put everyone through. I hear about it now, and it's freaky."

He spent the next couple of months at home recuperating. Plans for school and sports were put on hold.

Last November, Riley joined others who had been involved in drunk-drink responsibly and to never drink and drive.

"It's hard to change you whole lifestyle around, but you have to," he said.

With plans to enroll in a summer therapy program, Riley said he would like to try out for the basketball team this coming season. He will not go back as captain.

He said that if he could change his past behavior with alcohol he would, but he would not change the driving accidents to talk to high-school athletes. His message to the students was: Be yourself.

"I know there's a big social thing in high school and college where if you don't drink, you're a nerd. But somehow that's got to change."

"I think the only way society will change is if people change things for themselves."

Riley said he has worked hard to "hang-out with the right crowd," to fact that he had an accident.

"This whole thing has forced me to open my eyes real big," he said. "I used to do things for other people. But now, if it's not best for Jim Riley, Jim Riley is not going to do it."

"It all has to do with being yourself."

Stressed, bored teens drink

U.S. teenagers are turning to booze to relieve stress and boredom, and many might well be on their way to becoming alcoholics, a national report released June 6 indicated.

"It's an alarming trend," said U.S. Surgeon General Antonia Novello. Previous surveys have indicated that teens' alcohol use is increasing as their drug use is diminishing, she said.

The report said more than half, or 10.6 million, of the nation's junior and senior high-school students are drinkers. Of those who drink, eight million consume alcohol weekly; 5.4 million have binged on occasion, and nearly a half-million go on a weekly binge, guzzling five or more drinks in a row.

Some drink as many as 33 beers a week, a dozen wine coolers, 24 glasses of wine or 24 shots of liquor, the report said.

The favorite drink is wine coolers, but most teens choose beer because it is cheaper and easy to get, it said.

The survey was conducted by the Inspector General's Office of the Department of Health and Human Services. It found that students annually consume 35 percent of all wine coolers sold in the United States, the equivalent of 31 million gallons, and 1.1 billion cans of beer, or about 102 million gallons.

Dr. Novello termed the findings "shocking" and said they raised some serious questions about enforcement of underage-drinking laws, alcohol marketing and advertising standards, according to the Knight-Tribune News Service.

Milo Kirk, a vice-president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, urged Dr. Novello to put pressure on states to deny driver's licenses to teenagers caught using alcohol.

John Volpe, executive director of the National Wine Coalition, acknowledged that underage drinking is a problem and said the industry wants to help find solutions.

The Beer Institute said it welcomes the surgeon general's campaign to stop underage drinking.

The survey was conducted in April and May to determine how junior and senior high-school students get, view and consume booze. HHS surveyed 956 students at 32 schools in eight randomly selected states: Florida, California, Colorado, Illinois, Louisiana, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

When asked why they drink, 66 percent cited stress and boredom. Another 25 percent said they drink to get high. Thirty-one percent said they drink alone, breaking the old stereotype of party drinking.

Q Are NCAA members prohibited from accepting financial donations from professional sports franchises or organizations?

A No, but NCAA Bylaw 12.6.1.4 stipulates that member institutions may receive funds from a professional sports organization provided that:

- The money is placed in the institution's general fund and used for purposes other than athletics, or
- The money is placed in the institution's general scholarship fund and commingled with funds for the assistance of all students generally.

lights of the year.

Cheaper by the dozen?

This looked like the year to break the remarkable dominance of Hobart men's lacrosse and Kenyon men's swimming. Each had won 11 straight championships but seemed vulnerable. Hobart went into the championship with a deceiving 5-6 record. Only one of the six losses was to Division III competition. But after a 12-11 victory over Salisbury State in the championship game, the Statesmen had their 12th crown in succession. Hobart is the only team ever to win a Division III lacrosse title.

Kenyon lost all of its individual men's swimming champions from 1990, and coach Jim Steen wondered whether the Lords would win an event. With the perpetual depth the Lords have, they still were the favorites, though the competition was supposed to be close. Guess again.

Kenyon claimed nine individual titles, including four relays, and won the team competition by the widest margin ever, 593½-280, over runner-up Claremont-Mudd-Scripps. "We had a lot of internal adversity to overcome with the tragic death of Shawn Kelly in the fall," said Steen, the coach who has won 20 national championships (eight women's), more than any coach in NCAA history. "We had good feelings about a number of kids, but you don't know how they are going to respond. We didn't have that leader to point the direction to the younger kids. But a lot of new faces took control. It looks like we found those leaders in Brian Dowdall (50- and 100-yard freestyle champion), John Landreth (200-yard butterfly and 200-yard individual medley) and David Hutchison (1,650-yard freestyle)." Just what the rest of Division III needed to hear.

Kenyon's women's swimming team also collected another title, its eighth in a row.

Let's just keep playing

After the 1989 Division I Men's

Members of the Cal Poly San Luis Obispo women's cross country team gather for a pre-race send-off before winning the school's ninth straight championship in the sport.

Soccer Championship ended in a tie, the Men's and Women's Soccer Rules Committee decided to institute a rule that would prevent it from happening again. Beginning in 1990, for championship games that still were tied after two 15-minute overtimes and two 15-minute sudden-death overtimes, the game would be decided by penalty kicks. Little did the committee know that the new rule would be used in four of the six championships, including all three men's title games.

UCLA won its second title in Division I without scoring a goal in the semifinals or final. Division II was a battle of Nos. 1 and 2, and No. 1 Southern Connecticut State edged Seattle Pacific, 1-0, on penalty kicks. In Division III, Glassboro State beat Ohio Wesleyan, 2-1, again on penalty kicks.

The Division III Women's Soccer Championship also went to penalty kicks as Ithaca defeated Cortland State, 1-0. The only two championships that were not decided by penalty kicks were women's Divisions I and II.

North Carolina continued its dominance with its eighth championship in the nine-year history of the Division I tournament. The Tar Heels defeated Connecticut, 6-0, in the championship game.

Sonoma State became the third champion in the three-year history of the Division II tournament with a 2-0 victory over Keene State.

Finally

Duke had been to the Final Four eight times previously, including three straight heading into 1991, but the Blue Devils always came away bluer, never having won a championship. That ended April 1.

The Blue Devils defeated Kansas, 72-65, to claim their first basketball championship and second men's team title of any kind (soccer, 1986). But it was the semifinal victory over defending champion and undefeated Nevada-Las Vegas that will have fans talking for years to come.

With the memory of the 1990 championship game, 103-73, loss to Nevada-Las Vegas fresh in their minds, the Blue Devils controlled the tempo and wrested away the title that many already had handed to the Runnin' Rebels. Behind Christian Laettner's 28 points, including two free throws with less than 13 seconds remaining, the Blue Devils were exorcised, 79-77.

"I thought we were very prepared to be at our best," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said after the game. "We stopped their break in the second half. I think that was one of the keys to the ball game."

"We came here to win two ball games," he said after the championship game. And after eight unsuccessful tries, Duke finally did.

The 5,000-meter dash?

Doug Hanson of North Dakota State won his seventh individual championship at the Division II Outdoor Track and Field championships with a nearly seven-second victory in the 10,000-meter run. But he was beaten in the 5,000-meter run in one of the best competitions of the year.

Hanson and Jimmy Hearld of Southeast Missouri State sprinted stride for stride for the entire final lap of the 5,000-meter run. The duo leaned together at the finish, and it took a photo to determine the winner. In fact, Hearld didn't know he had won until it was announced over the public address system.

"The first time I knew was just now, when they announced it," he said. "I didn't have the slightest idea."

Say 'cheese'

Without rechecking the top of this story, name the state that won more championships than any other state but California. Unless you're from the Badger state, you would probably have a hard time guessing Wisconsin. The state laid claim to six team titles, all in Division III.

Eagles soared to two men's titles. Titans were giants. Pointers showed the way on ice, and the Pioneers found their way to their first crown. Again? The Wisconsin-La Crosse Eagles won the men's indoor and outdoor track crowns. Across the state in Oshkosh, the Wisconsin-Oshkosh Titans claimed the men's cross country championship for the third straight year and the women's outdoor track title for the second straight year. The Pointers of Wisconsin-Stevens Point won in ice hockey, and the Wisconsin-Platteville Pioneers won the championship in men's basketball.

"It's a tremendous tribute to the support given to athletics by the people of the state of Wisconsin," said Max R. Sparger, commissioner of the Wisconsin State University Conference. "This is a fulfillment of the hard work and dedication of the athletics directors, coaches and student-athletes within the conference."

Shining stars

As is the case in most years, 1990-91 was not devoid of individuals who rose above the field to shine. Some had done so before, while others reached the heights for the first time.

Kirsten Silvester of Northern Michigan repeated as the top individual champion of the year, winning four national titles at the Division II Swimming and Diving Championships. She won the 200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyles, the 200-yard butterfly, and swam the anchor legs of the Wildcats' winning 400-yard medley and 800-yard freestyle relays. Named the swimmer of the year in the meet for the second year in a row, Silvester stands second in all-time individual titles with eight after just two years of competition.

Dan Russell wrestles for Portland State. He has won national titles at 150 pounds (1988-89), 158 pounds (1990) and at 167 pounds this year in Division II. He was named the most outstanding wrestler of the tournament for the third straight year and qualified for the Division I championships, where he lost in the semifinals to the eventual champion. He is just the second wrestler in NCAA history to win four individual titles and the first to do it in different weight classes.

Hope Spivey of Georgia and Mark Sohn of Penn State stole the show at the gymnastics championships. Spivey, a freshman, won the floor exercise and vault on her way to the all-around title. With her three championships, she tied Kelly Garrison-Stevens of Oklahoma for the most individual titles in one year. Sohn scored a perfect 10 on the pommel horse in the men's competition to become just the second man to win an event for four Carllette Guldry (No. 204) of Texas crossed the finish line ahead of Louisiana State's Esther Jones in the 55-meter dash at the Division I Women's Indoor Track Championships, but Jones and her teammates won both the indoor and outdoor team titles this year.

Duke's Brian Davis eluded Nevada-Las Vegas' Elmore Spencer for two of his 15 points in the Blue Devils' semifinal victory in the Final Four. Duke then defeated Kansas in the championship game, 72-65.

Streaks and peaks

Several teams extended streaks or added to impressive lists of accomplishments in 1989-90. The Cal Poly San Luis Obispo women's cross country team won its ninth straight championship, despite breaking in a new coach, Deanne Johnson. (The Mustangs also won their third straight outdoor track championship.) West Virginia won its fourth straight rifle title and seventh in the 12-year history of the championships behind Ann Pfiffner, who won the air rifle competition. The individual titles were swept by women.

Arkansas won its eighth straight indoor track championship while St. Augustine's dominated Division II men's track for the third year in a row. The Falcons won their fifth straight indoor title and third straight outdoor title. In the outdoor championships, the Falcons nearly doubled their nearest competitors despite losing three key athletes to hamstring pulls.

The Texas men won their fourth straight Division I swimming championship, and the women won their second straight. But discounting 1989, the Longhorns have won every championship since 1984. In Division II, Ernie Maglischo of Cal State Bakersfield led his team to its sixth straight championship, the 10th overall for Maglischo, who also won at Cal State Chico (three times) and at Oakland.

Wes Kittley's Abilene Christian Wildcats brought home their fourth straight women's team trophy in the Division II indoor track championships. Yolande Straughn finished her brilliant career by repeating her rare double of the 55- and 400-meter dashes. Her 54.49 in the 400 set a meet record.

Stanford won its sixth straight women's tennis title. In the 10-year history of the championships, Stanford has won all but two team titles. Sandra Birch also overcame food poisoning to claim the Cardinal's seventh singles title.

One streak that was not continued was that of Houston men's track. Although the Cougars never had won the team title, they had had at least one individual champion every year since 1979. No Cougar scored at this year's championships.

It was not the year to be the top seed in softball. All three No. 1 seeds met teams peaking at the right time and lost in the championship. Arizona stopped UCLA's three-year streak of championships with a 5-1 victory in the final. Augustana (South Dakota) scored a run in the bottom of the 10th inning to edge top-seeded Bloomsburg, 3-2 in the Division II title game. In Division III, Jamie Mahnke pitched a five-hit shutout to lead Central (Iowa) to a 4-0 victory over defending champion Eastern Connecticut State.

Conservative Southern California men's tennis coach Dick Leach may feel weird, what with the newly donned earring and the long hair he is growing. But don't think he minds for a minute. He made a promise to his team early in the year that if it won the team championship, he would wear an earring and grow his hair long. It did, and he is.

Described as "the original cut-the-hair-short dad" by son and team member Jon, Leach described the feeling—winning, not the new look—as the best ever. "I never thought there would be a better feeling in the world than when my son, Rick, won in doubles at Wimbledon," he said. "This tops it."

First-time winners

Twenty schools tasted victory for the first time in a sport, while 11 schools earned their first championships in that gender. Of those, eight celebrated for the first time, male or female. In Division III, Wisconsin-Platteville defeated Franklin and Marshall, 81-74, in men's basketball to bring home the school's first trophy. Augsburg won its first-ever title in wrestling, and Southern Maine defeated Trenton State, 9-0, in baseball to earn its first championship.

In Division II, Sonoma State women's soccer, West Texas State women's volleyball, Nebraska-Omaha and Augustana (South Dakota) softball were first-time winners.

Division I's lone first-time winner was Northern Michigan. The Wildcats edged Boston U., 8-7, in triple overtime as Darryl Plandowski took a pass from Mark Beaufait and slipped it past goaltender Scott Cashman after 81:57 of play. Northern Michigan overcame a 3-0 deficit to claim a 5-3 edge after two periods. The Wildcats led, 7-4, with less than 12 minutes remaining. But Boston U. came right back and tied the score with 39 seconds remaining on David Sacco's goal. "It wasn't just a hockey game," Boston U. coach Jack Parker said. "We created something different tonight."

"We had some great championships this year," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said. "The Final Four was dynamite again. I attended the Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship (North Carolina defeated Towson State, 18-13), and it was a great game. It is indicative of the advanced level of competition we have seen in all divisions.

"Spectator interest continues to grow. We are seeing record crowds in several championships.

"The championships really highlight the balance of power. While some schools continue to win championships, the gap is closing. More championships are being decided late in the game and on breaks.

"I continue to wonder how championships can continue to improve, but they always do. I already am looking forward to seeing how the championships break out next year."

Men's soccer assistant — Craig Marshall hired at Augsburg. He is a former coach at Columbia Heights High School in Minnesota.

Women's soccer — Dave Masterson appointed to coach the new team at Muhlenberg, which will begin play next season. Masterson is a former player at Hartwick and Oneonta State... Scott Forrester selected at Kalamazoo after coaching boys' and girls' soccer at Loy Norrix High School in Kalamazoo, Michigan, since 1989. Forrester, who was a goalkeeper at Western Michigan in the early 1980s, replaces Pete Kowall, who was honored last season as Division III coach of the year after leading Kalamazoo to a 17-2 record and the quarterfinals of the Division III Women's Soccer Championship. Through two seasons at the school, Kowall led his teams to a 28-7-1 mark... Allison H. Moxey named to head the new varsity program at Lehigh. Moxey is a former soccer, basketball, track and lacrosse standout at Franklin and Marshall who has worked since last year as a special programs assistant in Lehigh's admissions office.

Men's and women's swimming and diving — Cheryl Jeurgens named at Vassar, succeeding Jean Appenzeller, who is retiring after 39 years as a teacher and coach at the school.

Men's and women's tennis — Deb Polca, associate athletics director at St. Francis (Pennsylvania), given additional duties as women's tennis coach at the school. She takes over duties previously held by Chris McDonnell, who becomes men's tennis coach with the resignation of Sheldon Schettig. Schettig had been at the school since 1988... Jon Hammermeister resigned after five seasons as men's coach at UC San Diego to pursue postgraduate studies at Washington. Hammermeister coached the Tritons to a record of 73-60 and four of his five teams were nationally ranked.

Women's track and field — Joe Ryan promoted from assistant at Manhattan, where he has been on the staff for two years. Ryan is a former track and field athlete at the school who also has run for the Irish national team.

Women's volleyball — Noelle Navarro named at Goucher, where she also will coach women's basketball... Kate J. Witte appointed at Ohio Northern, effective August 1. She has coached the men's club team at Iowa State for the past two years while serving as a temporary instructor of health studies at that school. Witte played at Northern Iowa... Penny Lewis selected at Quincy, where she also will assist with women's basketball and serve as recruiting coordinator. Lewis replaces Jill Vogel, who plans to move to Colorado and marry.

Women's volleyball assistant — Lori Nishikawa joined the staff at Southern Illinois after serving as an aide at Florida State. She was a three-time all-America and two-time Division III player of the year at Washington (Missouri), which she helped lead to a Division III title in 1989.

Academic counselor — Phyllis Wallace hired at Mississippi, where she previously served as an admissions counselor.

Assistant to the athletics director — Charles Branum named special projects assistant to the athletics director at South Alabama, where he will step down as head women's basketball coach after 10 years in the post.

Facilities coordinator — Jill Pizzotti appointed at Northern Kentucky, where she also will assist with women's basketball. She replaces Flora Fields.

The National ends publication

By Ben Walker

The National died June 13. It was 17 months old.

The causes of death for the nation's first all-sports daily newspaper were many—the recession, the difficulties of distribution, the lack of readers.

Burial was under a loss of $100 million. Viewing was held under a banner headline of "We Had A Ball" in the final edition.

Services were conducted by Frank Deford, the editor and publisher.

"We were gone before you knew it," he wrote in an editorial in the last issue. "Gee, we're sorry it couldn't have been longer. We wanted to be an institution."

"We came believing in a concept. We leave convinced of a sports daily's place and its worth," Deford wrote.

But, will there be another National in the United States? Sports dailies flourish in Europe, South America and Japan, but The National never was healthy.

For all the money the paper spent to sign its all-star free agents—the lineup included former editors and writers from The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, The Boston Globe, The Washington Post and more—it did not catch on.

The National tried to build its own Camelot, assembling what it considered the best and brightest staff. And it began with a concept bordering on "If we print it, the readers will come."

But readers did not show up. While The National initially hoped for a circulation of one million and needed about 500,000 to break even, it finally folded with slightly under 200,000. At 75 cents a day, many of The National's readers were getting a paper with day-late national news and not enough local coverage.

"It takes time to reach an audience and it takes time to grow devotion, and that is costly," Deford wrote. "In this recession, it cost more. And the immediate future looks even more expensive."

"If it hadn't been a recession, we might have gotten some legs," he said. "The one thing we never got was legs."

Not that a lot of media observers were overly surprised. Many people said that because of local coverage, USA Today and the nightly ESPN sports shows, The National would have to do many different things and do them much better, and predicted it couldn't be done.

The National did some things very well. The paper routinely broke stories about which college football players were leaving school early for the NFL. It did a fantastic job on the Mike Tyson-Buster Douglas fight, and its lengthy features were often off-beat and on-target.

But, for all its big swings, The National missed a lot, too.

Its box scores, which were supposed to be innovative, were complicated. The layout was confusing. The wit sometimes came across as clutter.

It seemed to be, or want to be, Sports Illustrated, The Sport News and a local paper all in one day. It was too much at times, and not enough at others.

Still, The National kept going. It had an idea and improved on it, even while the financial figures did not get better.

"We were very good, we think. We made mistakes, but we learned and we corrected, and we evolved and grew in strength and charm," Deford wrote. "But if we go proudly, it is all the more in sadness having to leave when you know you're good, and getting better all the time."

Walker writes for the Associated Press.

Special guest

ESPN anchor Robin Roberts was a special guest at the banquet held in conjunction with the NCAA Division III Women's Softball Championship, which was hosted by Eastern Connecticut State University. Honored during the dinner was Luther College coach Betty Hoff, a member of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee, who was recognized for her contributions to Division III women's softball.

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee:

Amateurism/financial aid

1. Outside sports organization providing financial aid to prospective student-athletes. Reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 12.1.2.-(j) and 15.2.5.4 and determined that an outside sports team or organization that conducts a competitive sports program may not utilize the provisions of 15.2.5.4 to provide financial assistance to members of that sports organization or team to attend an NCAA institution.

Individual eligibility

2. Effective date of full-time enrollment status. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 14.1.5.2.2 (full-time program - 12-hour requirement), a previous committee decision (reference: Item No. 19 of the minutes of the committee's August 22-23, 1990, meeting) and a recommendation from the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee to utilize the same standard for determining a student-athlete's full-time enrollment status when the student is dropping or adding a course; affirmed its previous interpretation that a student athlete no longer would be considered enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies (after dropping a course that puts the student below full-time status) only at the point in time that the dropped course has become official in accordance with procedures determined by the institution's registrar for all students; further, a part-time student who is adding a course to reach the full-time/12-hour requirement would become eligible for practice and/or competition once the course has been approved by the appropriate department head (or designated representative) and submitted to the registrar; noted that this interpretation provides the institution with the greatest latitude in dealing with a difficult administrative issue.

Recruiting/contacts

3. Spouses' involvement in recruiting prospective student-athletes. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaws 13.1.2.3-(d) (permissible recruiters spouse of staff member), 13.1.2.4-(a) (institutional staff members), a previous Council decision [reference: Item No. 6-c-(1) of the minutes of the Council's January 6, 1989, meeting] and a previous NCAA Administrative Committee decision (reference: Item k of the minutes of the committee's March 14, 1985, conference) and determined the following: (a) only the spouses of institutional athletics department staff members (as opposed to the spouses of institutional staff members outside the athletics department) are permitted to have off-campus recruiting contacts with a prospective student-athlete during an official visit within a 30-mile radius of the institution's campus, even when the spouse is not in the presence of the athletics department staff member, and (b) spouses of institutional staff members (e.g., faculty members, administrators) are permitted to have recruiting contacts with a prospective student-athlete during a visit only on the institution's campus, even when the spouse is not in the presence of the institutional staff member; recommended that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee editorially revise the provisions of 13.1.2.3 (d) to reflect this interpretation.

Recruiting/contacts

4. Contacts at a prospect's educational institution. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.4 (permissible number of contacts), which indicate that a member institution is limited to three in-person, off-campus recruiting contacts per prospect at any site, and limits institutional staff members to visiting a prospect's educational institution on not more than one occasion during a particular week, and determined that a member institution that contacts a prospect at the prospect's educational institution would utilize a contact only for that specific prospect.

Conference No. 8
May 15, 1991

Evaluations

5. Limitations on number of evaluations. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.6 (limitations on number of evaluations) as they relate to a situation in which a member institution's coach who previously has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions and wishes to attend an event in which that prospective student-athlete is competing to evaluate other prospective student-athletes, and determined the following:

a. In team sports, an institution would utilize an evaluation for each prospect participating in a contest that is observed by the member institution's coach; thus, an institution's coach who previously has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions may attend a multiteam competition (e.g., basketball tournament) in which the prospective student-athlete is competing to evaluate other prospective student-athletes, provided the coach does not observe any contest in which the prospect who previously has been evaluated on four occasions is a participant.

b. In individual sports, the institution would utilize an evaluation for each prospect participating at any time on a given day in a competition; thus, a member institution's coach who is attending a competition in an individual sport (e.g., track meet, swimming meet, tennis match) on a specific day would utilize an evaluation for all participants in the competition on that day. Therefore, a member institution that has evaluated a prospective student-athlete on four occasions may not attend a day of a competition in which that prospective student-athlete is competing to evaluate other prospective student-athletes; however, it would be permissible for that coach to attend another day of the competition, provided the prospective student-athlete who previously has been evaluated on four occasions is not a participant during that day.

Recruiting/materials

6. Recruiting videotape. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 13.4.1.1.1 (highlight films, recruiting videotapes and press releases) and determined that inasmuch as institutions are limited to producing one all-sports recruiting videotape, an institution's recruiting videotape must include all sports the institution wishes to utilize on the videotape (with a maximum of three minutes for any one sport); noted that it would not be permissible for an institution to produce separate videotapes for each sport that include generic introductions followed by three minutes related only to that sport. In a related matter, requested that the staff develop recommendations regarding the distinction between a highlight film and a recruiting videotape to be reviewed by the NCAA Recruiting Committee during its next meeting.

Outside competition

7. Student-athletes participating in private volleyball camp outside of the playing season. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw

17.19.9.2, which place a limit of two on the number of student-athletes with eligibility remaining in intercollegiate volleyball who may practice or compete out of season on an outside amateur volleyball team in Division I, and determined that such limits would not be applicable to student-athletes participating in a private camp outside of the institution's season; noted that this interpretation would be applicable to all sports; recommended that the Council review the issue of a student-athlete's employment and participation in a private camp outside of the institution's season to determine if it wishes to place limitations on the number of student-athletes in each sport who may be employed or participate in the camp. (Note: Employment limitations currently exist only in the sports of football, basketball and soccer.)

Summer financial aid

8. Effect of receipt of additional Pell

Grant funds or outside financial aid on student-athlete's summer financial aid. Reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1 (enrolled student-athletes), which indicate that an institution may provide financial aid to a student-athlete to attend the institution's summer term only in proportion to the amount of athletically related financial aid received by the student-athlete during the previous academic year, and determined that an institution that provides a student-athlete a full athletics grant during the academic year but is required to reduce the grant in accordance with 15.1.3 (reduction when excess aid is awarded) because the student-athlete is receiving additional Pell Grant assistance or other noninstitutional assistance, would be permitted to provide the student-athlete full athletically related financial aid to attend the institution's summer term.

Changes are sought in women's gymnastics

The NCAA Women's Gymnastics Committee has voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that criteria for qualification for post-season competition be changed to add one more meet to the pool of regional qualifying scores, and to base advancement to the national championships solely on regional results. Both proposals, if approved, would be effective in 1992.

The committee, which met June 10-13 in Tiburon, California, voted to recommend that the number of meets from which a team figures its regional qualifying score be increased from five to six—two of which must be from home meets and two of which must be from away meets.

A team would drop its high and low scores from the six meets and average the remaining four scores, which would become the team's regional qualifying score. Currently, the average of five meets is used for calculating the regional qualifying score.

Under the committee's recommendation, regional qualifiers would receive "new life," beginning with the 1992 regional championships. Currently, team and all-around advancement criteria include both the regional qualifying score and the score achieved at the regional competition, from which a national qualifying score is figured. If the Executive Committee approves the recommendation, the score a team or all-around competitor achieves at its respective regional meet would be the national qualifying score.

State legislation relating to athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect or is otherwise of interest to the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 15 bills from 13 states. The report includes one bill that has been introduced and 14 pending bills on which action has been taken since the last report (see the June 12, 1991, issue of The NCAA News). Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of June 14, 1991. Listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in this report by subject:

Anabolic steroids	4
Athlete agents	2
Equity in athletics	2
Coaches retirement trust	1
Due process	1
Liability	1
Reform of college athletics	1
Scalping	1
Traffic control at games	1

'Match made in Howser' leads to stadium wedding

According to Garry Smits, a writer for The Florida Times-Union, Chip Baker and Julie Larsen were a match made in Howser. Baker, assistant baseball coach at Florida State University, and Larsen, a former women's softball player who graduated in 1989, were married in Florida State's Dick Howser Stadium last month between games of the Seminoles' double-header against Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

"I had two nightmares," the new Mrs. Baker told Smits. "Rain and extra innings." It didn't rain, but the prewedding game did require 12 innings to complete. Florida State won, 3-2.

Northwestern State University (Louisiana) officials dedicated June 8 a wing of the school's athletics fieldhouse in memory of former football coach George Doherty, who died in 1987.

Great Midwest Conference Commissioner Michael L. Slive has announced that ESPN will televise nationally the new league's first-ever game November 29 when DePaul University plays at Memphis State University.

Austin Peay State University head football coach Roy Gregory is recovering from surgery he underwent in mid-May in South Carolina. Gregory is expected to return to campus in late June.

California-based Arete Press has announced publication of "Off the Bench," a book on coaching careers written by Curtis W. Tong, who has coached basketball at Williams and Otterbein Colleges. More information is available from Arete Press at 480 West Sixth Street, Claremont, California 91711.

Philip Milburn, assistant executive director of the U. S. Other actions

In other action, the committee recommended the following sites for 1992 regional competition: the University of Missouri, Columbia (Central); the University of Utah (Midwest); Pennsylvania State University (Northeast); the University of Florida (Southeast), and the University of California, Berkeley (West).

The committee also recommended that, effective for 1992, a yellow card/red card penalty system be adopted for the championships and for meets to be used for qualification to the championships.

Another recommendation that would be effective in 1992, if approved, is that an institution with a team participating in the championships be required to be represented at the championships site by its athletics director, senior woman administrator or a designee.

The committee also recommended that, beginning in 1993, regional host institutions be required to guarantee a minimum of $3,000.

In a matter already approved by the Executive Committee, the committee affirmed that a three-day format will be used for the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships beginning in 1993. Currently, a two-day format is used for competition. Team preliminaries and all-around competition will be scheduled on the first day, team finals on the second day and individual-event finals on the third. The host of the 1993 event, pending Executive Committee approval, will be Oregon State University.

Rules actions

In other action, the committee voted on rules, alternates for individual-event finals and "official" championships results.

Regarding rules, the committee voted to extend the moratorium on the round-off entry vault through the 1992 championships and agreed that Competition 1B and Level 10 rules will continue to be used for the championships and meets used to qualify. The committee also voted that an alternate be designated for each individual-event final. Regarding championships results, the committee voted that results be declared official 12 hours from the start of each championships session. In the hours immediately following the competition, the judges and scorer will verify the results.
